Chamber Business After Hours

LAKE MARY — The Greater Lake Mary/Heathrow Chamber of Commerce will hold a Business After Hours gathering tomorrow night. The event is being held at Doro's Restaurant, 951 Greenwood Blvd., in Lake Mary, at the corner of Greenwood and Lake Emma Road.

Chamber manager Diane Parker said, "This will be our opportunity to network with some fine cuisine, and we hope all of our members and their guests will be on hand."

"Our business after hours meetings give us the opportunity to meet with other Chamber members, exchange ideas and business cards, and generally band together as an organized group to improve the overall climate of working in and living in Lake Mary," Parker said.

Members of other Chambers and their guests are also invited to attend the function which will be held from 5:30 until 7:30 p.m.

Business After Hours

SANFORD — The Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce will hold its monthly Business After Hours event this Thursday. The party will be at Buck's Restaurant, 1220 S. Sanford Avenue.

Vivian and Richard Buck have been operating the business since 1974, as both a catering service and restaurant during the past years. "We've had the restaurant closed for the past six years," Buck said, "but now we're reopening it with all new surroundings, delicious seafood, and a great deal more parking area next to the building."

All chamber members, friends and guests are invited to the Business After Hours event, scheduled for this Thursday, from 5 p.m. until 7 p.m.

Lyman cheerleaders win prize

The Lyman High School varsity cheerleading squad won a $500 prize as the most spirited school representatives at the "Be True to Your School" cheering competition at the Winter Park Mall on Saturday.

The competition attracted squads from six schools in Orange and Seminole County. Lyman was the only Seminole County representative.

The winners were chosen by a poll of those who were in the mall at the time of the competition.

The University High School (Orlando) cheerleaders won the skill contest while the Lyman squad was voted the most enthusiastic about their school.

Twyla Dague, the mother of one of the 13 cheerleaders on the Lyman squad, said the girls were motivated by desire to build school spirit for the new football coach at the school.

"They want everyone to know they're proud of Lyman," she said.

SANFORD — A new food for volunteerism program is targeted to begin distributing food packages Oct. 24.

The program, Self Help And Resource Exchange — SHARE, will distribute food from the Zayre Plaza offices of a free food program. But unlike the Temporary Emergency Food Assistance Program that has income limits for participation, SHARE has no income limits. Anyone can purchase food packages for $13.50 after they volunteer at least two hours of their time to benefit others.

There is no limit on the number of packages that can be purchased, but there is a $13.50 charge for each package. Each extra package requires an additional two hours of volunteered time.

The program will be sponsored by the Seminole Community Volunteer Program, the same people that now sponsor TEFAP and the Retired Senior Volunteer Program, RSVP.

School hopefuls raise money

SANFORD — With the primary election to narrow the field in the District 4 school board race set for Sept. 1, the candidates have raised varying amounts ranging from under $2,000 to around $5,000.

The non-partisan race for the seat held for three terms by Joe Williams, who has decided not to seek a fourth term, has drawn five candidates.

"We have to have the primary election just in case there is a need for a run off," explained Supervisor of Elections Sandra Goard.

Goard said if one candidate receives 50 percent of the vote plus at least one vote, he will be elected to the seat, though he would not take over the job until November.

There are only two candidates seeking the District 3 seat held by Nancy Warren. Warren, seeking a fourth term on the board, will face off against Barrie Masters in the November general election.

Candidate forum tonight

SANFORD — The League of Women Voters and the Greater Seminole Chamber of Commerce are sponsoring a school board candidates forum this evening.

The forum will take place in the Seminole Community College Fine Arts Auditorium at 7:30 p.m.

Candidates are vying for two seats on the school board.

In District 3, board chairman Nancy Warren, who has been on the board for 12 years, will face off against Barrie Masters in November.

District 4, the seat being vacated by Joe Williams, has drawn five candidates. They will face off on Sept. 1 in a primary to narrow the field.

The candidates for the District 4 seat, Bob Goff, Norris Jennings, Robert Kilcourse, Don MacCuih and Larry Strickler, will have the opportunity on Monday to answer questions presented, through a moderator, by members of the audience.

The District 3 candidates, because they will not be involved in the Sept. 1 primary, will have the opportunity to make a three minute presentation, but will not be subject to questions at this event.

Carol Maier of the League of Women Voters said she has confirmation from all the candidates that they will be at Monday's function.

Maier said that this is the first time the League of Women Voters and the Chamber have joined forces to screen school board candidates with the public.

SANFORD — Spouse abuse victims with nowhere to go will soon have a haven and hope.

A vacant building owned by Seminole County is about to be renovated into Safehouse of Seminole, the first shelter of its kind in the county. Ginger Bowman, president of Seminole County Victims' Rights Coalition, sponsor of Safehouse, said Thursday. The building is being leased for $1.

"We're absolutely in orbit over it," Bowman said.

Although the lease signing was postponed earlier this week due to Commissioner Bob Sturm's illness, Bowman said the group is ready to See Shelter, Page 5A

City to enforce late fee on water bills

By MICK SPENAW
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Late payment on water bills in Longwood may increase the cost. The city is considering upgrading its late charge and bad check charge.

An ordinance calling for the additional charges is being presented for its second reading and public hearing tonight.

City Clerk Jeri Zambri explained, "The ordinance to be presented tonight changes several items in our present ordinances dealing with these fees."

She added, "One of the changes will change the time for payment. We have been sending out our water bills on the first of the month, with them due on the 10th."

She added, "Under the proposed change, the due date will be expanded to no later than the 15th of the month."

The proposed ordinance will call for the payment of a $5 fee, if the bill is not paid by the 15th. The charge will automatically be added to the bill mailed out on the following month.

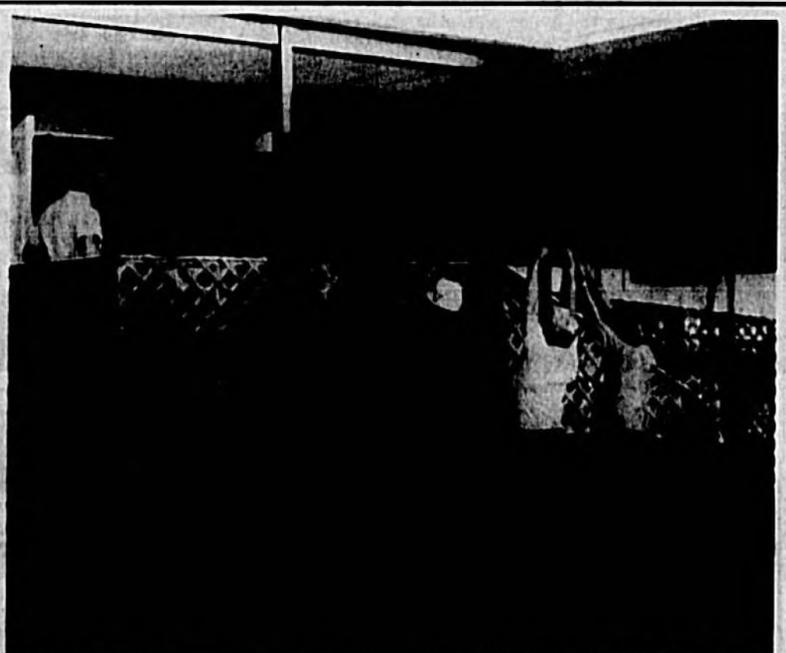

"We had originally established this late charge," Zambri said, "but for some reason, it was never put into use. This ordinance will call for it to be levied to all late charge water bills."

If the customer does not pay the late charge, the city would have the authority to shut off the customers water service until all bills have been paid in full. This would automatically lead to additional charges.

If water is turned off because of a non-payment, the cost will be $20 which would include turning the water back on when the back bills are paid.

"These are also changes presented in this new ordinance," Zambri said. "The old initial turn-on fee has been $15, and the turn off fee was $10. This new ordinance will raise those amounts."

'Emergency' moving

Here we grow again. HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital began its expansion of the Emergency Room last week. Movers were transferring desks, chairs and some medical supplies out of the triage and reception area early this morning, into trailers in the rear of the hospital, which will serve as temporary quarters until the completion of the renovations.

Jackson: Bush in political trouble

OPA-LOCKA — The Rev. Jesse Jackson said President Bush will have a difficult task in turning around his political fortunes this week at the Republican National Convention in Houston.

"He certainly cannot do in four days what he hasn't done in four years without a vision for economic growth," Jackson said during a visit Sunday night. "Mr. Bush cannot run on his economic record."

Jackson received a key to the city from Mayor Robert Ingram and then headed to Bible Baptist Church, where he received a warm welcome from 1,000 people.

"There is a real sense of urgency in the air," he said Sunday. "It's a time to heal. It really is coalition-building time."

During his visit, Jackson called for more voter registration and repeated his support for allowing Haitian boat people into the country.

Jackson has been traveling the country urging people to vote. He plans to visit Orlando today.

Investigators gathering information

MIAMI — A deadly nightclub shooting that left four people dead and 17 wounded may have started when a group of men got into a fight with another group, investigators said.

"We believe, from what we know now, there was some type of altercation between two different groups of males," Metro-Dade detective Donald Blocker said Sunday. "An argument probably transpired and it escalated into a shooting incident."

Police had made no arrests as of late Sunday, but detectives believe the killers are still in Dade County and may be nursing gunshot wounds.

Police released the names of those who were killed: Christopher Morris, 26, Samuel Joseph, 29, Ricardo Mitchell, 17 and Hilda LaToy Reynolds.

It was Ms. Reynolds 17th birthday.

Lizard goes from rags to riches

MIAMI — A six-foot Asian water monitor that was almost killed inside a car engine is now living the life of a movie star.

A month ago, the lizard entwined itself in a car's engine in Dade County. The monitor's rescue attracted national attention and caught the eye of a local film maker.

The lizard's name is now Gordon Gecko, newly signed mascot of Gecko Films, a local company that plans to specialize in G- and PG-movies.

"This would be an exciting mascot for this newly founded film company," said Keith DuBuisson, promotions and releasing agent for Gecko films.

Gordon lives in a home complete with waterfall, fish pond and dark nooks for sleeping.

The lizard will pose for publicity pictures, appear in a film of two and maybe even fly to Hollywood to help premier Gecko's films.

Rare tiger has cancer

MIAMI — The ultraviolet rays of the sun could be to blame for the cancer found on a 9-year-old rare white tiger named Kampur at Miami's Metrozoo, experts say.

This is the second incidence of cancer in a tiger at the zoo in a year.

Nataha, an orange and black female Bengal, was put to sleep last September after a bone-type cancer was discovered in the roof of her mouth. She was 12.

"This is an especially difficult situation for Metrozoo's staff since it comes on the heels of the loss of Nataha," said Ron Magill, assistant curator at the zoo.

Magill emphasized that the cancer found on Kampur's lips and eyelids is different than the cancer that took the life of Nataha.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Florida traffic deaths down

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Traffic deaths are down on Florida roads for the second year in a row, and the Florida Highway Patrol credits the state's seat belt law, among other factors.

Traffic deaths dropped 7.5 percent so far this year, following a 14 percent drop last year.

Surveys suggest that a growing number of motorists are obeying Florida's 6-year-old seat-belt law.

"One of the things that stands out to us is that 75 to 80 percent of the people killed are not wearing seat belts," said Lt. Jim Howell, who works out of the Lanitana station of the Florida Highway Patrol.

Across Florida, and nationwide, traffic fatalities have been on a decline since 1989.

"The trend ... has carried into 1992.

"One of the things that stands out to us is that 75 to 80 percent of the people killed are not wearing seat belts"

-Lt. Jim Howell, Florida Highway Patrol

That's good news," said Maj. Mike Boles, an FHP spokesman in Tallahassee. "We've been preaching safety."

As of Aug. 11, Florida had 1,415 traffic fatalities, down from 1,530 at the same time last year. Through Aug. 11, Florida had 113,749 injuries reported at the scene, down 19 percent from the 140,821 a year earlier.

Before seat belts became mandatory for Florida's drivers and front-seat passengers in 1986, only 28 percent of Florida's motorists wore them, according to a survey conducted by the AAA Clubs of Florida.

The most recent AAA survey, in January, found seat belt compliance running at 58 percent — up 5 points from a survey nine months before.

"But we are still concerned, because it also shows that more than 40 percent of the motorists still aren't bothering to buckle up," said Nathalie Herbat, traffic safety manager for AAA Florida.

As crash-inflating air bags become an option and sometimes a standard feature in more new cars, Allstate Insurance Co. finds a growing number of its customers buying cars with the automatic restraints.

"The safety features put in cars have helped," said Rob Hair, underwriting manager for Allstate in Florida.

Way Back When

How many of you old time baseball fans remember the "youngster" pictured here? He was one of the most popular athletes to play baseball in Sanford. Although only about five feet seven inches tall, he was an accomplished first baseman and outfielder. He was not bad at the plate, either. Everybody wondered about his hitting ability because without his eyeglasses he could hardly see his hand in front of his face. When he was at the plate he had a highly unusual batting stance. He had an "open" stance and would almost be facing the pitcher. He hailed from St. Petersburg. His name? He was Jerry Silverman. Whatever happened to Silverman? Nobody around today seems to know. But to Sanford baseball fans back in the 1940s Jerry was one of their favorites.

Butterworth spends little time outside South Florida

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Attorney General Bob Butterworth said he spent 133 days in South Florida last year because most of the cases handled by his offices are there.

"I'm a hands-on manager," Butterworth said. "I've always been that way."

Butterworth, whose wife and two children live in Broward County, had no more than five travel days on state business in any other region of Florida.

During the last fiscal year, which ended in June, Butterworth linked business trips and personal time more often than other members of the state Cabinet, billing taxpayers for trips that took him to Broward County for 20 weekends in a yearlong period.

But Butterworth's travel bill for the year wasn't the biggest. He spent more than $6,700, less than Insurance Commissioner Tom Gallagher, Comptroller Gerald Lewis and Education Commissioner Betty Castor.

Butterworth charged taxpayers nearly $4,000 for South Florida trips that included personal time and used state airplanes on three of the trips.

"If I bill the state for it, it's for business," Butterworth said.

The practice of mixing business and personal time during travel doesn't violate state law as long as necessary state business is included.

The attorney general said he pays for his travel to South Florida if there is any question about whether necessary state business is involved.

Unlike other Cabinet members, who spread their travel around the state, Butterworth spent little time in other cities. He spent no more than five days each on state business in the Tampa Bay area, Jacksonville and Orlando.

About one third of the attorney general's lawyers are in South Florida offices, including the Broward County office, which handles Florida's lemon law and crime compensation programs for victims, among other things, Butterworth said.

Some of the governor's top appointees, including Commerce Secretary Greg Farmer and former Labor Secretary Frank Scruggs spent nearly $20,000 on travel.

In Farmer's case, most of the travel was to promote development while Scruggs' travel focused on workers' compensation and providing assistance to unemployed people.

Despite problems, Republicans gather with momentum

Poole: GOP will keep 'Big Mo'

By DAN SEWELL, Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — Florida Republicans have what George Bush once called "the Big Mo," and the president's lack of momentum so far this year may help state Republicans keep their GOP leaders say.

"It's going to scare people," state party Chairman Van Poole said Sunday, as Florida's delegation gathered for the national convention. Bush trails Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton by double-digit margins in many national polls.

"We're going to have a good convention and we're going to be ready to come out of the box all-out. Florida is a key state," Poole said.

Both sides, based on partisan samplings, suspect that Clinton is running close to Bush in the state that gave Bush his largest margin in 1988. That likely means Bush will spend more campaign time than planned earlier in Florida to shore up his support.

"That's good because the president has been very popular in Florida," Poole said, recalling that he earlier had asked — and received — assurances that Bush would campaign with Florida candidates even if he was far ahead in the late polls. Bush's son Jeb is his campaign chairman in the state.

Vice President Dan Quayle will visit the Florida delegation's hotel, the Westin Galleria, this week, and also will go to Florida to campaign soon after the convention. Poole expects Bush to come to the state "a few times."

Delegates wary about abortion

By DAN SEWELL, Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — Abortion is an issue some Florida Republican delegates wish wasn't one.

Associated Press interviews with delegates to this week's national convention found some discomfort about the party's strong anti-abortion platform.

Of the 97 delegates from Florida, 46 were surveyed last week and asked whether abortion would help or hurt President Bush's chances. Only four said it would help, 14 said it would hurt and the rest said it wouldn't — or shouldn't — make a difference.

"I don't feel it should be an issue," said Deborah Eiler, a Deerfield Beach businesswoman. "There are so many other things out there that are important."

"I don't know which set of propaganda to believe about who it helps politically ... but it's something that should be settled privately," said Tallahassee attorney Richard McFarlin.

A Miami polling consultant said Florida Republicans have special reason to be wary of abortion as a political issue.

