Libel Immunity For Radio Being Sought

TALLAHASSEE & Hep. Morgan, Duval County, introduced a bill today which would strip radio and television station operators of their present immunity from libel suits for defamatory statements broadcast over their facilities by anyone other than their employes. Present law exempts the station operator from liability if a libel is broadcast after they have taken "due care" to avoid it.

Morgan said his measure would put radio and TV stations on the same basis as newspapers as far as responsibility for libelous material is concerned, ite said it would not make local stations responsible for utterances on network broadcasts.

Classified Ads

It used to be that the classified ad was the stepchild of he newspaper advertising department, looked upon more or less as a necessary evil, as an annoyance to the office help in finding some poor fellow a job or retrieving a lady's lost pocketbook, and a very minor factor in the fiscal affairs of publishing company.

Times have changed and now the classified advertising department of many a newspaper is the big revenue producer, the employer of the greatest number of office personnel, and an altogether respected member of the newspaper family. No longer are classified ads confined merely to "help wanted" and "lost and found," and an occasional appeal to the lovelorn. Classified ads have become big business and are considered by tiny smart merchants and the captains of industry alike as the most direct and effective means of making a selling contact with the public.

In the business and financial districts of cities where nation-wide industrial operations are conceived and directed, highly trained and competent research men study the classified advertisements of the nation's greatest newspapers. For nowhere else is there concentrated such a crosssection of public reaction in the lifestream of business. Noshere else can you find paraded before your eyes the wishes, hopes and buying habits of the mass of people as in these little ads which cost so little and tell so much.

No wonder that one of America's outstanding successes in giving advice to some tyro counseled: "My boy, if you would succeed in this complicated maze of business competition learn to study the classified ads of your dully newspaper, for here you will find what the people want without any more trouble than the effort it takes to read."

No wonder that most of America's big names in industry make a habit of reading the classified ads of newspapers. No wonder that more and more businesses are turning to discern in detail the immensity of God's plans. On thee will I wall classified ads to carry their messages to this concentrated, all the day.—Ps. 25:5.

Connecticut's Struggle

Connecticut is trying to free itself from the rule which has held it for many years. A feeble beginning has been made by a proposed constitutional amendment, cutting the size of that body from 279 members to 169.

This leaves untouched the greatest blemish, that each town, no matter how small, has one representative, and each city, no matter how large has just the same. The only merit of the change is that if the number of cities and towns falls below 160, the unused allowance might go to some city
