In sheriff's memory

The late Seminole County sheriff, John E. Polk, left behind countless friends and an indelible mark on local law enforcement. His daughter is compiling anecdotes from friends and family, which she hopes to parlay into a book about the much-loved man. See Page 5B.

Two hurt in collision

SANFORD — Two men were seriously injured in a Christmas Day auto accident in Sanford. Sanford Police Dispatcher Joyce Fagan confirmed that a 1976 Pontiac driven by Johnny Lee Williams, 22, and a 1989 Pontiac driven by Robert Watson, 47, collided near Eighth Street and Cyprus Avenue in Sanford late Friday afternoon. The drivers' addresses were unavailable. Ulysses McCray, a passenger in Williams' car, and Watson were transported by emergency helicopter to Orlando Regional Medical Center. Both were listed in serious but stable condition Saturday, Fagan said. Sanford police are still investigating the accident. No charges had been filed Saturday.

First 1993 shuttle launch set

CAPE CANAVERAL — The first shuttle launch of 1993 — a six-day mission in which the crew will practice spacewalking and release a satellite — has been set for Jan. 13. Endeavour is scheduled to lift off at 8:52 a.m. on NASA's 53rd shuttle mission, the space agency said Tuesday. Eight flights are planned for 1993. The crew of five will release a satellite that will serve as a switchboard in the sky between Earth and spacecraft such as the shuttle. Four such satellites already are in operation. The spacewalk will give the astronauts practice for working on NASA's planned space station.

1992 'Man of the Year'

NEW YORK — President-elect Clinton, stepping into office at what Time calls a "radically unstable moment in history," is the magazine's "Man of the Year" for 1992. In an interview accompanying the cover story in Time's Jan. 4 issue, Clinton cites global instability as one of his three main concerns as he prepares to take over the White House. "We are seeing the flip side of the wonder of the end of Cold War," he said. The issue is due out Monday. Clinton also said he hopes to avoid being "bogged down" in trying to fulfill the high expectations voters hold for his administration. And he hopes his daughter, Chelsea, can continue to lead a normal life after she moves into the White House, Clinton said. The Arkansas governor and president-elect is the 88th recipient of Time's annual accolade. The award was first presented to aviator Charles A. Lindbergh in 1927. Last year's winner was CNN founder Ted Turner. The award is given to the man or woman the magazine selects as having had the greatest impact on world events.

Armed teens nabbed

Two boys charged in robbery of Sanford woman

By GEORGE DUNCAN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Two teen-aged boys were arrested by Sanford police Christmas Eve and charged with armed robbery less than twenty-four hours after a Sanford woman was accosted in her home at gunpoint, police reported. Sanford Capt. Ralph Russell said a resident of Glenway Drive answered her door Wednesday evening and was confronted by a white male dressed in black with a black mask.

The assailant held a large caliber handgun and demanded $500, according to police reports. Russell said when the woman said she didn't have the money, the masked intruder took her into her house and stole her wallet which contained her credit cards and approximately $100 in cash. Acting on a tip, police arrested two suspects Thursday. Russell said a 15-year-old male robbed the woman while a 14-year-old acted as a lookout. The two are being charged with armed robbery, the use of a firearm in commission of a felony, altering a serial number on a weapon and the use of a mask in the commission of a crime. The two were transferred to the Seminole County Juvenile Detention Center. Russell said due to the holidays, police were as yet unable to determine if the suspects had prior arrests records. Although the department may make a recommendation, the state attorney will decide if the two are tried as juveniles or as adults, he said. The neighborhood where the crime occurred is not considered a high-crime area, he said.

SANFORD — Essence sits at her desk and brightens the pages of a new coloring book. She flutters her eyes to be sure the visitor notices the bright blue eye shadow she has acquired from Santa.

The six-year-old had not been sure there really is a Santa, her mother said. But, since a delivery on Thursday and a phone call on Saturday morning, both are sure that he is real.