"Florida Republicans were traumatized by their experiences with a governor who actively sought restrictions on abortion," said Robert Joffe, director of the politically independent Mason-Dixon Florida poll.

Republican Gov. Bob Martinez called a special session of the Legislature in an unsuccessful effort to increase restrictions on abortion, and his anti-abortion activism was used against him as Lawton Chiles handily ousted him in the 1990 election.

Drug charges filed against roommates

Bryan Scott Cole, 19, and Shawn Carl Bullock, 19, both of 723 Rosecliff Cir., Sanford, were arrested on drug charges on Friday by Sanford Police.

Police reported that Cole was charged with possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana and with possession of drug paraphernalia.

Bullock was charged with possession of drug paraphernalia and cultivation of marijuana.

Police said they searched the apartment that the two share because a uniform patrol told them that drug paraphernalia was in plain view inside the apartment.

Police said that marijuana, marijuana seeds and drug paraphernalia were found in Cole's room.

Police said they found a marijuana plant, several marijuana paraphernalia smoking devices and a small quantity of marijuana inside their apartment. They said Bullock gave them permission to search the apartment.

He was charged with possession of drug paraphernalia and with cultivation of marijuana.

Both were transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held in lieu of $500 bond each.

Video game brings arrest

John Edward Ruth, 29, 1401 W. First St., Sanford was charged with grand theft when he was arrested by Sanford Police on Friday.

Police said that Ruth, an employee at Best Pawn Shop, 2705 S. Orlando Dr., Sanford, was supposed to deliver a video game to the owner, David Rose of 2908 S. Palmetto Ave., Sanford. Police said he took possession of the game on Aug. 4 and never delivered it.

Police said the game is worth about $350.

Ruth was located at his home, transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $1,000 bond.

Domestic violence charged

Todd Franklin Crawl, 27, 102 Woodfield Ct., Sanford, was charged with domestic violence when he was arrested on Saturday.

Police said he got in a fight with his girlfriend, Peggy Siegel on Saturday. Police said he grabbed their car keys away from her, hurting her hand. They said he gave her a "fat lip" when he hit her in the face.

Police said he had been drinking and that he had a strong odor of alcohol on his person.

He was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held without bond.

Assault with firearm alleged

Dilworth Dixon, 27, 67 Castle Brewer Ct., Sanford, was charged with aggravated assault with a firearm, with grand theft of a firearm, with possession of a firearm by a convicted felon and with carrying a concealed weapon when he was arrested by Sanford Police on Friday.

Police said that Eric Taylor reported that he and Dixon had been in an argument outside Sunshine Liquor on 13th Street when Dixon pulled out a 9 mm gun and threatened him. Taylor went to the police station, police said.

Police said they found Dixon on 13th Street and conducted a search. They said they found a 9mm gun concealed in his pants and that a computer check determined that they gun was stolen.

He was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held in lieu of $5,000 bond.

Warrant arrests made

William H. Bruce IV, 18, 528 Eastport Dr. Longwood, in connection with a warrant for failure to appear. He was held on $100 bond at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Charles Edward McDoe, 29, 500 Elder Road, Lake Monroe, on charges of contempt of court. He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $500 bond.

James M. Murphy, 21, 204 Meadow Hills Dr. Sanford, on charges of violating the terms of his probation on theft charges. He was held without bond at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Jason Daniel Dodd, 18, 2740 Ridgewood Ave., Apt. 51, Sanford, on charges of possession of more than 20 grams of cannabis. He was held on $3,000 bond at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Richard Lewis Hentzell, 32, 125 Becket Lane, Heathrow, in connection with a warrant for failing to appear in court on charges of driving without a license. He was held at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility on $1,000 bond.

Ulescy C. O'Neal, 20, 2071 18th St., Sanford in connection with warrants charging him with driving with a suspended license, with fleeing and attempting to elude, with attaching a tag not assigned to his vehicle, with having no valid drivers license and with unlawful use of an auto tag. He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held in lieu of $4,500.

Jimmy Lee Smith, 49, 1209 Magnolia, Sanford, was charged with failure to appear in court on charges of obtaining property with a worthless check. He turned himself in at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and was held without bond.

James Edward Durham, 28, 1701 W. 13th St., Sanford, was charged with violating the terms of his probation when he was arrested by Sanford Police on Thursday morning. He was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held without bond.

William Lee, 20, 497 Whittingham Place, Lake Mary, was charged with violating the terms of his probation on burglary charges when he was arrested by Seminole County Sheriff's deputies on Thursday. He was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where bond will be set after his first appearance in court.

SANFORD — The 102 anniversary celebration of First Shiloh M.B. Church came to a close yesterday with special services and fellowship throughout the day.

The musical presentation last evening stirred the souls of the congregation as voices of praise filled the church and overflowed into the parking lot.

But on Saturday night, as part of the week-long commemoration, hearts and minds of political candidates, members of the congregation and guests were challenged by the powerful words of former congresswoman Shirley Chisholm.

"In order to bring about change, we all need to realize we are human beings," Chisholm began. "Men and women."

"If you're going to go by the theory of cranial superiority remember, there are stupid men and stupid women."

Through the years Chisholm has confronted the inequities of society and politics by making her presence known in the political arena. She encouraged members of black congregations to do the same.

"Black preachers have been actively involved in politics for years," according to Chisholm. "The church was the only place our people could gather during turbulence."

In the beginning of the civil rights movement, blacks came together in their churches to organize.

"Where were the first civil rights meetings held?" Chisholm asked. "They were held in the sanctuaries and basements."

"If the church did not involve itself in politics, would we still enjoy the freedoms we do tonight?"

"Our forefathers did not give us the vote as a right, they fought for it," she said. "Now we have a tendency too much to rap or to nap."

The Rev. H.D. Rucker introduces former congresswoman Shirley Chisholm.

Chisholm spoke of the importance of community involvement and helping each other to survive.

"The church's philosophy is: Jesus is not going to come down here with a few loaves of bread to feed the masses — that's what he's got us down here for."

The 68-year-old challenged everyone to adopt her 4 C's: courage, concern, compassion and commitment, as the standard for helping others.

"It is not enough to understand the problems of our people," she said. "The black church must be at the forefront to help alleviate the conditions on all fronts."

Mayor Bettye Smith presented former congresswoman

Chisholm with a key to the city and an open invitation to return in the future.

Chisholm is the founder of the National Political Congress of Black Women, Inc., an organization to help launch black women into politics. She is currently holding the Purinton Chair at Mount Holyoke College, in South Hadley, Mass., the oldest women's college in the U.S.

She made the announcement at the banquet that she will soon be moving to the Palm Coast area, here in Florida.

Postal facility is holding open house for businesses

By MARK PETERMAN
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — The U.S. Postal Service is holding open house tours at the Mid Florida Independent Mail Center, 800 Rinchard Rd., in Lake Mary. The event will be held this Wednesday, Aug. 19.

Manager of the Postal Business Center, Murrell Miller said, "This is primarily aimed at local businesses, to give them information pertaining to postal services and operations."

"Many of the major industries have their own postal information sources," he said, "but businesses in the local area deserve just as much information as they require too, so we are conducting this to help serve them."

Business and professional persons are urged to take copies of their printed or planned envelopes or addressed materials to the facility, for free assistance and consultations on standardization of addresses, mailing list conversions, reply envelope usage and zip and 4-bar coding information.

The information will also be useful for the standard letter-writers.

"We would like to have all local business matters come to our facility, meet us, and get answers to any questions they might have," Miller said. "Business people have asked us to do something like this, and we are doing it."

The Mid-Florida postal facility is located at 800 Rinchard Rd., in Lake Mary.

The open house, with guided tours every half hour, will be held from 9 a.m. until 12 noon, and from 1 p.m. until 5 p.m.

Social decay

It hardly is a foregone conclusion that the federal indictments brought against four Los Angeles police officers involved in the Rodney King beating will result in a guilty verdict.

Charges that the officers violated the black man's civil rights will be more difficult to prove than the charges of which the officers were acquitted by a Simi Valley, Calif., jury in April.

Nevertheless, the Justice Department is correct to pursue this case — if for no other reason than to set to rest the lingering doubts of much of the public that justice truly was served in the first trial.

The defendants very well might be acquitted this second time around. But we suspect that the public will be more sanguine about the verdict ultimately handed down in federal court than the one rendered by the whites-only Simi Valley jury.

There really are two salient questions in this celebrated case. Was the severe beating King absorbed at the hands of the baton-wielding policemen justified under the circumstances of the case? Did King's skin color have anything to do with the level of brutality the policemen exercised?

Both questions are thorny. We can't imagine that many Americans have managed to avoid seeing the graphic videotape of King being pummeled. But the Simi Valley jury that reviewed the video snippet (and more), and heard assorted testimony concluded that the four officers did not use excessive force. A federal jury could come to the same conclusion.

That's because federal prosecutors must prove "intent" to win their case. They must convince the jury — beyond a reasonable doubt — that the officers willfully deprived King of his constitutional right to a reasonable arrest by using excessive force against him.

The race issue complicates matters, especially for those who perceive this trial as a litmus test of whether blacks truly receive equal protection under the law. Those who feel that the Simi Valley jury's decision was predicated on race are persuaded that King would not have been as severely beaten — if at all — if he had been fairer in complexion.

There really is no objective way to resolve these questions in a court of law, unless federal prosecutors somehow have divined a way to probe the psyche of the four accused officers.

But let us assume, for the moment, that federal prosecutors make their case, the jury is persuaded, and the four officers receive prison sentences. Then what?

The deep-seated racial anger that exploded in South Central Los Angeles in the wake of the first King verdict will remain — perhaps not at full boil, but most assuredly simmering.

Rebuild L.A. has done much to ameliorate the economic fallout from April riots. Millions of dollars will be invested in beleaguered South Central Los Angeles to reopen stores and shops. But the social decay — the family breakdown, the rampant crime, the prevalent drug abuse, the school dropouts, the welfare dependency, the hard-core joblessness — remains unaddressed.

As long as this social rot continues to gnaw at South Central Los Angeles it will remain a jury verdict away from exploding.

Finest thing George Bush has done

Sen. Al Gore, D-Tenn., was right when he said that the controversy over Oregon's proposal for rationing health benefits is "the single most important debate on the future of health care in the United States." (Gore opposes the plan; I hope the rest of that ticket does.)

The debate is not over. Although George Bush, in the most humane act of his administration, has rejected the Oregon plan, there are intimations from below that Oregon may yet get its way if it can sufficiently cosmeticize its proposal so the plan will appear to be in consonance with the Americans with Disabilities Act.

Disability rights advocates accurately condemn the plan because it judges the disabled as having a lower "quality of life," and therefore they fail the cost-benefit analysis that determines which levels of care will be paid for by Oregon through Medicaid.

The plan covers all of the poor in the state but then removes from the rolls those of the poor whose treatment is too costly in that it is not likely to sufficiently "improve" the patient's condition or is of insufficient value to society. Those found ineligible thereby save Oregon the money to pay for those of the poor who are judged to have a better "quality of life." It is a proposal that Jonathan Swift might have written. The attraction of the Oregon plan, of course, is that it provides health benefits to those now without medical insurance; and if Oregon is eventually allowed to go ahead, other states will follow. There is bipartisan political support for the plan, and the Oregon Medical Association has also approved it.

The increasing number of physicians and politicians around the country — convinced that money is wasted on people with a low "quality of life" — might think for a moment on the advice of the 18th-century German physician Dr. Christoph Hufeland, who was also a professor of medicine. A humanist, he wrote on Goethe and Herder as well as on medicine. Said the doctor:

"If the physician presumes to take into consideration in his work whether a life has value or not, the consequences are boundless and the physician becomes the most dangerous man in the state."

Not only the physician, but also the politician who legislates successfully to base health benefits on a person's "quality of life."

In a series of exchanges on the Oregon rationing design during a recent "MacNeil/Lehrer NewsHour," correspondent Lee Hochberg pointed out that an analysis by the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment notes that the plan — with its cutoff point of allowable ailments — fails to treat "a substantial number of medical conditions that in the absence of treatment have serious clinical consequences."

For example, pulmonologist Dr. Alan Barker of Oregon Health Sciences University cannot understand why chronic bronchitis is not qualified for Medicaid payment under the Oregon plan. Dr. Barker points out that "chronic bronchitis is clearly a treatable condition. Medication is important."

The plan covers all of the poor in the state.

Alexandria may pass on team

Man is biting dog in my hometown, Alexandria, Va., and that is always a good story. To be more accurate, aroused men and women in that tradition-rich suburb of Washington, D.C., are trying to bite two dogs. One is the governor of the commonwealth of Virginia, Douglas Wilder. The other is the fabulously wealthy, and even more fabulously avaricious entrepreneur, Jack Kent Cooke.

What's at issue may not seem all that important to some people, but it is. Others may find Alexandria downright peculiar, but it isn't. Cooke owns the Washington Redskins, who regularly draw more people to their Sunday home games than all the cathedrals in the Washington metropolitan area combined. The Redskins are the capital's civic religion, and Cooke is the money changer who benefits from their fans' (among them, me) rabid devotion. But he decided a few years ago that the stadium in which the Redskins have played for the past two decades or so was not large or fancy enough to produce the revenue a more upscale facility could crank out.

So Cooke got into a high-stakes poker game with the city of Washington, trying to extract maximum concessions for the new stadium he envisioned. When it became obvious, at least to him, that he couldn't get as much blood from the turnip as he wanted, he looked elsewhere. As the New York Giants and a clutch of other professional teams have discovered, you can keep the name even when you vacate the premises, so Cooke wasn't worried about that aspect of the situation. The "Washington" Redskins could play ball in Virginia or Maryland and still be called by their old name as easily as the Giants, who play in New Jersey.

Enter Doug Wilder, a man of tremendous promise when elected the first black governor of any American state in this century who has steadily diminished himself ever since. If he could land the Redskins for Virginia, it would be a major feather in his cap and, he reckoned, a boon for whatever community was the team's host. Instead of being the second most unpopular governor in the South, he might be transformed overnight to the most popular.

Each for his own reasons, the governor and the tycoon schemed in secret and wrought a deal that could not have been better for Cooke, less advantageous for Virginia and more outrageous as far as Alexandria's leaders are concerned. The new stadium is to be built at Potomac Yard, once a bustling railroad staging yard and now the last large tract of unused land in the area. It is an eyecore and an opportunity, one which has made more than one set of developers lust openly and lobby fervently.

But Alexandria's city government is controlled by men and women who were elected or re-elected as proponents of slow, controlled growth. The voters who put them into office earlier in the decade knew exactly where they stood on developing Potomac Yard in particular. More than Wilder, who enters the picture only because Potomac Yard is owned by the state retirement system, and certainly more than Cooke, the mayor and city council speak for the city where the "boom" of a new stadium is to be imposed. Outgunned politically and out-muscled financially, they do not intend to go gently into the future outlined by Wilder and Cooke.

All of which seems somewhat weird to other people in the metropolitan area. Among them are fans who would give their eyeteeth to be able to say their hometown was also the Redskins', businessmen who believed any professional team is good for business and developers who think the spillover from a new stadium could only stimulate other major deals. As far as they are concerned, Alexandria is committing an unnatural act.

It isn't. As more than one study has established, these megastadiums produce megabenefits for the millionaires whose teams use them under concessionary terms, psychological satisfaction to a few thousand fans lucky enough to have season tickets and a net financial loss to the communities in which they are located. When in use, they drain away police from more important duties. When not in use, which is 90 percent of the time, they stand like stranded whales in the midst of beaches of unused parking lots. Since the cities traditionally are so grateful for their presence that they structure the deals so the real beneficiaries don't have to pay taxes, the most accurate way to think of them is as high-priced welfare for the very rich.

Even if Alexandria prevails, which is not at all certain, it won't matter to Jack Kent Cooke. There's a sucker born every minute, P.T. Barnum was fond of saying, and Cooke knows it. After all, he's been dealing with Doug Wilder. Other communities will fall all over themselves for the honor of giving Cooke a risk-free way to get richer.

But it's important that Alexandria win.

They stand like stranded whales in the midst of beaches of unused parking lots.

JACK ANDERSON

Guard colonel's past haunts him

HOUSTON — He was in charge of overseeing the drug interdiction program for the Texas National Guard before being removed from that post at the request of the Customs Service.

He is currently under investigation for possible perjury, and, according to published reports, has recently been the target of a federal drug probe.

Earlier this year, he even lost his U.S. Army security clearance in connection with drug-smuggling allegations.

Despite this slew of charges and allegations, Col. Richard Brito of the Texas National Guard has played a central role in one of the Guard's most sensitive security assignments: drafting contingency plans to assist Houston police in the event that rioting breaks out at the Republican National Convention.

Was Brito the wrong man for the job?

