12 shopping days to Christmas

SANFORD - The lines at the Sanford Post Office have been heavy, but manageable this holiday season.

Patrons, loaded with piles of Christmas cards, have been coming into the facility on a regular basis, though their packages have been few.

The same has held true at post offices in Lake Mary and Longwood.

On the other hand, patrons loaded down with dollies of heavy boxes, are standing in lines that extend out the door and snake through the parking lot at the United Parcel Service (U.P.S.) regional distribution office in Longwood.

"We've seen a lot of people mailing off their Christmas cards, but I don't think people are mailing as many packages as they used to," said one postal employee who chose not to give his name.

Kathy Miller had two boxes of cards she was mailing from the Sanford Post Office on Monday. The back seat and trunk of her car remained full of packages as she headed into the post office, however.

"Oh, I'm taking those down to U.P.S.," she said. "I think they're a lot cheaper and a lot more reliable."

In fact, mailing 100 pounds of packages through the U.S. Postal Service would cost about $35 to mail from here to New York City by parcel post, said Tom Pierce, Sanford's postmaster. Prices vary according to the destination and the weight of a package, he said. Parcel post is the cheapest method of transport. To mail those same

Spring training facility is a hit

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - While some hope to make Seminole County a sports mecca with training facilities for, among others, the Orlando Solar Bears and the Tampa Bay Devil Rays, forces in Orange County don't think the demands of some professional sports teams are worth the price.

On Tuesday, the Seminole County Commission agreed to join with the city of Altamonte Springs to build a $20 million spring training facility on the south side of the city for the Devil Rays.

The agreement was reached after nearly three hours of debate over the merits of trying to attract the sports business to Seminole County.

The commitment does not mean the Devil Rays are coming to Seminole County, however. The Rays are looking at 10 sites, including the 80-acre site that Altamonte Springs owns at State Road 434 and Matland Boulevard.

The Rays want a practice facility with six

City airs rules for recreational vehicles, boats in yards

SANFORD - Sanford commissioners admit they are often faced with difficult decisions. One such situation involves a proposed ordinance regarding recreational equipment in residential areas.

At odds is whether or not residents of the city should be allowed to have not only motor homes and other recreational vehicles but boats parked in their yards.

"This is a very difficult situation,"

Mayor Bettye Smith told the city commission during a work session meeting Monday afternoon. "The problem is whether or not we end up taking away the rights of citizens in order to handle objections from others."

Following a commission work session on the subject in November, City Manager Bill Simmons and the city staff worked on a new draft of the city's ordinance regarding the

Condemned houses to be used in movie

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Commissioners this week unanimously approved the condemnation of 13 houses located on Lincoln Court. But even though the buildings will be demolished, some of them may have last moments of glory.

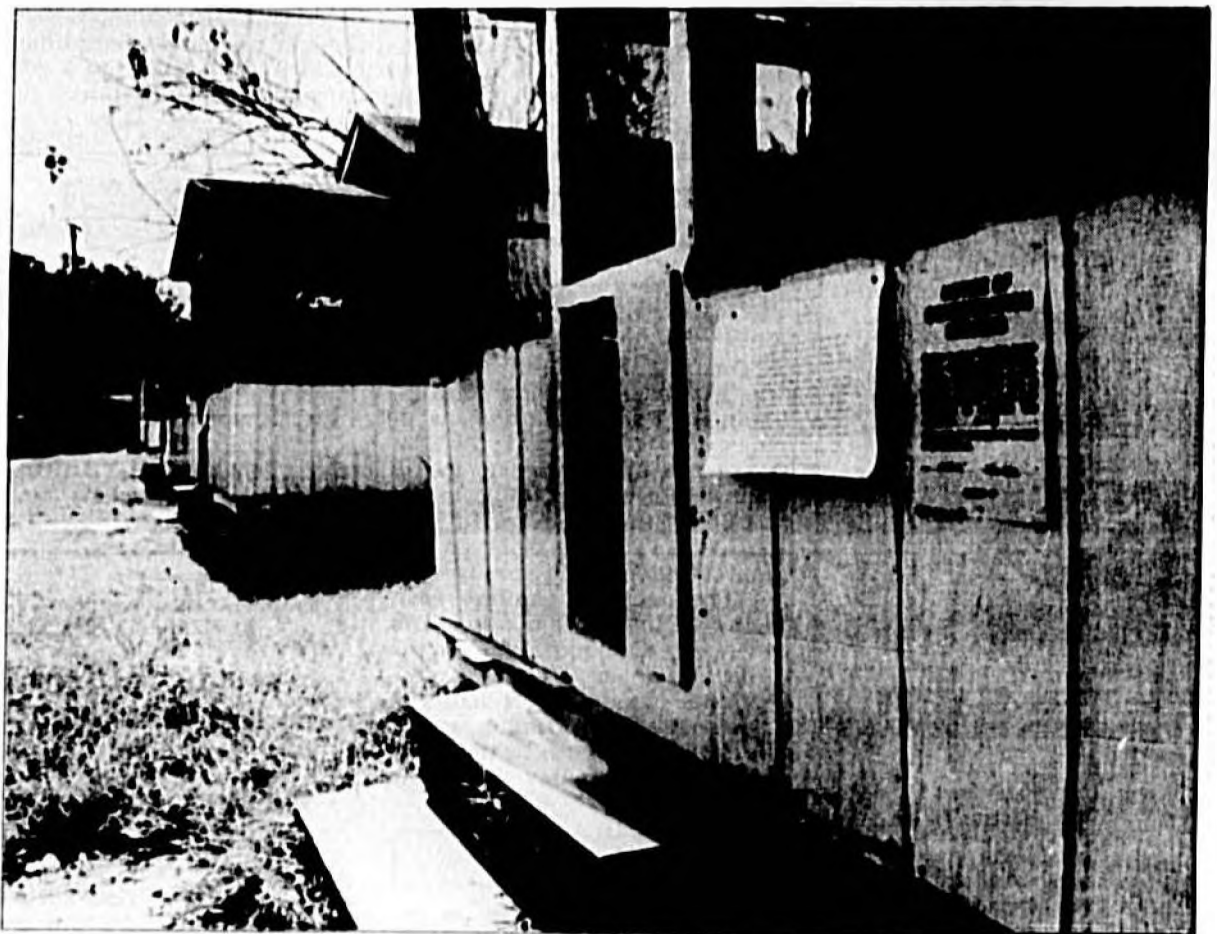

The homes, located at 1200, 1201, 1204, 1206, 1207, 1208, 1210, 1211, 1212, 1214, 1215, 1223 and 1227 Lincoln Court all list Margaret Jones of Sanford as owner.

Rather than allow the homes to be demolished immediately however, Jones has contracted with Warner Brothers, which plans to take control of the houses. During Monday night's Sanford City Commission meeting, Mr. Parsons, representing Warner Brothers said the company was purchasing the homes from Jones, and would be moving possibly four or five to a movie set location, and demolishing the rest.

