

BOY BOXERS IN FINAL RACE FOR CHRISTMAS GIFTS

100 Presents Will Be Awarded Youths At Bouts Held Dec. 21

So close has the race for 100 Christmas gifts become during the past few days that officials of the Seminole Boys' Athletic Club announced today that it has been found necessary to stage bouts tomorrow night, Monday night and next Friday night for the purpose of selecting winners of the major prizes.

Last week's bouts were bitterly fought, boys extending themselves while yet fighting cleanly, to gain favor in the eyes of the judges who will name the winners next Friday night.

Tomorrow night's bouts will find some of the outstanding boxers in the Club in action against worthy foes.

The card for tomorrow night is as follows:

Eugene Tippins vs. Witmer Newsome; Charles Cameron vs. Martin Temple, Ray Edge vs. Giles Chapman, Joe Johnston vs. John Angel, H. C. Tippins vs. Laurence Barineau, Charles Thurston vs. Walter Seal, Joe Crenshaw vs. J. R. Ellis, Lindbergh Hall vs. Marion Raborn, Claude Whittier vs. James Lowe, Ralph Pezold vs. Phillip Goodspeed, Arthur Williams vs. Billy Glenn, Mack Cleveland vs. Mike Eason, and Buddy Rehards vs. unnamed opponent.

Fight cards tomorrow, Monday and next Friday will begin at 7:45 o'clock. Sports fans who have never seen experienced boy boxers in action will, according to Judge S. A. B. Wilkinson, get the surprise of their lives by attending either of the three remaining bouts.

Last Friday's results:

Joe Johnston won over T. H. Willis; Sidney Rehards won over Ray Edge; Joe Crenshaw and J. R. Ellis fought a draw; Mack Cleveland defeated Milton Edge; Ralph Pezold won over Martin Temple; Charles Thurston defeated Billy Wilkinson; Earl Knight won over Clifford Williams; Bill Barineau, and Marion Raborn fought to a draw; Eugene Tippins and Webster Wetherby fought a draw; Wesley Cunningham defeated Clarence Barineau.

"The higher living standards of the present generation," he continued, "are certainly not due to a greater wealth of natural resources."

"Thus our program can be attributed neither to the severity and long hours of labor nor to the wealth which nature has showered upon the land, but to the development of that wealth through the freedom of capital."

may be morally regrettable, but it is practically inevitable.

It makes no difference in the long run who spends, so long as this spending is done at the proper rate and amount to keep the wheels revolving.

"Any spending which makes for increased production is good, but public works to my mind are the preferable vehicle... On a large scale they can start production swinging upward.

The CWA work of last winter was primarily responsible for the modest upturn of total economic activity in the spring."

Chase admitted the question of whether the required scale can be financed without ultimately leading to uncontrolled inflation, but added that the answer is theory is simple.

The increased production induced will pay for the credit advanced," he continued, "just as properly built on bank credit advanced justifies the loan. There is no real inflation when a credit is sufficiently covered by tangible goods.

The relevant problem of the hour is the wisest way to spend, and how much spending is needed to start production upward.

Money under modern conditions is only the mirror of a flow of goods and services. If the flow ceases, money means nothing.

For me, the question of whether to spend or to retrench is to ask quite simply whether one prefers the life or the death of the industrial organism."

Touching briefly on the gold standard and monetary problems, the economist warned his audience that "sound money" has failed in providing the mechanism of releasing purchasing power as fast as energy and invention lower man-hour costs and increase potential output.

Chase took issue with the school of economics which maintains that if spending can be got under way, the budget will be balanced automatically in time with no changes in what he termed "the rules of the financial game."

"I suspect that we may have to change the rules at least to the extent of financing public works through issues of public credit bearing no interest or a very low rate," he said. "We change our golf rules and our bridge rules. There is no fundamental reason why we cannot change our man-made money rules."

In the last analysis the only justification of a money system is a purely pragmatic one. Does it work? If it does, keep it; if it does not, change it. This transition we are living through has demanded some changes in the rules, and will inevitably demand more."

Regarding confidence of business in the future, a matter stressed by industrialists recently, Chase said that there are "forces loose in the world today which have a great respect for confidence."

"The total national income is the crucial factor," he maintained.

