Revision 3
 Makes Sense

Most of the revision-amendments to the Florida constitution on which you will vote Nov. 7 are into which we in our continuing series have been offering insights are proving cumbersome and confusing to read, digest and evaluate.

This is because the framers of the proposals in their infinite—but questionable wisdom—chose to present them as a package. Each revision, for the most part, contains a myriad of individual proposals—with no leeway to excerpt particular items for approval or rejection.

It's all or nothing. This is unfortunate. Such a package does nothing to dispel the mass confusion that already exists about governmental rules, regulations and legalese.

Be that as it may, there is one revision—Revision 3—that deserves particular attention, if for no other reason that it is straight to the point and is not bogged down with other extraneous factors.

Revision 3 addresses the question of the need for advisability of single-member legislative districts—such as we have here in Seminole County.

The present legislature is made up of a combination of single and multi-member districts, with each voter electing from one to three senators and from one to six House members.

Proponents claim such a revision would guarantee that every Floridian will have an equal voice in lawmaking, since each voter would elect but one senator and one House member.

Opponents decry the proposal. Their argument: such a system would permit strong unions and other groups to dictate legislation to their one legislator or vote him out of office.

A chief spokesman for this point of view is Rep. John Ryals, D-Brandon. He raises the specter of such legislators elected as single members clinging to the parochial views of their little kingdoms and of urban delegations being fragmented with big city lawmakers losing their clout.

Our reaction: tough. The first part of Mr. Ryals' argument implies he has less than complete faith in the average voter, suggesting that he or she could be easily influenced and taken in by organized lobbies and special interest groups.

This is a cynical, jaundiced, negative view of our system. As for Mr. Ryals' contention and fear that big city lawmakers would lose clout, we say that is not the case.

It's about time the rural populace was given an equal opportunity to have its feelings felt where it counts on the firing line.

As noted, under the proposed system spelled out by Revision 3, each voter would elect one senator and one House member. This makes a lot of sense to us. If for no other reason, because it would bring citizens closer to their government.

It's bad enough that so few citizens know in what district they reside and who are their elected representatives—even here in Seminole where it is one on one—why compound the misfortune and regress, requiring citizens to remember the names of more than one of their elected representatives?

Keeping government as close to the people as possible is the most important aspect of the whole equation.

No Way
 To Run
 Country

WASHINGTON—It's 8:30 on a Saturday night, a time when normal people are engaged in leisurely pursuits. But in the Capitol of the United States, the House Rules Committee has just convened for a meeting.

All over Capitol Hill, wags are referring to the session-opening proceedings as "Saturday Night Live." In fact, the show here is far more entertaining than the television program of that name. Here's an abbreviated chronicle:

9:10 p.m.: A House doorman tells an elevator operator: "The boss is coming in by the truckload."

9:40: In the Senate press gallery, one reporter asks another: "Who's filibustering now?" The Senate began work at 9 a.m., but within an hour opponents of the energy bill tied up all proceedings in "the world's greatest deliberative body."

At one point in the desultory debate, Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., the leader of the filibuster, receives Senate permission to allow floor access for his "intern"—political grandee Dick Tucker.

10:30 p.m.: Eight bleary-eyed people—lobbyists, committee staff members and government officials—are playing gin rummy and reading paperback books in a corridor while waiting outside the room reserved for a House-female conference on sugar legislation.

The conference originally was scheduled for 8 p.m., but was postponed to 7 p.m., then to 8 p.m., then to 9:30 p.m. and finally to an unspecified time. A sign on the door saying: "No Word Yet."

12 midnight: The House, which began work on concontinues to plough through dozens of major and minor bills, ranging from the Duck Stamp Act amendments and the Indian Child Welfare Act to a multi-billion-dollar appropriation for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare.

1:30 a.m.: Sunday: Abourezk and his allies abandon their filibuster. The Senate approves the energy bill, then moves on to the huge backlog of House-approved legislation that must be acted upon before the lawmakers can leave Washington.

3 a.m.: Three House members are sprayed on couches in the Speaker's Lobby, directly behind the House chamber. All are asleep, but only one had the foresight to bring a blanket.

4 a.m.: With more than 18 survivors remaining in the audience—many of them highly paid lobbyists and lawyers—the conference committee on the year's major tax bill concludes its work. The conference on the sugar bill begins. 7:15 a.m.: The sun rises. Both houses are still in session.

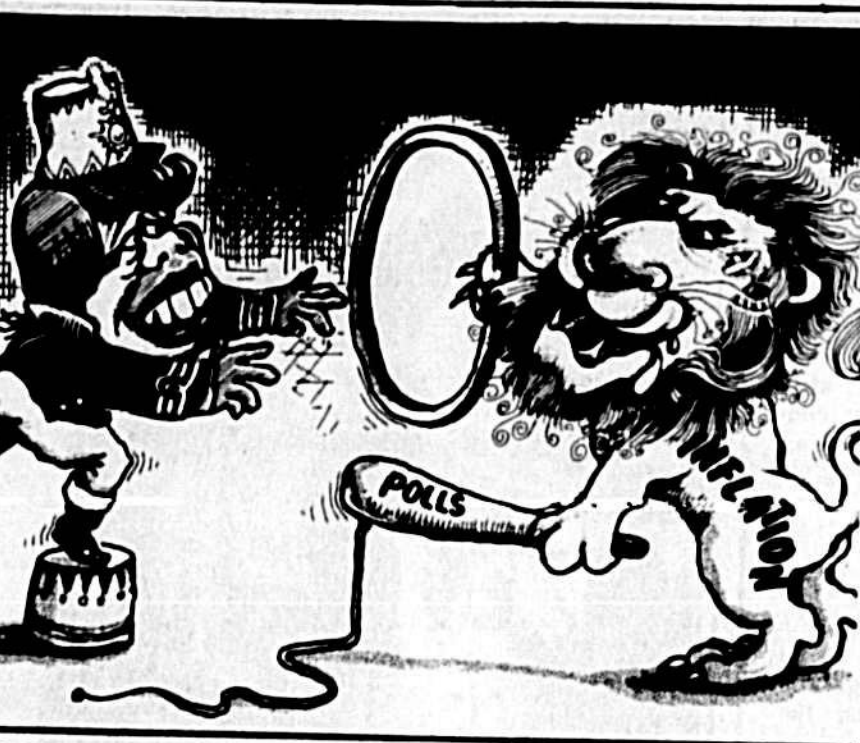

6:30 p.m.: The sun sets. Both houses are still in session.