He said in all, possibly 20 homes, which may be condemned or ready for demolition, are being obtained in the area, to be moved to the set location for the filming of the movie "Rosewood."

As had previously been announced the movie studio is setting up production offices at an old auto dealership at 1501 W. First Street in Sanford.

The movie will depict the old city of Rosewood, which was a real community in Levy County along the Cross-Florida railroad. It was wiped out several decades ago after a tragic and bloody massacre of almost the entire black population of

Parsons told the commissioners the movie company estimated it will be spending close to $3 million for goods and services in the local area during the movie's production, exclusive of the cost of the actual movie-making.

Study: Policy is defective

TALLAHASSEE — A new study says Florida's affirmative-action policy is defective because it inflates the number of minority- and women-owned businesses qualified to do state work.

The state's goal is to award between 20 percent and 50 percent of all building, supplies and consulting contracts to minorities and women; but the study said there aren't nearly that many qualified minority-owned businesses.

Most lawmakers haven't seen the report, but a spokeswoman for House Speaker Peter R. Wallace, D-St. Petersburg, challenged it.

"Serious questions have been raised by the methodology in the study," said Jill Chamberlin, a policy coordinator for Wallace. Pressed for an explanation, she would not elaborate.

Florida men arrested on drug charges

BREAUX BRIDGE, La. — Two Clearwater, Fla., men were arrested and more than 60 pounds of marijuana were seized following a routine south Louisiana traffic stop, state police said.

Troopers said they first stopped one car Tuesday for following another automobile too closely on Interstate 10. The driver, Terry R. Desjaels, 27, consented to a search when the trooper grew suspicious and no contraband was found, state police said.

The second car, driven by Tye Lance Morris, 27, also was stopped nearby and, when troopers grew suspicious, they got Morris' consent to search the vehicle and found 60.1 pounds of marijuana in the trunk, state police said.

They estimated the marijuana's street value at $90,150.

Troopers said they guessed Desjaels' car was intended to be a decoy, drawing attention away from the car containing the marijuana.

Car dealer convicted

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — A St. Augustine car dealer has been convicted by a federal jury on three counts of income tax evasion and one count of money laundering.

Stephen Gimopoulos Jr., 38, faces up to 35 years in prison and a $1.25 million fine when sentenced March 27 by U.S. District Judge Harvey M. Schlesinger.

From 1988 through 1990, Gimopoulos owned and operated a used car lot in the St. Augustine area under the names Jack Wilson Fine Cars and S.G.'s Fine Cars.

During his six-day trial that ended Tuesday, testimony showed Gimopoulos filed false individual federal income tax returns for 1988, 1989, and 1990, omitting more than $300,000 in income and failing to pay $87,000 in taxes.

Testimony also showed that Gimopoulos sold an automobile to known drug dealers from the St. Augustine area for cash, which represented the proceeds from drug trafficking. Gimopoulos concealed the identity of the purchaser by falsifying his company records, officials said.

Lifeguards rescue cocaine

FORT PIERCE, Fla. — When two St. Lucie County lifeguards spotted a large bale wrapped in green waterproof material washing ashore, they called 911.

Authorities unwrapped the package later Tuesday and found 55 pounds of cocaine, worth an estimated $500,000, said Mark Weinberg, spokesman for the St. Lucie County Sheriff's office.

"It's not unusual for marijuana to wash ashore, but this is quite a large supply of cocaine to come in at one time," Weinberg said.

The bale contained 25 bricks of powdered cocaine, each double wrapped with plastic and secured with strapping tapes. The bricks were wrapped — two at a time — in a "green rubbery waterproof material," Weinberg said. The packages were then wrapped in waterproofing material, wrapped again in burlap and bound with rope.

Education works to stop drugs, media get some blame

By NOBLE WINFIELD
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — Although most Americans think education is the most effective way to combat drugs, a majority see the media and peer pressure as more powerful tools, according to a Gallup poll.

The Gallup survey, "A 1988 View of the Drug Problem in America," was released Tuesday. It also found that 68 percent of the nation's adults view illegal drugs as a serious problem, despite a drop in media coverage of the drug war in the last decade.

The only issue that scored higher was violent crime, considered serious by 94 percent.

"In fact, Americans view the drug problem as more serious than the problems of health care, welfare, the federal budget deficit and several other areas which have received much more political attention than drugs in recent years," the Gallup organization said.

White House drug policy director Lee Brown said the poll proves the need for a high-profile, well-funded national drug-control effort free of budget-cutting threats that would slash drug education spending by 60 percent and prevention and treatment programs by 25 percent.

"The new congressional leadership has recommended draconian cuts that would devastate the drug fighting efforts under way," said Brown. The poll "shows how wrong the budget cutters are. The American people know it and this poll shows it."

Brown, in Miami for a national drug conference, later flew to Houston, where he was expected to be named a sociology professor at Rice University. He would not comment on his resignation before leaving Miami.

The Gallup survey found that 93 percent of adult Americans favor more anti-drug education in public schools, 87 percent favor increased police funding, 44 percent favor mandatory drug testing in the workplace and 35 percent favor mandatory testing in schools.

Some 68 percent think the government should do a lot more to stop drugs from coming into the country.

When Gallup asked respondents what factors had a great deal of influence on children's attitudes towards drugs, only peer pressure (74 percent) outranked the entertainment industry (63 percent), which includes television, movies and music.

"When mass media outlets focused on the country's drug problem during the late 1980s, something profound happened," said James Burke, chairman of the Partnership for a Drug-Free America. "Public attitudes about drugs changed dramatically and drug use plummeted."

But coverage of drug stories and TV public-service announcements dropped dramatically in the 1980s, Brown said, citing statistics from the Center for Media and Public Affairs, which reported more than 500 drug stories on evening network newscasts in 1988, versus just over 60 in 1983. Meanwhile, crime stories increased from 14 to 30.

Governor and Cabinet predict reforms will succeed

By BILL BERNSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Lawton Chiles and the Cabinet say some of the time-consuming duties that drag out their bimonthly meetings could be eliminated with support from two former governors.

"If all of the Cabinet members support it I think it will have a good chance," Chiles said Tuesday of a citizens' study panel's report that now goes to the 1990 Legislature.

The nine-member commission headed by former Democratic Gov. Reubin Askew and former Republican Gov. Bob Martinez counted more than 400 laws that the governor and Cabinet have to work with.

The Citizens Commission on Cabinet Reform concluded that in more than 300 cases the chores can either be eliminated or done at a lower level.

Chiles and the Cabinet unanimously approved the group's recommendations.

Attorney General Bob Butterworth, who proposed creating the panel earlier this year, said previous streamlining efforts broke down in partisan bickering.