"The mass of the people generate that income through their work and conversely their buying power. The mass does not care whether the budget is balanced or not. It would not rush to spend on the kind of relief is advisable, what experiments should be continued and what abandoned. So that it is the making of the budget, which must be submitted to Congress right after New Year's Day, which is having many vital decisions of policy.

That is the task to which Mr. Roosevelt now is addressing himself. It is possible that no other budget message ever has been so revealing as the forthcoming one must be, of necessity.

There is much dispute how far the administration will be able to go in actually bringing the vast recovery machine into exact adjustment.

Mr. Roosevelt has learned in two or three previous attempts that laying down rules for coordination does not necessarily mean that coordination has been accomplished.

For the present, however, it is interesting and potentially important news that the situation is receiving serious attention; that the President has been impressed by opposition charges of confusion and inconsistency, and will try to do something about it.

"If and when war comes again to this country we must be in position to act swiftly," he said. "We must not make the mistakes we made during the World War."

"Our plans must eliminate war profiteering. They must provide that each man, king and dollar bear a just part of the burden. Some means must be found to assure the man who is going to the front to risk his life that those who stay at home aren't going to be rolling in wealth when he returns."

Baruch emphasized that it would be economic folly to draft any plan, which would prevent stay-at-homes from making comes to them from sky-rocker pricing prices or through enormous salaries.

He believes, however, that the government should step briskly in such a situation and impose a heavy excess profits tax to absorb any wealth the profiteer may have accumulated directly out of war.

The need of an organization with power to prevent war inflation is just as essential, Baruch said, as the removal of profits in war.

He proposed a plan under which a proclamation would be issued decreeing that every price in the whole national pattern would be frozen at some point on a date near the declaration of war. This would prevent post-war confusion and economic upheavals such as the nation now is experiencing.

Touching briefly on the gold standard and monetary problems,

"The mass of the people generate that income through their work and conversely their buying power.

The mass does not care whether the budget is balanced or not. It would not rush to spend on the confidence inspired by an announcement that the budget has been balanced. Confidence must be highly localized in the minds of business men who can be persuaded to place large orders for capital goods.

The upward spiral must start from them if at all. Their enthusiasm constitutes the sole credit on the ledger—and be it remembered that they have stubbed their toes in the confidence game more than once in the last five years."

Chase prefaced his remarks about budgets and spending with a long analysis of world condition, which he summarized with the statement that "the Western world is in the birth throes of a new order."

"It is entering a period of transition from private capitalism to some new system more consistent with the imperatives of a high-energy culture, even as feudalism gave way to private capitalism some hundreds of years ago. That transition took many decades. Oxford was a favorite method of energy consumption and transport. This transition will be more rapid; 300,000 horsepower turbines are not so patient as oxen."

GATORS TO TACKLE TOUGH SCHEDULE ON GRID IN '35

GAINESVILLE, Dec. 12.—(AP)—

South Places 3 Stalwarts On Collier's All-American Football Eleven For 1934

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—Selections for Collier's All-American football team, which is a perpetuation of the original All-America founded by Walter Camp 50 years ago, were announced today. The players chosen are:

ENDS: Hutson, Alabama; Larson, Minnesota.

TACKLES: Lee, Alabama; Reynolds, Stanford.

Guards: Barclay, N. Carolina; Brown, Minnesota.

Center: Shotwell, Pittsburgh.

Quarterback: Grayson, Stanford.

Halfbacks: Wallace, Rice; Burries, Navy.

Fullback: Lund, Minnesota.

In awarding the Walter Camp gold footballs to these players, the judges declare that "leading feature of this year's campaign was the widespread of football talent through every section of the country, although there was a slight decline among the headliners in line play, five of eight sections reporting no tackle quite up to All-American consideration."

The completed team has players from seven colleges. Minnesota's fast, crushing team gets three places; Alabama lands two linemen, and Stanford has a tackle and the quarterback. Nationally, the Eastern colleges are represented by only two places, occupied by representatives of Pittsburgh and Navy; the South has four players; the mid-West, three; Minnesota men; the Pacific Coast, two players from Stanford. Southern football comes to the forefront more prominently than ever before in the history of the Walter Camp awards.

Larson of Minnesota is the only man on the year's team whose name appeared on last year's.