6:48 p.m.: The House finally adjourns for the year. The Senate adjourns 30 minutes later after establishing a new record for end-of-session marathons: More than 34 consecutive hours.

WASHINGTON WORLD
 The Inflation Gamble

By HELEN THOMAS
 UPI Washington Reporter

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Carter is asking the American people for patience, self-restraint and time to win the battle against inflation.

Most of all, he is urging the people to withhold their judgments about there are no overnight solutions or instant miracles to break the inflationary spiral.

His new program is voluntary but packs some wallop in federal government purchasing contracts to the tune of $60 billion a year. He also warned that the government might decide to withhold the special privileges it extends to the private sector in the form of special franchises, protected wages and prices, subsidies and other favors.

Carter wants to put a 7 percent cap on wage increases and to hold economy-wide price boards to 1 1/2 percent.

It's a gamble. Carter is adamantly against mandatory wage and price controls, but he knows he needs some teeth to reduce this year's 8 percent inflation rate.

He sees the alternative evil as a deliberate recession which would throw millions of people out of work to drive prices down.

"I do not have all the answers," he said in his nationwide broadcast. "Nobody does."

But he declared that fighting inflation would be his "central preoccupation" during the months ahead.

His biggest lever is to rally public opinion behind a program of wage and price standards for industry and services that he can mobilize the nation to adhere to the grand design to decelerate the inflation rate to 6 or 6.5 percent by next year.

Carter has long recognized inflation is the biggest domestic problem in the country today. His previous efforts to win voluntary support on the part of business and labor floundered and never got off the ground. The cooperation he asked for was never there.

But this time, the president seems to think

VIEWPOINT
 Theory
 Old, But Game New

By DON GRAFT

Whatever became of the domino theory? There are some among us who very likely would prefer not to be reminded that it ever existed, let alone be provided with an updating.

The domino theory, it may be recalled, was much heard during the height of the Vietnam war as a primary justification for preventing at all costs a Communist takeover throughout the Indochina peninsula.

If Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia fell, the argument went, they in turn would topple Thailand, Malaysia and the other economically weak and politically shaky Southeast Asian lands beyond.

Indochina is now Communist, although far from harmoniously so. And the ostensible dominoes have become something called ASEAN—the Association of Southeast Asian Nations.

ASEAN groups Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia and the Philippines in something that is short of a full-fledged alliance, but much more than a paper expression of regional solidarity such as the fractious Organization of African States.

The politics of most of the five members still leave considerable to be desired from a Western democratic point of view and problems are a common denominator of their economies. But in both respects they are looking much more robust today than in that dark period when Vietnam was about to go under and, it was feared, take them along.

Particularly interesting under the circumstances is that the United States is not a member nor, Communist denunciations to the contrary, is it calling the plays for the members.

ASEAN is an ATO—the distant Southeast Asia Treaty Organization which had a significance for the State Department of John Foster Dulles but virtually nowhere else.

ASEAN certainly has the best wishes and assistance as required of the United States, but it is essentially a creation of the five Southeast Asian members for their mutual security and economic development.

It has had some interesting effects on the politics of the region. Within it, Malaysia, Singapore and Indonesia have managed to put aside squabbles that had made them vulnerable to outside manipulation, and the Philippines and Malaysia have turned off what had been a very low-voltage territorial dispute over northeast Borneo.

ASEAN's major current problem may well be its increasing popularity in the very quarters which once seemed to threaten it. All the major Communist powers in the area are showing it marked signs of favor.

Relations with China are generally cordial. The Soviet Union is making friendly overtures, including a proposed visit to several ASEAN capitals by a deputy foreign minister.

he regularly refers to the public as "those tourists."

The off-the-record press meetings were designed to improve relations between Burger and the press, but they proved unproductive and were widely regarded as probably doomed from the start, to judge by the attitude once expressed by Burger toward the senior court correspondent, Lytle Denison of the Washington Star. "I don't have any interest in anything Denison has to say," Burger told U.S. News and World Report reporters.

Relations with the press seem unlikely to improve as long as Burger is around. The distrust of the media, apparently is of the truly epic proportions nurtured by the man who appointed him. "There was a Nixonian attitude toward the press that Burger maintained," a former court reporter told me. "He was very opinionated and he would not let any reporter in."

By MILTON RICHMAN

Guy Lafleur Numero Uno

NEW YORK (UPI)—Any way you look at him, Guy Lafleur is the hottest thing on ice today, numero uno, the best player in all hockey, and for a while he was the happiest one also. Only for a while, though.

The Montreal Canadiens made him their first choice in the 1971 draft and when his original two-year contract with them ran out and there was talk he might jump to the Quebec Nordiques of the World Hockey Association, the Canadiens hurriedly signed him to a new 10-year contract.

That one guaranteed Lafleur $1 million, which still was considered enough to feed a family of four back in 1973 when the Canadiens' Golden Boy accepted it, so naturally, it made him quite happy.

But then something happened, and suddenly Lafleur wasn't that happy anymore.

