Planners plan for scholarships

SANFORD — City Planner Jay Marder is the local chairman for a Statewide scholarship contest. The contest is open to 11th and 12th grade high school students throughout Florida.

The contest is sponsored by the Florida Planning and Zoning Association, a 41 year old organization of professional planners, local government officials and business leaders.

"The FPZA Scholarship contest," Marder said, "is intended to encourage young people to become aware of community planning and growth management issues."

There are four basic requirements for entrants: 1. Choose a subject or issue related to growth management; 2. Meet face-to-face with a person involved in the issue; 3. Attend one public meeting related to the subject; 4. Write an essay about the experience.

Essays are to be judged by FPZA's Scholarship Committee, according to criteria included in contest rules.

Three awards will be presented for this year in early 1993. The first prize essay will be published in the organization's statewide publication. Cash scholarships of $500, $250 and $100 will be provided for first, second and third places.

Students can obtain contest rules and information by contacting Marder at the Sanford City Hall, 300 S. Park Ave., in Sanford, or phoning 330-5870.

Deadline for submitting this year's entries is Dec. 4.

Boy tells why he sued mother

ORLANDO — An attorney seeking to adopt a 12-year-old boy against his mother's wishes testified today the woman's visits and telephone calls made her son feel guilty and uncomfortable.

Pale, brown-haired Gregory Kingsley has claimed his mother Rachel failed him throughout his life and now wants him back because "she found out that I was happy and I wanted to stay where I was."

Gregory is expected to take the witness stand today in the precedent-setting case, contending his mother's abuse and neglect led him to seek his legal freedom in favor of adoption by foster parents.

George Russ, Gregory's foster father, described in testimony this morning the boy's discomfort in contacts with Mrs. Kingsley after she asked for custody.

Sign card, save depot

SANFORD — Citizens are being asked to sign a large card to support keeping the Auto Train in Sanford. The card is being circulated at club meetings and other gatherings around the City with the intention of obtaining as many signatures as possible.

Saturday, persons wishing to express their feelings, can sign the card at the Magnolia Mall in downtown Sanford, between 9 a.m. and noon.

Saturday night, the card will be at the Lions Club Spaghetti Dinner at the Civic Center from 4 until 8 p.m.

Monday, signatures will be sought during the Rotary Club of Sanford meeting at noon, at the Sanford Civic Center.

During other hours, the card is available for signing at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce office, 400 E. First Street.

Concern is growing over the possibility that Amtrak, which operates the Auto Train, may relocate the operation when new double-decker trains go into use in 1995.

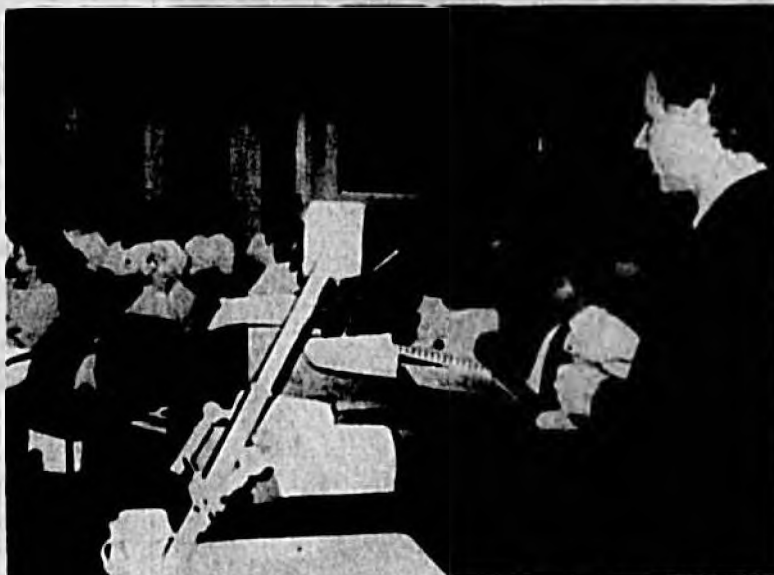

According to information from an Auto Train spokesperson, the actual train track area on Persimmon Avenue is large enough to handle the new trains, but the terminal and boarding facilities are not adequate.

Plans have been suggested to either move the operation to another location, or seek some alternatives with other property in the Sanford area.

Tuesday afternoon, a Sanford delegation will be leaving for Washington, D.C., to meet with Auto Train officials. They will seek input on how to keep the Auto Train operation in Sanford.

The will take the two by three foot card with them, to indicate citizen support of retaining the Auto Train operation.

During a special County Commission meeting on the subject Tuesday, the card was proposed, with the suggestion that the City obtain as many signatures as possible.

Lake Mary citizens to vote on new tax

By MIKE PFENPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Citizens of Lake Mary will have another item on the Nov. 3 ballot. The City is calling for a one mill special tax to pay for paving and drainage.

After over three and a half hours of lengthy discussion on two options for financing paving and drainage, Mayor Randy Morris suggested the third option, a special tax of up to one mill, to be dedicated for a master paving and drainage project for the entire City.

Over 80 concerned citizens attended the special called City Commission meeting last night, with over 20 expressing their views on paving in the area known as Zone B, to the west of Lake Mary Elementary School.

At the start of the meeting, Ron Ferland, of Dyer, Riddle, Mills & Precourt, Inc., explained two options the City might select to pay for the projects. They included the city and residents each paying 50 percent of the cost, with the residents to pay as high as $68 per linear foot of property abutting the roadway to be paved.

The second option involved ETU's, or equivalent traffic units, determined to be an average of ten one-way trips per day per household. For the largest of the paving plans, the each household would have been charged for one ETU, which was estimated at $3,405. The money would be paid over a period of 10 to 15 years time, and be used

Children & Families Day set Saturday in Sanford

By VICKI BOGGERMAN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — While Mike Vallot has coordinated several community-wide celebrations for youngsters in Sanford, he has not, until now, included activities for whole families.

On Saturday, the "first annual" children and family day will take place at Fort Mellon Park on the riverfront in Sanford.

"We're doing this for the children, but we want the families to come out with them and get involved too," Vallot said.

He said he has been handing out flyers in neighborhoods around Sanford and telling as many people as possible about the event.

"We just want people to come out and have a good time," he said.

Popular radio station 102 JAMZ has been helping to spread the word. Vallot said he hopes to have some of the disc jockeys from the station take part in Saturday's celebration.

City commissioner Bob Thomas will speak to the crowd. Representatives of the Sanford Police Department and the Seminole County Sheriff's Office will also be on hand to talk.

The law enforcement agencies will have with them various crime fighting tools and anti-drug materials.

