Seminole Commission Okays Growth Plan Concept Herald Staff Writer

County commissioners Tuesday night agreed to provide future municipal-level services to areas outside city limits by adoption of the concept of Seminole's comprehensive acne without the dermatitis. plan - the first state mandate plan in Florida. Others who want this in-County planners want the board to designate South Seminole County as the area to receive "urban services." In turn, county areas in North Seminole would be encouraged to petition the cities - Lake Mary and Sanford — for annexation as a means to receive the "super duper" urban services as envisioned by the county's planning

> Several commissioners disagreed with concepts presented by county planners at Tuesday night's session. Democratic Commissioner Harry Kwiatkowski argued that adoption of the plan as envisioned by planners is in opposition to the free enterprise system. "I personally object to any type of plan in which we commissioners try to control growth," Kwiatkowski

Under the present concept, commissioners would

"define and enforce" an urban development pattern for Seminole county to determine where "tax dollars will and will not be spent to support urban development." Kwiatkowski said spending dollars for "super nifty" services in designated areas would attract private industry only to those areas where government was willing to provide the better level of services. "We'll be acting as a private industry; I don't think that is what county government is all about," Kwiatkowski The commission okayed the concept, but officials refused to go all the way and designate areas where tax dollars will and will not be spent to provide urban-level

However, County Planner Bill Kercher said this morning planners will stick to the concept that South Seminole County will be the target area, and unincorporated areas of North Seminole will be encouraged to seek annexation to the cities of Sanford and Lake Mary. Seminole's comprehensive plan results from a 1974

state law which states this county must have a plan adopted by Oct. 1 of this year. Other Florida counties that do not already have plans must have theirs ready by July 1, 1979. Some areas have voluntarily adopted plans - well ahead of the state-mandated deadline. But Seminole's plan will serve as a model for those counties required to meet state law by the 1979 deadline.

The concept would allow the commission to define the term "county-wide services" to be supported by countywide taxation. The areas designated to receive urbanlevel services would be taxed extra through the creation of municipal service taxing districts. Kwiatkowski opposed designation of South Seminole as such an area.

"The county should encourage growth in North Seminole," he said. Kwiatkowski said South Seminole residents are pleased with county "farm house services" in return for "farm house taxes." Exec. Asst. Roger Neiswender said public hearings convinced planners that the general public wants to know

specifically what areas will contain what types of growth in the future. "First," Neiswender said, "The county couldn't provide urban-level services to all parts of Seminole County. It's

So, the executive assistant added, the planning staff needed to know if Seminole wants to be in the "urban services business.'

The term "urban service" means the county would provide the same or better services to county residents as hose services being provided by city governments. Theoretically, according to Commission Chairman Dick Williams, areas designated "rural" could be charged lower taxes. But Kercher said county-wide taxes could remain the same, they could be reduced, or, they could

It all depends, Kercher added, on the level of services county commissioners decide to provide. Commissioner John Kimbrough also voiced some criticisms. The plans called for priority to be given "core" areas in provision of county-wide services. Kimbrough said that should be done, but only when it's feasible and

Last night's decision, Kercher said, gave his staff direction for two month's work. Then on March 15, the concept will be reevaluated by commissioners. A series of public hearings will be held on every aspect of the plan before its final adoption in October.

"Why so early?" Mrs. Dirksen asked. It was a special service, Joy explained. And for it she had ordered a bouquet of marigolds for the altar. Mrs. Dirksen liked that. It stirred memories. The charges filed by someone in the city to stop Fisher from collecting unemployment compensation have not been made

McKinzy indicated Tuesday, however, the charges include that Fisher made wrenches and diverted the revenues resulting from sale of the wrenches to his own use; that he condoned and permitted the growing of marijuana on city property and that he used ity equipment for his own gain. Fisher also testified that he had leased a welder for the public works department from James Reiter, a city businessman and former councilman and that it has not been returned to Reiter since he (Fisher) left the city employ. This is the equipment the city is alleging it owns and that Fisher had used. Fisher also testified that the city council made it impossible for him to properly supervise his department since they provided no transportation for him to be in the field watching over the men, no radios to keep in contact with employes and no secretary to keep up to date inventories and keep his office at the city garage open while he would be in the field. Mitchell testified that he, also, is not being provided with equipment to function as the sewer and water plant operator and no transportation to get around to the several city plants. Anderson said he knows of no wrong-doing by Fisher. He was transferred from Seminole Memorial Hospital Tuesday to county jail where he is being held in lieu of $100,000 bond on armed robbery and resisting arrest with violence charges.

Mills is one of two suspects charged in connection with the Dec. 26 robbery of a Sanford all-night service station. The other suspect, Harold Earl Moore, 22, also of Midway, had turned himself in at Sanford police headquarters for questioning in the case before Mills was apprehended.