"With Governor Askew and Governor Martinez leading the charge I believe it has a chance," he said.

The six elected Cabinet members share much of the power other states grant solely to a governor. The Cabinet meets twice a month with the governor to discuss topics such as conservation, education and law enforcement.

The commission limited its study to changes the Legislature can make. More substantial changes could be debated when another panel meets in 1990 to consider revisions to the Florida Constitution.

But lawmakers can go ahead and give the governor sole responsibility for four departments that now must report to the governor and Cabinet members as a group, the study panel said. Those would be the departments of Revenue, Law Enforcement, Veteran Affairs and Highway Safety & Motor Vehicles.

"Most of the things that they have there I think would strengthen the office of the governor. I hope they will happen," said Chiles.

And the group recommended giving the education commissioner and secretary of state more power to act without full Cabinet approval.

"I think the (Cabinet) feels like there are a number of issues that come before them that could better be handled administratively," said Education Commissioner Frank Brogan.

Otherwise, the duties are so extensive the governor and Cabinet cannot effectively accomplish them, the study panel said.

"Questions of policy may receive inadequate attention, issues that should be handled at a lower level consume the time and energy of the state's highest elected officials and the power of staff becomes excessive," said the report.

American flag desecration

Backers of defeated amendment promise to fight

By MARY GORDON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Stung by a narrow Senate defeat, backers of a constitutional amendment to ban desecration of the American flag are promising to carry the fight into next year's elections.

The Senate fell three votes short Tuesday of passing the amendment, which would have given Congress authority to outlaw flag burning and other forms of desecration of the Stars and Stripes.

The defeat was jarring to supporters, who had expressed confidence in Senate approval. The House last June approved, 519-120, a broader amendment that would have given both Congress and the states the power to determine what is unlawful desecration of the American flag.

The amendment started gaining momentum after the Republican takeover of Congress last January. Forty-nine states — all but Vermont — have passed resolutions urging Congress to support the amendment, which would have effectively negated two Supreme Court rulings, in 1989 and 1990, that flag-burning was a protected form of expression under the First Amendment.

But Tuesday's 63-36 Senate vote was three votes shy of the two-thirds majority needed for an amendment to the Constitution. The 100-member Senate has one vacancy.

"It unraveled this morning before our eyes," said Susan Ridge, spokeswoman for the Citizens Flag Alliance, a coalition of about 100 groups lobbying for the amendment. "This is a disappointment."

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said President Clinton's opposition to what proponents hoped would be the 28th Amendment to the Constitution was a decisive factor in its defeat.

A few hours before the vote, the White House said Clinton would be open to a federal law banning desecration of the flag, but that he opposes a constitutional amendment that would alter the Bill of Rights. "The guys in the powdered wig had it about right in 1791," press secretary Miss McCurry said. "This amendment is not going to go away," Hatch said. But he also said he did not think it could pass the Senate as the chamber is now constituted — 53 Republicans and 46 Democrats — and said it likely will have to await action by the new Congress that will be sworn in after next year's elections.

Ridge agreed that Clinton's opposition played a role in the amendment's demise. She also pointed to a substitute proposed by Sen. Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, the leading Republican critic of a constitutional amendment, that would have barred desecration by legislative means rather than changing the Constitution.

Some senators were able to talk "political cover" by voting for McConnell's substitute and against the amendment, Ridge suggested. Before the final vote, the Senate rejected McConnell proposal, 71-28.

Ridge said the Citizens Flag Alliance, which includes the American Legion, would concentrate its efforts on the 1996 election campaigns by talking up the amendment to candidates and releasing public opinion surveys showing support.

Cops seek three suspects in Flea World jewelry robbery

From staff reports

SANFORD — Over $185,000 in jewelry was reported stolen Sunday at Flea World in Sanford. The Seminole County sheriff's department has launched a full scale investigation into the case.

The theft occurred at approximately 9:30 a.m., as jewelry dealer Ned Charles and his wife were setting up their showcase area for the day's sales.

According to sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough, a man and woman approached the showcase and became involved in a conversation with the Charleens, speaking very little English.

The male then said he was going to get coffee, and began running from the area, followed a short time later by the woman.

McDonough said investigators believe that while the couple was distracted, a third person is believed to have gone to the display area and taken what was said to be a large jewelry box, possibly 50 pounds in weight and two feet tall. Reportedly, witnesses said the three had been seen together previously.

The box reportedly contained $185,000 in rings, necklaces and bracelets, and was not insured.

The male suspect was described as approximately 35 to 30 years in age, having black hair, brown eyes and a light complexion. He was said to be approximately five feet six or seven inches tall, weighing 140 to 150 pounds.

The woman, 25 to 30 years of age, had dark brown to black hair, brown eyes, weighed 115 to 130 pounds, and was approximately five feet three inches tall.

Both suspects reportedly had a heavy Hispanic accent. There was no description given regarding the third suspect.

Composite photos of the two suspects have been distributed to various law enforcement agencies and elsewhere around the area.

Sanford public safety complex

Everyone can change their minds, especially when the facts are so obvious. Such is the case with the city of Sanford; such is the case with the Sanford Herald.

When the use of the former First Federal Bank building was originally proposed as a new Sanford police station, it was regarded as an excellent idea. The Sanford Herald editorially endorsed the concept, and some city officials indicated they thought it was a good proposal, especially in consideration of the cost of using the present building, versus building a new police station.

During Monday's city commission work session however, the real need was brought to the surface, and now, neither the city nor the Herald are supporting the use of the bank building.

It was properly stated that the original aim was not to find a new location for just the police, but to also find a new home for the city's fire department main headquarters.

To that end, it was originally proposed that a massive Public Safety Complex be built on property now owned by the city, immediately east of French Avenue across from Sanford Middle School.

Yes, now we remember. Everything was to be put into one general location. The fire department would have more modern, larger, and more usable facilities. The police would have a new home.

By combining the two organizations into one office, there may have been some savings. In the need for record keeping, computers, and other requirements which both agencies must have. Duplication could possibly have been avoided through this combined facility.

At this time, the city has voted against giving any further consideration of the old bank building, suggesting rather that it would be an excellent facility for offices. With plans now saying that the Seminole County court facilities will remain downtown rather than being moved to Five Points, there is probably a good future for the building, rather than becoming a police station.

Unfortunately, plans to have the French Avenue property turned into the Public Safety complex have stalled. Money is not available.

Facts remain however. The present Sanford police station is not in good health. It is too small and much too inadequate to house what is required under state mandates for law enforcement facilities.

The present Sanford fire station also does not have much of a future. The building is too small to house the equipment, and facilities for an ever-growing and ever-modernizing operation are not keeping up with the times.

As some commissioners said, if the city went ahead and took this building for use as a police station, down the road, they would realize that it's not only the police but firemen who have to have new quarters.

