Death Toll May Reach 1,000 In Japan's Flood

600 School Children Drowned At Kobe As Overtaxed Reservoirs Collapse

Americans Said To Be Imperiled

Numerous Landslides Reported In Hills Surrounding Kobe

TOKYO, July 6.—(AP)—A furious flood surged through Kobe, principal port of western Japan, and reliable estimates placed number of dead at between 400 and 480 persons. A Kobe resident telephoned to Tokyo that destruction was heavy and said the death toll might reach 1,000.

The inundation came on the heels of serious floods which last week swept wide areas of Japan and left a toll estimated by the home ministry at 861 killed, injured or missing.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—(AP)—The Dollar Liner "President Cleveland" reported today at least 800 Japanese school children and 40 Europeans were drowned in Kobe, Japan, when three war reservoirs, overtaken by heavy rains, collapsed.

In a message to Globe Wireless in San Francisco, H. K. Lewis, chief radio operator aboard the Cleveland, said the tragedy occurred about 10 A. M. July 5 (1938 P. M. EST Monday).

San Francisco, Japan, Kobe and 129 were dead and 141 missing, and 60,000 homes damaged. In addition students were killed when a school collapsed at Osaka and three more persons were drowned there.

The emperor and empress personally granted money for relief funds.

Scores of Americans were said to be imperiled by the floods. Frederick Taylor, native of Sacramento, Calif., at midnight gave the Associated Press a vivid telephone picture of the flood which had cut a tragic path through the heart of the city of 938,000.

It's still raining and I am heading for higher ground before morning," said Taylor, long-time resident of Kobe, I will try to get out by launch tomorrow.

Best estimates show between 400 and the dead but so many buildings have been smashed flat that nobody can say for certain, we know five foreigners are dead. They are a Frenchman, a Russian, a German woman and two Portuguese children. I do not believe any Americans have been killed or injured.

"It has been raining for three days and the hills on all sides of Kobe have been slipping." If the slides seemed to advance like moving mountains right up to the residential districts. "They came up to within a few feet of my place. You can hear low rumbling and then trees crashing. There is a reservoir in the hills back of the city and some say it broke. I do not know about that. Any way millions of tons of water has been dammed in the hills by the slides.

"Everybody was awake tonight but there was no sound. The worst problem is bringing water which office are drinking around in tanks."

Disturbance East Of Jax Reported

JACKSONVILLE, July 6.—(AP)—United States Weather Bureau located a slight disturbance today about 400 miles east of Jacksonville. The advisory issued at 10:30 A. M. said the intensity was diminishing and the disturbance was moving northward. The bureau said squalls would continue for the next 36 hours in an area considerable distance off the coast of the Carolinas and a slight squally condition over the northern Bahamas and the Florida straits for the next 24 hours.

Kiwanians Are Hosts To Young New York Actor

Sam Byrd Remarks On Failures Met With During His Career

Sam Byrd, addressing the Kiwanians at their regular weekly luncheon at the Valdes Hotel today, spent most of his time telling of the failures incident to his career.

He told of the purchase of "Journeyman" from Erskine Caldwell who authored "Tobacco Road," the play in which Sam gained national renown or his portrayal of Dude Lester, a cracker boy.

"The play was a much better drama than 'Tobacco Road,' Sam declared, "but the public didn't take to it."

Sam told about the production of "Journeyman" which opened this season while he was playing in "Of Mice and Men" after he finished his performance in that play he went over to see how his play "Journeyman" was making out. As he got there, he noticed that the theater was deserted but a little 16-year-old girl in the audience was alone and as he approached she said "You surely have bought yourself something." Sam said he agreed entirely.

Out of the failure of that play, he declared, he had learned a great deal. He pointed out that Henry Hull, who played the part of Jester Lester in "Tobacco Road," said he should have learned more from that failure than from all of his successes put together.

Stating that he was glad to be back in Sanford among all his friends, Sam said the hardest place to prove that one is a success is in the home town where everybody has known you for years.

President Sidney Nix thanked him for speaking to the club and wished him a pleasant visit.

George A. DeCottey was chairman of the program committee.

Firm Ordered To Stop Anti-Union Activities

WASHINGTON, July 6.—(AP)—The National Labor Relations Board announced yesterday it had ordered the Harlan Fuel company, Yancey, Ky., to cease interfering with efforts of the United Mine Workers to unionize the coal workers in Harlan county, Kentucky.

The board ordered the company to re-employ 24 men who it decided were discharged for union activities, and to disband, as a company-dominated union, the Yancey Workers Association, Inc.

The board's order was extended to prohibit the mining company from barring U. M. W. organizers from the streets of Yancey. The company holds a 99-year lease on all land and buildings of the town and had contended that by virtue of its lease it was entitled to bar union organizers from entering the community.