Sgt. Coffee and McCormick went to Mills' residence with Sanford Police detective Sgt. William Dube. Officers said as they approached the house Mills fled into the swampy area nearby. IN BRIEF

The compromise, engineered by Rep. Hyatt Brown, D-Daytona Beach, apparently prevented a potentially vicious battle between Tucker and the dissidents, who want to curb the speaker's powers.

Tucker agreed to support changes to provide for vetoed bills to be referred to the committee that originated them before the House acts on them, appointment of subcommittee chairmen by committee chairmen instead of the speaker and removal of the speaker by twothirds vote of his party's

Arctic Oil Surplus Starts Pot Boiling

Alaska will soon be producing more oil than the Pacific Coast can use. The problem is to get that oil to Midwest markets, where it is needed. A solution sisn't clear, but a satisfactory outcome is possible if not blocked by provincialism, emotionalism and

One proposal is to ship the oil from Valdez to Long Beach in American tankers, then pipe it to Texas for refining and distribution. This is the plan proposed by Standard Oil of Ohio (Sohio).

It is being opposed by Tom Quinn, chairman of the California Air Resources Board, who argues that unloading the oil at Long Beach will have an adverse impact upon air quality in the Los Angeles air basin. He has suggested offshore unloading of the oil near San Luis Obispo.

But Sohio is prepared to guarantee that there will be no net increase in emission of pollutants, committing itself to close down other facilities in the Los Angeles area or reduce their emissions enough to compensate for new emissions from the proposed facilities.

And a U. S. Coast Guard admiral has called Quinn's smog warnings "pure bilge." Moreover, he said unloading the tankers inside Long Beach harbor would be safer and less likely to cause oil spills than offshore unloading

We would not rule out the Sohio plan. We would not rule it in either. There are possible alternatives calling for pipeline delivery to the Midwest from ports on Puget Sound or in British Columbia.

Another alternative would be an oil supply swap with Japan. Alaskan oil would be shipped to Japan— a short haul across the North Pacific and Persian Gulf oil now being shipped to Japan would be diverted to our Atlantic Coast and Gulf Coast ports via supertanker around the Cape of

This plan is opposed by U. S. maritime unions because it would involve the use of foreign flag tankers. They would prefer to have the Alaskan oil shipped through the Panama Canal in smaller tankers which, under the Jones Act, would have to be manned by American crews, sailing from one U. S. port to another.

All alternatives need to be considered on the merits. The national interest must be paramount over all special interests; neither the enyironmentalists nor the labor unions should dictate the decision.

And a decision cannot be delayed. When the North Slope wells start pumping, we had better be

Peace Notes

Despite the disunity apparent on both sides of the Arab-Israeli quest for a peace agreement, signals from Cairo and Jerusalem encourage optimism for new Geneva talks early next

Presidents Anwar Sadut of Egypt and Hafez Assad of Syria are talking to each other, seeking at last a coordinated approach by the Arab world. Their immediate problem is to persuade the Palestinian leaders to join a delegation to the conference. And Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, who resigned last week in a bid to regain political power through new elections, has hinted at terms under which the Palestinians could join the negotiations. Rabin has suggested that representatives of the Palestinian

Liberation Organization should participate as part of Jordan's delegation. Sadat and Assad are pressing for PLO representation on an Arab negotiating team. Both sides have called upon the United Nations to reconvene the Geneva talks. The effort to coax unity to both sides of the conference table is not enough in itself. The goal must be unity for peace, not for the alternative - resumption of a crippling war that could president has no "powers" to transfer.

any March, you'll know just what that means. At the corner of a hotel room keeping warm, wrapped in a bathrobe was Senator Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota. He was trying his darnest for at least the second time to achieve his life-time goal: the presidency. Only four years earlier he had won his party's nomination, but had lost in a whisker to one Richard Milhous Nixon.

But he never gave up. He knew what he had to offer. And here he was trying once again. The particular tactic he was using on this March night fit into his political picture; it was his strong suit:

One of his campaign aides had arranged for him to appear on these shows and answer listener questions. The aide had informed Humphrey that the talk-show host with whom he would be talking first had just become a daddy for the first time. "Heard the good news - congratulations," said Humphrey, as he picked up the phone and addressed the radio-man as if he had known him all his life. That's the way Humphrey did and does things.

He took off from there. If you have never seen Hubert Horatio Humphrey in pajamas and bathrobe, you've missed something. That attire adds several years to his person. Even then, in March 1972, you could sense, if not see, that this political giant, a man who had been way ahead of his time, a man who was (and probably still is) the best qualified man to be the President of the United States of America, was not

But he stayed in there fighting. He lost that year 1972, to George McGovern. And he backed off in talking directly to people. This time he was doing it 1976, still harboring the hope that at the last minute via Ma Bell as guest on a couple of Nebraska radio the old party faithful would come knocking on his door calling him to service. They didn't. And it hurt.

