Orange Juice!

Oranges, grapefruit and tangerines. there they are in the grown, on the trees-Florids's ambassadors with appeal to the eye and, happily, to those taste buds which do in fast let liquid sumshine become a daily delight. For the newcomer to our nature-blest Central Florids area — and there are more of these than the old-timers with the proportion going to the former with increasing speed - the citrus shenomena is always an eye-opener. Sanford's historic association with the roves is a matter of record. There are still local groves where the orange and yellow fruit glisten Citrus bearing trees adorn the home lots where the lucky owner need only walk out and pick his favorite morning breakfast drink. Orange juice, freshly squeezed and cool in the glass is a boverage almost impossible to best! Concentrates, bottled fresh juices are, ad-mittedly, better and better as processes improve. Nor do we limit our praise to the juice alone Take an orange along when fishing is the fun. Squeeze it and no other drink will be needed. Eating the sections is about as nice a way to wait for a fish to strike as can be imagined. Tangerines no longer for us must be awaited as the prize for emptying the stocking hung for Santa Claus to fill . . . Do they still do that? Tangerines are the citrus which offers an easy unwrapping and a tangy fruit to lessen chores around the house.

There is, of course, the very best way to en-joy these prizes of Florida residence, not grow-ing but having a neighbor who does and has enough to share with a non-growing friend.

Radar is a wondrous electronic device, but it cannot neplace the competent "seaman's eye." An efficient boatman, serving that he is approaching a potentially dangerous situation, slows down and changes course, or takes whatewer other precautionary move is indicated. He gives the other operator ample time in which to make the other's move. Decisions at the very last minute can prove disastrous. Commos sense, prudence and sound boat handling are the best rotection for the boatman.
