One dies in cave-in

OSHA investigating

SANFORD — The investigation is continuing into the cave-in of a construction site Tuesday morning that killed one man and critically injured another.

The cave-in occurred on West Airport Boulevard at the new GreeneWay bridge location. The bridge is to be part of the so-called "Missing Link."

Three men were working in a large hole on the north side of the road when the dirt collapsed onto them, completely burying two of them. EMT personnel were among those who handled the extrication, along with other workers and law enforcement officers.

Of the two who were buried, one construction worker has died of his injuries, another is reportedly in serious condition at Central Florida Regional Hospital. A third man in the cave-in was trapped only up to his waist, and has been treated for his injuries.

As of this morning, names of the three had not been released.

All three were employed by a subcontractor for the project, Scarborough Civil Corp., of Emergency personnel respond to the scene of the cave-in. Two of the three men in the ditch at the time of the accident are reported to have been completely buried for at least five minutes.

County commission OKs Oregon Avenue project

By Russ White
Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Board of Seminole County Commissioners unanimously enacted an ordinance Tuesday night to rezone property located on the NE corner of State Road 46 and Oregon Avenue in Sanford from A-1 (Agriculture) to PUD (Planned Unit Development).

Earlier, the Board nixed a plan to build a super Wal-Mart on the site that contains a total of 43.6 acres of wetlands.

Residents of the Lake Forest Home Owners Association requested a number of requirements for the builder that satisfied all parties.

There will be no Laundromat, arcade facility, clinic, bar or lounge, billboards or adult entertainment businesses in the area and a good portion of the site will be left in its natural state.

Resident Gene McKay said the plan "was dramatically better" than the last one, but did

Music is the key to couple's harmony

By Michelle Jeria
Managing Editor

LAKE MARY — Laura Lucie and Seven Richard claim music has always been a part of their lives. However, they say it is the one thing that had nothing to do with how they met nine years ago.

"Music had nothing to do with it," Richard said. "A mutual friend introduced us, and I had no idea she was even interested in music."

The attraction grew, and even though both planned to leave Sanford before they met, they stayed and a band — and eventually a marriage — was formed.

Richard was born in Michigan to a father who loved music.

"When my mom and dad married, my dad was in a swing band," Richard said. "When he went to rehearsal, he would take me. I would fall asleep in his horn case."

At 13, Richard picked up a guitar and hasn't stopped playing since.

"Everywhere I went, I was in someone's band or they were in mine. I always had to play music."

Lucie, born in New York, took the singing route. From an early age, she said she sang with her family and in the church choir and was as a member of the school chorus. Along the way, she also learned to play the flute.

"Music was a part of my family," she said. "I remember as a child washing dishes and singing together after dinner."

Lucie's family eventually moved to Sanford. Richard also moved to Sanford after leaving the military.

However, neither intended on staying until their paths crossed.

In 1991, they were introduced to each other by a mutual

Erving autopsy delayed by sheriff

By Nick Pfeiff
Staff Writer

SANFORD — The results of a medical exam on Cory Erving are being temporarily withheld.

Erving, 19, son of basketball star Julius Erving, was found dead July 6, in his vehicle, sunk in a retention pond in the Alauqa subdivision. He had been missing since May 28.

Subsequently, Seminole County contacted Volusia County Chief Medical Examiner Dr. Thomas R. Beaver, requesting an autopsy be conducted, to officially determine the cause of death.

Whether or not the examination has been completed is unknown. Regardless, Seminole County Sheriff Don Eslinger has asked that results, if and when known, be kept confidential.

In a letter to Dr. Beaver, the sheriff wrote: "Confirming our discussion held last week and after consultation with Norm Wolfinger, State Attorney for the 18th Judicial Circuit, State of Florida, we are requesting that you delay public release of formal findings of the cause and manner of death of Cory Erving, pending conclusion of the Seminole County Sheriff's Office criminal investigation."

The letter continued: "There are various investigative processes ongoing at this time to rule out any and all implications of criminal wrongdoing associated with the death of Mr. Erving."

Accordingly, we are requesting that you delay releasing information regarding this matter until such time as the sheriff's office has been able to complete a thorough investigation."

The sheriff's office did not indicate when the would make the results of the autopsy public.

Schools plan to cut tax rate

By Michelle Jeria
Managing Editor

SANFORD — For the fifth consecutive year, the Seminole County School Board is planning to reduce the tax-levy rate.

The Board approved Tuesday a tentative 9.345 millage rate, which is 2.26 percent less than last year's 9.541 millage rate. The school system will receive approximately $136.6 million in tax revenues.

The millage rate means an individual who owns a home with an assessed value of $100,000 and a $25,000 homestead exemption will pay a total of $700.88 in school levies during the 2001 Fiscal Year. Last year, the same individual paid $715.58.

The total operating budget for the next fiscal year is $538.7 million, a decrease from last year's $562.1 million.

School Board Member Larry Furlong said this year's rate is a result of an increase in tax base and property value in Seminole County. It is also tied to the increase in commercial and business development in the Sanford/Lake Mary area.