The board held that the exclusion of U. M. W. organizers was an unfair labor practice on the grounds it denied to the employees the right to organize for collective bargaining, under the Wagner act.

The board said representatives of the company had threatened the lives of union organizers.

Market Pact Changes Are Recommended

Control Group Suggests Measures To Make For More Efficient Operation

Following a list of difficulties issued last week which in the opinion of the Control Committee hindered the efficient operation of the Celer Marketing Agreement during the past season, the committee today released a list of suggestions for remedying the situation.

Declaring that it would not be fitting for the retiring committee to do more than make recommendations, it was pointed out that most of "needed adjustments" will require only the approval of the committee, and consist mainly of improvements in the office routine. A few, however, will necessitate amendments to the marketing pact, which it was pointed out, could be worked out at a later time.

In its third report, the committee recommended that it meet not later than December and with the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture formulate a definite "shipping policy" and then advise all members of the industry.

The committee also suggested that a secretary and a few field men be employed not later than Oct. 1 for the purpose of recording all settings and tabulating important statistics by month. This information would then be sent to interested members throughout the industry.

Pointing out that efficient administration is based on facts, the committee declared that each shipper should be prepared to furnish in some detail, information covering the entire crop, settings, interstate and intrastate shipments, amounts shipped by each shipper and other necessary information. The committee underscored that this was not a burdensome or an complicated as it seemed and that serious misunderstandings might be avoided in this manner. The committee also suggested that prompt reports be required.

Regarding estimates, the committee recommended that a sufficient number of field men be employed to allow preliminary estimates on which to base prorata recommendations and that a final estimate be made on the day before or on the day of the cutting. The first number will be used to determine the allotment percentage for the state while the second will be used to determine the number of crates to be allotted to each individual.

Declaring that reports to the industry are most essential, the committee pointed out that a slight increase in office expense will permit distribution of bulletins from time to time advising the growers and shippers of conditions and problems confronting the committee and the industry.

As a measure for guarding against the wrong usage of emergency allotments and withdrawals, the committee recommended that certain field men be designated to pass on applications and stated that their decision would be final except as qualified by the committee or the Secretary of Agriculture.

The committee further pointed out that under the provisions of the Marketing Agreement, emergency allotments and withdrawals were permitted only to correct errors in judgement, unforeseen weather conditions and similar conditions. This season there was no designated authority to pass on such applications.

Regarding violations, the committee said that as the provisions of the Marketing Agreement became more clearly defined legally, the Department of Agriculture could be depended upon for enforcement if the committee made the necessary reports promptly.

As a means of eliminating misunderstandings, the committee suggested that any grower or shipper having a complaint present his case directly to the committee, and that these complaints, if not settled satisfactorily after a thorough investigation, should be referred to the Secretary of Agriculture.

Pointing out that the committee has found no evidence of discrimination against the various producing sections and that the marketing pact is designed to control interstate shipments during the season, the committee declared that it will have cost about $15,000.

Low Rent Housing Case To Be Heard By Supreme Court

Validity Of Municipal Housing Authorities Will Be Tested

TALLAHASSEE, July 6.—(AP)—The State Supreme Court will decide whether the larger cities of Florida may establish municipal housing commissions and borrow money from the United States to construct low-rent houses.

Lawyers presented arguments yesterday on a test case from Jacksonville that will control the plans of several other cities to establish slum-clearance projects.

Counsel for William Marvin contended Jacksonville's Municipal Housing Authority cannot issue debentures and obtain a Federal loan without first having a referendum. The loan would be repaid with an annual subsidy from the Federal Government and with rentals from the houses.

Lawyers for the Housing Authority declared the proposed projects did not involve any obligation upon municipally-owned property that might subject it to taxation for payment of the loans. Jacksonville proposes to borrow about $1,027,000 from the government, and raise about $125,000 locally by sale of debentures from a low-cost housing project. The $125,000 would be paid from rentals, which also would maintain and extend the housing community. The Federal loan would be repaid with a subsidy grant of about $47,000 a year from the government.

The issue in the case is whether the debentures to be issued for obtaining the loans constitute bonds within the provisions of the State Constitution. Bonds cannot be issued without the approval of free-holders in an election.

Sam Byrd Returns To City For Short Vacation Visit

BY CHARLES CHALKER

Sanford's Sam Byrd has returned home again from a year of successful acting in New York—a year that definitely marks Sam as one of the pre-eminent new and great American Theater.

Yesterday, learning that Sam had returned to Sanford for a short visit with his mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Zachary, I called Sam on the telephone and asked for an interview. He suggested that I see him about 5:30 o'clock.