What happened was that the New York Rangers went out and signed couple of Swedish players, Anders Hedberg and Ulf Nilsson, for around $600,000 a year apiece. The fact the Rangers tried to play it down somewhat by making it known that only $500,000 of that was in the form of straight salary to each man, and the rest was upfront money, didn't make all the other players in the league, Lafleur included, feel any happier.

Not wanting an unhappy player on their hands, especially one like Lafleur, who won three consecutive scoring championships and two straight MVPs, the Canadiens called him in last February and voluntarily jacked up his contract to something like $800,000 a year.

That action by Canadiens' former general manager Sam Pollock made Lafleur VERY happy.

From time to time, though, Lafleur couldn't help wondering how much he'd be worth if he were a free agent. He also wondered why a player like himself, acknowledged by everyone as the best, should be working for less money than someone like Buffalo's GJ Perreault, making $380,000 a year, or Hedberg and Nilsson.

Outwardly, Lafleur did not kick.

"I have my underestimates," he said, "and with these contracts, I might make as much outside as I will playing hockey. This is why I don't complain."

Lafleur said that only six months ago, but last Wednesday night he was reported to have signed his contract that he was going to quit the Canadiens. Apparently, what got him so upset was his agent, Gerry Petrie, informing him that Montreal goalie Ken Dryden was being paid $350,000 a year. That was considerably more than Lafleur was getting.

Lafleur's agent and the Canadiens began new negotiations with a new contract resulting Thursday night. Lafleur still isn't getting anywhere near what Hedberg and Nilsson are, but at least he's moving up in the money bracket. Before agreeing to his new contract, Lafleur told the press the "whole thing was blown out of proportion."

"Buffalo is one of the scorpions of our society and one of its by-products is that nobody wants satisfied with his salary anymore. Everybody wants to make more than the rest guy, and nowhere do you see greater evidence of that than in sports."

Coach Bert Jones, the Baltimore Colts' splashed quarterback, isn't making a quarter million dollars a year on a five-year contract that has two more years to go, and now his agent claims he's making more than a group of investors representing MGM "oil" who are looking ahead starting a new league and offering $200,000 in salaries for five years.

"I don't think my agent is looking for that league to get off the ground. Some people still remember the World Football League, and you know where that is now."

Brantley County JV Champ

Lake Brantley High School's junior varsity wrapped up a county football championship Thursday night with a come-from-behind 19-16 victory over Seminole.

Gary Timlin was Lake Brantley's hero, intercepting a pass and returning it 30 yards for the winning touchdown.

Seminole, which scored first and led at intermission by 16-4, was stumped on a pair of fourth down touchdowns passes from quarterback Greg Fry. He hit Rich DiMarco on a 13-yard aerial and Charles Reichard on a 25-yard play.

John Game kicked an extra point for the winning Patriots, who called up a 5-3 season.

Seminole, which closed out a 2-4 campaign, got a pair of one-yard TD runs from Robert Guy, who also scored a two-point conversion.

Seminole coach Bob Lundquist cited defensive ends Al Crawford and Reginald Walton, fullback Wayne Pace and linebacker Jim Valentine as turning in five games.

Weigandt Wins Wekiva Tourney

Joan Weigandt won Thursday's Wekiva Women's Golf Association Open tournament, edging runner-up Jackie Andrews for Class B honors.

In C Flight, Mary Hicks was first and Marlene Cohen was second.

The Open format saw golfers crossing gross scores on holes beginning with the letters A, B and C.

80 A Winner For Threesome

The threesome of Peg Hooper, Joan Turman and Celia Holliman shot an 80 and won a match of cards over Chris Burger, Marcella Hachenbach and Zella Elmsie in the Royal Palm three-day scramble Thursday.

Third with an 81 was Mary Herward, Joan Newport, and Shirley Schmid. Newport, dressed as Baglady, won the feature for wearing the best costume in the Halloween tourney.

Bucs Face Big Game

By United Press International
This could be the weekend of the Big Shakeup in the National Football League.

Minnesota may have set the tone for things to come with its 21-10 upset of the Dallas Cowboys last night and before this long weekend is over, the league standings may be filled with surprises.

Washington should have an easy time against San Francisco as the Redskins try to take advantage of Dallas' third loss to take sole possession of the NFC Eastern Division. But if Washington stumbles and the revitalized New York Giants beat New Orleans, the NFC East will have three teams tied for the lead with 6-3 records.

Tampa Bay is at Green Bay and if the Bucs are successful in handling the Packers their record straight loss. Tampa Bay will join Minnesota with a 5-4 record, only a game behind the Packers in the NFC Central Division race.

A three-way tie for the lead is also possible in the AFC Western Division where Denver and Oakland are currently in front with 5-3 records with Seattle a game back at 4-4. Denver has to travel to Seattle, however, and if the Seahawks can upend the Broncos and Oakland wins as expected against San Diego, Denver, Oakland and Seattle will all be 6-3.

The New York Jets will be fighting for a share of the AFC East title when they travel to New England. Miami leads Baltimore and if the Jets and Dolphins both win, the AFC East will also have three teams tied at 6-3.

In other Sunday games, Buffalo is at Cleveland, Cincinnati hosts Houston, Kansas City is at Pittsburgh, Detroit is at Chicago, St. Louis is at Philadelphia. On Monday, Atlanta hosts Los Angeles in its final effort to hold down the runaway Rams in the NFC Western Division.

Minnesota may have pointed the way to a weekend of upsets when it capitalized on two Dallas mistakes for a 14-0 lead in the first quarter and went on to play an error-free game.

On the opening kickoff, Dallas' Larry Brinson fumbled the ball away to Minnesota's Tom Hanson at the Cowboy's 28. It took quarterback Fran Tarkenton only seven plays to produce a touchdown, throwing a 4-yard pass to Chuck Foreman for score.