The operating budget represents the main portion of the School Board's budget. The fund includes staff and personnel, materials and supplies, utilities, maintenance and operations of buildings and

There's no crying over spilt milk

A bunch of doctors in Washington are making a big fuss about "milk mustache" advertisements. By now, you've seen the ads in the magazines. Pictures of famous actors, singers and ballplayers who have milk mustaches and say milk is good for you.

But wait. The Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine (PCRM) claims the ads are scientifically unsubstantiated, purposely deceptive and harmful advertising.

Apparently, the docs are sour about a milk advertisement by Latin heartthrob Marc Anthony. They say it implies that milk can help prevent osteoporosis in Hispanic Americans. No, no — there's no evidence of this benefit to Hispanic Americans according to the PCRM.

In fact, the doctors say the majority of Hispanic Americans are lactose intolerant and experience gastrointestinal problems from milk.

Poor Britney Spears has been denounced, also. The doctors want her to quit telling girls to drink four glasses of milk each day. That adds up to 33 grams of fat, including 20 grams of heart-clogging saturated fat. Wipe that milk mustache off your face, girl.

PCRM president, Dr. Neal D. Barnard, no milk guzzler he, says the side effects of drinking milk — the increased risk of obesity, diabetes and cancer. "Don't be white-washed by the milk industry," he warns.

I suspect the Federal Trade Commission has better issues to study than the PCRM's complaint about milk mustache advertisements. If the Dixie Chicks say they drink milk, I'm going to trust them before I trust a bunch of nerds in hospital scrubs.

My old Washington pal, Larry King, is a milk mustache man. That's right, Mr. TV, Larry King. Sure, he's had some heart problems. But these may be caused by the young women he's married.

Don't blame it on milk.

Cal Ripken is a major-league milk drinker. He's baseball's Mr. Ironman. We should all have his endurance.

Years ago, I watched Roger Staubach after an Army-Navy game. He had a quart of milk in his hands. He scooped it down and wore one of those great milk mustaches into the showers. Staubach was a milk-drinking Dallas Cowboy, too. Texas moms all wanted their sons to grow up to be Roger Staubach, milk-drinking Cowboys.

My own milk-drinking days go back to a happy time when kids could get a half-pint carton for three cents. After Mass on Friday mornings at Gonzaga High School, we'd have six doughnuts and six cartons of milk. One of my classmates, Pat Buchanan, is running for president again. If Pat loses, it won't be because he drank too much milk.

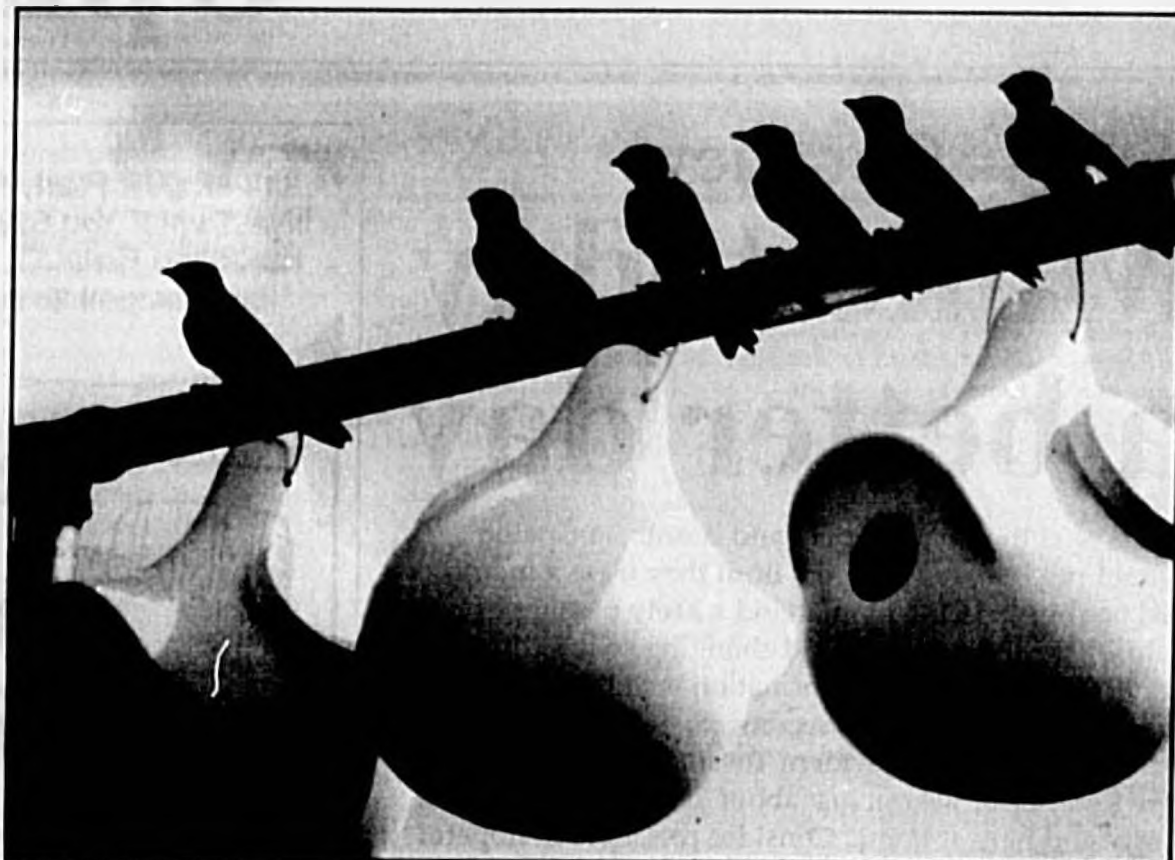

If you know what "if" is, we'd have been better off if the present president had less egg and more milk on his face.

