Big Motor Operates Smoothly

So perfectly is the huge diesel motor at the Sanford Water Plant balanced that four coins, a penny, dime, nickel and quarter have been balanced on their edges for 36 hours without falling or moving. The big motor, on which the coins are balanced, has been in use for 18 years, according to John D. Abrahams, engineer at the local water plant. The engine is a 100-horsepower motor which runs so smoothly that the floor of the building at the water plant do not tremble or shake while the motor is in operation. Abrahams said that the motor runs 15 out of every 24 hours and is used to supply water to the Sanford distribution system. Dave Newman, Field Engineer for Robert M. Angus & Associates of Jacksonville, consulting engineers for the City of Sanford, who has been in the City off and on for three years planning the water and sewer system, said yesterday, "I think Mr. Abrahams and his staff should be highly complimented on the perfect maintenance of this motor." Newman is at present conducting a five day test, which was completed at noon today, on the filling of the two water tanks used to supply Sanford's water users. "The coins balanced on this motor are a significant of the perfect balance and condition of the big diesel engine," Newman said. Abrahams, who says that he will be employed at the water plant for 21 years on the ninth day of May this year is assisted by Chuck Pavlic, Ed Williamson and Julian Williamson.

River Rededication Ceremonies Sunday

The Florida River Cruise's boat "The Nautican" will begin its regular schedule of trips up the St. Johns River following gigantic ceremonies Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Notables from over the entire State of Florida are expected to be here for the occasion when the St. John's River, at Sanford, is rededicated the "The Nile of the Americas". On hand for the event will be the co-operators of the Florida River Cruises, W. R. Kemp of Orlando and Richard Soder of Winter Park. The Seminole High School band will play for the ceremonies which officials say will get underway promptly at the 3 o'clock starting time. Also scheduled for the occasion is a pageant that will be presented by Seminole High School Glee Club members under the direction of Miss Ollie Reese Whittle. Coming to Sanford for the St. John's River rededication will be a group of Seminole Indians from Silver Springs who will probably find it strange, even in these modern times, to be riding a 100-foot pleasure boat instead of the usual birch bark canoe that their ancestors used along the wide winding river. Representing the City of Sanford will be Mayor F. D. Scott who will greet the huge crowd coming to Sanford for the event. Mayors from cities in a radius of 75 miles of Sanford, along with officials from the Chambers of Commerce in the same area, have been invited here for the initial run of "The Nautican". The big boat, carrying 250 passengers, complete with dance floor, snack bar, and a glass enclosed deck for cool or inclement weather, will be skippered by Captain J. R. Oliver with a capable crew of engineer and purser. Ceremonies getting the big pleasure boat underway will take place at the Sanford Pier where "The Nautican" will dock each day.

Guided Tour Is Planned

Trustees Board Holds Meeting "Because of the cooperation of all those concerned with the construction and preparation of the new Seminole Memorial Hospital, we have found it feasible to hold our open house reception on January 29th and we will probably be able to receive patients on Feb. 1, contingent upon the arrival of equipment and supplies." T. E. Tucker, chairman, told the Board of Trustees last night. The meeting, held in the Board Room of the new hospital, was held to discuss the opening date and the hours that the hospital would be open for visitors during the two days set aside for the open house. Sunday afternoon, Jan. 29, visitors will be allowed to tour the hospital by a guided route, from 1 to 6 p.m. and on the next day, for those who did not have an opportunity to see the facilities of the million dollar hospital plant, the tour would be conducted again, from 2 to 5 o'clock. Tucker emphasized that there is a possibility that the hospital would receive patients on February 1 if equipment and supplies arrived to take care of the necessary supplies and needs of the patients. However, in planning the move, he called for volunteer help to move the patients, equipment, and supplies from the former Seminole Memorial Hospital to the new Seminole Memorial Hospital. Plans for the volunteers and those needed are not yet complete.

"The past year was the best in the history of the Sanford Atlantic National Bank," R. J. Bauman, president, told the bank's Board of Directors at their annual meeting held Tuesday. Individual deposits of our bank show an increase of $832,000, he said, with an overall increase of $239,383.96. Pointing out to the Board of Directors, prior to the election of officers for 1936, Bauman said the loans made by the Sanford Atlantic National Bank increased from a previous year's total of $2,604,484.91 to $3,231,205.74 in 1935. The entire slate of officers were re-elected at the bank's annual meeting with J. W. Shands as Chairman of the Board; R. J. Bauman, President; R. F. Mann, vice president; R. W. Deane, cashier; O. C. In summarizing the year's successful outcome Bauman told the Board of Directors that "1935 was a good year with us and looking forward to the future, 1936 should be even better with the increase in population and the better economic conditions." "Due to the vast improvements we made in the bank's facilities during 1934," Bauman said, "we realize the 1935 increase with a very nice increase in the number of new accounts and volume of business." "Our Christmas Club for 1935," said Bauman, "has shown a decided increase in the number of accounts." Pointing to the other facilities the bank's president said that "the walk-up window continues to be very popular with the average number of customers using this facility being about 200 each day." Local Cooperation In Festival To Get Underway Jan. 19

The Seminole County cooperation in the Florida Products Festival will get underway Jan. 19 and continue through the 28th, according to Ralph Moore of the Florida Development Commission, who was in Sanford yesterday to meet with the Chamber of Commerce committee which will head up the campaign here. Ralph Austin Smith, chairman of the committee, Bob Kilvan, and James A. Wright, members, and Forrest Brackridge, manager of the Seminole County Chamber of Commerce met with Moore to complete plans for the local campaign. There are hundreds of items manufactured right here in your community, Moore told the committee. Grocery stores numbering over 1,500 in Florida, banks, and schools will participate in the gigantic ten-day campaign designed to inform Florida citizens of the importance of Florida products and the part they play in the daily life of the Sunshine State community. Plans were discussed for local displays and publicity for the event as well as ways and means to gather the material necessary to create the displays. The Florida Products Festival gets underway following a proclamation issued by Governor Leroy Collins, it reads: "WHEREAS, there is a need for more widespread knowledge of the diversity and excellence of Florida products; and "WHEREAS, there is ample justification for the development of a strong sense of pride in Florida products; and "WHEREAS, the support of Florida products will substantially increase the growth and prosperity of the State and its citizens; and "WHEREAS, today at least sixty (60) per cent of the retail sales dollar spend in Florida is leaving the State, and there exists a challenging opportunity to reduce this percentage; and "WHEREAS, the Florida Development Commission, recognizing the continuing need for a program promoting Florida products, has given leadership in sponsoring an annual state-wide event to promote and encourage the expansion and development of markets for Florida products and in assisting and coordinating the efforts of a general, organizations, and groups within the State in planning and carrying out this promotion: "NOW, THEREFORE, I, LE ROY COLLINS, by virtue of the authority vested in me as Governor of the State of Florida, do hereby proclaim the period of January 19-28, 1936, as FLORIDA PRODUCTS FESTIVAL in Florida, and urge the business firms and information media of the State and the citizens of Florida to cooperate during this period in the promotion of Florida products."

Plans Approved For Construction Of Church Building

Final plans for the construction of a church building for the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer were approved last night at a meeting of the congregation. The plans, prepared by the Sanford architectural firm of Burton and Rogers, were recommended to the congregation by a building committee headed by J. G. Jorgenson. Only two steps remain to be completed before the actual building of the new Lutheran Church here. The plans must further be approved by the Architectural Board of the Georgia-Florida District of the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod and bids must be received and accepted. The Lutheran Church of the Redeemer was originally formed in Sanford on Mother's Day 1933 and is at present holding its services in the Yacht Club. The Rev. Phillip Schlessmann is pastor of the congregation. Officers were elected for the year Jan. 15, 1936 to Jan. 14, 1937. Re-elected to serve as president of the congregation was J. Marion Hartman Sr., Jerry Senkarik was elected vice-president; Dean Taylor, secretary; Henry Thurston, treasurer; John Senkarik, financial secretary; John Schmidt, assistant financial secretary; and David Green, head usher. A board of Deacons was formed for the congregation and the president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer were named to the board for 1936. The election of officers was made on the recommendation of a nominating committee when a full slate of officers was submitted for approval of the congregation. J. G. Jorgenson was chairman of the nominating committee.

Milwee Suggests Transfer Of Eighth Grade To Pinecrest

The Seminole County Superintendent of Schools, R. T. Milwee, yesterday told the members of the Board of Education that "after consulting with the Supervisory Staff of the State and County, and the principals of the schools concerned, he should like to recommend that the 8th grade at Sanford Junior High School be transferred to Pinecrest School at the end of the first semester, Jan. 20, 1936, and that the overcrowded conditions at the Southside Primary School and the Sanford Grammar School be relieved by sending some of their children to Pinecrest School. He stated that the enrollment of the schools had reached the approximate figures predicted for two years hence, therefore the new Junior High could not accommodate satisfactorily all of the 7th and 8th grade children enrolled at the present time since this growth with the increased enrollment of the city elementary schools must be absorbed at Pinecrest. By moving the Eighth Grade more space will be made available for conducting a better program for the Seventh Grade children remaining at the old Junior High. The Superintendent emphasized that this was only a temporary measure for the last semester of this school year, but he was thankful that we still have the old Junior High to use, thus keeping the children out of double sessions."

The meeting, held at the church, 24th St. and Park Ave., was opened by the Rev. J. B. Root, minister and the Rev. Fred P. Ensminger, associate pastor. TO GUIDE...AND TO MEASURE...

A ruler... the humblest of instruments! Yet it meets two tremendously important needs. It guides... giving man a straight, sure rule by which to draw his lines and sketch his plans. And it measures... showing man where to begin, and where to end, proving the dimensions of his work. That which the simple ruler does in the physical realm of life is the work of the Church in the spiritual realm. For every man's life is like a blank sheet of paper, until, by his own living, he places upon it the lines which give it meaning and character. The Church is our guide... giving us the tried and sure truths by which we can live... pointing us to the straight and unwavering paths which lead to God. And the Church is our measure... showing us the revealing and ending of all spiritual achievement, the beginning and ending of all spiritual achievement, the perfect dimensions of life. Are you letting the Church meet these tremendous needs in your life?

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Youngsters Learn Important Lesson In Making Sacrifices

Here's a very late story about Christmas. It won't make the world, by any means. But who is to say it might not move it a very little bit in the right direction?

The story was carried in one of the big national newspapers. It was about a class of first grade children in a big city school who were going to have candy canes. The youngsters decided, freely, that instead they would donate the money to the fund for needy people. So they sent in the money—$1.50.

Now, you can't buy very much with $1.50. But the youngsters were giving in the best spirit of the world. They were making a sacrifice for others—a little sacrifice.

Teen-Age Road-e-o

The Teen-Age Road-e-o is a national safety program sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Here in Sanford and Seminole County, the competition to determine the best drivers got underway yesterday out at Seminole High School under the direction of Donald Stamm, chairman of the Seminole County Junior Chamber of Commerce Road-e-o committee and the Florida State Highway Patrol Trooper in this area T. Mark Mack.

We know that there will be some wonderful examples of safe driving displayed in this contest between girls and boys.

Maybe there is a possibility that some of the older folks who scoot around the city streets, schools, and byways practically two wheels taking part in the contest.

Instead of using the streets for racetracks, examples of complex passing, ignoring stop signs and traffic markers, folks should be practicing just exactly what the youngsters are displaying.

The examples set on the streets and highways are bad ones to pass along to the young boys and girls who are displaying their interest in being better than others in safe driving.

TODAY'S BIBLE VERSE

"Let us not be desirous of vainglory, provoking one another, envying one another."—Galatians 5:26.

Inside Washington

WASHINGTON—Two members of the House of Representatives are somewhat upset over what they consider undesirable recognition accorded to the Russian. The Soviets received considerable favorable publicity when they contributed $25,000 to the American flood relief appeal.

Rep. Frank T. Bow (R), Ohio, was irked at what he regarded as "a cold and calculating investment to promote their new line." So he conducted a little investigation of his own. This is what he found.

Total contributions from abroad came to $405,654, and the $25,000 from a big country like Russia looked pretty puny compared with the $100,000 from the Dominican Republic and an equal amount by that small country's former President Trujillo. Other contributions included $50,000 from Australia, $45,380 from Bermuda and $25,000 from Honduras.

Rep. Frank Thompson (D), New York, was pleased to note the sharp tone of criticism by a New York music critic on his return from a European tour with the New York Philharmonic Symphony orchestra.

The musical aggregation went abroad under sponsorship of the President's Emergency Fund.

Under such auspices, the critic said, the orchestra played entirely too much Russian music. He said that aside from the usual "classics" the only major works played were by Prokofiev and Shostakovich, topped off with an encore by Kavalevsky.

Foreign Affairs—You can look for Democrats to take some luster, if not roundhouse, swings during the coming election campaign at the Eisenhower administration's stewardship of American foreign policy.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said recently he would welcome constructive criticism, but he added that American-style politicking could have an adverse effect on the administration's conduct of foreign affairs.

Despite Dulles' statement, it seems certain that the Democrats will take some potshots at the secretary himself and at what they consider to be weak spots in the administration's foreign program.

The tip-off came recently when Senator John Sparkman (D), Alabama said the Democrats would not allow the Republican national committee, or its chairman, Leon ard W. Hall, or the administration to tell them what they could discuss in the campaign.

Adlai E. Stevenson, announced candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, has already criticized the State department's handling of the Middle Eastern situation, and has proposed a United Nations border patrol in the Israeli-Egyptian dispute.

In the course of his remarks, Sparkman, like Stevenson, pleaded for "moderation." However, it remains to be seen whether other Democrats will hew to this line.

Democrats—Democratic presidential hopefuls and politicians are just as anxious as the Republicans to hear President Eisenhower's decision on whether or not to run again in 1956.

An Eisenhower ticket, if the President wants it, would make it harder for Adlai Stevenson to get the Democratic nomination, because he was Ike's victim in 1952. However, if Mr. Eisenhower does not run, Stevenson appears to be by far the strongest man the Democrats have—and the fact he lost once would be cast aside by many political leaders.

Long-Term Plans Are Stabilizing

NEW YORK (AP)—Long-term planning by big and little business is becoming a prime stabilizer in the national economy. It helps offset the day-by-day disquieting turns—like a break in stock prices or a downturn in auto sales and home building.

None of the uncertainties—not even those connected with the election—have changed so far the plans of business to spend a whopping 74 billion dollars for new plant and equipment in the first three months of this year. This is 14 billion more than business spent in the January, February and March quarter of booming 1955.

The switch in business thinking to long-term planning which ignores the short-term ups and downs of the business cycle has been one of the significant trends since World War II.

This may not prevent swings in the business cycle but it goes a long way toward moderating the peaks and valleys.

You can see it in the expansion programs of the steel and oil industries. Steel expansion plans are based on the long-term estimate of demand quite as much as on the present near capacity production and big order backlog.

Some expect the present heavy demand to moderate in the second half of 1956, and production to fall below present capacity. But steel men say the industry must have more capacity in the next few years.

Most of the companies have announced expansion plans a few of them: Inland, 260 million dollars; Jones & Laughlin, 250 millions; National, 200 millions; Republic, 150 millions.

The oil industry, on the other hand, has more production capacity than it is using at present in spite of the increased sale of its products year after year. But spending plans aimed at finding and producing more oil and at increasing refining capacity are extended well into the future.

Example: Socony-Mobil's plan to spend 334 million dollars this

HAL BOYLE

Many White Collar Men Forgotten

NEW YORK (AP)—Curbstone reflections of a pavement Plato: Many a white collar worker today believes he has become civilization's biggest sucker, the forgotten man of the 20th Century.

His voice is relatively unheard in the land. Few politicians bother to ask his views or explore his plight. The only people who seek him out are bill collectors, and it is his cash, not his charms, that draws them.

Let us get out our crying towel and listen to the woes of a typical member of the paper clip brigade, which run about as follows:

"Every other class in America seems to get something special from the government except the white collar class. Why are we overlooked? When do we get our turn at the public trough?"

"They talk about a soil bank for farmers. How about a fund to pay for our soiled white collars?"

"Why can't Congress at least vote us some help under the foreign aid program? Certainly no group has been more foreign to government aid than the white collar class."

There is at least an ounce of truth within this pound of bitterness. Farmers have a lobby. Veterans have a lobby. Manufacturers have a lobby. The unions have a lobby. So do the railroads, the utilities, the airlines, the shipping interests. Even postmen, schoolteachers, toy makers and amateur bird watchers have their lobbies.

About the only two groups in America who don't have a lobby are white collar workers and widows. They remain largely unorganized and therefore, perhaps, unrepresented. Since they cannot punish a politician, why should he worry about them?

Time has passed the white collar man by. That white collar, once a badge of pretended gentility, has become more of a symbol of faceless nonentity. It no longer pays off at the pay window.

It used to be the guys in overall who stood in line at the loan office seeking to borrow money. Today it's the guys in the dirty-white collars.

The average white collar worker now is the greatest prisoner of the installment plan and the finance company debts go with his daily bread.

If he has to fly to see his sick mother, he has to borrow the money. If he takes a vacation trip, he first has to float a loan.

If he needs a new car, he first has to borrow enough to buy a new suit in order to look presentable enough to persuade a finance company to advance him the dough to make the down payment on the automobile.

He is in hock up to his eyeballs—for everything from his furniture to the fillings in his teeth. At least he claims he is.

And he feels he fights his personal emergencies alone. The federal government shows no signs of creating a new Cabinet post, "Secretary of the White Collar Class."

The white collar man is haunted not only by his present predicament but by fears for the future. He is afraid automation scientists will dream up new and more efficient business machines that will do away with his very job, turning him into a refugee from progress.

The white collar has lost its prestige. The engineer is the hero of our times. And many an office peasant now wishes that, instead of wearing a white collar, he had been born with a slide rule in his mouth.

Where is the man on a white horse who will lead the white collar class back to its old security? He is nowhere in sight. Alas, even white horses are getting scarce.

Why buy a truck in the dark?

If you buy a new truck after looking at only one make, it's like making a deal in the dark. You can't be sure of getting the most for your money.

A smarter way to buy is to "spotlight" real truck value—weigh and compare competitive claims with these Dodge truck facts:

★ Most standard V-8 horsepower of all leading makes— $\frac{1}{2}$ -ton through $3\frac{1}{2}$ -ton range. You'll get faster trips—more work done with DODGE.

★ Shortest turning radius. You'll park more easily, wheel through traffic quicker with DODGE.

★ Biggest cabs, with biggest wrap-around windshields. You'll enjoy roomier comfort, safer vision with DODGE.

★ Highest payload capacities... pick-ups providing up to 22% more payload than others. You'll haul bigger, more profitable loads with DODGE.

★ Prices down with the lowest. Comparative facts show that, feature for feature and dollar for dollar, the real value is DODGE.

Next truck you buy, don't deal in the dark. Turn a bright light on the facts—see Dodge before you buy.

The home of Mrs. Francis E. Roumillat Jr., was the scene of a lovely after-dinner coffee and miscellaneous shower Tuesday evening when Mrs. Roumillat and Mrs. George Weber entertained for Miss Dilon Baker, bride-elect of Lt. David Ellis.

A wishing well, containing the gifts, from which was suspended a silver bucket on a white satin rope, was placed next to the sunken garden in the large living room. Besides the numerous living plants in the garden was a beautiful purple orchid in bloom. On the mantle was an arrangement of white carnations and pom poms.

The dining table was overlaid with a white linen cloth with the central arrangement being an attractive piece of drift wood holding a double swing with a miniature bridal couple seated. This was flanked by tall burning tapers. Mrs. O. L. Broussard, grandmother of the bride-elect, poured from a silver coffee service.

Those attending were the honoree, her mother, Mrs. W. E. Baker, grandmother, Mrs. Broussard, Mrs. R. E. True, Mrs. Raymond Ball, Mrs. M. L. The basketball game between New Smyrna and Sanford took place in the gym of SHS 2:30 Thursday. The score, 78-34, was in New Smyrna's favor. We put up a big fight though.

Attention: Stamp day was changed from Tuesday to Monday so be sure kids and remember to get your stamps Monday.

Mrs. Wagner, the state supervisor of the lunch program, visited the SHS classes to talk to the Home Ec. girls. A film was shown to the girls and Mrs. Wagner gave a talk on nutrition. It was "very inspiring" and everyone enjoyed it very much.

The underclass men (Juniors) are planning a big affair for the Junior-Senior Prom. It's going to be held at the Mayfair with an orchestra and all the trimmings.

Tra-la-la... the school dance band is an organization which, up until now, we have not heard much from... but, since they have three performances coming up in the near future, it is fitting that we at SHS should hear more about them.

Thursday night, Joe Fisher was interviewed on the subject, "The SHS Dance Band" and later on the band itself played a very beautiful number called "Pete Kelly's Blues." All this took place over WTKR on the ten o'clock radio program which starts at 7 p. m. This is an up and coming program and now my word a very popular one. Keep your ears pinned to the radio.

Dick Worrall has been seen around the office every second period. What's so interesting there Dick? It couldn't be the scenery could it? Helen Hampton is a cute gal... watch your step.

Who's this cute dish wandering around school now-a-days boy? Take notice guys, cause its Denise deFallo "Denny" for short. Her favorite past time is bending ashtrays. She also collects them... interesting hobby isn't it?

The teenage driving school took place yesterday morning in back of the school. Quite a few of the students took part in it, and from my personal opinion it was a lot of fun. The written test was held this morning. Winners will be announced at a later date. Me? I knocked all the tennis balls down but one... oh well.

Fun Veno is a year older as of this coming Saturday. A party is to be given in her honor. Congratulations to you Isa on your 10th birthday.

Since the six lane highway has caused congestion, steps for the students safety are underway. A patrolman will be on hand in direct traffic on all school affairs when the traffic is heavy. The students have been asked to park across the street from the school so they won't have to be cut through. We appreciate it and will be glad to abide by the rules in future.

Marriage
Miss Elsie Grace Faron of DeBary, and Frank T. Faron of Aquabogue, N. Y., were married last Friday at the Methodist church of Enterprise. The Rev. Robert H. Carr officiated. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Brenner attended them. The young Perkos are honeymooning in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. James Richards who have been doing a deluxe Do It Yourself job of building their own home for two years entertained 80 guests at an At Home at the beginning of the year. With suitable ceremonies they laid a time capsule containing family archives, a yearly newspaper, a Time magazine cover with Gov. Collins picture (to give it contemporary touch) and stories of the family achievements from 1837.

On four acres overlooking Lake Monroe the Richards home is a sturdy built, with known modern convenience, even to a TV so constructed that it swings easily through a wall, thus serving two rooms. Fireplaces center the living rooms; a suite for guests is beautifully decorated. "In five hundred years someone might wish to know who first lived here," smiled Mrs. Richards, "so when they rebuild they will find our time capsule."

Party at Rock Springs
Tuesday the following people enjoyed a picnic party at Rock Springs park. Mr. and Mrs. John Lota, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Dockray, Mr. and Mrs. W. The DeBary Shuffleboard club held a night club party recently on Plantation Road. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. James Valentine, Mr. and Mrs. George Lusignan, Dr. and Mrs. Chester Smith, Mr. and Mrs. James Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sellers, Mr. and Mrs. Gaston Crosby, Mr. and Mrs. Ewald Michelsen, Mr. and Mrs. A. Mednyk, Mr. and Mrs. Chris Butler, Mr. and Mrs. W. Ogden and Mr. and Mrs. David Rothechild.

French Movie Maker's Comment Draws Loud Feminine Protests

LONDON (AP)—A complaint by French movie maker Rene Clair, the high cost of living is ruining love—even in France—brought a flood of feminine objections today.

Clair, who has made millions out of his films about love, mused over the state of the art during a recent interview here.

"When I was 17," sighed the 37-year-old movie maker, "I had a little bachelor's attic up under a Paris roof. Here I could allow myself a love life, but today no young man could afford such a place."

It was suggested that no young Frenchman would be stopped by such a thing as not having a roof over his love affair.

"Ah, my friend," said Clair, "you are wrong. You forget the French love of comfort. The young man would not mind, but his lover would usually be a woman of 35. She would never like to be loved outdoors. When they see 35 and over they just don't like it."

That did it. The girls leveled their sights on Clair.

"Nonsense," said 30-year-old Shirli Conway, an actress. "Indoors or outdoors—it makes no difference at any age provided the woman is in love."

"Truth is that before 35 a woman is shy about necking. But, I think it's much more romantic in the open air when the stars are shining and the night is warm."

Said novelist Daphne du Maurier:

"Put the age up to 45 and I might agree with him—but not at 35."

Avis Scott, 30, film actress and TV star said: "Why, out of doors is a splendid place for romance. If a woman really needs comfort with her love he can't really be in love with her man."

Clair refused to even discuss the question of how an American woman might look on outdoor love-making.

"Americans are afraid of love," he said.

MOTOR MAIDS

Courteous Police Officers Promote Safety Program

When a police officer in Grose Pointe Woods, Mich., gives a motorist a ticket, the objective is to win a supporter for the city's safety program.

The officer usually succeeds. Proof of that lies in the fact that this suburban city of 18,000 placed seventh in the nation last year when the National Safety Council ranked cities of over 10,000 population on traffic safety. Not one traffic fatality occurred there last year, and only one in the past seven years.

"We feel that the courtesy of our officers in enforcing the law is one of the important safety factors that gave us a top ranking," stated Police Director Vern C. Bailey when I talked to him recently.

"Our citizens take pride in the force of fine officers patrolling the city in shining two-tone blue cars," he explained. "When a motorist gets a ticket, he usually thanks the officer for drawing attention to some unsafe practice."

Noise Is Banned
A city ordinance prohibits the use of Hollywood mufflers and other noisy equipment sometimes preferred by teen-agers.

"These are unsafe because speed is necessary to get the loud roar the boys like," states Director Bailey.

Beginning drivers must attend traffic school before obtaining a license. Young traffic violators are often returned for additional schooling before regaining their licenses.

Citizens of Grose Pointe Woods have the security of knowing that they live in a safe community. How does your community measure up?