> But it didn't hurt enough for Hubert Horatio Humphrey to take his marbles and go home pouting. He knew he could still serve his political party, his country and the world. And he sought such a place. This time the majority leader position in the United States Senate, where he could share his considerable and unmatchable talents, energies and knowledge to help this nation achieve for its people what it was and is supposed to. That final battle now is over. Once again Hubert Horatio Humphrey has come in second. And it's not from want of trying harder.

Regardless of your political affiliation or inclination, reflecting on the past two decades it would be difficult to imagine any political figure on the national scene who had more to offer but could have contributed more if given the chance- (with one exception, perhaps: Adlai E. Stevenson) - than Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota. The man has been the butt of jokes, satire and parody. But his bubbly legacy is safe and firm from his first battle in the wilderness for civil rights back in the 1940s to 1977 where he surely will continue to speak out for what is right and good. Many-in this nation-again without regard to political inclination - can only hope that this wellmeaning, dynamic, hard-driving gentleman will remain well for many days to come, adding his specific kind of enthusiasm and optimism, cheer and good will to the business of the United States Senate and the United States of America.

P.O. Box 1551, Radio Cit Associated Press Food Editor Here it is, once again -French Potato Pie. The late Louis Diat, famous chef of New York's old Ritz, introduced the recipe to American cooks about 35 years ago.

Since then a number of versions, including several we've published, have appeared. The following recipe is the latest of these and, in our opinion, the

The pie makes a marvelous offering, served with ham or sausage, for brunch. It's fine, offered with a tossed green salad, for lunch. It's also an outstanding accompaniment to meat or poultry for dinner. If you try it, we think you'll be as grateful to Louis Diat as we are.

FRENCH POTATO PIE 3 pounds (8 medium) potatoes Medium-small onion, finely chopped (about 1-3rd cup) 2 tablespoons finely chopped

1/8 teaspoon pepper Butter Pastry, see below 3 tablespoons butter 1 egg yolk lightly beaten with 2 tablespoons water 1 cup (8-ounce container) heavy cream, at room temperature

21/2 teaspoons salt

Peel potatoes and slice thin there should be about 8 cups. Toss well with onion, parsley, salt and pepper. On a pastry cloth, roll out half baking dish or similar utensil. Fit pastry into dish and trim even with edge of dish. Roll out remaining pastry so it is 1 to 2 inches larger than the top of the dish; reserve. Drain any accumulated liquid from the potato mixture and discard liquid; turn potato mixture into pastry-lined dish; dot with butter. Place reserved pastry over potatoes and tuck it under the other pastry edge and inside the dish. Cut four or five 3-inch long crosswise slits at even intervals in the top pastry; brush with the egg wash. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until potatoes are me tender when tested with the sharp point of a knife and the pastry is golden-brown - 114 to 112 hours. Remove from oven. Pour a very little of the cream at one time into each slit - it will take 20 minutes or longer to use all the cream because each small amount must be absorbed before the next is added. After all the cream has been poured, let the pie stand about 10 minutes before serving. Some potatoes absorb the cream faster than others.

> Butter Pastry: Stir together 214 cups flour (fork-stirred before measuring) and I teaspoon salt. With a pastry blender, cut in 4 pound lightly salted butter until the size of peas. Sprinkle with 4 tablespoons water; add 1 tablespoon of the water at a time, sprinkling it over part of the mixture and mixing lightly with a fork until the flour is absorbed, and then pushing aside. Shape into a ball, cover with plastic wrap and chill before rolling out.

Makes 8 to 10 servings.

One county planner fears more commercial developments could follow construction of the Baird-Ray Datsun dealership on the east side of 17-92, 1,000 feet north of General Hutchison Parkway. The commission's Dec. 14 decision to rezone more than an acre of land to allow the dealership brought strong protests from Dr. Alexander Dickinson, chairman of the Florida Chapter of the National Sierra Club, and from county planner Jim Locating a dealership at the site is "an incentive" for other commercial development - including other car lots, Chanatry said. And, Dickinson wrote a three-page letter to the commission asking the board to reconsider the decision.

Williams said today the "board did reconsider and decided not to reconsider." Williams said he wasn't convinced that the dealership would harm the hammock's lush, forest growth. Also, the chairman said the county's comprehensive plan will include the hammock and provide special protection.

Williams agreed, however, that the Datsun dealership will be built before the comprehensive plan is adopted in October. Planners say construction of the dealership could cause the following:
