American swims Siberian lake

MOSCOW — American swimmer Lynn Cox today became the first person to swim across the cold Siberian waters of Lake Baikal, the world's deepest lake, the official Tass news agency said.

Cox, of Los Alamitos, Calif., made the 11-mile crossing from Tolsty Cap to Listvyanka settlement in four hours and 20 minutes. The lake was at 51 degrees, Tass said. She moved the crossing ahead by two days after the weather bureau predicted heavy storms over the weekend.

The challenge of crossing Lake Baikal was not distance, but the coldness of the waters, where even in the summer midlake water temperatures can drop below 50 degrees. The lake, with a depth of 5,712 feet, is the deepest in world.

Eighteen hurt in train crash

HUNTINGTON, N.Y. — Long Island Rail Road suspended service on both eastbound and westbound trains east of Huntington on the Port Jefferson branch during this morning's rush hour after yesterday's crash of a commuter train, a LIRR spokesman said.

Michael Malone said there will be additional trains on the Ronkonkoma branch to accommodate riders.

A LIRR commuter train slammed into a tractor-trailer truck carrying a bulldozer, derailling four cars and injuring 18 people, one of them seriously.

At least 35 people were on the train when it crashed Thursday night, and of the 18 people who were treated at Huntington hospital, only one was admitted for serious injuries, said Officer Robert Tooker of the Nassau County Police.

HRS fined $30 million

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services owes the federal government $30 million in fines for having overpaid welfare claims over the past seven years, state officials say.

Ray Wise, spokesman for the social services agency, said mismanagement by past Democratic administrations is to blame for the mess, but a huge computerization project undertaken by Republican HRS Secretary Greg Coler will help solve the problem.

"There's no question there have been high error rates in Florida. That's why we need this new computer system," Wise said Thursday.

Bucs winless in preseason

NASHVILLE — Jim Kelly tossed a 1-yard touchdown pass to Jamie Mueller Thursday night to give the Buffalo Bills a 14-7 win over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in a battle of two of the NFL's winless teams in the preseason.

Kelly completed 9 of 12 passing attempts for 98 yards and, like Tampa Bay's Vinny Testaverde, threw one touchdown in two quarters of play.

Testaverde completed 6 of 16 attempts with three interceptions, two of them in the second quarter.

The second-year quarterback from Miami tossed a 41-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Frank Pillow streaking down the left sideline with 1:24 left in the first quarter for the Bucs' only touchdown.

Preston to die Sept. 27

From staff and wire report

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Bob Martinez has signed death warrants for three condemned killers, including one who was convicted in the brutal murder of a Seminole County convenience store clerk.

Robert Anthony Preston Jr., 30, who was convicted in the Jan. 9, 1978 murder of store clerk Earline Walker, will be executed at 7 a.m. on Sept. 27.

Robert Preston Jr.

The victim was abducted from a 'Lil' Champ convenience store on Spring Oaks Boulevard in Altamonte Springs. Her body was found the day after the murder took place. She had been stabbed and her throat slashed.

Preston was scheduled for execution in November 1985, but won a stay from a circuit court judge who later upheld his sentence.

The seven-man five-woman jury that convicted Preston recommended by a 7-5 vote that the killer die in the electric chair.

Preston claimed he was on drugs at the time of the murder.

The other two death warrants are for Gregory Alan Kokal, who bragged he "wasted a sailor for a dollar" in 1983, and Nathaniel M. Jackson.

The governor's aides said Martinez had determined there was no basis for reducing the death sentences handed to the convicted killers.

Executions for Jackson and Kokal were scheduled for 7 a.m. on Oct. 26.

The governor's action means there are six men under active death warrant in Florida. Stephen Todd Booker and Freddie Lee Hall are scheduled to die Sept. 20, and Jason Thomas Deaton is scheduled to die Oct. 11.

A jury recommended death for Kokal, 25, after his conviction in the beating and shooting murder of Jeffrey Michael Russell in Jacksonville the night of Sept. 29, 1983.

Kokal and an accomplice picked the victim up hitchhiking, took him to a beach park and demanded his wallet. Kokal then beat Russell with

CCIB agents harvest large marijuana crop

SANFORD — A forest of marijuana plants, some 12 feet tall, looked like ragged Christmas trees stacked in front of a home just west of Sanford after the City County Investigative Bureau (CCIB) harvested the illegal crop late Thursday.

CCIB Commander Lt. Donald Eslinger, a former agent for the state Drug Enforcement Agency, said the 68 plants found in woods behind 3046 Truman Boulevard, are the largest he has seen.

Each of the plants has an estimated street value of $2,000. Some were as tall as 12 feet, and have a trunk circumference of eight inches. "These are the biggest, without exception," he said.

Agents were tipped to the location of the crop and flew over the less than half-acre site

Police outraged at cat torture

SANFORD — Police will seek arrest warrants for two known suspects that tortured a small kitten to death last night in front of a convenience store and threw the dead body into a dumpster.

Police Chief Steven Hargett said he was outraged by the incident, which was reported by two eye-witnesses. He said he would vigorously pursue warrants for the arrests of the suspects through the state attorney's office.

The torture of the kitten occurred in front of the Cumberland Farms convenience store on 217 S. Park Ave., at 9:10 p.m. Thursday.

According to police reports, Joyce L. Howard and James M. Warner, who live nearby, witnessed a man and woman "slap, punch, kick and throw a small gray kitten until it was dead."

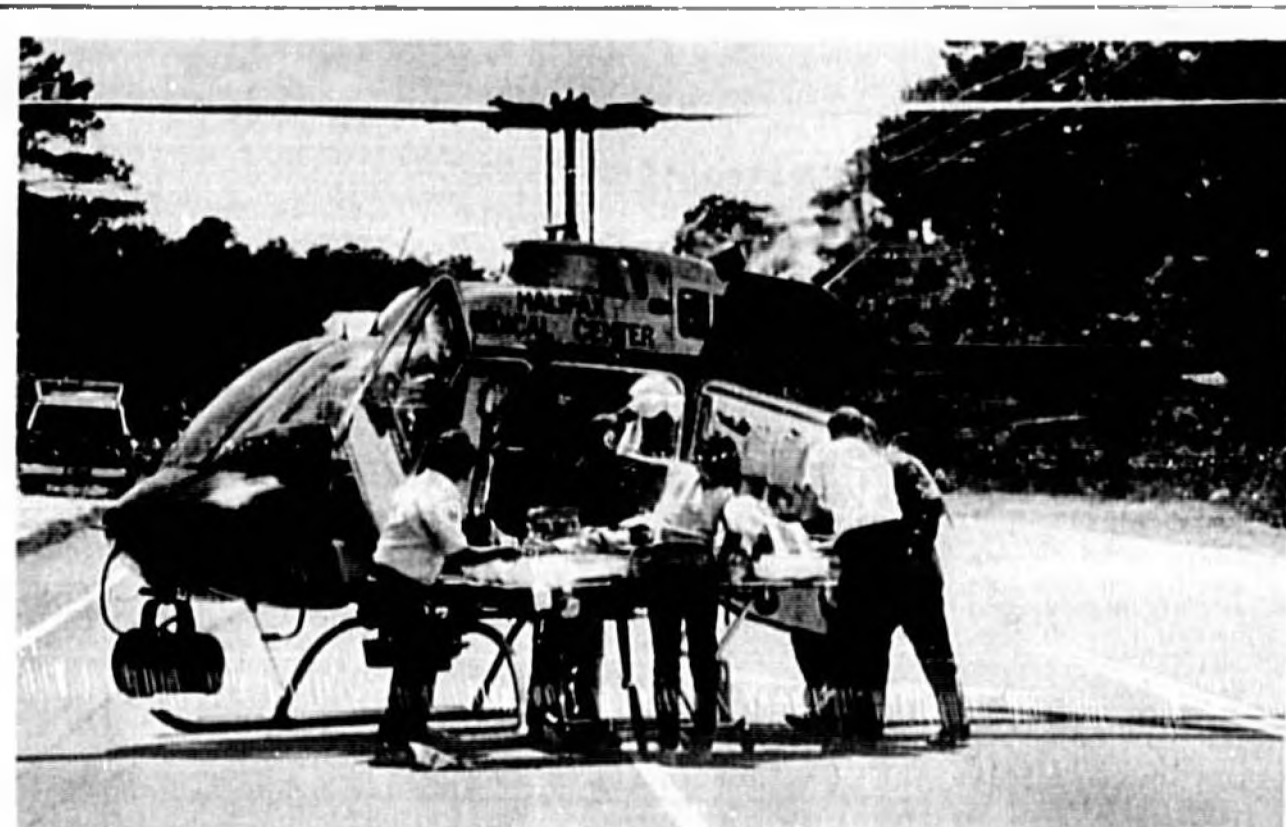

Howard and Warner yelled at the suspects to stop, but they continued, according to their statements to police. The witnesses then called police, who responded along with the Seminole County Humane Society.

The kitten was found in a trash dumpster behind the convenience store and the suspects had fled, according to police reports.

"I think this is a repulsive act based on the statements I've read," said Hargett. "Arrest is an appropriate end to the situation. We will pursue this through the state attorney's office."

HRS fined; denies report neglect

Overpayments spanned 7 years

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services owes the federal government $30 million in fines for having overpaid welfare claims over the past seven years, state officials say.

Ray Wise, spokesman for the social services agency, said mismanagement by past Democratic administrations is to blame for the mess, but a huge computerization project undertaken by Republican HRS Secretary Greg Coler will help solve the problem.

"There's no question there have been high error rates in Florida. That's why we need this new computer system," Wise said Thursday.

The federal government is paying more than 80 percent of the $65 million it will take to set up the new HRS computer system, which will streamline HRS procedures and eliminate some paperwork.

A bill awaiting President Reagan's signature would freeze the federal penalties for Florida and other states that owe a combined $1.1 billion in fines for high error rates in welfare payments.

An existing freeze will expire Sept. 30 unless Reagan signs the bill.

Current federal law allows an error rate of 3 percent, but Congress is studying whether that level is realistic. Congress is expected to decide next year whether to collect the fines or establish a new margin for error.

Abuse reports just piled up

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — The Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services is disputing a newspaper report that followed up on half the 59,000 child abuse or neglect cases identified in 1986-87.

The Tampa Tribune reported the failure rate for the fiscal year Thursday, citing an internal agency report.

Ray Wise, spokesman for the agency, said the report is misleading.

"It is not that we didn't bother, it is that somebody made the decision that no further action was necessary," Wise said.

"It was on purpose, not by accident."

Wise said until recently, the agency required social workers to act as both investigators and counselors in reported cases of child abuse or neglect. HRS records might show "no further action" was taken even if the case worker spent 30 days investigating and counseling the parents.

The functions have been split up, so records now show clearly whether a report was investigated and counseling provided, he said.

Additionally, records might indicate no further action was taken if the victim was a resident of a mental health or retardation facility, even if the victim did receive care beyond his or her ongoing mental health counseling, Wise said.

Curator seeks DeSillers property

MIAMI — The curator of Ronnie DeSillers' estate says she will ask a judge to allow the sheriff's office to confiscate property allegedly bought by the boy's mother with funds donated for his medical fund.

Court-appointed curator Karen Gievers says that although she could not compel Maria DeSillers to produce a list of the items she bought with funds meant for Ronnie, she has enough information to confiscate at least some of it.

DeSillers, who has been under court order to surrender the property since Aug. 8, won a victory Thursday. Circuit Court Judge Francis Christie ruled that she could not be compelled to comply with two earlier orders, issued in May and August, to surrender property, expense records and documents because of her Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.

The judge, who ruled in July that $690,000 in donations should have been used only to help Ronnie or other sick children, noted that his mother and the donated money are the subject of two local criminal investigations. The orders, if obeyed, could force DeSillers to incriminate herself, he said.

Court strikes Pridgen's death sentence

TALLAHASSEE — The Supreme Court struck down the death sentence given to confessed killer Charles Lamond Pridgen.

Pridgen was sentenced to death for the October 1984 murder of Anne Marz in Polk County. Marz, an elderly woman who lived alone, was robbed and murdered in her own home.

Police arrested Pridgen when he tried to cash a check stolen from Marz. He confessed to the killing, but said later he had confessed so he could die in the electric chair and thus show his ex-girlfriend how much she had hurt him.

At trial, Darryl Meadows testified that in fact he had killed Marz. Meadows said that he had forced Pridgen to sell Marz' jewelry and try to pass her checks for him.

Despite Meadows' confession, the jury found Pridgen guilty of Marz' murder.

Navy ships head for Norway

MAYPORT NAVAL STATION — A flotilla led by the aircraft carrier Forrestal heads for the North Atlantic next week for a three-week exercise that includes landings on Norway's rugged coast, the Navy said Thursday.

Four vessels from the Mayport Naval Station, with 6,000 sailors, will join the other counties in the Atlantic and Norwegian Sea for an exercise that simulates support for a land battle in north Norway, the officials said.

"Teamwork 88" begins Aug. 31 and continues through Sept. 21, officials said.

The USS Mobile Bay, whose scheduled Aug. 25 departure for the Middle East was postponed amid signs of a truce in the Iran-Iraq war, will be among the vessels headed for the exercise, the military said.

Other ships from Mayport taking part in the exercise include the aircraft carrier Forrestal, the cruiser Leyte Gulf, destroyers Charles F. Adams and Spruance and the frigate Elmer Montgomery.

Frat death was accidental, police rule

GAINESVILLE — University of Florida police said Thursday the death of a young man who fell from a fraternity house balcony was an accident, but they are still investigating whether campus drinking rules were violated.

Police said the Sigma Alpha Epsilon brothers face no charges in the death early Sunday of Jason Todd Miller, 21, of Tampa. However, the fraternity brothers may have to go before school administrators to answer questions about possible violations of campus drinking policy.

Miller's girlfriend, Amber Michele Epler, 19, and her friend, Kendra Harrington, also 19, told UF police they and Miller had been drinking in the room of fraternity brother Lon Neuman, 21, the only one of the four who attended the University of Florida.

Student Services Dean Jim Scott said the fraternity was having a registered party, which means it had permission to serve alcohol to guests over 21 in a designated drinking area.