We now see the decision against the bank facility as logical. We also see however, that there is still a need for a new Public Works complex, preferably in the main area of the city, but definitely in the very near future.

It will take money, but if the people want safety and protection, they must learn that it isn't offered without some expense.

Congress should erase archaic laws

In recent years, state legislatures throughout the country have taken a look at the various and sundry laws on their books and gotten rid of those that have outlived their usefulness.

For instance, California pruned four dozen out-of-date laws as of Jan. 1 this year, including a regulation on dueling, requiring the winner to compensate the surviving spouse of the loser.

And Colorado is in the process of erasing a host of laws from its books, including an ordinance requiring county clerks to pay $2 bounties for wolf scalps and a law that bans feeding garbage to swine unless it's boiled.

The federal government would be wise to follow the lead of states like California and Colorado. Congress ought take a look at the laws it has enacted over the years and eliminate those that are clearly archaic. Here are four candidates for the statutory scrap heap that come immediately to mind:

-- Railway Labor Act (1926). Imagine if striking construction workers at a single site in, say, San Diego were able to halt construction not only at that site, but at every other construction site in the entire country.

Well, that's precisely what aggrieved railroad workers are capable of doing. That's because, under the 69-year-old Railway Labor Act, rail unions are permitted to picket not only the railroad with which they have a dispute, but every other railroad in the country, until they bring the entire system to halt.

As recently as four years ago, Congress had to avert a nationwide rail shut-down by brokering a settlement between striking rail unions, the nation's 11 major freight lines and 43 smaller rail carriers.

The way to avoid a similar intervention in the future is to pull the plug on the Railway Labor Act and cover the rail unions under the same labor laws as other unionized workers. That way, a dispute involving one union at one railroad won't threaten the entire $32 billion industry.

-- Davis-Bacon Act (1931). There is no law remaining on the federal books that is as brazenly discriminatory as this one. It requires that federal contractors pay their workers the "prevailing wage" for a given area, a figure the U.S. Department of Labor usually pegs to a local union scale.

-- Delaney Clause (1958) of the Food, Drug and Cosmetics Act. The 37-year-old clause requires that the nation's food supply contain no trace whatsoever of pesticides found to cause tumors in laboratory rats, no matter how infinitesimal the actual risk of cancer might be in human beings.

-- General Mining Law (1872). This 123-year-old chestnut has been described by Arkansas Sen. Dale Bumpers as "America's biggest ongoing scam." It allows mining companies to stake a claim to valuable mineral deposits on public land in the West by putting four stakes in the ground, posting a notice and recording the claim with the Bureau of Land Management.

The federal government would be wise to follow the lead of states like California and Colorado.

Gingrich is not about to sign a death certificate with his key conservative constituency.

Moderate coalition could solve mess

WASHINGTON—Moderate House Democrats, disgusted with the polarization that has plagued recent negotiations on the budget, recently discussed a way for both parties to claim victory.

Under this scenario, House Speaker Newt Gingrich would agree to jettison the all-or-nothing Republican freshman class. In return, President Clinton would hand liberal Democrats their walking papers in exchange for support from moderate Republicans. The effort to purge the fringes of both parties, who now have virtual veto power over any deal, rests on these two highly improbable assumptions. To be sure, Gingrich is not about to sign a death certificate with his key conservative constituency.

"I think the president is willing to tell his liberals, 'You are not going to get relief out of this bill, and you can vote no if you want, but we have to find a center of gravity that's moderate,'" one veteran House Democrat told us. "But Newt is not willing to tell his far right, 'Look, you guys can vote no, but I need a moderate bill.'"

The negotiations now under way will remain deadlocked as long as moderates get snatched out of the process. Some $800 billion in spending over the next seven years is the fiscal chess that has to be bridged. For Republicans, particularly the freshmen, who are agitating for more spending cuts, the $345 billion tax cut is considered the "crown jewel," as it was recently described by Gingrich.

Clinton, who has found political rebirth in rolling the waters, is calling for a $105 billion tax cut, and increased funding for education, the environment and other domestic programs. But his holy grail is protecting Medicare from the $270 billion rollback proposed by the GOP.

Finding ways to bridge big differences has always required legislative leaders, of which there's a shortage right now. Gingrich is a shepherd who's being led by his flock of freshmen. Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, who knows the art of compromise, is under close scrutiny by his Republican rivals in the presidential race. And House Minority Leader Richard Gephardt, by ruling out any cuts in Medicare, finds himself on the periphery of the debate.

"Gephardt may have dealt himself out of the debate on this, even though he's the leader of our party," said one Democratic lawmaker involved in the negotiations. The same apparently holds true for Minority Whip David Bonior, D-Mich.

Sources pin their hopes for a solution—short of just waiting for the next election to break the logjam—on reaching outside the normal leadership structure and crafting a centrist alternative. Some officials are taking a second look at a plan forged by a group of conservative Democrats who call themselves the Coalition. Led by Reps. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, and Bill Gray, D-Ill., the Coalition's plan only found four Republican supporters when it was soundly defeated in an October vote. Yet some Democratic officials hold out hope that the plan—which scales back some GOP spending cuts and doesn't include a tax cut—could form the blueprint for compromise.

Moderate Democrats believe the final package would have to contain the following elements: Approximately $104 billion in tax cuts; a half-point cut in the consumer price index, which might reap more than $80 billion; reformulating economic assumptions to generate $100 billion; and Medicare reductions in the range of $180 billion.

Women in Washington: It helps

When Debra Dodson began interviewing female members of Congress for a study at the Center for the American Woman and Politics, she noticed among the very different voices a similar chord: immense respect for Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan. "Among both people who agree and disagree with her there is an incredible amount of respect for the thoughtfulness and the care that she puts into making her decisions," says Dodson.

Kassebaum, the first woman to chair a major Senate committee (she is currently the head of Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee), has recently announced her retirement.

So have three congresswomen -- Cardiss Collins, D-Ill., Jan Meyers, R-Kan., and Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., who is ending a 23-year tenure.

Schroeder, who is presently the most senior woman in Congress, has been a tireless advocate for women's rights. She has fought for reproductive choice and the rights of women in the military. More recently she has vigorously criticized the social spending cuts outlined in the Republican "Contract With America."

Nancy Kassebaum and Patricia Schroeder are two very different women. They have different ideologies, they come from different parties, and they serve in different houses of Congress. They have voted differently on many different issues, such as the welfare-reform bill and the Family and Medical Leave Act. But does the fact that they are both women in this still very male domain give them a common ground? Should women be worried that we are losing them? Does the number of women in Congress dramatically affect the issues that are brought into the public forum?

