Iran expels Swiss diplomat

MANAMA, Bahrain — Iran Thursday ordered the expulsion of a Swiss diplomat, apparently on charges of spying, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported.

The Foreign Ministry told the Swiss consul in Tehran, Jacob Schranz, to leave within a week for "activities inconsistent with diplomatic norms," a phrase usually used to describe espionage, IRNA said.

The agency did not give a specific reason for the expulsion of the diplomat, but said Swiss Ambassador Heinrich Reiman was summoned to the ministry and told of the charges against Schranz.

Owls cause 52,000 to lose jobs

PORTLAND, Ore. — Timber industry officials predicted Wednesday that 52,000 Northwest residents will lose their jobs by summer due to a court order halting timber sales in areas of national forests inhabited by the spotted owl.

Jim Geisinger, president of the Northwest Forestry Association, said 21,000 people will lose their jobs immediately and the figure will grow as log supplies dwindle later in the year.

At a news briefing, Geisinger and other members of the Northwest Forest Resource Council said the economic impact of an injunction issued by U.S. District Judge William L. Dwyer in Seattle will have a devastating impact on the timber industry in Oregon and Washington.

"We're starting at the immediate loss of $470 million in annual wages," Geisinger said. "And if the injunction is extended through the summer, more than 52,000 full-time equivalent jobs and an estimated $1 billion in wages will be lost."

Redmen NIT champions

NEW YORK — St. John's victory in the National Invitation Tournament was as much a tribute to its rich past and promising future as it was a reward in the present.

"We suffered a tragedy with the loss of Katha," senior Matt Brust said of Katha Quinn, the school's late sports information director, after the Redmen defeated St. Louis 73-65 in the tournament final. "People call me the spirit but the real spirit was her."

Quinn died of liver cancer last month at age 35. Since then, the Redmen have rebounded from their worst finish ever in the Big East to take the NIT final for a record fifth time.

Jayson Williams scored 28 points, grabbed 18 rebounds and overpowered a smaller St. Louis lineup Wednesday night.

Deputy was ambushed

Officers: Slain cop had no opportunity to defend himself

SANFORD — Seminole County sheriff's deputy Hugh Thomas Jr. was killed in an ambush Tuesday as he walked away from the door of the home where his assailant's estranged wife was living, law enforcement authorities said today.

Sheriff's deputies said Thomas didn't have a chance to defend himself when he was shot in the head by Tony LeMasters who then used Thomas' revolver to kill himself.

The comments came as sheriff's deputies continued to sort out exactly what the circumstances of the shootings were.

Thomas was investigating a report of a man with a rifle hiding in the brush along a road near where Janice LeMaster was living with her parents, off Snow Hill Road in Geneva.

Capt. Roy Hughey said investigators have determined that Thomas was killed by a single shot to the head from LeMasters' rifle. He was slain as he walked from the front door to the side of a house.

Thomas had followed LeMasters to the house where, authorities believe, LeMasters intended to harm his wife who, the day before, had gotten a court order to keep him away from her.

Thomas had asked occupants of the house if they knew who an armed man in the area might be. They told him it could be LeMasters, who had just been released from the Seminole County jail on Friday, Hughey said. Thomas started around the house to search for LeMasters.

He was gunned down and killed instantly. Hughey said deputies are sure that LeMasters took Thomas' revolver and fatally wounded himself.

Brush fire

Seminole County and Sanford Fire Department firefighters responded to a brush fire at 18th St. and Southwest Road in Sanford Wednesday. According to assistant county fire chief Bill Kinley, this blaze scorched more than 20 acres. The cause of the blaze, which temporarily threatened several nearby houses, is undetermined. Local fire officials have been plagued by a number of brush fires in recent weeks, Kinley said.

SANFORD — More Seminole County people are using the recently-opened half-mile stretch of the Seminole County Expressway than expected, expressway officials said Wednesday.

During the past three months, 172,000 cars per month, on the average, have used the expressway between State Road 426 and the Orange County line, said Gerald Brinton, executive director of the Seminole County Expressway Authority.

Those cars have been generating about $42,000 a month in tolls, Brinton said.

He told authority members that in January, the first full month the expressway was open, ridership was 12 percent higher than expected. By March, 21 percent more cars than expected took the expressway, he said.

And preliminary figures from a traffic study indicate about 23,000 cars per day would use the expressway if it were open today from the Orange County line to U.S.

Local governments push for halt to mandates

From staff and wire reports

TALLAHASSEE — A joint effort by cities and counties to stop the Legislature from passing programs that local governments would have to pay for has gained support in the House and Senate, officials from Seminole County and elsewhere said Wednesday.

"Our main issue (this session) is to ask the Legislature to stop passing mandates without funding" that cities and counties must find financial support for, said Raul Martinez, mayor of Hialeah and president of the Florida League of Cities.

Standing next to 38 boxes containing petitions signed by more than 50,000 state residents, Martinez said if the Legislature fails to address the issue this session, the FLC and the Florida Counties Association (FCA) will seek to have placed on the 1990 ballot a constitutional amendment barring state mandates that do not provide the means for funding.

Martinez said 68 lawmakers already have agreed to sponsor a bill this session that would halt unfunded legislative mandates that affect cities and counties.

"We are willing to take the political heat" for tax increases that state-mandated programs may entail, said Sandra Glenn, a Seminole County commissioner who is president of the FCA.

But Glenn said the Legislature must give cities and counties the mechanism to raise taxes to pay for the mandates.

Since 1980, 288 mandates that utilize city and county funds have been passed by the Legislature with no mechanism to raise money, Martinez said.

He said in his own city, ad valorem taxes are at their legal maximum and raise $19 million. "But the Police Department budget is $22 million a year," Martinez said. "How do we solve that problem?"

A mandate passed by the Legislature last year that increased pension benefits for special-risk state and local employees is being challenged in court. The plan, Martinez said, will cost local governments $50 million annually and many counties and cities have no way to raise additional revenue.

Martinez said state and local governments must share the blame for the unchecked development that has occurred in some sections of Florida, but that the Legislature

Local officials told 'concurrency' will have impact on development

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The rules local governments must follow in coping with land development and growth are changing, Seminole County and local city officials were told Wednesday.

At a county-sponsored seminar, a Martin County commissioner, a planning consultant and a developer's attorney, told the local officials that the state's requirement for "concurrency" will change how and where local governments can allow development.

Concurrency requirements are expected to be in effect in Seminole County by 1991.

Concurrency is a concept established in the state's 1985 Growth Management Act that new public facilities and services that are made necessary by land development be available concurrently with the completion of the development.

The concurrency concept would provide, for example, that if a road in front of a new subdivision must be widened from two to four lanes to accommodate the amount of traffic the new development would generate, the widening should occur by the time the homes are occupied.

Cities and counties now often require developers to pay a fee or to pay for the cost of the extra facilities and services.

But the money provided often would be spent elsewhere in the county if there was a more pressing need. By the time the new development was completed and occupied, the local governments would have to scramble to find money to pay for the improvements.

To correct that, the legislature agreed the improvements should be in place at the time the need for them was there.

But last March, Thomas G. Pelham, secretary of the state Department of Community Affairs (DCA), wrote Sen. Gwen Margolis, D-North Miami Beach, that he believed there should be flexibility in concurrency.

Now, the DCA is holding hearings to establish rules for local governments to follow in implementing concurrency.

Pelham wrote that he believes the spirit of Maintenance-growth dilemma faces Sanford

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN

SANFORD — The city needs to plan services as they are provided now — and not plan from a wish list of equipment and facilities, the systems development fee committee decided this week.

The committee has been reviewing recommendations by consultants for the city based on two plans for projected growth. The plan supported by the committee is to establish fees to expand services at their present levels for serving added growth. The other is to base fees on the costs of equipment and facilities desired for serving a growing population.

A demonstration of the dilemma between maintaining and bettering standards is the need for a new police department communication system. City Planner Jay Marder said. Police Chief Steve Harriet reported that the system is now overloaded, serving a 31,000 population. But funding the cost of a new system with impact fees would mean placing the burden of serving the entire

FPL shuts down nuclear plant

Reactor Three of Turkey Point plant shut down after operators fail tests

United Press International

MIAMI — Reactor No. 3 at the Turkey Point nuclear plant was taken out of service Wednesday and Florida Power and Light planned mock tests on a simulator after 11 control room operators failed requalification tests.

Of the 11 who failed, only two were actual operators and the others were inactive, working in other parts of the plant. The exhibitions were scheduled to show the Nuclear Regulatory Commission that the problem with the operators was not as bad as it appeared, said FPL spokeswoman Traci Shaw.

"We want to demonstrate to the NRC that these inactive people basically skewed the number that failed ... to show that what was affecting the scores was the 'off-shift' people whose licenses are rusty because they are no longer in the control room," Shaw said.

The reactor was scheduled to be shut down for tests Saturday anyway, so FPL decided to place it in "hot standby," or idle status, early to show the regulatory commission the company was placing most of its attention on the simulator demonstrations, said Shaw, who said the shutdown would not affect service.

Once the demonstration, which will take up to seven days, is satisfactorily completed, No. 3 will be reactivated, Shaw said.

In addition, a determination will be made later on what should be done about employees who work in other parts of the plant, but attempt to maintain their control room operators licenses, she said.

There are 52 licensed operators at the plant who must take a four-part NRC-administered exam about every two years. Included are tests on individual performance on a simulator, a written examination, individual job performance assessment, and team participation on the simulator.

Florida Power will conduct exhibitions in only the team participation part because that is the only one where active and inactive operators work together, Shaw said.

Radio personality faces fraud charges

TAMPA — A former Clearwater radio personality already on federal probation for bilking people, has been ordered to appear before a U.S. magistrate April 6 to face new charges of defrauding customers in his gold and silver business.

Robert W. Snyder, 72, of Safety Harbor, was indicted by a federal grand jury Tuesday on 19 counts of mail and wire fraud.

He has been ordered to appear before U.S. Magistrate Paul Game at 10 a.m. April 6, postal inspector Bob McDarby said Wednesday.

The indictment accused Snyder of using the U.S. mail and religious radio broadcasts to induce people throughout the country to send him money for the purchase of precious metals and coins. It alleges he received more than $180,000 through this procedure between April 1985 and April 1988.

Snyder was sentenced in November 1983 to 10 years probation for bilking 50 customers in sales of precious metals and dehydrated foods and was ordered to pay $500,000 restitution. He was sentenced to another 10 years probation in September 1984, and again ordered to make restitution after he had failed to make any payments.

The new indictment accused Snyder of using some of the money to cover the restitution to victims of the earlier scam.

"In effect, he has been taking money from Peter to pay Paul," said postal inspector Cheryl Kinnebrew.

Some of the victims of the 1983 scam never received any of the precious metals or dehydrated foods, and others were unable to get Snyder to honor promises to buy back the commodities at a profit after a year.

Adelphia to buy cable television system

RIVIERA BEACH — Adelphia Communications Corp. of Pennsylvania agreed to buy the south Florida cable operations of Centel Corp. for about $310 million in a stock purchase agreement, the companies said Wednesday.

A spokesman for Centel in Chicago said the cable system has an estimated 125,000 subscribers in Palm Beach, Martin and St. Lucie counties. Operations are based in Riviera Beach.

The sale of the Florida property and one other cable system in Kentucky announced Wednesday completes Centel's planned divestment of six cable properties, said Centel spokesman Bill White.

Centel, the nation's 12th largest local telephone company, announced plans to sell the properties in November, as part of a strategy to refocus resources on its local and cellular telephone businesses, White said.

Last week, Centel announced a definitive agreement to sell its central Florida cable system to American Television and Communications Corp., which is controlled by Time Inc., for about $281 million, White said.

The system reaches about 97,000 subscribers in Lakeland and Citrus counties, White said.

Adelphia, which also operates a cable property in Dade County with about 80,000 subscribers, said it agreed to pay $309.6 million for the stock of the cable company and for a non-compete agreement with Centel.

Centel said Adelphia will acquire the stock of Centel Cable Television Co. after all other assets have been sold. The deal is expected to be completed by year end, Adelphia said.

Adelphia said it expects to finance the transaction as a joint venture, with equity from a third party, resulting in a stand-alone entity.

Centel also announced the sale Wednesday of its cable operations in Kentucky, to Simmons Communications of Stamford, Conn. The Kentucky operation reaches about 60,000 subscribers.

Dredging company agrees to settlement

JACKSONVILLE — An Illinois dredging company facing federal and state bid-rigging charges has agreed to pay $3.67 million rather than go to trial, state Attorney General Bob Butterworth said Wednesday.

"This payment will compensate Florida taxpayers significantly more than the estimated damages caused by the bid-rigging on the five charges," Butterworth said in announcing the out-of-court settlement.

Under the terms of the agreement, Great Lakes Dredge & Dock Co. of Oak Brook, Ill., agreed to make the payment for five bids it submitted involving Florida beach renovation projects.

Great Lakes and at least six other companies were named in federal and state bid-rigging indictments that spanned work done in Florida from 1979 through 1986.

The indictment alleged the companies shared information and fixed prices on bids for the beach dredging projects. Great Lakes admitted no illegal activity in the settlement.

Three other companies already have agreed to out-of-court settlements that included civil penalties, Butterworth said.

The settlement money will be distributed among state and local governmental entities, the attorney general said.

Crawford: Tax new cars to fight drugs

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Senate President Bob Crawford proposed Wednesday charging a $50 fee on some cars registered in Florida to pay for an additional 200 Highway Patrol officers to combat drug smuggling.

Crawford said the fee would raise $25 million a year and would allow the Highway Patrol to quadruple the amount of illegal drugs it takes off the streets.