Sting operation hits contractors

TALLAHASSEE — A sting operation aimed at uncovering unlicensed construction contractors has resulted in the names of about 160 people being presented for prosecution, state Department of Professional Regulation officials say.

The undercover operation, which took place over a 6-month period in Tampa, was announced Thursday by DPR Secretary Larry Gonzalez. Officials said the operation began in December 1987 and ended in July 1988.

"Unlicensed contractors are a major consumer concern," Gonzalez said, "as their unscrupulous business practices pose a direct risk to all Floridians. Unfortunately, as Florida has grown, so has unlicensed activity."

Court records ruling disappoints Barrons

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Sen. Dempsey Barron and his ex-wife say they are disappointed by a Supreme Court decision making their divorce trial records public, but say the records include nothing that will hurt Barron's re-election bid.

The court ruled Thursday that the court records are public information and must be released to the press and public. The records will remain closed for 15 days to give Barron, D-Panama City, time to appeal the decision.

"There is nothing in the file which would bear adversely on Dempsey's qualifications or ability to continue to seek or hold public office," the statement signed by Barron and ex-wife Louverne Barron said.

"Our family is united and working together for a successful conclusion of the re-election campaign in which we are now engaged."

"Since the divorce proceedings remain closed, we will have no further comment on this matter."

The court ruled in favor of Florida Freedom Newspapers Inc., which had challenged a lower court ruling ordering Barron's divorce records sealed. The newspaper claimed Barron had no more right to closed court records than any other citizen.

Louverne Barron filed for divorce in January 1986. When she amended her petition in September 1986 to name Terri Jo Kennedy as a party to the case, Barron asked that the court records be sealed.

Kennedy is Barron's longtime Senate aide. She is currently the director of the powerful Senate Rules and Calendar Committee chaired by Barron.

Three weeks after the trial court granted that request, Florida Freedom Newspapers filed suit. The Freedom chain publishes the two largest newspapers in Barron's Florida Panhandle district.

Four other newspapers — the Miami Herald, the St. Petersburg Times, the Orlando Sentinel and the Tallahassee Democrat — filed friend of the court briefs in the case.

When the trial court granted the uncontested divorce a month later, it ruled that Barron had unfairly transferred to Kennedy ownership of a $471,000 ranch in Wyoming.

The court ordered the ranch returned to the estate before it decided how the couple's property would be divided.

Three Florida panthers die this week

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Three extremely rare Florida panthers have died during the past few days, Florida Game and Freshwater Fish Commission officials said Thursday.

Biologists estimate there are only a few dozen of the endangered panthers left alive, most of them in the Florida Everglades or Cypress National Forest in South Florida.

Wildlife officials found the badly decomposed remains of panther No. 24 near Palmdale on Monday, about a week after the cat died. They have not yet been able to determine the panther's cause of death.

Panther No. 24, a 126-pound male, roamed a 500-square-mile territory in Highlands and Glades counties west of Lake Okechobee.

Biologists used a radio collar No. 24 was wearing to track down his body. The collar should have sent out a mortality signal when No. 24 remained motionless for an extended period of time, but the mortality sensor malfunctioned.

"The animal's radio collar had indicated that the cat had not moved for the past five days or so," said wildlife biologist Dave Machr. "We thought something might be wrong, but we couldn't tell for sure until we went to investigate."

No. 24 showed no broken bones or other indications of what might have caused its death. The body was sent to a commission laboratory in Gainesville for an in-depth necropsy.

On Wednesday, biologists recovered the body of Panther No. 20, a five-year-old male whose weight had dropped from 148 pounds in early 1987 to 105 pounds at the time of his death.

Searchers followed the mortality signal from No. 20's radio collar and found the animal in the Bear Island Unit of the Big Cypress a few hours his death.

No. 20 had been treated for injuries at the Miami Metrozoo in June 1987 after he had been struck by a vehicle. Veterinarians at that time discovered the cat had a heart defect.

Despite the defect, No. 20 maintained a 300-square-mile territory.

Accused of fighting with officer

CASSELBERRY — A Casselberry policeman tracked down a motorcycle that was reportedly involved in a hit-and-run accident early Thursday and arrested a man who allegedly confronted and shoved the officer.

Arrested was Darrin L. Emery, 23, of Orlando, who is accused of battery on a policeman and resisting arrest. The arrest was made at 15 Bayberry Branch, Casselberry, where the policeman reported finding in the bed of a pickup truck a motorcycle that matched the description of one that had been in an accident at 208 Carriage Hill Drive a few minutes earlier.

The arrest was made at 3:02 a.m. Thursday, after the policeman reportedly determined that the motorcycle's engine was still warm, although another man reportedly said the motorcycle had been in the bed of the truck for two weeks.

Emery allegedly joined the confrontation and ordered the policeman off the property and allegedly shoved him several times before being charged. He is free on bond.

Longwood votes to back utility bonds

By JANE CASSELBERRY
 Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD — After a tour of Sanlando Utilities' Des Pinar and Wekiva water and sewer plants, the city commission voted 3-2 at a special meeting Thursday night to adopt a resolution calling for the city to eventually acquire the system through sponsorship of $32 million tax-exempt revenue bonds for a not-for-profit company.

Florida Community Services Corp. is the not-for-profit company which wants to purchase Sanlando Utilities from Greater Construction Corp. and give the city clear title when the bonds are paid off in 30 years. The city would gain the firm's 10,000 customers, 500 of which live in Longwood, as well as excess revenues and capacity.

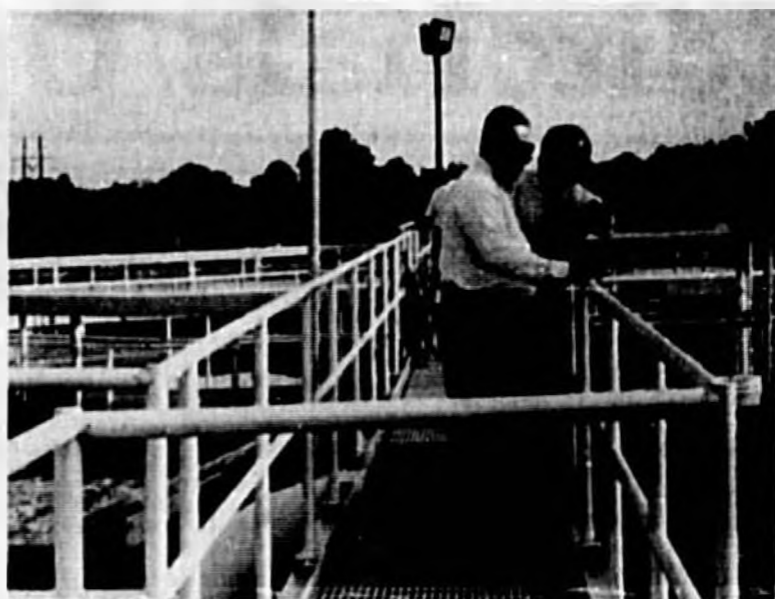

Though City Administrator Gene DeMarie assured the commission the resolution is only a first step and answers to all their questions would be forthcoming once it is passed, Commissioners Hank Hardy and Ted Poelking opposed the resolution. DeMarie said the city could back out any time without penalty up until bonds are sold. "I'm against it," Poelking said. "I don't want to get involved in this utility. We need the advice of someone who knows a lot more about sewer plants than this commission. We don't know anything about sewer plants except they smell. Why should we have somebody spend money on this when we don't know what we are going to do?"

DeMarie and the city's consulting engineer, Michael Henry of Lochrane Engineering, have both said it should be considered because it looks like a good opportunity for the city to gain the necessary sewage capacity and revenue to provide sewer service for the rest of the city.

"I have a lot of unanswered questions," Hardy said. "I don't know why we need a sewer plant in that area and how it's going to benefit the city of Longwood."

Hardy expressed concern about the 17 million gallons a day flow through underground pipes from the Wekiva plant to Sweetwater Creek. The creek flows through wetlands into the Wekiva River and the state Department of Environmental Longwood Mayor Dave Gunter and the city's consulting engineer Michael Henry inspect sewage treatment facilities at Sanlando Utilities Wekiva complex.

Regulation permit is scheduled to expire May 30, 1989. "We have no guarantee DER is going to approve renewal of the permit," he said.

DeMarie replied, "One of the first steps I'd want to take is to visit DER personally."

Sanlando Utilities has consistently received awards from DER and American Water Works Association for the way the plants are operated.

Bill Mustard, executive vice president of Sanlando Utilities, took city officials, including four commissioners, Finance Director Rick Holt, City Clerk Don Terry and City Engineer Chuck Hassler on a tour of both the east and west facilities Thursday afternoon.

The Des Pinar plant is located in The Woodlands Subdivision east of Interstate 4 and the Wekiva facility is located in southwest Seminole County near Apopka. The Orange County customers will be served by a new Orange County plant beginning Jan. 15, thus freeing up between 130,000 and 140,000 gallons per day

Two candidates for Gunter's seat

By JANE CASSELBERRY
 Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD — Two candidates, including City Attorney Michael Kramer, announced Thursday night they would oppose Mayor Dave Gunter for the District 5 city commission seat in the Nov. 8 election.

A political newcomer, Gene Farach, 37, 941 Waverly Dr., said he only decided to run Thursday night while attending a special meeting of the city commission.

Although Kramer, 37, 1677 Grange Circle, presently lives in Commissioner Ted Poelking's district, he said his lease expires Aug. 31 and he plans to move into District 5 prior to qualifying.

Longwood's full-time city attorney for the past year, Kramer said he will be opening his private law practice in the city in October. The city has voted to eliminate the in-house position as of Oct. 1 and to advertise for a part-time city attorney.

Kramer said he believes, if elected, he and the other commissioners could function together as a commission in the spirit of past differences. A hearing on a motion to oust Kramer as city attorney was averted by a settlement giving him severance pay and allowing him to serve through Sept. 30, the end of the fiscal year.

The agreement allows him to leave earlier if he chooses. Kramer said he will have to resign as city attorney at the time he qualifies as a candidate. The qualifying period is Sept. 9-16.

Kramer is not only a lawyer, but also holds a real estate brokers license, a general contractor's license and is a professional industrial engineer. He said his diverse background as well as his municipal legal experience allow him to view things from a different perspective. Before coming to Longwood, he was employed by a large law firm in Atlanta. In 1982 he was city attorney and building official for the south Florida city of Pembroke Park and also did some legal work for the city of Land O'Lakes.

He said there are a number of issues that need to be addressed in the city, including improved employee relations, organized development and annexation, plans to develop alternate revenue sources other than taxation, and the role of the commission in the city. He said the commission should legislate and set policy, not try to run small day-to-day city business.

"I don't believe in hasty action," Kramer said. "The policy should be looked at and studied and reports digested before action is taken."

Kramer is married and he and his wife Rhonda, a teacher at Croomis School of Choice, have two sons, Steven, 11, and David, 22 months.

Farach has a degree in civil engineering and is a structural engineer and general contractor. Originally from Miami, he moved to Longwood from Tampa five years ago.

He said he worked with the Architects Design Group as structural engineer on the controversial city police station and was first exposed to a lot of the city's problems at that time.

He said he has been reading about the city in the newspapers and is concerned about the feasibility of the city's proposed sponsorship of bonds so that Florida Community Services Corp. can purchase Sanlando Utilities, which would revert to the city after 30 years.

Farach said he believes his knowledge of engineering and construction would be a valuable asset on the commission in decisions on site plans and building plans. "I know about sewage treatment plants, I have designed sewage treatment plants," he said.

He is married and he and his wife, Marta, have five children, Raymon, 13; Anthony, 12; Natalie, 9; Margalite, 7; and William, 4.

Gunter, Deputy Mayor Lynette Dennis, the incumbent in the District 3 race, and Carolyn "Carol" Odum, also running in District 3, have opened campaign accounts and named treasurers, according to City Clerk Don Terry. Former City Commissioner Perry Faulkner has announced he will run for Dennis' seat and has picked up papers, but has not returned them to the clerk.

Open planning will relieve school woes

When people don't know, they wonder; when the source of the wonderment is a part of government, they become suspicious. This was made vividly clear last year with the problems attendant to massive elementary school rezonings in Seminole County.

Fortunately, it was not a lesson lost on school officials. They have done their homework and have come up with a lesson plan which should alleviate the potential for another falling grade in communications.

Projections for school enrollment during the next five years are for an increase of 11,299 students. Parents have a tendency to be especially cautious with their children during the early years of school, and it is into this grouping that a majority of the increase will fall. Enrollment in kindergarten through the fifth grade is projected to increase by 7,894 students. That is translated into many new schools, overcrowding in existing schools, and transfers to relieve especially crowded conditions. Such massive moves could result in confusion on the part of parents and children, and a backlash at school officials. Rezoning for students in these grade levels was accomplished last fall but the methods caused turmoil among parents and children.

Student enrollment in middle and high schools is projected to increase 3,605 by 1992 with more than 85 percent of the growth in the middle schools.

However, the problems are being foreseen, and planning is beginning even now.

The School Board has approved a plan for the organization of zone task forces for the middle schools and high schools, and for individual school zoning committees. An administrator and a parent from each school will be named to the task force. Jack Heisler, director of secondary education, will serve on each group, thereby providing a cohesive tie between the task forces allowing for the essential elements of communication and coordination.

The school committees will be comprised of parents, teachers and administrators to review all plans, recommendations and alterations. Preferences will be provided to the task forces. A time table has been established allowing four months for the planning process.

Final plans will be considered and decided by the School Board in January or February based on recommendations from the superintendent. Since all meetings by all groups will be open to the public, there will be no excuse for surprises by parents or citizens. Anyone who doesn't know what is planned will have shunned the meetings or failed to read the published reports.

This appears to be a product of sound planning. It should produce reasonable solutions to monumental problems. Certainly it incorporates the principles of communications into the process, thus avoiding problems of the past.

School officials have provided the forums and the format. Now it is up to parents and other interested citizens to avail themselves of these opportunities to participate and to learn.

Dukakis's no clerk; Bush's no wimp

Let us all pause for a moment and eat crow: fear not, it is low in saturated fats.