Texas National Guard spokesman Lt. Col. Ed Komandoaky argues: "No, it has posed no problems whatsoever. ... It's been two years and no one's charged him with anything." When we asked to interview Brito, Komandoaky replied, "He's not going to speak with you or any member of the press. He does not speak to the press."

Internal National Guard documents obtained by our associate Dean Boyd show that throughout this summer Brito has played a central role in crisis planning for the convention. For example, on June 8 to June 11, Brito personally visited the California National Guard for advice on crowd control in the wake of the Rodney King riots in Los Angeles. His fact-finding mission led to a paper entitled "Support of Civil Authorities" in which he details lessons learned from California and how they might apply to Houston. He then helped draw up the final contingency plan.

Brito's past suggests that he was curiously cast for such a role. His troubles began in 1987 when U.S. Customs Service agents installed a radio transmitter on an airplane belonging to his younger brother, Billy.

Customs suspected the plane was making drug runs from Mexico, and one night followed Mario, a second Brito brother to a clandestine strip where the plane was supposed to land. Billy made two passes over the strip in his plane, smelled trouble and then flew back to Mexico. Mario got arrested on the airfield with two pistols, marijuana and over $13,000 in cash.

Ironically, during this same time, Col. Brito was running the Texas National Guard's drug interdiction program and had unlimited access to sensitive information. Two days after the arrest, Col. Brito arrived at the Grimes County, Texas, courthouse in full uniform to bail out his younger brother Mario. By 1989, both Customs and the Texas Department of Public Safety had launched probes into Col. Brito. After being questioned by a federal grand jury in October 1989, Col. Brito was subsequently relieved from his drug post, but remained in charge of plans, operations and training for the Texas Guard.

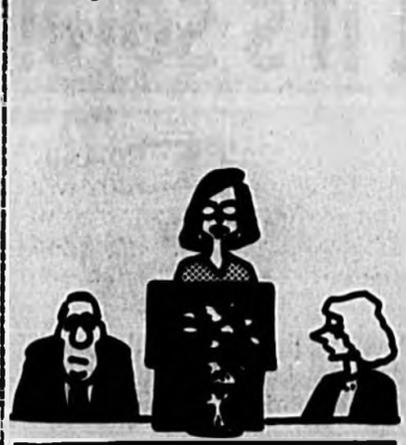

At the state trial of his brother Mario in 1990, a government witness told prosecutors that he had heard the younger Britos talk about protection they received from a brother in the military. Col. Brito, however, testified that, "The only involvement I had was bailing them out of jail. None of them involved me in any way except I bailed my brother out of jail."

The trial was punctuated by death threats directed against the district attorney, his family and investigating agents. Mario ultimately fled to Mexico.

He has recently been the target of a federal drug probe.

begin renovation of the building "right now." The county has already approved the lease.

The facility will be the largest in Florida, board member Gary Kane explained.

"Construction people are lined up and we're ready to get cranking," he said.

Bowman said a Safehouse has been needed in Seminole County for some time. Currently law enforcement issues motel vouchers to abused spouses because the closest facility is in Orange County.

"The voucher system is not a very good system. Should a victim talk to a friend or family member who in turn thinks they are helping by divulging the whereabouts of the abused spouse to the offender, other people can be put in danger. Confidentiality is a must," Bowman said. Confidentiality is the reason why the location of Safehouse will not be made public. Local law enforcement agencies will direct victims to its location.

Dramatic changes have been made in the way spouse abuse cases are handled by police agencies.

"We're seeing law enforcement writing more reports and making more arrests. When a woman contacts law enforcement, the offender is arrested rather than walked around the block," Bowman said, adding that 85 percent of the abuse cases are perpetrated by men. Safehouse will also accept the small percentage of men who are abused.

Victims under the law no longer can decide to press or decline to press charges against the offender.

"There is no option. Charges will be pressed. We've found that if you can detain a person for three days it acts as a cooling off period. When we counsel a victim, we encourage her to stay away for a minimum of three days to get the message across," Bowman said.

As a victims' advocate, Bowman said she never tells a woman to just leave and divorce an abuser. Counseling to understand the problem often salvages a relationship that has become abusive. Safehouse will offer that counseling, and as soon as possible, offer counseling for children embroiled in domestic violence.

Safehouse will cost about $1,000 per day to run. Maximum capacity will be 42 spouses and children.

Bowman said volunteers are soliciting donations, services and materials to continue the project. Safehouse is in need of an air conditioning system and a new roof. It is hoped that a new sprinkler system will be donated. Along with the county's generous donation of the building, Bowman said Florida associations of Electrical Contractors and of Drywallers have donated materials and labor to the project.

Ironically, the center for spouse abuse in Seminole County will receive funds from an unusual source once it is up and running. The $46,000 in marriage license fees collected by the county will help support Safehouse.

Should a customer's check for a water bill sent to the City be returned for insufficient funds, the city would be allowed to charge an additional $20, up from the $15 late fee now charged. Again, it would be included in the following month's bill.

When the measure was initially presented on first reading at the Aug. 3 City Commission meeting, it was approved by a unanimous vote.

The water bill ordinance is scheduled on the agenda for tonight's regular meeting of the Longwood City Commission, scheduled for 7 p.m., in the commission chambers of the City Hall, 175 W. Warren Avenue.

bringing the SHARE idea to Seminole County. Metts said the real cost of the food packages will assist many people unable to obtain food stamps and other benefits. But volunteerism is the main purpose of SHARE, said Metts.

"The primary focus of SHARE is volunteerism," said Metts. "We want people to help each other."

Metts said participants can volunteer their time helping anyone, even a neighbor unable to mow their yard or clean house.

Last week, about a half dozen of Seminole County SHARE organizers met with central Florida organizer Norma Shorter to learn how to operate the program. Once a month, food will be picked up in Orlando from the regional SHARE center and delivered to the SCVP offices at Zayre Plaza.

Each food package may contain frozen chicken quarters and other frozen and canned meats, fresh vegetables and fruit, cereals and staples. It's enough food to provide meals for one person for a week or more and has a typical grocery store value of $25 to $35.

Metts said all the details haven't been worked out yet, but the volunteer vouchers and money will be paid on one day a month and the food can be picked up on another, typically the last Saturday of the month. Metts said participants can help distribute SHARE packages to get volunteer time in for the following month.

Blue Moon Ball organized to benefit local high schools

Lake Mary and Heathrow areas have some exciting events coming up this fall and winter. The Blue Moon Ball will be the first black tie event for the Greater Lake Mary-Heathrow Chamber of Commerce. Each year scholarship money is raised for Lake Mary High School and Seminole High School students. "We hope the Blue Moon Ball will raise enough money for us to give even a greater contribution to our students in our community," said Valerie Williams, co-chairperson of this event.

Valerie Williams is a charming and dedicated person. "My personal interest in the ball is related to one of the positions I am responsible for at Arvida," Valerie said. "I work as a liaison for Arvida and the schools affiliated with our community, Heathrow, and arrange for sales associates to tour the schools and meet with the principals and staff."

Valerie stated that she keeps the "sales associates and prospective buyers informed about the schools by displaying school newsletters, students' pictures and announcements on a bulletin board in the sales center." She further commented that "during this time of budget cuts and teacher layoffs, our schools will be turning to businesses and the community for support."

The first annual Blue Moon Ball will be held this November which leaves only three months to put it all together. The event will include dinner and a 12-piece orchestra. "We are looking for sponsors for this gala event," Valerie said. "Anyone requesting information or wishes to become a sponsor, please contact Valerie Williams at 333-1400."

Some other events to look forward to this fall are:

- Corporate Challenge — a two-mile scavenger walk followed by a reggae swim party. Co-chairperson is Joe Dietz — call him at 330-0330. They need sponsors and committee members, also large and small gift donations to be used as game prizes and scavenger items. Sponsorship $250.
- Boots O & U Lake Mary style barbecue — Co-chairperson is Richard Starcher at 830-7675. They need sponsors and committee members. Sponsorship $250.
- Fantasy Night — silent and live auction.

Co-chairperson is Steve Tanzer at 330-5188. They need sponsors and committee members, also large and small gifts or multi-gift packages to be auctioned off. Sponsorship $500.

• Bookworm Fairytale Festival — co-chairperson is Ginny Coombs at 330-9007. Sponsors and committee members are needed. Also in need of donated books to be sold. Any variety of book is acceptable (adult, children, fiction, non-fiction, etc.)

If you wish to become involved with your community and its needs, please contact the co-chairperson at the given numbers.

Remodeling of country club

Residents and members of Heathrow will be pleased with the announcement that the remodeling of the country club at Heathrow is completed. They will shortly be able to see for themselves what a difference new carpeting, lights, furniture, fixtures, paint and artwork can make. The club has taken on a whole new feeling. It's more casual, light and airy and very comfortable.

Beginning Sunday, Aug. 23, the country club will feature breakfast, lunch and dinner service for residents and members.

AARP welcomes chapters on summer break

The Lake Mary Charter Chapter of AARP will meet 1 p.m. Tuesday in Lake Mary's Old City Hall, 158 N. Country Club Road.

The guest speaker will be Ellen P. Heraty, president and publisher of Florida Senior News.

The membership committee of the Lake Mary AARP Charter Chapter has listed 170 members since the chapter's inception. Last meeting on July 21, over 70 seniors attended. All seniors are invited as guests to the meetings. Any AARP members from other chapters not meeting for the summer are always welcome.

The dues is $3 annually. There are many interesting programs lined up for the fall and winter months. Meetings are the third Tuesday of each month.

For more information, call 323-1142 or 321-5666.

IN BRIEF

Lake Mary athletic physcals

LAKE MARY — The Lake Mary High School athletic department has announced that physicals for athletes have been rescheduled for tonight at 6:30 p.m. at the school.

Any student who expects to participate in any fall interscholastic athletic activity must have had a recent physical.

Also, Coach Cindy Henry has scheduled the first workout for the Lake Mary girls' volleyball team for 5:15 p.m. today while girls' cross country coach Mike Gibson said the first practice for his team will be at 5 p.m.

Church softball meeting set

SANFORD — An organizational meeting for the Sanford Fall Church Softball League will be conducted tonight at 7 p.m. at Central Baptist Church on State Road 46.

Any church interested in playing this fall should have a representative at the meeting.

Among the topics to be discussed included registration fees, team division and the length of season.

For more information, contact John Townsend at 330-4783 in the evening.

Registration for winter baseball

FIVE POINTS — Seminole PONY Baseball will conduct registration for its winter leagues on Saturday, Aug. 22, and Saturday, Aug. 29, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Five Points Complex on State Road 419.

Players between the ages of 5 and 12 can be registered for instructional play for $35. Players 13 and older can be registered for $45 to play in competitive winter leagues.

Proof of age is required for those registering for the first time with Seminole PONY Baseball. Players must be these ages by Aug. 1, 1993. Family discounts are available.

For more information, call 323-5570 and leave a message.

FAMU tickets on sale

ORLANDO — Tickets for the Florida A&M/North Carolina A&T football game to be played Saturday, Oct. 10, at the Florida Citrus Bowl went on sale Monday at Ticketmaster outlets throughout the state of Florida.

Adult game tickets are available for $15. Tickets can be ordered by phone through Ticketmaster by calling (407) 839-3900.

The weekend will begin Friday, Oct. 9, with a free pep rally in the parking lot of the Delta Orlando Resort featuring FAMU's cheerleaders and world-famous FAMU Marching 100.

Following the game Saturday will be a post-game celebration at Tinker Field, located adjacent to the Citrus Bowl. Post-game celebration tickets are $6 and can also be purchased in combination with game tickets for $20.

Greenville blanks SunRays

GREENVILLE, S.C. — Mike Kelly's two-run double highlighted a three-run, second inning as the Greenville Braves snagged a victory over the Orlando SunRays 5-0.

Ed Giovanola's bases-loaded walk brought in the third run of the frame, and the Braves added two more to widen their lead in the fourth on a 2-run single by Chipper Jones. The single extended Jones' hitting streak to 10 games.

Starter Pat Gomez, 4-0, lasted eight innings, scattering five hits, walking one and fanning six. John Henry, 8-7, took the loss for Orlando.

With the victory, Greenville upped its baseball's best record to 89-35 on the season, 40-12 on the second half. The Braves broke the 88 record of season victories set in 1991.

Orlando fell to 49-73 on the season, 20-32 on the second half.

Gant out-fuels them again

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Harry Gant out-fueled them again, stretching his mileage to the limit Sunday to win the Champion Spark Plug 400 at Michigan International Speedway.

The 52-year-old Gant, who won a race on May 31 at Dover, Del. the same way, increased his own record as the oldest driver to win a NASCAR Winston Cup stock car race.

This time, Gant, who now has 18 career victories, was able to top off his gas tank just before the halfway point in the race, during what turned out to be the final caution period of the 200-lap race on Michigan's two-mile oval.

Gant's Oldsmobile Cutlass crossed the finish line 4.94 seconds ahead of second-place Darrell Waltrip, who was also the runner-up at Dover.

FHSAA AIDS guidelines not new to local trainers

By TONY DESORMIER
Herald Sports Editor

Last week, the Florida High School Activities Association announced that it was adopting guidelines for athletic trainers, coaches and officials to be followed in treating injuries and administering first aid.

The move is a result of growing awareness concerning AIDS and comes after the association began a policy study on infectious disease two years ago.

According to a report circulated by the Associated Press, the guidelines recommend that:

- Play or practice be stopped if a player is bleeding.

- Trainers wear disposable gloves when giving first aid.

- All open wounds be covered before play or practice.

- Any blooded playing surface, such as a mat, be disinfected by someone wearing gloves.

- Players be advised not to share towels.

Association commissioner Ron Davis said the guidelines were enacted out of safety concerns.

"We wanted to inform and educate our people," he told The Fort Lauderdale News & Sun Sentinel. "We needed to dispel fears and untruths about AIDS in particular."

While the guidelines were described as valid by the athletic trainers at Seminole and Lake Mary high schools, they also fall under the realm of common sense, even if it weren't for the concern of being exposed to and contracting AIDS.

"We've been doing that (following those guidelines) at Seminole High School for quite a while," said Jim "Doc" Terwilliger. "They really haven't done anything terribly new or anything that you wouldn't be doing on your own anyway."

"For example, you always want to keep an open wound well-covered if you're playing in a game. That's just common sense to protect from bacterial infection. The only thing that's new is the protection of the trainer, of putting the gloves on."

Roger Mosure, the head trainer at Lake Mary, agreed with Terwilliger.

"That's a smart move," he said. "Pretty much, those procedures are very legitimate if you're trying to prevent the spread of AIDS."

However, Mosure did say that if an athlete suffered a serious such as an open compound fracture and was bleeding profusely, his first thought wouldn't be to put on disposable gloves.

"I don't stop to think if this particular individual may have AIDS," said Mosure. "You do what you have to do to stop the bleeding."

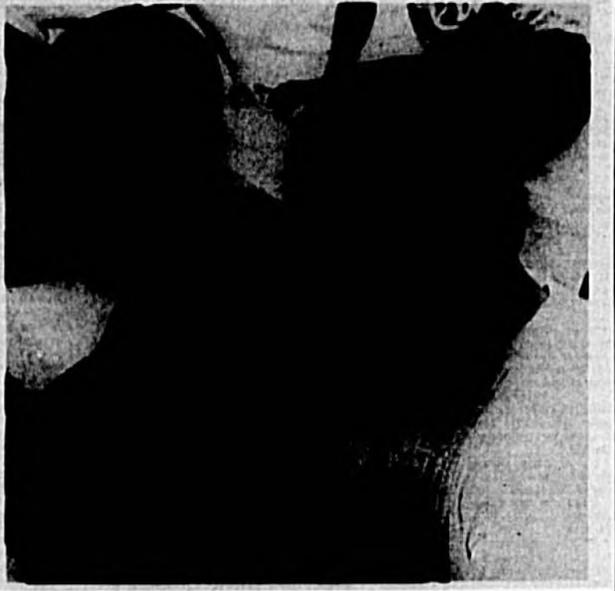

"Yes, the threat exists. And I'm putting myself at risk by not following through on the guidelines. But when a kid goes down with a compound fracture, I'm not going to make him sit there for an extra 20 or 30 seconds while I put on gloves. And you can't walk around wearing gloves all night."

Fun and games

Actually, the next few weeks will be anything but fun and games for county high school football players as they prepare for the rapidly approaching season. On Saturday, the first day that formal practices could be conducted, all six county schools worked out. At Seminole, that meant doing sprint drills for players like Sam Becker (top right) and Andre Kay and Travis Perkins (left and right, bottom right photo). Coach Scott Casco (below left) contributed his shoes to make sure no Seminole would miss out on the fun.

Survey: Majority favor sale of Giants

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — If the vote by major league team owners on the San Francisco Giants' sale and move to St. Petersburg were held today, the transaction would be approved, according to a report published Sunday.

The sale must be approved by three-fourths of the teams in the National League — 10 votes — and a majority in the American League — eight votes.

An informal survey by the San Francisco Examiner, based on interviews with major league owners, executives and other baseball personnel, found that owners of three out of 14 National League teams would vote against the deal.

In the American League, two out of 14 team owners would vote against the deal, the report said.

While a vote could take place as soon as Sept. 9-10 at the owners meeting in St. Louis, commissioner Fay Vincent has said such a quick decision is unlikely.

According to the report, the National League teams that would oppose the deal are the Colorado Rockies, the Pittsburgh Pirates and the San Diego Padres. The American League teams that would oppose the deal are the California Angels and the Texas Rangers.

On Aug. 7, Giants owner Bob Lurie announced his intention to sell the team for $117 million to Florida investors who would move the ballclub to the Florida Suncoast Dome in St. Petersburg.

City officials and Giants fans have scrambled to stop the move.

San Francisco mayor Frank Jordan is seeking investors to buy the club. He also set up a toll-free "Save Our Giants" hotline to encourage residents to call and write Vincent as a show of support.

San Francisco supervisor Angela Alioto unveiled plans late last week to build a $155 million ballpark in the downtown area, displaying an architect's rendering of the complex. Local union officials have Could sale of Giants renew ties to Sanford?

New York Giants? San Francisco Giants? St. Petersburg Giants? Do you remember the Sanford Giants?

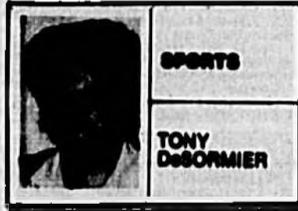

Odds are, probably not. That goes back several generations, at least previous to the one in which I was born.

But the Giants have a very real tie to the Celery City. Beginning in 1947-48, the Giants conducted a baseball school at the Municipal Airport Complex for four years. Those four springs, all the Giants' minor league teams trained in Sanford.

In a story in the Sanford Herald in March of 1948, it was estimated that the Giant organization would spend nearly $100,000 in Sanford to build eight new diamonds at the Municipal Airport Complex and to repair Municipal Park (located where the Seminole County School Board Building now stands).

Obviously, it was money well spent because in 1951, the Giants' pitchers and catchers came to Sanford, working out here for 10 days.

On Feb. 19, 1951, the Herald sports writer Joe Reichler reported, "After 10 days at this sprawling Naval training base, the batterymen will move on to St. Petersburg, joining the rest of the club there. The Giants, returning to Florida for the first time since 1948, are exchanging bases with the world champion New York Yankees for one year, the Yankees going to Phoenix, Ariz."

TONY DESORMIER

Ironically, it was that 1951 team that would go on and win the National League pennant and lose to those same New York Yankees in the World Series, four games to two.

Reichler's story continues, "Twelve members of the New York Giants baseball club, mostly pitchers and catchers, arrived in Sanford yesterday for pre-season drills.

"Mayor Fred Dwyer headed a local welcoming committee which provided transportation for the players to the Naval Air Station, where they will stay for the next two weeks."

Among the group of Giants that arrived that day are players now remembered fondly as all-time greats: Sal Maglie, Bobby Thompson, Wes Westrum and Monty Irvin. Heading the group was manager Leo Durocher. Coming in later were Whitey Lockman and team captain Alvin Dark.

Some eight months later, it would be Thompson who would hit what has become known as "The Shot Heard Round the World," a three-run home run with one out in the bottom of the ninth of the third game of a best-of-three playoff with the Brooklyn Dodgers to give the Giants a 5-4 win and the N.L. pennant.

Standing on deck when Thompson hit that home run, as any good baseball trivia expert knows, was a rookie outfielder named Willie Mays. While Mays wasn't with the Giants' parent team at the time, he did play in Sanford in 1951 with the Minneapolis Millers, one of the Giants' two Triple A farm teams at the time.

In a game played at Municipal Park on Sunday, March 18, for example, Mays was 2-for-3 with a home run, two RBI and three runs scored while playing center field for the Millers in a 7-2 win over the Ottawa Giants (the other AAA club) in an exhibition game.

The relationship with the Giants and Sanford ended some time the next year as the Giants' minor league teams did their spring training on the West Coast with the parent club.

In 1958, the Giants moved west completely, going with the Dodgers to give Major League Baseball its first two California franchises.

Now they may be headed back east. (See related story.)

I wonder... if the Giants' sale is approved to the St. Petersburg group and they are playing in the Suncoast Dome in 1993, then would they move their spring training facility as well? Wouldn't it make sense to train somewhere nearby their new home, such as Scottsdale, Ariz. (their current spring training site) is to San Francisco?

The Sanford Giants? Again?

RAINES GAUGE

Tim Raines is a Sanford native and Seminole High School graduate now playing for the Chicago White Sox. His stats are for the 1992 season in the first column, personal best season totals in the second column and current career totals (including 1992 games) in the third column.

Raines had a quiet weekend, going 0-for-3 in both the White Sox' 4-2 loss to the New York Yankees on Saturday night and in Chicago's 4-2 win Sunday night. He did manage to steal his 38th base of the season Saturday. The two teams will complete their four-game series tonight in an 8 p.m. that can be seen on cable television station WGN.

Grow vegetables in containers

GARDENING
TRICIA THOMAS

Many of us no longer have that sunny patch of land large enough for a vegetable garden, but we can still grow vegetables if we have large enough containers, a sunny location and enough space to allow for good aeration around the plants. Most types of vegetables lend themselves to container gardening. All we have to do is select varieties that can be adapted to the confined quarters of containers.

Container-grown vegetables will require a location that receives at least six hours of full sun per day and easy access to a source of water. Once these demands are met, containers can be placed anywhere — on a patio or deck, terrace, balcony, window box, garage roof or a walkway. If you have no available ground space, consider growing vegetables in hanging baskets.

The choices for containers is limitless as long as the size of the root system is taken into consideration. Medium sized containers (six inch) can sustain many shallow rooted vegetables such as herbs, lettuce, radishes and peppers, but root crops — such as beets or carrots will need larger containers to fill out to their mature size. Very large containers are required for tomatoes, squash, pole beans, and cucumbers. Half barrels or wooden tubs should work well for vegetables with large root systems.

Adequate drainage is another requirement for growing vegetables in containers. Most containers come with sufficient drainage holes, but check to be sure and add more holes if needed or make the existing holes larger. Wooden containers can have new drain holes drilled and clay or ceramic container holes can be enlarged with a masonry bit.

Clay pots are probably the most attractive containers and they come in many sizes and shapes, but clay pots are porous and dry out quickly, which means more frequent watering is required. Plastic containers with drain trays usually work best and now come in many versatile shades like gray, ivory and terracotta.

Planting soil for container gardening should be fast draining, yet provide enough water retention to keep the soil evenly moist in the root zone. A commercial mix with peat and perlite or vermiculite should satisfy both requirements. These mixes are easy to use, come in varying size bags and are free from weed seeds and soil-borne diseases. If you choose to make your own mix, use good garden top soil amended with an organic material such as peat or compost. To be sure your homemade mix is free from disease and weeds, heat it in a low oven for 1-2 hours.

Most vegetables grow as well from seed as transplanted seedlings, however, seedlings will give a more instant display. Seedlings can be started in four-inch pots six to eight weeks prior to placing in the larger containers. Watering is probably the most critical task a container gardener performs. More plants fall from improper watering than any other single cause. Check plants daily and water at least every other day during hot, dry weather. Remember that the smaller the container the more often it will need watering.

If you have never attempted container-vegetable gardening — be brave and experiment on a small scale until you get your feet wet. And if you have questions or need more information give me a call at 323-2500.

Man with half his legs is whole in mind and spirit

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter is 28 and a nurse. She took a job several thousand miles from home and has been gone nearly a year. We were hoping she'd come home last Christmas, but she said she'd come home next summer and bring her fiance. (She had written about a young man she'd fallen in love with, describing his "beautiful attitudes, brilliant mind and outstanding character.")

Now we know why she didn't bring him home for Christmas. He's an amputee! He lost both legs just below the knee when he stepped on a mine in Vietnam. We learned this yesterday from a letter she wrote us.

We are heartstruck. She's such a beautiful girl and could easily get a whole man. Abby, how do parents adjust to knowing their daughter will spend the rest of her life caring for an invalid?

HEARTBROKEN PARENTS
DEAR PARENTS: What makes you think he's an invalid? You would be amazed how well some people can manage on artificial limbs. There is no reason to be heartbroken. If he's "whole" enough for her, it says a great deal for her values. There could be a completely beautiful and fulfilling marriage.

READES: Following are some of the responses I received soon after publishing the above letter. I think you will be as moved as I was:

DEAR ABBY: What a coincidence! My husband also stepped on a mine in Vietnam and lost both legs. After spending a year in the hospital, Gary went to law school, where he was elected president of the student bar association. His other honors are too numerous to mention here. He is a partner in a prominent law firm and is very active in community affairs. He plays golf, dances, drives a car, and does everything every other normal, healthy man does. He's a good provider, and we have a lovely home and three healthy children. The youngest two were born after the accident.

Gary is more "whole" than some men will ever be.
GARY'S WIFE, ORLANDO

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Heartbroken Parents": About 10 years ago a gentleman at a party asked me to dance. I recall thinking that I had danced with better dancers. That is all.

When I got to know him, I was amazed to learn that he was brought up in the slums of Philadelphia, and had lost both legs above the knees under a freight train when he was 12. He refused to let this defeat him, and through hard work and determination he became hugely successful. He married a charming, intelligent woman, and they have wonderful children. This man has earned the admiration and respect of all who know him. Today he is the president of a thriving company, and he walks tall on two artificial limbs.

I would say he is not only a "whole" man; he is a man and a half.

ONE FRIEND IN L.A.

DEAR ABBY: A year ago, the members of the American Bar Association's Section of Real

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Property, Probate and Trust Law wondered what we could do to help the people on the waiting list for organ and tissue donations. As science and technology progresses, there seems to be a greater need for organ and tissue donors. At any one time, there are at least 5,000 people waiting for corneal transplants so they can see again, and approximately another 27,000 waiting for other organ transplants.

At our winter meeting, the entire American Bar Association adopted a resolution urging all attorneys to raise (when appropriate) the subject of organ and tissue donations with clients, and to provide donation forms to those who indicate an interest in making a donation.

As part of the resolution, we urged the legal community to coordinate its efforts with the medical community, including physicians, nurses, paramedics, hospitals, organ and tissue donor registries (in particular, The Living Bank — the only national multi-organ and tissue donor registry), and others involved in transplantation.

We believe that as attorneys we can help educate the public about the need for organ and tissue donations, and the process for registering a commitment to be a donor. Those interested in becoming a donor may register, without cost, with The Living Bank, P.O. Box 6725, Houston, Texas 77265.

DAVID ALAN RICHARDS,
CHAIR, ABA SECTION OF REAL PROPERTY, PROBATE AND TRUST LAW, CHICAGO
DEAR MR. RICHARDS: I am printing your letter, hoping to recruit more organ and tissue donors.

I want to add here that contrary to some rumors my readers may have heard, organ donors (and their families) are never charged for the surgery involved.

I have carried a donor card for 22 years, and feel that there is nothing I could leave after my death that would be of greater value.

DEAR ABBY: One of your readers recently pointed out an inaccuracy in a prior letter: David Rice Atchison was not president of the United States for one day. The delay between the end of the term of one president and the swearing in of his successor was of no consequence.

It was correctly observed that the successor automatically became president immediately upon expiration of the prior term.

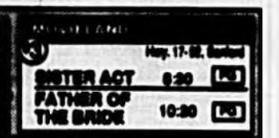

The same reader went on to say that Secretary of State Dean Rusk did not become president for the 90 minutes between the death of President Kennedy and the swearing in of then-Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson. This statement implies that the secretary of state is next in line to be president after the vice president.

It should be noted that federal law provides that the speaker of the House of Representatives becomes president if neither the president nor vice president is serving. When Kennedy was assassinated, the speaker of the House was John W. McCormack of Massachusetts.

GARY L. CORLEW,
CREST HILL, ILL.

DEAR MR. CORLEW: Thank you for pointing out the correct chain of command. Apparently, then-Secretary of State Alexander Haig was also of the opinion that he was next in line for the presidency when he, upon hearing that President Reagan had been shot, rushed to the microphone and announced, "I'm in charge here!"

(Problems? Write to Dear Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 60468, Los Angeles, Calif. 90060. All correspondence is confidential.)

Thanks for helping

Understanding dangers of kinds of skin cancer

DEAR DR. GOTT: From a recent column of yours, I learned that you are not too timid to be critical of your medical colleagues if you believe the situation warrants it. For that reason, I'm writing to see if you can inform me of an unpleasant suspicion I'm harboring. Recently a young staff writer for our local newspaper did a series of features about skin cancer. She stated that malignant melanoma is the "deadliest kind of skin cancer." Are any of the others deadly?

DEAR READER: Malignant melanoma is a deadly skin cancer because it often burrows deeply and may have already spread by the time it is discovered and removed. The incidence of melanoma is rapidly rising, probably because of the diminishing ozone level above the earth and the increasing strength of the sun's ultraviolet radiation. Other forms of skin cancer may be as deadly as melanoma, but the latter is often judged to be the "deadliest" because it is common and more people are getting it. I believe your staff writer was correct. Melanoma is a brown or black, rapidly growing, painless skin lesion that may occur in areas hidden from view as well as on exposed skin surfaces.

DEAR DR. GOTT: With the frightening increase of tuberculosis now, what procedure should be taken when a TB skin test reads doubtful positive, chest X-ray is negative and there are no other symptoms?

DEAR READER: A doubtfully positive skin test should, in my opinion, be repeated using a stronger skin test solution. However, even if the second skin test were positive (indicating that you were probably exposed to tuberculosis in the past), I would continue to monitor the situation without treatment. Your normal chest X-ray is pretty good evi-

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
For several years Edith McMullin ran the novice games at the North American Bridge Championships. Here "novice" means inexperienced, not incompetent. Drawing on her experience, and with the help of world champion Mike Lawrence, McMullin decided to produce a magazine specially for the duplicate-bridge neophyte. It is called the 0-20, 09er and 299er Newsletter. Quite a mouthful, but the numbers refer to masterpoint brackets. (In tournament bridge, you don't win prizes; you collect masterpoints.) The instruction is in a light style, with amusing cartoons. To subscribe for 12 issues, send a $30 check, payable to Edith McMullin, to 3012 Memory Lane, Silver Spring, MD 20904. Today's hand is taken from the first issue, published in December 1980. Sitting West, defending against four spades, you lead the club jack: four, two, king. Declarer plays the diamond two and wins the trick with dummy's queen. Next comes the spade queen to your king. How do you continue?

You must count declarer's points. It seems that he has the K-Q of clubs, or partner would have been more enthusiastic at trick one. South must have the A-K of diamonds, or partner would have won trick two. And declarer has the spade ace, since that spade play surely was a finesse. That is 16 points accounted for, so partner must have the heart ace. If you switch to the king and another heart, with luck you will get a heart ruff on the third round of the suit to defeat the contract.

Readers are invited to send card-play questions to Phillip Alder, in care of this newspaper.

They can be answered only through the column.

HOROSCOPES

By Bernice Bode Cool
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Aug. 18, 1982

A rise in status in your present field of endeavor looks very likely for the year ahead. Begin now to prepare yourself for this possibility.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A similar situation to one that caused you aggravation recently might be operative again today. This time, however, you won't make the same mistakes. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Occasionally, you have rather remarkable hunches regarding the outcome of material events. Don't ignore your intuition today; it could be quite accurate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) There is justification at this time for your feelings of hope and expectation. This is a promising period for you to turn your dreams into realities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're in a good achievement cycle at this time, capable of accomplishing what you set your mind to. Establish objectives today that are meaningful and rewarding.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be a keen observer today of those you associate with, especially those who you feel are successful. What you learn can be effectively used in your circumstances.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't resist change today; shifting conditions are likely to benefit you, more than others, in the long run - even though they may be the ones who initiate them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Associates might be more imaginative than you are today. But your ace in the hole will be your natural instinct for discerning what is workable from what isn't.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There are strong indications you might be able to generate a greater yield from a source that is presently providing you with income. The discovery could occur today.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Everyone involved will have a more enjoyable time today if they delegate you chairman of social activities. You'll instinctively know what's fun for all.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Something you thought would be difficult to conclude looks like it is going to work out much better than you had anticipated. Keep this incident in mind whenever you begin to think negatively.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try to associate today with individuals you know from experience to be very good at helping you expand your ideas and plans. They could prove to be a big help.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Give priority to a matter today which you feel has profitable possibilities. The aspects indicate you might pull off something impressive.