Affordable Limousine Service, a Sanford-based transportation company, will be taking the speakers to and from the event.

Vallot said they will also be able to provide transportation for youngsters and families who have no other way of getting to Fort Mellon Park.

GED graduation tonight for 230 at SCC

By VICKI BOGGERMAN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — While 230 students will walk across the stage to receive their high school equivalency diploma at Seminole Community College this evening, thousands more will be celebrating the 50th anniversary of the General Education Development (GED) test.

The GED is the test that, when successfully completed allows a student to earn a high school diploma after they have dropped out of school.

Seminole Community College's GED program has graduated 10,700 students since they first began offering training and administering the test in 1970.

By way of celebration, the program coordinators have invited as many of those graduates as they have been able to find.

According to Nancy Williams, coordinator for SCC's GED program, written and word-of-mouth invitations have been extended to thousands of graduates of the program.

"I don't know how many will show up," Williams said.

She speculated that many who are still in the Seminole County area will attend the ceremony, but few will travel from out-of-town for the event.

Students in the GED program are not typical students, Williams said. And, she noted, there is no such thing as the typical GED student.

Some of the students have been successful in business, but feel unappreciated. Others are looking to improve their job opportunities with a high school diploma. Others are merely looking for an alternative way to earn a diploma.

The GED is not interchangeable with a high school diploma. For example, the military will not accept a GED in place of the requirement for a diploma.

Many four year universities will also not accept it in place of a high school diploma. Most two year colleges will accept it, however.

Many of the students who will graduate tonight

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Sex abuse common at naval conventions

WASHINGTON — It's not every day that two Navy admirals get the ax and another is reassigned. But as a new Pentagon report on the Tailhook scandal makes clear, sexual abuse of women at naval aviators' conventions is far from rare.

Secord: Bush knew about arms sales

WASHINGTON — President Bush "didn't come clean" about his role in the arms sales to Iran, according to Iran-Contra figure Richard Secord. The White House says Secord is just trying to sell his new book.

The retired Air Force major general and former National Security Council aide Howard Teicher said Thursday that Bush as vice president was fully informed and wasn't — as he has asserted — "out of the loop" on U.S. arms sales to Iran.

Bush briefed President Reagan about the initiative by secure telephone on July 29 or July 30, 1986, said Secord, who handled the weapons deliveries for the Reagan White House. Reagan on July 30, 1986, approved shipping 240 Hawk anti-aircraft missile parts from Israel to Iran — reviving an arms initiative that had temporarily collapsed.

Teicher said he "briefed the then-vice president several times" about the Iran initiative.

Social security penalizes women

WASHINGTON — Social Security and private pension plans penalize women for living longer than men, earning less money and taking time off from work to care for their families, a congressional report says.

The report, released Thursday by a House Aging subcommittee, said that on average, women receive 70 percent of the Social Security benefits of men. And the survivor of a two-earner couple — usually the widow — almost always gets a lower Social Security benefit than a one-earner couple with the same total earnings.

In addition, the report said, widows under age 60 are more likely to begin collecting spousal benefits early, because of outdated job skills and age discrimination. This decreases their lifetime benefits by as much as 30 percent, it said.

Ex-POWs gather for convention

EVANSVILLE, Ind. — William Henderson tries to remember the good times when he meets others who were held in Axis prison camps during World War II.

"I think the majority of us have more pleasant memories to share than bad. I think the good Lord takes care of us that way. If not, you'd go crazy," said Henderson, from Batesville, Miss. He was among nearly 1,500 former prisoners of war who attended Thursday's reunion at the American Ex-Prisoners of War national convention.

Airlift to Somalia criticized

NAIROBI, Kenya — The U.S. military airlift of food to starving people in Somalia, begun a month ago with great fanfare, is proving disappointing to some international aid officials.

They have accused the Americans of being overcautious about flying to unstable areas, unnecessarily slowing the delivery of vital food, medicine and other supplies.

Some members of Congress also have called for a more active U.S. military role in Somalia, where more than 100,000 people already have died from war and starvation.

Hussein firmly entrenched

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Despite the "no-fly" zone in southern Iraq, the creation of a northern Kurdish state in all but name and punishing U.N. sanctions, Saddam Hussein is firmly entrenched — at least for the near term.

Unseating him will be difficult, probably impossible for now, and could depend on further action by the United States, Britain and France. Iran, which sees its old enemy weakened, also could be central to anti-Saddam efforts.

When the southern "no-fly" zone took effect Aug. 27, ostensibly to protect Shiite Muslims, President Bush said he would welcome a new Iraqi leader.

But any hopes for Saddam's early departure after 13 years as president — and years before that as the real power broker in Baghdad — are wishful thinking. The Iraqi regime is not in good shape. But despite all the pressure, it has refused to collapse.

Spacecraft journey to Mars set

By MARGIA BURN AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — NASA prepared to launch a rocket today carrying its first spacecraft in 17 years destined for Mars, the frigid Red Planet that has intrigued humans for centuries.

The Mars Observer's 450 million-mile odyssey was to begin at 12:27 p.m. EDT with the launch of a Titan rocket from Cape Canaveral Air Force Station. Forecasters gave 70 percent odds of good weather.

The spacecraft, which should reach Mars in 11 months, is designed to map the planet and record weather conditions from orbit. It also will search for signs that life may have existed on the dry, rocky world.

In addition, it will scout for possible landing sites for robots and humans.

The $680 million mission is expected to last more than three years.

Scientists are understandably anxious. The opportunity to go to Mars comes once every 26 months when Mars and Earth are aligned correctly with each other, and the Mars Observer must be on its way by Oct. 13 or scientists must wait two years to try again.

It is the first U.S. spacecraft to be sent to Mars since Viking 2 in 1975. Two Viking spacecraft landed on the planet, sending back pictures of the surface, using robot arms to collect soil and monitoring the weather.

The 2½-ton Mars Observer will be maneuvered into a near-polar orbit 235 miles above the Martian surface. It is to make measurements for one full Martian year — 687 Earth days.

Scientists hope Mars Observer's seven scientific instruments will provide clues as to whether life ever existed on Mars. It is the most sophisticated U.S. spacecraft ever sent to Mars; its camera, for instance, are capable of focusing on boulders just a few yards across.

"The geological history of the planet, and in some sense its climatological history, is written on the surface and so when you make measurements from space you get a measure of how that history evolved," said Lennard Fisk, NABA's chief scientist.

When 19th-century astronomers saw what looked like canals on Mars, a legend grew that they were built by intelligent beings. Science-fiction writers from H.G. Wells to Ray Bradbury crafted tales about life on the planet.