If there is a need for improvement, you might help fill that need by letting your community know how the job is done in Grose Pointe Woods, one of the safest little cities in America.

Police officers visit schools regularly for talks illustrated by films and educational pamphlets, designed to impress children with the need for caution when crossing streets.

Yearly bicycle inspections at schools teach youngsters the importance of riding their bikes safely and keeping them in good condition.

Strict enforcement of traffic and speed regulations keep motorists alert to the need for sensible driving practices.

Along with courtesies, other more forceful measures contributed to the Grose Pointe Woods safety success story:

Parking prohibited on one side of every residential street. This step provides room for motorists to swing away from trouble if it looms ahead, and gives pedestrians a better look between the stop and listen before crossing streets.

Fluorides Protect Teeth

This article is published as a public service by The Sanford Herald in cooperation with the Seminole County Dental Society.

Returns coming in on some of the most thorough-going studies in dental history are piling up evidence to show that your children's teeth can be partially "armourplated" against decay with fluoride.

Fluorine is a chemical related to chlorine, universally used in purification of water. It is the new super-weapon in the war on tooth decay.

Studies on fluoride's effectiveness have been made in communities where the drinking supply has naturally contained fluoride and in communities where it has been purposely added in the amount of one part to one million parts of water, less than the proverbial drop in a bucket.

These studies show that children drinking this water from birth to their early teens have from one-third to two-thirds less decay, lower dentist bills and a better chance of keeping their teeth to old age.

In Grand Rapids, Mich., for example, a reduction in dental decay of more than 41 per cent among six-year-old children was noted in five years.

Lewiston, Idaho, reported a 83 per cent reduction in dental decay in seven-year-olds three years after fluoridation of water began.

In areas where water is not yet fluoridated, dentists are applying fluorides directly to the teeth of children. A series of four applications are given two to seven days apart usually at ages 2, 7, 10 and 13 so that all teeth are treated soon after they come in. As much as a 40 per cent reduction in dental decay has been noted.

The story of fluorides and decay is a stirring tribute to research. Some years ago dentists observed that teeth of children had less decay than normal. This was traced to fluorides in the drinking water.

Cost of fluoridation of community water supplies is only 4 to 14 cents a person per year, depending on the type of fluoride compound used, the amount of fluoride already in the water, the size of the community and the per capita use of water.

New Reader Stresses Character Building

DR. ULLIN W. LEAVELL, author of the new "Golden Rule Series" of readers for the fourth, fifth and sixth grades and director of the University of Virginia's McGuffey Reading Clinic, points out to two intent sixth-graders the 11 basic virtues children are led to discover for themselves through the Series.

The new readers, whose new approach builds character by "teaching without preaching," will be published Jan. 8 by The American Book Company, the world's largest textbook publisher, in cooperation with the Palmer Foundation of Texas.

Dr. Leavell stated that the new readers would enable today's child to "discover for himself moral principles instead of having them thrust upon him," and thus aid in overcoming the "terrible blight" of juvenile delinquency.

NEW YORK (AP)—Perry Como is a cool, dry guy. But so is Jackie Gleason.

The networks, agencies and advertisers are in a state of confusion. The networks, agencies and advertisers are in a state of confusion. The networks, agencies and advertisers are in a state of confusion.

Despite all the drum-beaters, it's a somewhat less earth-shaking conflict than the Battle of Gettysburg. In fact, only twice incidentally in the past six months has this department ever mentioned a program's "audience rating." Don't believe 'em. Know the sponsors demand 'em. Know the audience rating systems try to do as complete and honest jobs as possible. But what's the point to the individual viewer?

At any rate, NBC says that Trendex finds Como has topped Gleason for the past two Saturday nights.

How does Gleason feel about this?

Above his desk he has hung a large, smiling portrait of Perry Como.

Best viewing this week: "Nightmare in Red," one of the year's best television documentary films, appeared on Armstrong Circle Theater (NBC-TV Tuesday evening). The brain-child of producer-director-writer Henry Salomon, it offered a vivid and grimly factual account of Russian suffering under the despotism of the Czars and the Communists.

In exploring 64 film sources, many previously untapped, the NBC-TV Film Documentary Unit came up with some fascinating footage on the private life of Czar Nicholas II, the Eastern Front in World War I and the counterrevolution of 1919. Many viewers doubtless learned something new about the historical context of communism's cancerous growth in Russia.

Cadillac

Not Wealthy... Just Wise!

Most people think that the gentleman who owns and drives a new Cadillac must necessarily be blessed with an abundance of this world's goods.

But the truth of the matter is that a great many motorists of relatively modest means—like the happy man you see here—sit at the wheel of the "car of cars."

For wisdom and practicality lead to Cadillac—just as surely as prominence and prosperity!

Listen, for a moment, to this remarkable assembly of facts—and see if you don't agree.

The Series Sixty-Two Coupe... the beautiful and inspiring motor car pictured above... costs just a few dollars more than many cars in the "medium-price" bracket.

Cadillac's dependability is so extraordinary that the car is virtually free from all but the purely routine requirements of service.

A Cadillac stretches a gallon of gasoline over so many miles that it is actually the rival of much smaller, lighter cars in this regard.

And a Cadillac will retain its value over the years better than any other automobile in the land.

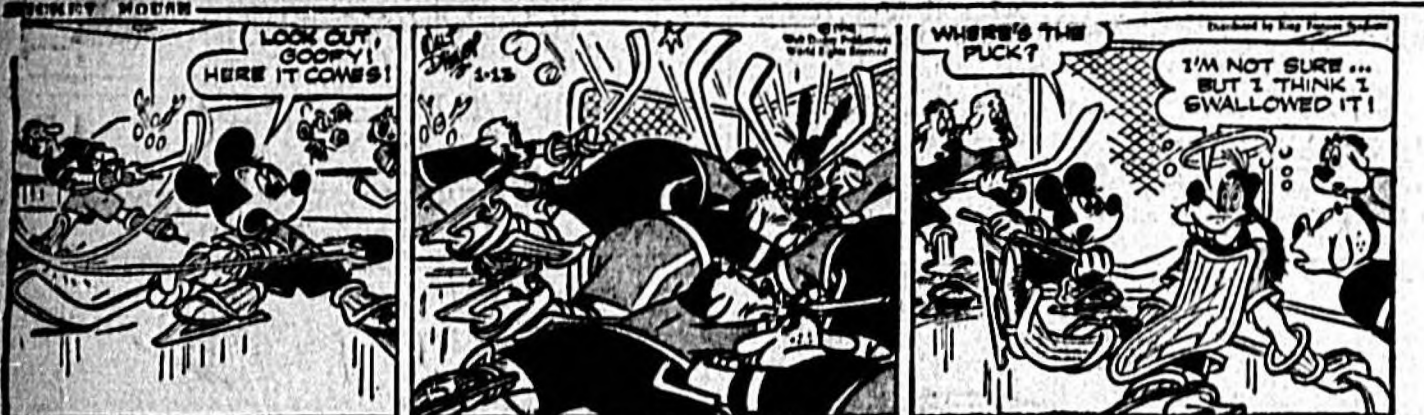

The conclusion is, we think, self-evident: Cadillac ownership is not only wonderful and thrilling—but sound and sensible as well.

Why not stop in soon for a look and a ride? You'll discover the most beautiful Cadillac ever built... the finest-performing Cadillac of all time... and the greatest value in Cadillac history.

That's Cadillac's magical combination for 1956—and it's waiting for you now in our showroom.

Spotlight On Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — Ursula Thiess' latest movie may be her last. The reason: she is also the wife of Robert Taylor and mother of his 6-month-old son Terence. And Papa says Mama should stay home.

Miss Thiess just finished "Bandido" with Robert Mitchum. She pronounces her name "Teese," but we might as well call her Mrs. Taylor because that's apparently who she's going to be.

It was a rugged picture. She had six hard weeks of locations in Mexico, working in 14 different sites. This kept her away from her family until just before Christmas. She has two other children—Maswell, 12½, and Michael, 10, by her first marriage to German film director George Thiess.

"Bob really suffered," she said. "I think I may never do another film. We're letting the baby's nurse go next month, so that will give you an indication."

"Actually, I didn't know what I was getting into. We made the deal over the telephone when I was on location with Bob on 'The Last Hunt.' My agent—or rather, my former agent, because I have let him go—called me about 'Bandido.' Bob approved it. But we didn't know it meant a long location."

"Now Bob says I'll be doing pictures only if it's something I really want to do, if he thinks it's worthwhile and if it doesn't involve a location."

She indicated that Bob has taken to the domestic life and has proved a good father to his brood.

"Bob thinks I spoil the children," she laughed, "and I'm afraid he's right. He was brought up more strictly than I was and he provides the discipline for the children."

FOR presidential consideration in 1956 the state of Ohio is offering not one but two "favorite son" candidates. That declares the man at the next desk, should get the family vote.

35 Per Cent Of Newlyweds Marry On Less Than $3000 Yearly, Says Survey

If "marrying on a shoestring" can be defined as going to the altar on an income less than $300 a week—about $3,000 a year—35 per cent of newlyweds falls into this category, says the Institute of Life Insurance.

Citing a study made recently by the National Office of Vital Statistics, the Institute points out that 35 per cent of couples newly-married at time of the survey had annual incomes of less than $3,000.

Some of these couples, by careful money management, undoubtedly found they could make do on less than $300 a week. Others, presumably, were receiving assistance from their families, through gifts of food or money. A number of students were included in the 35 per cent who, with little or no income of their own, were being supported by parents.

At least one in 10 of these newly married couples was living with their families.

And, of course, some newlyweds were farm couples who like most farm families have comparatively small cash incomes and rely to a greater or lesser degree on food raised on the farm.

There are always a few youngsters who get married impulsively, apparently without much thought of the responsibilities of matrimony and establishing a family. But from the point of view of income, most newlyweds seem to have at least a fair foundation upon which to build.

In four out of ten new marriages family income exceeds $4000 a year, or about $80 a week.

And now to the most human aspect of marriage. The Office of Vital Statistics report simply states that "the proportion of childless couples decreased rapidly with each additional year of marriage," which means that babies begin to make an appearance.

There's no doubt that most young couples take their responsibilities seriously. One evidence of this is found in their purchases of life insurance to protect the family.

The majority of youngsters have life insurance before they are married; ownership and amount of this protection increases with marriage, according to the Institute of Life Insurance.

The arrival of children typically calls for additional purchases of life insurance. And as these young families begin to acquire homes and other possessions, many have additional life insurance to cover their loans.

The picture of a typical newlywed couple, as limned by the Office of Vital Statistics, shows a happy bride of 21 or 22 and a beaming bridegroom who is not more than a couple of years older than she. He is working, possibly as a craftsman or as the operator of some kind of machine. She is probably not working—only one in three new brides goes back to the job.

Some couples move after marriage. The Office of Vital Statistics, in checking on the movements of the young head of the family, found that the younger he is, the more likely he will move after marrying. The survey proves that the U. S. is still a city-based nation, despite the trend to suburban living. Nearly 75 per cent of the young couples resided in cities at the time of the survey, and only about 20 per cent were suburbanites. The rest lived on farms.

The average income of the city dwellers was about $75 a week, while that of the suburban families was almost $70—not too much difference. Farm families, on the other hand, averaged only $33 a week, but this does not count the value of home-grown food.

HORN HONKING TO COST MONEY
BELGRADE (AP)—It's going to cost drivers $13 now to honk their horns in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, because of a new police regulation.

The new police regulation is the Yugoslav capital's second move in recent years to control traffic noise.

There was a time when the horn was as important as brakes in Belgrade driving. Drivers used to honk horns to indicate which way they were going—one toot if going through an intersection, two for a right turn and three times for a left turn.

As more and more cars crowded the streets, the clamor became so intense neither drivers nor pedestrians could tell who was honking for what.

Traffic lights were installed to stop that.

PAY-AS-YOU-STEAL
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—A new pay-as-you-steal plan for thieving youngsters has been worked out in juvenile court.

Judge Louis H. Jull said yesterday the youths are going to have to put down cash for everything they steal.

He started his new policy by ordering two 15-year-olds to begin work to earn $108—the value of loot they took from a school break-in.

JACK JUSTICE
Realtors Hail 1956 As Important Year

The Florida Association of Realtors has moved into its fourth consecutive year under the leadership of President Jack Justice of Miami Beach, who was installed at Orlando amid far-reaching plans for making the anniversary year one of outstanding accomplishment in what Justice described as "a streamlined program of greater service to the public, with emphasis upon a promotional program to sell this great state of ours to as many people in the other 47 states."

Hailing 1956 as "four years of greatest opportunity," Justice said that "few other professional groups are in a better position to tell the Florida story to the rest of the nation and swell the tide of people who are coming here to settle permanently."

"While the retirement homes factor is significant and highly important," the Miami Beach man said, "we must not lose sight of the fact that there is a steadily increasing percentage of younger folk coming to us every year, and if we are to have a solid economy we must support the present drive for industry and employment opportunities within the state."

He outlined what he termed an "anniversary year" program calculated to acquaint the public with realtor objectives, heighten interest in and knowledge of real estate matters, and familiarize more people with the sound values of both home ownership and of real estate as an investment.