Minnesota scored three minutes later on a 4-yard run by Richey Young — three plays after Tony Dorsett fumbled at his own 28.

The Vikings' third score came with 29 seconds left in the first half on a 13-yard Tarkenton pass to Sammy White.

Arizona Big Challenge For UCLA Saturday

By United Press International
UCLA may be thinking ahead to its Nov. 18 meeting with USC as the key game in the march toward the Rose Bowl, but the Bruins can't afford to relax tonight against a newcomer to the Pacific-8.

Ranked eighth nationally, UCLA is a 13½-point favorite over Arizona.

The game could turn on the way the teams react to what happened last weekend. UCLA, 4-4 in league play and 6-1 overall, is coming off a 45-0 ramp over California in which it set a Pac-8 record with 19 interceptions. Arizona, 1-1 in conference play and 3-3 overall, had the weekend off to regroup after losing at California 33-20.

Judging by their respective showings against California, UCLA might be expected to wallop Arizona by 50 or 60 points. But Bruins Coach Terry Donahue is showing respect for the Wildcats and possible concern that his team may go into the game overconfident.

"Arizona has a great advantage with the week's bye," Donahue said. "Arizona can't be taken lightly."

"I've seen films of their game with Michigan and it was dead even. Michigan had trouble running on them with any degree of consistency. They hurt them throwing the ball."

UCLA has posted four wins in a row — Minnesota, Stanford, Washington State and California — after losing in its third week at Kansas 29-24.

Along with Arizona State, the Wildcats dropped out of the Western Athletic Conference and joined the old Pacific-8 this season. Arizona's league win was a 21-7 decision over Oregon State. The Wildcats lost 21-17 at Ann Arbor, Mich.

In other games this weekend involving top-ranked teams, No. 1 Oklahoma hosts Kansas State, No. 2 Penn State visits West Virginia, No. 3 Alabama entertains Virginia Tech, No. 4 Nebraska hosts Oklahoma State, No. 5 Maryland visits Duke, No. 6 Southern California entertains California, No. 7 Texas hosts EMU, No. 8 UCLA entertains Arizona, No. 9 Michigan hosts Minnesota and No. 10 Houston entertains No. 11 Arkansas.

Melina: Politician Talks Of 'Dream Of Passion'

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — The honorable deputy to the Greek parliament from the city of Piraeus likes to come to Los Angeles because the salads here are very good. This time, she also wants to tell everybody about her new movie.

Her name, in case you hadn't guessed, is Melina Mercouri, the exciting and excitable star of so many fine films.

And she is now a genuine politician, having been elected to the Greek parliament and being very serious about her job.

Her husband, director Jules Dassin, says that she spends most of her time these days on her political activities.

He finds it hard to lure her away to do any acting. She says that her new career has liberated him.

"He can go where he wants and do what he wants," she says. "He doesn't have to wait to find a part for me."

So they both are happy. And their latest collaboration is a film they are both happy with and proud of.

It is "A Dream Of Passion," which Dassin produced, directed and wrote, and which stars Melina Mercouri and Ellen Burstyn.

It is a powerful film in the Greek tradition, full of passion and emotion.

But at the moment, politics seems as important to her as films and filming.

She says to every reporter that she won't talk politics, but that means simply she won't discuss issues.

She will talk about her political career, however.

She says it is now a fulltime job with her. She represents the Athens seaport, Piraeus — in Greece, a parliamentary deputy need not live in the district he or she represents.

"The fact that she was a film star," Dassin says, "was really not an advantage in her election campaign. On the contrary, it hurt her. The people of Piraeus were suspicious of her motives, but they eventually came to believe that she was sincere when she talked about wanting to help them."

"They call him 'Julie,'" she says. "They run after him and call after him. That's because he made 'Never On Sunday,' which was a lot about Piraeus. And

'Fonz' Winkler: Super Salesman

By JOAN HANAUER

UPI Television Writer NEW YORK (UPI) — Scratch a television series superstar like Henry Winkler and you'll find a super salesman who could sell rib roast to a vegetarian.

On "Happy Days" Winkler uses the considerable force of his personality to sell the Fonz. In his debut as a television producer, he used that same salesmanship to sell his product to a variety of people from ABC top executives to Paul Newman and Muhammad Ali. Like all good salesmen he really believes in his product — and with good reason.

HENRY WINKLER

Winkler produced and will host an ABC special on Dec. 17, "Who Are The DeBoltz And Where Did They Get 19 Kids?" It is an Academy Award winning documentary on the DeBoltz, a San Francisco area couple who adopted 13 of their 19 children, most of whom are handicapped.

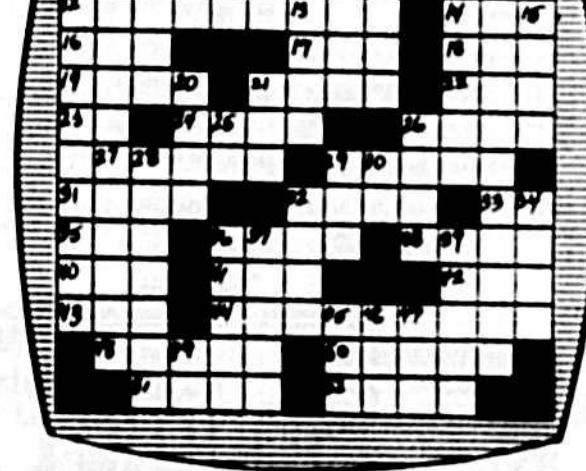

Winkler has formed his own production company, Fair Dinkum, which, he said, "is an Australian phrase that means honest man."

Winkler wanted to produce the film on television and was told it already had been turned down by all three networks.

"I knew I had to do it after I saw the film. Everybody said it couldn't be done. More than anything I loved that — when they said I'd never get it on the air," Winkler said in an interview, laughing at himself.