But Mariner spacecraft in the 1960s and early '70s found dry river channels, but no engineered canals. The Viking landers found no evidence of life.

Motor-voter bill to be filed again

By BILL BRADSTON Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Backers said Thursday they'll try again to pass a bill to let voters register in driver's license lines after a report called Florida's registration system one of the nation's most restrictive.

"I don't know exactly what it's going to say, but I'm going to file a motor-voter bill," said state Rep. Willie Logan, D-Opalocka, who's unsuccessfully filed such bills in past sessions.

Texas can cut voter registration forms out of the newspapers, and Ohio residents get them at fast-food restaurants. But the League of Women Voters said last week that Florida is one of a dozen states, including Massachusetts and Georgia, with registration systems that actually discourage voters.

Thirty-two states have some form of motor-voter registration, and 29 allow voters to register by mail.

In Florida, people must register at their county supervisors of elections offices, or at the special registration tables supervisors occasionally set up at shopping malls or other places.

Floridians must register in person at least 30 days in advance of an election. That means anyone who wants to vote in the Nov. 3 general election must be registered by 5 p.m. Oct. 5.

Three states, Maine, Wisconsin and Minnesota, allow voters to register up to and including election day.

Republican Secretary of State Jim Smith has supported past motor-voter bills and will push for the legislation again, said Dot Joyce, head of the Division of Elections in Smith's department.

"I believe we probably should have motor voter and we probably should have mail registration," Joyce said. "Florida is the leader in the nation in most election and campaign finance laws and I really am perplexed as to why we have not implemented these."

Leon County Supervisor of Elections Ion Sancho said he's supported a motor-voter system despite some lawmakers' arguments that it would cost more money or mean longer driver's license lines.

The voter registration form takes two or three minutes to fill out, and people wait an average of 5 to 10 minutes in driver's license lines anyway, Sancho said.

But once they are voted in, Sancho said, "Some of these senators and House members would rather not change things at all, not shake the bus."

President Bush vetoed a National Voter Registration Act that would have required automatic registration when people apply for driver's licenses or welfare, unemployment, disability and other benefits. He said it would invite fraud.

But under the current array of state systems, only about 40 percent of those eligible are now registered to vote nationwide.

Supreme Court weighs judicial rules on records

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — A proposal pending before the state Supreme Court would close court records routinely open at most governmental agencies. Some open-government advocates are concerned the proposed rules go too far.

"We think they are too broadly written," Bill Jones, lobbyist for the citizens' advocacy group Common Cause, said Wednesday.

"It seems to me they go much further than they need to go and they are trying to get there faster than they need to get there," said Pete Weitzel, managing editor of The Miami Herald and president of the First Amendment Foundation.

Deputy Attorney General Peter Antonacci said he believes some of the secrecy sought by the rules is unnecessary, and will not become a part of the final rules adopted by the court.

In November, voters will be faced with a proposed constitutional amendment that would give the public access to records and meetings of the executive, judicial and legislative branches of state government.

A clause in the measure would retain all rules of the court in effect on Nov. 3 unless they are repealed by the Legislature. But although existing exemptions would be retained, new exemptions would have to pass a higher level of scrutiny.

Lawmakers put the amendment on the ballot this spring in the wake of a ruling by the high court that invalidated parts of the state's longstanding public records law.

The ruling came in a case brought against a lawmaker who refused to disclose financial records dealing with the operation of his state office. The court said legislative records aren't subject to Florida's public record law.

The justices will hear oral arguments next month on rules proposed by a court-appointed committee. Some of the rules re-establish current rules allowing juries to deliberate in secret and letting judges keep secret the preliminary drafts of opinions and other internal memos.

Sheriff hopeful wins support

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — No former sheriff's candidate has endorsed incumbent Don Ealinger despite his efforts to gain their favor.

"Oh yeah, I've been pleasant with all of them," said Ealinger. "I can use any help I can get. I didn't take the campaign personally, but apparently they did."

Tuesday, Democrat David Locker of Winter Springs endorsed fellow Democrat Charles Fagan, the retired Sanford police captain. The endorsement was the second Fagan has received from a fellow campaigner.

The day after the Sept. 13 primary, Republican Harold "Beau" Taylor resigned his Republican Executive Committee post he won the day before to endorse the Geneva Democrat.

Executive committee members are prohibited from campaigning for a candidate from a rival party.

Locker said he believed Fagan would carry forward his ideas of community involvement.

"When I got into the race over a year ago, I got into it because I felt there was a lack leadership and community involvement," said Locker. "After sitting down with Charley Fagan last week and comparing ideas, I believe he will offer the type of law enforcement we need today."

Taylor said he was willing to endorse a candidate for another party because Fagan was the best qualified for the job.

"I couldn't support the other candidates," said Taylor. "Fagan has the most management experience. Conniff doesn't have any management experience except for last year when he was appointed sergeant. And I couldn't support the incumbent."

Republican Harvey Morse endorsed Ealinger's GOP runoff opponent, Larry Conniff, saying "He was the most qualified of the remaining Republican candidates." No party-switching for him, Morse said.

Ealinger said he wasn't upset by losing the endorsements.

Homes to be demolished for county's road project

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County commissioners approved a design to widen County Road 427 from Longwood-Lake Mary Road to Airport Boulevard that will require the demolition of up to 25 structures, mostly homes.

Most of the homes are built close to the roadway between Hester Avenue and Lake Mary Boulevard, said Frank VanPelt, county project engineer. A total of 21 structures will be purchased and razed for that two-mile segment of the road project, mostly homes and trailers, VanPelt said. An exact number of homes is not yet known because some structures may be used as storage sheds, he said.

One business, located at the west side of U.S. Highway 17-92, will be needed, said VanPelt. The name of the business was not known, VanPelt said.

VanPelt said the county would begin contacting property owners in 1 1/2 to two years.

The three projects, expected to cost nearly $24.5 million, will widen more than five miles of busy two-lane roadway to four lanes sometime between 1995 and 1998. The road will be built so that an additional two lanes can be added in the future to accommodate increasing traffic level expected by 2010.

The C.R. 427 segment between U.S. Highway 17-92 and Hester Avenue had about 13,000 cars traveling on it daily, according to county counts. By the time the road is completed, traffic is expected to have increased to more than 21,000 cars per day. By 2018, traffic will hit a peak of 45,300 cars per day, projections show.

The sections are a part of the county's $43.2 million widening commitment to C.R. 427 which began five years ago and won't be completed until the year 1999.

VanPelt said the county will also restore the "cross" intersection of C.R. 427 at U.S.

