Squeaky turns 20

Twenty may not be a landmark birthday in human terms but when you are a cat, it makes you an elder statesman of the feline set. A can of tuna and bouquet of catnip might be appropriate for Squeaky, who is celebrating two decades of living today. Born behind the cemetery on 25th Street, the female cat is owned by Harriett Boyd, Lake Mary. Squeaky received national publicity a few years ago after columnist Dave Barry mentioned Boyd won a silver medal in the Golden Age Games talent contest for vacuuming the cat. Not many cats can claim they've been written up in the Washington Post magazine.

Cruel pet scam

By NICK PFIFAUF
Herald Staff Writer

Florida Agriculture and Consumer Services Commissioner Bob Crawford has issued a statement on a scam which appears to be growing rapidly throughout the state. It involves people offering to return a person's lost pet, for a reward, of course.

Although it is virtually impossible to determine how widespread the problem is, some law enforcement and Humane Society officials around the state report that con artists are targeting owners of missing pets by asking them for money to ship their animals home. Rarely do those who call even have the pets.

"Of the many scams we've seen, this is the cruelest," Crawford commented. "People who have lost pets are particularly vulnerable and are often willing to go to almost any length to recover their animal."

Crawford said the scam artists apparently become aware of the missing pets by scanning classified ad sections of newspapers, or reading reward posters located in neigh-

Lake Mary's approach to enforcing codes

By NICK PFIFAUF
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — If approved, the city of Lake Mary will soon be taking a new approach (for that city) to the issuance of code enforcement citations. The matter is scheduled for consideration during this Thursday's City Commission meeting.

The matter has been discussed during past meetings, but no formal document spelling out specifics had been previously available. Now, the city attorney has prepared a suggested ordinance.

It would create an additional method of enforcing the city's codes and ordinances through the issuance of citations for violations.

In a memorandum forwarded to members of the commission, City Manager John Litton explains, "According to the ordinance, certain employees will be trained and designated as code enforcement officers. It additionally designates the fire marshal or any law enforcement officer of the city as code enforcement officers."

He continued, "The code enforcement officers are authorized to issue a citation to someone when they have reasonable cause that a person has committed a civil infraction in violation of a city code or ordinance."

Litton specifies that before a citation can be issued, the code enforcement officer will first provide a warning notice regarding the violation, and establishing a time period within which the problem must be resolved, not to exceed 30 days.

The only exception would be if the officer has reason to believe the violation presents a serious threat to the public health, safety or welfare, or if it is irreparable or irreversible.

In such cases no reasonable time period will be required, and the citation of violation may be issued immediately.

Under the fees for violations, the city attorney has determined penalties of $50, $100, $200 or $300 per day, depending on class I, II, III, or IV.

College organization: Top honors in leadership event

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Seminole Community College Chapter of Phi Beta Lambda is not your typical college fraternal organization.

There are no infamous parties. There isn't an "animal house." And these people are never on academic probation.

Instead, the group represents the finest of the future business leaders in the community with skills ranging from "professional keyboarding" to business law.

When they aren't practicing their technological and business prowess, the members of the group are either performing a variety of community services from cleaning an adoptive road to tutoring other SCC students, or they are preparing for the rigors of competition.

Recently, the college's team competed in the State Leadership Conference Competition that was hosted at the Orlando North Hilton and Towers in Altamonte Springs.

Approximately 225 students from 32 colleges, universities, community colleges and vocational centers, took part in the event.

SCC scored better than any of the other teams there, taking home four first place honors, five awards for second place, four for third place, one for fourth place and four for fifth place. The chapter also took first and second place honors in three events.

The first place winners from SCC were:

Leslie Strout in the Business Law competition; Eileen George in the Business Principles contest; Colleen Risner in the Machine Transcription competition; and Shelley Strong in the Professional Keyboarding contest.

The second place winners were Eileen George in the Computer Concepts competition; Ron Purvis in the Telecommunications contest; Joanne Patterson in the competition in Impromptu Speaking; Donna Rickey in the Public Speaking contest and Kristina Schmidt in the Professional Keyboarding competition.

The third place winners are Susan Taylor in the Computer Applications contest; Suzanne Robichaud in the Economics competition; Ron Purvis in the Information Management contest; and Andrew Boucher in the Mr. Future Business Leader competition.

Shawn Polley took fourth place in the Business Principles competition.

The fifth place winners are Kim Brown in the Machine Transcription contest; Mark Bagley in the Business Law competition; Betty Maldonado in the Computer Applications contest; and James Stapler in the Human Resource Management competition.

The team of Doris Cruz, Eddie Gagon, Patricia Gagnon, Chris Norton (who earned the Edric Kennedy Award for scoring the highest on the Parliamentary Procedure Written Test) and James Norton took first place in the Parliamentary Procedure contest.

Mother charged in murder of tot

MIAMI — A 2-year-old who urinated on the floor was killed by her mother, police said.

Whitney Barr died Tuesday at Jackson Memorial Hospital. Her father, Willie Barr, called police when he came home from work at 5 p.m. and discovered her unconscious in the Miami apartment.

"That was like his little china doll, he loved that baby," said the girl's aunt, Priscilla Jones. "That was his reason for everything."

Police say the mother, Travia Moss, has allegedly admitted beating the child earlier in the day and failing to call paramedics.

"According to the mother, the little girl urinated on the floor," said police spokesman Delrish Moss. "She spanked her or in her words she beat her and the child died."

Moss was arrested and charged with first degree murder and aggravated child abuse.

The couple have two other children, ages 3 and 5, and Moss is pregnant.

Homicide investigators are working to find out if there were any prior reports of abuse. Neighbors said the 22-year-old mother didn't appear to be abusive.

"I don't think she was that type of person," Jones said.

Man sues drug treatment center

MIAMI — A man who nearly died after catching the rodent-borne hantavirus sued Dade County and the operator of a drug treatment center, accusing them of negligence.

Kenneth Spence's medical bills have pushed above $100,000, and he still suffers from numbness on his right side and breathing difficulties nearly 1 1/2 years after he was infected, said attorney Kenneth Sobel.

"My client entered the Jack Orr Ranch in hopes of curing his drug addiction," Sobel said Tuesday.

But seven weeks into the residential treatment, Spence developed a flu-like illness and spent 12 days on a respirator in the first known hantavirus case east of the Mississippi.

The national Centers for Disease Control and Prevention found similarities but not a genetic match between Spence's case and the Black Creek Canal strain carried by cotton rats trapped in the area after he became ill, said CDC spokesman Jeff Lancashire.

The time frame for infection matched Spence's voluntary stay at the center, medical researchers said earlier.

No other hantavirus cases developed in area, but more than 100 cases have been reported in 22 states, Lancashire said. More than half of the infected people died.

Koppell recipient of Brinkley award

MIAMI SHORES — David Brinkley presented fellow ABC anchor Ted Koppell with a journalism award named for Brinkley.

Koppell, who anchors "Nightline," was honored Tuesday with The David Brinkley Award for Excellence in Communication at Barry University.