Accordingly, let it be noted that, contrary to reports, George Bush and Michael Dukakis are not the most boring men in America: there will be no panic buying of caffeine to stay awake. Nor will the presidential race be between Zorba the Clerk and Georgie the Wimp. It will not be about balloons and banalities. Moreover, the long primary campaigns were not exercises in silliness. It is not right to say, as so many have, that it's a shame in a country with so much talent we came up with two bozos.

Quite the opposite. The selection process has brought forth two skillful and admirable presidential candidates. It is likely that, as proper, we will see a serious election about ideas and the direction of the country.

Gov. Dukakis has shown himself to be an indefatigable marathoner — shrewd, intelligent, articulate, cautious as a rule, but daring when required (as in the choice of Lloyd Bentsen for his vice presidential running mate).

Dukakis has made one big mistake, which is correctable.

Vice President Bush has demonstrated that he is more than the candidate of the glowing resume. The early Bush-bashing was misguided. If elected, he is a man who can indeed leave footprints. On a scale of one to 10, I was tempted to rank his acceptance speech at 10½, but Bush gets one point taken off for neglecting to mention, by name, his support for the beleaguered contra. Still, it was a speech that set out a coherent and attractive political philosophy — call it "Reaganism with a human face."

Bush, like Dukakis, has also made one big mistake, which may or may not be redeemable.

What are the mistakes?

The Bush mistake clearly was the choice of Sen. Dan Quayle as his vice presidential running mate. The essence of the mistake does not concern Quayle's National Guard duty during Vietnam, that is only a symptom of the error. The mistake is in picking someone not known to the public.

In this media age, being tapped as a running mate confers instantaneous political celebrity — in Quayle's case perhaps for the next 30 (!) years. Such a choice should not be made arbitrarily by one person, even the presidential nominee. The voters deserve participatory rights: they deserve someone they know something about, someone who has gained their attention the old-fashioned way, by earning it.

Bush may still get lucky with Quayle. Who knows? Quayle may turn out to be a political wunderkind. But if Bush is really lucky, the overzealous pit bulls of the press corps may dig up enough so that Quayle will ask to be relieved. That would offer Bush a second chance.

Dukakis' error comes in the form of one statement in his speech: "... this election isn't about ideology. It's about competence."

Wrong. It won't wash. Competence to do what? The American people ought not, and do not want, to be choosing the ultimately efficient super-bureaucrat. A presidential election should not be about which man is entitled to a Civil Service rank of GS-100.

Until Dukakis puts his philosophy (i.e., ideology) on the table, he will be in difficulty. Sooner or later he will have to lay out an ideological framework. Sooner is better than later. Just as Bush is trying to reshape modern American conservatism, so ought Dukakis reshape modern American liberalism. (C) 1988, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

“We will see a serious election about ideas and the direction of the country.”

GEORGE F. WILL

Fate tethered to another

In 1904 the New York Sun, setting a standard for concision, endorsed Teddy Roosevelt for President in a five-word editorial: "Theodore! with all thy faults..." In a mood much like that, Republicans convened in New Orleans to make George Bush, at long last, something more than a derivative person, someone whose statute no longer derives from holding offices dispensed by others.

Bush arrived here determined to shed his image as someone forever in someone else's shadow, someone deficient in dignity and accident-prone. For two days he did that.

Most people find Ronald Reagan's presence a tonic. Bush found Reagan's absence invigorating. He seemed to swell in the vacuum created by Reagan's retreat to the ranch. Bush the tenor became Bush the baritone as he gained gravity from the presence at his side of the bubbly Dan Quayle. Then the bubble burst.

It is frequently said the conventions no longer matter now that they are merely ratifying bodies rather than deliberative, deciding bodies. In fact, conventions are more important now than they were in the days when they occasionally decided things. They are important precisely because of the attribute so often disparaged. It is their scripted nature, their role as the instrument of the winner's will. They deserve close scrutiny because they express, in a small space and short span, the nominee's strategic thinking and tactical deftness. Bush's convention was superbly choreographed to communicate his themes until...

By the afternoon of Thursday, a dramatic day in American political history, Bush was locked in a cruel, lose-lose dilemma. Quayle was not being as forthcoming as he will have to be about his past, and a journalistic feeding frenzy was devouring Bush's convention. Bush could not drop his running mate without communicating panic and chaos to the country. But by going forward with Quayle he remained, at least for a while, as he has too long been, with his fate tethered to someone else.

This Quayle episode, with undertones of unjustifiable privilege, brings in by the back door the Democrats' favorite issue: "fairness." It has been largely expelled from today's politics by two facts: the budget deficit that restricts programs of distributive justice, and skepticism about such programs in the aftermath of the Great Society.

Furthermore, the Quayle episode undermines (the Republicans richly deserve this consequence) the dreary Republican reliance on an ersatz patriotism issue. Speaker after speaker here harped on the fact that Michael Dukakis vetoed, for defensible constitutional reasons, a law requiring recitation in schools of the pledge of allegiance to the flag.

Quayle is expected to solidify recent Republican successes with young voters. That expectation probably is unrealistic.

Bush's "generational" appeal, using Quayle, may gall Michael Dukakis, who thinks he has cornered the market on parallels with 1960. Then, as now, two cautious presidential candidates were trying to sell themselves as agents of change in a complacent nation. Kennedy made much of his membership in a generation that was (as he said in his inaugural address) "born in this century." Bush, who has a son older than Quayle, introduced Quayle as someone born after the second world war. Time flies.

What does not fly is the notion that membership in a generation, not a demanding achievement, is a politically potent fact.

The 78 million Americans born between 1946 and 1964 comprise the largest generation in American history. They are approximately 60 percent of the eligible electorate this year. Between the end of the war and 1984, young voters were the most reliably Democratic voting group, other than blacks.

Suddenly, in 1984, voters under 30 became the Democrats' biggest problem. Among those voters, Mondale ran 18 points below his national average. But the fact that in 1984 the oldest man ever elected President did well with under-30 voters as the youngest man ever elected (Kennedy) should convince us that a candidate's age need not be a decisive factor.

Remember the prominence in 1960 of such "issues" as getting America "moving," improving American "prestige," closing the "missile gap" and protecting Quemoy and Matsu Islands? Today Dukakis is drooping on about his "competence" and "good jobs at good wages." Bush is praising the pledge of allegiance to the flag and promising to electrocute drug "kingpins" (and, perhaps, people who do not sufficiently love the pledge.) And attention is riveted on the search for a "smoking telephone call" two decades ago to the Indiana National Guard. Nineteen eighty-eight may make 1960 seem like an intellectual feast.

“He seemed to swell in the vacuum created by Reagan's retreat to the ranch.”

White House shuns furor

While Vice President George Bush tries to ride out the storm of his controversial choice of Sen. Dan Quayle as his running mate, the Western White House is taking the approach that the less said, the better.

White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater avoided the press as long as possible on the subject and then asserted that the questions surrounding Quayle's decision to join the National Guard at a time when he may have been drafted for the Vietnam War were "a media story that doesn't deserve comment."

Clearly the White House did not want to get too far out on a limb until it sees how the story will play in Florida.

Bush, whose judgment has been called into question on his first major decision — the choice of Quayle, a strong conservative — out of a field of veteran Republican leaders, has decided to go to the mat for Quayle.

Mainly, Bush has explained his selection of Quayle on the basis of his age, 41, which puts him in the "baby boom" class. But was that enough to qualify a man who is one heart beat away and could be catapulted into the presidency?

The speculation is that Bush wanted a neophyte, a politician who would be satisfactory to the conservative faction of the party, and who would be properly subservient to him.

Having been the ultimate team player himself, apparently often submerging his own views, Bush must have had a model in mind for the No. 2 spot and it could have been that he sought someone in his own image. He may have felt more comfortable with someone who came from a similar wealthy background who also would be acceptable to the business community.

The roles of president and vice president have always been a matter of on-the-job training. But Bush apparently had no trouble in adapting to the old rules: To get along, go along.

Even during President Reagan's illnesses, he remained circumspectly in the background, deferring to all the anxious White House aides.

Most of his vice presidential years has been spent on the road. Bush carried messages around the world for Reagan. He attended the major funerals, a routine duty for vice presidents. He also spent three or four days a week traveling around the country for political appearances.

Reagan has said that Bush always gave him "straight from the shoulder" advice, but so far the vice president has declined to reveal how he counseled Reagan when the president was preparing to sell arms to Iran in hopes of rescuing the American hostages in Lebanon.

Bush is seeking to emerge from the shadow of President Reagan and to be his own man. His acceptance speech at the GOP National Convention was a declaration of independence in some ways, but it also contained elements of pure adherence to Reagan policies.

He said he did not hate government and was all for public service. He also said he wanted to preside over a gentler, more compassionate country. Both remarks appeared to be drawing a line between Reagan's constant bashing of the government bureaucracy, and his attempt to curtail the social programs of the past.

On the other hand, the vice president stood four square with Reagan on the issues of banning abortion, rejecting gun control, supporting prayer in the schools, and the Pledge of Alliance.

“Every phase of his life will be explored and judged.”

Prices open slightly lower

United Press International

NEW YORK - Prices opened slightly lower today in moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which fell 15.82 Thursday, was down 1.77 to 2009.08 shortly after the market opened.

Declines led advances 392-324 among the 1,193 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Early turnover amounted to about 6,590,000 shares.

Concerns over higher inflation and a round of interest-rate hikes overseas Thursday combined to send stock prices lower in slow trading.

The market was pressured from the opening bell by a government report on the second quarter gross national product and a string of interest rate hikes Thursday in several European countries.

Harry Miller, portfolio analyst with Johnson, Lane, Space, Smith & Co. in Atlanta, blamed the decline on the negative implications of the rate hikes and on profit taking in the wake of Wednesday's 37-point rally.

"We are in an undecided market where those who watch tea leaves take advantage of short-term profits," Miller said. "We are not in an environment where rallies are sustainable."

Dollar drifts lower; gold, silver higher

United Press International

The dollar drifted lower today in light trading on major foreign currency markets. Gold was higher.

In earlier trading in the Far East, the dollar fell marginally against the Japanese yen, closing out the week at 133.50 yen, off 0.26 from 133.76 yen on Thursday.

The West German Central Bank announced Thursday a hike in the discount rate from 3 to 3.5 percent in a coordinated move with six other European central banks including the Bank of England and the Bank of France.

In reaction to the decision, which Bundesbank President Karl Otto Poehl described as "an adjustment" to international interest rates, operators on overseas markets sold the dollar to buy the West German marks and other European currencies.

In Tokyo, the mark firmed further against the dollar but lost ground slightly in late trading through profit-taking.

In Europe, the dollar opened at 1.86 West German marks in Frankfurt, down from Thursday's close of 1.865.

The dollar began the day in Zurich at 1.571 Swiss francs, down from 1.573.

In Paris the dollar also was lower at 6.3245 French francs, down from 6.39 and opened in Brussels at 39.725 Belgian francs, down from 39.85.

In Milan, the dollar opened at 1,381.75 lire, down from 1,389.9.

In London, the pound opened at $1.6945 compared with $1.696 on Thursday.

In early New York trading, the dollar was mixed against key foreign currencies in light trading.

Bush vies with Dukakis for Texas

United Press International

HOUSTON - The battle of Texas has been joined in full and Republican George Bush is playing on the favorite themes of his adopted home in a bid to short-circuit the Lone Star connection of the Democratic presidential ticket.

The vice president launched his side of the fight Thursday on a day trip from Houston to San Antonio, where in searing heat he stridently painted Democratic rival Michael Dukakis as a liberal unacceptable to Texans and promoted popular GOP issues such as financial breaks for the oil industry and no gun control.

Bush later declared confidently, "I will win Texas," though he conceded he would have to campaign hard primarily because Dukakis's running mate, vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen, is the state's senior senator.

The 29 electoral votes of Texas are considered crucial to the race for the White House, especially since Dukakis raised the stakes by naming Bentsen to the ticket. With that in mind, Bush plans to spend the next few days traveling around the Lone Star State, which he calls home despite his New England birth and childhood and his summer home on the coast of Maine.

Bush went to Texas to find his fortune in oil after World War II and later represented the state in Congress, Thursday, as he rode into the San Antonio rally on a river barge complete with mariachi band, he told several hundred supporters he would protect their interests better than Dukakis.

"I want to put some incentives back into our energy business, into the oil business," he said, "that will encourage drilling, encourage oil rigs running and encourage us to be less dependent on foreign oil."

Many oil industry breaks were curtailed in the 1986 tax reform bill, and Bush, who has taken issue with parts of that legislation, stressed again his desire to reduce the capital gains tax rate to encourage more investment.

Sweating profusely in nearly 100-degree heat, Bush hit Dukakis on a range of issues from gun control to national defense, and he continued his attack on the Democrat over the Pledge of Allegiance - again trying to make it appear that Dukakis is opposed to students reciting the declaration in school.

As Massachusetts governor, Dukakis vetoed legislation in 1977 that sought to force state teachers to lead students in the pledge, arguing that the Supreme Court had declared such requirements unconstitutional.

Campaigning in Pittsburgh Thursday, Dukakis chose not to repeat his tough response of Tuesday to Bush's repeated attacks on the issue of the pledge.

"I don't have any response to that (anymore)," he said. "I believe deeply in the Constitution of this country. When you put your hand up to take the oath, you take an oath to support and defend the Constitution."

Dukakis was willing, however, as he neared the end of a two-day swing through the industrial heartland, to take another shot at Bush for spurning a proposed Sept. 14 debate on defense and foreign policy at the U.S. Naval Academy.

Asked about the boons that met Bentsen Thursday when the senator tried to sell Democratic defense views at the Chicago convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Dukakis said pointedly, "There's going to be some people who agree with us and some who don't, and one reason for a campaign - and debates - on the issues of foreign policy and national security is to give the candidates an opportunity to exchange ideas, not at long range but face to face."

At an end-of-the-workday rally in downtown Pittsburgh's Market Square, the Democrat further criticized Republicans for avoiding the issues of the budget and trade deficits, rising interest rates and people without health insurance.

"This election isn't about meaningless labels and it's not about fancy economic theories," he said. "It's about jobs and schools and health care and a clean and wholesome environment in which we all can live. It's about an America that's strong abroad because it's strong here at home."