"If we fail to make this commitment, Florida will continue to be the nation's candy store for illegal drugs, and another generation of Florida children will grow up with a cheap and plentiful supply," Crawford said.

Crawford's proposal, which he plans to introduce during the 1989 Legislature, assesses a $50 fee on each additional car registered in the state. Anyone moving to the state would pay the fee on each car he owns and anyone living in Florida would pay the $50 on any additional car he purchases.

Florida residents would not have to pay the fee on cars they already own, or when they trade a car in on a new vehicle.

Crawford said Highway Patrol drug confiscations have declined in recent years because the size of the force has not increased proportionately with the rapid population growth.

Lottery sales aimed toward $2 billion

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Bob Martinez said Wednesday Florida lottery ticket sales were expected to top the $2 billion mark by the end of the day, giving Florida one of the more successful lottery operations in the nation.

"The Florida Lottery has raised more than $1.57 billion for education each day in its 441 days of operation," Martinez said. The games began Jan. 12 last year and have generated more than $700 million for Florida public schools.

Budget estimates last year originally projected lottery revenues for education in the coming fiscal year about $325 million. By law, 35 percent of all lottery ticket sales go to public education.

Lottery Secretary Rebecca Paul said sales have exceeded the most optimistic expectations, but that she is even more pleased about the money generated for education.

Martinez said he recognized Lottery dollars could not "and were never meant to meet all the state's education needs, $700 million can help give Florida schools the winning edge."

Death of child with AIDS under investigation

United Press International

TAMPA — A 5-year-old boy infected with the AIDS virus was in stable condition when he was checked just a half hour before family members found him dead in his hospital bed Easter Sunday, a spokeswoman said Wednesday.

Daniel Doos, who had been at Tampa General Hospital since March 9, was found dead by his father and grandmother when they arrived with an Easter basket for the child.

Hospital officials released a statement Wednesday detailing the final hours of Daniel's life and said he appeared to be in no crisis.

"On the day Daniel died, our records show that his day began at 6 a.m. with some routine lab tests," the release said. "At 6:15 a.m., he drank some chocolate milk. At 6 a.m., Daniel was noted to be asleep and was easily aroused when touched. He was active and alert once awake. All vital signs were stable, respirations were even and unlabored."

"At 8:30 a.m. Daniel ate half of his breakfast. At 11 a.m. he was noted to be awake and alert. At 12:30 p.m. he ate half of his lunch. At 1 p.m., Daniel's vital signs were checked again and they were unchanged. His respirations were even and unlabored," it said.

"At 1:03 p.m. his father and paternal grandmother were observed going to the patient's room with an Easter basket. At 1:06 p.m. the father was in the hallway calling for assistance," Spokeswoman Emily Stehle said a nurse found the child had no pulse and was not breathing, and began cardiopulmonary resuscitation with no success.

The death was under investigation by the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services and police. Although a report will not be available until next week, the death appeared to be natural, police spokesman Wiley Howell said.

"We automatically investigate anytime a child dies," Howell said.

Eastern pilots, Texas Air await bid by Ueberroth

United Press International

MIAMI — Outgoing baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth may make a bid to buy crippled Eastern Airlines as early as Wednesday or Thursday, according to officials of the Air Line Pilots Association in Miami.

The leadership of the pilots union met in Miami Wednesday, awaiting word from the board of Eastern's parent company, Texas Air Corp. of Houston. Spokesmen for ALPA said the union was guardedly optimistic about the prospects for such a deal, but also was prepared for any surprises.

"We feel he (Texas Air Chairman Frank Lorenzo) desperately has to unload this airline," said Hank Weber, an ALPA spokesman.

But, he added, "We are sort of expecting him to do something unusual ... He might put it (the deal) on hold. I think one of his burning desires is to break the pilots union. If he could do that by delaying the sale ... I don't think he would hesitate."

The Texas Air board was to meet this week, and Ueberroth was expected to appear before the board to make his pitch, union spokesman J.B. Stokas said.

A spokesman for Texas Air in Houston declined to comment on the reports, or to say if the board was meeting.

Any bid would be subject to review by the U.S. bankruptcy court in New York, where Eastern filed for Chapter 11 protection from creditors March 9. Analysts and others speculated the Ueberroth bid may prompt other offers.

Union leaders declined to discuss details of the anticipated bid, which is reported to include a provision for employee ownership.

The New York Times reported Wednesday that Ueberroth is prepared to offer employees a 30 percent ownership stake in a resurrected Eastern as an incentive to the unions.

Concessions by Eastern employees, including those represented by the company's three major unions, are widely seen as the key to reviving the strike-bound airline, which lost $335.4 million in 1988.

Eastern canceled virtually all operations, laid off 8,500 workers and filed for bankruptcy after failing to force pilots to cross picket lines set up by striking mechanics and ground workers. The airline currently is operating about 10 percent of its pre-strike schedule.

The International Association of Machinists struck Eastern March 4 after negotiators failed to agree on a new contract for Eastern's 8,500 IAM employees.

All but a handful of Eastern's 3,000 pilots refused to cross IAM picket lines, and the strike quickly became a crusade against Frank Lorenzo, chairman of Texas Air.

The boy, Dennis Pryer, 14, of 1632 Clekk Circle, is being treated for serious burns on his thighs and calves. His mother said he was injured March 21, but didn't tell her his allegations for several days. The mother reported the allegations to deputies Tuesday and the case is under investigation.

Carol Stanley told deputies her son said he accidentally spilled gasoline on himself and the suspect intentionally set him afire while lighting a cigarette.

LONGWOOD — With one day remaining in the qualification period for a special election to fill the District 3 city commission seat, only one individual officially is in the race.

Jeffrey R. Morton, 41, of 872 Bucksaw Place, has qualified to run for the seat left vacant when commissioners Feb. 27 voted 3 to 1 to remove Carol Odom from office. They claimed Odom had violated the city charter because she interfered in city business by interviewing several employees over a grievance matter.

Morton qualified last Friday and opened a campaign account with his wife Jacquelyn as treasurer.

"I'm just an average family man in Longwood and I want to be a part of bringing a little bit of peace to the city. We have a great town, great community, but it seems we have a lot of bickering. I want to try to alleviate that," he said.

Morton was appointed to the code enforcement advisory board last year, but said he will have to resign if he is elected a commissioner.

He is the former owner of Red Baron Restaurant on Highway 434 in the Plaza del Sol shopping center. He sold the restaurant in December and plans to start a construction company. Morton and his wife have two sons, Jake, 13, who attends Greenwood Lakes Middle School, and Jonathan, 11, who goes to Longwood Elementary School.

Perry Faulkner, 44, 1046 First Place, Longwood, has also announced his intention to run for the seat, but has not formally qualified. He has, however, opened a campaign account with himself as the treasurer and said this morning he plans to qualify either today or tomorrow.

Faulkner ran for the same seat in November in a three-way race with Odom against Lynette Williams. See Longwood, Page 5A

Housing authority to discuss proposed budget

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The Sanford Housing Authority will meet tonight to review a revised operating budget developed following the board's rejection Monday of a budget proposal.

The board rejected the proposed $1 million operating budget for the city's 480 public housing units on the ground that salary adjustments were too high. By a 4 to 1 vote, the board agreed to freeze salaries during the next fiscal year. Chairman Alexander Wynn cast the opposing vote.

The board opposed a five percent cost-of-living increase for some employees in the budget proposed by acting Executive Director Linda Williams. The increases were based on cost-of-living estimates by the city, and increases based on years of service with the housing authority.

The revised budget to be reviewed tonight includes $50,000 for estimated costs of professional management of the authority. The board voted earlier this month to hire a professional management team to replace the executive director position.

Included in the amended budget proposal is a $10,400 allowance for the unemployment compensation of former director Elliott Smith, who was fired by the board last year. The board, who denied his request for reinstatement earlier this month, agreed to include the allowance in the event Smith files for compensation.

The authority operated on a $890,000 budget last year.

This week the authority received U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development approval for 23 Section 8 vouchers for private-sector housing. The vouchers, worth nearly $68,000, are issued by the authority to pay the difference between what private-sector landlords charge and what low-income tenants can afford to pay.

"It's going to get public housing out of the concentration of developments we have now and into the private sector," Williams said.

The authority has eight existing Section 8 vouchers worth about $6,300.

Former Rep. Bill Chappell, 67, dies

United Press International

BETHESDA, Md. (UPI) — Former Rep. Bill Chappell, D-Fla., who served in Congress for 20 years before he lost a re-election bid in the wake of allegations involving the Pentagon procurement scandal, died Thursday. He was 67.

Chappell died at the Warren Grant Magnuson Clinical Center in Bethesda where he had been undergoing treatment by the National Cancer Institute for bone cancer since Feb. 23, said David Lee Davis, a former aide.

Chappell had announced March 17 that he was improving and hoped to open a law practice in Jacksonville in June.

Chappell was defeated last November by political novice

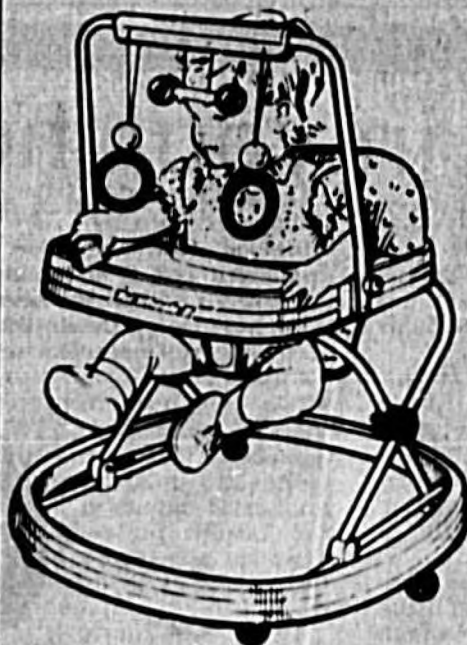

Crain Uanica. Chappell lost by 732 votes, but did not concede defeat until Dec. 16, more than five weeks later.

He sought to have nearly 11,000 votes from Flagler County disqualified but the state Supreme Court denied his appeal Nov. 30. Chappell challenged the vote on grounds the printed results arrived in the state Division of Elections after a statutory deadline had passed.

Chappell was a 20-year member of the House and was mentioned in connection with the Pentagon procurement scandal in 1986. He was chairman of the House subcommittee on Military Procurement and a staunch supporter of a strong defense.

Freedom to be Spuds MacKenzie

Spuds MacKenzie, the "party animal" who lives up Bud Light commercials, is hardly an upright citizen. Whiling away his rambling days and nights in a crowd of cheery beer-guzzlers, the "granddaddy of get-down" sends the message that booze and fun are synonymous. As Surgeon General C. Everett Koop's Workshop on Drunk Driving suggests in a new draft report, that kind of nonsense should prompt a firm societal retort. But it should not spur strict limits on alcohol advertising, which the report urges. Such a move would likely do more to stifle free speech than to quell alcohol abuse.

Koop's panel is right to focus on the $1.34 billion spent annually to promote beer, wine and spirits through the U.S. media. Many of the ads sell more than alcohol; they hint that drinking itself is a sure road to enjoyment, camaraderie and peer approval. The ads feature carefully chosen messengers: Beer commercials are often populated with sports celebrities and rock musicians idolized by adolescents; Spuds MacKenzie, whose mug appears on T-shirts and stuffed animals, is a hit even with grade-schoolers. And since the average couch potato sees thousands of beer commercials during childhood, the brewer's spokesmen and spokesdogs have ample opportunity to make their pitch.

To banish this evil, Koop and company urge barring "youth-oriented" celebrities in alcohol ads. That restriction might make some beer ads marginally less appealing to young viewers. But it also could run afoul of the First Amendment's free-speech guarantee. The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that government can limit advertising only if it serves an important public goal that cannot be fulfilled in less restrictive ways.

Proponents cannot prove that limits on alcohol ads would curb alcohol consumption at all — or would do so more effectively than counter-advertising, warning labels on bottles, stiff taxes on alcohol or stricter drunk-driving laws. Absent such proof, controlling the content of alcohol ads would be an illegitimate effort to hobble the sale of legal products. The logistical problems of monitoring ad content could be dizzying: Who would decide whether an actor hired for a beer ad is a "youth-oriented" celebrity? If an actor — or a terrier — appearing in commercials became popular with kids, would he be barred from future ads.

And once Spuds MacKenzie is expelled from beer ads for making drinking look glamorous, how long before other ads are axed for promoting socially unacceptable behavior? Many commercials encourage unhealthy habits; the ads and their makers deserve scorn. But their messages are best opposed with contradiction, not censorship. Combating the menace of alcohol abuse by regulating speech would be a menace in itself.

Use of labels pinpoints media bias

Scientific surveys have proved beyond serious dispute that the members of America's media elite are, on the average, personally far to the left of mainstream opinion. That, of course, has just made it all the more important for them to argue that they don't let their personal opinions affect their presentation of the news.

When evidence of liberal bias in news stories is offered, therefore, it is met with a whole array of excuses: rarity, coincidence, even sheer sloppiness — anything, in short, but bias.

But modern science is making it far harder to conceal evidence of liberal bias in the media than it used to be. Thanks to the wonders of computerization, it is now possible to make statistical comparisons that leave the liberal news-hunters gasping for explanations.

A couple of years ago I described how Nexis, the computerized news data retrieval system, had been employed to compare the use of tags by certain media to describe Sens. Jesse Helms and Ted Kennedy as "arch-conservative" and "ultra-liberal" (or equivalents), respectively, during 1984 and 1985. It turned out that The New York Times found it necessary to label Helms nine times as often as it labeled Kennedy. But even that paled before the achievement of Time magazine, which labeled Helms 13 times for every occasion on which it labeled Kennedy.