As a star of ABC, he attended an ABC board of directors meeting along with the chairman of the board, the president of the company and other top brass.

"Have I got a special for you!" Winkler told them, and his voice was soft and eager as he recalled the scene. "I reminded them 1978 was the International Year of the Child, and they could get a jump on it with a very special holiday special. I ended up shaking hands with (ABC Television president) Fred Pierce on it that night. My first time out and already I'm shaking hands."

UNITED Feature Syndicate

Winkler talked ABC into giving him Sunday night at 7 p.m., Eastern time for the show. Problem: The film runs 74 minutes and the 7-8 p.m. hour runs 60 minutes and 30 seconds — the rest of the time goes to commercials, station identification and newscasts.

Winkler and his associates edited the film down to 34 minutes. The network gave up on it and newscasts, and Arca, the sole sponsor, made two one-time-only commercials to bond with the show.

Stardom Doesn't Always Mean Lots Of Success

By ANNE THAYER

Robert Vaughn. When he was doing his "Man From U.N.C.L.E." series, Vaughn promised himself he would be a millionaire by his 30th birthday. And while he had no chance of stashing away that much from show his earnings at that point, it gave him the nut that got him a hefty share in natural gas wells, one of which came in so abundantly that Vaughn did hit the big money he wanted before that birthday hit him.

As readers of fashion magazines and beauty columns know, cosmetics were Polly Bergen's main interest for some years. She was the president of her own company and actively concerned with product development and believed in what she was selling, though the company eventually went into bankruptcy. (Polly, however, continues to prosper personally and is now the spokeswoman for Singer.) Another actress, who wanted success for her faltering cosmetic line, though she surely doesn't need the money it might have brought, is Diana Merrill.

Once you've climbed to stardom, fortune, as well as fame, is assured. Yes or no? Check the famous and you get some "yes" answers, some "no" answers and some "yes and no" fence-sitters. English-born Stewart Granger, who did one season on television in a western series before re-rooting himself in Switzerland, gratefully admitted he reaped his richest in America's Southwest. "But not from movies." Taxes pretty well ate up salaries in his big Hollywood period. His affluence was assured only after a sage business partner urged Granger to sell off his ranch land for real estate development.

The great Greer Garbo did earn her movie salaries in those golden days before taxes grew voracious. However, one part of the Garbo legend says she also put her money to work for her in real estate. When she drops into a boutique or health food store on Beverly Hills' posh shopping street, she is treading on land she owns.

Then there's farm land and ranch land, which some performers treat not just as hideaways but as money-makers. Court Clift Eastwood, Jim Davidson and James Brown among this gang, Bert Reynolds has been making his Florida property turn a profit for him, too.

Ranchers, of course, have their specialties. While horses may be a hobby to some, to James Brown among this gang, Bert Reynolds has been making his Florida property turn a profit for him, too.

Broin now speaks proudly of the size of his breeding farm. He told an interviewer recently, "We started with Appaloosas, switched to quarter horses and are now with thoroughbreds... that's where the market is." Newton, so contraire, didn't find thoroughbreds to be the profitable stock for him that they are for Broin... and he is now raising Arabians.

But close contact with the land and what it nurtures isn't the actors' only road to riches. Some sit at desks juggling portfolios and prosper... and some gamble on new ventures that may, or may not prosper... and some gamble on new ventures that may, or may not, spin away to success.

Wayne Rogers can always afford to wait for the right time to come along because the business management firm he heads has always brought him a bigger financial return than has acting. (Rogers has also made the big difference for

THE BRIDGES
Actor Lloyd Bridges (left) is perhaps best remembered for his "Sea Hunt" run-ins with sharks, stingrays and barracudas. Son Jeff, on the other hand, is currently best known for co-starring with a different sort of exotic creature, Farrah Fawcett-Majors, in a new comedy-thriller. The two Bridges are the stars of a benefit premiere of Jeff's film.

Ask Dick Kleiner

DEAR DICK: I heard that Tim Lincecum was going to be on the two-hour TV movie of "Gilligan's Island" because she wanted more money and they wouldn't give it to her. And also that the cast didn't want her on the show anyway because she was so nasty. Is this really true? I hope not. L.G. PRICKE, Verona, Wis.

Money may have had something to do with it — if they had offered her a couple of million she might have said yes — but she didn't really want to do the part again. She feels that she has gone beyond the silliness of Ginger, and doesn't want to recreate that image again. There were always some ill feelings on that show, but for the good of the venture, they would have welcomed her back.

DEAR DICK: Please settle our argument. What is the first line of the "All in the Family" theme song? It sounds like "Boys avoid less mellow plays." Could you clarify? It bugs me. MARCIA M. COOK, Kalamazoo, Mich.

Usually, it's the last line that people don't get. The first line: "Boy the way Glenn Miller played." And, in case you are very young, Glenn Miller was a great bandleader in the '30s, in the days when pop music was good music.

DEAR DICK: I am a "Love Boat" fan. I love the show. How many more seasons do they plan to show it? How old is Fred Grandy? He plays Captain Smith. When is his birthday? Is he married? If so, to whom? GOPHER-LOVE, Williamsport, Pa.

"The Love Boat" will go on as long as the ratings stay up and the ship doesn't sink. Grandy is 29. While a senior at Harvard, he married a Radcliffe girl and today he and Jan have two children.

DEAR DICK: Some information, please, about a beautiful actress named Donna Reed. How old, place of birth, which film won her an Oscar, and where I can write to her, as my wife bears a marked resemblance to her. RONALD A. MICHAEL, Joplin, Mo.

Lucky Ronny, they call you. Donna, in her heyday, was one of the great beauties. She's 57 now. She comes from Iowa and won an Oscar in 1935 for her work in "From Here to Eternity." I do not give addresses.