Dukakis started his day in Cleveland by hammering the administration's record on drug enforcement. "Zero tolerance for drugs begins in the Oval Office."

Bush, while attacking Dukakis, conspicuously never mentioned Bentsen by name in Texas.

about 1:30 p.m. Thursday. The plants weren't spotted from the air, so agents entered the property on foot about 4 p.m. and found eight large marijuana plants that had been uprooted.

Agents took those plants to the Seminole County Sheriff's Department and returned to search the scene again. By 8:30 p.m. agents had found more plants and stacked them in the front yard of James F. Kirkland Jr., whose property adjoins the lot where the plants were found, to be hauled away in two pickup trucks. Kirkland is not considered a suspect in the case at this time.

Kirkland, 68, of 3046 Truman Blvd. in the Lincoln Heights subdivision off Airport Boulevard, said it is a "disgrace" to him that the illegal crop was found 100 feet from his back door in woods he does not own.

Kirkland, who has a vegetable garden in his backyard, said he didn't know the illegal crop was there, although on a couple of occasions he has fired shots into the woods where he heard intruders.

The suspects have been identified, according to Harriett. The male suspect is 44 years old and the woman is 28 years old, according to police reports.

Harriett said that since the incident was not witnessed by a police officer, an arrest warrant charging cruelty to animals, a first-degree misdemeanor, must be pursued through the state attorney's office.

It out of sight after the agents were tipped to its location Wednesday.

The plants are estimated to be six to eight months old. They were well tended, but there was no elaborate watering system to support the crop. The plants are being held as evidence as the investigation continues.

Although he participated in the robbery, it was his brother, Clinton Jackson, who fired the fatal shot after Phillibert began to struggle. Florida law permits the execution of accomplices to murder even if they did not take part in the slaying.

Phillibert was found alive ten minutes after the shooting, clutching a $5 bill in his hand, but died before medical help could arrive.

Maximum sentence if convicted on a charge of cruelty to animals is one year in prison and a $5,000 fine, according to police. Harriett said he is confident the state attorney's office will act favorably on his recommendation to issue the warrants. Depending on the backlog at the state attorney's office, Harriett said the warrant process could take at least a week.

Personal income up in July

United Press International

WASHINGTON - Personal income rose a moderate 0.6 percent in July but people spent nearly all the money they gained, the Commerce Department reported Friday.

Personal income before taxes rose to a seasonally adjusted annual $4.1 trillion in July while spending rose 0.5 percent to $3.3 trillion, the department's Bureau of Economic Analysis said.

The bureau said personal income for June rose 0.7 percent, rather than the previously reported 0.6 percent increase.

Wages and salaries increased in all sectors in July.

Quayle comes out swinging

United Press International

ST. LOUIS - Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle is on the attack in his first solo campaign trip as the Republican nominee for vice president, ignoring questions about his own record so he can rake the Democrats.

Quayle accused Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, the Democratic presidential nominee, of an "anti-defense attitude" in a speech Wednesday night to the Enlisted Association of the National Guard.

The audience enthusiastically applauded Quayle, whose Guard service during the Vietnam War is at the heart of controversy surrounding his candidacy, when he defended the honor of the Guard as a vital part of America's armed forces.

"The National Guard never ran away from a fight. And by the way, Dan Quayle doesn't run away from a fight," he asserted.

Campaign spokesman David Prosperi said Quayle intends throughout his current tour to talk about the goals of his ticket mate, Vice President George Bush, and not to let his time be dominated by questions about how he got into the Indiana Guard in 1969 and thus avoided combat duty in Vietnam.

"I think we've got those issues behind us," Prosperi insisted.

The spokesman said Quayle might take questions from reporters today during a luncheon in Booneville or an appearance at the Missouri State Fair in Sedalia, but Quayle assiduously avoided all questions Wednesday as part of an effort to seize a new campaign direction.

There, questions raised since Bush selected Quayle last week have centered on whether the second-term senator was aided at age 22 by his wealthy, powerful publishing family in efforts to avoid combat. He has denied undue influence.

Prosperi said Quayle has made it clear that in 1969 he wanted to go to law school and the Guard was a way to combine schooling with national service.

Now 41, Quayle is a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee and a hawk on military affairs.

Sabotaged O-rings found, not shipped

SALT LAKE CITY - Someone apparently sabotaged several of the O-rings produced for space shuttle boosters, but officials say they are confident that none of the damaged rings were shipped to the factory that builds the rockets.

FBI and National Aeronautics and Space Administration investigators are investigating the case of razor-sharped silicon O-rings first discovered last June, company officials said Thursday.

HydraPak Inc., of West Jordan, Utah, "discovered during normal procedures in the manufacturing process certain space shuttle O-rings appeared to have received damage of a suspicious origin," said James Dockstader, company vice president for operations.

Flawed O-rings were blamed for the shuttle Challenger explosion Jan. 28, 1986, according to the presidential commission that investigated the disaster. All seven crew members were killed.

But Dockstader said that "no damaged O-rings were shipped to Morton Thiokol Inc., the manufacturer of the booster rockets for the space shuttle."

Parents, public want AIDS education

NEW YORK - While the vast majority of Americans believe public school students should be taught about AIDS, only one-fourth of those surveyed believe they should share classrooms with children suffering from the deadly disease, a new Gallup Poll shows.

The report, published Thursday, said 90 percent of the general public and 94 percent of public school parents believe in AIDS education in public schools, and 81 percent of the parents endorse instruction about "safe sex" practices.

But only 24 percent of the respondents to the survey opposed permitting AIDS-infected students to attend public schools, 57 percent approved and 19 percent were undecided, according to the report, titled "The 20th Annual Gallup Poll of the Public's Attitudes Toward the Public Schools."

In analyzing parents' overwhelming support of safe sex instruction, the report, published in the September issue of the educational journal Phi Delta Kappan, said, "Presumably most respondents understood this to be teaching the use of condoms."

There was wide division, though, on how early AIDS education should begin. The report said 40 percent of the respondents believe it should begin between the ages of 5 and 9 years; another 40 percent said it should begin between the ages of 10 and 12, while 11 percent believed such instruction should "wait until children are 13 or older."

Lawyers want protection from FBI

EL PASO, Texas - Lawyers for 311 Hispanic FBI agents suing the bureau for alleged racial discrimination said they and their clients need protection from retaliatory investigations by an agency that considers itself "above the law."

Antonio Silva, a plaintiff's attorney, said Thursday that the FBI is investigating him and his colleagues in an attempt to "ruin our careers."

He said a classified affidavit disappeared from the briefcase of another plaintiff's attorney, Hugo Rodriguez, on July 29 when they were in Miami interviewing clients and later turned up at the U.S. Justice Department.

Deng welcomes Japanese delegation

BEIJING - Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping today hailed a visit by Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita as the beginning of a "great new era" to end troubled ties between East Asia's major powers.

Deng shook hands with Takeshita at a meeting in the Great Hall of the People and, in a break from the usual brief exchange of pleasantries, spent several minutes chatting with the Japanese leader and members of his delegation before sitting down for formal talks.

Takeshita arrived Thursday on a trip seen as the climax of efforts to put Japan's potential for aid to China's modernization drive ahead of political and economic squabbles that have for years strained ties between the two nations.

Church mediator meets with Walesa

GDANSK, Poland - In the first sign communist authorities may be ready to talk with Lech Walesa, a church mediator delivered a message from the government and held five hours of talks with the Solidarity leader, union sources said.

The message was given to Walesa by Prof. Andrzej Stelmachowski, who was let through police cordons Thursday to enter the strikebound Lenin shipyard in Gdansk.

After meeting with Walesa for about five hours, Stelmachowski refused to answer questions on the status of the discussions.

"I am no prophet," the church mediator told reporters before leaving for Warsaw where church sources said he would meet with government leaders.

Workers in the only remaining bus depot on strike in Szczecin formed a team of negotiators and said they were ready for talks, but the manager of the transport company said he would agree only if two advisers, both lawyers, were dropped from the negotiating team, activist sources said.

Shamir denies deportations are policy

JERUSALEM - Israeli leaders deny they have a policy of deporting Palestinians accused of security offenses and say U.S.-Israeli relations remain strong despite harsh U.S. criticism of the expulsions.

"We are not conducting a policy of expulsion," Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir told state-run Israel Radio Thursday. "The United States is not responsible for order here, we are responsible. The United States recognizes this and therefore there is no need to discuss a halt or a change."

The prime minister said the deportations would not hurt U.S.-Israeli ties because the special relationship between the two countries is "such that we can have a difference of opinion."

In the occupied territories Thursday, six men posing as Israeli security agents beat to death a former police employee in what authorities said was a revenge killing in a family feud.

But Palestinian sources said Said Haziza, 34, of the West Bank village of Yatta, may have been killed by residents who suspected he was working for Israeli authorities. Police confirmed Haziza was authorized to carry a gun.

At least two Palestinians suspected of collaborating with Israeli authorities have been killed since the start of the Palestinian uprising Dec. 9.

Spys dealt hefty blow to NATO war plans

United Press International

BONN, West Germany - While it is too early to assess the impact of a newly uncovered military spy ring that passed secrets to Moscow, some experts are comparing it to the Walker family spy scandal of 1985, one of the most damaging espionage cases in U.S. history.

Officials said Thursday the latest spy ring, led by a retired U.S. Army sergeant who recruited another active duty American soldier, fed NATO and U.S. plans for the defense of Western Europe to Hungarian agents, who passed the secrets on to the Soviet Union.

The ring reportedly included at least eight people in West Germany and Sweden.

The State Department and the Pentagon refused to comment on the case Thursday, but one U.S. intelligence official in Washington said, "It's an ongoing investigation and extremely sensitive ... involving information classified at a high level."

While intelligence sources in Washington warned it was too early to assess the impact of the ring's activities, they noted that some military experts were comparing its impact to the Walker case.

Former U.S. Navy Warrant Officer John Walker Jr. sold vital documents and information on secret military codes to the Soviets for 16 years, recruiting his brother, son and a Navy colleague to obtain documents after he retired.

West German federal prosecutor Kurt Rebmann said officials in Karlsruhe arrested suspects in the latest case on Tuesday, including the retired U.S. sergeant, a 20-year army veteran who had access to secret documents and defense plans for seven years.

In Washington, the Justice Department identified the sergeant as Clyde Lee Conrad, 51, who has lived in West Germany since retiring from the Army in September 1985.

Military records showed Conrad studied German for nine months at the Defense Language Institute in Monterey, Calif., before being assigned in November 1980 to the 8th Infantry Division in Bad Kreuznach, West Germany, where he stayed until retiring.

The records released by the Pentagon do not list Conrad's job, but an Army spokesman said he worked as a liaison with other U.S. units. The records list Conrad's military training as infantryman and administration specialist.

Rebmann said Conrad recruited another soldier to sell secrets after he retired from the Army and used several people in Germany and Sweden as couriers.

Persian Gulf foes break after first round of talks

United Press International

GENEVA - The Iranian and Iraqi foreign ministers conducted overnight consultations with their governments before a second day of unprecedented direct talks today on a permanent peace settlement in the Persian Gulf war.

A first session Thursday lasted 5 hours and 15 minutes and was described as "good" and "serious" by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, who was in the mediator's chair.

Foreign Ministers Ali Akbar Velayati of Iran and Tariq Aziz of Iraq, each with 14 aides and advisers, faced each other from tables set eight paces apart in the ornate Council Chamber of the U.N.'s European headquarters.

The opening meeting consisted of a 2-hour, 10-minute session in which the Gulf enemies addressed each other directly, as well as Perez de Cuellar and his five aides.

The full plenary was then suspended and for 3 hours and 5 minutes the U.N. chief executive shuttled between two smaller side rooms housing the separate delegations.

Perez de Cuellar told reporters at the conclusion of day one that there had been "good discussions," and that "the two parties are serious and really interested in finding a solution."

It was "only normal" that Aziz and Velayati wanted to consult their leaders in Baghdad and Tehran before reassembling today for another full plenary session, he said.

Perez de Cuellar said procedural issues had been "settled" and that the two sides had got down to substantive business.

U.N. spokesman Francois Giulliani described the atmosphere as "businesslike" and disclosed that Perez de Cuellar had asked both sides to keep the talks private and avoid detailed public statements.

Aziz told reporters beforehand that Iraq would negotiate "in good faith" and the outcome of the expected protracted negotiations depended on Iran also showing "good faith and seriousness."

Velayati for his part similarly said Iran wanted "a just settlement" and that success or failure depended on Baghdad.

Perez de Cuellar opened the talks by welcoming acceptance by the two countries of the Aug. 20 cease-fire and his invitation to meet in Geneva. He said he hoped the negotiations would be "constructive."

The U.N. team spoke in English, the Iranians in Farsi and the Iraqis in Arabic, Giulliani said.

It was uncertain how long the talks would continue at foreign minister level and with Perez de Cuellar in the chair.

Lopez, Okamoto tied at 5-under

BUFORD, Ga. — Just about the time the other lady golfers figured Nancy Lopez was going to stay home with her children and give them a better shot at LPGA loot, the Hall of Famer returned to the Tour with a vengeance.

Lopez, who made only four tournament appearances in 1986 when she gave birth to her second daughter, started back last year when she won two tournaments and a seventh-best $204,823. This year, she's playing like the Nancy Lopez of old.

Lopez, who has won three tournaments and a second-best $289,288 so far this year, was her vintage self Thursday when she pored five strokes off par in a four-hole span enroute to a 5-under-par 67 and a tie with defending champion Ayako Okamoto of Japan in the opening round of the LPGA World Championship.

Krishnan downs Ho at NYNEX

RYE BROOK, N.Y. — Second-seeded Ramesh Krishnan and fourth-seeded Milan Srejber each swept to second-round victories Thursday at the NYNEX Open.

Krishnan of Madras, India, defeated Tommy Ho of Winter Haven, 6-2, 6-1. Ho, 15, had become the youngest player to win a Grand Prix match with his first-round triumph over Matt Anger.

Srejber of Prague, Czechoslovakia, downed Libor Pimek of Ostrava, Czechoslovakia, 6-4, 6-1.