17-92. About two years ago, a southbound U.S. 17-92 exit to C.R. 427 was opened to improve congested traffic conditions at the intersection. VanPelt said the short road will remain to serve businesses but not through traffic.

Television

The U.S. House and Senate have approved legislation to reregulate cable television subscriber rates and services. The bill is a response to consumer outrage over poor service and, above all, rates that have outpaced inflation by 2-to-1 since rate deregulation imposed by earlier legislation went into effect in 1987. And while 8-12 points in the right direction, some of its provisions are at least questionable.

The cable industry has engaged in heavy-handed lobbying to persuade Americans, and President Bush, that the bill will not lower subscriber rates, as proponents claim, but will increase them by imposing requirements whose costs must be passed on. The tactic seems to have worked with the president, who has threatened to veto the measure, although the bill's popularity with consumers in an election year may change Bush's mind.

Congress in 1984 took rate-setting powers away from local authorities after a period in which they often extorted huge sweeteners in equipment and community-access channels from cable operators in return for exclusive franchises. Now, Congress would let localities limit rates according to guidelines to be set by the Federal Communications Commission. It also would correct a cable industry abuse by requiring programmers to make their products available to competitors such as satellite and microwave services.

The bill also would make cable firms negotiate fees with broadcast stations for the right to retransmit over-the-air signals, which could result in a huge transfer of revenue from cable firms to broadcasters, whose fortunes have declined with falling audiences in recent years.

Cable firms also would have to provide state-of-the-art converter boxes to customers, enabling them to select more varied program packages.

Most of these changes seem desirable, both for viewers and broadcasters and would help to diminish cable operators' monopoly in all but a handful of markets. But one troubling effect of this legislation would be the de facto bailout of an industry — over-the-air broadcasting — whose public service record is spotty at best. Moreover, the ultimate objective of the legislation must remain to increase competition, not merely to punish an industry whose greed is hardly unique.

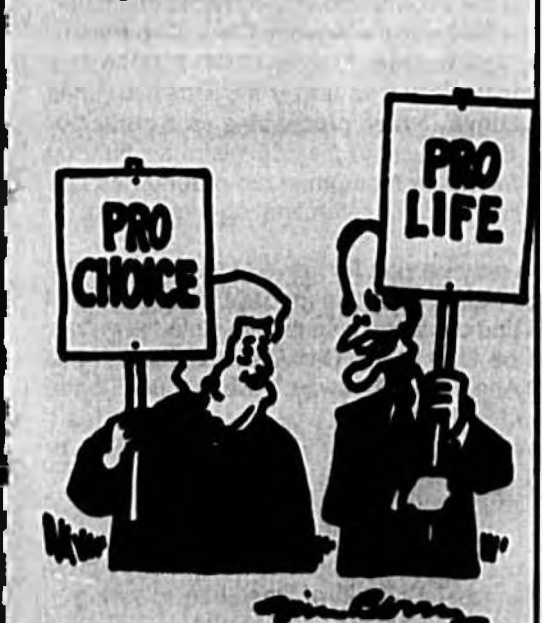

One way of creating a competitive cable environment would be to allow regional telephone companies to compete with cable operators, with appropriate limits to prevent one monopoly from being replaced by another. Another would be to allow competing cable programmers to use different segments of the same cable to deliver their services.

The point is to allow the marketplace, not bureaucrats, to determine what services are available to subscribers and how much they pay for them.

Cunning Clinton plays it both ways

Prince Bill Clinton will become the first Rhodes scholar to be elected president. He will win this election for two reasons: the Bush-Quayle's contemptuous misreading of the American voters' economic pain and Clinton's own ability to manipulate American voters with a mischievous cunning.

Clinton's campaign is more than oleaginously smooth. It is elegantly devious. Best of all, it resonates with the intellectual brilliance of the noted 16th-century scholar Niccolo Machiavelli.

In Machiavelli's classic, "The Prince," he laid down many axioms for authoritarian governance. The Italian philosopher-statesman guaranteed success to any ruler following his prescriptions.

One prescription used an animal metaphor, something with which political doves and hawks are familiar. Wrote Machiavelli: "The prince being this obliged to know well how to act as a beast must imitate the fox and the lion, for the lion cannot protect himself from traps, and the fox cannot defend himself from wolves. One must therefore be a fox to recognize traps, and a lion to frighten wolves."

Prince Bill Clinton has taken his advice about Republican foxes and media wolves to heart.

Even in Clinton's television ads, he is working both sides of the political street, but at separate times and with separate themes. Two weeks ago, he kicked off his second TV campaign since the Republican National Convention with a commercial designed to pre-empt expected Republican attacks and to win back Reagan and Bush Democrats.

His commercial, "Getting People Off Welfare," calls for the ending of "welfare as we know it" (my emphasis). That four-word caveat is as sneaky as the caveat in Bush's promise to reduce taxes — "provided (my emphasis) that these cuts are paid for with specific spending reductions so that we do not increase the deficit." Both caveats are known in street language as "covering your ..."

He will win this election for two reasons.

Clinton's welfare reform does not end welfare. It merely embraces formulas that are already operative in Pennsylvania and New Jersey and that cannot succeed in a catatonic economy.

Clinton proposes to "provide education, training and child care. ... Those who are able to work must go to work." He cites Arkansas as a successful example where 17,000 Arkansas recipients were moved off Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) or food stamps over a three-year period.