Justice, who succeeds D. Harold Stimpson of Orlando in the top realtor post, is the thirty-first president of the 39-year-old organization. He drew national attention as a salesman when he set sales records for Nash-Kelvinator in South America, and on a trip to Florida became fascinated with opportunities in real estate.

General Robert E. Lee
1807 - 1870

The best known picture of Gen. Robert E. Lee—the picture school children first learn to recognize—shows him sitting on his horse, reins in hand.

Robert E. Lee

Successful Citizen

THE passing of years has drawn mystery over him. What sort of man was this and what was the source of his power? For power he had, in superabundance. He had the power of genius in war—the artful tactic and diversion, the double thrust—not to be learned in textbooks of tactics. He had the power to put heart into hungry, exhausted, barefooted men when the ammunition was gone. And amid glory-grabbers, buck'passers, alibi artists, little Napoleons and war profiteers, he had the power to twist them all into a single strand of purpose: the purpose to which he had pledged his fortunes, his honor and his life.

Historians point to his noble ancestry—Norman knights and Scottish kings. But nobility is hard to inherit and rather has to be gathered fresh every day, like manna. His training? A Virginia gentleman's with West Point added. Other men have had it, and good men, too, without becoming Robert E. Lee, who went through West Point without getting a single demerit.

He spent half a lifetime in the Army, recognized only by old Winfield Scott and a few others who had seen his genius in the campaign against Santa Anna in Mexico.

We know all the facts of his life—there are no dark chapters and no unanswered questions, except the big one: what was the power?

He was a devout man, but Stonewall Jackson spent whole nights in prayer. Lee was big, muscular and handsome, but this does not carry a man through the darkest hours.

What was it?

Any good life of Lee can give us a hint and it is this:

Lee was a selfless man.

Not a self-destructive or a self-loathing or a self-avoiding man. Simply selfless.

Part of it was in his family tradition. But somewhere he had found the secret of how to live, the thing a thousand self-help, inspirational books are trying to teach today.

Many people can never learn it, and they are not necessarily to blame—their inner struggles and doubts, grief, unreasoning jealousy, fear of failure—the list goes on and on—the defects are too deep seated, they must do the best they can with the characters they have.

Lee seems to have been selfless from the beginning. Great self-discipline was his, but he seems to have had, naturally, what the saints and mystics of all ages have labored to get through agony and bloody sweat.

For himself, he demanded nothing. And when the surrender was complete, the war lost, the cause defeated, he needed still no recompense except a chance to serve. He found it in Washington College. It is now Washington and Lee University. But then it was a tiny school with four professors and 40 boys, its laboratory smashed, its library burned. For five years he poured his genius into rebuilding the school, and then his mighty heart gave out.

Lee was certainly successful—successful as a man and successful as a general. With this, there is no argument.

However, he went beyond success as we usually measure it. He had the energy and the humanity that so few of us have, to go beyond personal aggrandizement and the acclaim of his fellowmen to make a contribution out of the fullness of his own being, to the common good.

This, to our way of thinking, makes Lee not merely successful but a Successful Citizen.

Next Week in... ALL FLORIDA

As time draws closer to opening day of the great Florida State Fair at Tampa—January 31 to February 11—All Florida Magazine presents next week a man who has contributed some 3,000 jars of preserved fruit and vegetables to the home exhibits, Mrs. Beattie Swift of Pasco County.

In the same issue is the story of Tampa's colorful Gasparilla Day and how a murderous pirate has become a beloved rogue in the yearly pageant.

Also we salute America's First Lady of Sport—Bebe Rebozo Zaharoff. And you won't want to miss the story of how Everglades National Park is cutting a western gate into the virgin wilderness.

The late Bob Ripley, learning that F. E. C. Railroad had presented Craig the rail that had saved his life, pictured it in his "Believe It or Not" syndicated cartoon. The Rail now stands in front of Craig's restaurant.

"Poor Old Craig" — Is Neither Poor Nor Old

By FRED GRANT HARDEN

TWENTY years ago they gave "poor old Craig" up for dead. Today Craig is neither dead, poor, nor old.

Roland Craig was among those persons caught in the path of the Labor Day Hurricane of 1935—the worst in the history of the western hemisphere. Four years before, Yankee-born Roland Craig settled on the upper Florida Keys near Islamorada, and through patience and hard work, he built a fishing camp along the old overseas railroad that stretched down through the Keys from the mainland to Key West. In time, "Craig's Place" became a popular fishing spot and had a clientele which included the Goulds, Vanderbilts, Whitneys and Woolworths.

Then, along came the Big Breeze of '35 with its winds of 200 miles an hour and a barometer reading of 29.85, the lowest ever recorded in this part of the world. It struck with fury, that first Monday in September, but not without warning. The sea grew restless and the overcast sky gave no promise of a break.

As the winds rose, Craig's instinct warned him that his buildings would fall and seeing no other alternative, he went out into the storm and dug a trench under the steel tracks of the Florida East Coast Railroad.

Waves 12 feet high swept over the island, but Craig remembers only that the sea nearly drowned him time and time again, and in between, the land crabs scuttled over him in search of a haven.

The next morning, exhausted and cold, he knew that he had survived the worst the elements could do. He didn't know it at the time, but further up the Keys 200 men had perished. They were veterans, part of the "Bonus Army" which had marched on Washington in 1934, and had accepted an offer of $30 a month to work on the overseas highway.

On this day, "Poor Old Craig"—the legend—was born. A plane dispatched to survey the Keys reported no signs of life at "Craig's Place," and his name was added to the list of presumed dead.

Craig had lost everything but his life.

But facing the future with stubborn determination he began rebuilding. His friends never forgot him. They would alert anyone going down on the Keys to stop in and see "poor old Craig." With the construction of the overseas highway right through the middle of his property, business began to boom.

Today, 87 miles south of Miami, is Craig, probably the smallest recognized town in the United States. It is a one-man town. It has its own postoffice, a grocery store, a service station, a motel, a fishing dock, a restaurant, and property for sale, all managed by Poor Old Craig. He is mayor, city manager, police chief, fire chief, supervisor of sewage disposal and commissioner of public improvement. During the bustling tourist season from November to March, the town's population rises as high as 100, while in summer it often drops back to one—the founder.

He'll cook you a meal if you're hungry and go out and fill your gas tank. Then he'll rent you a cabin for the night and try to sell you some Key real estate, on the side.

If all you need is some canned goods from the general store or a cup of coffee from the restaurant, Craig will probably tell you to help yourself. He trusts everyone. One day recently he entertained Herbert Hoover. The ex-President arrived aboard his yacht. Regardless of who they are or how they come, Poor Old Craig gives all visitors the same casual treatment.

"I let people shift for themselves. Celebrated people like to get away from coddling and ordinary people, like myself, aren't used to a lot of fancy fuming," Craig says.

Since that hectic day and night in '35, Craig has developed considerable respect for hurricanes.

The moment he gets word of a pending blow, up the Keys he heads toward Miami and the hurricane-proof home he maintains there, leaving his 500-foot community to shift for itself. When oldtimers of the Keys see Poor Old Craig heading north, they are likely to be a bit anxious until they learn the reason for his trip.

GASKINS walks around barefoot in the cypress swamp searching for knees. He's never had any difficulty with snakes.

IT'S TINY crevices, not the outer bark, which offer problems.

IT'S NOT from outer space, not surrealist art, but it's one of Tom Gaskins' finds in the cypress swamp.

CYPRESS KNEE

By MAX HUNN

If you've seen a golden brown, strangely shaped piece of wood displayed in some tourist curio shop or in the store of some interior decorator, the odds are great that it was a cypress knee, locally produced. The odds are equally great that Tom Gaskins was the man responsible.

Tom tells the story of the founding of the unique cypress knee industry this way:

"During the late 1930's, I was searching for a way to create something I could trade to the people for a million dollars. I wanted to get rich. Who doesn't? In 1934, shortly after I was married, my mother-in-law, Mrs. H. L. Bible of Arcadia, said to me: 'Next time you're down in the swamp, Tom, I wish you'd get me a cypress knee. I want to use it for a flower vase.' Like most people, she thought that the knees were hollow. Actually, hollow knees result from damage to the knee and are abnormal."

His mother-in-law's chance remark gave Tom Gaskins the idea for a business.

Wall vases made from cypress knees were his first products. In the beginning, he left the bark on, and today you'll find some cypress knees still finished in this manner. However, he left the bark untouched, not because he wanted the rustic effect, but because he had never seen a knee peeled.

He discovered that knees could be peeled accidentally. A knee he was cutting fell before he had cut the bark entirely around the base. The uncut sliver held fast, and in a jiffy a strip of bark had peeled from the bottom to the top of the knee.

Seeing the beautiful pale, white satiny color, caused Gaskins to think about peeling all cypress knees he cut. But between the birth of the idea and practical success lay many months of frustration. The cypress knee is not known for its symmetrical beauty, but for its odd shapes, which verge on the fantastic. And this odd shape almost foundered the yet unborn cypress knee industry.

Stripping the bark off the straight parts of the knee without damaging the underlying smooth satin finish wasn't too much of a problem. But getting the bark from the tiny nooks and crevices with another matter.

The problem seemed simple: loosen the bark, strip it off. But the catch was the loosening. Gaskins tried oils, lye, acid, boiling and plenty of elbow grease. The result? Badly scarred, partly peeled cypress knees fit only for kindling wood.

Finally, he wrote to the Forest Products Laboratory of the Forest Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture in Madison, Wisc.

His question almost stumped the experts. They weren't certain, but suggested that the bark might come off easily if the cypress knees were cooked from one to two hours in water heated to near the boiling point.

Tom had already tried boiling the knees, but for a few minutes only. A couple of hours? Might work. Anyway, it was worth trying, and he boiled a test knee.

It worked, and he achieved the first step in his cypress knee peeling operation. However, boiling wasn't the entire answer. The straight bark came off easily when boiled, but the little crevices and crannies still offered trouble. He overcame this problem by using second-hand dental tools, the sharply pointed instruments making it easy to get the loose debris from the crevices.

The freshly peeled knee is a pale color, but when exposed to the warm Florida sun it takes on a golden tan that any blonde vacationist would be glad to carry back north in January.

He discovered that it was necessary to drill holes in the knees to accomplish three purposes: (1) to permit the knee to stand on end without damaging the delicate surface during drying; (2) to speed up the curing by making possible drying both inside and out; (3) to prevent splitting. By drilling out the knees, the thickness of the wood is reduced, and it is possible to secure more uniform drying.

At the same time Gaskins was seeking a commercial outlet for cypress knees, he was also trying to determine why some knees take such unusual shapes. Late in the 1930's, in the swamp area immediately behind his house, he began a series of experiments in his cypress knee laboratory.

He believed that the weird knobs—thought to provide air for trees growing in water—resulted from some damage to a growing knee. To prove this, he succeeded in getting a knee to grow around a flint arrowhead; several knees to grow around bottles (without breaking them); one knee to grow around a pewter cup (which proved unable to withstand the pressure); and several knees to change shape to cover man-made bruises and cuts.

Although Tom started his industry on a commercial, utilitarian basis—bird-houses, vases, lamps, bookends and the like—today he believes that nothing practical should be made of cypress knees.

He has felt for many years that cypress knees were art objects. But before the war, he couldn't sell the idea. Since the war, however, they have developed a popularity of decor similar to that gained by driftwood.

Tom still prowls beautiful Fisheating Creek Swamp hunting for cypress knees which can become art objects. He wades through knee-deep water, and hauls out hundreds each year for careful processing and sale.

And those knees which are especially beautiful or unusual, find an honored place in the Cypress Knee Museum near Palmdale, which he has built to house his collection gathered over the years.

TO FACILITATE drying and avoid splitting, he devised a means of drilling out center of cypress knees.

A little visitor to Tom Gaskins' cypress knee shop tries to find solution to how one of the fantastically shaped knees on display "got that way." All of them were gathered in Fisheating Creek Cypress Swamp.

Tom Gaskins prowls through the swamp waters of beautiful Fisheating Creek hunting for cypress knees which he believes are Nature's own offering in art.

Junior Museum

The fast growing museum has established itself as an educational force, as well as a tourist attraction, in South Florida.

By J. K. ELLSWORTH

A TRIP to Mars or the Moon is easy, and lots of fun, as more than 40,000 Dade County school children find out each year. They don imaginary space suits and helmets to take them on a faster-than-sound rocket trip in the Spitz Planetarium at the Junior Museum of Miami, Inc., on North Bayshore Drive.

It is a far cry from the old style museum of dead bugs stuck on pins in glass cases and stiff, stuffed animals on dried tree stumps. It's always alive—with laughter, the patter of feet and spontaneous yips—as the children thrill to the exhibits and galleries within its walls.

The museum comes to life every morning at 9 o'clock (except Sundays and Tuesdays, when it is closed) and stays alive in the merriest kind of way, all day long. Occasionally, it remains open for some special program and Frank McConnell, director, or some other staff member, stays on hand to supervise one of the after-school or Saturday clubs and programs that are as popular as the conducted classrooms tours.

This year the museum features "Homes Around the World." It also tells "the Florida story" with natural history, mineral and sea-life exhibits.