Now the people who conducted that study — a bright young bunch of analysts at the Media Research Center in Washington — have utilized Nexis again, to make some fresh comparisons. Once again, our leading liberal media have been caught with their pants hanging around their ankles.

Take Washington's two most influential policy think tanks: the Heritage Foundation, which for 15 years has done the heavy thinking for the capital's conservatives, and the Brookings Institution, which has long been the chief recourse of Washington's liberals. You don't have to take my word for it that Brookings is liberal — The New York Times, The Washington Post and Time magazine have all admitted it.

Accident? Sloppiness? Nonsense?

Yes, but how often have they admitted it? During 1987 and 1988, New York Times reporters referred to Heritage 128 times and applied an ideological tag on 74 of those occasions. In 271 mentions of Brookings, however, the Times labeled it "liberal" exactly once.

The Washington Post mentioned Brookings in 200 stories during those years, but labeled it only three times. Yet, in mentioning Heritage 129 times, the Post tagged it on 51 occasions.

And Time magazine? That old slant-champ labeled Brookings just once out of 39 references — and Heritage 13 out of 19 times.

Accident? Sloppiness? Nonsense. These disgraceful figures are irrefutable evidence that these publications are carefully tagging the Heritage Foundation as "conservative" in the hope that their readers will discount its statements as biased, while letting the Brookings Institution sail by untagged and thus as, by implication, authoritative.

As a final test, guess how often our media elite, in quoting them on judicial topics, referred to Ralph Nease of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights and Patrick McQuigan of the Free Congress Foundation as "liberal" and "conservative" respectively? Correct — less than 4 percent and nearly 75 percent of the time.

The court in your home

BOSTON — Someone from Geraldo Rivera is on the line. This is a sign, Carla Parrillo, you understand, does not ordinarily get a chance to chat with talk-show hosts. They do not usually reach out to mothers of threes from Johnston, R.I.

But this month, Carla's family life became a precedent for the divorced parents of Rhode Island and maybe the country. The state Supreme Court upheld a ruling that prohibited Carla from having a man sleep overnight when the kids were home. Now she is a shooting star in the courtroom-to-television trajectory of modern life.

As she takes the call on the other line, I try to imagine the way Geraldo would pitch the show to the audience, which angle he would take. Sex and the Single Mother. An old-fashioned judge and a new-fangled morality. The Good Mother, Part II, Green.

Before the Parrillo story became a national soap opera, it was just a nasty post-divorce wrangle like a thousand others. Maybe ten thousand. Carla and Justin Parrillo, twice-married with three kids, had finally called it quits in 1986.

When Carla started dating a man named Joseph, when he stayed overnight with her and the children, she says her ex-husband began harassing her. She accused him of making uncheduled visits to his old home, smashing the guy's car windows.

So Carla went into court to restrain this behavior. There, she found her own sexual behavior questioned. Her ex-husband raised the matter of the boyfriend. And the judge said, in essence, we can't have that sort of thing going on.

The judge talked to the children. He didn't find them troubled: "The court cannot fault the mother in any way for not taking good care of the children." Nevertheless, he declared, "The court must infer that this situation is not conducive to the welfare of the children." No guests allowed.

It is this ruling that still sticks in Carla's craw. It took over two years for the case to get up to the Rhode Island Supreme Court. Joseph, the boyfriend, is long gone. But when the court ruled, she was angry all over again.

"The court is trying to tell me what to do in my private life," said the 33-year-old mother whose children now range from 10 to 15. "They have no proof of adverse psychological effects on my children. My kids liked the guy. I discussed it with them before he slept over. The judge was imposing his values on my life."

Indeed, this is the first time a state Supreme Court has limited the behavior of a custodial parent. This was not a custody fight. The father was not trying to win the children; he was trying to control what went on in his children's home.

Implicit in the decision is the notion that (1) unmarried sex is misconduct and therefore intrinsically (2) bad for the children. In both of these judgments, the decision flies in the face of current legal and social trends.

Co-habitation, which was once illegal, is now commonplace. There are some 2.3 million unmarried couples in the United States. They do not regard themselves as living in sin.

There are surely many more millions of divorced parents who go through a time of trial marriage and error, integrating new partners into their children's lives. Even Justin Parrillo, who praised "the old-fashioned morals" of the court went through some variation on this theme before he remarried last fall.

Some make this transition better than others. Few ex-wives or ex-husbands like it. Typically, women try to control their ex-spouse's behavior by withholding children; men by withholding money.

Sometimes a parent's sexual behavior or indeed the arrival of a new partner in the house is profoundly disturbing to a child. Sometimes the partner is or becomes a real plus. But the notion that a judge can automatically "infer" that it is bad for the child is psychologically and legally off base.

As Sanford Katz, a law professor and former head of the American Bar Association's family-law committee, says: "Unless you can show a connection, show that the conduct of the parent has an effect on the child, and parent should have the freedom of association."

What happens next? Aside from a starring role in Talkshowland.

Carla and her lawyer, Patricia Hurst, are trying to decide whether to appeal to the United States Supreme Court. Carla would like to. Hurst worries that the current conservative court could turn a bad state decision into a bad federal case.

For now, Carla Parrillo has to decide whether some guy is worth risking a $500 fine and a year in jail. The rest of us can be grateful that Rhode Island is a very, very small state.

Carla went into court to restrain this behavior.

Bradley practicing presidential timbre

WASHINGTON — Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., is testing his talents as a presidential contender, but he doesn't want the press to watch.

Earlier this month, Bradley, a hot prospect for the 1992 presidential race, accepted an invitation to speak at Mount St. Mary's College in Emmitsburg, Md. It was a founder's day lecture, and the small college was hoping to draw some publicity with a big-name senator who is also a big-guy former pro basketball player. But if publicity was what the college wanted, it picked the wrong big guy.

Bradley insisted that no reporters be invited to the speech. He claimed the lights and cameras would just get in the way of a cozy heart-to-heart with the students.

But students and staffers at the school say the word quickly spread around the tiny campus that Bradley really wanted to try out a new speaking style in a remote locale without worrying about news hounds cultivating him.

The college has tried to cultivate good relations with the home-town press and warned Bradley's aides that the local reporters would be angry if the senator who-would-be president came and went in secret. Bradley then agreed to allow local reporters, but no cameras.

A senator who doesn't want his picture taken is a senator with no political ambition or a senator with something to hide. What Bradley is hiding, without much success, is a lack of patience with the press. He has been in front of cameras since his days playing college basketball at Princeton in the 1960s. One source told us Bradley decided that reporters emphasize trivia and miss the big issues.

We talked to New Jersey political insiders. They say Bradley has had to recover from a reputation as a ho-hum speaker. And he is sometimes wary of the press, even though he enjoys generally flattering coverage.

We asked Bradley's aide, Nick Donatello, about Bradley's skills at the podium. He said, "Has the senator been working to become a better speaker? I'd say yes, for over a decade. He had no way to go but up."

If Bradley wanted anonymity to polish his style at Mount Saint Mary's he was out of luck. Catholic seminarians at the school who oppose Bradley's pro-choice stance on abortion heard that he was coming, staged a demonstration and invited reporters from as far away as Baltimore.

The college let all the reporters in, but refused to let them bring their cameras. The only camera whirring during the lecture belonged to the college, recording the event for the archives. Bradley showed an interest in getting a copy of the film — probably a reflexive action from his days as a professional athlete.

Our associate Scott Slick attended the speech. Bradley's style was inspiring but his message was non-controversial.

Most politicians would pay for a room full of cameras. But Bradley is not like most politicians. He is a Rhodes Scholar who has had cameras trained on him for decades — as a standout player for Princeton, the U.S. Olympic team and the New York Knicks. Now, as a very popular senator, he can control that attention.

"He goes places and talks to people he wants to talk to," Donatello said. "If there are a lot of cameras between him and them, it makes that more difficult."

If Bradley is serious about running for president in 1992 — a decision he hasn't formally announced — he had better learn to love those lights and cameras.

Bradley insisted that no reporters be invited to the speech.

Stocks open higher

United Press International

NEW YORK — Prices opened slightly higher Thursday in moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues, extending gains won earlier this week.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 5.98 Wednesday, was up 1.47 to 2282.99 shortly after the market opened.

Advances led declines 322-231 among the 1,039 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Early turnover amounted to about 8,763,000 shares.

On the economic front, data on February factory orders is due for release later Thursday morning. Analysts said the report is expected to give further evidence of an economic slowdown by showing a 1.8 percent drop in orders.

Stock prices closed slightly higher in moderate trading Wednesday as futures-related buying helped the market to extend sharper gains won earlier in the week.

Wall Street observers said the stock market turned in a lackluster performance in extending its recent rally.

In economic news, the government said the index of leading economic indicators fell 0.3 percent in February, in line with expectations.

Dollar lower, gold up

United Press International

The dollar was lower Thursday in light trading on major foreign currency markets as traders stepped to the sidelines ahead of the weekend meeting of Goup of Seven finance ministers. Gold moved higher.

In early New York trading, the dollar was lower against key foreign currencies in light trading.

Traders in New York said trading activity should become a bit more cautious as finance ministers and central bankers gather in Washington this weekend for a meeting of the International Monetary Fund.

The Group of Seven nations — the United States, West

Germany, Japan, Britain, France, Italy and Canada — are expected to use the IMF meeting as an opportunity to discuss the dollar's recent strength.

The dollar slipped to slightly lower levels Wednesday against most foreign currencies, depressed by the second straight day of coordinated intervention by the Federal Reserve and other central banks.

This was the second concerted round and the third time this week that the Federal Reserve has been in the market selling dollars, analysts said.

In Tokyo, the dollar weakened against the Japanese yen, closing at 132.80 yen, down 0.48 from 133.25 yen Wednesday.

Texas company siezed

United Press International

WASHINGTON — The government seized 20 insolvent branches of MCorp, Texas's second-largest bank holding company, consolidating them into a new federally owned bank that will be put on the auction block.

The 20 failed banks reopened Wednesday morning as branches of The Deposit Insurance Bridge Bank, with full banking services available to all customers.

Five remaining member banks of MCorp and a trust company subsidiary, a trust, were not affected by the seizure and continue to be operated by the Dallas-based banking holding company.

said L. William Seidman, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Wednesday's action came after the financially ailing MCorp faced two days of runs on deposits.

The newly reduced MCorp has $3 billion in assets, while the 20 failed banks had assets of $15.4 billion and about $11.6 billion in deposits.

Growth

the growth management law would be met if one of four conditions are followed at the time a development is approved: the improvements are in place before the development is built or completed, the improvements are under construction, the improvements are under contract, or the improvements have been funded.

Randy Young, a government consultant with Henderson, Young and Co., likened the fourth condition to the "Emperor's new clothes" because budgeted projects such as a road or a sewer plant may take two years or more to complete.

"Are you going to tell somebody they can build a house but they can't flush their toilet for two years," Young said.

All of the panelists agreed Wednesday that concurrency could lead to good planning and a closer working relationship between government officials and developers.

"At worst, the lack of concurrency creates a large community where nobody wants to live," said Maggie Hurchalla, a Martin County commissioner. "It allows you to have what you need when you need it."

Tom Ross, an Orlando attorney who has developed properties and represented developers, said the development community is divided on the concurrency issue. Ross said some of his developer friends and clients like concurrency, others do not.

Ross said concurrency demands a closer relationship between governments and developers so each can understand and plan for the needs of the other.

"Public and private sectors must throw away their adversarial relationship," Ross said. "They must work together and understand each other's point of view."

Ross and Young said that in most cases, new concurrency rules cannot force developers who have already approved a project to meet the demands of road improvements and other requirements. But if the development is changed substantially, the changed portion of the project will be forced to meet concurrency requirements to the extent of public services they affect.

Ross and Young also recommended including a time limit, authorized by the Growth Management Act, that if no effort is taken toward developing the land after a development has been approved, the county or city can automatically rezone it to its original land use.

Seminole County commissioner Fred Streetman opposed the concept of administrative "downzoning," saying it takes rights away from the landowner. But Hurchalla, Ross and Young each told Streetman that without such a requirement, the county would have no way of planning for road and other improvements based on an approved project that may never be built.

Dilemma

solely on new development, Marder said.

The committee decided to charge fees for non-residential development based on square footage, rather than the demand placed on police by a particular kind of development. At a meeting last month, committee member Bob McKee suggested implementing a scale of non-residential fees, based on the concept that developments like convenience stores, bars and banks place greater demand on police than churches and warehouses.

The committee agreed to base non-residential police fees on square footage because implementing a demand-based fee scale would be impractical.

The fee scale recommended in the consultants report to the city is $25.87 per residential dwelling unit and 7.9 cents per square foot of non-residential development. At the Feb. 21 meeting, Marder presented a revised worksheet of fees after the committee complained that the fees were too low.

Marder's recommendations were $40.26 per dwelling unit and 22 cents per square foot of non-residential development. His recommendations were based on Harriett's projections that growth between 1988 and 2005 will cost the police department more than $1.2 million and the city's projections that Sanford will grow by more than 4.3 million square feet of commercial and industrial development by 2005.

At a special meeting tentatively scheduled for April 4, the committee is expected to make a recommendation to the city commission for the first police protection impact fee to be implemented in Sanford, Marder said. After a police protection impact fee is recommended, the committee will begin developing fee scales for fire protection and recreation fees.

Impact fees are placed on developers of new construction to help pay for the costs of growth.

must provide funding for portions of the 1985 Growth Management Act that went into effect this year.

One of the more unpopular provisions of the act requires local governments to have infrastructure funding for roads and utilities in place before development can occur.

That cannot happen, Martinez said, unless local governments are given the ability to generate more revenue.