In other action, Jeremy Bates of Solihull, England, beat Pete Sampras of LaQuinta, Calif., 6-7(3), 6-3, 6-3.

Omar Camporese of Bologna, Italy, and Diego Nargiso of Monte Carlo, Monaco, edged Krishnan and John Ross of Greenville, Fla., 6-7 (5), 7-5, 7-5 in the completion of a doubles match suspended Wednesday night due to rain.

Hawaii, Taiwan in finals

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (UPI) — Fong-Am Tsai struck out 12 in a six-hitter and Hsu-Ching Hsiang hit three doubles Thursday, powering Tai Chung of Taiwan to a 16-1 rout of Gloucester Bay, Nova Scotia in the semifinals of the Little League Baseball World Series.

Taiwan, with an 11-1 All-Star Tournament record, will face Pearl City, Hawaii, Saturday for the championship. Pearl City scored five runs in the second inning to defeat Spring, Texas 5-4 in a contest marked by six errors, six wild pitches and three hit batters.

Tsai walked two, and lost his shutout in the fifth inning on a double steal. Losing pitcher Gerard Hanrahan stole home as John Young stole second.

Taiwan scored four runs placed five of its first six batters on base, three of them on hits, and took a 4-0 lead in the first inning. The Taiwanese hit three home runs and totaled 18 hits and 38 baserunners off four pitchers.

Michigan quarterback returns

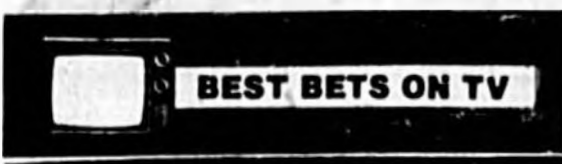

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Michigan quarterback Demetrius Brown was allowed to return to the team Thursday after being notified that he passed a summer school class.

George Hoey, the school's academic affairs director, said Brown took one liberal arts course this summer. However, he would not reveal Brown's final grade.

Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler announced last week that Brown — last year's starting quarterback — was not allowed on the team at the start of fall practice due to low grades.

Hoey said Brown was not forced to take the summer class to maintain his eligibility, but took it to put himself further toward completion of sports management and communication.

Bills top Bucs, 14-7

Tampa Bay closes preseason with 0-4 record

United Press International

NASHVILLE — Jim Kelly tossed a 1-yard touchdown pass to Jamie Mueller Thursday night to give the Buffalo Bills a 14-7 win over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in a battle of two of the NFL's winless teams in the preseason.

Kelly completed 9 of 12 passing attempts for 98 yards and, like Tampa Bay's Vinny Testaverde, threw one touchdown in two quarters of play.

Testaverde completed 6 of 16 attempts with three interceptions, two of them in the second quarter.

The second-year quarterback from Miami tossed a 41-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Frank Pillow streaking down the left sideline with 1:24 left in the first quarter for the Bucs' only touchdown.

Pillow, a rookie from Tennessee State in Nashville who is trying to earn a spot on the Bills' squad, caught two passes for 52 yards.

Buffalo, in a drive that started on the their own 14-yard line, tied the game at 7-7 in the second quarter by moving downfield with a mixture of runs and passes.

On the drive's 13th play, running back Thurman Thomas spotted an opening in the right side of the Tampa defense and scampered 7 yards for the score with 9:17 left in the half.

On the eighth play of Tampa's next possession, Buffalo inside linebacker Ray Bentley picked off a Testaverde pass at the Tampa 47 and returned it 2 yards, setting up the game-winning touchdown.

Kelly then connected on five straight passes, hitting Mueller, a fullback, breaking to the right in the endzone for the winning score.

"The defense made some big plays," said Buffalo head coach Marv Levy. "They didn't give away as much as they did last week. They started sluggishly as they have during this preseason but they bailed us out quite a few times."

Tampa coach Ray Perkins said after the game he's still not sure how ready his team is for the regular season.

"My big question is the first unit has not played an entire game. Are we in as good a shape as I think we are to play a whole game against Philadelphia next week?"

Tampa closed its preseason schedule at 0-4 while Buffalo improved to 1-3.

PATS VS. BENGALS

FOXBORO, Mass. — For the New England Patriots, Friday night's exhibition game with Cincinnati will determine final roster cuts. For the Bengals, the game could be a valuable confidence-builder for a team needing to believe it can win.

In 1987, Cincinnati stumbled to a 4-11 record despite having the league's fifth-ranked offense and the eighth-ranked defense. During one stretch, the hard-luck Bengals lost six straight games by a total of 17 points.

But in the pre-season, they have won three of four and Coach Sam Wyche says his team is preparing for the Patriots as if the game were a regular-season matchup.

"This week has been a rehearsal for a game situation," said Wyche. In the last year of a five-year contract, "I want the players to feel whatever they go through to get ready for a regular game."

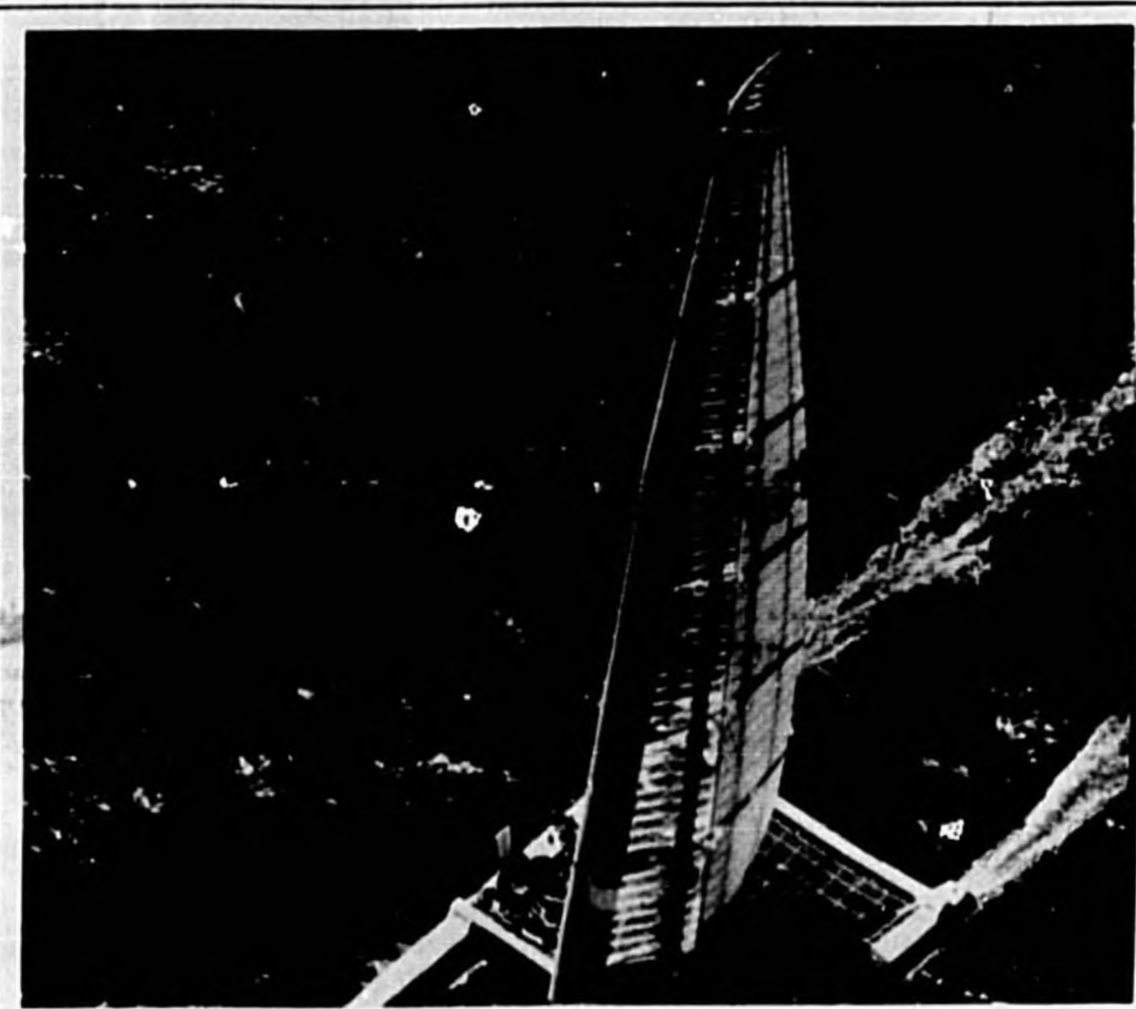

Wyche's goal for the Bengals' fifth and final exhibition game is "to play to win, with all the players."

Patriots Coach Raymond Berry is unconcerned about exhibition game results. While he has been testing new players and experimenting with experienced personnel playing out of position, New England has lost two of three in the pre-season.

Steelers' owner Rooney, 87, dies

United Press International

PITTSBURGH — City flags flew at half-staff today to mourn Arthur J. Rooney Sr. — Pittsburgh Steelers' owner, NFL founder and one of the most popular figures in American sports — who died of stroke complications. He was 87.

The city grieved for the NFL patriarch, who died Thursday in his sleep at 7:45 a.m. at Mercy Hospital. Eight days earlier, Rooney had suffered a stroke in his offices at Three Rivers Stadium. He lapsed into a coma Monday.

Football figures, fans and friends nationwide sent "many cards, telegrams and flowers" to the team's offices to honor the late Rooney during his hospitalization, said team spokesman Dan Edwards. Condolence messages continued at the same pace after his death.

"Our switchboard was flooded with calls all day. It was really non-stop," he said. "It was from a lot of fans, a lot of reporters, media, a lot of friends of the family and the organization, football people. They expressed condolences and wanted to send flowers and donations."

Doctors had said Rooney's chances for survival were poor. The stroke, on the left side of his brain, had partially paralyzed Rooney's right side and slurred his speech before he became comatose.

Services for Rooney will be held Saturday at St. Peter's Church in Pittsburgh. Visitation and a removal ceremony, an Irish custom, are scheduled Friday.

The family did not want to disclose which funeral home handled the arrangements, Edwards said.

Rooney was equally close-mouthed about many benevolent activities in Pittsburgh, Edwards said.

"There were so many groups and organizations and people that he gave to, not only financially but of his time, it couldn't be documented," he said. "He gave money to people that no one ever knew about."

"None of the Rooneys are the type of people who draw attention to themselves," the spokesman said. "He really set that example. He was an extremely generous and charitable man. When he saw need, he would give, without exception. No person was too small for him to give them time or attention."

The Steelers' "Chief," as he was known affectionately, "loved to spend time with doormen, taxicab drivers, the grounds crew at the stadium, with anyone," Edwards said. "It didn't matter. Titles or position, income, made no difference. To him, people were people."

Rooney was born Jan. 27, 1901, in Coulterville, Pa. He was the oldest of nine children, including six boys and three girls. The Rooney family moved to Pittsburgh when he was 1 year old, and lived for the rest of his life on the city's North Side near the site of what is now Three Rivers Stadium, home of the Steelers.

DiMarco wins at amateur

United Press International

HOT SPRINGS, Va. — Chris DiMarco, a Lake Brantley High graduate representing Heathrow Country Club, defeated Winter Springs' Dennis Postlewait, 5 and 3, Thursday at the 88th U.S. Amateur Championship.

DiMarco will now go up against Buddy Alexander, the 1986 U.S. Amateur champion, who downed Kevin Wentworth, of Manteca, Calif. Alexander is the head coach of the University of Florida golf team; DiMarco is a member of the team.

Also on Thursday, Billy Mayfair's amateur golf career ended three days earlier than he had hoped.

Mayfair, the defending champion and the nation's top-ranked amateur, was upset by Wes

Tuck Thursday in the first round of match play in the 88th U.S. Amateur Championship, ending his quest to become only the third golfer in 50 years to win back-to-back U.S. Amateur titles.

Tuck, a former member of the Auburn University golf team, ousted Mayfair 4-and-2 in cool, sunny conditions at the 6,586-yard, par-70 Cascade course at the Hot Springs Golf and Tennis Club, advancing to Friday's second round of match play. The match play semifinals will be held Saturday and the final Sunday.

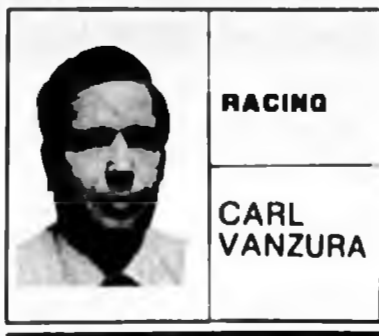

Mayfair fully planned to be playing on Sunday to join Jay Sigel (1982 and 1983) and E. Harvie Ward Jr. (1955 and 1956) to repeat as U.S. Amateur champion in the past five decades.

"I'm disappointed I went out in the first round. I wanted to get a few rounds under my belt," Mayfair said.

Wallace is the show's anchor who is known for his hard-hitting style.

"We'll split at the end of the year," said Eddie Wood. "I'm not sure what is going to happen, but we're just not going to be together after this year. I really don't care to offer reasons and I would like to keep the split clean and friendly," Petty said. "I haven't done anything yet about the future, all I know is I'll finish this season with the Woods."

Broncos nip Colts — Eagles, Cards triumph

United Press International

At Denver, John Elway threw two touchdown passes to Ricky Nattiel before leaving the game with a slight shoulder strain, and Indianapolis fumbled twice inside Denver's 10-yard line Thursday night, helping the Broncos to a 21-20 preseason triumph over the Colts.

Dean Biasucci's 55-yard field goal attempt on the final play went wide right.

Elway appeared to suffer a right shoulder injury on a 30-yard pass to Vance Johnson early in the third quarter. He remained in the game for one more play, throwing a 12-yard strike to Nattiel to give Denver a 14-6 edge.

Elway's injury did not appear to be serious, and he should be available for Denver's regular-season opener Sept. 4 against Seattle.

The Colts' Eric Dickerson ran for 128 yards on 17 carries and caught five passes for 68 yards before leaving after three quarters. Dickerson's 57-yard touchdown run with 4:09 left in the third quarter cut the margin to 14-13.

Eagles 27, Lions 9

At Pontiac, Mich., Mike Quick scored on a 49-yard touchdown pass and Keith Byars ran 17 yards for first-half scores Thursday night to spark the Philadelphia Eagles to a 27-9 victory over Detroit, capping the Lions' worst preseason record in club history.