Our View

Make today a better day

It is said the German poet and dramatist Goethe would not read newspapers until they were a month old because it helped him avoid merely passing events.

In 2000, we live in a world changing so rapidly that continuous and timely information is indispensable. There are no shelters, no secrets, no escape.

This was painfully evident Tuesday when terrible news stories broke out just about everywhere — far away and here at home. Consider presidential hopeful George W. Bush's announcement that Dick Cheney was his vice presidential running mate. This story would have dominated the news almost any other day in late July. But not this particular Tuesday. Instead we were faced with:

- An Air France supersonic Concorde crashed into a hotel outside Paris shortly after takeoff, causing 113 people to die.
- A man died, another is on life support after being injured in a cave-in at an expressway building site off Airport Boulevard.
- The Mideast peace talks were called off. History was made but not peace.
- Orlando police confirm a woman hostage was killed by a law enforcement sharpshooter.

That's a lot of bad news to digest all at once. Yes, we go on with our own lives, our families, our jobs but it's difficult. The images of the fiery jet remain vivid. As we drive by the construction site on U.S. Highway 17-92, we see the barricades and sense Tuesday's tragedy. Residents on Kentucky Woods Lane console one another after the tragic death of 40-year-old Andrea Hall.

Some blame the media, not for the events themselves, but for the saturation coverage of tragic events. We do overstep our bounds at times. That's the nature of the business.

Maybe a solution is not to cover the tragedies less, but to promote the triumphs more. Today, perhaps, we all need to work at making some good news, like celebrating the anniversary of the legislation that addressed the needs of disabled Americans to participate in public, or congratulating James Roark, the Seminole County bus driver who won the School Bus Driver International Safety Competition.

How about it, are you up for it?

It's like Amazon vs. brick and mortar

Bush vs. Gore is a battle between the "brand" and "brick and mortar," between Amazon.com and the blue chips.

Here's how it works:

People see George W. Bush as more likeable than his rival, and more of a leader. They see Al Gore as a junior partner in the Clinton administration's strong economic record, as more experienced in national and world policy than Bush, as solid on abortion rights.

This clear division of assets will decide the election this Nov. 7.

Forget the poll numbers. Three weeks ago, Bush was ahead in the Gallup by 12 points. Today he's up by two. Two weeks from now, following his bounce from the Republican convention, he'll be flying high again.

These numbers mean almost nothing today. They will mean absolutely nothing come November.

What will matter is the strength of the two men's assets as candidates. Why?

Because when voters get down to deciding this first presidential election of the century, they will pick the man with the best chance of protecting their assets. They always do.

In making their careful assessment, they will look at which man, Bush or Gore, is the most solid bet to perform for them.

Bush, as I said, has some obvious strengths.

Unfortunately, most have to do with the promise, the notion of what he might be capable of doing down the road. In this, his candidacy, which came out of nowhere two years ago, resembles a high-flying stock like Amazon.com. It's not about his past performance. It's about the niche he has created for future sales.

For months, ever since his Dresden-style bombing of John McCain in South Carolina, Bush has worked at this self-branding. He's America's Sonny Boy, the kid with the sunshine smile, the ready handshake for black and white hands alike. Like Ike, Jack, Ronnie and Bill, he's radiated that same outdoorsy gleam that has always, whenever Americans have had the option, outshined the downtown firm of Dewey, Dukakis & Dole.

Bush owns another ready asset: He's got the look of a leader. As governor of a state, he carries the resume of the guy-in-charge down there in "don't-mess-with-Texas" country.

These are the qualities — likeability and leadership — that pollsters have ID-ed as Bush's strengths. People like him because they like him. He's a leader for the undeniable reason that he's not been a follower, a vice president.

By contrast, Gore's strength is of a brick-and-mortar kind.

The economy is the strongest in world history. When the Democrats took charge, the growth rate was zero. Now, that's the size of the deficit. Seven years ago, middle-class voters had worries. Now they have savings. During the Bush recession of the early 90s, they were angry that their kids, whose colleges cost them so much, didn't have jobs. In 2000, they are a little jealous of what their kids are doing.

Gore has two other assets, both money in the bank: One is experience. He's been working alongside the likes of Robert Rubin and Robert Reich. He's got the keys to the factory that produced the balanced budget, the free trade, the growth, all those millions of 401(k)s out there.

Second, and men hate to hear this, he's got an issue of direct, personal importance to the largest interest group in the American electorate — women. Gore is pro-choice. Bush is not. Gore backs the constitutional right to an abortion. Bush doesn't.

So don't look at the polls. They're fickle. Assay the assets. Weigh Bush's so-far-successful branding against Gore's bricks and mortar. Ask yourself: Which little piggy has built his house with straw and which with brick?