Martinez and Glenn said they were not opposed to growth management or implementing legislative mandates, but wanted lawmakers to provide funding sources if the programs continue to be approved.

"For us to be pointing fingers ... is not going to solve the problem today," Martinez said. "We have to have the tools" to make local governments work.

Dennis Faulkner, general manager of Orlando Radial Tire Inc., Orlando, served one term between 1985-1986 and was defeated by Dennis.

Faulkner said, "The main issue is to make sure whoever the city administrator is going to be will run the city and the commission keeps out of it." He said he wants to connect more commercial people onto the sewer system and is concerned about repaving and reconstruction of roads.

"The city is a good city or I wouldn't be wasting the time and energy to go through it (running for office)," he said.

Faulkner is a 18-year resident of Seminole County and has lived for more than eight years in Longwood. He is married to Linda and has two children, Sherrie, 25, and Robert, 22.

In a related development, Odom's attorney, Michael A. Kramer, said he is preparing to file a law suit against the city for ousting Odom. "It's in the works," he said.

Kramer said that Odom was denied the right to an attorney the night she was ousted and was never given the opportunity for a public hearing. He wants the court to overturn the commission's decision.

He said legally Odom could run again in the special election to regain her seat.

"She's a qualified voter and can be a candidate if she chose to be. She has not chosen to be," Kramer said.

The qualification period ends at 5 p.m. tomorrow. Candidates must qualify with the city clerk at Longwood City Hall, 175 W. Warren Ave.

Voter registration books will close Friday, April 7. Residents may register at Longwood City Hall or at any other Seminole County voter registration office.

The special election will be from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Tuesday, May 9, at city hall.

Hughey said investigators have not determined who fired the additional shots or what weapon they might have been fired from.

Deputies believe four shots were fired. There were three empty bullet casings in Thomas' revolver, but Hughey said, it is not known if Thomas' gun was used to fire the additional shots.

Investigators said they have no way of confirming if the rifle was fired more than once, until or unless additional evidence is found.

The probe continues. Occupants of the house have been questioned, but Hughey said investigators have not determined if there was any type of confrontation between Thomas and LeMasters or anyone else at the scene before the shootings.

The witness who said he heard four shots also said he thought he heard someone say "halt," and someone else curse before the first shot was fired.

Meanwhile, the Hugh Thomas Jr. Fund has been established at Barnett Bank of Sanford to benefit a law enforcement cause. Thomas' family asks that donations to the fund be made in lieu of gifts of flowers.

Services for Thomas are scheduled for 1 p.m. Friday at the Catholic Church of the Nativity on County Road 427, Lake Mary, with burial at Oaklawn Park Cemetery on County Road 46-A. Visitation is all day today until 9 p.m. at Gramkow Funeral Home on Airport Boulevard in Sanford.

Thomas' sheriff's identification number, "Delta 15" will be retired and never again assigned to a Seminole County sheriff's deputy. His funeral is to include a procession of police cars from the sheriff's department to the church and then to the cemetery, where he will be honored with a 21-gun salute. Capt. Roy Hughey said. Thousands of police officers are expected to attend the services.

Reagan resists North subpoena

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Former President Reagan is resisting a subpoena demanding his testimony at the felony trial of Oliver North, saying the ex-White House aide has not demonstrated a clear need for Reagan's appearance.

U.S. District Judge Orhard Gesell, in an effort to resolve the question of whether Reagan can be compelled to testify, said Wednesday he wants to have a hearing either Thursday or Friday on the issue.

Even though the judge has warned that he has the "naked power" to force the former president to testify, Gesell has said he will take into consideration Reagan's feelings on the matter.

The matter of the Reagan subpoena has arisen as the prosecution at the Iran-Contra trial prepared to rest its case against North, the former staff member of the National Security Council.

Prosecutors were expected to end their case Wednesday but lengthy questioning of former Justice Department official Charles Cooper forced them to delay their conclusion until Thursday.

The government's case will end after 6 1/2 weeks of testimony and 200 exhibits. As the trial recessed Wednesday, Gesell told the defense team to be prepared to move with its case Monday morning.

Defense lawyer Brendan Sullivan said that once some legal questions were resolved — including the Reagan subpoena — he would take only three to nine days of court time.

A week ago, Sullivan said he would need four to eight weeks for his case.

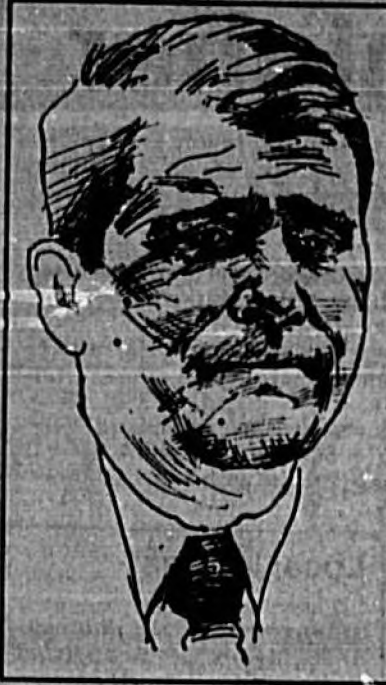

North, 45, a retired Marine lieutenant colonel, is defending himself against 12 felony charges, including lying to Congress, tax fraud, accepting an illegal gift and destroying official documents. If convicted on all charges, he faces a maximum 80 years in prison and $3 million in fines.

Wednesday, the defense gave Gesell a confidential memo outlining the testimony that Reagan could provide in the case.

But Theodore Olson, a lawyer for Reagan, said in papers filed Wednesday the defense has not demonstrated a clear need for Reagan's testimony, and the former president should not be compelled to appear as a witness.

"Unless and until (North) comes forward and with specificity identifies the specific evidence sought by the independent prosecutors in the case could stipulate to certain facts, another witness might provide the same information, or Reagan could respond to written questions without testifying in person."

In December, North subpoenaed Reagan and President Bush in an effort to show that his actions in the foreign policy scandal were authorized at the highest level of the Reagan administration.

Oliver North

Olson's argument, saying that North's statements to date offer no showing of a need for Reagan's testimony.

It said that even if North's lawyers succeeded in showing such relevance in a sealed memo to the judge, then "any live testimony by a former president is fraught with peril to the national security and to international relations."

"Any hurried statement and any answer to a surprise question pose a risk to the nation," administration lawyers wrote.

In the event the defense demonstrates relevance, they said, the government should have a chance to respond. If the judge then finds Reagan's testimony to be pertinent, all available avenues should be explored for avoiding a personal appearance.

For example, they said, the independent prosecutors in the case could stipulate to certain facts, another witness might provide the same information, or Reagan could respond to written questions without testifying in person.

Spilled Alaskan oil defies cleanup

United Press International

VALDEZ, Alaska — Oil from a grounded oil tanker continued to run wild Thursday over 575 square miles of Prince William Sound, surrounding islands, killing and trapping animals and triggering an admission by Exxon that it will never be able to clean up the biggest spill in U.S. history.

Exxon USA President Bill Stevens flew to Alaska Wednesday to express his regrets and pledge the support of the world's largest oil company to throw all available resources into battling the spill.

"This should never have happened," Stevens said, and he called Exxon's response good considering the magnitude of the 11 million-gallon spill.

Stevens said he briefed three members of the Bush administration, who returned to Washington to report to the president today, and said of the meeting, "I did not feel it necessary to defend anything."

But Stevens said the massive Alaska spill would prompt the oil giant to re-examine its spill response plans worldwide.

"When you spill 240,000 barrels, you don't ever expect to pick it up," said Exxon's Alaska coordinator, Don Cornetti.

Oil covered an area measuring roughly 10 miles by 60 miles, said Jerry Galt of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. The state Department of Environmental Conservation said oil covered 878 square miles.

Oil surrounded Smith Island, home to 135 sea lions, said biologist Lisa Rotterman. About 100 sea otters spotted in oily areas had disappeared, she said, giving rise to fears that they died. Several dead seals were also spotted in the slick, and killer whales were seen swimming through oil.

Exxon's earlier statements that beach cleanup was under way were false, and Cornetti told reporters, "I'm sorry if I misled you."

Exxon Shipping Co. President Frank Jarosel said crews were laying protective booms around four critical areas, including fish hatcheries, and said beach cleanup would begin soon.

Jarosel said Exxon's team included 160 of its own experts, 350 to 400 hired cleanup workers, 14 planes shuttling crews and supplies; a flotilla of 26 fishing vessels, eight tugs, two barges and about a dozen skimmers.

But one of the many consultants, John Hanby, former environmental health officer at NASA, scoffed at the Exxon response.

"They should have a fleet of 500 boats out there," he said. "The best thing they could do is get 10,000 people out there and scoop it up. They got enough unemployed people up here in Alaska to do it."

Exxon announced it was no longer relying on burning the oil and dropping chemical dispersants on it as primary weapons because the wind-whipped oil has turned into a frothy mass that will not respond to those methods.

Cornetti admitted that oil was still seeping from the 987-foot tanker Exxon Valdez, but he said, "It's very limited."

The Exxon Valdez ran aground Friday with a cargo of 53 million gallons. About half of the remaining 42 million gallons has been pumped into another Exxon tanker, which was to leave Thursday and make room for a third ship to take on the rest.

Eight empty tankers were still waiting to get into Valdez, but the tanker traffic jam forced a continued 60-percent slowdown in Alaska oil production from 2 million barrels daily to 800,000 because of limited storage capacity at the Valdez terminal.

Environmentalists gathered in Valdez attacked Exxon and urged the Bush administration to stop offshore drilling, prevent oil development in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge — currently being debated in Congress — and some even urged the shutdown of the 800-mile trans-Alaska pipeline and Valdez oil terminal until the spill was cleaned up.

Nan Eagleston, president of the Prince William Sound Conservation Alliance urged Bush to make all future oil development in Alaska — the nation's biggest oil producing state — be contingent on cleaning up the massive oil spill.

But Stevens said that since Alaska oil began flowing, some 8,700 tankers have moved 6.6 billion barrels of oil and spilled only 5,000 barrels until now.

"That puts the industry's record in the proper context," Stevens said, but he conceded that the spill likely would be a setback for proponents of oil development in the arctic refuge. Any oil taken from the site near Prudhoe would have to travel down the pipeline to Valdez.

Stevens joined other Exxon officials in indicating the grounding appears to be the result of human error.

Junk bond king faces indictment

United Press International

NEW YORK — Prosecutors said it took the most ambitious federal probe of Wall Street ever undertaken and the help of convicted insider-trader Ivan Boesky to bring about the indictment of Michael Milken, head of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.'s "junk bond" department.

Milken was indicted Wednesday on federal charges of fraud and racketeering in insider-trading schemes that allegedly yielded $1.85 billion. Also indicted were Milken's brother, Lowell, a senior vice president of Drexel, and Bruce Newberg, a former member of the firm's junk bond department.

U.S. Attorney Benito Romano said the probe provided a rare look at the dark side of Wall Street where the rich get richer at the expense of small investors.

"This three-year investigation has uncovered substantial evidence in a very significant segment of the financial community," Romano said. "The investing public has every right to be cynical about the markets not operating on a level playing field."

But Milken, who along with his brother was granted a leave of absence by Drexel after the indictments, said he would plead innocent to the charges.

"In America, an indictment marks the beginning of the legal process, not the end," Milken said in a statement. "After 10 years of leaks and distortions, am now eager to present all the facts in an open and unbiased forum. I am confident that in the end I will be vindicated."

The 98-count indictment handed up in U.S. District Court in Manhattan was believed to be the largest case brought in the two years that Wall Street has been rocked by insider trading scandals.

Milken, 42, whose net worth was estimated by Forbes magazine to be about $600 million, would face a prison term that would "theoretically be in excess of 500 years" if convicted on all counts, Romano said.

Under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, the defendants face forfeiture of the $1.85 billion in proceeds of their "insider schemes," plus fines of double that amount, or $3.7 billion, prosecutors said.

All three men are charged with one count of racketeering, one count of conspiracy to violate the RICO statute and counts of mail, wire and securities fraud and making false statements. In addition, Milken is charged with one count of aiding and assisting in the preparation of a false income tax return.

The indictment alleges the racketeering enterprise was carried out through unlawful securities trading by Drexel, partnerships controlled by the enterprise and third party conspirators. The co-conspirators include convicted insider-trader Boesky and individuals with ownership interests in Princeton-Newport Partners, an investment partnership.

Revenue Service from 1978 to 1987 by forming 14 sham corporations in the Bahamas, Panama and the United States.

The corporations allegedly loaned more than $2.5 million and invested another $2.5 million in a hotel, oil tanker, private airplanes, real estate and luxury automobiles.

Caruana, Brookline, Mass., lawyer Edmund Hurley, 54; Los Angeles fugitive David Gortwitz, 59; lawyer Charles Burnett, 47, of Pompano, Fla.; and Bahamian lawyer Rubie Nottage, Kendal's wife, were charged with 103 violations of the federal Travel Act. The act prohibits interstate and foreign travel to distribute illegal drug profits.

All seven defendants were charged with conspiring to defraud the IRS by laundering Caruana's drug proceeds.

The indictment is the second this month charging a prominent Bahamian in the drug trade. A federal grand jury in Jacksonville, Fla., March 22 indicted Everett Bannister, a longtime friend of Bahamian Prime Minister Lynden Pindling, along with several leaders of the cooperating country in the fight against drug trafficking.

A federal indictment, returned last Thursday and unsealed Wednesday, said Caruana, a former Peabody, Mass., resident who is now a fugitive, obtained at least $7.6 million from marijuana sales from 1978 to 1981.

The Bahamian government said the allegations against the smugglers in return for his influence in keeping authorities from interfering with their operations.