Yes, says the CAWP study, which Dodson co-authored. The study of the women of the 103rd Congress found distinct differences in the way men and women of the same party vote on social issues, with the larger gap being between Republican men and women. For example, 58 percent of Republican women voted for the assault weapons ban, while only 19 percent of Republican men did. Fifty percent of Republican women voted for the Family and Medical Leave Act, while only 21 percent of Republican men did.

Republican and Democratic women also worked together to keep the Violence Against Women Act on the front burner in 1994, when Congress was debating the Crime Bill. "There are women sitting out there who are victims of domestic abuse who are saying, 'Why can't you change the system for me? Don't you understand it a little better than the guy you're sitting next to?'" says Rep. Susan Molinari, R-N.Y.

Of course, women have not been completely consistent in their defense of children and families. Witness this year's welfare-reform debate. When the provision to dismantle the federal safety net for poor families went to the Senate, only one woman senator -- Carol Moseley-Braun, D-Ill. -- opposed it.

But Democratic and Republican women have succeeded in building a coalition and bringing attention to issues which had rarely, if ever, been addressed before. For example, when Rep. Schroeder and then-Rep. (now Sen.) Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, discovered that the National Institutes of Health were excluding women and minorities from their clinical study trials and neglecting women's diseases such as breast and ovarian cancer, the two legislators were able to make women's health a priority.

"I didn't really want to be stereotyped as the woman legislator," says Republican Marge Roussoma of New Jersey. "I wanted to deal with things like banking and finance. But I learned very quickly that if the women like me in Congress were not going to attend to some of these family concerns, whether it was jobs or children, pension equality or whatever, then they weren't ever going to be attended to. So I quickly shed those biases that I had and said, 'Well, nobody else is going to do it; I'm going to do it.'"

Of course, women have not been completely consistent in their defense of children and families.

practice fields, accommodations for the team's minor league club, office facilities and a stadium with at least 7,500 seats. The team is based in St. Petersburg and will begin play during the 1990 season.

To construct such a facility, the city, the county, the state and the team will have to put up $500,000 each per year for the next three decades.

The local officials agree they believe bringing the sports industry to Seminole County will be good for the economy here. They expect that the complex could bring nearly $9 million a year into the Seminole County economy.

Commissioners considered borrowing $5 million to make a lump sum payment to the project up front, but decided to go with the long term payment plan instead.

Some commissioners argued the long term commitment will cost the county nearly three times as much as paying the amount up front, but the commission agreed later that the annual payment was better.

Meanwhile, if the Tampa Bay Buc's continue to insist on getting a new stadium in exchange for a move, the Orlando mayor and city council are giving them little room for hope.

Mayor Glenda Hood and council members aren't interested in raising the Florida Citrus Bowl and raising funds for a new stadium. The city prefers a rebuilt Citrus Bowl.

Although there were no official votes, the council turned its attention Monday to a campaign for a new $150 million performing arts center, which won't include a football field.

Without the city's support, the Buc's would have little chance of transferring to Orlando, although officials in Altamonte Springs have expressed an interest in wooing the team, along with the Devil Rays, to the area.

Hood and the council hope to persuade wealthy individuals and foundations to contribute to a performing arts center, which would be built across from city hall.

"I'd like to see the excitement grow like this was an Orlando Magic playoffs game," the mayor said during an informal session of the council. "I know it can happen. The money will come."

Any money to build a stadium in Orlando would have to come from Orange County. And County Chairman Linda Chapin has echoed the mayor, saying she doesn't want to use taxpayer money for such a purpose.

The county has authorized a penny increase in the tourist tax, but the funds are pledged until March 1997 to Boca Raton developer Norton Herrick, who is trying to bring a Major League Baseball team to Orlando.

Herrick has said he would give up his claim to own part of the Buc's, an offer team owner Malcolm Glaser hasn't accepted.

Glaser's representatives have been talking to members of the Orlando Area Sports Commission, but the mayor said she had not met with the Buc's owner since Oct. 9.

At that time, she said, she offered the city-owned Citrus Bowl with renovations. But "they told me very firmly that they were not interested in that."

Glaser wants to move because he says Tampa Stadium does not generate enough money for him. Efforts to raise the money for a new stadium there have been unsuccessful.

Information from The Associated Press is included in this report.

Shipped

packages Priority Mail (delivery guaranteed within three days) would cost closer to $80 to mail them.

Using U.P.S., those same 100 pounds of packages would cost about $48 to mail to New York City, a spokesman for the company said. Shipping to locations farther away or closer to business or residential addresses changes the cost of shipping.

The post office has a weight limit of 70 pounds per package, while a U.P.S.-shipped package can be as large as 150 pounds.

"I think we have very competitive prices and offer very good service for the money," said Joseph Breckenridge, a spokesman for the postal service.

Martin Bequith said he doesn't care.

"I wouldn't trust the Post Office with my grandkid's presents," he said.

Sharon Johannson said she feels just the opposite.

"I think U.P.S. is just a big old business that doesn't care about me and my little presents," she said. "At the post office, people I deal with every day who know me are taking care of my presents and I know they'll take care of me."

According to Breckenridge, the volume of mail and packages the Post Office is handling this year is "through the roof," but he thinks lines are shorter because they have become more efficient.

"First of all, we have automated almost all of our windows so there's no more flipping through books looking for the prices. It's all right there on the computer," he explained. "And, then, we are accepting credit cards. Credit cards have made a lot of difference. People aren't spending all that time writing out checks or counting out their cash."

U.P.S. also accepts credit cards, but only for certain transactions. Regular ground service shipments, the mode most often used by people shipping Christmas presents, must be paid for by cash or with a check.

In addition, the volume of paperwork required to ship an item through U.P.S. is much greater than through the post office.

"I think that's so they can keep better track of the package," Shante Kingale said. "They know who shipped what and when. At the post office you hand them a box and then it's your word against theirs."

Farley Davis said he believes the post office's experience goes back "centuries before any upstart company, like U.P.S.," and they are, thus, more trustworthy when it comes to package delivery.

"I'll mail my boxes any day before I'll U.P.S. them," he said. "I know what I'm getting for my buck."

As of today, the Florida Department of Transportation, Turnpike District, is resurfacing

Construction workers have begun their work near SR-50 at milepost 375. Completion of the 34 mile project will take approximately eight months.

Motorists are urged to use caution and obey posted speed limits when passing through the work zone.

parking of such vehicles in front yards. Simmons said a portion of the original city code has been stricken, that pertaining to parking of a vehicle without current license plates in a residentially zoned area. "We took that out not because it is no longer valid," he said, "but rather because it already appears elsewhere in our city codes. This would just be a duplication and may be confusing."

"I recognize that our people have property rights," said Commissioner Whitney Eckstein, "but we have to respond to this in order to keep our neighborhoods looking good." Eckstein admitted that he has a problem with the city possibly being too restrictive however.

During Monday's work session, Simmons made several proposals including considering one recreational vehicle to be allowed in a front yard. Another question which came up regarded whether the city should classify recreational vehicles and boats on trailers in the same classifications.

Under the proposed changes as presently written, all residences which have obtained a Certificate of Occupancy (CO) prior to March 27, 1986, would be grandfathered in to allow the parking in the front yard, providing the side lot line is not sufficient to allow the vehicle access to the rear yard.

Simmons also has recommended that the vehicle be parked only on "a paved surface or a properly maintained approved stabilized surface."

Eckstein commented that he wished he knew more about how the people actually feel about this matter.

With no general consensus regarding the proposal, Mayor Smith suggested it be rescheduled for additional discussion during the first city commission work session in January, which would be on January 9.

Drugs

over 500 in 1989 to 1,600 in 1993.

Forty-one percent of Americans polled thought education and prevention programs were the most cost-efficient and effective strategies to fight the drug war, far outweighing treatment programs and punishment of drug offenders, the survey found.

In fact, only 4 percent see treatment as the best anti-drug strategy. Twenty-three percent thought punishment was the best strategy.

William Bennett, Brown's predecessor under the Bush administration, said he was not surprised by the public's attitude toward treatment, given the "record of failure of the current policy of treatment on demand," which he called "massively wasteful and ineffective."

Another finding in the survey was that 85 percent of the people oppose legalizing drugs.

The Drug Policy Foundation, a Washington, D.C.,-based group that advocates some legalization of drugs and needle-exchange programs, criticized the poll, saying it was too general to be useful and shows the lack of creative leadership in the nation's drug policy.

"What we need is a thorough, honest look at what Americans would do differently when they realize that drug prohibition has failed to control illegal drugs," said David C. Condit, the group's executive director.

Gallup, based in Princeton, N.J., randomly telephoned 1,020 people 18 or older between Sept. 14 and Sept. 17 for its survey, which it said has a margin of error of plus or minus three percentage points.

Gallup provided Brown, Burke and Bennett with the survey results in advance and asked for their comments. It included some of those comments when it released the survey to the public on Tuesday. Brown was also interviewed separately in Miami.

In his appearance before the commission, Parsons requested a waiver of the fee for dumping the litter from the destroyed houses, but was informed by City Attorney Bill Simmons that the fee was levied at the county level, and could not be waived by the city.

The vote for the city's condemnation was unanimous. Under the provisions of condemnation proceedings, if buildings are not repaired or demolished (at the owner's cost) within the 30 days following the decision, the city would handle the demolition, and place liens against the houses.

Parsons however, had told the commissioners he expected to have his work done in moving the houses and destroying the rest by January 10, which would fit well into the 30 day time limit imposed by the city.

Parsons did not immediately say when moving of the four or five Lincoln Court homes would begin, but he was apparently satisfied with the city's decision.

Word on when the actual motion picture will be released is not expected until most of the production has concluded.

AROUND THE STATE

Bulls name football coach

TAMPA — Jim Leavitt, defensive coordinator at Kansas State since 1991, was introduced Tuesday as the University of South Florida's first football coach. The Bulls won't start play on the NCAA Division I-AA level until September 1997, but the task of assembling a roster will begin almost immediately. Leavitt hopes to sign 15 to 20 scholarship players this winter.

Heat sign center

MIAMI — Following a series of injuries to frontcourt players including center Alonzo Mourning, the Miami Heat on Tuesday signed free agent center/forward Danny Schayes.

Bucs lose safety

TAMPA — Tampa Bay safety John Lynch was placed on injured reserve Tuesday after an examination of his left knee revealed a torn posterior cruciate ligament. Fullback Fred Lester was signed from the practice squad to fill Lynch's roster spot.

Huskies dump Noles

TALLAHASSEE — Ray Allen scored 22 points to lead No. 8 Connecticut to a 79-61 victory over cold-shooting Florida State. The Huskies (7-1) were never threatened, scoring the first 11 points of the game on their way to a 40-25 halftime lead. Connecticut led 61-32 before emptying its bench. Florida State (4-2) went scoreless for nearly four minutes before Corey Loula's free throw, his only point of the game, made it 11-1. Connecticut rolled up a 24-6 lead as FSU hit just one field goal for almost 12 minutes. Rashamel Jones added 16 points for Connecticut, while Rudy Johnson had 11 and Travis Knight 10 points and 10 rebounds. Freshman Randall Jackson led Florida State with 13 points, while James Collins added 12 and Scott Shepherd 11.

Opportunity missed

GICC loses; Sunniland, Red Hots to meet for title

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — In a season where five of the seven teams have stayed in the title chase for the entire schedule, the championship of the Sanford Recreation Department Women's Fall Slowpitch Softball League will be decided on the outcome of one game.

Tuesday night at Pinhurst Park, GICC missed a golden opportunity to clinch at least a tie for the league crown when it dropped a 7-5 decision to Crazy Wings and in the process gave Sunniland Corporation and the Red Hots right to decide the champion in a head-to-head matchup next week.

Sunniland Corporation, which had a bye this week, and GICC had entered the night's action tied at 7-2 with the Red Hots a half-game back at 6-2.

The Red Hots quickly made it a three-way tie for the top spot by scoring seven runs in the first two innings and cruising to an 11-0 triumph over

Lee's Exxon	000 000 0 - 0 3
Red Hots	430 000 2 - 11 14
She Devils	0 (10) - 20 11
C & A Sales	0 0 - 0 0
GICC	010 130 0 - 3 11
Crazy Wings	100 000 2 - 7 10

Lee's Exxon.

The She Devils then got over the .500 mark by quickly disposing of C & A Sales, scoring 14 runs in the top of the second inning to end the game 20-0. When the game was stopped by the mercy rule the She Devils had a runner on first base and only one out. Winning pitcher Joetta West had a no hitter for the She Devils.

In the nightcap, GICC scored three runs in the top of the fifth inning to take a 5-1 lead and appeared headed for the tie clinching win.

But Crazy Wings went to work in the bottom of the fifth inning, scoring six runs on the strength of doubles by Angela Whitney and Belinda Anderson to take a 7-5 lead.

Crazy Wings then turned the game over to the defense, not allowing a runner past first base and retiring six of the last seven batters to come to the plate to pull off its second straight upset (they beat the Red Hots last week) and knock GICC out of the title chase.

Sunniland Corporation and the Red Hots are both 7-2, while GICC has finished its season at 7-3. The She Devils and Crazy Wings are tied for fourth place with 5-4 records, with Lee's Exxon (1-8) and C & A Sales (0-9) trailing.

The league will wrap up next Tuesday at Pinhurst Park with Crazy Wings battling the She Devils for fourth place at 8:30 p.m.; C & A Sales trying to get into the win column against Lee's Exxon at 7:30 p.m.; and the Red Hots and Sunniland Corporation squaring off for the championship at 8:30 p.m.