Victim right's amendment is misguided pandering

This column is bound to be misinterpreted. Some reader(s) is going to write and tell me that I would think differently if I had ever been a victim of a violent crime. Some other reader(s) is going to suggest that miscreants have all the rights and law-abiding citizens have none. Still another is going to accuse me of coddling criminals.

I'm not. I have no sympathy for rapists, murderers, or the thugs who bash in the heads of little old ladies in order to steal their Social Security checks. But I have no enthusiasm for Vice President Al Gore's proposed victims' rights amendment to the U.S. Constitution, either. Indeed, it is a wretchedly bad idea.

Gore would clutter up the Constitution with an amendment that would guarantee certain "rights" to crime victims, including the right to testify at a criminal trial and the right to be notified when a criminal is released from prison. Gore claims that crime victims are "deserving of protections just as much as those accused of committing the crime against you."

Cynthia Tucker

But "protections" against what? The system has already kicked in on behalf of the victim — conducting an investigation, arresting a suspect, proceeding to take the suspect to trial. The entire system of police and courts and prisons is in place to see to it that not only the specific crime victim but also the larger society gets justice.

This latest bit of pandering by the vice president is disgusting but not surprising. It has become an article of faith among centrist Democrats that a tough law-and-order stance is essential to win elections. Remembering how George Bush the Elder smeared Michael Dukakis with Willie Horton, a paroled rapist, in the 1988 election, Bill Clinton would not allow his GOP opponent any room to get to the right of him on crime. In 1992, Clinton interrupted his presidential campaign to return to Arkansas to preside over the execution of a death-row inmate.

Gore has not just taken a page from Clinton's book; he has done Clinton one better. In the past, the Clinton administration has opposed a similar victims' rights amendment, pointing out that it could clog up the court system.

With Gore and George W. Bush adopting virtually the same stance on crime (Bush also supports the so-called victims' rights amendment), there is no significant voice left to argue for reform, which should have been a major issue in this campaign. The death penalty is capricious; the criminal justice system takes too harsh a toll on black Americans; the war on drugs is costly and wrong-headed.

But none of those matters will get any attention in this campaign. Rather than a thoughtful debate on crime and punishment, we get a call for an amendment that distorts the Bill of Rights. As hard as it is for most Americans to accept, a suspect is innocent until convicted of a crime by a jury of his peers (or until he pleads guilty). With the vast resources of the state (police and prosecutors) lined up against the suspect (on behalf of the victim), a range of constitutional protections are put in place to ensure that the state does not overwhelm the accused unfairly. The Founding Fathers recognized how easy it would be for an innocent person to be convicted of a crime he did not commit and tried to take precautions to prevent that.

That is not to say that crime victims should be treated as an afterthought. Already, most major police departments have victim-assistance programs that help them negotiate the criminal-justice maze and receive compensation where appropriate. Thirty-two states have laws giving victims the right to be heard in court. If more needs to be done to aid victims, that's where it is appropriate — in state law, not in the Constitution.

Little League dad cries foul for comment from stands

DEAR ABBY: I recently took my father to my 11-year-old son's Little League game. While my son's team was at bat, a ball was hit up the first base line. The first baseman made a gallant attempt to catch the ball, but missed and it went into the outfield.

me and said the boy needs to know that he "screwed up" so he would "learn from his mistakes."

Dear Abby

The right fielder stopped the runner at second base, and my father shouted to the first baseman, "You should have made that play!"

Concerned that he would hurt the boy's feelings, I told Dad he shouldn't shout at the boy. My father then became angry with My father's loud lecture embarrassed me. I told him after he calmed down that I would be sitting in the bleachers. A few minutes later, I looked for him and saw that he was walking home. I had driven him to the game. We have not spoken since.

I feel it is the coach's responsibility to instruct the players. Parents who attend should be supportive, not negative. Was I wrong to defend the boy and "insult" my father?

FRUSTRATED LITTLE LEAGUE DAD

DEAR FRUSTRATED: The job of parents and grandparents at children's sporting events is to cheer them on. Your father's remarks were not helpful. They were hurtful to the first baseman's self-esteem. The boy couldn't help but know that he goofed.

Call your father and point out to him that he didn't like being corrected in public — he got angry and walked home — so why would he think a young first baseman would appreciate being yelled at by a stranger? Perhaps that will help him view his actions in a different light. If it doesn't, buy him some peanuts and Cracker Jack — and leave him home.

DEAR ABBY: It's rare nowadays to find nice people willing to help a complete stranger. That's why I want to share this with you:

I live in Cheyenne, Wyo. I was seven months pregnant and was driving alone to Thermopolis, five hours away. Three hours into my trip, I found myself in a major snowstorm. I couldn't go on and I couldn't turn back, so I left the interstate the first chance I got. The nearest town had only one gas station, one motel and two restaurants. Neither of the restaurants accepted credit cards, and all the rooms at the motel were already booked. I waited with other stranded motorists for the weather to clear. Unfortunately, it just got worse. The highway patrol eventually closed all the roads.

A wonderful couple checked into their room and invited me to share it with them. Then they bought me dinner. They refused to accept anything from me except my profuse thanks.

I never expected to meet people willing to put themselves out for someone they didn't even know. In this age of distrust, it's reassuring to know that there are still wonderful people out there.