The award recognizes Koppell's comprehensive and intriguing approach to investigative reporting. His show evolved from ABC's nightly news coverage when the U.S. Embassy in Iran was seized in 1979.

WPLG-TV anchor Ann Bishop later moderated a question-and-answer panel that featured Koppell and Brinkley before an audience of about 700. Bishop received the Brinkley award in 1990.

Brinkley was the first recipient of the award in 1987. Subsequent winners have carried his name.

He worked in broadcast news for more than 40 years and anchors the Sunday morning ABC program, "This Week with David Brinkley."

Man held on counterfeiting charges

MIAMI — A Miami man used a $5 bank cashier's check to produce counterfeit checks to pay for $207,010 in cellular telephones, the Secret Service said.

A U.S. magistrate ordered David Subil held Monday in pretrial detention on a charge of counterfeiting.

Subil purchased a $5 cashier's check at a Barnett Bank branch Feb. 1, and used it to produce at least 16 counterfeit cashier's checks, all with the same serial number, U.S. Secret Service agent Xavier F. Morales said Tuesday.

Subil paid Cellular Telecom Corp., of Van Nuys, Calif., with two of the bogus checks totaling $61,967, Morales said.

He used two other counterfeit checks to pay for $125,043 worth of cellular telephones sent to him by Unplugged Communications, of Torrance, Calif., Morales said in an affidavit.

A search of Subil's office turned up 12 counterfeit but blank Barnett Bank cashier's checks, a check embossing machine like banks use for putting amounts on checks and the genuine $5 cashier's check, the Secret Service agent said.

Senate panel debates telephone deregulation

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A Senate panel decided to allow local telephone companies to ring in on the competition's turf in Florida but not to ring up charges for consumers.

Under the bill (SB1554) approved 14-0 Tuesday by the Commerce and Economic Opportunities Committee, small commercial customers' rates couldn't rise faster than the rate of inflation minus one percent, or a maximum of 6 percent a year.

The bill also says the July 1 opening of competition in the telephone service market will not forbid continuing Southern Bell's 1993 "incentive regulation" plan that brings customers at least $30 million this year.

The bill, meant to end local monopolies, will allow cable television and long distance companies into the local service market.

And Sen. Fred Dudley, R-Cape Coral, said he will seek even stronger language at the bill's next stop, the Senate Ways and Means Committee, to make sure the agreement stays in force as planned through 1997.

"Obviously, Sen. Dudley and others will come up with something that will clearly enforce our agreement," said Public Counsel Jack Shreve, who represents customers in utility rate cases and helped negotiate the agreement.

The House Utilities and Telecommunications Committee, slated to debate a similar bill today, will include similar protections, said the chairman, Rep. Scott Clemons, D-Panama City.

Clemons said the changes should answer questions raised last week by Gov. Lawton Chiles and Attorney General Bob Butterworth that had left the legislation's prospects in doubt.

Southern Bell returned $50 million to customers last year and proposes to return about $30 million this year as part of a 1993 rate agreement.

Customers receive the "sharing" money based on the amount by which company profits top the rate of return set for the company by the state Public Service Commission.

The plan was to continue through 1997, though company officials have questioned whether there would be excess profits in the remaining two years. Under the bills, the state would no longer set rates of return.

Clemons said House members will propose to amend the legislation to continue the Southern Bell returns to customers at 1995 levels through 1997.

Hospital fights back

By Associated Press

TAMPA — Snafus at a hospital that cost one man his leg and another his life have attracted not only bad publicity, but malpractice lawyers.

"This has turned into a feeding frenzy," said University Community Hospital spokesman John Andrews.

"There has been a rash of phone calls or letters without any supporting medical corroboration, asking for us to pay money," added hospital attorney John Boul. "It's kind of sad."

The hospital, which has apologized for a recent string of serious errors, is fighting back against the latest claim — that a surgeon mistakenly removed a woman's healthy ovary and left a diseased one behind.

UCH officials say a medical malpractice lawyer threatened a lawsuit over the claim and eight days later offered to settle for $1 million. The hospital calls it a "direct attempt at blackmail."

The case remained unresolved Tuesday.

Attorney Mike Gonzales, who has been representing the 21-year-old woman in the case for more than a year, said the decision to file an intent to sue last month was made after it was determined his client must undergo a hysterectomy.

But hospital lawyers say that's the only reason.

"The reason he wants us to pay $1 million is because of the adverse publicity the hospital has received," said Boul, a partner with the firm of Carlton Fields, which is representing UCH.

Andrews on Monday released some information about the woman's surgery at UCH's Carrollwood branch. In her medical consent form, she agreed to exploratory surgery and "additional procedures."

The form also states she needed a "possible oophorectomy," or removal of the right ovary.

Future is soon Company plans to build electric cars

By LIBBY GUAIN
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY — If electric cars are the fleet of the future, Oklahoma now has a front-seat ride.

A Florida company announced Tuesday it plans to build electric cars at an El Reno factory, beginning this summer. Solarmax Corp., based in Sarasota, Fla., said it eventually may hire up to 500 people.

Senior Vice President Rodger Ward, a former Indianapolis 500 driver who won the race in 1982, said the company could start hiring in the next 90 days.

Ward said he envisions electrical charging stations cropping up across the country as the cars catch on. A Solarmax car drives at speeds up to 100 mph, Ward said, and needs charging every 80 miles or so.

"Batteries can charge 50 percent in 10 minutes or 90 percent in 30 minutes," Ward said.

Drivers could use credit cards and pay the charge on their electric bills, he said. The company is now negotiating with utility companies, he said.

Lt. Gov. Mary Fallin said at a state Capitol news conference to announce the plant that its product will be "the fleet of the future."

At first, Ward said, the company will convert gas-powered cars to run on electricity, perhaps for use in high school driver's education classes. Solarmax plans to eventually build an electric car that would sell for under $17,000.

Solarmax plans to spend some $30 million on 10,000 vehicles, Ward said. The company also plans to build trucks, minivans and motorcycles.

Fallin said the company chose Oklahoma because of its central location.

"This is important for us to remember for any economic development prospect because of our central location which benefits from being the crossroads of Interstate 35 and Interstate 40, and being part of the North American Free Trade corridor," Fallin said.

Ward said Solarmax will first market the cars in cities with high levels of pollution.

Money woes crimp STOP's prison push

By ADAM YEHOMANS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The grassroots campaign to make criminals in Florida serve at least 85 percent of their sentences has always been a lean operation.

But Stop Turning Out Prisoners, or STOP, is running into a cash crunch this year just as lawmakers debate whether to pass the tougher prison sentencing mandate into state law.

Kathleen Finnegan, the campaign's director and spokeswoman, said she isn't sure how much longer she can keep the campaign going.

"We have $11 in the bank," Finnegan said last week between visits to lawmakers at the Capitol.

"I'll keep going. We're just in a crisis situation with money."

Most of over $50,000 raised last year for its petition drive came from a handful of corporate sponsors and dozens of individuals.