Philadelphia ended its preseason schedule with a 2-2 record; Detroit 0-4. The Lions' previous worst exhibition-season record was 0-4-1 in 1966.

Quick's 49-yard touchdown pass from Randall Cunningham at 10:22 of the first quarter gave the Eagles a 10-0 lead.

Chuck Long passed 20 yards to Pete Mandley at 4:04 of the second quarter, cutting the Lions' deficit to 10-7. Byars ran for his score at 12:09 of the second to give the Eagles a 17-7 halftime lead.

Cardinals 41, Chiefs 21

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Vai Sikahema returned a punt 61 yards for a touchdown and three Phoenix quarterbacks threw scoring passes Thursday night to lift the Cardinals to a 41-21 victory over the Kansas City Chiefs.

The Cardinals, making their first visit to Missouri since their March 15 move from St. Louis, concluded the preseason 1-3. They recorded only their seventh preseason victory over the Chiefs in 21 years.

Kansas City, bidding for its first unbeaten preseason since 1969, finished 2-1-1.

Cardinals starter Neil Lomax threw his only touchdown pass of the preseason, Cliff Stoudt and Tom Tupa added scoring passes for Phoenix.

Stoudt put the Cardinals ahead for good 28-21 with five minutes remaining in the third quarter. He directed a 13-play drive that took 7:40 and culminated in his 10-yard TD pass to Jay Novacek.

RUZEK READY TO RETURN

Placekicker Roger Ruzek, who has been a holdout from the Dallas Cowboys' training camp since July 21, said Thursday night he would come back for the same contract given to kicker Jess Atkinson, who was released by the team last week.

During contract negotiations between the Cowboys and Ruzek last Thursday, his agent, Bucky Woy, proposed a one-year deal worth $136,000 plus incentives. Dallas rejected the proposal and Ruzek returned home to Ogden, Utah.

The $136,000 would have matched Atkinson's contract, which the Cowboys assumed when they claimed Atkinson on waivers from Washington. Dallas released Atkinson last Thursday.

The Cowboys have offered Ruzek a four-year deal that averages $128,000 a season.

Ruzek said Thursday night he would accept the terms of Atkinson's contract and end his holdout, which is costing him $1,000 a day.

"My representatives and myself have worked hard day in and day out to try and resolve this thing and have come close a couple of times," he said. "I'm here in town and I want to play football. I want to be a part of this team."

"I'm willing to take Jess Atkinson's contract. I'm tired of banging heads."

Woy said Ruzek would be "perfectly willing" to accept Atkinson's contract and play this season.

Reds' Brown wins in debut

United Press International

A 24-year-old right-hander making his major league debut Thursday night lifted the Cincinnati Reds to their high point of the season.

"He gave us a big lift," Reds Manager Pete Rose said after Keith Brown limited St. Louis to four hits and one run over seven innings for a 4-1 victory over the Cardinals. "He was in and out, up and down, and had good off-speed stuff."

Cincinnati moved four games over .500 (65-61) for the first time this year and closed within 2 1/2 games of second-place San Francisco and Houston, and seven games of first-place Los Angeles in the National League West.

"I was throwing pretty well, getting my off-speed pitches over," said Brown, who was recalled from Nashville of the American Association (AA) earlier in the day. "Yes, I'm a little surprised at doing so well. I go for ground balls, not a lot of strikeouts."

Brown, 9-1 for Double-A Chattanooga and 6-3 with Nashville this year, struck out three and walked two, and gave up a sixth-inning homer to Willie McGee. John Franco finished, earning his league-high 27th save in his 28th opportunity this season and lowering his ERA to 1.30 in 55 appearances.

"I got it up too high on McGee, out over the plate, and he really hit it, but I'm happy about the way I pitched and my family and I enjoyed the win," said Brown, whose wife and parents flew in from California for the game.

Defensive help helped Brown out of a first-inning problem. McGee and Pedro Guerrero singled, but Kal Daniels threw out Guerrero at second. After walking Tom Brunansky, Brown induced a popup from Terry Pendleton, and retired the next 10 straight, eighth on ground balls.

"He's a pitcher, not a thrower," Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog said. "and he was pretty poised."

THURSDAY'S BEST

AMERICAN LEAGUE
 ● Rob Deer, Brewers, 7 for 4, double, homer, 3 RBIs
NATIONAL LEAGUE
 ● Keith Brown, Reds, gets victory in major league debut
 ● Ryne Sandberg, Cubs, 3 for 4, homer, 2 runs

Greg Mathews, 2-4, who returned from the disabled list Aug. 16, walked six and gave up four runs in 4 1/3 innings.

In Thursday's only other National League game, Chicago whipped Atlanta 6-1.

In the American League, Milwaukee dumped New York 4-1.

Cubs 6, Braves 1

At Atlanta, Calvin Schirra '41 struck out a career-high 12 in an eight-hitter and Ryne Sandberg homered to lead Chicago Schiraldi, 8-8, improved to 4-0 in his last six starts with his second complete game of the year. German Jimenez, 1-5, took the loss.

Brewers 4, Yankees 1

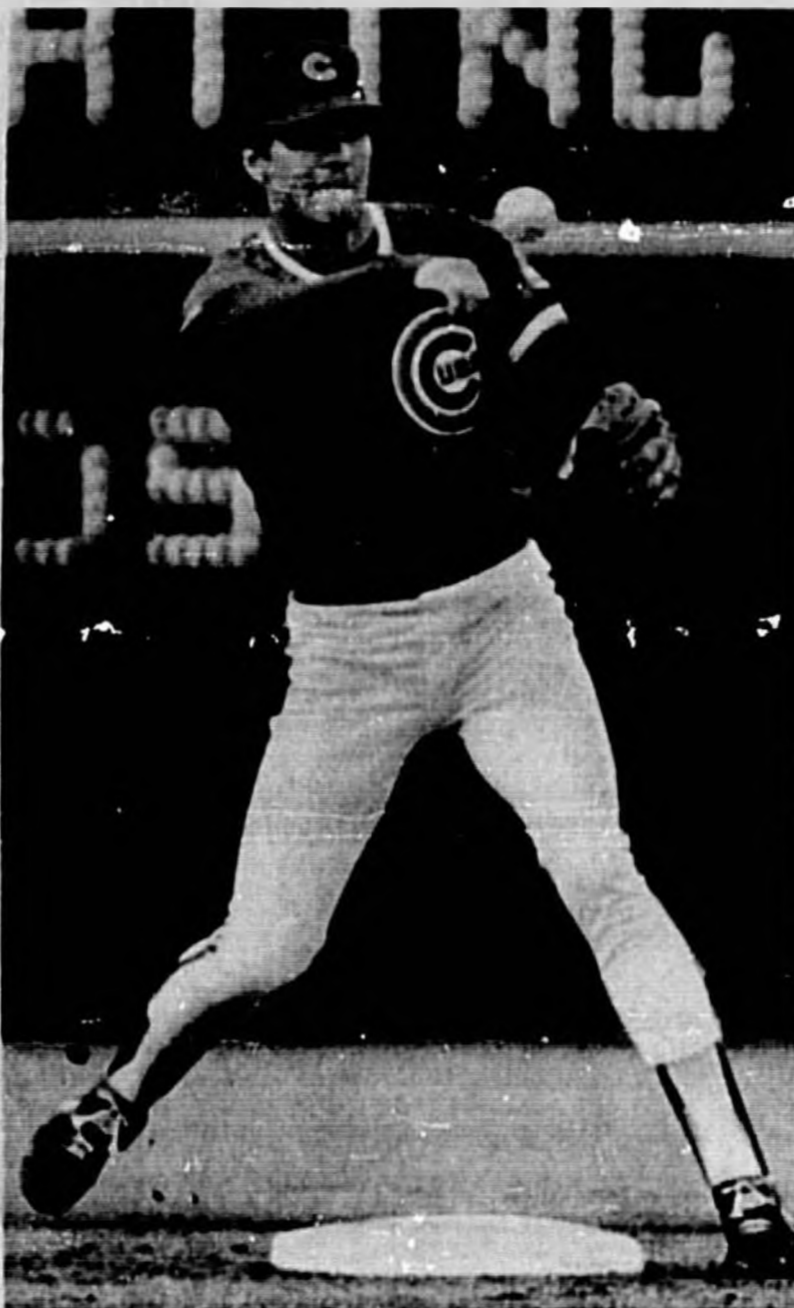

At Milwaukee, Ted Higuera threw a three-hitter and retired the final 19 batters in order, and Rob Deer drove in three runs with a home run and a double to pace the Brewers. Higuera, 11-8, and 9-2 career against the Yankees, struck out nine in his fourth straight victory and seventh complete game.

BASEBALL CENTRAL

Outfielder Mike Young, acquired by the Milwaukee Brewers Wednesday from the Philadelphia Phillies for Triple-A pitcher Alex Madrid, was expected to report to the Brewers Friday.

"He's anxious to get here and he's happy to be back in the American League," Manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "We can use him in left field or as the designated hitter. When he's not starting, he gives us extra pop off the bench from both the left and right sides."

Young, who hit 28 home runs with 81 RBI in 1985 as a rookie with the Baltimore Orioles, was batting .226 with one home run and 14 RBI in 75 games this season with the Phillies.

Milwaukee will have to make a roster move before Friday's game against the Detroit Tigers to make room for Young.

Jeffrey Leonard, coming off a five-strikeout performance Wednesday against Cleveland, was not in the lineup Thursday.

"His shoulder is a little sore," Trebelhorn said. "He went into the wall on (Joe) Carter's double, and he hit on the point of his shoulder. He's not 100-percent yet."

Leonard's strikeouts Wednesday did play into the decision, however.

"He doesn't hit well during the day. He can't see the ball real well," Trebelhorn said. "I think he's hitting about .194 during day games."

Cubs right-hander Mike Bielecki was hospitalized Wednesday in Chicago with a viral infection, and will miss his Friday scheduled start.

Reggie wants to play for Yankees

United Press International

NEW YORK — Reggie Jackson, who led New York to two World Series championships, has approached the Yankees about coming out of retirement for the stretch run.

Jackson, instrumental in the Yankees' World Series triumphs in 1977 and 1978, has contacted owner George Steinbrenner through agent Bill Goodstein, who also represents Yankees re-signer Dave Righetti. Jackson may play at Triple-A Columbus to prepare for his comeback. The Clippers' season concludes Wednesday.

Goodstein, who has represented Jackson in business matters, chanced to meet Jackson Saturday in a New York restaurant, and proposed the idea. Sunday, Jackson authorized Goodstein to approach Steinbrenner, which he did Monday morning.

Steinbrenner, who signed Jackson as a free agent for the 1977 season and allowed him to sign with the California Angels as a free agent in 1981, promised a decision within a few days.

"I have not been told anything from our people," Yankees media relations director Harvey Greene said. Last season, Jackson played for the Oakland Athletics, and hit 15 homers to bring his 21-season career total to 563, sixth on the all-time list.

In Game 6 of the 1977 Series against the Los Angeles Dodgers, Jackson hit home runs on the first pitch of three consecutive at-bats to tie Babe Ruth's record and power the Yankees to their 21st championship. The following year, he helped New York overcome a 14-game deficit to win the American League East and again defeat the Dodgers in the World Series.

GUERRERO DEAL
ST. LOUIS — The trade for Pedro Guerrero has begun paying dividends for the St. Louis Cardinals.

"You can see how his presence has affected the team in the games he has played so far," St. Louis shortstop Ozze Smith said. "Look how many more runs we've been scoring."

The longtime Dodger came to St. Louis last week in the trade that sent pitcher John Tudor to Los Angeles.

Before Guerrero's arrival, St. Louis averaged just over three runs a game and had been shut out 15 times. However, in the last seven games since St. Louis was shut out 1-0 in Guerrero's debut, the Cardinals have averaged five runs a game, scoring 10 runs once and seven runs two other times.

Guerrero, 32, is hitting .250 in 28 at-bats and has driven in seven runs.

"I know that's what I'm supposed to do," he said. "I know what my job will be here, and that's to drive in runs."

Still, Guerrero is feeling the sting of being traded after playing in Los Angeles the last decade.

"It's tough to be traded after being in one place for so long," he said. "But the game is still played the same, so I won't have any trouble. Besides, I like it here. And it makes it easier still being in the National League. If I had to play in the American League, I wouldn't know any of the players or the pitchers."

Guerrero said he likes playing for Whitey Herzog, calling him one of the best managers in the game.

"He's a good hitter," Herzog said. "He's still playing a little hurt, but you can see what he's meant to this club already."

Guerrero is playing first base. Contrary to reports of his weak fielding, he has been more than adequate at the position. "I've always thought his best positions were first base and left field," Herzog said. "In LA, they used him at third base because they wanted to get all those bats in the lineup."

With St. Louis, Guerrero has found a home at first base, where the Cardinals had gone through seven different starters this season before his arrival.

"I don't care where I play," said the Dominican native. "I can play a lot of positions, but I just want to play some here because I love the game."

That wasn't the case in Los Angeles. He planned to take the free-agent avenue this winter before the trade and his signing a three-year contract with St. Louis.

"If I was a free agent, this place was my first choice," he said.

So why did the Cardinals give up their top pitcher to acquire his bat?

"We were afraid he might be traded to another team or be lured away by more money elsewhere," St. Louis General Manager Dal Maxvill said.

Wallace looks for improvement

Busch 500 runs Saturday night

United Press International

BRISTOL, Tenn. — Rusty Wallace must improve his driving on NASCAR's short tracks to win his first Winston Cup championship.

The Fenton, Mo., native leads the Winston Cup standings, 21 points ahead of Bill Elliott. He twice finished fourth in the early-season four-race swing through the short-track schedule.

A short track is less than one mile, such as the .533-mile track at Bristol International Raceway, site of Saturday night's Busch 500.

Qualifying for the Busch 500 will be held Friday night and Saturday, with the first 15 starters determined Friday and the rest of the 30-car field filled in the day of the race. In addition, there will be qualifying Friday for that evening's Tri-City Pontiac 200 race for Busch Grand National cars.