VALERIE GIBSON

DEAR VALERIE: Thank you for sharing your experience. As more and more people have written to me relating random acts of kindness, it is clearly apparent that generosity of spirit is alive and well in our country.

Good advice for everyone — teens to seniors — is in "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It." ## People need to sit back, relax and have some ice cream

I don't know a soul these days who isn't overextended on the work and home fronts. Everyone's mastered the art of doing at least three things at once (such as talking on the phone, folding the laundry and watching the news), only to find out that there are actually at least four things that need doing at that moment.

ing. Add the salt and butter and stir until butter is melted.

Marialisa Calta

Sometimes you've just got to stop, take a deep breath — and have some ice cream. Better yet, scoop out two bowls and serve the other one to someone else. Let the phone ring, let the laundry sit, turn the news off, and visit. To heck with multitasking; just savor some serious eating.

Now, because we're talking crazed lives here, I am not suggesting that you make the ice cream (even though the new electric ice-cream makers on the market make that task pretty much a snap). I'm talking store-bought stuff — just scoop and eat. But if you want to dress it up a bit — let's say company's coming, or you're having take-out and you want to add a touch of homemade to the meal — then you might think about making the topping. Ice cream toppings are a cinch to make, and they turn a plain bowl of vanilla into a very fancy dessert. A bowl of ice cream with a homemade topping adds a grace note to dinner, and grace notes seem to be what we are sorely lacking these days. Plus, most of the store-bought fudge and butterscotch sauces I've tried taste like liquid plastic.

So here are some recipes. The first two are from Chef Peter Kelly of the New England Culinary Institute in Montpelier, Vt. The others are from "Ice Creams and Sorbets," which is part of the Williams-Sonoma Kitchen Library collection. Make them all. But don't try to eat them all at once. That would be taking multitasking a bit too far.

Remove from heat and add the vanilla and the Kahlua (if using). Stir to mix. Serve warm or at room temperature.

Cover and refrigerate leftovers up to one week. Reheat or allow to come to room temperature before serving. Yield: about 2-1/4 cups

Note: For a sweeter sauce, use semisweet chocolate.

— Recipe from Chef Peter Kelly, New England Culinary Institute, Montpelier, Vt.

BUTTERSCOTCH SAUCE
1/2 cup packed light brown sugar
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1 cup water
1 cup heavy cream
3 tablespoons unsalted butter

In a heavy-bottomed saucepan, combine the sugars and the water. Cook over medium-high heat, stirring constantly, until the sugars are dissolved and the water has nearly all evaporated — 8 to 10 minutes. Add the cream and stir. Add the butter and stir until melted. Serve warm or at room temperature.

overs up to one week. Reheat or allow to come to room temperature before serving. Yield: about 1-1/3 cup.

— Recipe from Chef Peter Kelly, New England Culinary Institute, Montpelier, Vt.

BERRY-CASSIS SAUCE
1 vanilla bean
1 pound frozen, unsweetened boysenberries or blackberries
1/3 cup creme de cassis liqueur or water
1/4 cup sugar

Place the vanilla bean on a work surface. Using a small, sharp knife, cut the bean in half lengthwise. Using the knife tip, scrape the seeds from the vanilla bean into a medium-size, heavy saucepan. Add the frozen berries, liqueur (or water), and sugar. Cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until the berries thaw and the sugar dissolves, about 15 minutes.

Increase the heat to medium-high and bring to a boil. Remove the pan from the heat, then remove the vanilla bean halves and discard. Place the mixture in a blender, or in a food processor fitted with a metal blade, and puree until smooth. Strain through a coarse sieve set over a large bowl. Press firmly on the solids with a rubber spatula to extract as much liquid as possible. Discard the solids.

Cover and refrigerate until cold, at least 2 hours or up to 2 days. Serve chilled. Yield: 1-1/3 cups.

NUT CRUNCH
1 cup nuts, such as pistachios, almonds, pecans, hazelnuts, macadamia nuts, walnuts, peanuts, or a mixture
2/3 cup sugar
1/4 cup water
1/4 cup unsalted butter
1/2 teaspoon baking soda

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Spread the nuts on a baking sheet and place in the oven until lightly toasted and fragrant, about 10 minutes. Let cool. If nuts are large (such as almonds or walnuts), chop coarsely. Set aside.

Grease a sheet of aluminum foil about 18 inches long. In a medium-size, heavy saucepan over medium-low heat, stir together the sugar, water and butter with a wooden spatula until the sugar dissolves and the butter melts, about 2 minutes. Using a pastry brush dipped in water, brush down any sugar crystals that form on the sides of the pan. Increase the heat to medium-high and boil, stirring constantly to prevent burning, until the mixture turns a caramel color, about 8 minutes.

Paul O. Boisvert for the New England Culinary Institute
Hot mocha sauce adds a touch of homemade to store-bought ice cream.

Stir in the baking soda and the nuts. Immediately turn the mixture out onto the buttered foil, separating any large clumps with the back of a spoon. Let cool completely. Transfer the nut crunch to a work surface and chop coarsely. Use immediately, or transfer to an air-tight container and freeze for up to 1 month. Yield: about 2 cups.