Except for $1,000 she received last September as a consulting fee, Finnegan has not been paid a salary to run the campaign. She said she has spent about $50,000 of her own money on the campaign over the past four years.

Finnegan, 35, of Punta Gorda, serves as an example of STOP's mission. She and a fellow prosecutor were abducted and robbed in 1988 by a career criminal on early release. Her friend was shot to death, and she was wounded.

STOP contributions have paid for mailings, petitions and one full-time employee — a $300-a-week secretary at an office in Punta Gorda. The secretary hasn't been paid in two weeks, Finnegan said.

Manatee County Sheriff Charlie Wells, who founded STOP several years ago, said the organization has always had money problems.

"We've been poverty-stricken since day one," said Wells. "But I didn't know she only had $11. I may have to send her part of my paycheck."

STOP had collected 300,000 of the 430,000 signatures needed to get on the November ballot before the state Supreme Court rejected the proposed constitutional amendment as misleading.

At the start of the current regular session, the Senate passed legislation requiring prisoners to serve a minimum of 85 percent of their terms. Senate leaders say it's the centerpiece of their criminal justice package.

A similar measure is awaiting action in the House.

Lawmakers also are considering a constitutional amendment to place the 85-percent measure on the ballot in 1996, saving STOP from having to go through the petition process again.

STOP has collected another 100,000 signatures to get the proposal on next year's ballot. But Finnegan and supporters are looking to the Legislature to take action this session.

Man describes serial murders on tape

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The tape-recorded voice that filled the courtroom was calm and unwavering as a man accused of murdering 10 Charlotte women described the killings in precise, grisly and often chilling detail.

Henry Louis Wallace told how he strangled his victims with towels and undergarments, how one woman fell to her knees in the middle of the attack and started to pray, and how he stayed in another victim's apartment long enough to calm her infant son.

He recalled bathing one victim after she was dead "to wash everything off her," and pouring rum over another victim before setting her home on fire.

"I can't explain why I did these things," he says on the tape that was played Tuesday, calling his crimes an out-of-body experience. "It's like I really didn't do it, but I'm going to be the one to pay for it."

Police said Wallace made the confession about 12 hours after he was arrested in March 1993. The tape was played during a pretrial hearing to determine whether defense attorneys, who say the statements were coerced, can keep the jury from hearing the conversations.

Wallace, 29, has pleaded innocent to 10 counts of murder, eight counts of rape and 18 other crimes, including armed robbery and arson. No trial date has been set. He also is charged with killing an 11th woman in South Carolina.

Wallace was assaulted Tuesday morning on the way to court by another inmate, the brother of one of the victims. His lawyer said he suffered only cuts and scratches.

In court, Wallace smiled during the testimony of one police investigator and snacked on peppermint candy. As the tape was played, he folded his hands and stared down at the table.

Police said Wallace first wrote down the names of the victims on a sheet of paper, numbering them 1 through 10. Over the next hour, interrupted only by a short break for breakfast, Wallace described the killings with minimal prodding from police.

He said he put a "Boston choke hold" on Caroline Love, his girlfriend's roommate and his first victim. After she passed out, Wallace said, he had sex with her, then "took a cord and placed it around her neck and strangled her to death."

Wallace said he placed Love's body in a large orange plastic bag and drove around Charlotte before finding a place to dump it. Afraid that someone might spot the bag, he came back the next day and removed her body.

Describing the murder of Audrey Spain, one of his co-workers at a Taco Bell, Wallace said: "I was not myself. I was speaking in tongues or something."

He told police he poured a bottle of rum over Valencia Jumper after strangling her, then put a can of pork and beans on the stove, took the batteries out of the smoke detectors and threw a match into a glass of rum, setting her apartment on fire.

He said he stuck around Vanessa Mack's apartment after strangling her to calm her infant son.

In another attack, Wallace said, the young son of Brandi Henderson began crying as he was choking her with a towel. Wallace said he put the towel around the boy's neck. "It wasn't enough to choke him, just enough to make him stop breathing," Wallace said. The boy survived.

Wallace blamed his crack cocaine habit for his desire to rob some of the victims. When he finished discussing the slaying of a young South Carolina woman killed in 1989, Wallace told police: "That's it — that's everybody."

"I really truly tried to stop," he said. "But I couldn't."

It's about preserving image

Thursday night, the Lake Mary City Commission is scheduled to consider a proposed ordinance regarding an expansion of the code violation enforcement issue. It certainly sounds like an excellent idea, but....

It is almost the same as that proposed last year in the City of Sanford. In addition to regular code enforcement officers, certain city staff members, the fire inspector and police officers would be trained then allowed to issue warnings and/or citations.

Three Sanford employees, on the very first day of the project, attempted to approach a residence they believed was in violation. The result was charges and counter charges, and subsequent legal action. It resulted in the immediate stoppage of this code enforcement team.

Since that time, code enforcement has been admittedly lax in Sanford. City Manager Bill Simmons has, on several occasions, commented that code enforcement is not as strong as it should be, with only a limited number of code enforcement officers.

Now Lake Mary wants to become involved in almost the same type of enforcement operation. Even though personnel will be trained in this enforcement, we can only wonder what will happen when they make that first stop, or during the first few months.

We have little doubt that the citizens of Lake Mary will applaud having a stronger code enforcement program. No one wants to see trash in plain view in their neighbor's yard, junk cars parked in the driveways or abandoned iceboxes.

The Lake Mary codes prevent loud noises, parking in fire lanes, animals in parks where they are prohibited, and many other problems.

People will say these codes are outstanding, and should be enforced. We suspect this relation over the concept will only be in relationship to "someone else." When an individual gets cited, and possibly charged as much as $500 per day (Class IV) for a violation, the matter will take on a different perspective.

Then people will demand that the ordinance is invalid, illegal, unfair, or a dozen other descriptions some of which we wouldn't print.

It's like so many other laws and rules. They are OK as long as they don't give you reason for concern.

Lake Mary is considered by many as an outstanding city. Helping it to continue being seen as such is going to be a long and difficult task.

We believe it can be accomplished, but only if everyone is in full support, and will do whatever possible to insure that codes are NOT violated, but those that are, are corrected.

It's not a matter of bringing in more fees and fines into the Lake Mary coffers, it's a matter of preserving image. And it will be whatever the people will allow.

LETTER

Animal rights

This is in response to "Rights for Animals" a letter by Donald Fann of March 26.

The signs that are posted on water as well as land are not for law-abiding citizens but for lawbreakers. Common sense tells you that. Are you the one who races past me only to meet at each red light? I know, you want to get from Point A to Point B in your time. Maybe we should take all signs down just for people with your attitude. Instead of racing down the hill for one cow, why not take your time and have the whole lot!

Animals don't need rights but they do need protection from stupid people. The bottom line is, your boat needs to be banned, not the signs.

Animals have all the rights we as a people give them. I thank God it's not in your power to do otherwise.

City officials create a wet elephant

During the height of California's five-year drought, San Diego voters approved a ballot proposition to build a six-mile, $150 million trolley line through the city's midsection.