DEAR DICK: A David Ladd played Paul Beebe in a movie called "Misty." I was wondering if it is the same person as Cheryl Ladd's husband. BAULA BOHAN, Maple Ridge, B.C., Can.

Yes, Little David Ladd of "Misty" grew up to be big David Ladd of Cheryl fame.

Halloween: It's Linus And Louis

Linus eagerly awaits the arrival of the magical jack-o'-lantern, which is the symbol of Halloween, in "It's the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown." animated special to be rebroadcast Monday, Oct. 30 on CBS.

Louis Jourdan stars as the eternally infamous vampire, "Count Dracula," in this "Great Performances" encore treat on Tuesday, Oct. 31 on PBS.

If you're home by the fire on these eerie late-October evenings and looking for television entertainment, tune in to the Halloween specials.

CBS will get the Halloween spirit in gear on Oct. 30 with a rebroadcast of "It's the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown." The well-loved Peanuts special will be especially scary — since this is its 12th airing.

Linus, the blanket-toting Peanuts intellectual awaits that elusive, magical jack-o'-lantern who has become Halloween's symbol.

Charlie Brown just turns the other cheek, although he suffers a small lump in his heart when he gets rocks in his trick-or-treat bag.

Snoopy, the bumptious beagle, gets a big moon-struck Lucy gets characteristically motherly, and Linus suffers a lot of "good grief" as he takes up his annual vigil in Pookland's "most sincere" pumpkin patch to await the Great Pumpkin, his friend Puff, and their trip to Honah Lee, Puff's magical homeland.

The animated special, written by Romeo Muller, is an interpretation of the song, and it explains how Puff helps a frightened little boy, but, on the other hand, you can't prove that there is a Great Pumpkin, but, on the other hand, you can't prove that there is a Great Pumpkin.

According to Charles Schultz, creator of the Great Pumpkin, "you can't prove that there is a Great Pumpkin, but, on the other hand, you can't prove that there is a Great Pumpkin."

He was trying to write a sequence for a strip involving Linus' confusion between Halloween and Christmas.

"Linus is a youngster to whom everything must have significance and nothing is unimportant," says Schultz. "Christmas is a big holiday, and it has Santa Claus as one of its symbols. Halloween is also a special kind of day, so it ought to have some sort of Santa Claus, too."

"This is what bothered Linus. Actually, it bothered me, too. So, between us we came up with the Great Pumpkin."

If you're familiar with the Peanuts and the Great Pumpkin, tune in!

"Puff the Magic Dragon," a new half-hour animated special based upon Peter Yarrow's classic hit song will follow on CBS.

"Puff," made popular by Peter, Paul and Mary in the 1960s, tells the story of little Jackie Draper, his friend Puff, and their trip to Honah Lee, Puff's magical homeland.

The animated special, written by Romeo Muller, is an interpretation of the song, and it explains how Puff helps a frightened little boy, but, on the other hand, you can't prove that there is a Great Pumpkin, but, on the other hand, you can't prove that there is a Great Pumpkin."

encore presentation of "Count Dracula" with Louis Jourdan on Tuesday, Oct. 31. Your blood will curdle and your pulse will race as the three hours up to midnight tick, tick, tick to Count Dracula's end.

The televised "Count Dracula" is a further reflection of the vampirism currently sweeping the country. The long-running Broadway version of "Dracula" has now added national touring companies and will soon be turned into an all-star film.

Jourdan, usually thought of as a romantic male lead, says, "I've tried to make Dracula as attractive as possible. After all, he does promise his victims eternal life. Like so many evil people, he really believes he is doing good."

Chip: On The Trail 12 Years

'I won't consider running until my father gets out of office in 1984'

CHIP CARTER

"I am an independent. I vote for the man, but I have never seen a Republican who is better than a Democrat," Chip Carter, son of the president, told a group of Democrats gathered at the Sanford Civic Center Friday.

The second son of the First Family was in the city to promote the candidacy of Democratic congressional candidate David Best of Orlando in the final days of Best's campaign.

"We need an independent man who speaks his own mind and does his own thing, yet one upon whom the White House can call," Carter said.

Carter told of his own experiences in politics, including his own election at 24 years of age to the Plains, Ga., city council.

Asked if he had higher political aspirations, Carter said, "I won't consider running for office until my father gets out of office in 1984."

He said when he was only 12 he began helping his father in political campaigns.

"My father would leave me in a small town to pass out literature in the stores while he went on to the next city to campaign. When he was on his way back, he'd pick me up and we'd go home."

The crowd welcomed Carter by singing "Happy Days Are Here Again."

Best, in brief remarks, thanked Seminole County for giving him the highest percentage of votes of all eight counties of the district in the second primary.

In response to a question from a disabled veteran, Best said that his opponent, Congressman Richard Kelly, knows better than to equate veterans programs with welfare programs as he has done in public statements.

"Kelly is a veteran himself; however, he is not a disabled veteran. He did that himself." — DONNA ESTES

Egypt Team Stays

By United Press International
 Egypt today reversed its decision to recall its negotiators from Washington, giving the U.S.-backed peace conference a major new boost.