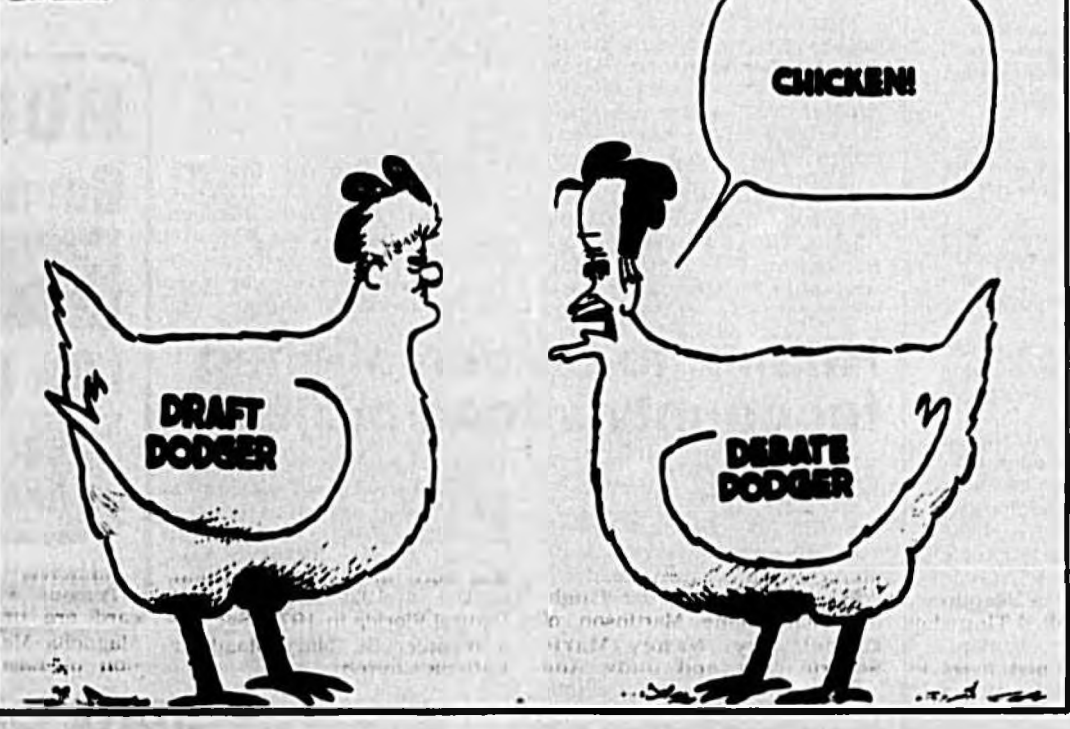

What neither he nor an Arkansas official will reveal is how big a percentage of those 17,000 returned to welfare. (P.S.: Most of them did.)

Moreover, with the continuing increase of single-parent families (23 percent of all families in 1990 and now a majority of families with children in Detroit and Washington, D.C.) and a Republican-made 7.3 percent unemployment rate, the cleansing of the rolls of recidivist welfare families will take more than TV commercials.

Nonetheless, the fox earnestly intoned on his commercial, "It's time to make welfare what it should be — a second chance, not a way of life."

Go, Prince. That ad is Clinton's subliminal version of Reagan's "welfare queen" and Bush's Willie Horton.

Baker reinvigorated Bush drive

WASHINGTON — GOP campaign operatives say that James Baker's presence in the White House as de facto campaign chief has already resulted in major improvements in the Bush re-election effort.

The most visible external change has been the repackaging of various past White House proposals as a comprehensive economic recovery plan. Regardless of whether much in the package is new, or whether it actually can be expected to work, at least the president can now say he has a plan and is committed to carrying it forward.

Another major change has been a quick retreat from the aggressively conservative family values campaign that was the theme of the GOP Convention in Houston, and which was to have been central to the Bush campaign right up to Election Day.

The bottom line on the militant anti-gay, anti-abortion, anti-"liberal lifestyle" campaign: It was not working. In fact, it was backfiring against Bush exactly where the president needs the most help in November — suburbia.

Extensive post-convention polling in key suburban areas nationwide showed that middle-class, young to middle-aged suburban voters were being completely turned off by the militant, fundamentalist rhetoric that was a centerpiece of the convention. These voters, while economic conservatives, see themselves as social moderates who do not believe a war for the soul of America needs to be fought.

So Baker had the president's speeches scrubbed of any tough "family values" references, and ordered various campaign surrogates to back off and start preaching social moderation.

In looking at the president's advance schedule, Baker noted a potential time bomb — a planned early afternoon speech before the convention of Pat Robertson's Christian Coalition. Bush was expected to reaffirm the entire family values argument.

Baker moved fast. He knew the appearance could not simply be canceled. So he moved the appearance to the evening, after network news programs had aired. He then sandwiched the appearance into the middle of a busy two days of campaigning so that it did not stand out. Finally he junked the planned speech; instead Bush spoke to the fundamentalist audience about the economy and his recovery plan. The result — a potentially risky campaign appearance was rendered almost invisible.

Internally, changes have revolved around tightening control of the campaign. All major decisions are now made by Baker and a close circle of longtime aides. Campaign budgets have been reallocated, and the campaign advertising program completely revamped. Baker's personal aides are now in charge of all advance operations. As a result the Bush campaign has, almost overnight, become more organized and coherent.

Baker's influence will become even more obvious in the weeks ahead. What many have forgotten — obscured, perhaps, by the public perception of his role as secretary of state — is that Baker has always been one of the modern era's great proponents of negative political campaigning.

According to several sources within the campaign, Baker has become convinced that Bush cannot win re-election by running a mostly positive campaign.

"I think Baker is right in this," says one high-level campaign operative. "People have made up their minds about George Bush, and the polls show clearly that a majority do not like the job he has done as president over the past four years, especially on domestic matters."

"But people have not made up their minds about Bill Clinton. They may not like the idea of voting for the president, but they may anyway if they can be convinced not to vote for Clinton."

"Basically, Baker sees as our job between now and Election Day to take enough votes away from Clinton to re-elect George Bush."

This will be done in true Baker fashion by almost daily raising questions about Clinton's character and credibility. This is the way he ran Bush's campaign against Ronald Reagan in the 1980 primary, and the way he ran Bush's campaign against Michael Dukakis in 1988.

But most of all, say insiders, Baker is maintaining as low a profile as possible. A major GOP worry is that it will appear that Bush is working for Baker, which would further weaken the president in voters' eyes.

Jim Baker is in charge, but he doesn't want anyone to notice.

Major decisions are made by Baker and a close circle of longtime aides.

U.S. courts can't afford to operate

WASHINGTON — In its zeal to look tough on crime this election year, Congress is on the verge of forgetting one small thing: the Constitution.

The Sixth Amendment guarantees each American the right to an attorney. But if Congress stays on its current course, the federal courts will run out of money to provide these services by next August. That means that more than 31,000 felons — convicted or accused — will be turned back to the streets or shipped off to overcrowded prisons at a heavy cost to taxpayers.

The budget crisis in the federal courts comes at a time when Congress and the White House are battling over who can look tougher on the all-important "law and order" issue in November. It is the flip side in the war against crime. And when it's time to provide funding, it's a side lawmakers often ignore.

President Bush wants to pump the federal law enforcement budget up to $15.4 billion, a 9.5 percent increase over its current level. Another $8.6 billion gets poured into the drug war. The Senate recently reciprocated by coughing up enough money to hire 261 new U.S. attorneys, who will bolster the record number of convictions that the Justice Department has been racking up.

Meanwhile, the Judiciary branch found its budget request trimmed by almost half a billion dollars for next fiscal year. That leaves the federal courts with enough funds for about three-fourths of the staff they say they need.

"(Congress) made a decision to fund the Justice Department more than the Judiciary Branch," one congressional staffer told our associate Ed Henry. "This part of the budget is very vulnerable to election-year politics. Congress feels that this is where you place your money."

In boosting enforcement budgets, Congress is hoping that putting more criminals behind bars will pay off at the polls. Unfortunately they may be worsening the problem they're trying to correct.

"You don't buy a whole lot of votes by voting for legislation to pay the legal fees of people on trial for crimes," said defense attorney Lawrence J. Fleming. "It's just not a politically feasible thing to do."

Fleming recently found himself in the unlikely position of defending six other defense attorneys — dubbed the "St. Louis Six." Fleming's clients were set to represent 11 defendants in a complex drug, murder and extortion case that was supposed to go to trial on July 7. The six defense attorneys had been working full-time since January to prepare for the trial without receiving a penny for their services.

Fleming convinced an Appeals Court Judge to postpone the trial until after Oct. 1 — the start of the new fiscal year — when the courts will receive an infusion of new funds. Meanwhile, Uncle Sam has paid more than $750,000 on witnesses alone in the case — including $570,000 on one witness.

At one pre-trial hearing, the U.S. Attorney prosecuting the case asked the defense attorneys if they could mortgage their homes or if they had other assets they could sell or borrow against to financially survive the trial.

"My clients were looking at the prospect of going to trial and not getting paid for another three or four months," Fleming said. "They were going to be taken out of their offices full-time trying this case. ... They would have gotten paid eventually by U.S. courts, but in the meantime, how are they going to pay their bills?"

It is the flip side in the war against crime.

Success: 2 Incomes for blacks

By CHRISTOPHER SULLIVAN
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — Mike and Aldenia Riley are on the way up, working long hours, making good salaries, accumulating wealth.

A Census Bureau study explains the secret of such success when most black families' income has stalled relative to whites: They are married, and both work.

Together they bring home about $50,000 a year, she as a computer systems administrator, he as a warehouse supervisor. A year ago, they bought a house for more than $80,000.

"We consider it a starter home," said Mrs. Riley, 29. "We've got big goals, big dreams," her 30-year-old husband agreed.

Working couples were the only kind of black family to see their income rise sharply compared with whites over the past two decades, the Census Bureau said in a study released Thursday.

Black single-earner couples and families headed by men or women alone failed to better their incomes compared with whites.

The study found that the ratio of black to white median incomes for all families did not significantly change from 1987 to 1990: blacks made slightly less than 60 cents on the dollar of white median income.

Among working married couples, income rose from 72 cents on the dollar of white median income in 1987 to 85 cents in 1990, the study said.

Why have black families overall fared so poorly if working couples are doing so well?

Isabel Sawhill, senior fellow at the Urban Institute, said it's because blacks are less likely to live as married couples today.

Fewer than half of black families have a husband and wife living together today, down from two-thirds 20 years ago. So the married-couple-both-working families — those with higher incomes — have less impact on the average.

And the news for married black couples is not all good. In 1990, black men and women were nearly twice as likely as whites to work in lower-paying service jobs, said the study's author, Claudette Bennett.

Despite their own progress, the Rileys said they don't ever expect to see parity in income levels for blacks and whites.

Asked why not, Riley said: "Discrimination."

It may not always be overtly racial, but the white majority will always look after itself first, especially in slow economic times, he said, noting that he lost a job when his boss replaced him with the less-qualified son of a friend.

Willis Sheffield, chairman of the economics department at Morehouse College in Atlanta, agrees that slow economic times affect the income gap.

The loss of high-paying manufacturing jobs has hurt black family income, Sawhill said.

The earnings of men with little education "have dropped like a stone over the last 20 years, and that means that in order to achieve the middle-class dream, you pretty much have to have two earners," she said.

Brian Coleman, a divorced 29-year-old carpenter paying child support for two children, said it's a struggle to get by on his income of about $23,000 a year.

"It's like we're falling back in the hole," he said. "You gotta cut back. Some things the children want, you can't get."

Families headed by women without husbands — nearly half of all black families — typically earn less than $12,000 a year, which is below the poverty line for a family of four.

Black families in general had median incomes of $31,548 in 1991, $125 more than the year before. But that amounted to only 57 cents for every dollar earned by white families.

Here are 1991 median income figures for the nation's 7.5 million black families and 56.6 million white families:

—Overall: Blacks, $21,548; whites, $37,783.

—Couples, when the wives work: Blacks, $41,353; whites, $48,802.

—Couples, when the wives don't work: Blacks, $30,288; whites, $30,792.

—Families headed by women alone: Blacks, $11,414; whites, $19,547.

The edge momentum-wise. After losing a mistake-filled game to Lyman two weeks ago, the Tribe bounced back and ripped the DeLand Bulldogs apart last weekend, rolling to a 38-3 victory.

By comparison, the Oviedo Lions started strong with a 27-18 win over DeLand, then suffered a 32-28 setback to Lyman in overtime last Friday night.

"We went into the season knowing that our youth was an offense," Blake explained. "We went out and did some good things against Lyman, but sputtered trying to find the right mixture."

Last week, I think we improved a whole lot, offensively and defensively. If our defense continues to play well and give the offense a chance to make the necessary adjustments, we'll win some ballgames."

In quarterback Leon Lowman (241 yards rushing), Paul Bass (214 yards rushing) and Ervin Alexander (109 yards rushing), the Oviedo Lions boast one of the most explosive and versatile running attacks in the area.

Lyman couldn't get anything going on offense, rushing for just 65 yards on 27 carries and completing four of 11 passes for 41 yards. The Sandcrabs picked up 66 yards rushing on 31 carries while Rone competed 11 of 26 passes for 201 yards.

Seabreeze collected 13 first downs to Lyman's five.

The Greyhounds also had trouble hanging on to the football, losing three fumbles and quarterback Todd Cleveland tossing an interception.

Lyman returns home next week, hosting the Mainland Buccaneers on Friday night in a game between 5A-District 4 leaders (both teams are 1-0 in the district) while Seabreeze plays at DeLand.

Howell girls proved rude hosts Thursday night as they swept the visiting Lake Brantley Patriots in a Seminole Athletic Conference girls volleyball encounter. The scores were 15-8 and 15-11 in the varsity match and 14-11 and 15-8 in the junior varsity battle.

Lake Howell will be back on the court today as the Silver Hawks travel to Maitland for a matchup with Orangewood Christian. The junior varsity match will start at 4:30 p.m. with the varsity set for 5:30 p.m. start.

Jennifer Graisinger Lake Mary with five kills, two blocks and four digs. That may not sound like domination, but it was on this night.

Diane Duber chipped in with three blocks, while Jennie Longstaff had four digs and drew special praise from Henry for her excellent back row play and her passing.

Despite getting good team balance and sweeping through an undefeated opponent, Henry was not completely satisfied.

"We got the first ball passed well," said Henry. "But our front liners were a little off and didn't hit as well as usual. If they had the score could have been a lot worse. It was a hard fought match, with a lot of long hard fought points. Lyman's got a good team. I was nervous before the match because they were undefeated and a very intimidating team."

The Greyhound junior varsity provided a split of the match as they won their sixth straight match without a defeat with a 15-3, 15-7 triumph.

Lawn furniture needs care

Maintenance tips outlined as season comes to end

The season for using outdoor furniture must be coming to a close because calls have started coming in on how to care for furniture before it is put away.

Today's outdoor furniture is rough, but it still needs regular care to look its best year after year. According to The Soap and Detergent Association, washing outdoor furniture frequently is one of the best ways to preserve it. When dirt and the residue from air-borne pollutants are allowed to set, metals corrode and become pitted, while plastics and fabrics lose their color.

Outdoor furniture should be washed at the beginning and end of each outdoor season. First, dust each item, then wash it in a solution of mild detergent and water. Dry thoroughly. Now make certain all nuts, bolts and screws are tight. Missing, broken or rusted fasteners should be replaced with rustproof ones made of aluminum, galvanized steel or stainless steel. Next, lubricate all hinges and wheels with a silicone lubricant. Oil should be avoided because it tends to cake and attract dirt.

From this point on, the care that the garden furniture needs depends upon the material it is made of.

Aluminum furniture resists rust but has to be safeguarded against a type of pitting that gives the metal a dull patina. Frequent washings help prevent this condition if the metal is in good shape or has an enameled or baked-on finish. If the metal is already in poor condition, however, more than a washing is needed to revive it. In such a case, rub each piece briskly with a steel wool, soap-scouring pad. If that proves insufficient, try a No. 00 steel wool pad soaked in kerosene or paint thinner.

Once the metal is smooth again, wash it in a mild detergent and water solution. Rinse and dry thoroughly. Protect the rejuvenated finish with a light application of automobile wax, then buff to remove any excess. Ideally, aluminum should be washed and waxed every few months.

Plastic resin is extremely durable and weather resistant. It can withstand the elements, the stress of ordinary use and the extra heat that outdoor furniture suffers. In addition, resin furniture can be easily stored because the pieces usually break down or stack to take up less storage space. This popular furniture maintains its sleek clean look for years with minimum care. Most soil and stains can be cleaned off with a non-abrasive all-purpose cleaner, a glass cleaner or a cleaner-polish, following package directions. Or, wipe the surface with a sponge or cloth dipped in a solution of hand dishwashing detergent and warm water. Rinse thoroughly and dry with a clean soft cloth.

Redwood furniture is attractive and weather-resistant in that it is not likely to rot or warp. It can split, however, and will almost surely turn gray within a year if not cared for properly. Commercial brands of redwood stain and sealer are available to help prevent this condition. To apply the sealer, first wash the furniture and replace any fasteners that are starting to rust, as they will eventually stain the wood. Then, lightly sand all exposed parts with No. 150 or 180 grit paper. Dust, and finally, wipe with a rag that has been moistened in paint thinner. The final step to this preservation process is to apply one to two coats of water repellent sealer specially made for redwood.

Wicker furniture is weather resistant. It can dry out in the sun. Keep it in the shade and soak it in water once a year to put moisture back into its fibers. Undamaged wicker simply has to be washed and refinished periodically to keep it in good condition. Vacuum the furniture first. Then, wipe it down with a rag soaked in a mild detergent and warm water solution. Use an old toothbrush to remove stubborn dirt. An ice pick can be used to remove paint that has lodged into the weave.

If mildew is a problem, wash the furniture with a solution of 3/4 cup chlorine bleach and one quart of water. Since the bleach may lighten the wicker, apply it to the entire piece of furniture. Wear gloves when working with bleach and protect your clothing from splashes and spills.

Wicker furniture with a natural finish that has dulled can be restored by applying lemon oil furniture polish. Scratches can be minimized with products specially formulated for this purpose.

Wrought iron can look good for years if it is touched up whenever bare metal is exposed. Use a rust-resistant metal primer on these spots to prevent rust from spreading under the paint.

Guilt normal for friends of victims

DEAR MARY: Last summer one of our neighbors committed suicide by taking an overdose of tranquilizers. It still bothers me because as far as I could tell, no one had any idea that she was in trouble, much less ready to do something like that. Even though I know it's silly, I feel guilty, like I should have known something was wrong and tried to help her before she did it. I could understand it if she had been sick or had some big problem, but as far as I know, that's not true. Why do people do things like this without even asking for help?

BAD AND FEELING GUILTY NEIGHBOR

DEAR NEIGHBOR: It's normal for a suicide victim's family and friends to struggle with the question that surrounds many suicides — why? Of course, people rarely kill themselves for a single reason, but experts agree that the overwhelming cause for most suicides is that people have lost hope and feel that things will never change for the better.

Dr. Michael Weissberg, author of Dangerous Secrets: Maladaptive Response to Stress, suggests that suicidal behavior is symptomatic of adjustment problems elsewhere in the person's life. Some of the problems include:

- Depression, which is involved in approximately 80 percent of all suicides. However, a person needn't be completely despondent to attempt suicide.

- Major losses, such as a job loss, end of a marriage through death or divorce, or the death of a loved one can push already depressed people over the brink.

- A history of suicide; 50 percent of those who kill themselves have made previous suicides involve alcohol or other drug abuse; 15 percent of all alcoholics kill themselves.

• Physical illness. Weissberg found that two-thirds of the elderly people who commit suicide have a chronic illness and may see suicide as a way of escaping pain and suffering.

I hope you will release yourself from feelings of guilt by knowing that since you still have no idea what was going through your neighbor's mind prior to the suicide, you could not have intervened to prevent it.

Love story of Patty and Pat ends in December wedding

DEAR ABBY: Remember the saga of Patty and Pat who met through "Operation Dear Abby"? We had everything in common: We both came from Irish Catholic families with seven children. I (Patty) went to an all-girl Catholic school; Pat went to an all-boy Catholic school. We had both dreamed of biking through Ireland, and we were both single and had never been married. You printed our story Nov. 12, 1991.