What sponsors of the measure neglected to mention was that the plan called for the trolley to be built smack dab in the middle of a flood plain, alongside the San Diego River.

The folly of this plan has become ridiculously obvious now that the drought is over. San Diego has experienced about a dozen rainy days so far this year and on each occasion the river has overflowed its boundaries.

But local government officials in San Diego are darned if they're going to let a little problem like flooding dissuade them from building their trolley.

They plan to break ground on the light rail project May 1 -- unless, of course, it happens to rain that day.

The mass-transit travesty that is playing out in San Diego has occurred in cities and counties throughout the country. The local power structure (elected officials, deep-pocket developers, corporate honchos and other vested interests) decides that the lumpen proletariat ought to be encouraged to abandon their nasty, old automobiles in favor of bright and shiny new subways, trolleys or "people movers."

They draw up specs for mass-transit projects that almost always overestimate ridership, traffic abatement and environmental benefits, while grossly underestimating both construction and operating costs.

In the end, these extravagant light rail systems become a drain on local government coffers, costing far more per passenger mile than alternative (but less glamorous) modes of mass transit, like buses and commuter vans.

Again, San Diego provides a ripe example. The price tag for its center-city trolley has increased more than $100 million from the original estimate. Daily ridership is now projected to be little more than a third of the 42,000 originally sold to voters.

The folly of this plan has become ridiculously obvious now that the drought is over.

Because the trolley line will serve so few riders, it will have no "appreciable" impact on traffic congestion along its planned route, according to the latest environmental impact report. Thus, this white elephant in the making -- or should we say "wet elephant" -- will not bring San Diego closer to compliance with federal and state air-quality standards, as its supporters originally claimed.

You would think that San Diego city officials would have learned something from the costly experiences of other municipalities. Indeed, even those cities that boast sleek, high-tech light rail systems -- like Washington, D.C.'s Metro, San Francisco's BART, Miami's Metro and Atlanta's MARTA have failed to attract projected levels of ridership and thus require huge subsidies from local government.

In fact, the American Public Transit Association documented that in 1993 rider fares nationwide covered only 41 percent of the $17 billion cost of operating local transit systems. That means that city and county governments had to spend $11 billion in public funds -- tax dollars -- to keep their gold-plated subways and trolleys and people movers from sinking in a flood plain of red ink.

Where is this all headed?

WASHINGTON -- "Hell in a handbasket."

Ask many people where the world is headed and that might be their first, unvarnished answer. At the very least, many would say they see the planet as the Temptations did rather prophetically in a song some 20 years ago -- as a "Ball of Confusion."

The lyrics, as I recall, dealt with racism, drug use, politicians' simplistic lies and how "the only one talking 'bout love, my brother, is the preacher. ... Nobody's interested in learning, but the teacher...."

Part of its refrain: "Run, run, run, but you sure can't hide."

Recently, I wrote a column referring to the "sleeping awfulness" -- drugs, death, depravity -- that pervades certain destitute areas.

In truth, the awfulness seems to be everywhere, sucking at our feet, our spirits. Proof that things have spun out of control slaps us each time we turn on the TV. Here in Washington, it's:

A mentally unbalanced woman climbing into a zoo compound filled with lions that kill and maul her; promise-filled young women of varying races and incomes being raped and/or murdered; a woman's courtroom recollection of being so confused while hearing her boyfriend gunned down by a car jacker, she didn't realize that she, too, had been shot.

And that's just recently.

In Philadelphia now, my best friend tells me, "It's fires. Every day, some baby has died in a fire set by drug dealers. Thwart them and they burn down your house."

What gnaws at me is that most people know on some unacknowledged level that the world cannot survive on the blind, bloody path it's on. That despite our daily struggles to raise decent children and rise above our greed and gutlessness, we feel like helpless witnesses to the world's last act.

Which is intolerable.

It's also perception. It's no accident that I most feel this way after perusing the paper or some "hot" magazine, or watching TV. I feel it most when I deal with the media.

An L.A. friend feels the awfulness when watching talk shows.

"They celebrate people who've done really depraved things -- things ... which the shows suggest must be widespread," she says.

"There's the glee with which the hosts dish this dirt; their pat, end-of-show speech about 'loving one another' -- as if it has a higher purpose."

Another pal recently signed onto the Internet. "It's so addictive -- nobody knows who you are," he marvels. "People can talk sexy to people who they'll never see ... which doesn't promote real, human interaction. So the ultimate communication is communicating with total anonymity."

For a moment, he's silent. "Five years ago, I hadn't heard of cyberspace," he says. "Before that, I didn't know what a compact disc was, or a VCR. Soon we'll have 500 cable channels. ... But the world isn't getting better. ... All this stuff that's introduced into the culture with so little thought is man-made -- like the slums where every tree was covered by concrete and where ... people are killing themselves and each other. People can't live in a denatured universe."

He sighed. "Everything is happening too fast."

The various media and technologies hurl so much at us, we have no time to process it, or to shape the word "no" before what we fear is upon us. Who, we wonder, would hear it anyway?

Was it always this way -- so fast and uncontrolled? I really don't know.

But I do know some things. The people who do the most heinous things often live in isolation. I once read that the literal translation of "hell" is to be walled off. Separate.

In our human genius, we've created a seemingly isolation-proof world. Any solitary soul can be instantly connected to a million others, hear a chorus of voices through TV and radio, words flashing across screens and printed pages.

But such "connections" can't substitute for human ones. They can no more feed the soul than a photograph of water can nourish a flower.

And we know that the lives that we watch loping away from us are still ours.

That means we can turn off the TV, close the newspaper and arrange to see friends more often. Switching off the laptop, we can talk to our neighbors. We can take walks with our families, explore our sense of God as assiduously as the sports pages and developments in the O.J. trial.

We can smile at strangers. Help them, even. We can realize that the only antidote to the sleeping awfulness is in our real lives. The fact that those lives require work -- as do the often troublesome people in them -- doesn't negate that even the glitziest substitutes seldom satisfy.

And we can know one more thing: If we are powerless to change things, it is only because we agree to be.

In truth, the awfulness seems to be everywhere, sucking at our feet, our spirits.

Six-year mandate is pork-barrel paradigm

WASHINGTON -- Republicans in Congress, who have promised to tear down the remnants of President Lyndon B. Johnson's Great Society programs, might spare the program that started it all: the Appalachian Regional Commission. If this program fails to feel the budget axe, however, it will have more to do with pork-barrel politics than responsible public policy.

The ARC was born in March 1965 with a six-year mandate to develop the poverty-stricken Appalachian region. It was the first of Johnson's Great Society programs. Like many programs of the era, it was meant to be temporary. As the commission's first chairman testified before Congress: "Mr. Chairman, if this organization is here in six years, it will be an embarrassment to Lyndon Johnson."

Thirty years -- and more than $6 billion later -- the ARC's most remarkable achievement is its own survival. Although the law called for its termination in 1971, the ARC has been repleveled time and time again. Not even former President Ronald Reagan, who sought to eliminate its funding for eight straight years, could kill the program.

Like many successful private companies, the ARC owes much of its strength to diversification -- spreading the pork to a wide constituency. The commission currently covers 13 states, meaning a bipartisan coalition of more 60 House members, 26 senators and 13 governors have a stake in its survival.

When the ARC's Democratic patrons lost control of the Senate in 1980, new Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee stepped forward to save the commission. It also received significant backing from two powerful lawmakers: Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and former Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., who chaired the Appropriations Committee in the Senate and House, respectively, for many years.

As Republicans are promising to balance the federal budget and end "business as usual" on Capitol Hill, the ARC once again finds itself under attack. Yet GOP stalwarts from the region are lining up to defend this regional welfare program, even as other poverty programs are being cut indiscriminately.

Rep. Wayne T. Gilchrest, R-Md., who heads a key subcommittee overseeing the ARC, recently voiced support for the program. Although he admits the program is under fire from some within his own party, he says he wants to maintain funding while Congress figures out a way to merge the ARC with the Economic Development Administration, another beleaguered program targeted by GOP budget cutters.

"In my opinion, based on the testimony of a whole range of people, both of those programs have, in recent years, done some real positive work," Gilchrest told us. He added that he is not the only conservative supporter of the ARC. Conservative Republicans such as Virginia Gov. George Allen and Pennsylvania Gov. Tom Ridge, who both served in the House, also support the commission.

Three decades ago, Maryland's three westernmost counties were surprised to find themselves suddenly declared poor by Congress. A recent analysis in Maryland prepared for the ARC confessed that the region "never has been afflicted with the severe social and economic problems of hard-core Appalachian areas."

If this program fails to feel the budget axe, however, it will have more to do with pork-barrel politics.

Coach

pillow in the front seat of a nearby car while a mother kept an eye on the group from her perch at the foot of a light pole.

These members of the Bob Dance Dodge-sponsored under 15 softball team spent the night in the covered patio outside the entrance to the recreation department.

"It was cold and damp," Edith Van Gelder, the mother, said. "At about 2 in the morning we set off the alarm at City Hall when we opened a door they left unlocked to plug in a radio. At about 4, we had the vagrants start to come by. It wasn't very pleasant."

However, they said Sanford police drove by every half hour, making them feel safer.

The girls staged the round the clock protest in hopes of getting the attention of recreation department officials who, they said, took away their beloved coach.

Last week, coach Jack Berning was relieved of his volunteer post at the helm of this team.

"All they have told us, is that it was 'in the best interest' of the girls," Van Gelder said. "How can that be? They never asked the girls what they want."

Mike Kirby, director of the recreation department, stated that Berning, a former Seminole County deputy, had been "brought up on charges" and their attorney felt it would be best not to have him working with the young women.

Undersheriff Steve Harriett confirmed Berning, 37, had been arrested in December on charges of sexual battery. At that time he resigned his position as a deputy.

Court records indicate he was arrested on December 16, 1994 on charges of sexual battery and released on $10,000 bond.

The team members, including Berning's daughter, and Van Gelder claim they have not been informed about the reason for his dismissal.

"They didn't consult us," said Sarah Inez-Van Gelder. "They just said they're gone, but we like these coaches."

When Berning was dismissed, assistant coach Dave Blakely resigned, leaving the team without a coach.

"Without a coach, we're not a team," said Christina Berning, whose father was the coach and step-father was the assistant coach. "Without our team, there's not a league."

The three-team league needs all the teams in order to keep playing.

"They're putting 50-plus girls on the street," Sandy Cockayne said. "We need to have our team."

Berning and Blakely have coached the girls for five years, team members said.

"Obviously we don't have a problem with them," said Cockayne. "And the parents don't have a problem with them."

The team claims that Berning and Blakely were both dismissed last month, though the recreation department officials say that only Berning was asked to step down.

"We just thought it was best that until this is cleared up that (Berning) not be working with little girls," Kirby said. "Mr.

Blakely didn't have to go."

The team also questioned why, if Berning was charged in December, he was not dismissed until March.

"It didn't come to our attention until then," Kirby admitted. "We just didn't know about it."

Still, the girls and their parents are outraged. They want their coaches back and they want the opportunity to continue playing softball.

"They can't tell us it is in the best interest of us without asking us," said (Christina) Berning.

Three of the girls involved in the protest skipped school for a day to take part in the protest. The fourth, who is being home schooled, has a week off from her studies this week.

"I called the school and told them she was going to be on a political field trip today," Van Gelder said of her daughter. "Even if we don't get what we want, they've learned that you can stand up for what you believe in."

Kirby said the recreation department has no plans to reverse its decision at this time.

Codes

Under the city codes, most violations would fall under Class I.

For Class II, violations would include unlawful discharge into storm drainage system, illegal connection to water works system, collecting solid waste without franchise agreement, and various violations of fire, occupational license alcoholic sale hours, and a number of others.

Class III violations include failure to obtain a right-of-way permit and failure to obtain a permit.

There is only one Class IV violation presently on the books. That would involve the removal of a tree without a permit.

According to the document to be taken into consideration by the city commission, if a violation is not resolved within the designated time period (30 days), each additional day will be considered a separate infraction, with the violation fees to mount up accordingly.

If a person refuses to pay, the matter will be considered waiving of rights to a hearing, and will be brought to court. The ordinance specifies that the maximum civil penalty shall not exceed $500 plus any applicable court costs.

The proposed ordinance is scheduled to be presented for consideration this Thursday, during the 7 p.m. meeting of the Lake Mary City Commission, in the commission chambers of city hall, 100 N. Country Club Road.

Scam

in which the animal lives.

Generally, a short time later, they will call the owner and claim they have recovered the animal in an out-of-town location, and will return it if they are sent about $150 to cover the cost of a cage and shipping, Crawford said.

In a variation of the scam, pets are sometimes stolen, with contact made when the owner offers a reward.

Crawford said that little, if any, statistics are available on the scam because no single agency monitors lost or missing pets. But reports from agencies around the state, as well as anecdotal evidence, confirm that the fraud is taking place.

Crawford offers advice to citizens who are asked for money to recover a lost pet:

• If possible, agree to travel to the location of the caller to recover the animal personally.

• If that is not possible, ask the caller to deliver the pet to a Sheriff's Office or Humane Society office, where you will make arrangements to recover the animal.

• If you have any doubts about the truthfulness of the caller, call either a local law enforcement agency, one in the city from where the call was made, or both.

"People tend to be trusting when they get such a call," Commissioner Crawford said. "But be careful not to compound the grief of losing your pet by losing your money as well."

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Maneuvering through the House

WASHINGTON — With high rhetoric and a bit of suspense, Republicans maneuvered to muscle the final provision of the "Contract With America" — a $189 billion tax cut over five years — through the House today.

"Now comes the time to beg," House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., told reporters on the eve of the vote culminating the 100-day Republican revolution eight days ahead of schedule.