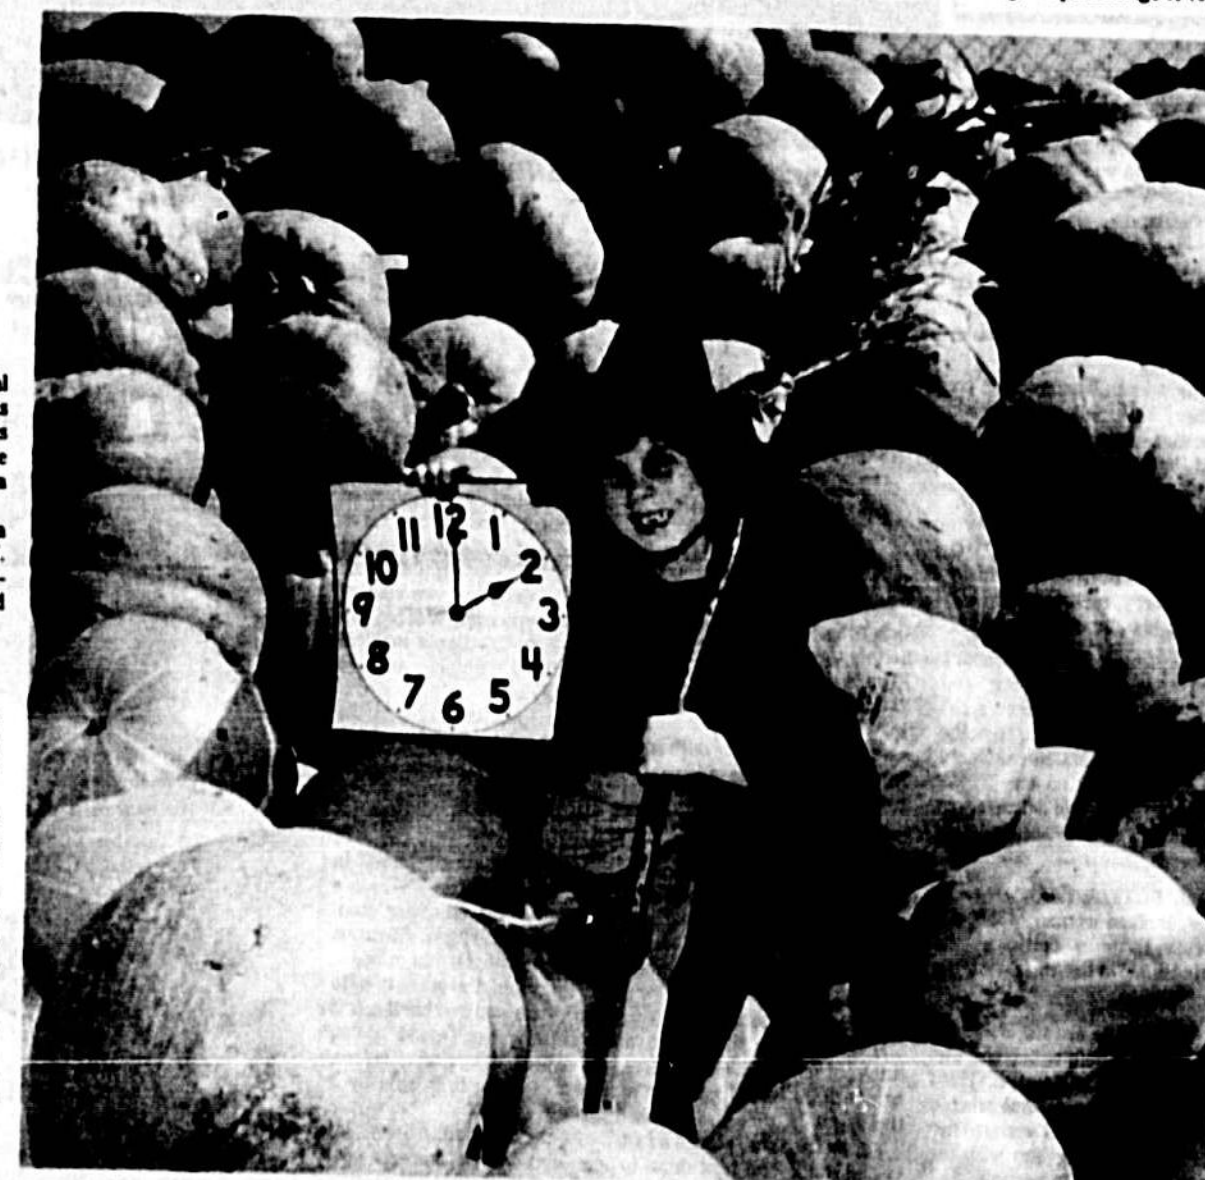

President Carter told a campaign rally in Buffalo, N.Y., he had phoned Egyptian President Anwar Sadat Friday and asked him to reconsider the move to summon home his principal two delegates to the talks.

"I contacted President Sadat last night and said 'leave your negotiators in Washington,'" Carter said. "I'll do what my friend Jimmy Carter asks me to." Carter quoted Sadat as replying, "They're going to stay there and negotiate."

"We're moving toward peace in the Middle East," Carter said. In Cairo, an official spokesman said Egypt had "no sense of a major crisis" in the negotiations despite the cloud cast on them by Israel's decision Wednesday to expand Jewish settlements in occupied Arab lands.

Mansour Hassan said the government had told Defense Minister Lt. Gen. Kamal Hasan Ali, "to decide whether it would be necessary for him to return home" from Washington.

Defender Adds Lawyer In Seminole

By DENNIS FEOLA
 Herald Staff Writer

Public Defender David Porter has announced another attorney will be added to the staff at his Seminole County office.

Porter also said Titusville attorney Bill Gaudin will no longer be handling cases in Seminole County.

The need for an additional attorney to handle the Seminole County workload, was one of the major points made in a series of articles on the public defender's office which appeared in The Evening Herald in September.

In addition, Gaudin was specifically cited in the articles as one of the attorneys whose clients were complaining he was not doing enough pre-trial preparation.

Porter said he has tentatively decided on Joan Bickerstaff, 27, of Rockledge, as the new attorney for the Sanford office. He said Miss Bickerstaff, who is leaving a private law firm in Brevard County, is returning from vacation Monday at which time a final decision will be made.