Promptly at 5:30 o'clock I rang the doorbell at Mrs. Zachary's home. A young fellow dressed in a sport coat, yellow polo shirt, light blue-gray palm beach trousers, and tan and white sport shoes, greeted me. It was Sam. Taking me by the arm he guided me into the living room and invited me to have a seat.

Whatever doubt I might have had about interviewing one of the most widely publicized actors of the American stage was dispelled at once by Sam's good-natured, unaffected manner. He made himself comfortable by draping a leg over the arm of his chair and frequently shifted, throwing his other leg over the opposite arm. He bit just before a race, anxious to get into action. His eyes darted constantly from object to object in the room like a bee sucking pollen from a flower and then flitting to the next blossom nearby. One felt that his mind raced ahead so rapidly as to make it difficult for one endowed with a slow Southern drawl to say what he was thinking.

Even though he retains his Southern accent, Sam's wide, expressive mouth forms words faster than one might expect from a Southerner. He intimated that he had to be careful not to absorb a Northern accent. Most actors who try to imitate a Southern accent make a mess of it, he declared.

Sam, who once had ideas of becoming a newspaper reporter, needed no promptings as to what to say. He knew what to say and how to say it.

He pointed out that in addition to visiting his family, he intended to visit Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, the novelist whose recent book, "The Yearling," has achieved such wide acclaim; to discuss the possibility of producing a play based on her novel, "South Moon Under." He said Miss Rawlings wants to try her hand at play writing and that if satisfactory arrangements can be made he may produce such a play after Christmas.

There are two other plays he is considering for possible production after Christmas. One is a light piece called "Dude for Ladies" and the other is called "Soldier Boy." Sam didn't think much of the last one for he hardly mentioned it, but the former play seemed to fascinate him.

Although Sam first achieved fame as "Dude Lester" in "Tobacco Road" he equaled his performance in his role in "Of Mice and Men" during the past season. The play was acclaimed the best

Fighting In Orient Continues On First Anniversary Of War

Military Motives Seen In Spanish Peace Proposals

Europeans Willing To See Franco Victory If Aides Move Out

BY MORGAN W. BEATTY
WASHINGTON, July 6.—(AP)—The simple truth about the Spanish war at this stage of the game can be covered in two sentences:

France's drive to end the war has bogged down, so that he will require at least another year if he keeps on going at his present pace to clean up both Valencia and Barcelona.

Most of the other nations in Europe, whatever their sympathies in Spain, have therefore decided to do some serious horse-trading to isolate the Spanish firework, and remove them from the other powder-kegs on the Continent.

The business of horse-trading among governments is naturally a complicated one and requires a lot of high-sounding terms, such as non-intervention, beligerent rights, etc.

But from the viewpoint of American experts, it is beginning to look as if Great Britain and France are quite willing to see the Franco-Mussolini-Hitler combination win out in Spain, if, in return, Mussolini and Hitler get out of the Spanish theater of action.

Here's how they figure that out: Every time you get down to cases, the meddling of outside nations in Spain has nothing at all to do with principles, but rather with the peculiar geography of the Mediterranean ocean and the Spanish peninsula.

The special points of interests in the Mediterranean are the Balearic islands and Gibraltar. The islands are the property of Spain and lie just off the east coast of that country. Probably a major reason why Mussolini supported Franco was the opportunity the alliance offered to base his submarines and airplanes in the Balearics.

For the Balearics are the military keys to the African colonies of France colonies that would pour men and supplies across the Mediterranean to France if she were engaged in a bitter end war. With the Balearics in Mussolini's hands, and filled with Italian submarine and airplane bases, France's line of supply from Africa would be menaced.

Then there's Gibraltar, now in British hands, which gives Britain control of both ends of the Mediterranean. If Germany could erect big gun emplacements and other war machinery in Spain just across from Gibraltar, and rumor says she has already done this, British control of the ocean would be menaced beyond comfort.

Therefore, it's quite natural for the British and French to offer any proposition, even if it means a Franco victory, if only Germany and Italy would take their volutes—so-called—out of Spain and the Balearics. It's quite natural for these two powerful nations to allow France to bomb vessels carrying their flags, and otherwise offer them insult, so long as they figure they can eventually lure Mussolini and Hitler away, without risking a war.

That explains why Franco's planes, which probably are Italian planes based in the Balearics, are blasting away at ships flying the British flag without any interference. Any show of anger on the part of the British just now might wreck the British treaty with Italy, under which Italy pretends eventually to get out of the mess.

Not Good For The State
At the Supreme Court's hearing yesterday on the Volusia county sheriff's attempt to prohibit the operation of marble tables, in compliance with Governor Cone's expressed instructions, counsel for the operators insisted that the tables were not gambling devices, that there was no payoff, and that they were intended for amusement purposes only.