"She came to me last week...we talk a lot because it's just the two of us...and asked me if there really is a Santa and I told her that you really have to believe it in your heart," said Essence's mother, Charlotte Miles, on Saturday. "And then we got this delivery from Santa with all that she wished for and we're going to get some assistance from the Salvation Army that I didn't think we could get. It's been a good Christmas."

Essence and her mother moved to Sanford in April from DeLand when Charlotte, a cook, was transferred from a food chain's Volusia County restaurant to the new one in Sanford. But soon after she arrived here, she was laid off as part of a cost-cutting plan.

Knowing it was going to be a tough Christmas, the young girl wrote a letter to Santa that the letter carrier who serves their home delivered to the jolly old elf on the North Pole.

Postal employees took up a collection to help pay for the Barbie and the Funmobile, which cost about $23. The Miles' letter carrier asked not to be identified.

Loophole may keep killer in jail

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — State Attorney Norman Wolfinger is confident a legal loophole will keep a convicted child killer scheduled for release from prison New Year's Eve, behind bars.

Wolfinger and Florida Sen. Gary Siegel, R-Altamonte Springs, met with Governor Lawton Chiles in Tallahassee Friday. The aim was to prevent convicted child-abuser and murderer Donald McDougall from being released from jail.

"We're fairly convinced that we'll succeed in keeping him in jail," Wolfinger said. "Senator Siegel and I both asked for attorney general opinions on whether or not his crime meets one of the exemptions that would prevent his early release."

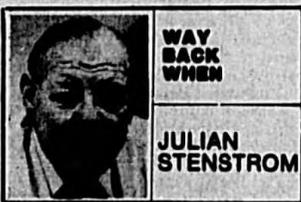

"I even brought in a psychologist, Dr. Duncan Bowman, of Brevard County," Wolfinger said. "Dr. Bowman said as far as he was concerned, what McDougall did to the little girl amounted to a sex act, and that would not allow the early release."

He continued, "The doctor also said that it is expected that anyone convicted of such a crime, if released this soon, would probably do the same thing again."

McDougall was convicted in 1983 of aggravated child abuse and second-degree murder, in connection with the torture stabbing of Ursula "Sunshine" Ansell, who was 5 years-old at the time of her death. Her body was found in a pond in Altamonte Springs.

During Friday's conference, the governor revealed plans he had not intended to discuss until after the first of the year. According to his communications director Ron Sachs, "The governor not only wants to keep McDougall behind bars, but is tackling a comprehensive reform of

WAY BACK WHEN

JULIAN STENSTROM

History shared in 120 columns

Good grief! How times does fly. I just realized that this is the 120th time that you've allowed me to come into your home and share with you some of the events of Sanford's history and people of the "Way Back When" days. The good lord willing, there'll be 120 more.

I was shopping in a local drug store a couple of weeks ago. An attractive lady met me in an aisle. Smiling, she said, "Julian, you probably don't remember me." I suddenly noticed she had a familiar expression on her face, but I couldn't relate it to anyone I could think of. Then she said, "I'm Sarah Maxwell."

"Of course," I replied as I recognized that expression on her face. "You're the daughter of Mrs. Maybell Maxwell. She taught me how to type."

Mrs. Maxwell taught hundreds of us how to use a typewriter. She also taught bookkeeping. After Mrs. Maxwell retired as a teacher I believe she became associated with the Seminole County Welfare Department. During the final years of her life she was head of that department.

Sarah, who is probably better known as "Savvy," told me she

Over 700 needy people feast at 2 special Christmas meals

By VICKI DEBORNER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — More than 700 needy people were well fed and taken care of for Christmas thanks to a pair of dinners in Sanford on Friday.

The Christmas Feast for the Needy, which in past years has been sponsored by the city Community Development Office and Central Florida Services for the Disadvantaged, was sponsored this year by the development office and Holy Cross Episcopal Church.

About 350 people were served in the church parish hall over the course of the day, according to Leona Orcutt who helped organize the dinner.