Bahamas complain about MP indictment

United Press International

BOSTON — The Bahamas accused the United States of meddling in its internal affairs by indicting a Bahamian Cabinet minister and former Prime Minister by laundering charges by their own government.

The Bahamian MP, Kendal Nottage, and attorney Joseph Ballro, whose clients have included reputed leaders of the Boston Mafia, were among seven defendants accused Wednesday of laundering more than $5 million in illegal drug profits for reputed drug kingpin Salvatore Michael Caruana.

The Bahamian government, in a statement, criticized the indictment and said it "has noted the attempt to extend United States legal jurisdiction beyond its shores into the sovereign territory of an independent nation."

The government also noted the timing of the indictment "one month before the Congress is to consider the certification of the Bahamas as a cooperating country in the fight against drug trafficking."

Consultant to plead guilty

LOS ANGELES — Fred H. Lackner, the Woodland Hills defense consultant facing federal fraud and bribery charges in the Pentagon corruption investigation, will plead guilty to those charges. It was reported today.

In an agreement almost identical to that struck last week between prosecutors and former Navy procurement officer Stuart E. Berlin, Lackner will plead guilty in U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Va., on Friday to charges of wire fraud, conspiracy and bribery of a public official. The Los Angeles Times reported.

Lackner, 54, will admit his role in a scheme to pay Berlin about $6,000 for inside information on two Navy electronics contracts, the newspaper said, citing unnamed sources.

Lackner and an associate, defense consultant William L. Parkin, sold the data to Teledyne Industries Inc. of Newbury Park, Calif., and Haseltine Corp. of Long Island, N.Y., to help the firms win lucrative Navy business.

With his plea, Lackner would become the 12th person to admit to charges arising from the Ill Wind Pentagon corruption inquiry. Teledyne and Haseltine also have pleaded guilty to charges.

Commission: Raise federal pay

WASHINGTON — A commission examining how to rebuild the nation's public service has recommended that salaries for top administration officials, judges and members of Congress be raised 25 percent and the number of presidential appointments be cut by a third.

The National Commission on the Public Service, headed by former Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker, contended that those moves, along with several others, would help to make the federal bureaucracy more effective by attracting better people and having them be more responsive to the president.

The panel's report Wednesday recognized that a pay increase is a sensitive subject, reflected in the fact that Congress agonized earlier this year and, after a huge public outcry, finally rejected a 31 percent pay increase for itself, judges and top government officials.

Most members of Congress now are paid $89,500. Cabinet-level officials are paid $69,500 and directors of various bureaus, deputy secretaries, assistant secretaries and other top officials are paid from $75,500 to $89,500.

The commission said any congressional raise should be accompanied by a ban on speaking fees, so-called honoraria, and added that if, because of the political climate, Congress is unable to act on its own salaries, the president should make separate recommendations for judges and top-level executive and Congress should act promptly on these recommendations.

After an immediate 25 percent raise, the commission said there should be another increase before 1991.

Slash the number of presidential appointments from 3,000 to 2,000 would, the commission suggested, make the bureaucracy more responsive to the president by cutting down the layers of government.

Doctors critical of teen drug testing

WASHINGTON — The American Academy of Pediatrics has announced its opposition to involuntary drug testing of high school athletes and frowned on secret efforts by parents to force older teenagers for narcotic abuse.

In a policy statement, the national organization of 57,000 pediatricians declared it is unethical to subject "older, competent adolescents" to drug tests without their consent. Dr. Kenneth Schonberg, who led one of the panels that wrote the policy, said that generally testing those under 15 or older.

The academy did not oppose involuntary drug testing for teenagers younger than 15, noting they generally are treated as children by their doctors and their consent is not required for other medical procedures.

The academy disapproved of required involuntary drug tests, however, for all teenagers who want to participate in school-sponsored sports. Schonberg, a pediatrician at Montefiore Medical Center in New York City, said he had heard of at least one Indiana school district that requires such testing.

Crack dealers conviction bring cheers

NEW YORK — Two juries needed less than two days to convict three crack dealers of a racketeering murder, sparking tumultuous applause and cheers that seemed to crystallize national public frustration with drug violence.

Todd Scott, 20, Scott Cobb, 25, and Philip Copeland, 22, face up to 35 years to life in prison for their convictions Wednesday for second-degree murder and possession of an illegal weapon. Prosecutors had argued that a drug dealer ordered the three men, and a fourth defendant who still faces trial, to assassinate a police officer to express his anger at being imprisoned.

Edward Byrne, a 22-year-old rookie officer, was gunned down at point-blank range Feb. 26, 1988, as he sat alone in his patrol car, guarding the home of a Guyanese immigrant who goes by the single name Arjune.

Arjune had complained to police about the burgeoning crack trade in his neighborhood and was being protected as a witness in a drug case.

Jurors needed less than two days to return guilty verdicts on all counts against the three young men charged with the pre-dawn slaying of Byrne.

Two juries heard the case simultaneously — one for Cobb and another for Copeland and Scott. The uncommon arrangement was made to assure that damning statements two defendants made about each other would be admitted as evidence.

WORLD BRIEFS

Gorbachev to talk to Castro

HAVANA, Cuba — Soviet Ambassador Yuri Petrov ruled out Wednesday a cut in his country's aid to Cuba but said Mikhail Gorbachev will hold frank discussions with President Fidel Castro during his trip to the Caribbean nation.

Gorbachev was scheduled to arrive in Havana on Sunday for his first visit to Moscow's communist ally since the Soviet leader assumed power four years ago.

Petrov said Gorbachev's talks with Castro will cover a broad range of issues, especially recent economic development in the two countries, but that they would not include discussion of a possible cut in the estimated $5 billion in annual aid provided Cuba by the Soviet Union.

"Any reduction of aid is out of the question," Petrov said at a news conference. "The more efficient our national economy and the richer our country, the greater amount of aid we can give — not only to Cuba, but to other developing countries as well."

Foreign Ministry spokesman Rolando Lopez del Amo said Cubans will extend Gorbachev and his wife, Raisa, a warm welcome.

But the trip has received little attention in the state-run news media, and Havana displayed no visible signs of preparations four days before Gorbachev's scheduled arrival.

Deputy killed in Turkish Parliament

ANKARA, Turkey — A Turkish legislator trying to stop a quarrel between two armed colleagues was fatally shot in the lobby of the National Assembly, political sources said.

Abdurrazzak Ceylan, 40, a member of the opposition True Path Party, was trying to stop an argument Wednesday between Zekik Celliker, an independent deputy, and ruling Motherland Party member Idris Arikah, the sources said.

Ceylan was hospitalized but died about 8 p.m., some two hours after the incident.

He had raised his hand to wave away a gun one deputy pulled during the quarrel and was shot when the gun went off, witnesses said.

Police arrested both Celliker and Arikah. The political sources said both men were armed and it was not clear who shot Ceylan.

All three men were from southeastern Sirt province, and the quarrel arose from a dispute that began during campaigning for last Sunday's municipal elections, the sources said.

The incident came hours after the leader of Turkey's main opposition party, which humbled Prime Minister Turgut Ozal's Motherland Party in the municipal polls, called for general elections to be held before October, or "within one year."

Oxford dictionary revised

LONDON — The first comprehensive revision of the Oxford English Dictionary — a 20-volume edition weighing nearly 140 pounds — contains such medical and business terms as "Amex" and the AIDS virus "HIV."

"For me this is like being present at the second revelation of the Bible," former Librarian of Congress Daniel Boorstin said at the unveiling of the new edition Wednesday at a London hotel.

Brought right up to date with "yupification," the last word added in the 21,728-page new edition, the full set costs $2,500 and takes up 44 inches of shelf space.

Some of the words are like small novels themselves. The longest entry, says co-editor John Simpson, is "pneumonoultramicroscopicsilicovolcanocitosi," a miner's lung ailment.

United Press International reports

Iranian speaker new heir apparent

United Press International

ATHENS, Greece — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's dismissal of his appointed successor as Iran's spiritual leader could lead to greater authority for the speaker of parliament, who combines moderation in foreign policy with a radical stance at home.

Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montazeri's resignation Tuesday ended one chapter in a 4-year-old interecclial struggle between leading clerics to succeed the volatile Khomeini, 88. But it opens the way for a new round of harsh clerical-political warfare in the struggle to lead Iran after the ailing ayatollah dies.

For the speaker of parliament,

All Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani, a serious rival for power, has been removed. There appears to be no one of his stature to take over the country after Khomeini dies — if not as spiritual leader, at least in a strengthened presidency, an office Rafsanjani is expected to run for this summer.

Rafsanjani has often been regarded by foreign analysts as the moderate or pragmatist in the perplexing, wildly gyrating lineup of potential post-Khomeini leaders of Iran. That view has considerable validity when seen through the prism of foreign policy, but he is ever the radical on the homefront.

He was at the forefront of abortive Iranian efforts three years ago to improve relations with the United States, which led to the Iran-Contra crisis for the Reagan administration. He also led Iran's "opening to West" after last year's cease-fire in the 8-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

Although Khomeini has now apparently turned away from that policy, there is little evidence that Rafsanjani, who is also deputy commander-in-chief of the armed forces, has lost the confidence of the ayatollah.

A report that Khomeini has tried to contest Rafsanjani's military authority through the appointment of a personal representative to the Revolutionary Guard troops is mainly linked to the anti-government Mujahideen guerrillas in Baghdad. They have their own ax to grind against the speaker, since he reportedly backed harsh steps against the remnants of the Mujahideen in Iran.

Even though anything seems possible in the topsy-turvy world of Iran's Islamic politics, one sign of Rafsanjani's continued influence is that he is still friendly with Khomeini's son, Ahmad, a shadowy power behind the scenes.

Some of that appeal is undoubtedly linked to Rafsanjani's radicalism at home. He still controls powerful factions among the Revolutionary Guards charged with "spreading the revolution" and does not stop at using executions as a political weapon.

Rafsanjani apparently proved more astute than Montazeri in the infighting of the last couple months.

Desperately needing to clip Montazeri's wings before Khomeini dies, Rafsanjani reportedly maneuvered for the key Council of Experts to propose that a "Council of Leadership," consisting of three or five high-ranking clerics, should succeed Khomeini.

In February, Montazeri infuriated Khomeini as Iran celebrated the 10th anniversary of the revolution by criticizing the Islamic Republic's performance. He said the government had not lived up to its objectives and that the war with Iraq was a waste.

Khomeini replied with his own message broadcast on Tehran radio, refuting Montazeri point by point.

Slain Moslem leader criticized Khomeini

United Press International

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Police said the slain spiritual leader of Moslems in Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg had received threats following his criticism last month of Iran's death decree on British author Salman Rushdie.

Abdullah Ahdal, 35, director of the Islamic Cultural Center in Brussels, and librarian Salem El Behr, 48, were found shot to death Wednesday in the city's main mosque.

Belgian police said visitors found the bodies in the Moslem leader's ground floor office.

State-run Belgian television Wednesday evening showed a film of a woman waving a pistol at the mosque. She was taken away by police and later identified as the slain leader's widow. She apparently was not involved in the killings.

Police refused to speculate whether the killings were linked with a death decree against Rushdie, the British author of "The Satanic Verses," declining comment pending further investigation.

Iranian spiritual leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini accused Rushdie of blasphemy in the novel and placed a bounty on his head. Rushdie said he took the threat "very seriously" and has gone into hiding.

A police spokesman said Ahdal, who had taken a moderate stand on the book, received threats this week in connection with the novel. He would not elaborate.

OPEC debates raising oil production ceiling

United Press International

VIENNA — Key OPEC oil ministers met amid signs some members, fearing loss of market share, may push to ease the production ceiling the 13-nation cartel agreed on in November to raise world prices.

The closed-door meeting adjourned Wednesday after 4 1/2 hours, with OPEC Secretary-General Subroto saying, "We will try and finish our work tomorrow."

Subroto said there would be no statement after Thursday's expected finish. "Do not expect us to come to you and say what has been decided," he told reporters after Wednesday's meeting.

Referring to the November decision to impose a production ceiling, Kuwaiti oil minister Sheikh Ali Khalifa al Sabahhe said shortly before the Wednesday meeting, "There's no decision that cannot be changed."

He said the ministers will look at the demand for OPEC oil and then decide whether the 18.8 million barrels-a-day production ceiling for the first six months of 1989 should be increased.

"We'll look at the figures, and then decide in June," he said referring to the next scheduled full meeting of all OPEC's oil ministers.

Wednesday's meeting was attended by the eight ministers making up the influential pricing and production monitoring committee of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. They are from Algeria, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Nigeria, Saudi Arabia, and Venezuela.

They will make recommendations on any policy changes to the full OPEC meeting in June.

Subroto said, "We're not going to make any decisions at (the current Vienna) meeting."

Ecuador's oil minister, Diego Tamatis, said the OPEC's production ceiling was not even discussed at Wednesday's meeting. No one, however, would say what was discussed.

It was "very good ... lots of things were discussed," said Hisham Nazer, Saudi Arabia's oil minister, without giving specifics.

In addition to the committee meeting Wednesday and Thursday, Subroto said, "We will meet many times" between now and the full ministerial OPEC meeting in June.

Kuwait has much greater capacity than the 1 million barrels-a-day production.

'Rain Man' dominates 61st Academy Awards ceremony

Hoffman wins for autistic performance

United Press International

LOS ANGELES — An emotional Dustin Hoffman paid tribute to the autistic people who helped him define the role that won him his second best actor Academy Award in "Rain Man," a movie he called "a Cinderella story" because of its rocky road to the screen.

"I want to thank all the people I talked to who were autistic and their families and the doctors for their help," Hoffman said on accepting his Oscar Wednesday night.

The actor sent a special greeting to his father, who suffered a stroke several weeks ago and remains hospitalized.

"I understand that the hospital where he is tonight, a lot of people ... are gathered with him with tuxedos and champagne cups and formal and they're all watching this show right now on this big TV that they rented," he said.

"To the wonderful doctors and nurses and rehabilitation people and to the families that I met recently and to my father and to his new friends, here's looking at you."

The diminutive, complex and often difficult Hoffman, who won a best actor Oscar once before, played the role of Raymond Babbitt, an autistic savant, with such conviction that audiences leave theaters with a new understanding of autism and its impact on families and society.

Hoffman, 54, who said he researched the part for a year, exudes the eerie otherness of the mentally impaired, revealing Raymond's unexplainable talent for mathematics and memorization, but his complete inability to live independently.

Before beginning his role, Hoffman studied autism at the UCLA Medical Center library to perfect his characterization of Raymond.

In a backstage interview, Hoffman said the movie's triumph as best picture was "even more exciting" because the film was almost scrapped so many times.

"It is, for us, a Cinderella story. The picture was literally canceled three or four times," he said.

Hoffman's tenacity and commitment to the script helped keep it alive. He said his interest in the script was piqued after seeing a "60 Minutes" segment on autistic people.

The actor thanked his competition — Tom Hanks, Max Von Sydow, Edward James Olmos and Gene Hackman — "for their wonderful work, even if you guys didn't vote for me. I didn't vote for you guys either."

While not always beloved by his peers, Hoffman commands their respect. He has been nominated for Academy Awards five times before, all for best actor: "The Graduate" in 1967, "Midnight Cowboy" in 1969, "Lenny" in 1974, "Kramer vs. Kramer" in 1979 — for which he won the Oscar — and in "Tootsie" in 1982.

Foster wins for portrayal of rape victim

United Press International

LOS ANGELES — Former child star Jodie Foster took home the best actress Oscar Wednesday night for a movie about gang rape that she said "takes the truth and smacks it in your face."

An exuberant Foster — a long-shot for the top female acting honor — laughed out loud before beginning her acceptance speech for an award she dreamed about winning since she was a little girl growing up in Los Angeles.

"This is such a big deal and my life is so simple. There are very few things — love and work and family — and this movie was so special because it was about all of these things," she said.

Foster, who played a gang rape victim in "The Accused," thanked her mother for teaching her that "cruelty is very human, but it's not acceptable and that's what this movie's about."

Backstage, Foster said winning the top award for actresses, over stiff competition from such top stars as Glenn Close, Sigourney Weaver, Meryl Streep and Melanie Griffith, was "like winning the lottery or something."

"I feel great. I can't stop laughing," she said, adding that the golden statue meant that "maybe I'll work next year."

She said that as a child actress, she dreamed about winning an Academy Award and practiced acceptance speeches in the shower.

The actress, whose career lagged when she outgrew little girl roles in her late teens, is one of the handful of child stars in Hollywood movies to attain major stardom as an adult. She made the transition into adult roles after taking an almost four-year sabbatical from films to earn a degree from Yale University.

Foster, who was nominated for best supporting actress for "Taxi Driver" in 1976 at age 19, said she was proud of her performance in "The Accused."

"The movie is true and it's honest in a way that's not pandering and it's not exploitive and it's not titillating," she said. "It takes the truth and it smacks it in your face."

For the future, Foster said, "I want to play real people. Not for any career reason. It's not because it's what I should do. It's because it's what makes me happy."

"I really believe there are heroes out there — female heroes who aren't winning wars, perhaps, but they're raising children and they're surviving and they're getting through the day."

She made her feature film debut in "Napoleon and Samantha" and went on to play a featured role in "Kansas City Bomber." She was also in "Foxes," "One Little Indian," "Tom Sawyer," "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore" and "Bugsy Malone."

United Press International

LOS ANGELES — "Rain Man," the touching story of an autistic man and his greedy brother, won the top prize at the annual Academy Awards, winning four Oscars — best picture and best actor for Dustin Hoffman.

Jodie Foster was a surprise winner over some of the biggest names in Hollywood as best actress in "The Accused."

Geena Davis was named best supporting actress for her role in "The Accidental Tourist" and Kevin Kline was best supporting actor for the comedy "A Fish Called Wanda."

"I'm supposed to be jaded by this point," said an emotional Hoffman on accepting his second best actor Oscar Wednesday night. "(But) I'm very honored. ... I want to thank all the autistic people I talked to and their families," he said, referring to the research he did for his role.

"It is for us a Cinderella story. The picture was literally canceled three or four times," said Hoffman, who was joined backstage by co-star Tom Cruise and Barry Levinson, who won the best director Oscar.

Foster, who has been acting for 24 of her 28 years and was nominated for supporting actress for "Taxi Driver" in 1976, said of her role as a rape victim, "I'm very proud of the movie. The movie is true and it's honest in a way that's not pandering. ... It takes the truth and it smacks it in your face."

"Rain Man" had more nominations than any other film with eight, and picked up a fourth award for best original screenplay. The film got its name from a mispronounced Raymond — the name of Hoffman's character — in the childhood memory of his brother, played by Cruise.

"Dangerous Liaisons," a lush story of sexual fencing among the aristocracy in pre-revolutionary France, was nominated in seven categories. It won for best art direction, costume design and screenplay based on material from another medium.

Davis played a free-spirited dog trainer in "The Accidental Tourist" and said she was surprised at winning the Oscar. "I felt I had a one in five chance at least," she joked. "I'm rather stunned."

"This is astonishing," said Kline, who played a trigger-happy jewel thief in "A Fish Called Wanda" and was a surprise winner for his non-dramatic role. "So often comic performances are overlooked," he said backstage. "I think this is very encouraging."

"Pelle the Conqueror" from Denmark, the story of an old Swede played by Max von Sydow who immigrates to Denmark to give his son a brighter future, was named best foreign language film.

The big loser of the evening was "Mississippi Burning," based on the FBI investigation into the murder of three civil rights workers in the 1960s. Nominated for seven awards, it won just one — for best cinematography.

The Oscar show at the 8,000-seat Shrine Auditorium ran 16 minutes over its scheduled three hours, and was broadcast live on ABC to an estimated worldwide audience of 1.5 billion viewers, according to Allan Carr, producer of the program.

"Who Framed Roger Rabbit," which combined live action with animation, won awards for film editing, sound effects editing and visual effects. Animation director Richard Williams was given a special achievement award. The movie made more money at the box-office than any other film in 1988, but was not nominated for any major awards.

Other films in the running for best picture were "Mississippi Burning," "Dangerous Liaisons," "The Accidental Tourist" and "Working Girl."

Hoffman, who has been nominated six times for best actor, previously won for his role in "Kramer vs. Kramer" in 1979. Challenging him for best actor were Gene Hackman, Tom Hanks, Edward James Olmos and von Sydow.

Glenn Close, Melanie Griffith, Meryl Streep and Sigourney Weaver were the other best actress nominees. Weaver was also nominated for best supporting actress for "Working Girl."

Levinson was up against Charles Crichton for "A Fish Called Wanda," Alan Parker for

"Mississippi Burning," Mike Nichols for "Working Girl" and Martin Scorsese for "The Last Temptation of Christ."

For the first time, the show did not have a master of ceremonies. Instead, each production number, song, film clip and nominee was introduced by a different pair of performers.

And instead of saying, "And the winner is ..." each presenter was instructed to say, "And the Oscar goes to ..." to make the ceremony seem less like a competition. Cher, however, said, "And the winner is ... 'Rain Man.'"

Among the celebrities appearing on the show were Michael Douglas, Bob Hope, James Stewart, Tom Selleck, Kim Novak, Doris Day, Sean Connery, Michael Caine, Jane Fonda, Walter Matthau and Lucille Ball.

In other awards, the Charlie Parker story "Bird" won for sound, and the ghost comedy "Beetlejuice" won for best makeup. Dave Grusin won the award for best original score for "The Milagro Beanfield War," and an honorary award was given to the National Film Board of Canada.

Carly Simon's "Let the River Run" from "Working Girl" was named best song.

"Hotel Terminus: The Life and Times of Klaus Barbie" was named best feature-length documentary, and "You Don't Have to Die" won best short subject documentary.

First lady treated for thyroid disease

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Barbara Bush, puffy-eyed but upbeat, is being treated for Graves' disease — a disorder of excess thyroid hormone production, the first lady's press office said.

Mrs. Bush "feels just fine," a spokesman said Wednesday in announcing the ailment, whose symptoms include swelling, irritated eyes and weight loss.

Though most patients generally recover from the condition that primarily strikes women, the American Medical Association says it can lead to death if left untreated for many years.

"She (Mrs. Bush) is not at all worried," a spokesman said. "They caught it in plenty of time but we don't know what caused it."

The White House said in a prepared statement that Mrs. Bush, 63, began treatment Friday and is taking methimazole, a drug that blocks production of thyroid hormones. After only four days, the statement said, "Mrs. Bush noticed marked improvement in her eye symptoms."

Aides said doctors are unsure how long Mrs. Bush, who is noticeably thinner since her husband's inauguration Jan.

20, has had the condition and how long she will need to be treated.

A spokeswoman for the first lady said Mrs. Bush was only alerted to the condition recently when her eyes "really began to bug her."

Dr. John Nicoloff, former president of the American Thyroid Association and a professor of medicine at the University of Southern California, said the autoimmune disease — one in which the body's natural defenses go awry — can usually be treated successfully in two months time, although there is a tendency for other similar conditions to develop.

"This is a disease condition of an overactive thyroid gland," Nicoloff said in a telephone interview. "Usually within four to eight weeks the patient will be restored to ... a normal thyroid hormonal state."

According to the Mosby Medical Encyclopedia, the disorder is usually linked to an enlarged thyroid gland and bulging eyes. It is five times more common in women than in men and usually occurs most often between the ages of 20 and 40.

The encyclopedia also said the condition often "follows an infection or physical or emotional stress."

Bush stalls on private school tax credits

United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Bush is putting on hold a plank of his 1988 presidential campaign — tuition tax credits for parents of private school students.

Bush, referring to the record budget deficit, said Wednesday that the nation cannot afford to give such credits. He also said, "I think it is the obligation of all taxpayers to support a public education system."

The Reagan administration had promoted tuition tax credits as a way to provide more choice in education. But the idea attracted intense opposition in Congress on grounds it would undermine public schools.

Bush was questioned about tax credits while addressing 75 high school students at the White House. Joseph Thrill of Kamuela, Hawaii, asked Bush if he thought Thrill's parents "should get a tax break" since he goes to private school.

"No, I don't," Bush said. He added that Thrill's parents had a "right" to send him to private school, but also an "obligation" to support public schools.

"I have been intrigued with the concept of tuition tax credits ... but the problem (is) we cannot afford to do that," Bush said.

Afterwards, a White House spokesman said the president still "supports tuition tax credits," but said that hard economic times prevents him from now pushing it.

In a survey of presidential candidates last year by The Washington Times, Bush said he favored tuition tax credits. But in the budget revisions he submitted to Congress last month, there was no mention of them.

The 1988 Republican Party platform, adopted in New Orleans in August, pledged, "We will continue to support tuition tax credits for parents who choose to educate their children in private educational institutions."

On Wednesday, Bush made a pitch for public education in talking about tuition tax credits. "We want it (public education) to be the best. And I think in many ways it is the best, although I'm disturbed when I see some kids underachieving."

Bush made his comments to participants in a government study program sponsored by the non-profit Close Up Foundation of Arlington, Va.

Standing in the White House East Room, amid paintings of the Founding Fathers, the president gave students a pep talk about their future as well as the future of the United States.

"The United States can affect things, the United States can move things forward," Bush said.

He told them "never apologize" for the country's role as a world leader and urged them to consider public service. "It's a noble profession."

Said Bush, "Government is not a spectator sport. You've got to be involved."

Air Force: B-1B is no lemon

United Press International

WASHINGTON — The Air Force defended its problem-plagued $280 million B-1B bomber against criticism that it is a lemon, but kept the 97-plane fleet grounded while it tried to discover the cause of a preflight mishap.

The Strategic Air Command grounded the intercontinental-range nuclear bombers Tuesday after a movable wing on one plane swung too far forward and punctured a fuel tank during a test at Dyess Air Force Base in Texas.

The Air Force all but ruled out a problem with the plane's fuel line and said Wednesday the "wing horn" of the left wing, a hinge-like metal plate close to the fuselage, cut a 42-inch gash in the plane's body where a fuel tank was located, allowing fuel to spill out.

"This problem was due to the wing sweep, where the wing exceeded its stop point," said Air Force spokesman Capt. Jay DeFrank.

"We know where the problem occurred. We're trying to find out exactly what failed and why" to determine whether it was a single incident or a potential problem for all 97 bombers, he said.

Referring to a critical statement issued by House Armed Services Committee Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., DeFrank said criticism indicating that the B-1B is a lemon are unfair.

Large Tree Found Near Longwood Is Asked For County

One of the largest trees ever discovered in the south has been found near Longwood and is expected to soon be in the midst of a 10 acre county park, according to R. S. Entzminger, president of the Longwood Chamber of Commerce.

The tree is on land just north of the city limits of Longwood and is the property of Meade Overstreet, Orange County senator. A plea for a donation of the 10 acre tract to the county is being made today by Mr. Entzminger, who stated that in all probability, it would be granted by the owner.

The height from the ground to the first limb is 62.43 and the tree height is 126.33 feet. Eighteen inches from the ground the tree is 42.9 feet in circumference and is 32 feet in circumference at six and a half feet from the ground. At 62 feet it is 25.2 feet around the trunk. It has a 72 foot section with an average diameter of 9 feet containing 4,684 cubic feet and 56,208 feet of board lumber.