Seminole wins foul shooting contest

SANFORD — Almost since the beginning of time, basketball coaches have been stressing the importance of free throws. Seminole's 55-37 win over Oviedo Tuesday only reinforced that point.

The teams combined to commit 63 fouls in the game, an average of a foul every 29 seconds, and it translated into 78 free throw attempts. Seminole converted 25-of-50 free throws, while Oviedo was 16-for-28.

"It was a nightmare," said Seminole coach John McNamara. "I never saw so many fouls in one game in my life. It's rough when you have people in foul trouble because it changes the whole game."

However, it was the Lions and head coach Tom Bieri who suffered the brunt of the officials' whistles. Bieri was ejected from the game after two technical fouls on the Oviedo bench, and Kelly Brock, Carrie McAuliffe, Kristen Hodges and Lyndsay Wynegar all fouled out in the fourth quarter.

"We were ready to play," Bieri said. "We did a great job on defense at the beginning of the game, but we had some shots that didn't fall for us. Seminole has a tremendous team, and we put up a good effort. The kids needed me, and it really

Desserts that you'll burn for

By Marielisa Coita

Maybe it's the pyromaniac in me, but I like to set food on fire. It's such a DRAMATIC presentation, and around the holidays it seems so festive.

The first dessert I ever flambeed was a bona fide plum pudding; which I learned the hard way not to serve surrounded by evergreen boughs. (It was the boughs, not the pudding, that flambeed, making for an EXTREMELY dramatic presentation.) But the puddings below are as delicious as a plum pudding and a lot less work.

If you can find it, get a hold of "The Pyromaniacs Cookbook," by John Poister. Otherwise, the out-of-print "Great Desserts," by Christian Teubner, and the mercifully in-print and excellent "Classic Home Desserts," by the late Richard Sax, will provide fuel for your inspiration.

SAXONY PUDDING WITH RASPBERRY SAUCE

For pudding:

- 1/2 cup butter, plus more for buttering molds
- 1/2 cup granulated sugar, plus more for dusting
- 1/2 cup flour
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1/2 cup vanilla bean
- 1 egg white
- 1 egg yolk

Raspberry Sauce:

- 1 pound frozen raspberries
- 1/2 cup confectioners' sugar, or to taste
- 1/2 cup brandy or rum

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Melt a few tablespoons of butter and brush them over 8 to 10 ramekins or timbales. Sprinkle each buttered mold with sugar. Set aside.

Heat the 1/2-cup butter in a saucepan; carefully stir in flour and cook gently for 12 minutes.

In another pan, heat the milk and the vanilla bean. Let milk boil up once and then remove the vanilla. Blend milk into the butter-flour mixture over the heat.

Pour the milk-butter-flour mixture into a bowl and stir in 2 egg whites. Incorporate the 1/2 cup of sugar, one at a time, beating the mixture until smooth between each addition. Whip the 8 remaining whites with the sugar until stiff, and stir about 1/2 of the mixture into the pudding with a whisk. Fold in the remaining whites with a wooden spoon.

Fill prepared molds 3/4 full. Put the puddings into a pan with sides and fill the pan with very hot tap water reaching about 1/2 way up the pudding molds. Put the pan in the oven and bake for 25 to 30 minutes, until the puddings are set. Cool on a rack about 5 minutes, then invert puddings onto a plate.

To make the sauce: Puree the raspberries in a food processor or blender. Push through a fine sieve and sweeten with sugar, to taste. Add brandy or rum and heat mixture in a small saucepan. When hot, light with a match, and pour, flaming, over puddings. Serve immediately.

Yield: 8 to 10 servings.

NEL'S PERSIMMON PUDDING

3 tablespoons butter, plus more for buttering pudding mold

- 1/2 cup sugar, plus more for dusting mold
- 1/2 cup pulp from 2 or 3 medium VERY ripe persimmons
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1/2 cup flour
- 1/2 cup brown sugar
- 1/2 cup molasses
- 1/2 cup raisins
- 1/2 cup chopped dates
- 1/2 cup brandy or B&B
- Whipped cream or hard sauce

Heavily butter a 1-1/2 quart pudding mold (the kind with lid and a center tube) very well. Remember to butter the inside of the lid and the tube. Heavily sprinkle the buttered mold, including the lid, with sugar.

In a mixing bowl, cream the 3 tablespoons butter and the 1/2 cup sugar. In a small bowl, mix together the egg, persimmon pulp and milk.

In a separate bowl, mix together the flour, salt, soda, cinnamon, nuts and dates. Mix dry ingredients alternately with wet ingredients into the butter mixture, until all ingredients are well incorporated.

Pour the batter into the prepared mold (it should be about 3/4 full). Secure lid.

Prepare a pot for steaming: Put a trivet or steamer in the bottom of a pot large enough to hold the mold. Put the mold in the pot, and pour in water slightly less than halfway up the side of the mold. Remove the mold. Cover the pot and bring water to a boil. Reduce to simmer, put the mold into the water, cover the pot and steam for 2 hours. Add more boiling water as needed.

Remove mold from water, unsnap lid. Invert onto a plate.

In small saucepan, heat the brandy; light it and pour it, flaming, over the pudding. Serve immediately with whipped cream or hard sauce.

Yield: 8 servings.

ROGY PUDDING

1/2 cup unsalted butter, melted and cooled slightly, plus more for buttering mold

- 1/2 pound moist dried figs
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1/2 cup flour
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon salt (optional)
- 1 large egg
- 1/2 cup soft fresh bread crumbs
- 1/2 tablespoons grated orange zest
- 1/2 tablespoons mixed crystallized ginger (optional)
- 1/2 cup brandy or rum
- Hard sauce, vanilla ice cream or whipped cream

Preheat oven to 350 degrees, with a rack in the center. Generously butter a metal pudding mold or a fluted tube pan. Set aside.

With scissors, stem the figs and snip them into small pieces. Combine the figs and the milk in a saucepan. Cover and cook over medium heat for 15 minutes. Meanwhile, sift together the flour, sugar, baking powder, nutmeg, cinnamon and salt (if using).

Beat the eggs until fluffy with an electric mixer on high speed. Add the melted butter, bread crumbs, zest, ginger (if using) and the fig mixture. Add the flour mixture and mix just until blended.

Spoon the pudding into the prepared mold (it should be about 3/4 full). Cover the top with a sheet of buttered foil, buttered side down. It should be secure but leave a little room for expansion (if your mold has a lid, butter the inside and forgo the foil). Place the mold in a roasting pan and place in oven. Pour in enough very hot tap water to reach halfway up the sides of the mold.

Bake until the pudding is firm and pulls away from the sides, about 2 hours. Add more hot water to the pan as needed.

Cool pudding in mold on a wire rack for about 5 minutes. Invert onto a serving plate.