Smiling and appearing confident, the speaker held up two fingers, a fraction of an inch apart, and said the bill he has called the "crowning jewel" of the Republican "contract" was "about this far away" from assured passage.

The package, headed for a much more skeptical Senate, would offer families a $500 tax credit for every child younger than 18 and a reduction of up to $145 in the so-called marriage penalty.

Newt on the air

WASHINGTON — When House Speaker Newt Gingrich speaks to the nation Friday night, President Clinton will be clear across the country, headed for a Democratic fund-raiser in Sacramento, Calif.

Presidential spokesman Mike McCurry wondered mischievously if guests might contribute more if a large-screen TV were set up so they could watch Gingrich.

And Democratic consultant Paul Begala said Democrats considered two ways of countering Gingrich's unprecedented 30-minute, prime-time television address: offering a 30-minute Democratic response "or letting the speaker speak for a whole hour."

Behind the jokes, behind the bravado, top Democrats privately are expressing discomfort over once again being put on the defensive and being outmaneuvered by the crafty Georgia Republican.

Giving parents better choices

WASHINGTON — Hoping to give parents better informed viewing choices, the nation's top broadcast regulator is pushing a plan to force stations to air a minimum amount of children's educational programming.

If the plan is adopted, the government would for the first time order stations to provide a certain number of hours of such shows. Broadcasters could choose to pay other stations to produce and air the programs.

Federal Communications Commission Chairman Reed Hundt was to unveil the plan at an FCC meeting today. It is opposed by the TV industry and at least two of the five FCC commissioners.

Hundt failed to persuade his fellow commissioners to consider only his plan, and it is expected to be included in a group of less-restrictive proposals, including having the FCC do nothing.

WORLD BRIEFS

Notion that girls matter

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — In the teeming cities and dusty villages of the Indian subcontinent, Hillary Rodham Clinton spent much of the last 12 days cuddling babies, encouraging schoolchildren and listening to mothers.

In traditional settings and with measured tones, she ever-so-gently delivered a message to South Asia that she hopes will help to reshape its society — the notion that girls matter.

To see that this concept needs reinforcing, she had only to visit an orphanage in New Delhi where 80 percent of the abandoned infants were girls or a hospital in Dhaka where two-thirds of those lucky enough to get care were boys.

Half of freshmen at some colleges drunk

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON — Freshmen quickly start drinking at colleges where drunken parties are a way of life, and half get smashed during their first week on campus, according to a survey released today.

The study was conducted at schools where binge drinking is common. The researchers wanted to see what happens to freshmen who enter this drinking culture.

"We anticipated they would drink a lot, but these findings surprised even us. We found they start drinking early, and they do it often," said Henry Wechsler of the Harvard School of Public Health.

An earlier report by the same team, published in December in the Journal of the American Medical Association, sampled 17,592 students at 140 colleges in 40 states. It found that at one-third of the schools, half of the students go on drinking binges, meaning they down at least four or five drinks in a row.

In the new study, the researchers questioned 720 freshmen at 13 of these heavy-drinking colleges. They found that 68 percent of the new students had binged by the end of their first semester, 54 percent of them in their first week at school.

Dr. Timothy Brooks, dean of the University of Delaware, said many college administrators view drinking as their biggest problem, and the latest freshman data "are right on target."

Among the survey's other findings:

—During the first semester, male and female freshmen binged almost equally.

—Every freshman questioned said alcohol was very easy to get on campus, and 96 percent said school drinking rules had no effect.

—More than half of those who binged regularly said they sometimes forget what they do while drunk or regret their behavior, they remember.

—While 84 percent called alcohol a problem on campus, just over half considered it "appropriate" to get drunk at parties or with friends.

Confidence the goal in LM-SHS tilt

By TONY DESORMIER
Herald Sports Editor

SANFORD — For a pitcher, confidence is everything. A pitcher with average stuff who has confidence in himself will find a way to beat you.

At Seminole High School's Alumni Field Tuesday afternoon, Seminole's Brian Zaladonis and Lake Mary's Carlos Colon were sent to the hill by their respective coaches in hopes of finding some of that precious commodity.

"They may have found it. Carlos was ready to pitch today," said Lake Mary coach Allen Tuttle after Colon turned in a complete-game effort in beating the Seminoles 3-1. "He was more focused and didn't let little things bother him."

"A great example is when he tried to pick off the runner at second base."

Richarde's hot bat leads Seminoles

From Staff Reports

LEESBURG — Lisa Richarde went 4-for-4 and drove in three runs Tuesday afternoon to lead the Seminole Fighting Seminoles to a 5-3 win over the Leesburg Yellow Jackets in a 5A-District 6 fastpitch softball contest.

Winning pitcher Jackie Hubbard contributed a triple, two singles, two runs scored, a stolen base, and an RBI. "The girls played a real good game," said Seminole coach David Rogers. "It was a good team effort. We made two errors, but both were in the final inning and they didn't hurt us."

Tuesday's 4-for-4 effort continues a torrid streak for Richarde, who has 11 hits in her last 16 at bats (.688), raising her season's batting average to .570. She also has 10 RBI over that stretch.

Simone Branch was 2-for-4 with a stolen base and two runs scored for the Tribe in Tuesday's contest. Kell Langton chipped in with a single and an RBI. Lara Richarde singled and drew three walks.

Cooper entered the game in the third inning in relief of starter Lisa Seiber, who walked seven batters before being lifted. Cooper struck out four and walked just one batter while giving up four hits and hitting a batter. "Nicole did a good job," said Oviedo coach Anna Hollis. "For a freshman, she's throwing the ball as well as anybody else. She's very deceiving. Lisa is just up from the junior varsity and she threw the ball hard, but she had a little problem with her control."

Michelle Field highlighted Oviedo's five-hit attack by going 2-for-3 with a run and an RBI. Tonya Bellamy tripled and scored a run. Erin Zukowski had a single, one run, and an RBI. Jennifer Goodin added a single and an RBI. Danielle Sequino scored a run.

Now 7-9, Oviedo will play at Lake Howell Thursday before returning to the Oviedo Sports Complex on Friday to play Apopka.

SCC suffers conference setbacks at Valencia

Softball squad drops deuce

From Staff Reports

ORLANDO — The Seminole Community College softball team suffered a blow to its state playoff hopes Tuesday afternoon as the Valencia Community College Matadors swept a Mid-Florida Conference doubleheader from the Raiders, 9-5 and 2-1.

"Those were two disappointing conference losses for us today," said SCC head coach Courtney Miller. "We just weren't mentally ready to play ball. Our defense wasn't sharp the first game and we made too many mental mistakes."

The loss broke a 13-game winning

Errors doom baseball team

From Staff Reports

ORLANDO — The Seminole Community College Raiders shot themselves in the foot again Tuesday afternoon and probably ended their hopes of a spot in the state tournament.

After three losses to the Raiders already this season, the Valencia Community College Matadors took advantage of every SCC mistake in claiming a 5-2 Mid-Florida Conference baseball victory over the Raiders.

SCC saw its record fall back to .500 overall (19-19-1) and 7-11 in the conference. The Raiders will

What's Cooking? Uphold Easter tradition with a ham centerpiece

Baked ham has been an Easter tradition, along with pastel colored eggs, since most of us can remember. So make ham the centerpiece of your holiday table this Easter.

SANFORD
DORIS DIETRICH

Accompany your ham with the following mouthwatering side dishes which have been developed by the National Pork Producers Council of Des Moines.

ASPARAGUS SPEARS WITH CITRUS-GINGER DIP

2 lbs. asparagus
 1/4 cup mayonnaise (if desired, use fat-reduced version)
 1/4 cup sour cream (if desired, use fat-reduced version)
 1 Tbsp. distilled vinegar
 1 Tbsp. orange juice
 1 tsp. grated orange zest
 1 garlic clove, peeled and crushed
 1 Tbsp. Dijon-style mustard
 1 1/2 Tbsp. grated fresh ginger root
 1 tsp. soy sauce
 1/2 tsp. sugar
 Salt and pepper, to taste
 Snap tough ends off asparagus. Peel stalks, if desired. In a large skillet, bring about 1 inch of water to boiling. Add asparagus and simmer, uncovered, until barely tender, about 4-5 minutes. Drain and dunk in ice water until cold; drain, cover and chill until serving.
 Meanwhile, combine well all remaining ingredients in medium mixing bowl. Transfer to serving bowl, serve with asparagus spears or cover and chill until serving. Makes 8 appetizer servings.

SMOKED HAM WITH CRANBERRY CRUTNEY

1 (4-6 pound) boneless, full-cooked smoked ham
 1 (16-ounce) can whole-berry cranberry sauce
 1 (8 1/2 oz.) can crushed pineapple, drained
 1 (8 oz.) bottle prepared horseradish
 Place ham in shallow baking pan. Bake, uncovered, in a 325°F. oven for 1 to 1 1/2 hours, or until meat thermometer registers 140°F. Remove from oven, slice thinly to serve.

Meanwhile, combine remaining ingredients in medium bowl. Transfer to serving bowl, serve immediately or cover and chill until serving. Serve chutney alongside ham.

GOAT CHEESE, PEPPER AND BACON TART

1 (8- or 9-inch) pie shell
 4 slices bacon, cooked crisp and crumbled
 1/2 red bell pepper, finely chopped
 1/2 green bell pepper, finely chopped
 4 oz. goat cheese
 4 eggs
 1 cup milk
 1/4 tsp. seasoned salt
 1/4 tsp. ground white pepper
 1 tsp. dried minced onion
 Place pie shell in pie plate. In bottom of pie shell evenly scatter the crumbled bacon and chopped peppers. In medium bowl, beat together the cheese, eggs, milk, seasoning and onion. Pour over bacon and peppers in pie shell. Bake at 325°F. for about an hour, until set — knife inserted into custard halfway between center and outer edge comes out clean — and lightly browned on top. Serve warm or at room temperature. Makes 8 servings.

DILLED PEAS AND POTATOES VINAIGRETTE

1/4 cup olive oil
 1/4 cup plus 2 Tbsp. wine vinegar
 2 Tbsp. minced fresh dill
 1/4 tsp. freshly ground black pepper
 1/4 tsp. salt
 1 16-oz. package frozen pea pods
 1/4 cup minced green onion
 8 small red potatoes, cooked and sliced
 Combine first five ingredients in a jar with tight-fitting lid; shake to blend well. Blanch peas in boiling water for 2 minutes; drain well. Toss peas, green onion and potatoes with dressing; cover and let stand up to two hours, stirring occasionally. Arrange salad on serving platter or in salad bowl. Serve at room temperature. Makes 8 servings.

Easter Dinner Menu: Dilled Peas and Potato Vinaigrette (clockwise), Goat Cheese, Pepper and Bacon Tart, Smoked Ham with Cranberry Chutney, Asparagus Spears with Citrus-Ginger Dip and Gingered Rhubarb-Berry Sauce (center).

2 cups hulled, halved strawberries
 1/4 cup sugar
 1/4 cup orange juice
 Grated zest of 1 orange and 1 lemon
 1 Tbsp. finely grated fresh ginger root
 Pinch of salt
 1/4 tsp. vanilla

Combine all ingredients in a heavy saucepan. Stir well and bring to a boil over medium heat. Reduce the heat and simmer, stirring once and skimming off any foam that forms on top, until the rhubarb is just tender, 10-12 minutes. Cover and refrigerate until serving. Makes 1 1/2 cups. Serve over ice cream, pound cake or angel food cake. Makes 8 servings.

Hardy Italian meal-in-one dishes are easy 'crowd pleasers'

When cooking for a crowd, meal-in-one dishes are easy at serving time. Many of the recipes that are "crowd pleasers" are of Italian origin. With these hearty entrees, a tossed green salad, crusty bread, and a light dessert or fruit will complete the meal. This recipe makes enough to serve 10-12 people. Make it in two 13x9-inch casseroles.

MICROWAVE MAGIC
MIDGE MYCOFF

MANICOTTI
 10 oz. manicotti, cooked according to directions
Meat Sauce:
 1 1/2 lbs. lean ground beef
 1 lb. sweet or hot Italian sausage, removed from casing
 2 medium onions, finely chopped
 4-5 cloves garlic, minced
 1 (32 oz.) jar chunky-style spaghetti sauce
 1 (15 oz.) can tomato sauce
 2 tsp. dried basil
 2 tsp. dried oregano

1 tsp. dried marjoram
 1 tsp. dried thyme
 2 tsp. sugar
 1 tsp. salt
 1 tsp. freshly ground black pepper
Cheese Filling:
 1 1/2 lbs. Ricotta or cottage cheese
 1 lb. Mozzarella cheese, shredded
 1/2 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
 2 large eggs

1 (10 oz.) package frozen chopped spinach, defrosted and well drained.
 Drain cooked manicotti, place in a bowl of cold water, and set aside.
 Place ground beef, sausage, onions, and garlic in 3-quart casserole. Cover and cook on 100 percent power 5 minutes. Stir, cover and cook on 100 percent 5-7 minutes or until meat is almost cooked. Stir and drain all fat.
 Add spaghetti sauce, tomato sauce, basil, oregano, marjoram, thyme, sugar, salt and pepper. Microwave on 100 percent power 10-15 minutes until boiling.
 Combine Ricotta, Mozzarella, Parmesan, eggs and spinach in a bowl, and stir until well mixed.
 Stuff manicotti shells with cheese filling. Put 1 cup meat sauce in each 13x9-inch casserole. Arrange manicotti in single layer over sauce and cover with remaining sauce.

 Cover and microwave each casserole separately on 70 percent power 15-20 minutes or until hot in center. (When serving this entire recipe at one time it is more efficient to heat both dishes at once in a conventional oven. Bake 30-30 minutes at 350°F.)
 Chicken and pasta is a healthy economical combination. This casserole cooks while the pasta is cooking on which it is served.
ITALIAN STYLE CHICKEN
 1 (3 lb.) chicken, cut up or 4 whole chicken breasts split
 1 can (16 oz.) tomatoes

1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce
 1 cup sliced mushrooms
 1/4 cup chopped onions
 1/4 cup sliced pitted ripe olives
 2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
 1 tsp. salt
 1/4 tsp. dried oregano leaves
 1/4 tsp. pepper
 1 bay leaf
 Snipped broadleaf parsley
 5-6 cups hot cooked spaghetti

Cut each chicken breast into halves. Place chicken in 3-quart casserole. Cover tightly and microwave by 100 percent power 12 minutes; drain off liquid.
 Mix tomatoes with liquid and remaining ingredients except

Bald man amazed at rudeness

DEAR ABBY: I am a middle-aged man who started to lose my hair when I was in high school. I wasn't exactly happy about it, but I knew there was nothing I could do, so I just accepted it. I am now 34, and bald — I mean Kojak bald!
 I am no longer sensitive about my baldness, but I continue to be amazed at the number of people who joke but it. Some have suggested that I get a hairpiece. (A few years ago I considered it, but I wasn't sure I could take the comments it would provoke, so I never did.)
 Abby, you would not believe some of the questions people have asked me. For example, can you imagine a person asking an obese person:
 — "How long have you been obese?"
 — "Does it bother you when people make jokes about obesity?"
 — "Weren't you terribly upset when you first noticed you were getting obese?"
 — "Does obesity come from your mother's side or your father's?"
 — "Do you worry that your children may be obese, too?"
 Abby, few people are so rude as to ask such questions, but if you substitute "bald" for "obese," you will have a sample of what bald people have to put up with.
 Baldness, I can tolerate. Rudeness, I cannot!
BALD IN TEXAS
DEAR BALD: You're mistaken — obese people are also targets for rude questions.
 Apropos baldness, I am re-mindful of a comment made by Eric Hoffer, the San Francisco longshoreman, political and social philosopher who in 1961 wrote "The True Believer": "We do not mind having our hair ruffled, but we will not tolerate any familiarity with the toupee that covers our baldness."

DEAR ABBY: As for the woman who objected to inquiries about her silicone-enlarged breasts, why should she object to the inquiries? She had them enlarged so they'd be more noticeable, didn't she?
 Rather than put-downs and evasions, a better answer would be, "Yes, I've had them enhanced. Don't they look great!"
 By the way, I'm a male who's almost 70.

Get another opinion on pain in stomach

MEDICINE
PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 77-year-old female who has been fairly healthy until a couple of years ago, at which time I began to have stomach pain. X-rays and an upper GI were negative. My doctor has now prescribed Prilosec once a day. It helps as long as I watch my diet; no ice cream, chocolate, coffee, or spicy foods. How can I get rid of the pain? It feels as if there is a fire in my stomach.

doctor for two reasons. First, the physician, using blood tests and X-rays, needs to diagnose the cause of your husband's symptoms and offer appropriate therapy.

Second, if your husband is an alcoholic (based on his history and the results of his tests), this problem must be addressed as well, with counseling, a detoxification program and referral to a self-help group, such as Alcoholics Anonymous. Your husband should not delay seeking medical help, because if he is suffering the consequences of alcohol abuse, they could be fatal.

DEAR READER: The fact that your abdominal discomfort is worsened by certain foods and lessened by Prilosec (a drug to reduce the formation of stomach acid) suggests that your problem is in some way related to hyperacidity.

X-rays of your stomach would probably have shown an ulcer or hiatal hernia if you had these conditions, but X-rays are notoriously unreliable in diagnosing gastritis (inflammation of the stomach lining) and other subtle abnormalities in the upper gastrointestinal tract.

Therefore, I believe you would be best served by consulting with a gastroenterologist. Ask your family physician for a referral.

I am certain that the specialist will be able to diagnose your condition during endoscopy, a special test that enables him to examine your upper intestine through a lighted fiberoptic tube. At this point, the ministrations by your doctor have been ineffective. You need a specialist.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband has a 50-year habit of beer drinking. He has experienced abdominal pain and indigestion. Is the beer to blame?

DEAR READER: Probably. Alcohol affects virtually every organ in the body. It is especially toxic to the liver, in which chronic inflammation (hepatitis) and scarring (cirrhosis) may cause abdominal pain.

Also, alcohol produces stomach inflammation (gastritis), ulcers, and pancreatic irritation, which can lead to severe indigestion and intestinal bleeding.

Your husband should see a

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

The main reason an expert plays this game so well is that he never stops counting. He keeps track of the high-card points and the suit distributions.

However, counting isn't everything. South counted today's deal carefully but still ended with a minus score.

Following North's forcing spade raise, East wisely kept quiet. He didn't rate to be able to win the auction, and bidding would only warn South about the distributional nature of East's hand.

West led the club two. East won with the ace and returned the seven to his partner's king. West switched to the heart two, dummy's queen losing to East's king. After a heart went to dummy's ace, South drew the missing trump.

Now South had to find the diamond queen. Assuming West's club and heart leads were honest fourth-highest cards, West was known to have started with one spade, four hearts and four clubs. This meant he had four diamonds to his partner's three. Smiling contentedly to himself, South cashed the diamond ace before finessing dummy's jack. However, East produced the queen: one down.

"The odds were with me, partner," explained South. "Odds, clods," commented North sotto voce.

He had noticed that if South had only won the third trick with dummy's heart ace, he couldn't go down. After drawing the trump, South exits with his last heart. Whichever opponent wins the trick must either lead a diamond, finding the queen for South, or concede a ruff-and-discard.

HOROSCOPE

YOUR BIRTHDAY
April 6, 1995

Ventures or enterprises you originate have better than average chances for success in the year ahead. Do not be afraid to strike out on your own.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your instincts for gauging the wants and needs of others is accurately tuned today. This could be a big plus if you're marketing something to the public. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you to understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2.50 to Matchmaker, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Mental pursuits might be more your cup of tea than physical ones today. You would be better off balancing the books instead of trying to balance the barbell.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Because you will be sharper than usual when it comes to buying or selling today, you will probably show a profit.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Endeavors in which you assume personal management should go smoothly today, but when you delegate duties to others, the results might be less desirable.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Let persons with whom you're involved savor the spotlight today. You will be more effective as the director who calls the shots from the wings.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If your expectations are higher than usual today, do not put a damper on your thoughts. Instead, think like a winner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You should be able to handle difficult assignments commendably today. Your behavior will enhance your standing in the eyes of your peers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You mustn't let yourself get into a rut today. Try to do mildly adventurous things that stimulate your enthusiasm and zest for life.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you're alert today, you might spot an opportunity that could be of personal benefit to you in an area where you seldom operate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You might not find comfort mingling with the crowd today, but you may find great pleasure in the companionship of one with whom you share much in common.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You'll have more fun being active and productive today than you would frittering your time away. Involve yourself in meaningful activities.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Someone you recently met who you'd like to know better shares the same sentiments. This is a good day to arrange something special just for the two of you.