While the big tracks in Talladega, Ala., Daytona Beach, and Brooklyn, Mich., generate fast speeds, it is on the short tracks where the Winston Cup title is generally decided. Since 1980, the NASCAR driver with the best overall performance on the short tracks has won the Winston Cup championship.

Rusty Wallace is seeking the Winston Cup championship this season but must improve his performance on short tracks in order to do so.

One such track is the Bristol Raceway, site of Saturday night's Busch 500.

"It's almost a third of the season," Wallace said of the eight short-track races. "You can't afford not to run well there and have any hope to win the title."

Wallace's crew chief, Barry Dodson, is more direct.

"These short-track races, beginning Saturday night, are critical," he said. "There is no other word that describes these four races better."

Elliott won the spring race at Bristol for the first short-track win of his career, and hopes his improved short-track program will help him become the first Ford driver since David Pearson in 1969 to win the driving championship.

Dale Earnhardt, bidding for his third straight Winston Cup title, is in third place this year and is the defending champion in the Busch 500. NASCAR's only night race, Earnhardt dominated the short tracks last year, winning six times and finishing second twice.

"You can't over stress the importance of those races," Earnhardt said. "Sure, there's an intimidation factor there. When you roll off the truck and you're the car to beat week after week, people start making mistakes when they try to chase you down."

This year, Earnhardt has faltered in some races

Birkbeck's stock rises

United Press International

MILWAUKEE — Early this season, Milwaukee Brewers right-hander Mike Birkbeck played a role similar to that of a pinch hitter: he had to be ready to produce, but wasn't sure when.

The fifth starter to begin the season, Birkbeck started only occasionally, and floundered because of that. After spending a month at Triple-A Denver this summer, his starts have become more pleasure than pressure.

"Basically, I tried to make my whole season during the course of one game," Birkbeck said of his problems earlier this season. "That's putting a lot of pressure on myself, because I knew I was on the bubble and I didn't handle the situation very well, mentally or physically."

"But I made some adjustments in Denver with my mechanics, and it's helped me quite a bit, especially out of the stretch. Guys don't steal as much, and I've made more quality pitches."

Birkbeck got off to a bad start in the Brewers home opener against the New York Yankees, giving up six runs and balking three times in 1 1/3 innings. It didn't get much better for the 27-year-old, who was sent to Denver June 2 after posting a 2-5 record with a 6.13 ERA.

Since returning to Milwaukee July 2, however, Birkbeck has a 7-1 record with a 3.41 ERA, including an initial six-game winning streak. Birkbeck, among others, claims infrequent work hurt him early. "I wasn't pitching. I was a man without a role."

I think that your son-in-law is probably old enough to make his own decisions about hygiene. Why bother yourself about his preferences? WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

After South had made his takeout double, North's cue bid asked him to bid a suit. Why then did he overlook diamonds to bid hearts? The answer to that is simply in the game-scoring at bridge. Game in a major requires 10 tricks, but game in a minor requires 11 tricks. Consequently players abort searching out a minor-suit fit when trying for a game. Not that a cue bid by the responding hand is necessarily a game force, here, if North had simply raised two hearts to three, South would certainly be free to pass. But North had plenty of wherewithal to go right to game once the heart fit had been established.

dummy might be found with the king and two small clubs. He also had it in the back of his mind that giving the appearance of holding only a doubleton club might be to his advantage. With the jack led, East overlooked with his queen and played the king and ace. On the third club, what was South to do? If West had only two clubs, ruffing low would lose a trick. If he ruffed high, there was still a good chance that the defenders' trumps would split 3-2. So playing the percentages, declarer ruffed with the heart jack. That scuttled the contract. Congratulations to West on an imaginative opening lead!

James Jacoby's books, Jacoby on Bridge and Jacoby on Card Games, written with his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, are now available at bookstores. Both are published by Pharos Books.

HOROSCOPE

What the day will bring...

By Bernice Hede Osoi
YOUR BIRTHDAY
August 27, 1988

In the year ahead you may find yourself involved in several enterprises, each different. One will have legitimate promise, whereas the others might just keep you busy and anxious.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Affairs could end up in a muddled state today because you may start several things and not properly follow through. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which are governing you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) To be on the safe side today it's best you rely upon yourself and not others. Favors you request could be ignored or poorly handled.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Try not to get too many people involved in today's plans. If you do, everyone will want to project their own ideas and your own could be overshadowed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It's going to be difficult to please everybody today. You may have to do so if caught in the middle.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Give others a chance to express their own thoughts to day, even if their views oppose yours. They could have some valid points that you might find helpful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be wary if a promotional scheme is presented to you today by an entrepreneur with a poor track record. It could be that nothing worthwhile is being promoted.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Guard against impulses to make commitments to others you won't take seriously - but they will. There will be a day of reckoning down the line.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

Guard against inclinations to start more projects than you'll be able to finish. In order to use time productively, you must have a good game plan.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The way you conduct yourself socially will be reviewed later by some of your friends. Be sure the impressions you make are favorable.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Favorable results are questionable today, because you may have tendencies to stop when the finish line is in sight. Unfortunately, near-misses count for nothing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You could be too glib for your own good today. There's a chance a glib friend may sell you on some unsound ideas. Don't be easily impressed.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) There are indications you might not make the most of the opportunities presented to you today. You may have blinders on regarding their true values.

Get stuck on prickly cacti

Cacti are a group of plants that are not only easy to grow but offer a variety of shapes, colors and forms. They can be grown in any sunny, well drained area and require little maintenance. They make excellent house plants, and many hardy varieties may be grown outside.

The cactus family (Cactaceae) is one of the most striking, distinctive, diversified and specialized of plant families. It includes about 2,000 species, all are perennial and succulent. Their usually conspicuous flowers are so different from those of all other plant families that the cacti are unique without any obvious relationship to other plants.

The distinctiveness of the cactus family shows itself not only in the flower structure but also in a characteristic absent in all other plant families. This is the spine, cushion, or areole—a pit or cavity. Whether or not spines are present, all cacti have areoles. This is one way of distinguishing them; for these areoles differ in structure on different kinds of cacti.

The question is asked, "Is this plant a cactus or a succulent?" This question is nonsensical because cacti are succulents. True cacti are members of the botanical family Cactaceae and are distinguished from the succulent members of other plant families such as Euphorbiaceae by the structure of the flowers and the presence of the areoles on cacti. It therefore makes equally poor sense to call all succulents cacti. The question should be, "Is this plant a cactus or some other succulent?"

Cacti require a sunny location with good drainage. They should be potted only in pots that have drainage holes. Replacing the top inch of soil with gravel is not only decorative but may also keep the plant from rotting at the base. A potting media of equal volumes of coarse sand, peat, and perlite is suitable for most cacti. Vertical plants should be planted in a container that has a diameter one half of the height of the plant and round cacti in containers with a diameter 2 inches greater than that of the plant. Care should be taken to prevent rot from developing on recently potted or repotted plants. Be sure the pot is dry before transplanting and transplant into dry soil. Wait a week before watering to allow for the damaged roots to repair.

Cacti do need to be watered and fertilized but not as frequently as other plants. Water the pots when they dry out. Unglazed clay pots require more frequent watering than glazed clay or plastic pots; small pots require more frequent watering than large pots.

Many cacti, but not all, require a rest period during the year for maximum growth and flowering. During the winter they prefer cooler temperatures, about 50°F. At this time watering should be reduced and fertilization stopped. The natural rest period for cacti varies, so after a month look for signs of growth. If by three months time you see no signs of growth, resume regular care.

Cacti can be grown from seed. Many seed companies offer packets of mixed varieties, fun to grow if you can stand the suspense. Some cacti seed take a year to germinate, and it may take a few years to see what your young cacti will look like.

Cacti also may be propagated from branches or offshoots. The offshoot should be removed from the plant and allowed to dry for two weeks. After the broken or cut edge has healed or scabbed, plant it shallowly in dry media. Refrain from watering for a week, then water sparingly.

Sleepwalker is recruiter's nightmare

DEAR ABBY: I've been in the U.S. Navy for 13 years. Last year I was a Navy recruiter. My brother's son was considering joining the Navy when he graduated from high school last year. It is a well known fact in our family that this nephew is a sleepwalker, so I told my brother and his wife that their son was not enlistment eligible. His mom asked me to "overlook" the fact that her son was a sleepwalker, and I told her there was no way I would jeopardize my Navy career and her son's life by overlooking something like that. If my sleepwalking nephew were to join the Navy without acknowledging that he was a sleepwalker, he could very well sleepwalk right over the side of his ship at sea.

ADVICE

Furthermore, if it became known that his recruiter knew of his condition and suppressed it, the recruiter would be court-martialed.

My nephew was all for keeping his sleepwalking a secret, but I would have no part of it, so he's not in the Navy. My conscience is clear and I know I did the right thing, but my family has been very cool to me and my wife, and we feel terrible about this.

Now I hear that this sleepwalking nephew wants to enlist in the Air Force. Is there anything I should do?

TRUE TO THE NAVY

DEAR TRUE: If your nephew is man enough to defend his country, he should be man enough to speak for himself. Talk with him, man-to-man, and impress upon him the importance of being 100 percent truthful about his sleepwalking. Tell him that if he either lies or knowingly withholds this information on his application or during his physical, he could be liable for a stiff fine and possibly a prison term.

DEAR ABBY: I need your opinion on something that has been bothering me for a long time. Shouldn't a widow be remembered with an anniversary card on the day of her wedding anniversary even though her husband has died?

My children stopped sending me cards three years ago when their father died. They still expect me to send them cards and gifts on their anniversaries, but they don't do the same for me anymore.

Is that fair?

HURT IN PRESCOTT, ARIZ.

DEAR HURT: Send a "Happy Anniversary" greeting would be inappropriate, but it would be a very thoughtful gesture if your children remembered that day by inviting you out for a special lunch or dinner.

(Problems? Write to Dear Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.)

Recruit death defendant seeks dismissal of case

PENSACOLA — A Navy lieutenant facing court-martial in connection with the drowning of a 19-year-old recruit sought an eleventh-hour dismissal of charges, contending the officer who convened the action was biased and influenced by superiors and politicians.

Cmdr. Newell Krogmann, who is presiding over the special court-martial, took the motion under advisement and said he will announce his decision today.

Lt. Thomas A. Torchia, 32, of Princeton, Ill., the former officer in charge of the Rescue Swimmer School at Pensacola Naval Air Station, is accused of dereliction of duty in the March 2 death of recruit Lee Mirecki, 19, of Appleton, Wis.

Mirecki, who had a diagnosed phobia of water, had a panic-induced heart attack and drowned during a swimming class. Navy investigators said he wanted to quit the course, but a group of instructors pulled him from an equipment rack, dragged him back into the pool and held his head under water.

"At a June hearing, a Navy pathologist called the death a homicide, saying Mirecki was 'scared to death.'" naval education and training, to convene the court-martial.

The defense pointed out that two officers who examined the case, Cmdr. Daniel D'Alesto and Rear Adm. David Morris, had reservations about charges against Torchia.

Krogmann denied that motion to dismiss.

The judge, however, took under advisement another motion to dismiss. That motion contended Thunman was biased that he tried to influence those involved in the case and that he was influenced by his superiors and politicians.

"The answer is absolutely not," Thunman said when asked if he tried to influence the case. He also said he got no direction from the Navy or from Congress.

The defense argued that Thunman was too close to the case, and pointed out that he talked to the victim's family, to the press and to members of Congress. But Thunman said he was always careful not to discuss the merits of the case.

The motions said that Thunman, during a June 28 meeting with the legal representative of the Secretary of the Navy, "advised him that he was concerned that he was too involved." In the case and that he "could no longer be considered an unbiased convening authority."

But Thunman disputed that, saying he never had any doubts about his own ability to be objective in the case.

After the motions are settled Torchia will decide whether he wants to be tried by the judge or a jury. He faces three months' confinement, loss of two-thirds pay for three months and a letter of reprimand.

Torchia and five instructors, all petty officers, were initially charged in the case. Four petty officers received non-judicial punishment for battery. A fifth instructor is scheduled to be tried Monday.

The Navy said Thursday there were also five others charged after the initial group. One of them was Capt. Carlton L. Lavinder, Torchia's commanding officer, who got a letter of reprimand and has since retired. The other four were not identified.

Math problems? Dirk to the rescue!

By TAMARA HENRY
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Dirk Niblick can be a real klutz and a bit of a nerd, but don't try to fool him when it comes to spending money.

When Dirk's college roommate Rey "Wrongway" Tiredamage wanted to buy some tapes, Dirk showed him how two 90-minute tapes at $2.95 each were a better buy than three 60-minute tapes at $3.95 each.

When the Strazeball Ad Agency advertised a new Russian car, the Nudnick, at 30 percent off, Dirk exposed their deceptive ploy, in which they were offering customers 10 percent off on three parts of the car.

Dirk will be a new addition to "Square One TV" when the Emmy-award winning math series returns next month for its second season on most of the nation's more than 300 public television stations.

The show is produced by Children's Television Workshop, a non-profit educational corporation.

"Dirk is a klutz," said Jim Thurman, the show's senior producer and head writer who helped create him. "We wanted a guy proficient in math but socially inept."

For example, when Dirk's friends Fluff and Fold Noodleman asked him to come by so they can "lay some sounds" on him, Dirk replied, "I'd rather listen to music."

Dirk may not be a happening kind of guy but he knows what's happening with math, said Thurman, and wants to help his young audience avoid getting ripped off.

"He becomes a spokesman for the kids almost to the point that he's preaching. He keeps telling kids to watch what they buy, think about what they buy when they spend money," he said. "Someone still as he is can get away with the way he is."

Dirk's adventures coincide with the goals of "Square One TV," to increase youngsters' interest in math through the use of humor, said Thurman.

Mathematical topics for the show include problem solving, measurement, arithmetic, pre-algebra, probability, statistics, geometry and logic problems. An advisory board of 18 mathematicians from across the country meet with the show's personnel several times a year to discuss possible story lines.

Thurman said the series was "a long time in the making" and is the only program of its type. It is funded by grants from the National Science Foundation, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, the Education Department, the Andrew Mellon Foundation and the Carnegie Corp. of New York.