DO NOT ACCEPT BLESSINGS WITHOUT APPRECIATION.

So many times during the past few years we have heard folks say that the people want to gamble and that therefore they should be allowed to gamble. And they cite as proof of their statement that the people want to gamble, the fact that obviously so many of them do.

Extravagant Waste
In good times and bad, people are guilty of the common human frailty of waste, and especially is this true of Americans who are used to having more than citizens of other countries.

'Blockade' Is Feature At The Ritz Theatre

The most dramatic situation of the present day—the Spanish civil war—forms the background of the love story which is told in "Blockade," Walter Wang's new romantic drama which stars Madeline Carroll and Henry Fonda at the Ritz Theatre today.

This is the romance of a man and a girl drawn into the conflict almost against their will. They are lovers who were at the same time bitter enemies.

The story opens with the arrival of Normal Bass (Madeline Carroll) in peaceful Spain, where she has come to join her father. She meets Marco (Henry Fonda), a peaceful, home-loving farmer, and the pair fall in love. Norma discovers that her father and his life-long associate, Andre, have been engaged in a feud for years, hoping to gain from future activities of the first guns of the civil war.

Norma is immediately recruited by Andre and she, too, is engaged in the fighting. She is forced to become a confederate of Andre, and is assigned to bring about the destruction of a food plot belonging to the blockade.

But after witnessing the suffering of the starving townspeople, Norma suffers a total reversal of feeling, and desperately tries to right the wrong she has done.

In a dangerous and highly dramatic situation, she and Marco combine forces and soon find themselves imprisoned by war-mad soldiers bent on taking the lives of both. The climax is a riot of exciting action.

"Blockade," though it employs the war only as a background and favors neither side in the conflict, furnishes a highly interesting and remarkably accurate picture of Spain's civil strife.

Produced on a lavish scale, its many elaborate settings are outstanding examples of Hollywood's uncanny skill in achieving realism in locale and atmosphere.

Leesburg Cops Series With 5 To 3 Victory Over Lookouts

Fans Storm Playing Field For Free For All Battle

Unscheduled Attraction Starts At End Of Seventh When Gobel, Leach, Cook And Langston Tangle At Plate

By JULIAN SIENSTROM

Featured by an uncheduled first fight and a free for all, the Leesburg Goshawk game with the Sanford Lookout gave fans a face their money's worth. The night at the Municipal Athletic Field although the Lookout outfit went down by the count of 5 to 3.

The big attraction came at the end of the seventh when Eddie Jack Hunter called Maxie Longton out on strikes with the bat, Leach and two out. Billy Gobel, Leesburg first baseman, came running to the dugout and "pays of crack" at Langton who turned and sent Gobel to the ground with a stunning blow to the jaw.

Manager Neble Leach came running out of the Goshawk dugout leading the Leesburg delegation. The Lookout players stood the game and moved in a battle near home plate. Manager Leach was knocked out during the tangle. Chief Cook, big Lookout right-handed batter, was summoned from the stands to take care of Leach and Gobel after a hand to hand struggle. The fracas and play was resumed, but not until over 200 fans swarmed onto the field from the bleachers.

Leesburg started the scoring off Harold Fitzgould in the second frame, taking advantage of two hits and two costly errors. In the third stanza they failed another when Arnold scored on Drew's triple to left center field. In the fifth, Grant walked and scored on Drew's two-bagger to deep left field.

Sanford scored all three runs in the fifth when Ben Gutierrez singled and Joe Rimus walked. Fitzgould sacrificed both runners and Billy Moose singled through the box to center field setting heavy movement, the committee decided that if the provisions of the pact work hardships on any section, the facts should be presented at a hearing and adjustments made.

Deciding that any marketing agreement is a co-operative enterprise and is only successful in so far as its members willingly live up to its provisions, the committee asserted that if the necessary reports and information were issued, and if each grower will realize that the agreement is his method of protecting himself against disastrous price collapses, the pact can be counted on to do what it has set out to do.

Regarding opposition to the agreement, the committee pointed out that the program is designed to benefit growers. Growers vote for or against it. "Every program can expect honest opposition from those whose interests are contrary to the interests of those who favor the program. If most growers believe this program benefits them, then this opposition can be taken as a matter of course," the report said.