The closest battle was on the backfield, where twelve candidates the old Yale-Harvard-Princeton combination is represented by only one player—Kelly of Yale, and in the final selection he was passed over by Hutson of Alabama.

The squad of 34 players, selected from more than 500 men whose records were kept week by week throughout the season, is as follows:

CENTER: Shotwell, Pittsburgh; H. Robinson, Tulane; Brown, Notre Dame; Lester, Texas Christian University.

GUARDS: Bevan, Minnesota; Barclay, N. Carolina; Hartwig, Pittsburgh; Ornison, Pittsburgh; Wiel, Southern Methodist; McElroy, Michigan; Washington.

TACKLES: Carter, Southern Methodist; Reynolds, Stanford.

ENDS: Lee, Alabama; Brown, Stanford.

HALFBACKS: Wallace, Rice; Burries, Navy.

FULLBACK: Lund, Minnesota.

In this list, the only colleges which are represented by more than a single player are: Stanford, 6; Minnesota, 3; Pittsburgh, 2; Alabama, 2; Southern Methodist, 2.

In the general appraisal of the year's results, the judges say:

"The season opened with the noise of falling kingdoms and shattered scepters.

The casualty list in high ranks lost no time getting under way.

By the Oct. 6 Michigan-Southern California game, Notre Dame, Southern, Yale, Pennsylvania and others had been led to the chopping block, while Rice, Southern Methodist and Louisiana State, all strong teams, had been tied.

MID-WEST: Through this up-

Demand For Broad Reports On Corporation Salaries Is Handed Securities Board

GEORGE MERRICK STARTS BACK ON ROAD TO RICHES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—(AP)—A demand for a broader reporting of corporation salaries arose yesterday after figures had disclosed a boost in the number of million dollar incomes and a shrinkage in the reported, taxable incomes of $5,000 or less.

While officials pondered those Treasury figures showing a quarter billion shrinkage in the Nation's total net income in 1933, the Securities Commission disclosed that some corporation salaries were leaping upward. In one case a pay raise of more than 200 per cent was shown. Others remained stationary or edged forward less markedly.

The Securities Commission figures, however, covered only the salaries of high officials in corporations that sought to issue stock during the year and there came the immediate suggestion from commission officials that the salaries of top officials of all corporations should be reported to the commission.

The salaries of corporation officials reported to the Securities Commission by corporations seeking to issue new securities showed among others:

Seton Porter, president of National Distillers Products Corporations, $75,620 this year and $51,660 last; Otto H. Watkins, vice president of the same concern, $43,593 and $21,256; Daniel K. Weisbrot, another vice president, $47,286 and $15,640; Arthur Loosby, another vice president, $32,740 and $11,073.

The highest salaries reported were by officers of the Republic Steel Corporation. T. M. Gilder, the president got $177,120 in 1933 and $129,372 this year. B. F. Fairless and R. J. Wyson, vice presidents, were paid $55,711 last year and $41,892 this year.

E. M. Allen, president of Matheson Alkali Works, got $86,740 in both 1933 and 1934. H. Robert Porter, president of American Water Works and Electric Company, received a $50 raise—from $69,050 in 1933 to $68,100 in 1934.

D. S. Barret, Jr., and C. L. Bradley, administrative officers of Chesapeake Corporation, both received $2,936 this year, representing small increases over 1933.

Officials of the Edison Electron Illuminating Company of Boston enjoyed no increases. Walter C. Bayliss, president, got $32,000 in both years. Thomas K. Cummings, treasurer, and Sidney Rosner, general manager, were paid $20,700, and Lenard L. Edgar, vice president, $11,000.

Long Kicks Walmsley Mendietta Ready To Out Of High Office Tender Resignation

BATON ROUGE, La., Dec. 14.—(UPI)—Samuel L. Walmsley, 67, former political boss of Baton Rouge, who recently resigned as the Democratic state senator, was not his fault that he did not win his seat in the election, said his attorney, W. E. Johnson, who is representing him. Walmsley, 67, was defeated by George W. Mendietta, 44, in the election and Johnson said he would do whatever he can to help him to do so and to succeed in his bid for the office.

Walmsley, 67, was elected to the Senate in 1932 and 1934, but did not run for re-election in 1936.

He is the author of the "Walmsley Law," which makes it illegal to do so and to be a person to succeed in his bid for the office.