HOROSCOPES

Thursday, July 27, 2000

Chances are you'll be more fortunate in the year ahead dealing with large organizations than you will be with small, singular operations. Something quite lucky could be set in motion.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The only way to get things done that are important to you today is to rely solely on yourself. A huge disappointment could be in store for you if you do otherwise. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You can be exceptionally lucky today when dealing on a high, ethical level. However, should you attempt to do something not quite right, all could be lost.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Every place you go today you will be well received, so long as you don't allow subjects such as religion or philosophy to be discussed. A zealot could be in the crowd and cause a scene.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't take your eye off the road for one minute today just because the ride appears to be going so smoothly. Hitting an unexpected bump would derail you before you know what happened.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A replay of a recent, painful experience isn't necessary today. You'll be exceptionally lucky in all negotiations with others so long as you keep this past lesson in mind.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) An unexpected complication could arise today regarding a second source of income, but if you're prepared to make the needed adjustments, everything will turn out better than before.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Dealings you have with people you deal with on a one-to-one basis in the social realm today will have many happy endings, but this may not hold true in another area. Don't let your guard down.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Take pride in all that you do today and for whomever you're doing it, even though it might be easier to do things for family than for someone who means little to you personally.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's okay to take gambles on ideas. In fact, you'll be lucky with them today. Where you need to draw the line, however, is taking a chance on someone about whom you know little.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) What could get you in trouble today is, of all things, idealism. Don't breed on anything else's ideology or convictions, especially that of your spouse. Agree to disagree.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Keep your mind focused at all times on what you're doing today and don't let your attention wander when performing tedious mental tasks. The payoff will be worth the concentration.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Conditions that affect your material wherewithal and security are trending in your favor today. However, you must not operate on a level of sympathy — only on reason.

Center offers help for those dealing with substance abuse

By Rebecca Grilliot
Herald Intern

Frank Williams has been clean for 26 years now. After struggling with alcohol and drug abuse in the '70s, Williams decided to get help to overcome his addictions. For the past 21 years he has been working as a substance abuse counselor to help others who are suffering from chemical dependency. Counselors Williams and Marla Dann are co-owners of New Life Connections, a

Sanford substance abuse counseling center which opened in April. The center offers outpatient substance abuse treatment, a drug education program, workshops on anger management and impulse control, a batterer's intervention program and a women's program. "I feel this is a part of what I'm called to do in life," said Williams, who is vice-president of the company. CEO Dann said that one of the reasons she and Williams decided to go into private practice was because they noticed a lack of low-cost substance abuse treatment for adults in the Sanford-area. "I believe that there's a need in Sanford for affordable, professional treatment," Dann said.

"It's going to take a lot of footwork to let the community know we're out there." Dann, a former parole and corrections officer, has been a counselor for the past nine years. She said her experience as an officer has given her insight on how the system works and helps her in dealing with clients who may not understand it.

Most of the clients at New Life Connections do not come to the center voluntarily. The clients are usually required to receive treatment as a result of a conviction. Dann said that she has only had two people come into the center on their own.

Most people must undergo a substance abuse program that runs a minimum of 12 weeks. "For people suffering from an addiction, it's difficult to do the program in 12 weeks," Williams said. "You have to deal with denial and resistance. It takes time."

Dann believes that in order to receive successful treatment, clients should not be treated as criminals.

"It's important that people are treated as human beings," Dann said. "They know there's something wrong. You shouldn't degrade them."

She said her favorite part of the job is watching patients recover.

"It's almost like going from a caterpillar to a butterfly," Dann said. "They realize they're a good human now."

The owners not only pride themselves on helping their clients find a new life—several months ago they gave new life to the building in which their center is housed.

When Dann and Williams bought the 42-year-old building there was no carpeting, walls or air conditioning.

"It was a dump," Dann said. With the help of a few friends, the co-owners completely renovated the building in 30 days by putting in walls, air conditioning, tile and carpeting.

"A lot of sweat and heart and soul has gone into the building and business," Dann said. "We believe we can make a difference in Sanford. I think it was well worth the time and trouble."

Dann hopes that in the future New Life Connections could expand to open an affordable women's residential facility in Sanford.

"There's not much here for women, so there's definitely a need for it," Dann said.

New Life Connections is located on 113 W. 27th St., Sanford. For more information call 407-322-7779.

Shanel Garrell and Zach Robin work together to build a space station.

Students participate in two-week space camp

For two weeks, many children enthusiastically learned math, history, reading, writing and science at the Smithsonian National Space Command, a day camp held recently at Seminole Community College.

John Morand, a first-grade teacher at Goldsboro Elementary, instructed the camp of third- through sixth-graders on space travel, the history of flight and space stations at the two-week camp. Morand, known as Captain John to his students, believes the curriculum is successful because the space theme makes learning fun.