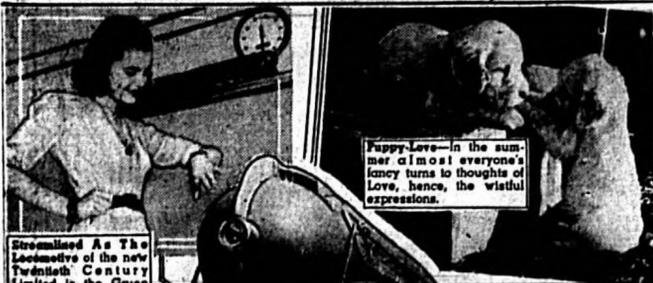

The following methods were given for handling of surplus celery: intrastate sales, elimination by heavy stripping, elimination by discarding undesirable sizes, relief purposes, leaving in the field, or destroying by rows in the field. The committee pointed out that there were no legal ways to compel elimination by the last two methods and also that if celery is left standing in the field or destroyed by rows, that the quality of celery shipped is considerably lower.

The committee also recommended that instead of the 2 percent allowance for over shipments, that over shipments up to 20 percent be permitted, provided the shipper pay the committee a fixed amount per crate for each crate over shipped. This amount could be determined at a hearing but would be large enough to take the profit out of over shipments.

Sam Byrd Returns To City For Short Visit

of the season by most critics and George Jena Nathan, long recognized dean of American dramatic critics, declared that it was one of the finest plays to appear on the American stage for some years.

Not content with being an actor, Sam has taken a couple of flings at the production end, having put on "White Man" and "Journeyman." The first was a play dealing with miscegenation and while not exactly a flop, it simply didn't "go." When asked why it wasn't a howling success, Sam merely shrugged his shoulders and his head. "They simply won't have it," he said, meaning that plays dealing with such themes didn't meet with the approval of the public. The failure of the latter play he attributed to the fact that "Tocaco Road" had been so praised that anything that Erskine Caldwell might do for some time would suffer.

When the Fall season for the theater begins, Sam expects to resume his role in "Of Mice and Men." For his part in that he gives thanks to a bellboy at the Lambs, a noted club of writers, artists, and members of the theatrical world. One night as he entered the Lambs, he stated, a bellboy asked him if he had heard that the producers of the play "Of Mice and Men" needed a character juvenile to fill one of the main roles. Sam replied that he had not, but immediately he investigated. He got the role.

The bellboy said Christmas cards. "From now on I'm going to buy all of my Christmas cards from him," Sam declared.

Motives Seen In Spanish Peace Proposals

Baleares and care the tension in the Mediterranean.

Then, too, the British and French are well aware of the fact that Mussolini and Hitler haven't got any too much money to throw Franco's way, even on a credit basis. They must feel that both Mussolini and Hitler would be willing to call it quits in Spain, if they could only get out in a blaze of glory.

The latest Franco-British scheme for a truce, and failing that, a new plan for withdrawal of volunteers, would seem to be all set up for an eventual Franco-Mussolini-Hitler victory in Spain.

The disinterested expert will tell you this is true because of a single little clause in the withdrawal scheme, under which Franco would be recognized as a "belligerent," with all the rights of a fighting government that are now extended to Republican (Loyalist) Spain.

That might sound to you and me like a purely technical point, but it is really very clever and practical from the diplomatic point of view. Here's why: England, France, and most other countries except Italy and Germany, technically classify Franco as an insurgent, a tempter to unseat the regular government of his country. To most nations, the republican government of Spain is the legal government. "But if Franco had so-called 'belligerent rights,' he could establish a legal blockade against Loyalist Spain along the coast, and thereby completely surround and beleaguer the republicans until they submitted. Any ship that attempted to pierce the blockade would be nothing more than a smuggling vessel operating outside the law and entitled to no protection whatever.

Great Britain's decision to take no action against air raiders who sink her ships in Loyalist waters in effect is recognition of Franco's rights as a belligerent, without admitting the fact to the world at large.

So, the horse-trading is a scheme to assure a Franco victory in time but, at the same time, to get Italy and Germany off the Spanish stage. Whether it works, or not, remains to be seen.

Americans Said To Be Imperiled

Numerous Landslides Reported In Hills Surrounding Kobe

TOKYO, July 6.—(AP)—A disastrous flood surged to night through Kobe, principal port of western Japan, and reliable estimates placed number of dead at between 400 and 480 persons. A Kobe resident telephoned to Tokyo that destruction was heavy and said the death toll might reach 1,000.

The inundation came on the heels of serious floods which last week swept wide areas of Japan and left a toll estimated by the home ministry at 861 killed, injured or missing.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—(AP)—The Dollar Liner "President Cleveland" reported today at least 600 Japanese school children and 40 Europeans were drowned in Kobe, Japan, when three water reservoirs, overtaxed by heavy rains, collapsed.

In a message to Globe Wireless from San Francisco, H. Ketchum, radio operator aboard the Cleveland, said the tragedy occurred 9:00 A. M., July 5 (7:00 P. M. EST Monday).

Related advices from Kobe said 139 were dead and 141 missing, and 60,000 homes damaged. In addition students were killed when a school collapsed at Osaka and three more persons were drowned there.