Computed by and expert, these figures show that the tree would make 1,756 cross ties, enough to construct three-quarters of a mile of railroad track. It would make 722,601 shingles, enough to cover 113,448 square feet. If cut in quarters and laid end to end, the tree would reach 31.9 miles or circle the town limits of Longwood and reach to the Courthouse in Sanford on the north and the City Hall, Orlando, on the south.

Further it is claimed the tree would make 1,079,000 boxes of toothpicks, each containing 1,000 sticks. Enough would then would remain to cut 9 chords.

Bucks defy sweeping trend

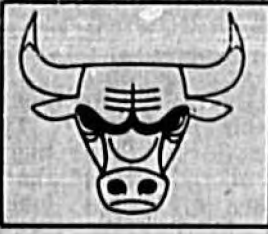

Despite being swept by the Chicago Bulls in their regular season series, the Milwaukee Bucks are looking to reverse that trend in the "second season."

Chicago's 108-102 triumph over the Bucks Wednesday night gave Chicago a perfect 8-0 record this season against their Central Division rival and Milwaukee has dropped 13 of the last 14 meetings between the two teams, including seven straight at home.

Though his teams' efforts versus Chicago have been futile, Bucks forward Sidney Moncrief remains optimistic.

"We're not going to let being swept by a particular team impact how we play the rest of the season," said Moncrief.

In other games, Boston topped Portland 106-97; Atlanta routed Washington 120-102; Indiana topped Miami 98-89; Detroit edged Utah 108-104 in double overtime; and the LA Clippers defeated Sacramento 114-108.

Boggs, Rose share laughs

WINTER HAVEN — Pete Rose and Wade Boggs, objects of intense media scrutiny during spring training for off-field exploits, shared a few light moments in the dugout Wednesday before the start of the Cincinnati-Boston exhibition game.

Rose, whose gambling habits are being investigated by the commissioner's office, was sitting in the Reds' dugout when Boggs jumped in and grabbed a seat on the bench next to the embattled manager. Boggs, a five-time American League batting champion, is on the trading block while former mistress Margo Adams pursues a lawsuit charging breach of contract.

"If it wasn't for us two, these people wouldn't have anything to write about," Boggs said to Rose, gesturing to a group of reporters.

"If I was a manager pitching to you with two strikes, I'd lob the ball in underhanded," Rose said to Boggs. "You're a .350 hitter and with two strikes, you're a .450 hitter."

AMERICA'S CUP

Cup defenders ponder appeal

SAN DIEGO — Attorneys studied a judge's ruling Wednesday in search of a way to keep the America's Cup in San Diego despite her order that the world's top sailing trophy be forfeited to New Zealand.

The San Diego Yacht Club and America's Cup Organizing Committee pressed a search for grounds on which to appeal Tuesday's stunning ruling that awarded the cup to New Zealand's Mercury Bay Boating Club.

"We had a good discussion (Tuesday) and briefed both boards. A lot of the board members weren't able to make it on short notice so they'll be briefed today," said Mark Smith, an attorney for the yacht club.

New York Supreme Court Justice Carmen Beauchamp Ciparick issued a strongly-worded ruling Tuesday agreeing with Mercury Bay's contention that San Diego violated the spirit of sportsmanship when it trounced the Kiwi's monohull sloop with a catamaran last fall.

HOCKEY

Detroit clinches behind rookie

Rookie Brent Fedyk came up with his first NHL goal in championship fashion for the Detroit Red Wings.

"It's always great to score your first NHL goal, but when it comes in a game like this, it's even more enjoyable," said Detroit Red Wings rookie Brent Fedyk, who gave Detroit a two goal lead in the second period Wednesday to help his team clinch a second straight Norris Division title with a 4-3 victory over the New York Rangers.

It was an enjoyable night all around for the Red Wings, who hadn't finished first two years in a row since they completed a string of seven straight championships in 1954-55.

Redmen pay tribute with NIT victory

United Press International

NEW YORK — St. John's victory in the National Invitation Tournament was as much a tribute to its rich past and promising future as it was a reward in the present.

"We suffered a tragedy with the loss of Katha," senior Matt Brust said of Katha Quinn, the school's late sports information director, after the Redmen defeated St. Louis 73-65 in the tournament final. "People call me the spirit but the real spirit was her."

Quinn died of liver cancer last month at age 35. Since then, the Redmen have rebounded from their worst finish ever in the Big East to take the NIT final for a record fifth time.

Jayson Williams scored 28 points, grabbed 18 rebounds and overpowered a smaller St. Louis lineup Wednesday night.

Freshman point guard Jason Buchanan added a career-high 21 points for the Redmen, including 14 in the first half on 7 of 9 shooting, and handled St. Louis' constant fullcourt pressure with little difficulty. Buchanan twice missed the front of 1-and-1s, with 2:45 and 1:35 to go, to allow St. Louis to get back in the game, but converted 7 of 8 foul shots in the final minute to seal the victory.

"It's easy to sit back and say now we did it, but now the work is going to start," said St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca. "More is going to be expected next year."

St. John's starts three freshman and loses only Brust among its pivotal players. Williams, who was named tournament MVP, said no one ever

On a roll Oviedo advances in Apopka tourney

By MARK BLYTHE

APOPKA — Jodi Spelman, backed by an errorless defense, tossed a two-hitter as Oviedo cashed in on its opportunistic offense to capture a tough 2-0 victory over Tampa Jesuit in the second round of the Apopka Invitational Wednesday at Apopka High School.

The Lions improved to 8-9 and will return to action tonight at 7 against the winner of the Apopka-Watkins (Ohio) game. Jesuit dropped to 11-3 and will play the loser of the Apopka-Watkins matchup.

"Jodi (Spelman) threw one hell of a game," Oviedo coach Mike Ferrell said. "He came through time and again, he got in trouble in the sixth inning and reached down to get out of it without letting a run score."

Spelman allowed just three base runners, struck out nine and opened the game by pitching five perfect innings. Jesuit pitcher Matt Parker was equally impressive in the first five innings as he was perfect until the sixth inning.

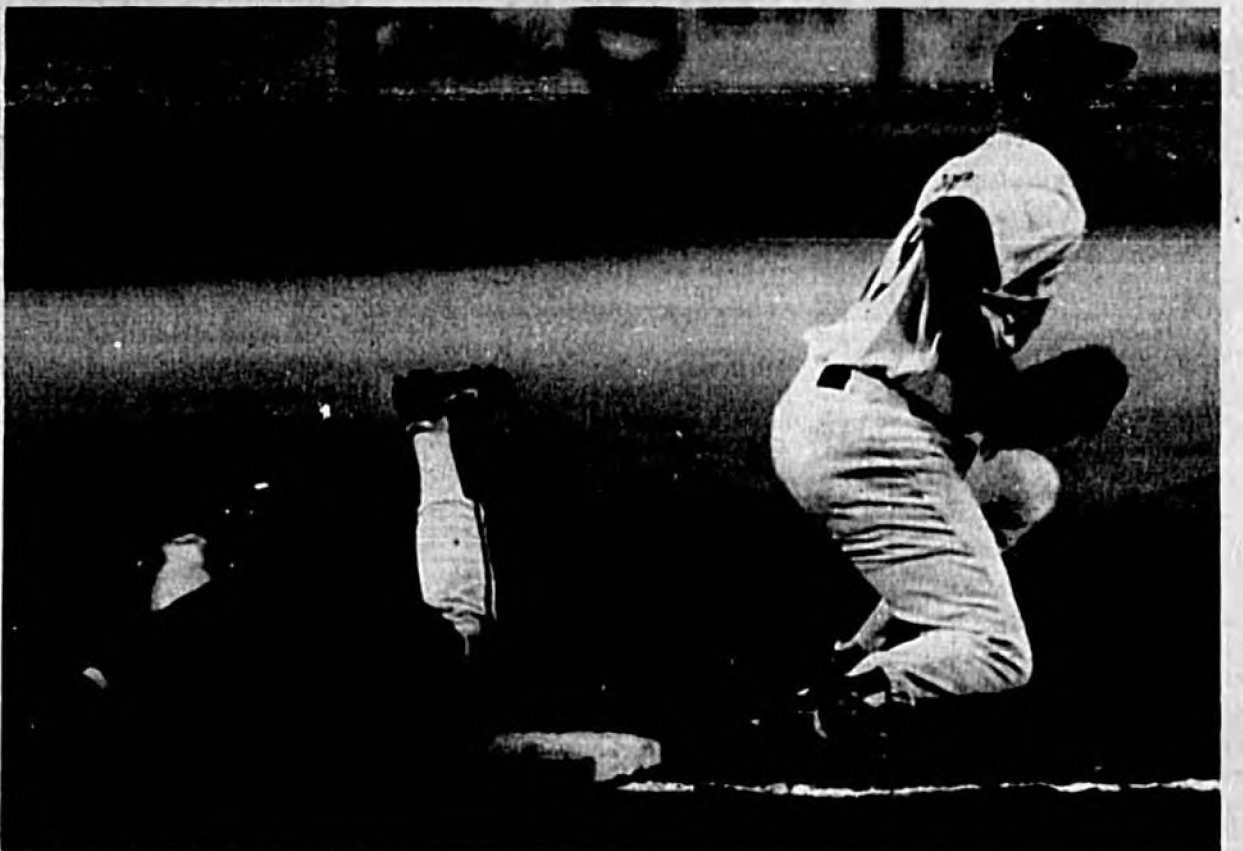

Spelman dominated the Tigers and was backed by beautiful defensive plays that kept Oviedo rolling throughout the game. It was the second game in the tourney that the Lions have played errorless ball.

"Our defense has really been playing well," Ferrell said. "They came up with another spectacular game tonight and we really needed it. On offense tonight we capitalized on what few chances we had."

The game was a pitchers dual and neither team could manage to get a base runner until the top of the third inning. The Lions managed to get place B.J. Calapa on by a walk until he was called out for not using a taped bat to keep Parker perfect through three.

Spelman continued to work his mastery on the mound, though, and struck out the side in the following inning and set down 15 consecutive batters before walking Steve Soane in the sixth inning.

Oviedo's Jason Huish (sliding) was safe on this play at third in the sixth inning of the Lions' game with Tampa-Jesuit on Wednesday. Huish then scored the game's first run, leading Oviedo to a 2-0 win and into tonight's semifinal game of the Apopka Invitational Tournament.

Hawks trying to stay alive

From staff reports

Lake Howell used a seven run explosion in the bottom of the second inning to take a 10-8 victory over Deltona Wednesday morning in second round action of the Apopka Invitational at Apopka.

The Silver Hawks improved to 7-12 and will return to action today against Dr. Phillips at Lake Brantley at noon. The Wolves dropped to 1-10 for the season and were ousted from the tournament.

"It was real nice to get the win," Lake Howell coach Birto Benjamin said. "We really needed a win. We're right on the edge of putting a run together of six or seven games and I really hope we start now. I'd like to get to .500 by the end of the season."

Deltona opened the scoring with a single run in the top of the first inning. Tim Fedilan led off with a walk, stole second and scored on a single by Rob Fichenschen.

Lake Howell responded with a run of its own in the bottom half of the frame as Chris Trier led off and was hit by a pitch. Bobby Fugate then reached on an error before Luis Guevara stroked a run scoring single to left to even the score at While Lake Mary shortstop Jason Sewell (right) had this play under control, an early defensive lapse crippled the Rams in their game Wednesday with Coconut Creek in the Colonial Classic.

ORLANDO — The Colonial Classic Baseball Tournament has been very, very good to the Coconut Creek Cougars.

Twice they have left the comfortable confines of the Fort Lauderdale area over spring break. And both those seasons, they used this ultra-prestigious tournament as a springboard to district titles in an area considered among the best for high-school ball in the state.

Not a bad batting average for the Cougars, who demonstrated why they're the fourth ranked team in Class 4A by battering the Lake Mary Rams, 9-2, Wednesday.

Silent bats, errors spell doom for Tribe

By MARK BLYTHE
Herald sports writer

St. Francis High School, from Buffalo New York, scored three unearned runs in the top of the sixth inning Wednesday afternoon to post a narrow 3-2 victory over Seminole High School in a game played at Seminole.

St. Francis improved to 9-8 for the season and completed its scheduled games in Florida. The Tribe fell to 6-8 and will return to action next Wednesday at home against Lake Highland.

"We could have played much better," Seminole coach Mike Powers said. "Our bats are in the closet and we didn't make the plays. When you don't hit the ball and don't make the plays you just don't win."

Seminole's loss crased a brilliant performance by Mike Senecek who threw a one hitter and struck out seven. The Tribe, though, made four crucial errors, three in the sixth and deciding inning to take themselves out of the game.

"I can't ask anything more from a pitcher," Powers said. "Mike (Senecek) did his job, he just didn't get much help from the field when he needed it."

Seminole broke a scoreless tie in the bottom of the fourth inning when Bubba Coral reached on a single, stole second and third and scored on a passed ball to give his team a 1-0 advantage.

Senecek was able to keep St. Francis scoreless until the sixth inning when the Tribe defense caved in. Felix Smith led off and reached first on a walk and stole second. Terry Myers then reached on an error by the Seminole third baseman to place runners on the corners.

A sacrifice advanced Myers to give St. Francis runners on second and third, a squeeze play was then mishandled by Seminole allowing two runs to score and James Jernigan to reach third. Jernagin then came in on a ground out to give St. Francis a 3-1 lead.