In a saucepan, heat the brandy or rum; light it and pour it, flaming, over the pudding. Serve immediately with hard sauce, ice cream or whipped cream.

Yield: 12 servings.

Child's allergic reaction can be matter of life and death

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, you printed a terribly sad letter from an allergist regarding a little boy who was severely allergic to peanuts and died because one of the ladies at a party insisted he try a peanut butter cookie.

Since we have two grandchildren (our son's 4-year-old and our daughter's 2-year-old) who are fatally allergic to peanuts, would you please print the letter again? And would you stress to your readers that they never give a young child anything to eat without first checking with the parent?

Also, obstetricians and pediatricians should warn mothers-to-be to avoid peanut products while pregnant or nursing.

Thank you, Abby, for making the public aware of the seriousness of allergies.

MARIE AND JIM MITCHELL

DEAR MARIE AND JIM: I'm happy to reprint the letter — and thank you for your important warning to adults who serve food to children. Some foods can be fatal, as illustrated in the following letter:

DEAR ABBY: As a practicing allergist, I would like to make parents and hosts and hostesses for holiday and birthday parties aware that they should be extremely careful with children who are allergic to various foods.

I once had a young boy as a patient who was severely allergic to peanuts. He and his mother regarded this with extreme caution, but once, while attending a birthday party, his allergy proved fatal.

His mother had informed the hostess about "Billy's" allergy and strictly ordered that he not eat anything containing peanuts. The hostess agreed not to feed Billy any such food. Unfortunately, other ladies were helping with the party. One handed out homemade peanut butter cookies and insisted Billy sample one. He tried to refuse, but she insisted. Less than 30 minutes later, Billy was dead.

I want to use this horribly sad incident to warn anyone who is helping with children's activities to please be cautious with your own children as well as others'. Anyone who hands out treats to children, please be aware of the dangers involved. Make certain that the children you serve are not allergic to any foods, so they don't end up like Billy.

CLAUDE A. FRAZIER, M.D., ASHEVILLE, N.C.

DEAR DR. FRAZIER: Thank you for a warning that applies all year around. I'm printing your letter in the hope that once alerted, other parents can prevent a similar tragedy.

PSC orders $42 million BellSouth rate reduction

By MONA BRECKENRIDGE
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Small businesses were the big winners Tuesday when the state Public Service Commission ordered BellSouth to give customers more than $42 million in rate reductions. Commissioners settled on a figure about midway between the $17 million in excess earnings BellSouth claimed and the $89 million the South Carolina Consumer Affairs Department wanted refunded.

BellSouth was disappointed, spokesman Gregg Morton said, but he could not say whether the company would appeal the total.

Morton also did not immediately know what the potential rate reduction would be for the average residential or business customer.

At issue was how much BellSouth should return to customers from earnings under a 1994 rate regulation plan later ruled illegal.

Under that plan, BellSouth earned a 17.5 percent return on its stockholders' investment.

On the recommendation of Commissioner C. Dukes Scott, the PSC on Tuesday approved a 12.75 percent rate of return — leaving BellSouth to return the excess $42.3 million.

Most of that will go to BellSouth's small-business customers, Scott said.

"Small businesses needed help," he said.

There was disagreement on exactly how much of the pot BellSouth's 1.2 million South Carolina residential customers would get. Consumer Affairs lawyer Elliott Elam Jr. said it would be about $6 million, but public service commissioners said it would be closer to $13 million.

Consumer affairs had pushed to limit BellSouth's rate of return to 11 percent. BellSouth had said it needed 14 percent.

The order should be issued by Jan. 1, and by then, BellSouth is supposed to have a plan in place for making the rate reductions, said Gary Walsh, the PSC's deputy executive director. It will take effect immediately, though the utility can appeal, he said.

The lone dissenter among the six commissioners voting Tuesday was Warren D. Arthur IV, who wanted BellSouth to return $54 million to customers. Other commissioners said that was too much given that BellSouth faces increased competition and needs additional resources.

Long-distance carriers AT&T and MCI wanted about $25 million of the excess profits used to reduce the charges they must pay to hook to BellSouth's phone system.

How dangerous is seafood allergy?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I recently found that I am allergic to shellfish and have been told that I should be careful when having some X-rays. If this is true, what should I watch out for? Could this allergy be so bad that I ought to wear a Medic-Alert bracelet?

DEAR READER: People can become allergic to almost anything in their environments, including food.

Seafood allergy is common. When eaten by persons who are allergic to it, seafood can cause hives, diarrhea, vomiting, rapid pulse, asthma, swelling of the mouth, and - in serious cases - anaphylactic shock.

Most allergists believe that such reactions are triggered by proteins in the food, to which the allergy sufferer responds by an outpouring of histamine, leading to the symptoms I mentioned.

In a similar vein, some patients are allergic to compounds that contain iodine, notably the iodine-based "dyes" used for certain X-ray examinations, chiefly kidney X-rays (IVPs). This situation is especially dangerous because the substance is injected into the patient's vein and, if an allergy is present, can cause life-threatening complications.

Your doctor apparently believes that you are particularly sensitive to the iodine in shellfish. Consequently, he has prohibited you from having X-rays that use iodine "dyes."

This is not customary because, as I mentioned, shellfish allergy is usually due to a protein sensitivity.

In my opinion, you should be tested by an allergist. Using skin and blood tests, the specialist should be able to determine, with amazing precision, exactly what you're allergic to.

If, in fact, you are sensitive to iodine, you will have to avoid not only shellfish, but seafood in general, as well as iodized salt, IVP dye and other iodine-containing compounds.

On the other hand, if you're allergic only to shellfish protein, you needn't worry about contact with fish and X-ray substances.

I advise you to get a Medic-Alert bracelet only if you have had a serious allergic reaction in the past or are sensitive to compounds that contain iodine. Ask the allergist about this.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Allergies." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10116. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I had part of the cartilage removed in one knee because of a sports injury. One doctor said I can never play contact sports again. Another reassured me that I can play any sport, once the cartilage grows back. Who is right? Can cartilage really grow back?

DEAR READER: I'll side with your second doctor, because knee cartilage will grow back, provided that a "button" of it is left at the time of surgery. However, the issue of which sports you can play is a tricky one.

If you were playing professional football and your career depended on active participation, you'd play if humanly possible.

On the other hand, contact sports might not be appropriate for you (because of the risk of further injury) if you're an amateur. In this instance, you might have to be satisfied to engage in sports that are easier on the knees, such as golf, swimming, cross-country skiing, skating, and so forth.

After several months of healing, see how your knee feels. Then start some exercise - for example, brisk walking - and work up to more strenuous activities. Let your knee tell you what to do. If you're pain-free, I don't see any reason why you couldn't play any sport - remembering, of course, that sports such as downhill skiing, basketball and football place tremendous stress on the knees and might be modified or avoided.