The program is aimed at the 8-to-12-year-old audience, but it does attract adults and older children, who appreciate its humor, and younger children, who like the zany antics, said Thurman.

The programs supplement schools' curriculum, and try to put fun into learning, he said.

"So much that's taught in school is drilled," he said. "It's hard to keep kids' interest as the material gets harder. Kids see in the show where math does come into play every day of their lives."

Thurman said Dirk's adventures are mostly drawn from his belief that children are frequently deceived and cheated by merchants.

"We treat Dirk as a real person. As a kid, Dirk kind of got had," said Thurman. "(Dirk) bought a box of batteries and when he got home the batteries were not included. He bought a ticket to the Grand Canyon and it was closed when he visited. He bought a pumpkin and Halloween was called off."

As a result, Dirk is ready to pounce on any such deception, especially if it involves math, said Thurman, who has also worked on the series "Sesame Street" and "The Electric Company," as well as network shows with Bob Hope, Carol Burnett, Dean Martin and Bob Newhart.

Thurman, 52, a native of Vicksburg, Mich., attended the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor and said he "certainly wasn't a math whiz in school."

"I didn't say, 'Hey guys, let's get together and solve this problem,'" he said, and added that he almost turned down the offer to work for the math series.

"Now I'm fascinated and enthused about doing this," he said. "So far it's too early to tell the effects the show will have on children's attitudes and awareness. Preliminary tests have been positive along those lines."

RYAN'S HOPE

She was not pleased to see her wife, Sylvia, who said that she couldn't stay in having any longer even though they fear her life may be in danger if her former husband, Max (Doubtful), is still alive. Sylvia admitted he had killed George's mother when he was hunchbacking Angelina (Sister Mary) death.

SANTA BARBARA
After forming a team, Mason, Julia, Gabe and Keith talked to a woman named Gattie, who identified Mason's photo as that of her former lover, Brock. Mason, who is suffering from amnesia, was kidnapped by some unsavory characters who are in cahoots with Carrie, Sophia and Arthur shared a kiss. T.J. is angry that Kelly has changed him and returned to Jeffrey, who is recuperating from his heart wound. Carrie rescued Mason from Gattie and her thugs, but Mason has no idea who Gattie is. T.J. kidnapped Carrie but later returned the baby to Carrie's care. T.J. parted things up with Lydia after she agreed to end a positive news interview on C.C. for family and his teachers. Sophia forced Kelly to admit that she slept with T.J. Jeffrey is convinced that he and Kelly can salvage their marriage. Arthur transferred Scott to a dingy room in the poor section of town where Scott grew up.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS
Lara secretly arranged for a friend, Robert Weston, to offer Brad a job with big bucks in Chicago. After John and Jessica exchanged marriage vows, they told Tracy, Jack, Ashley and Brad that Jessica has AIDS. Before leaving on his honeymoon, John told his children that several doctors assured him and Jessica that no one living in the same house with Jessica can get AIDS from her via casual contact. Ashley was misled with Steven, who admitted that John had told him about Jessica's illness. Victor kissed Emma (Kelly) after complimenting her on her commitment to writing his biography. Tucker worried about Henry, who sang at a charity concert despite the fact that he's having problems with his throat. A grateful Cassandra remembered George telling her that he's convinced Tina and Lauren are going to get back together. Lauren said Brad that she's going to marry him again.

Boys love dinosaur cousins

Story and photos
By SUSAN LODEN
Herald staff writer

At first glance lizards may seem like cold pets. They don't lick your face, wag their tails or bark in greeting.

On the other hand, they don't have to be walked, brushed, or dipped, and they don't have to be inoculated. They're silent and odorless.

When you add the imagination of a 4-year-old boy, who believes chameleons and iguanas are little, live dinosaurs, to a father's fascination with these easy-to-care-for pets, you find an ideal home for such pets.

Nathan Santerre loves dinosaurs. He has toy models of them. They decorated his T-shirts, caps and the walls of his bedroom. And for about one year this 4-year-old's bedroom has been the home of three lizards, which to Nathan seem to be little versions of the prehistoric monsters he admires.

"I'm not afraid of them," Nathan said of his exotic-looking pets. "They always fall asleep. They don't make noise. I play with them."

When freed from its home, one of the lizards follows a path across the room, up a drape, and into a closet to rest on a strap that has been placed there for it to enjoy.

Two chameleons, a senegal and a forest variety, and a green iguana are at home in waterless aquarium in Nathan's bedroom. Although Nathan admires the lizards, which are native to the tropics and sub-tropics, his brother Brian, 3, is more likely to let one of the creatures crawl up his arm to the top of his head, or down his back.

The little lizards scratch lightly with their claws as they crawl along. The iguana, which is less than one-foot long has the potential of growing to about 6 feet long. That would take several years. An iguana might live to be 10 to 15 years old. The chameleons have shorter lifespans, of about one year, Kenn Santerre said of his sons' pets.

The top of the tank is covered with a screen lid and the environment features an electric heat rock to keep the lizards warm in the winter, along with plastic plants for them to hid behind and driftwood for and rocks for them to lounge on. There's also a tray of water for drinks or refreshing dips.

On the outside of Nathan's bedroom door has posted a sign warning the bug exterminator not to enter. If one of the reptiles snacked on a live bug that had crawled through insecticide, the lizard would die, he said.

The senegal chameleon, which changes color from a dark diamond back pattern, to speckles, to a bright green, according to its mood, is more docile than the forest chameleon and the green iguana. The latter two try to escape when held, but the slow moving senegal will sit still to have its head stroked. Its eyes will shift or close. The forest chameleon is the most prehistoric looking of the three and it changes colors to various shades of brown, with its skin resembling tree bark.

The three are compatible in the cage they share, and none has staked out a territory, Santerre said. "None of them ever want to go back in the cage." "They don't bite." In fact, he added the only one he has seen eat is the senegal, who shares a diet of live crickets with the other chameleon.

The iguana eats plant life.

The live cricket, which are available at pet and bait shops, can be heard chirping through the night. The presence of lizards in his home keeps Santerre's mother from spending the night there, he said.

Although not everyone is attracted to these reptiles, Robert Houghton, 15, of Dena's Exotic Pets, Longwood, said, they are popular pets.

He had lizards himself for about six months, but neglected them and gave them away. He said, they really require minimal care, just a once a week change of drinking water and an occasional cleaning of their cage and a daily feeding, but he didn't have time for that.

People are attracted to lizards, especially iguanas, Houghton said, because of their unique appearance and the fact that they eat live food. The latter attraction, he said, he doesn't understand, but he said it is a factor for some lizard lovers.

Santerre invested about $50 in each of his lizards and the environment they share cost about $60 more. Crickets and leftover, raw vegetables are cheap food for the trio, he said.

When choosing a lizard, Santerre said, he tries to avoid the very young, because they seem to be less hardy.

A healthy lizard has bright clear eyes and no discharge from its nose. Its skin, tail and nails are unbroken and the inside of its mouth is pink with no white or yellow spots. They are active and vigorous with bright coloring.

Douglas tells almost all—and angrily

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD — Kirk Douglas pulls few punches in his new autobiography, "The Ragman's Son," a story so full of rage the heat fairly leaps off the pages.

Even in his Beverly Hills office recently, the star of more than 80 movies often seethed with anger when he discussed the pain of recollection during the years it took him to write his book.

Why all the frustration and fury?

Douglas bared his teeth in that familiar half-grin, half-grimace.

He said he was and always has been angry with injustice, God, anti-Semitism, and the grinding poverty of his youth when he was Isaac Danielovitch in Amsterdam, N.Y.

"It's just pure anger," said Douglas, who will be 72 in December. "It reminds me of what my first wife Diana said, when I was a young actor angrily working in one picture after another. I'd done 'Champion' and everyone was raving about my performance.

"Diana saw my anger and said, 'You know, Kirk, you keep working like you're desperately trying to become a star. You ARE a star.'

"I suppose anger is a motivating factor in my life. It's the fuel that keeps my motor running. I just don't want that anger to be something that is hurtful to other people, or myself."

Douglas has written a candid book, calling the facts and the feelings as he sees them.

"I'm sure some of the stuff I've written will offend some of my friends and acquaintances," he said. "But I've done that all my life. I've always spoken my mind. I've also been tougher on myself than anyone else.

"Anyway, I would never win a popularity contest in this town, and this autobiography won't make me popular. That's not important to me. But I didn't want to write any fluff.

"My purpose was to write something that couldn't be read anywhere else. I wrote from my guts, but not maliciously. And I certainly didn't tell all.

"People may be angry with me, but I didn't hurt anyone any more than I hurt myself."

His wife Anne read the finished manuscript before it was published. "I wouldn't have had the book published if Anne hadn't approved," he said. "She didn't suggest that I delete or change anything. And I wrote every word of it myself."

While Douglas may have loathed his bleak childhood — a cold, indifferent father, the youngest and only boy in a family of seven children — he also realizes that deprivation helped carry him on to fame and wealth, providing him with a drive to succeed that remains clearly a part of his character.

"I tell my sons they didn't have my advantage — abject poverty," Douglas said. "I told them I had no way to go but up. I hungered for success. It was a motivating drive.

"Poverty is a great force. It propelled me. My kids have overcome their lack of poverty to succeed on their own terms. I don't know what I might have done right. But hell, nobody knows about kids. You can do all the right things and they can still go wrong. It's all luck.

"The thing is, I didn't let adversity beat me. Adversity either makes you stronger or weaker. It made me stronger."

All four of his sons have had nothing but praise for the book.

Douglas said the most important element of "The Ragman's Son" is the voyage of self-discovery he made while writing it.

"Much of the book deals with my relationship with my father and my relationships with my sons and the contrast between the two," he said. "It's about life, death, love, friendship, work and sex.

"Sex has been an important element in my life. It is a vital factor in most people's lives. I couldn't skip over that part of my past. The book doesn't depend on the sexual passages, but it doesn't ignore them either.

"During the writing, I realized how fortunate I was to have worked with so many screenwriters over the years. I wanted to express myself simply, and those experiences helped me.

"The process of writing was quite painful and once or twice I almost gave it up. I didn't reckon with all the memories that would be conjured up. I certainly didn't write the book for financial profit. All the proceeds will go to charity.

"I wanted people to read this book and learn something about me. I was surprised when I re-read the book at how many new things I learned about me.

"Perceptions are more important than facts. I wanted to vent my feelings of rage and frustration. It was a means of taking inventory of myself and putting my life into perspective — for me.

The many lessons learned during his acting career also helped him writing, he said.

"I didn't mind writing about my shortcomings and vulnerability," he said. "You can't be an actor unless you're vulnerable. I got in touch with my feelings and they became memories.

"There are lots of things in my life I would have done differently if given another chance. For instance, I'd have taken the part in 'Stalag 17' that Bill Holden eventually played.

"And I finally learned something I wish I had known earlier. For years I've had a reputation for being difficult on the set. I know now what I said wasn't wrong. It was the vehement way I said things that was wrong.

"But what the hell, I'm too old to change now. So I'll just keep going along calling things the way I see them."

Nan Woods (l.) and Dana Delany star in ABC's "China Beach," the series about women in Vietnam that has returned in rebroadcasts. It airs Wednesdays.

Don Johnson handles hype

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD — From that day four years ago, when entered the nation's living rooms as Det. Sonny Crockett on "Miami Vice," Don Johnson's private life has been as public as the character he plays.

The handsome, fast-talking Johnson's stubbled chin, classy wardrobe and unruly hair style became a fashion statement. Supermarket tabloids zeroed in on his romances — especially with Barbra Streisand — and stories of his drug use have been reported time and again.

But man at the eye of this publicity hurricane is indifferent to and somewhat amused by it all.

A clean-shaven Johnson, dressed in a dapper suit, breezed into Hollywood the other day to hype his new movie, "Sweethearts Dance," and talked about the effects of the media mill on one's personal and professional life.

"The stories about my private life have very little to do with me," Johnson said.

"All this media blitz has nothing to do with who I am. It has to do with the selling of newspapers, magazines and TV talk show viewership. As soon as I figured that out, I was a much happier camper."

"In the beginning it was disconcerting because I realized that very little, if anything, people were writing about me was true. They chose to perceive me in a way that had nothing to do with who I really am."

"They were selling an image out there that would help circulation and ratings. Once I understood that, I knew I could go on about my business, which is creating characters and entertaining people and maintaining a responsibility to my fans and the viewers of 'Miami Vice' and flingers everywhere."

"I'm kinda slow. It took a spell, as they say where I come from, before I caught on. But when it finally sunk in, it made life easier."

"I like to keep my head down, stay focused and do my work. When I'm not working, I spend as much time as I can with my little boy and my friends. God bless 'em, who tried to get rid of me — and they can't."

Johnson said he has managed to separate his work from his celebrity and avoid becoming a victim of his own publicity, but the sideshow aspects of his fame became a professional intrusion in the early success of the series.

"Truthfully, the parade of journalists and TV interviewers through Miami was like something out of Barnum & Bailey," he said. "They had every kind of slant and angle you can imagine."

"Concentrating on the work and delivering to the folks who watch the show — and who damned well deserve our best effort — took every ounce of energy I could muster."

"Sometimes I won that battle and sometimes I lost. There were times when I asked that the set be closed. But it wasn't just me. It was a decision made by the producers and director."

"There is a perception about me that I'm a slightly dictatorial pain in the neck. I am a pain in the neck but for different reasons. When the set was closed it was a collective conclusion that the best way to get the work done was to limit the visits."

He said "Sweethearts Dance" was an altogether different film for him, compared to the character he plays on "Miami Vice."

"It's a story about people, not violent action," he said. "It's a funny look at relationships and how difficult people find it to communicate with each other, especially when they care."

In addition to "Sweethearts Dance," Johnson has completed an action-adventure drama, "Dead Bang," due out next spring.

His movie career is important, he said, but he has no intention of leaving "Miami Vice."

"I have an old-fashioned attitude," he said. "I feel a certain obligation to the series, the people who make it and the viewers. I'll continue to make the show as long as they want me."

"I could have fled the show some time ago and gone on with a film career, which might have been a better financial move. But I am giving something back because it's been so good to me."

"I'm going home with the gal that brang me."