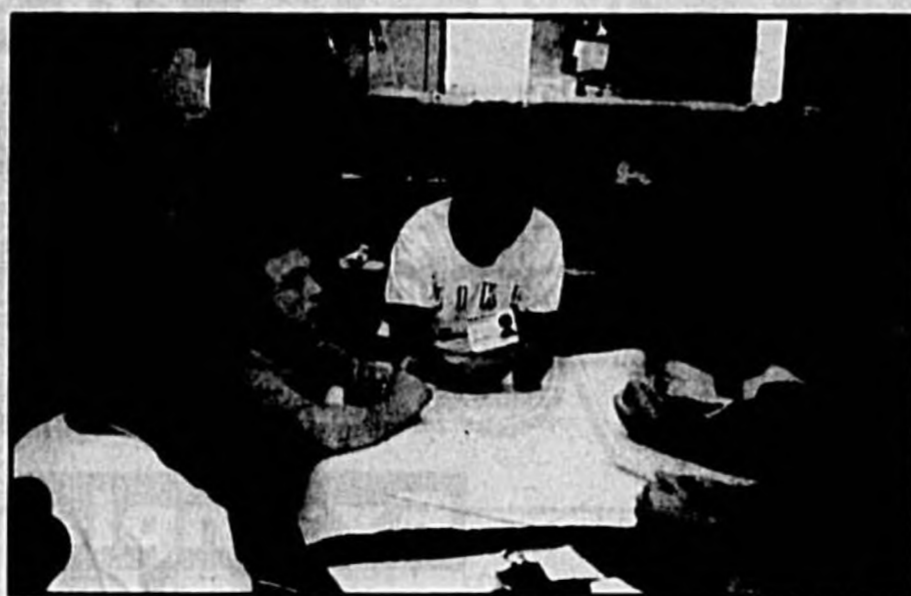

The curriculum used books, videos, music and a variety of other media to help the students learn the material. Activities the campers participated in included designing their own space stations, creating a space fitness program and performing test flights.

The campers also took field trips to the SCC planetarium and the Kennedy Space Center.

Photos and story by Rebecca Grilliot

Kaitlyn Dilari and Kelli Egli cut and paste strips of paper for an exercise on fractions. Campers learned a variety of subjects, including math, history, reading, geography, physics, chemistry and astronomy at the two-week camp. The curriculum included many hands-on projects with a space theme.

Water aerobics continues at pool

Water aerobics are in full swing at the Sanford Seminole Aquatic Center. The pool is located on the campus of Seminole High School. Participants are urged to bring a noodle, (a Styrofoam flotation device).

According to Laura Siegel, the water exercise is not only healthy but fun. "We have music and play games while we work out," she said. "A fun workout will keep students motivated." Hours of operation are Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m., and Thursday and Friday from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

For additional information, phone the Sanford Seminole Aquatic Center at 407-302-1034.

 student transportation. A significant portion of the budget, 85 percent, is composed of salaries and benefits.

The budget includes $29.3 million for various capital projects. The appropriations include the purchase of 22 school buses, communications equipment and countywide new construction, renovation and equipment.

Schools scheduled to receive renovations include Crooms Academy of Information and Technology, Oviedo High School and the second phase of the Lyman High School renovations and additions project. Other projects include countywide sidewalk canopies, countywide furniture and equipment replacement and technology upgrades.

A final budget hearing is scheduled to be held 5:30 p.m. Sept. 12. Furlong said he doesn't foresee any major changes to the budget before it's final adoption.

"The Board began the budget process in January or February," he said. "When we get to the final adoption, there has already been a lot of input into it by the board and the public."

 not comply to the original purpose of locating hi-tech businesses.

Daryl McLain, the District 5 commissioner, said the plan was compatible with the county's Comprehensive plan. He said he appreciated the efforts to build a hi-tech corridor in the area but said there were also needs for retail businesses and housing. The approved plan allows 233,000 square feet of commercial and 300 apartment units.

"The vision is working," McLain said.

Resident Gary Adams praised McLain for "hanging tough," helping to put together a package everyone could live with.

Couple

 friend, and according to both of them, they instantly "clicked."

To impress Lucie, Richard serenaded her the night they met. A couple of days later, Lucie gave Richard a tape of a song she recorded.

But, Richard said, at first, he didn't take her musical ambitions too seriously.

"She told me she loved to sing, but a lot of people love to sing," Richard said. "One night, out of boredom, I stuck her tape in the cassette player, and I couldn't believe it. It sounded so good I had to play the song over and over again."

In 1992, the duo took to the stage at an Orlando club and eventually formed the band Jaycius. In 1993, the band recorded its first and only album, "More Sauce."

Two years later, Lucie and Richard married. Shortly after their marriage, Jaycius disbanded.

"We aren't sure why the band broke up," Richard said. "But, we said to heck with it and went back into the studio."

This time, the couple created an album, "By The Light of The Storm," and decided to call themselves Little Laura's Love Band.

Late in 1995, they decided to go on tour. However, they needed more people to play in their band.

"We created a band around the album," Richard said. "But, it seemed every time we got a band together, it would break up. Every time the dust would settle, we were there standing alone."

Nevertheless, in 1998, they were able to record and release a second album, "Neeto Lane," under the same name. According to Richard, the album received considerable air play in the United States and gathered attention in London and Amsterdam.

But, the couple said they were tired of trying to keep a band together and decided to go to Europe for some time off from music. When they returned to Sanford, it was as a duet.

"We just fell into it," Richard said. "It's what we are all about."

They decided to call themselves Laura & Seven and released "Gone Again," a collection of acoustic music, in late 1998. A year later, the couple went back into the studio and plan to release their second rock album in the near future.

When they aren't in the studio, the band can be seen at various clubs, including Sanford's Palladium, the Handle Bar & Grill in Longwood and several clubs in Orlando.