Page 8—All Florida Magazine—1-15-56

Started six years ago by the Junior League of Miami, it is community-wide, and non-profit, depending upon the generosity of individuals and organizations to supplement the financial support given to it by the Junior League.

"Tyrannosaurus rex, a reconstructed dinosaur, reigns over the pre-historic gallery at the museum, and fierce as he is, the children love him, exclaiming at his sharp teeth, his huge tail, his claw-like feet, and his big stick-out ribs. One side shows the innards of this almost life-sized monster. The other side is completely finished.

A telephone exhibit in the museum demonstrates just what happens from the time a number is dialed until it rings another phone. This is a never-failing source of wonder. So is the mineral display donated by the Miami Mineral and Gem Society. So are the telescopes and other equipment the Southern Cross Astronomical Society has placed at the museum.

Normal, as well as the physically handicapped children, get a wider glimpse of this great universe of ours through the use of the museum and its library of "suitcase loans" exhibits. These take butterflies, snails, dolls, costumes of for-sign lands and other interesting items from many countries, right into school classrooms, upon request of teachers. These exhibits, as well as those in the museum, are planned to fit into the school curriculum and to supplement school study.

More than 50 teen-age girls are getting a blueprint for beauty in one of the Saturday classes and other youngsters are studying art, and learning about minerals and rocks in class and field trip studies.

A Seminole Indian exhibit is the next project on the agenda and atop the Miami Woman's Club building, in which the Junior Museum is housed, will soon be an observatory to allow further study of the stars.

Endorsed enthusiastically by public officials and school administrators and instructors, this fast growing museum provides wholesale outlets for leisure hours and enlarges the work of the Dade County school system with its do-it-yourself program and the sugar-coated, fun-education clubs and classes.

That the Junior Museum has already established itself as an integral part of South Florida—an educational force as well as a tourist attraction—is proved by one look at its registration roster.

FAMOUS PICTURE of Lee as commander of Virginia's forces in 1861, with letters "VA" on hat, is retouched version of faded print, right, taken about the time he was making his survey of Florida's coastal defenses

Lee, Virginia statesman and Confederate general, was assigned in 1861 as Commander of the Department of Florida.

By PAT GRIFFIN

When Robert E. Lee Visited Florida

ON January 19, many a new Florida resident may be surprised to find his bank closed because of Robert E. Lee's birthday. What even the old-timers may not know, is that this renowned Confederate hero played a role in the history of Florida.

On Feb. 2, 1849, the government schooner "Phenia" sailed into Apalachicola Bay and dropped anchor. On board was a group of United States Army officers on the first leg of an exhaustive study of Florida, its coastline, economic possibilities and defenses. Particularly, defenses!

The high brass was worried about this finger of land that was thrust invitingly down toward the Caribbean Sea. Florida had already been bandied back and forth like a tennis ball from Spain, to England, and back to Spain. The United States, which had now fallen heir to the sunny peninsula, had no intention of allowing a foreign power to gain a foothold in this vulnerable spot, from whence operations against the main body of the nation could be so easily launched.

How could the Florida coastline of over 3,000 miles best be fortified? This commission of Army Engineers was sent to find out.

The recorder for the group was Gen. "Light Horse" Harry Lee's son, Robert E. Lee, who himself showed promise of carrying forward the family military tradition. He was then a 42-year-old colonel, just returned from a stint in the Mexican War, and about to enter the most fruitful period of his life.

Florida was new to him. This was his first visit.

The 36-page report which Lee filed at the conclusion of the cruise is written in the lucid concise style characteristic of the man who later bore the burden of the South's defeat in the War Between the States.

The schooner had not even bothered to put in at Pensacola. It was the main port on the west coast of Florida, and already abristle with fortifications. Apalachicola, however, was in the midst of growing pains. With each turn of the tide, another light vessel steamed down the river and into the bay, weighted to the waterline with bales of cotton ready to be loaded on sea-going ships.

The Apalachicola River, in a day when men had to use the superhighways provided by nature, was fast becoming the thoroughfare for the lands it drained in Florida, Alabama and Georgia.

The commission recommended that a military work be constructed on the west end of St. George Island, as a beginning toward complete protection. They remarked on the healthful climate.

The schooner next put in at St. Marks, and Lee and his colleagues suggested that the old Spanish fort be renovated for defense purposes. At Cedar Key, they noted that the Suwannee River was being used for shipping. They were intrigued by the possibilities of Tampa Bay, though they considered it the hardest of all the Florida bays to defend.

Obtain some of the keys at the mouth of the bay, they recommended, for future use, and build a work on Egmont Key. They pointed out that this rich natural harbor needed more study than they could give it.

They surveyed Charlotte Harbor thoroughly, but made no recommendations. The coastline from there around to Biscayne Bay, swampy and impenetrable, needed no other defense.

The commission was probably one of the first groups to recognize the possibilities of Biscayne Bay. Not that they could possibly envisage present-day Miami, but there was no gainsaying its future military and commercial significance. Construction of fortifications there would complete the chain of defense from the Dry Tortugas, through Key West and on up to St. Augustine, all of which were already properly defended.

Further up the east coast they noted, "The commerce of the St. Johns is such that it may soon require protection." A military work on Baton Island would keep Jacksonville free from attack, they said.

In conclusion, they gave St. George Sound and Tampa Bay the highest priority, then sailed north to report their findings. How much influence their study had, or how many of their recommendations were followed, it is difficult to say.

Lee's next visit to Florida was a far cry from this leisurely cruise along the coast. The year was 1861, and Lee had just made the grim decision to side with his beloved Virginia in the War Between the States, against the nation for which he had soldiered for 40 years. Now a general for the Confederacy, he was assigned to command of the department of South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

GINGER, the Dimick's two-year-old daughter, has never known life except on water. She makes her way about the deck alone and has learned to help with the shipboard chores.

NUMEROUS CHORES keep boat dwellers busy during the day, but they enjoy sitting on deck at night, watching the western sky turn from gold to red.

Bargain Rate Retirement

By GEORGE F. BRIETZ

HAVE you ever wondered what it would be like to retire aboard a private yacht? So did Ralph Dimick and his wife. But, like most of us, they believed this was only for the rich. They worked and dreamed, and in the meantime, had to make a living. Then some one gave them a book. This book told of a college professor and his wife who, after years in a classroom, took to boating. They not only loved it, but seemed to carry on with a small income.

That did it!

They began their search for a boat. Even the fact that there was a newly born daughter in the family did not deter them. The quest for a boat soon ended in the purchase of the motor yacht "Romano," 50 feet long, with a cosy deck house amidships and a cabin for two, aft. Aft of the deckhouse was located the owners' cabin as well as a compact galley complete with stove, electric refrigerator and sink.

"Where else," asks Dimick with logic, "could you find a furnished house for $4,000?"

Soon they had moved aboard, bag and baggage, and for their very first cruise, cast off for Florida. The simple shipboard routine soon became their way of life.

On the way down the Intercoastal Waterway, when Charleston Harbor was just breaking into sight over the bow, the radio came to life with reports of a hurricane on the way, and even to their inexperienced eyes, the clouds speeding by overhead had a menacing look. The broken edges were spilling rain, which fast turned into a pelting downpour.

Obviously, this was no ordinary squall. When they reached the Wapoo Marina, other boat owners were busy battening down hatches and securing boats for a big blow. Willing hands helped them moor the Romano with strong lines to the heavy pilings. And none too soon either, for in a short time the hurricane romped in over the coast and hit with a fury seldom seen in the history of the region.

Mrs. Dimick and the baby slept through most of the storm. But when they awoke in the morning, it was to a scene of devastation. Hurricane Hazel had come and gone, leaving them snug and dry aboard their ship.

Now, when the radio crackles with warnings of those great tropical disturbances building up in the Caribbean, the Dimicks just secure the ship by getting out extra lines, lay in an extra supply of food, and wait it out like the veterans they are. Mrs. Dimick says she would much prefer to go through a hurricane afloat, than ashore.

Once they arrived in Florida, the Municipal Yacht Basin at Daytona Beach became the home port for the Romano. For a fee of about $20 a month, dockage and all utilities are available, and shopping centers are near-by. On either side of them are other boat dwellers who have also felt the call of the sea.

Unlike retired couples ashore, people who live on boats never have to start the day wondering what to do to stave off boredom. There is always some interesting little shipboard chore to take care of, such as swabbing down the decks, varnishing or painting. These small jobs not only keep the owners occupied, but they also cut down considerably on the maintenance cost of the ship. Housekeeping becomes simpler, too, with the compact quarters requiring fewer steps to keep everything ship-shape and Bristol fashion, than in a house of the same size.

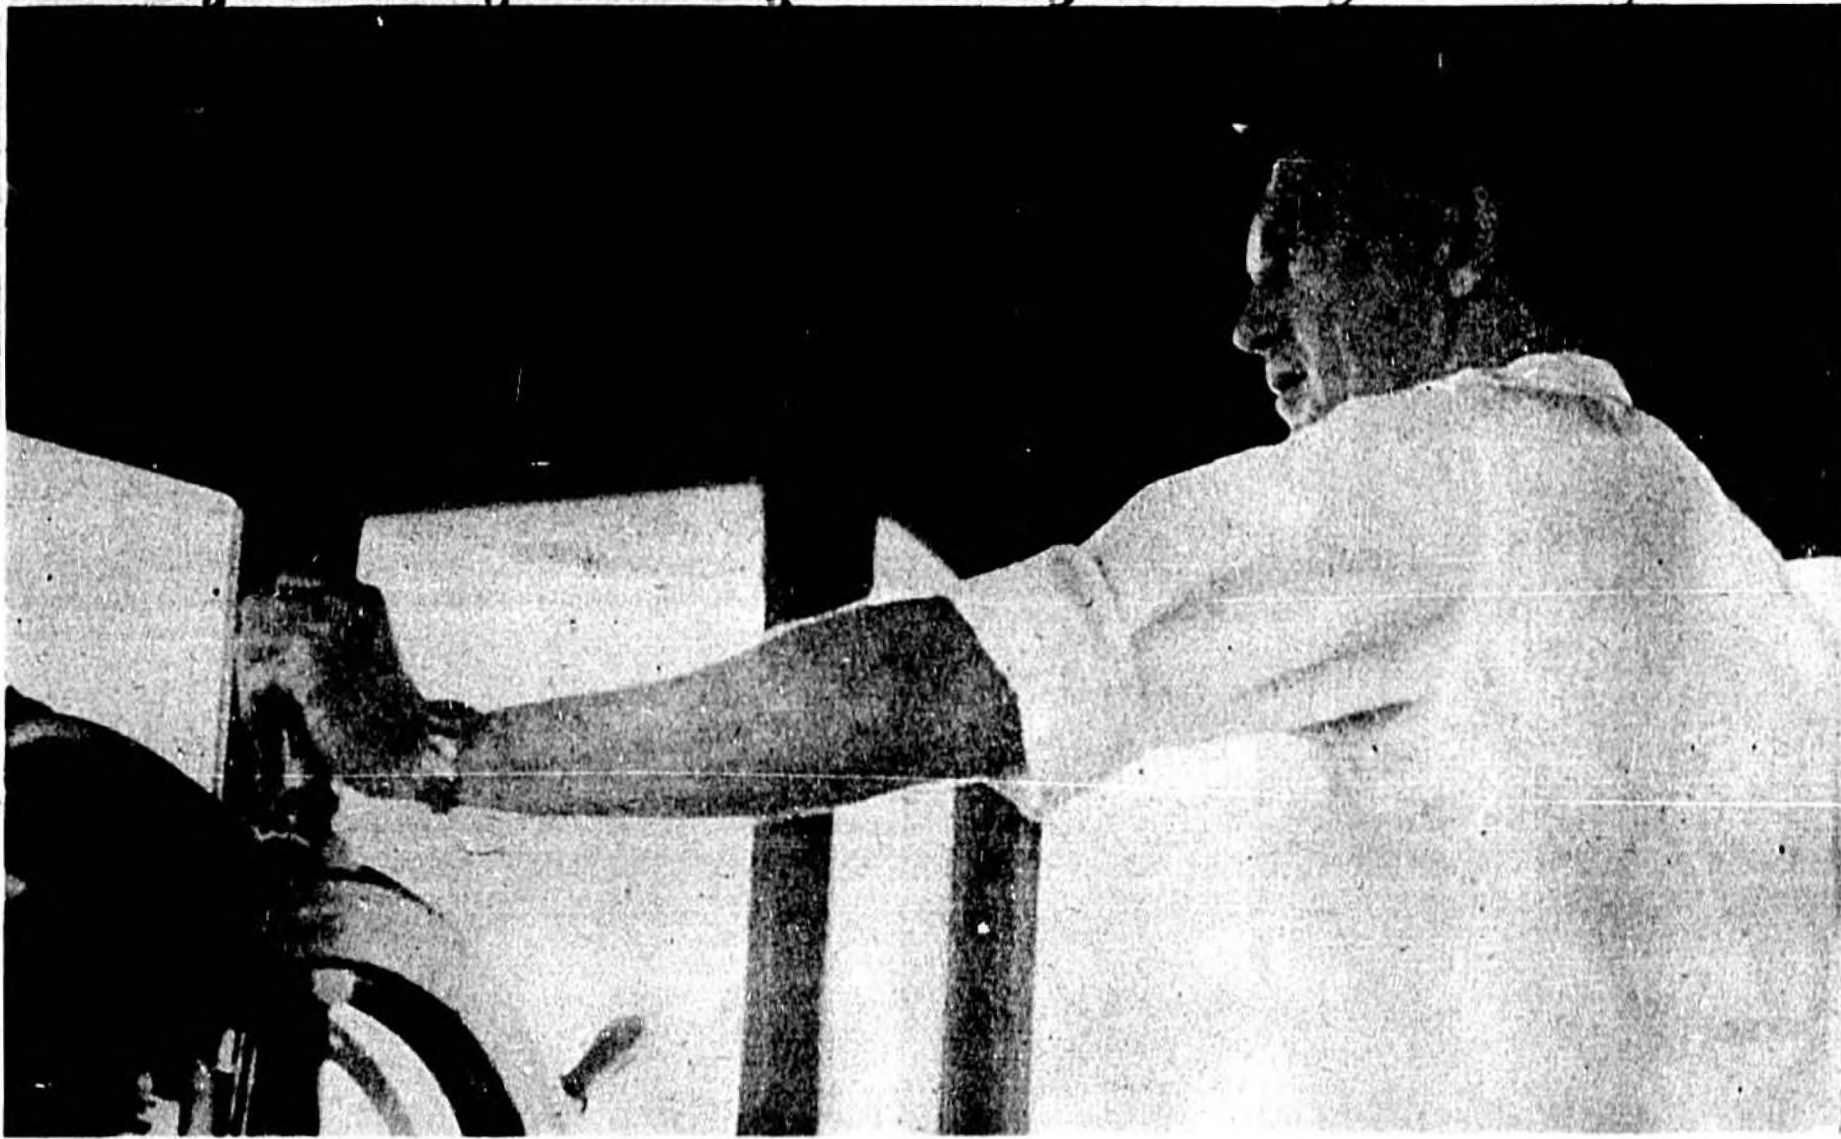

Food costs compare even more favorably with shore-side living. As like as not, supper will come from the sea itself, where Ralph Dimick can be found almost any afternoon casting in the surf for blues or whiting. Or possibly the menu will call for a big pot of clam chowder to satisfy the salt air appetites. The beach at low tide provides the main ingredient for this dish at a minimum of labor, and plenty of fun.

Weather-wise, those afloat are even more blessed. On hot summer afternoons when the pavement throws back uncomfortable rays, there is almost always a cooling sea breeze to be had on the after deck. As for clothing, this item is low on the budget, since informality is the order of the day aboard boats. Then, when the cool fall and winter nights arrive, a compact little ship-mate range serves not only for cooking, but to heat the living quarters as well.

The cost of entertainment is reduced to a minimum, too. Just working on the boat, fishing, and the many "gam sessions" with neighboring boat owners about ports and cruises, take the place of the more expensive brands of amusements.

While some retired couples ashore spend a considerable portion of their time worrying about their health, the Dimicks find that the clean salt air and health-giving dips in the surf have worked a change in their constitution. "In fact," says Mrs. Dimick, "we have almost forgotten what the inside of a doctor's office looks like. Our family doctor told us wounds and infections seem to heal much faster on shipboard than ashore. Possibly the mental relaxation helps some, too, but the fact remains that none of us ever remember being so healthy.

Only two things worried this family about living afloat when they first moved aboard their boat. They wondered whether their daughter, Ginger, would be safe when she got old enough to crawl and walk, and whether they would be able to take care of the boat when they, themselves, got older. Ginger has never had any life except that on the water, and at two years of age, she is already swimming and trying to help out aboard ship. The other question was soon answered as they met more and more people well up in their sixties, and even seventies, who enjoy cruising. One man of their acquaintance was 87 last year and still makes the trip north and south each season. His years rest lightly on his shoulders and he gets about his boat with a sprightly step that belies his age.

For the benefit of those who might have considered buying a boat, but have held back due to lack of nautical experience, the question was put squarely to Captain Dimick. How much time had he spent on boats before buying the Romano? His terse reply should lay to rest any doubts in the minds of would-be sailors:

"As I remember it, I had been on the Staten Island Ferry once."

Common sense is much more important in small boat handling than any other factor. For those who are seriously interested, there are several courses available without charge for those who want to learn the skills of boating. The U. S. Power Squadrons give excellent courses; so does the Coast Guard Auxiliary. Almost any boating enthusiast is ready and willing to pass on the benefit of his experience to a new-comer. Boat ownership seems to draw people together as nothing else does.

Gone are the days when yachting was only for the wealthy. Neither does the size of the bank account bar less fortunate boat owners from mingling with those who are more blessed with worldly goods. They all have the same problems of caring for the ship and the same sand bars and shoals lie in wait for the unwary skipper, be he rich man or average. They have so much in common that there is little or no social caste among yachtsmen.

As to the actual cost of living aboard a yacht, a great deal depends on what standard of living is considered essential—just as it does ashore. Captain Dimick claims that from his experience, a couple with one child can live comfortably on about $200 a month. This figure will include the upkeep of the boat, if most of the work is done by the owner.

The Fountain of Youth may or may not be located in Central Florida as reputed, but it looks very much as though the Dimick family and many others like them have found their own way to renew youth as they enjoy carefree days on the waterways of Florida.

Almost any evening will find them sitting on the afterdeck of the boat watching the western sky turn from gold to ruby red, and then to the color of a fire opal, as night draws on. The soft murmur of the breaking surf on the outer beaches, the sigh of a gentle breeze through the palm fronds, the slight tug of the ship against her moorings, is the song which lulls this family to sleep. No other lullaby can quite compare with it. Few people experience such a supreme sense of well-being as those who live aboard boats.

Or, as Captain Dimick says, "Give a man a boat, enough to eat and his family about him, and what more can he ask?"

CAPTAIN DIMICK may be seen casting in the surf for blues or whiting—the family supper—any afternoon.

CONNIE FELIONE, home-coming queen, pins Indiana tag on Irvin Howard.

IOWA BADGES bring together the Fred L. Moores and the Edgar Collvers.

Tourists recognize back-homers by their tags.

I'm From Missouri Too, Friend

WINTER tourists hungering for the sight of faces from back home will find them a-plenty at the Florida State Fair in Tampa, January 31 through February 11.

An ingenious, time-tested plan that will enable a Florida visitor to meet a few home folks while attending the State Fair again will be in operation.

At an Official State Fair Information Booth, midway between the Administration Building and the south end of the grandstand, out-of-state visitors may register, and apply for badges telling the world from which state they hail.

This official stand is to be manned by the Florida Highway Patrol, and a smartly-garbed State Highway patrolman will be in charge to assist those who want to register, to answer questions and to hand out badges and Florida literature.

A Minnesota couple, for instance, registering at the stand, will be given brightly-colored badges on which is printed, in big bold letters, the salutation, "I'm from Minnesota!" Armed with these badges they will sally forth to see the Fair. Encountering other "I'm from Minnesota" badges, they will soon find themselves nodding and smiling at the Minnesotans they meet and, probably stopping to visit a bit, and to ask a few questions about home.

Comments J. C. Huskisson, Fair manager: "We feel this plan greatly helps to humanize the Fair, to interest tourists in visiting our Fair, and to give the Fair that 'folksy' atmosphere so helpful in building up attendance. All enjoy it—visitors and Floridians alike."

Badges for all 48 states, and neighboring Canada, too, will be available for distribution this year. Thousands of such badges were distributed every day last year, and an even bigger number have been stocked to take care of the contemplated record attendance.

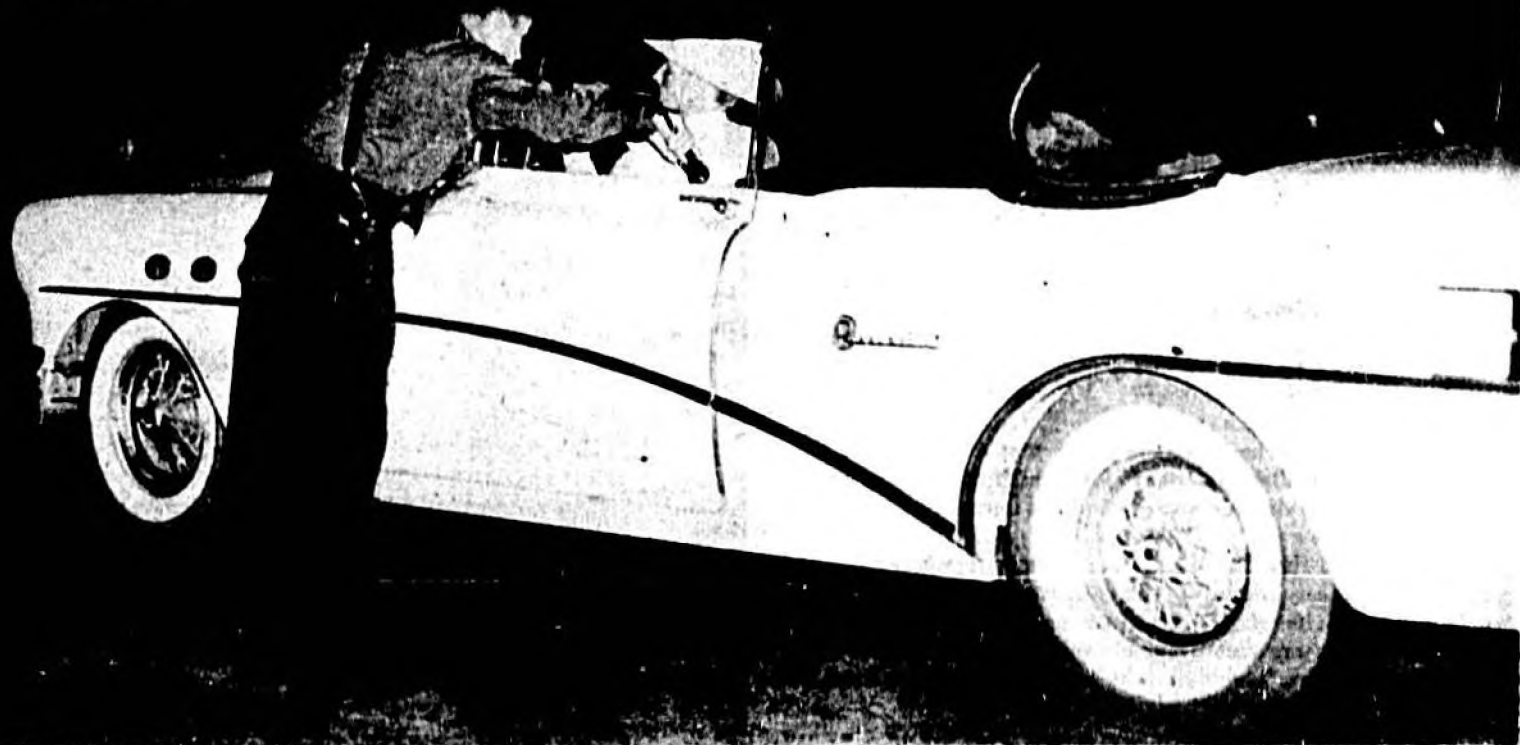

This year, official flags from more than half of the states, will greet visitors from those states from poles set up around the race track, each a gift from the governor of that state.

THE TOMS' of Canada and the Harveys of Michigan plan a schedule of activities before setting out on a full day's jaunt.

BORDER GUARDIANS

By CLEVELAND VAN DRESSER

IN THE HUNT for alien smugglers, alerted squad cars of the Border Patrol are secluded from view of the road, while the inspectors stop and carefully examine passing vehicles.

FROM the records of the U. S. Border Patrol, it would appear that Gregorio Simonovich, king-pin of alien smuggling operations out of Cuba, missed his chief pilot, William Edward Murphy, for a time at least.

Murphy was arrested on April 5, 1948, in Miami, after the Border Patrol had followed him to New York City and back. The charge: illegally transporting aliens from Cuba.

The loss of Murphy and the three planes he used seemed to put a temporary halt to the boss smuggler's activities. It was nine months before Grika ("The Fox") Simonovich officially came to the attention of the Border Patrol again. But his apparent inactivity was no assurance that he was not plotting further operations. The Russian had made too much profit out of aliens to give up his lucrative racket.

He had a system which has never been paralleled in the annals of alien smuggling along the Florida coast. During the mid 1920's, Simonovich had actually been in the employ of the U. S. Immigration Service at Havana; his fluent knowledge of several languages made him valuable as an interpreter; and he was frequently called to the U. S. Embassy to assist in cases where aliens were being interviewed for legal admission to the United States. Simonovich learned that aliens could not be admitted legally because of quota limits or other restrictions . . . and some of these aliens had money. They interested the Russian exceedingly.

The transition from trusted employee of the U. S. Immigration Service to alien smuggler deluxe, was easy for

This is the fourth in a series of true experiences of the United States Border Patrol, the Federal law enforcement body charged with the duty of protecting our country from infiltration by aliens from foreign countries. It has been checked by Border Patrol headquarters in Washington, D. C., an agency of the U. S. Department of Justice.

Simonovich. After he left the employ of the Immigration Service, Gregario soon had a well organized gang working for him.

The Russian was the boss. He contacted the aliens, whom he charged from $1,000 to $1,500 each for transportation into the United States.

It was an open secret around Havana that Simonovich would hire any form of transportation, preferably planes, to bring his living contraband into Florida. Whoever provided this got so much per passenger and took his own risks. Rounding out this set-up, Simonovich had "delivery men" who convoyed the aliens to any part of the United States. These men operated out of Florida, chiefly from Miami, and there was an extra charge for their services.

Nationality made no difference to Grika. He smuggled Chinese, Italians, Roumanians, Poles—anyone who could meet his price.

With Murphy out of action, and failing to locate any other fliers willing to take the risk, Simonovich turned to the comparatively slow method of a boat.

On Saturday, Jan. 8, 1949, a phone call was received at Border Patrol Headquarters in Miami, from the inspector stationed in Havana. He reported that a sailing vessel named the "Semper Fidelis" had left Havana, and he believed there was a load of aliens aboard. No mention was made of Gregorio Simonovich. His connection developed later.

For some time, the Border Patrol had been keeping a close watch from Havana on the Semper Fidelis and her crew of three men. They gave a complete description of the ship—two-masted, 45 feet long and painted white. They even furnished the vessel's estimated speed with auxiliary motor—six miles an hour—her exact time of departure from Havana, and her probable time of arrival on the South Florida coast.

When the chief inspector in Miami received the report, Border Patrol forces were immediately mobilized. A further report stated that Simonovich was seen in the vicinity of the Semper Fidelis when the ship left Havana at 7:35 a.m., Sunday.

Squad cars were dispatched to the Keys from Miami, Homestead and Key West. Units at West Palm Beach, Fort Myers and Sarasota were alerted. In addition, the Coast Guard was called in and all law enforcement agencies along both coasts of Florida were informed. A complete reception party was planned for the Semper Fidelis.

The stage was set when a Border Patrol plane took off Sunday morning and headed for the Dry Tortugas, the tiny islands at the very tip of the Florida Keys. It was not known whether the boat would head for the Gulf Coast or the East Coast of Florida. Two and half hours of patrolling brought no results, so the plane landed at Key West, refueled and took off again.

This time it headed north along the Keys. Within 30 minutes, a ship was sighted six miles offshore, just south of Pigeon Key. The plane swooped low and identified it as the Semper Fidelis.

All planes in the vicinity were radioed to converge on Pigeon Key, and squad cars were soon racing along U. S. Highway No. 1 from Miami and Key West. By this time, the Semper Fidelis was visible from shore through binoculars.

At first, she headed straight for Mer's Channel drawbridge, a scant mile from Pigeon Key. As she approached within four miles of land, she suddenly turned northeast. As the ship proceeded north, so did the Border Patrol cars, the inspectors keeping the ship in constant view with their field glasses.

After a couple of hours, the boat veered suddenly toward Marathon Channel and turned in. Apparently, the landing would be attempted at Marathon Key.

The Patrol counter-moved at once. Four cars went swiftly to Marathon Key and the inspectors hid them in the mangrove bushes. As the Semper Fidelis moved up the channel, three officers hastily changed uniforms to old civilian clothes.

By LILLIE MAY MARSHALL

It Was Venison A La Abshier

So it's a man's world! But what wife would object, when her husband not only brings home the venison, but prepares and serves it, as well!

That's what we found at Belleview when we arrived on invitation to dinner, at the home of the Lou Abshiers. Standing over the steaming pots, wearing a smile of victory, Lou explained in detail for our benefit, how he had gone about preparing the deer liver and heart for the dish — the aroma of which had set us literally drooling from the time we had entered the house—and another of the very best stew ever!

We learned that deer liver is the most preferred and the best tasting liver of any animal—or fowl, for that matter; that it is the only liver which has no gall attached; and that it is the portion over which lots are cast when a group of hunters share a kill around a camp fire. That's the way Lou prefers to cook deer, but he does all right in the kitchen, too!

For that liver-heart combination in thick, wonderful tasting gravy, he slices the liver about a quarter of an inch thick and the heart lengthwise into thin slices. Instead of dusting flour over the meat, he pours it on and stirs the sliced meat around in the dish until it is thoroughly coated. The meat, being moist, takes the flour nicely. Then, in a small amount of fat in a heavy saucepan, he browns it well.

Like most men, Mr. Abshier likes plenty seasoning. So, he sliced four onions about egg size and added, together with salt, pepper and garlic, to taste. When the onion was tender and brown, he added hot water to more than cover all, and to make, together with the flour on the meat, that thick, brown gravy—beautiful to look at, wonderful to smell, and oh, so good to taste!

Then it was ready to cook slowly for an hour and a half, and became a flavorful liver dish which, eaten with white, flaky rice, in the true southern style in which he served it, was a treat indeed!

Speaking again of his favored out-door cooking, Lou mentioned that he usually substitutes grits for rice for the tasty liver-heart-onion combination in the open.

Had he not known we were "venison-ignorant," Mr. Abshier would probably have stopped with this dish, but he went all out to put us "in the know" concerning deer meat, and made a stew also, by his favorite recipe. It had to be his favorite recipe, for no stew could surpass this one—and come to think of it, we don't remember ever having tasted its equal.

Cutting the venison into small chunks, he browned it in fat in a Dutch oven, uncovered, then added hot water—the amount, he explained, depending upon the quantity of stew he was to make—salt, pepper and a little garlic, covering the pot now, of course.

Heavy-handed with onions again, he quartered and added them, cooking until the meat was juicily tender, before dropping in pared potatoes and carrots.

Ah, that taste-testing aroma when he lifted the lid about 20 minutes later to add a flour-and-water thickening! As a finishing touch the "chef" cut a medium sized cabbage into six wedges so that a part of the core was left to hold together the leaves of each portion, and steamed this vegetable on top of the stew, until tender.

Well, with these two delectable dishes on a beautifully appointed table—where even the centerpiece was a deer, ceramic, in a woodsy affected setting—rice with each puffy grain standing alone, beautifully browned fluffy biscuits, Lou's own pineapple butterfly salad, and a well whetted appetite, we lost little time talking. But well before leaving the table, we had mentally nominated Lou and Edith Abshier "host and hostess of the year!"

WILD DUCK

Ducks; 3 cups toasted bread crumbs; 3 chopped onions; 2 packages prepared stuffing; 2 cups boiling water; 1 tsp. salt; pepper to taste; duck giblets, cooked and chopped.

Clean and singe the ducks. It may be necessary to skin them to rid them completely of feathers. Place ducks in a large kettle and cover with cold water. Bring to the boiling point and parboil for one hour. Remove from kettle to cool, before stuffing.

Put all ingredients in a large mixing bowl and mix well. Then pour boiling water over them as needed and cover immediately. Let stand 10 minutes, then add one-fourth of a cup of melted butter and mix lightly. Stuff the ducks and place side by side in a roasting pan. Bake at 300 degrees until tender and brown, basting with the roasting juices.

—Mrs. J. W. ARMSTRONG, Holly Hill.

ROAST DOVE

Doves; salt, pepper; butter; Florida orange juice; parsley.

Salt and pepper cleaned doves. Rub butter lightly over them and place in a roasting pan. Roast in a hot oven (450 degrees) about 15 minutes, or until brown. Reduce heat to 325 degrees and roast 25 to 30 minutes more. Baste occasionally with Florida orange juice. Garnish with parsley and serve on toast.

—Mrs. I. E. TORREY, Pensacola.

HOT QUAIL A LA FLORIDA

Six tender young quails; grape leaves; large, thin slices of salt pork.

Clean the quails and truss the legs close to the body. Wrap the birds in grape leaves, then in the slices of salt pork and tie the larding securely with string. Preheat the roasting pan in a hot oven (450 degrees). Lay the birds on their sides in the pan and roast them, basting frequently, for five minutes. Then turn them over and roast them for five minutes on the other side, and finally roast them for five minutes on their backs.

Discard the larding pork and string and remove the birds to a heat-proof casserole. Add a little water to the juices in the roasting pan, cooking and stirring in the brown crustiness. Pour over the birds and simmer for four to five minutes longer.

—Mrs. BUD SCOTT, St. Petersburg.

RABBIT BAKED IN MILK

One rabbit; ½ cup flour; 1 tsp. salt; 1 tsp. sage; 3 lbs. fat; 3 strips bacon; 4 cups thin cream sauce.

Dress and clean the rabbit and disjoint in pieces for serving. Mix the flour, salt and sage in a bowl. Thoroughly coat the rabbit with this mixture; then saute in the fat until brown on all sides. Place the rabbit in a casserole and lay the bacon over the surface. Pour the thin cream sauce over and around the rabbit. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees) for two hours or until the meat is tender.

FORT CLINCH, at Fernandina, was visited by General Lee in 1861. The sketch above was made four months later at the time of its capture.

When Lee Visited Florida

Twice during this period he was in Florida, spending most of his time in Fernandina, which was considered a likely candidate for attack by the Union Navy. About the fortifications there, he remarked wryly, "I have been down the coast to visit Amelia Island, to examine the defenses. They are poor, indeed. I hope the enemy will be polite enough to wait for us."

The enemy waited only four months. Fernandina fell without a struggle.

While Lee was inspecting Fernandina, he crossed over to Cumberland Island and visited his father's grave for the first time. Harry Lee had fallen sick and put in at Dungeness as he was returning home from the West Indies in 1818, and had died there at the home of his friend, Gen. Nathaniel Green.

In 1862, Lee took full command of the Confederate forces. The next time he visited Florida was not as a soldier, but as a tourist trying to regain the health that had been undermined by the last severe campaigns of war, the crushing defeat and subsequent devastation of the South, which he felt so deeply.

His doctors had recommended a trip. He and his daughter Agnes pushed farther and farther south in search of warm weather, until they finally found it in Florida. They went up the St. Johns and docked at Colonel Cole's plantation north of Palatka, where they spent the night and "ate oranges from the trees," as he wrote his wife. As much as Florida today might regret that President Eisenhower does not come any farther south than Georgia, the Palatka Herald of that day reported: "He (Lee) spent the night with Colonel Cole at Orange Mills. Our citizens would have been glad to have had the honor of his presence, but in this they were disappointed."

Lee returned to Jacksonville, then over to Dungeness to pay what he recognized as his last visit to his father's grave, and finally back home. His last words about Florida are as true today as when they were written. He said, "The climate was delightful, the fish inviting and abundant."

FLORIDA FACTS

By Helen Thorndike

Perhaps one day while riding along a Florida road, back in the woods or even on a highway, you have spotted a dark object which looked like a very large ball. No doubt your first thought was "That's a funny looking turtle." And then, before you have mustered the courage to pick up the strange thing with the snouter-shaped head and long protruding ears it has started away from you, creating its foot prints with the long, sweeping tail.

You are not quite sure whether it's good or bad, but you have let get away from you what could have made a splendid meal—an armadillo. Those who have eaten them say they are most tasty cooked with sweet potatoes—that is "Poor Man's Turkey" has the taste of pork.

The armadillo's body is encased in an armor of small bony plates, which are flexible. The shoulders, haunches and forehead, are stiffly encased, insuring the animal considerable protection from its enemies. It cannot bite, for it has no teeth.

The armadillo is not a native of Florida. Some one, it is said, let loose a few of them here a number of years ago and now they may be found in most Florida counties.

Emergency Hospital for Birds

By SUE POPE BURKHARDT

WHEN Mrs. Ruth von Behren undertook to take care of her first fledgling bird, a baby mourning dove, she found her avocation. "So shines a good deed in a naughty world" that she soon became the willing recipient of other orphaned or injured birds and her home in West Palm Beach, becoming an aviary.

At present, Mrs. Von Behren has 26 birds in cages in various stages of recovery from cats, falls from nests, or harm from striking plate glass windows.

Her husband, Charles, shares in the hobby, and together they study bird books to identify birds and to find correct foods. Though at first, feeding was largely a matter of trial and error, only two fledglings were ever lost because of early methods.

If in doubt about what a baby bird needs, try it with anything it will accept, and chances for its growth will be good, they say. Feeding nestlings is no real problem, because any noise at the nest causes them to open mouths wide.

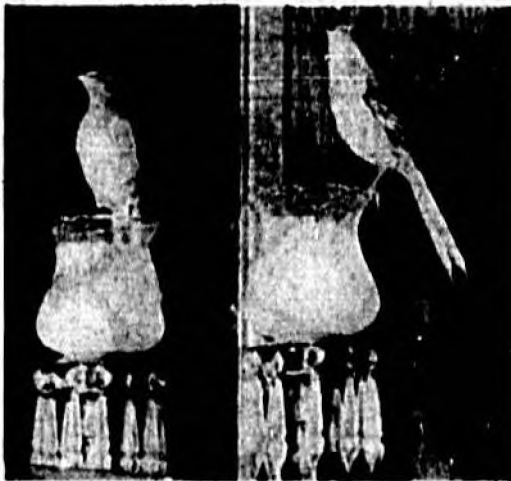

There is a Florida law against the caging of healthy wild birds and the Von Behrens tell of a night hawk released successfully after recovering from a hurt. On the other hand, they recall a mocking bird reared by a friend from a nestling, and then turned loose, only to be picked to death by other birds for invading their territory.

Remembering this, they fear for Tony, who knows no life but that of his toy-filled cage, and nightly flights about the house. Like all mocking birds, he defends his own territory, fighting his own image in a mirror over the piano.

A beautiful boat-tailed grackle released when fully grown tried to make friends with a cat, and was promptly sprung upon.

They have two doves, one reared from babyhood, the other discovered with one wing completely missing. "Pickey," the fledgling, sees his heart out to a bright yellow toy bird, but ignores the dove with the missing wing.

The Von Behrens do not try surgery or other physical methods for healing, declaring that loving attention and food is all that is needed in most cases. Recounting the story of their sparrow with a missing leg, she quoted the rebuke (made by the small boy who found him) to a grown-up who insisted that he was only a sparrow and should be put away. "Yes, but he is alive and a bird," the little boy said, and that sums up the Von Behren philosophy, too. Mrs. Von Behren puts it this way: "Give any bird a chance to live and he will enjoy human companionship even if he never can mingle with his own kind again."

A BOAT, anchored in an out of the way place such as this one is, would be under suspicion. The plane would contact the boat patrol.

Thus, as the ship pulled in, the crew suspected nothing. To all appearances, the place was deserted except for three shabby-looking characters, lounging on the dock.

Entirely unsuspecting, the captain drew alongside and tied up. When the vessel was secured, a whistle sounded and three uniformed Border Patrolmen stepped out of the bushes, boarded the Semper Fidelis and took over.

It was as neat a "collar" as the Border Patrol had made in a long time.

Only three persons, all crew members, were visible when the ship docked. However, a search soon disclosed three aliens—two Roumanians and a Pole—hidden below deck. All were young men from 22 to 26 years of age.

The smugglers were taken to Miami and jailed. Heavy bonds were set by U. S. Commissioner Roger E. Davis.

Next day at a hearing, sworn statements were taken from the aliens. All said that Gregario Simonovich had engineered the smuggling.

The captain of the Semper Fidelis, Albert N. Padaga, turned out to be a former ace in Germany's Air Force during World War II. His arrest as a smuggler did not surprise the Border Patrol, for he had been under suspicion for some time.

Padaga drew a prison sentence, and the aliens were deported. Simonovich was inconvenienced for a time by the loss of Padaga, but the Russian seemed to have little difficulty in getting other "runners."

He still had done nothing to warrant action by the Cuban government, and the U. S. Border Patrol could not arrest him in Havana.

The hunt had not as yet even drawn close to Griaka, the Fox. (To be continued)

National, State Heads Attend Cancer Session

A precedent setting group attended the Educational meeting of the six-county District Eight, Florida Division of the American Cancer Society, at the Mayfair Inn yesterday.

The Seminole County Chapter of the American Cancer Society was host for the occasion which drew both national and State officials of the organization here.

Walter James, National Field Representative of the American Cancer Society, with headquarters in New York City, said, "Our objective here is to educate the public and certainly a meeting of this type provides community leaders an opportunity to get together and work cooperatively to gain those objectives."

L. H. Peterson, executive vice president of the Florida Division of the American Cancer Society, of Tampa, said, "I am certainly gratified with the turnout and wonderful attention. I want to thank those who made this meeting possible. Interest in our society and in the problems confronting us is picking up—the public is growing more aware of what we are doing."

At a luncheon following morning sessions of various groups of the organization, Mrs. Julius Dingfelder, president of the Seminole County Unit of the American Cancer Society told the group of more than 125 that, "We are extremely proud to have you meet with us. You will create attention and interest in our organization here."

Mayor F. D. Scott, representing the City of Sanford and Forrest Breckinridge, manager of the Seminole County Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the county group to Sanford.

Volis A. Williams Jr., Assistant State's Attorney, principal speaker at the luncheon meeting, said, "We desire to elect, we overlook some things that are more important than money."

"It disgusts me," he said, "that we are financially able to provide funds for hog cholera shots, spreading decline, and other requests and yet we do not have funds to provide housing for some 600 children in our mental and rehabilitating organizations of the State."

Speaking on the subject "The Part Volunteers have played in our history," Williams said "What advance has our society made without making some offering for service on their own free will. Yet the capture of the Brink's holdup is more important nationwide than the discovery of the Salk polio vaccine. He added, "Aren't we fortunate to have among us those who will make some lasting contribution of service to society."

"One of these days some doctor doing research will make a discovery as equal to that of the Salk Polio Vaccine," he said.

Mrs. Dingfelder paid tribute to those organizations and individuals who helped make the districtwide meeting possible.

Beginning at 2 o'clock and continuing through the afternoon, meetings and discussions of the various problems confronting local units were held.

An internationally known baseball umpire who will open his famous school for umpires at Longwood on Thursday, recounted some of his experiences as an umpire for 19 years in the National League at the weekly meeting of the Sanford Rotary Club this noon.

George Barr, who will start the 20th season of the school that has placed umpires such as Frank Secory and L. V. Roberts in the National League and Bill McKinley and Scotty Robb in the American League as well as many arbiters in leagues of lesser classification, told his listeners of the hold that our national game has on the people of other lands. His experiences of the past 25 years ranged from the ridiculous to the sublime. The honors paid him include that of being the only honorary member of the Business and Professional Woman's Club of this City.

Bicycle Safety Planned

A Bicycle Safety Club will be formed in Sanford Saturday morning, according to Mrs. Frances Murray, chairman of the safety committee at Southside School.

This is a countywide effort, said Mrs. Murray, and we are hoping that a big percentage of bicycles will be registered during the inspection and registration that will take place next Saturday morning.

Mrs. Murray will be assisted by Police Chief Roy G. Williams, and officers of the Sanford Police Department in giving safety tests to youngsters who attend the initial meeting of the organization.

This is primarily a safety step, Mrs. Murray said, but it will be coordinated with the citywide recreation program and many big events are being planned for the spring and summer months. Weiner roasts, bicycle treks, and other entertainment features are being planned now for the organization of young bicycle riders.

When the bicycle riders receive their tests, the bicycle itself will be registered and the owner issued a tag.

The event will take place at 10 o'clock next Saturday morning in Fort Mellon Park just to the rear of the Chamber of Commerce Building, said Mrs. Murray.

Cost of the tag when registered will be 50c, Mrs. Murray said. And she added, "It isn't compulsory that the bicycles be registered, but it is much safer since the serial number and owner of the bicycle will be recorded at the City Hall for future reference."

The organization isn't meant to buy fancy gadgets for bicycles, emphasized Mrs. Murray, but is meant to make bicycles safer to ride at all times.

Also assisting in the event will be Bob Karns, local insurance agency owner, Sidney Vihlen, W. W. Tyre, and Ed Christensen, director of the Citywide recreation program.

Foreign Policy May Appear In Drive

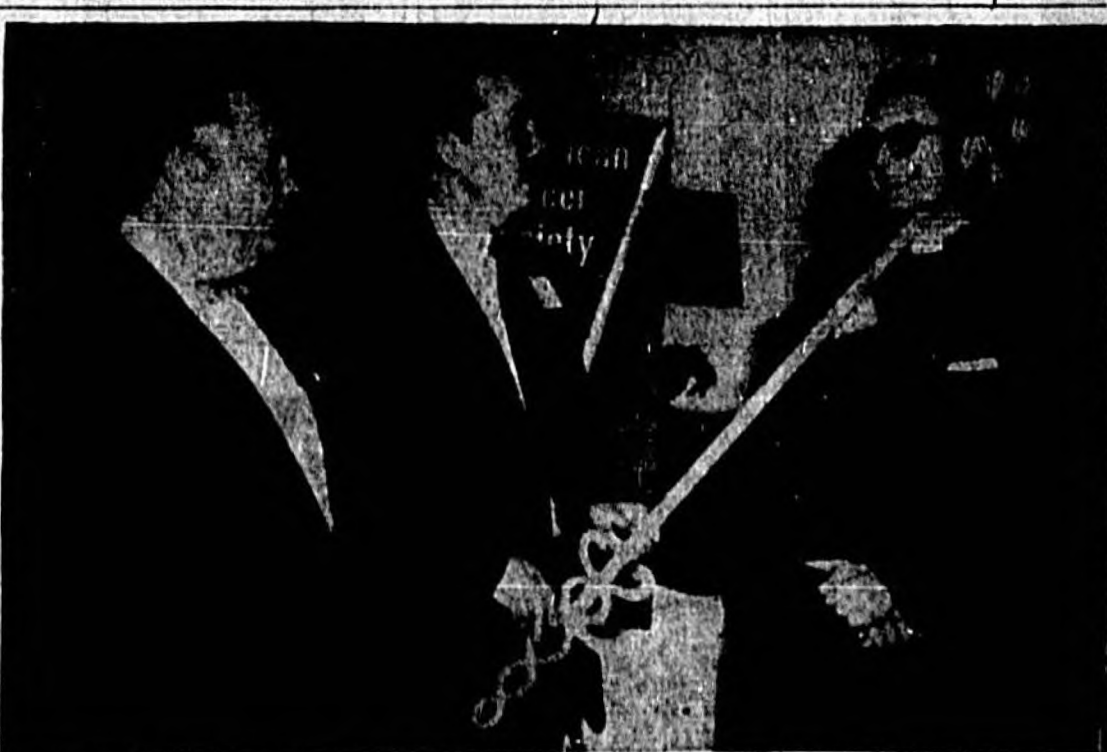

WASHINGTON — Foreign policy appeared today to be assuming such proportions as a political issue that Secretary of State Dulles may be induced to take to the campaign stump.

He said he has no present intentions of making presidential campaign speeches, but he may change his mind in the light of a furor over his latest defense of the administration's handling of foreign affairs.

A Life magazine article last week quoted him as having said the nation has looked war in the face in Asia three times and avoided it.

Dulles was roundly criticized by a number of Democrats and by some British newspapers for his quoted statement that "the ability to get to the verge without getting into war is the necessary art."

Residents Warned To Take Precaution In Burning Trash

District Forester Harold Mikell of the Florida Forest Service today stated that due to the increased number of wildfires in Seminole County, he has notified the County Ranger in charge of the Fire Control Unit in Seminole County to clamp down on the county's wildfire violations.

Under the State Forest Fire Law, the careless violation is a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of up to $200 and/or a county prison term of up to three months. Careless woods-burners are also liable for suppression costs, and they may be sued for damages caused by their fires.

Mikell said, "Since the first of January, Seminole County has had 14 wildfires, burning some 207 acres of valuable timberland. The majority of these fires are being caused by people who do not take adequate precautions in burning trash. In addition to this carelessness, the grass and woods are tinder dry due to the numerous frosts and lack of rainfall."

"Please do not burn your trash until we have had sufficient rainfall to protect yourself and your neighbor's property from a disastrous wildfire. You, the person who starts the trash fire, are responsible if the fire gets away. It will be your responsibility to pay the suppression costs of a careless woods fire," Mikell concluded.

Two Houses Burn, Child Dies In Fire

A blazing inferno destroyed two frame houses in Goldsboro this morning, killing a 5-month-old negro baby left on a bed in the front room where the fire started.

Cathy Edwards, 8-month-old daughter of Ernest and Nellie Mae Edwards, who lived at 1715 West 18th St. was burned to death in the blaze that her mother could not reach because of the heat.

A strong east wind, blowing across the area this morning fanned the blaze as fire came near destroying an entire line of homes owned by Willie Bailey.

Two of the houses were completely destroyed before firemen could bring a hose line from 15th St. to the scene of the fire.

More than 1,000 feet of hose was brought to the scene from inside the city limits to finally bring the blaze under control.

Nellie Mae Edwards, whose husband works at Sherman Concrete Pipe Co., said she was in the yard washing when several of her children ran out to tell her an old stove was smoking. She attempted to run into the house but was met by a wall of flame caused by the exploding stove.

The body of the infant was found on the remains of a bed burned to ashes in the front room of the four-room frame structure.

There are five children in the Edwards family other than the child who was burned to death.

Power lines were burned from the burning homes and lay in the street burning until firemen from Florida Power and Light Company could reach the scene and cut the line.

Flames from the two burning homes were so hot that firemen could not come within striking distance of the home with the auxiliary tanks that at first furnished the water.

It was the second fire of the morning and firemen had to be sent from the scene of one blaze to the other. At the time of the fire on 18th St. firemen were fighting a blaze that destroyed a kitchen at 1101 Hickory Ave.

Phillips also said that during 1955, the Phillips operation employed an average of 62 people, 37 of whom were residents of Sanford or Seminole County.

Phillips predicted that the year of 1956 would be as successful as 1955 for the building industry in Sanford. "The market will probably be more selective," he prophesied, "and people will be more choosy about locations, design, materials, workmanship and equipment!"

Asked how he intended to appeal to the more selective buyer, the developer said that he would build (Continued on Page Eight)

Photographers from both the State Advertising Commission and CBS-TV were on hand to film for television viewers the events of the day.