Well, Abby, here's an update: Pat proposed to me over Thanksgiving weekend (1991) and I said yes! He's been living in Milwaukee since January when he got out of the Army, and he's now living less than two miles from me! He's my best friend, and we fall more and more in love every time we meet. I still can't believe it.

We went to Omaha to visit his family, and they couldn't have been more wonderful to me. At first they were a little skeptical, but after seeing Pat and Patty together, they knew we were right for each other.

We are planning to get married in the cathedral of my alma mater, Marquette University in Milwaukee, on Dec. 19, 1992.

PATTY TREACY, ORENFIELD, WIS.

DEAR PATTY: Wisconsin in December? A Christmas fantasy! I will be with you in spirit, wishing you both much happiness and success in your marriage.

DEAR ABBY: In further defense of those who work at less-than-exalted jobs, I have never seen it expressed better than in the following quotation from John William Gardner:

"An excellent plumber is infinitely more admirable than an incompetent philosopher. The society that acorns excellence in plumbing because plumbing is a humble activity, and tolerates shoddiness in philosophy because it is an exalted activity, will have neither good plumbing nor good philosophy."

"Neither its pipes nor its philosophy will hold water."
BARBARA NARROW, RICHLAND, WASH.

Antibiotics can help prevent renal failure

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffer from chronic pyelonephritis, and my doctor has indicated that if I have another attack I will be on dialysis. What can I do to prevent this from happening? Is there any way I can keep my disease in check and avoid what appears to be the inevitable?

DEAR READER: Pyelonephritis is a serious, bacterial kidney infection that, if untreated, can lead to renal failure. The two most important issues in pyelonephritis are the infection and mechanical obstruction, which prevents urine from draining out of the diseased kidney. Before antibiotics can eradicate the infection, any blockages must be removed. Such blockages include scar tissue and kidney stones.

I don't see how you can prevent your pyelonephritis from progressing, providing you follow your doctor's orders. Rather, it's up to HIM to prevent future problems by 1.) making sure, by X-raying your kidneys, that they are free of obstructions and 2.) prescribing appropriate antibiotics to rid your urinary tract of bacteria. I believe you should be examined by a urologist and, if you haven't already, a nephrologist. Working together, these two specialists (one surgical, the other medical) should be able to pinpoint your problem and offer treatment. In my opinion, your doctor frightened you unnecessarily.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 28-year-old son has seizure-like nightmares that have been going on for four years. He thrashes violently and is impossible to wake up, yet doesn't remember the dreams on awakening. He's been to doctors, counselors and has tried tranquilizers. Nothing works and we are frustrated. Any suggestions?

DEAR READER: This is a tough one. Without sounding too

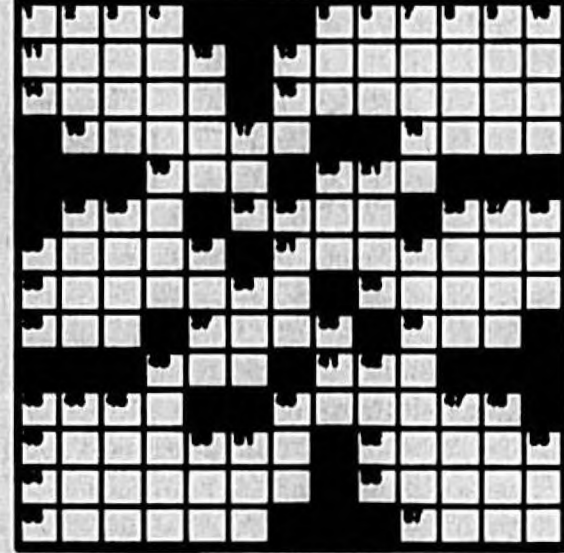

Freudian, I suggest your son see a psychiatrist because these nightmares may represent some sort of major, unresolved conflict.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
Some writers rely heavily on their editors. Others feel that the editor, to justify his position, will unnecessarily alter the writer's carefully constructed prose. As H.G. Wells said, "No passion in the world is equal to the passion to alter someone else's draft."
When South looked up on today's deal, he found that he had gone down. But if only he had counted the nouns (his tricks) with an adverb (carefully), he would have avoided suffering another noun (defeat).
South's rebid of two no-trump showed 18-19 points. This was an accurate assessment of the power of his hand. That excellent club suit was worth another two or three points.
The defenders attacked in spades, declarer ducking his ace until the third round.
To play this club holding for no losers. South knew that it was better to take an immediate finesse than to cash the ace first and then to finesse. (West can hold five possible singletons: four low cards and only one queen.) Therefore, South played a heart to dummy's ace and finessed the club jack. However, West won with the queen and cashed his two spade winners: one down.

South had four top tricks outside clubs. So he needed only five club tricks, not six. And as it was in his best interest to keep West off the lead, South should have cashed the A-K of clubs, not taken a finesse at all. Here the queen drops and declarer makes an overtrick. But if the queen doesn't appear, South leads a third club, hoping East has the queen.
Readers are invited to send card-play questions to Phillip Alder, in care of this newspaper.

They can be answered only through the column.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bode Oost
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Sept. 26, 1992
You're likely to be more ambitious in the year ahead than you have been in the past. This bodes well for success in your endeavors, especially where you're strongly motivated.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Things that come easily for you today are likely to be much more rewarding than that for which you strive very hard. Before you knock yourself out, be sure you're doing it for the right reasons. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker Instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You might have to deal with someone you dislike today because of something this individual did in the past. Holding a grudge could end up hurting you more than it does this person.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you attend a gathering today where friends are saying unkind things about a pal who isn't present, you'd be smart not to partake in the discussion.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Should you decide to do something important today, dedicate all your effort and energy toward this objective. Half measures could result in frustration and failure.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't expect others to be supportive of your views and opinions today -- if they sense you really don't believe in them yourself, sincerity is essential.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Joint commercial ventures could be more complex than usual today. Take measures to protect your interests, as well as the interests of those with whom you'll be involved.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) When under pressure today, you might make concessions or commitments that may not serve your best interests. If you feel you're being backed into a corner, stiffen your resolve.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Do not attempt to be first among equals when dealing with co-workers today. If you assume authority you're not entitled to, those you're involved with will find it offensive.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Social situations and impulsive spending are two conditions which could negatively overlap in some unique manner today. Be on guard in both areas.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) You'll know what needs to be done today, and you're likely to be a good starter, but your motivation could ebb and flow rather than remain constant. This might deprive you of fulfillment.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Say nothing of anyone else today that you wouldn't want said of yourself. This could especially pertain to a close friend whose feelings you hurt previously.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Usually, you have a good sense of bargains and values. However, this quality may not be operating today, and you might pay more for something than you should.