"We rarely get any time away from our music, but we love doing it," Lucie said. "We don't have a big social life, but it is something we need to do."

As for the future, the couple said they would like to hear their own material played on the radio.

"But, we don't want to sit limits," Richard said. "We just want it all."

More information on the band can be found at their Web site, www.infographic.com/seven. They can also be contacted at LLI.B777@aol.com

Cave-in

Winter Haven.

The main investigation into the cause of the collapse of the walls of the hole, is being conducted by OSHA (Occupational Safety & Health Administration). OSHA officials are reportedly looking into the possibility that there was no support, as generally required, around the workers in the hole, described as between 20 and 30 feet in size, and possibly ten feet deep.

Several OSHA investigators were at the scene within a few hours after the collapse. Their investigation into the cause is expected to take several days.

Kimberlee Polson, with the Turnpike District of the Department of Transportation, said, "We at the DOT certainly realize this is an unfortunate situation, and we extend our deepest sympathy to the families of those men. But other than a brief delay Monday, we don't expect this to slow down construction of what is known as Seminole II."

Polson said the entire investigation will now be conducted by OSHA, "and we'll be waiting to hear their findings." She added that in the DOT agreement, contractors are held responsible for the safety on construction sites.

White named President of Diamond Players Club

Special to the Herald

ORLANDO - Douglas W. White has been named president of Diamond Players Club (DPC), a brand and golf course management company headed by Arizona Diamondbacks pitcher Todd Stottlemyre.

Stottlemyre, who serves as chairman of the board, said White will be responsible for all operating and staff functions of the company. White was formerly chief operating officer.

DPC built and owns the new Diamond Players Club Clermont, a semi-private facility about 20 miles west of Orlando. It also operates two courses in Longwood, about 10 miles north of Orlando. They are Diamond Players Club Wekiva, which is semi-private, and Sweetwater Country Club, which is private.

Stottlemyre said White's background and experience will help DPC in its effort to expand its golf course portfolio nationally in three ways: seeking new construction opportunities; purchasing existing facilities; and negotiating management contracts. At his former company, Granite Golf Inc., White opened about 25 new courses and clubhouses in a five-year period.

White is a graduate of the University of South Carolina with a Bachelor of Science degree in Hotel, Restaurant and Tourism.

DPC was founded four years ago by Stottlemyre

Miracle suffer rough start to long road trip

From Staff Reports

INGLEWOOD, California - Lisa Leslie scored 17 points to lead a balanced attack and the Los Angeles Sparks toyed with the Orlando Miracle for much of the game before pulling away for a 78-63 victory Tuesday night at The Great Western Forum.

Los Angeles has won six in a row and 18 of 19 to move into first place in the Western Conference. Orlando has lost five of six to drop out of first place in the East.

Tamecka Dixon and DeLisha Milton scored 14 points apiece and Mwadi Mabika added 11 for the Sparks, who took the lead for good with a burst at the end of the first half and took control with another run midway through the second half.

Cintia dos Santos scored 14 points and grabbed six rebounds for the Miracle, who had all five starters score in double figures but got just two points from their bench.

The Sparks had early trouble with Orlando's triangle-and-two defense, trailing by eight points and still were in a 30-24 hole after two free throws by Adrienne Johnson with 4:43 left. But the Miracle did not score again as the Sparks rattled off 13 straight points to take a 37-30 halftime lead.

Orlando got off to another good start in the second half cutting the deficit to 45-44 with 14:01 remaining.

But the Sparks scored the next seven points and turned it into a 22-8 run to lead 67-52 with 4:26 to play.

Los Angeles took its largest lead at 73-58 with 1:52.

Leslie made all five free throws she attempted in the game to run her streak to 49, 13 shy of the WNBA record held by Cleveland's Eva Nemcova.

Leslie also grabbed 11 rebounds and Mabika nine for the Sparks, who shot 44 percent (30-of-68) and held a 39-32 edge on the glass. During its winning streak, Los Angeles has not allowed more than 68 points.

Adrienne Johnson and Taj McWilliams scored 13 points apiece, Shannon Johnson added 11 and Nykesha Sales 10 for the Miracle, who fell to 5-6 on the road as it began a five-game trip. Shannon Johnson had a big game all-around, posting team-highs in rebounds (seven) and assists (six) and also claiming three steals to go along with her 11 points. McWilliams added four steals and two blocked shots to her point total, while Carla McGhee scored the only points for the Orlando bench and also contributed six rebounds and two blocked shots.

The Miracle (14-11) continue their West Coast swing at Sacramento on Thursday (July 27), and then head to Portland (Sunday, July 30), and Phoenix (Tuesday, August 1), before returning to the East Coast to take on New York (Friday, August 4) at Madison Square Garden (scheduled to be shown on the Lifetime Network) to complete the 13-day trip.

Orlando will not be at home again until Sunday, August 6th when it hosts Detroit at 4 p.m. The final home game comes the next night (Monday, August 7th) at 7:30 p.m. at the T.D. Waterhouse Centre.

The Miracle then complete the regular season with a game in Miami (Wednesday, August 9th) against the Sol at 7 p.m. That game is scheduled to be televised by the Sunshine Network.

All of the Miracle games can be heard on WDSO-AM 580.