The emperor and empress personally granted money for relief funds.

Scores of Americans were said to be imperiled by the floods. Frederick Taylor, native of Sacramento, Calif., at midnight gave the Associated Press a vivid telephoned picture of the flood which had cut a tragic path through the heart of the city of 938,000.

It's still raining and I am heading for higher ground before morning," said Taylor, longtime resident of Kobe. I will try to get out by launch tomorrow.

Best estimates show between 400 and 480 dead but so many buildings have been smashed that nobody can say for a certainty, we know five foreigners are dead. They are a Frenchman, a Russian, a German woman and two Portuguese children. I do not believe any Americans have been killed or injured.

It has been raining for three days and the hills on all sides of Kobe have been slipping." He said the slides seemed to advance like moving mountains right up to the residential districts. "They came up to within a few feet of my place. You can hear low rumbling and then news coming. There is a reservoir in the hills back of the city and some say it broke. I do not know about that. Anyway millions of tons of water has been dammed by the hills by the slides.

Everybody was awake tonight but there was no panic. The worst problem is drinking water which police are bringing around in buckets.

Kiwanians Are Hosts To Young New York Actor

Sam Byrd Remarks On Failures Met With During His Career

Sam Byrd, addressing the Kiwanians at their regular weekly luncheon at the Valdez Hotel today, spent most of his time telling of the failures incident to his career.

He told of the purchase of "Journeyman," from Erskine Caldwell, from "Tobacco Road," the play in which Sam gained national renown or his portrayal of Duke Lester, a cracker boy.

"The play was a much better drama than 'Tobacco Road,'" Sam declared, "but the public didn't take to it."

Sam told about the production of "Journeyman" which opened this season while he was playing in "Of Mice and Men." He said after he finished his performance in that play he went over to see how his play "Journeyman" was making out. As he got there, he asserted, the theater was deserted and a little 10-year-old girl in the east was standing on the steps and as he approached she said "You surely have bought yourself something." Sam said he agreed entirely.

Out of the failure of that play, he declared, he had learned a great deal. He pointed out that Henry Hull, who played the part of Jeter Lester in "Tobacco Road," said he should have learned more from that failure than from all of his successes put together.

Stating that he was glad to be back in Sanford among all his friends, Sam said the hardest place to prove that one is a success is in the home town where everybody has known you for years.

President Sidney Nix thanked him for speaking to the club and wished him a pleasant visit.

George A. DeCotles was chairman of the program committee.

Firm Ordered To Stop Anti-Union Activities

WASHINGTON, July 6.—(AP)—The National Labor Relations Board announced yesterday it had ordered the Harlan Fuel company, Yancey, Ky., to cease interfering with efforts of the United Mine Workers to unionize the coal workers in Harlan county, Kentucky.

The board ordered the company to re-employ 24 men who it decided, were discharged for union activities, and to disband, as a company-dominated union, the Yancey Workers Association, Inc.

The board's order was extended to prohibit the mining company from barring U. M. W. organizers from the streets of Yancey. The company holds a 99-year lease of all land and buildings of the town and had attempted to bar by virtue of its lease it was entitled to bar union organizers from entering the community.

The board held that the prohibition of U. M. W. organizers was an unfair labor practice on the grounds it denied to the tenant-employees the right to organize for collective bargaining under the Wagner act.

The board said representatives of the company had threatened the lives of union organizers.

Market Pact Changes Are Recommended

Control Group Suggests Measures To Make For More Efficient Operation

Following a list of difficulties issued last week which in the opinion of the Control Committee hindered the efficient operation of the Cerey Marketing Agreement during the past season, the committee today released a list of suggestions for remedying the situation.

Declaring that it would not be fitting for the retiring committee to do more than make recommendations, it was pointed out that most of "needed adjustments" will require only the approval of the committee, and consist mainly of improvements in the office routine. A few, however, will necessitate amendments to the marketing pact, which it was pointed out, could be worked out at a later time.

In its third report, the committee recommended that it meet not later than December and with the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture formulate a definite "cultivating policy" and then advise all members of the industry.

The committee also suggested that a secretary and a few field men be employed not later than Oct. 1 for the purpose of recording all settings and tabulating intended plantings by months. This information would then be sent to interested members throughout the industry.

Pointing out that efficient administration is based on facts, the committee declared that each grower should be prepared to furnish in some detail, information covering the entire crop, setting, interstate and intrastate shipments, amounts shipped by each grower and other necessary information. The committee declared that this was not as burdensome or as complicated as it seemed and that serious misunderstandings might be avoided in this manner. The committee also suggested that prompt reports be required.

Regarding estimates, the committee recommended that a sufficient number of field men be employed to allow preliminary estimates on which to base private recommendations and that a final estimate be made on the day before or on the day of the cutting. The first number will be used to determine the allotment percentage for the state while the second will be used to determine the number of crates to be allotted to each individual.

Declaring that reports to the industry are most essential, the committee pointed out that a slight increase in office expense will permit distribution of bulletins from time to time advising the growers and shippers of conditions and problems confronting the committee and the industry.

As a measure for guarding against the wrong usage of emergency allotments and withdrawals, the committee recommended that certain field men be designated to pass on applications and stated that their decision would be final except as qualified by the committee or the Secretary of Agriculture.

The committee further pointed out that under the provisions of the Marketing Agreement, emergency allotments and withdrawals were permitted only to correct errors in judgment, unforeseen weather conditions and similar conditions. This season there was no designated authority to pass on such applications.

Regarding violations, the committee said that as the provisions of the Marketing Agreement became more clearly defined legally, the Department of Agriculture could be depended upon for enforcement if the committee made the necessary reports promptly.

As a means of eliminating misunderstandings, the committee suggested that any grower or shipper having a complaint present his case directly to the committee, and that these complaints, if not settled satisfactorily after a thorough investigation, should be referred to the Secretary of Agriculture.

Pointing out that the committee has found no evidence of discrimination against the various producing sections, and that the marketing pact is designed to complete the marketing of the crop, the committee will have no further to say.

Low Rent Housing Case To Be Heard By Supreme Court

Validity Of Municipal Housing Authorities Will Be Tested

TALLAHASSEE, July 6.—(AP)—The State Supreme Court will decide whether the larger cities of Florida may establish municipal housing commissions and borrow from the United States to construct low rent houses.

Lawyers presented arguments yesterday on a test case from Jacksonville that will control plans of several other cities to establish slum-clearance projects.

Counsel for William Maxin contended Jacksonville's Municipal Housing Authority cannot issue debentures and obtain a Federal loan without first having a referendum. The loan would be repaid with an annual subsidy from the Federal Government and with rentals from the houses.

Lawyers for the Housing Authority declared the proposed projects did not involve any obligation upon municipally-owned property that might subject it to taxation for payment of the loans. Jacksonville proposes to borrow about $1,027,000 from the government, and raise about $125,000 locally by sale of debentures from a low-cost housing project. The $125,000 would be paid from rentals, which also would maintain and extend the housing community. The Federal loan would be retired with a subsidy grant of about $47,000 a year from the government.

The issue in the case is whether the debentures to be issued for obtaining the loans constitute bonds within the provisions of the State Constitution. Bonds cannot be issued without the approval of free-holders in an election.

Sam Byrd Returns To City For Short Vacation Visit

Sanford's Sam Byrd has returned home again from a year of successful acting in New York City that definitely marks him as one of the present-day figures in what appears to be a new and great American theater.

Yesterday, learning that Sam had returned to Sanford for a short visit with his mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Zachary, I called Sam on the telephone and asked for an interview. He suggested that I see him about 5:30 o'clock.

Promptly at 5:30 o'clock I rang the doorbell at Mrs. Zachary's home. A young fellow dressed in a sport coat, yellow polo shirt, light blue-gray palm beach trousers, and an odd white sport shoes, greeted me. It was Sam. Taking me by the arm he guided me into the living room and invited me to have a seat.

Whatever doubt I might have had about interviewing one of the most widely publicized actors of the American stage was dispelled at once by Sam's good-natured, unaffected manner. He made himself comfortable by draping a leg over the arm of his chair and frequently shifted, throwing his other leg over the opposite arm. He was like a horse champing at the bit just before a race, anxious to get into action. His eyes darted constantly from object to object in the room like a bee sucking pollen from a flower and then flitting to the next blossom nearby. One felt that his mind raced about so rapidly as to make it difficult for one endowed with a slow Southern drawl to say what he was thinking.

Even though he retains his Southern accent, Sam's wide, expressive mouth forms words faster than one might expect from a Southerner. He intimated that he had to be careful not to absorb a Northern accent. Most actors who try to imitate a Southern accent make a mess of it, he declared.

Sam, who once had ideas of becoming a newspaper reporter, needed no promptings as to what to say. He knew what to say and how to say it.

He pointed out that in addition to visiting his family, he intended to visit Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, the novelist whose recent book, "The Yearling," has achieved such wide acclaim; to discuss the possibility of producing a play based on her novel, "South Moon Under."

There are two other plays he is considering for possible production during Christmas. One is a light piece called "Duel for Lovers" and the other is called "Soliloquy." Sam didn't think much of the last one for he hardly mentioned it, but the former play seemed to fascinate him.