Seminole came up with a final run in the bottom of the seventh inning as John Wilkes led off with a walk and moved to second on a wild pitch. Anthony Roberts then walked and Irakine Howard advanced the runners with a sacrifice bunt. Henry June then connected on a sacrifice fly to score Wilkes. Seminole could not get the big hit, though, and dropped its second consecutive on-e-run game.

"We'll have to be ready to play when we return," Powers said. "Lake Highland has been ranked as high as number three in class A so they have a good team. We'll have to find our bats and play better in the field against them to win the game."

Raiders cap off season with award ceremony

From Staff Reports

The long junior college basketball season finally came to an end for the Seminole Community College men's basketball team as the Raiders held their annual awards banquet at the Western Sizzler Steak House Wednesday afternoon.

The banquet is the final activity for the 1988-89 Raiders, which began practice back on September 7. Coach Bill Payne welcomed a group of 30 people who had been the Raider family for the past eight months.

Athletic Director Larry Castle thanked all the young men for their dedication and exemplary behavior to Seminole Community College both in the classroom as well as on the court this past year and wished everyone who was leaving Seminole good luck in their future endeavors and wished the freshmen continued luck next year.

Coach Payne then thanked all of the individuals who helped behind the scenes this year to make the year a success: Tom Tipton (Raider scoreboard operator for 22 years), Sue Whitlow (division secretary), Robert Smith (scorebook), Dean Smith (45-second clock), Mike Morris (manager), Jeff Hill (road scorebook) and Joy Hinkle (cheerleading sponsor).

Hinkle was next to the podium and thanked all expected him to be MVP, but that too will change next year when he is a senior and established star.

"This is only the second MVP I ever won," he said. "The first was at boys club."

Roland Gray scored 21 points to lead the Billikens, 27-10. He became the leading scorer in school history as teammate Monroe Douglass, who scored 25 in the semifinals and came into the game leading Gray by 16, was in foul trouble throughout and finished with 2 points. Gray wrapped up his career with 1880 points, 3 more than Douglass.

"I'm happy for Roland, and for Monroe," St. Louis Coach Rich Grawer said. "In an ideal world, they would have wound up tied."

St. John's previously won the tournament in 1943, 1944, 1959 and 1965. Bradley had also won it four times.

The Redmen, 20-13, reached the final with NIT triumphs over Mississippi, Oklahoma State, Ohio State and Alabama-Birmingham following their worst finish ever in the Big East's 10 years, eighth-place at 6-10. Last year, Connecticut came back from last place in the conference to capture the NIT.

In consolation bracket action on Wednesday, the Lake Brantley Patriots were eliminated by West Orange, losing 6-0. West Orange now advances to play Pine Bluff, Arkansas while Lake Brantley is off until next Wednesday, when the Patriots host Lake Howell in a Seminole Athletic Conference game.

"We came here in 1983 and reached the final four," said ninth-year Coconut Creek Coach Tom Hysell, whose team is the highest ranked Florida team in the 18-team tournament.

"This tournament helped turn our program around. We've had winning seasons ever since, and if anything teams in our district look in the paper and see we've beaten teams like (Orlando) Oak Ridge and Lake Mary. That may put a little fear into them."

The Cougars (16-2) won their ninth consecutive game primarily on the strength of a six-run outburst in the first inning, highlighted by Jeff Perez' grand slam and Glen Knobel's solo homer. It was the fourth grand slam of the tournament.

Lake Mary (11-6), which left 12 base runners stranded, can finish no better than fifth or sixth because one loss takes a team out of the championship bracket. Today at 1:30 p.m., the Group helps to ease pain of losing a child

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in response to a letter you had in your column recently. It was from a mother whose son had died, and she felt bad because she had no one to talk with about her son.

As a mother who has lost a child, I know the importance of having someone there when you need to talk. There is much comfort in just talking about what is in your heart, and who better to talk to than someone who has gone through that experience?

Abby, there is an organization known as Compassionate Friends. It is a support group made up of parents who have lost their children in death. It is a legitimate and worthwhile organization whose only purpose is to ease the pain of having lost a child.

Membership in Compassionate Friends is free—and it's open to anyone who wants to join. This group helped me so much when my son died. I want to tell others about it. Will you please help me spread the word?

DENISE IN NACOGDOCHES, TEXAS

DEAR DENISE: With pleasure, I have recommended Compassionate Friends in my column several times, but for those who may have missed it, this group has my unqualified recommendation. It was founded in 1969 and has grown to 400 chapters throughout the United States.

Compassionate Friends has no religious affiliation; people of all faiths (or none) may join. It publishes a newsletter and depends on voluntary contributions to cover local and national operational costs, but there are no "dues." There is no charge for attending meetings.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Please say something on behalf of us who reside in popular cities such as Scottsdale, New York City and Los Angeles and who have this problem. I'm sure I'm not alone.

I'm referring to my airline friends who fly for little or nothing and are constantly visiting my wife and me. They expect to be wined and dined, housed and entertained. They borrow our car, drink our alcohol and eat our food. As a further insult, they may say, "I'm low on cash, but since I had five days off, I thought it would be nice to spend them with you."

Abby, I'm not Scrooge, and I'm no wimp, either. I enjoy company as much as anyone else, but how would you like to deal with these users?

PO'D IN SCOTTSDALE

DEAR PO'D: When these "friends" call you to tell you they are coming, inform them you are going—to be busy.

"Forgive me if I sound like a broken record, but no one can be imposed upon without his consent."

(Problems? Write to Dear Abby, For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.)

Homemakers not just homebodies

By DAVINA BURCH
Herald correspondent

When Mom didn't teach you everything you need to know to be a homemaker in the 1980s, there is a solution.

"Seminole County Extension Homemakers strive to promote a better way of life for people in Seminole County through fellowship, education and service," said Barbara Hughes-Gregg, Seminole County home economist.

The organization is the information source and support system for eight various homemakers clubs and about 150 members in the county: Altamonte Springs Extension Homemakers, Elder Springs Extension Homemakers, Geneva Extension Homemakers, Lake Mary Extension Homemakers, Mockingbird Extension Homemakers, Oviedo Extension Homemakers, and a Spanish club in Oviedo that has yet to be named.

"The Extension Service was established by the United States government in the early 1900s when the dust storms swept through the Midwest. Farmers, left in a state of despair, did not have access to the technology they needed to help themselves. In conjunction with the government, universities put into effect the Extension Service, the primary duty of which was to transfer the results of new research to the farmers."

The Extension Homemakers was the branch of the service formed to teach the wives of the farmers how to can and preserve the food in the safest and healthiest manner.

Today's community homemaker organization has come a great distance from those first aspirations.

Mildred Geiger, president of the oldest homemaker organization in Seminole County—the 51-year-old Geneva Extension Homemakers club, stressed that today's homemaker is into being a better hostess, learning public speaking skills, and taking care of household accounts.

"We're just more modern," Geiger said. "We want to know how to buy a better car, find better insurance or decide which is the best stock to buy. In general, we want to be better consumers and really be at the top of life."

Jean Wilson, a Geneva Extension Homemaker member, found in her fellow members much needed support when her mother (also a member) passed away.

Leaders of Seminole County Extension Homemakers look at damaged leaves from a ficus tree and glean information they will take back to their individual clubs. Standing from left are Celeste

CLUB FOCUS

"I do not know what I would have done without my club members," Wilson said. "I have found such a comradery among these women."

Another Geneva Extension Homemaker, who is 81, recently moved from her longtime home. But she was not happy with the condominium she moved into, so she moved to another. The Extension Homemakers helped her to make this transition with ease by offering both financial advice and personal support.

The Extension Homemakers do not devote their time exclusively to assisting their fellow members. Their real pride comes from the work they do in serving the community.

The women donate time and money to the Audubon Society, nursing homes, historical societies and especially local elementary schools.

With March being National Nutrition Month, the Geneva Homemakers taught 100 fourth graders how to make nutritious afternoon snacks. These fourth graders then taught the first graders to make the snacks.

"A lot of people think we're just a bunch of homemakers, but we do a great deal for the community," said Wilson.

In one instance, a little boy with cancer was undergoing extensive treatment. When this came to the attention of the Geneva Homemakers, they took food to his family.

"I was never so proud as when I took that food because it was fresh meat and vegetables—hot, not just something off of the shelf," Wilson said.

In Oviedo, a new homemaker's club under the guidance of the Seminole County Extension Homemakers was born three weeks ago. This as yet unnamed group is unique in that it is all Spanish-speaking.

Haydee Gambaro, a Home Economist from Puerto Rico, established the group in Oviedo because she felt many of the women coming from Puerto Rico and other Spanish-speaking countries were being isolated without a peer group.

"I want them to participate and know that the community has to give so they can help themselves," Gambaro said.

A Spanish-speaking Extension Homemakers exists in Orange County as well, an option for those who do not live near Oviedo.

"The important thing for people to know is that the door is open to anyone. You don't have to be a member to attend meetings, and workshops," Geiger said.

In 1988, Extension Homemakers throughout the county contributed 17,818 volunteer hours, Hughes-Gregg said. If paid as little as $4 an hour, this would equal $71,272 worth of work, she noted, saying that is equivalent to five people working full time for a year. Also last year, the women gave more than $3,000 in goods and services to 23 community organizations, she said.

Workshop subjects range from Chinese cooking and training in self-breast examination, to teaching pre-schoolers seat belt safety. The Extension Homemakers also sponsor annual events like the State Homemakers Convention, Missing Children's Day and the Holiday Bazaar.

Younger women are especially encouraged to join, and men are not prohibited from becoming members.

For more information about the Seminole County Extension Homemakers, contact Barbara Hughes-Gregg at 323-2500, ext. 179.

Medicines may not be best for a slow pulse

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 70 and for some seven years I've taken Corgard daily for irregular heartbeat and occasional palpitations. When we joined an HMO last year my EKG revealed a pulse rate of 36. My doctor reduced the Corgard and told me not to worry as long as I have no symptoms such as feeling faint. After a brisk 45-minute walk, my pulse only gets up to 41. Am I getting the best advice?

P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

(C) 1988, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

DEAR READER: I tend to take a "hands off" approach in treating elderly patients. They often do not tolerate medicine well and I believe that "less is better" when it comes to older people who have no symptoms.

Without knowing the details of your heart condition, I cannot offer an opinion about the appropriateness of your therapy.

However, your doctor seems to be on the right track by reducing your medicine and alerting you to be aware of certain danger signals, such as faintness. Make sure that you schedule periodic visits to him and, if there is any change in your health status, notify him immediately.

Your situation reminds me of a patient of 85 whom I first examined 10 years ago for slow pulse. She was taking several medicines and I had trouble figuring out what was going on. With her enthusiastic endorsement, I began slowly eliminating her drugs. The whole process took about four months. Since then, her pulse has stabilized at about 70, she is off all drugs, tells me she never felt better in her life and is looking forward to her 100th birthday. This approach isn't right for everybody, but if your doctor is willing to work with you, I say go for it.

For more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Insuring Your Good Health." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 with their name and address to

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Everyone knows the old-fashioned way of showing a good hand with a long suit after partner opens with one no-trump: You jump in your suit. What is not so commonly understood is that after such a jump, opener has two ways of showing support for your major suit. He can simply raise it to game, or he can cue-bid a control elsewhere to imply interest in slam. When North failed to make such a cue-bid, South should have given up on slam. He either was greedy or thought his 100 honors would give him a profit regardless. So he asked for aces and bid six hearts, apparently not caring that the defenders might have two quick tricks.

Sloppy bidding, but did not give up. He won dummy's diamond king, drew trumps, and then played the diamond ace and ruffed a diamond. He then played three more rounds of hearts, discarding a club and a diamond from dummy. His hope, not too far-fetched, was that East would hold the A-K of clubs and four spades.

There would be no story with a club lead, but West led the queen of diamonds. Declarer mentally scolded himself for Sure enough, on the last trump East had to reduce to five cards. If he kept four spades, he would have to throw a high club honor. In that event, declarer would give up a club to East, thus establishing a club winner for himself. If East threw a spade, South would play Q-K-A of spades and dummy's last little spade would be the 12th trick. What luck! South scored an unmakeable slam and still got his 100 honors.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol

YOUR BIRTHDAY
March 31, 1989

Don't be hesitant in the year ahead to expand your ambitions or even take a well calculated risk in a new area of opportunity. You could be luckier than usual in worldly matters.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Give free expression to your imagination today and don't feel inadequate when either involved with bigwigs or big deals. You can comfortably cope with both. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which are governing you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're likely to be luckier today than you will be tomorrow in situations that have a direct bearing on your financial interests. Don't put off until later what can be taken care of now.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Hold positive thoughts today regarding the outcome of a project that is presently important to you. It can work out as you envision if your faith doesn't waver.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A considerate friend who has your best interest at heart might try to orchestrate something advantageous for you today. Don't interfere with this person's methods or procedures.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In business involvements today try to treat your associates more like pals than merely commercial contacts. This could noticeably strengthen your alliances and inspire greater cooperation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You could be luckier than usual today in situations that help further your personal ambitions. Don't be afraid to take calculated risks in matters where you feel you have a good chance for success.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Conditions in general should be rather fortunate for you today. The key ingredients for achieving your aims are to feel like a winner and behave accordingly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) An endeavor in which you are presently involved may have much greater potential than appears on the surface. Begin looking for the x-plus factors today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) What you cannot do on your own today can be accomplished with the assistance of competent allies. Be sure, however, that any benefits accrued are shared equally.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Financial trends will be flowing in your favor today, so make every effort to capitalize on things which you feel could produce a profit. Don't let any opportunities slip past you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Side involvements with people you know socially could work out advantageously for you at this time. Be a good listener when friends deviate from customary small talk.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You're now in a cycle where you should begin to experience greater earning power. Use your imagination and look for ways to increase your paycheck through bonuses or raises.