In any case, Porter said the Sanford office will get an additional attorney.

"I am definitely going to put another person in to put that for sure," he said.

Gaudin had handled the case of Robert Anthony Preston Jr., who was found guilty in August of throwing a deadly missile and criminal mischief. The attorney failed to arrange for the subpoena of a key witness in the case.

Also during the trial, Preston complained he had been in jail on the charges for seven months without ever seeing Gaudin, and the attorney waived his right to a speedy trial without his knowledge.

It was noted in the September series, Gaudin had never, during a three-month period which was checked, signed the log at the jail indicating he was visiting his clients.

Porter conceded Gaudin's failure to sign the office log was one of the reasons behind the transfer.

"I wasn't satisfied with everything he did," Porter said. "I think it will just be better for all concerned."

Porter also said his chief assistant for Seminole County, Franklin Kelley, is no longer handling the day-to-day operations for the office.

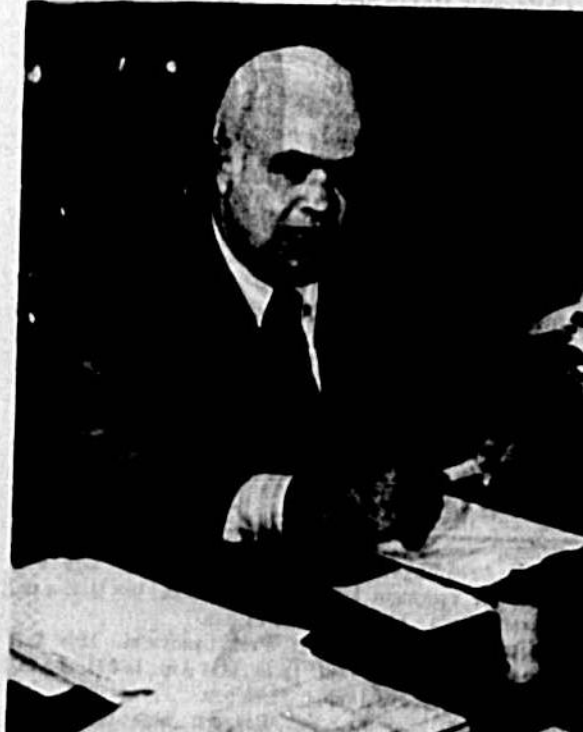

Kelley's lack of attention to the Sanford office, as well as Porter's, was another major point made in the September series.

"I'm running the thing now," Porter said. "I am doing the

Secret Sheriff Force Grabbing Dope

SHERIFF JOHN POLK: 'SERIOUS PROBLEM'

For almost a year now, in almost total secrecy, a select group of law enforcement officers has been working undercover to fight "street level" crime in Seminole County.

The squad, with members from municipalities throughout the county, is headed by Sgt. Robert Kunkler of the Seminole County Sheriff's Department.

"Our main goal is to take dope off the streets. We're trying to get the street-level pushers," Kunkler said.

The task force was started by Sheriff John Polk. It complements a second secretive task force, which operates out of Altamonte Springs, headed by the federal government's Drug Enforcement Agency and responsible for crimes with a larger scope.

"We've taken hundreds of pounds of marijuana off the streets. Some PCP, cocaine, just about a little of everything," Kunkler said.

The squad is responsible for more than 25 arrests in its 11 months of operations. However, in keeping with their low profile, the squad's members have often not taken credit for the arrests.

"We've been very efficient, but we don't pound our own name," Kunkler said.

"Dope is a serious problem in Seminole County," Polk said. "If you wanted to arrest all the kids with a joint you would have to build a jail 100 stories high."

"We're not only concerned with drugs, but prostitution and gambling," the sheriff said.

Kunkler said gambling in Seminole County includes numbers and bolita games, football parlays and large organized games.

Prostitution in the county includes some streetwalkers and call girl operations, he said.

"You're barking up the wrong tree if you think you've got the money or the manpower to wipe out prostitution, but you can control it," Polk said.

The business of battling vice requires ingenuity and cooperation among law enforcement agencies.

"The people we're fighting don't know county or municipal lines," Kunkler said.

"In this game, you've got to play roles. You've got to try and blend in with the people."

"I think we're doing the job we set out to do," he said.

Polk agrees and he said many of the investigations begun by the task force are turned over to large agencies.

For instance, Polk said, an investigation into a Casselberry business training for a drug operation led to the smashing of a nationwide drug operation.

Polk said he revealed in a laboratory producing PCP, an animal tranquilizer, being shut down in Las Vegas and the arrest of drug connections in Kansas City and Chicago.

Kunkler said most of the information leading to arrests comes

'Our Little Man' Loses Marker

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — Cemetery officials have removed a bronze plaque reading "our little man" from the grave of a 7-year-old boy because his father could not make payments on the funeral.

Robert Nethercutt says he is heartbroken to see the grave of his son, Bobby Lee, going without a marker, but said he "simply had no money and was in the process of filing for bankruptcy."

Cemetery officials removed the plaque — which has the boy's vital statistics, drawings of an airplane and a baseball bat and ball — as a "total, desperate last resort" after the Nethercuts missed four months of payments early this year.

Nethercutt President Hal Hodson called the situation "regrettable" because the cemetery broke its own rules to try to help the Nethercuts.

"Usually we have a rule that says a grave marker has to be paid for before it can be installed," Hodson said. "But in this case it was a 7-year-old boy and we felt sorry for them. We're human. We wanted to help."

Nethercutt had signed contracts for the funeral and cemetery plot just a few days after his son died of intestinal infection and kidney failure Aug. 29, 1977, and the combined debt was more than $1,500.

from confidential sources.

"We request assistance of every person with reliable information," he said. "We're trying to get the citizens more involved."

"We need their help. We can't get enough information," he said.