Although Sam first achieved fame as "Duke Lester" in "Tobacco Road" he equalled his performance in his role in "Of Mice and Men" during the past season. The play was acclaimed the best of the last one for he hardly mentioned it, but the former play seemed to fascinate him.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 6.—(AP)—James F. Sikes, 43, prominent St. Petersburg attorney, and former State senator for Pinellas county, widely known throughout the State, died early yesterday morning at Bay Pines Veterans' Hospital after an illness of several months.

A World War veteran with 21 months overseas service in France and the Army of Occupation in Germany, Sikes had been prominently identified with veterans' activities. He was a leader in the movement that succeeded in locating the Bay Pines Veterans Hospital in Florida.

He will be buried at Bay Pines National Cemetery Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock with military rites.

Fighting In Orient Continues On First Anniversary Of War

Military Motives Seen In Spanish Peace Proposals

Europeans Willing To See Franco Victory If Aides Move Out

WASHINGTON, July 6.—(AP)—The simple truth about the Spanish war at this stage of the game can be covered in two sentences.

Europeans are willing to see Franco win, but they are not willing to see him stay in Spain.

Most of the other nations in Europe, whatever their sympathies in Spain, have therefore decided to do some serious house-cleaning to isolate the Spanish firebrands and remove them from the other powder kegs on the Continent.

The business of house-cleaning among governments is naturally a complicated one and requires a lot of high-sounding terms, such as non-intervention, belligerent rights, etc.

But from the viewpoint of American experts, it's beginning to look as if Great Britain and France are quite willing to see the Franco-Mussolini-Hitler combination win out in Spain, if, in return, Mussolini and Hitler get out of the Spanish theater of action.

Here's how they figure that out: Every time you get down to cases, the meddling of outside nations in Spain has nothing at all to do with principles, but rather with the peculiar geography of the Mediterranean ocean and the Spanish peninsula.

The special points of interests in the Mediterranean are the Balearic islands and Gibraltar. The islands are the property of Spain and are just off the east coast of that country. Probably a major reason why Mussolini supported Franco was the opportunity the alliance offered to base his submarine and airplane bases in the Balearics.

For the Balearics are the military keys to the African colonies of France—colonies that would pour men and supplies across the Mediterranean to France if she were engaged in a bitter-end war. With the Balearics in Mussolini's hands, and filled with Italian submarine and airplane bases, France's line of supply from Africa would be menaced.

Then there's Gibraltar, now in British hands, which gives Britain control of both ends of the Mediterranean. If Germany could erect big gun emplacements and other war machinery in Spain just across from Gibraltar, and rumormongers say she has already done this, British control of the ocean would be menaced beyond comfort.

Therefore, it's quite natural for the British and French to offer any proposition, even if it means a Franco victory, if only Germany and Italy would take their volunteers—so-called—out of Spain and the Balearics. It's quite natural for these two powerful nations to allow Franco to bomb vessels carrying their flags, and otherwise offer them insult, so long as they figure they can eventually lure Mussolini and Hitler away, without risking a war.

That explains why Franco's planes, which probably are Italian planes based in the Balearics, are blasting away at ships flying the British flag without any interference. Any show of anger on the part of the British just now might wreck the British treaty with Italy, under which Italy promises eventually to get out of the Mediterranean.

Chinese Lay New Defenses In Desperate Effort To Stop Japs' Hankow Drive

U. S. Takes Lead In Refugee Parley

Spanish Factions Are Urged By Britain To Accept Peace Plan

The Chinese Japanese war ended its first year today while Europe sought to hasten termination of the Spanish civil war by speeding withdrawal of foreign soldiers.

The Chinese, trying desperately to block the invaders' drive on Hankow, provincial capital, laid new mines in the Yangtze River about Hukow and strengthened a defensive boom across river 30 miles above Kiukang.

They reported they had given Japanese setbacks along the Yellow River, where they said they had inflicted 700 casualties, and along coast northeast of Nanking where they said they had captured the towns of Fowning and Yencheng.

In Tokyo, the war office announced that Japanese had occupied 175,000 square miles of Chinese territory and inflicted 1,300,000 casualties since start of the campaign, and listed Japanese losses at 36,629, but the Chinese have estimated the invaders' casualties far in excess of that figure.

In Spain, insurgent troops rushed heavy reinforcements to a 12-mile front along the Mediterranean coast to take advantage of a series of thrusts which forced government militia men to fall back at four points.

Great Britain sent special messengers to Government and insurgent capitals asking urgent consideration for the European Non-Intervention Committee's $13,750,000 plan for evacuating foreign volunteers from Spain.

At Evian-les-Bains, France, a 32-nation conference on political refugees, inspired by President Roosevelt, opened with the United States taking a lead in the preliminary conversations.