"It was a beautiful, beautiful day," she said. "I think there were a lot of people helped."

Orcutt said the feast was not only for those who were financially disadvantaged, but also for those who would otherwise be alone on the holiday.

"We wanted to make the holiday special for those who might have had an unhappy day for whatever reason," she said.

Across town at the Sanford Rescue Outreach Mission, Mother Blanche Bell Weaver, said that another 360 people were served dinner.

"That's about what we have every day," Weaver said. "But we hoped to make it special for Christmas."

Weaver said that the addition of a well-organized dinner at Holy Cross

Car stolen, baby found safe

By The Associated Press

FORT MYERS — A minister's faith was sorely tested when his car was stolen from a convenience store parking lot with his 10-month-old son in the back seat.

"I prayed, and that was the biggest test of my faith to totally put my trust in the Lord," said the Rev. Larrus Fulton of the Apostolic Revival Center.

The harrowing experience ended happily for the family 40 minutes later with baby and car found safe and sound in a restaurant parking lot late Christmas Eve.

Fulton pronounced the event "a miracle" after police returned baby Ezekiel Johnathan Fulton to his parents an hour after the disappearance.

The family crisis started when Fulton left the engine running as he ducked into a Circle K store, leaving his wife and child in the car.

What is he doing to my baby? Is he hurting my baby? Did he have an accident?

-Elizabeth Fulton

Elizabeth Fulton, 7 1/2 months pregnant, watched as a man walked past, turned around and jumped in the driver's seat.

"I'm sitting there at first in shock, and saying 'Hey, hey, what are you doing?' And he says, 'OK baby, let's go for a ride,'" she said. "That's when I jumped out and was trying to get Ezekiel from his car seat in the back seat, but he had the car in reverse and was driving off."

Mrs. Fulton ran into the store screaming, "Larry, the baby, the baby!"

While the couple waited anxiously with police for word about their baby, Mrs. Fulton said: "Negative thoughts kept popping in and out of my mind: What is he doing to my baby? Is he hurting my baby? Did he have an accident?"

Descriptions of the man and car were sent to every law enforcement agency from Tampa to Miami.

"The most trying part of the whole thing is that I, as a father, couldn't do anything. I mean I never felt so helpless in my life," Fulton said.

The minister thought the thief wouldn't get far because the car was low on gas. Within the hours, the car was found in North Fort Myers.

The driver, Brett Warren Cunningham, 26, of Cape Coral, was charged with kidnapping, attempted kidnapping, auto burglary, auto theft and grand theft. He was held on $75,000 bond in the Lee County Jail.

Teen girl missing

A resident on Butternut Lane in Longwood reported his teen-age daughter had run away, according to police reports. Longwood police put out a bulletin on the 18-year-old Lake Mary High School student.

Inmate reports scuffle

At the Seminole County Jail, inmate James Middleton told officers that two other inmates blocked the exit to his cell and began hitting him, according to police reports. Middleton told officers that the other inmates began punching him with closed fists.

According to reports, a second inmate also said he was assaulted by the same two men after he had reported a theft.

Possible domestic dispute investigated

Longwood police are investigating a possible domestic dispute involving a 23-year-old Longwood woman on Cedar Oak Trail.

Theresa Lucraell told police that she and her boyfriend were discussing breaking up when he suddenly became violent. She alleged her boyfriend told her that he had better not see her car or motorcycle around him.

According to police reports, as the boyfriend left he kicked the car door. Lucraell attempted to stop him and his grabbed her hair, according to police reports.

Police were looking for the boyfriend, according to police reports.

Tires punctured

The consequence of another possible domestic dispute was reported to Sanford police by Napolian Hunt. Hunt told police he saw a suspect puncture several of his tires when he drove into his Truman Blvd. address in Sanford, according to police reports. Hunt said he believed the action may be a result of the ending of a boyfriend/girlfriend relationship, according to police reports.

Police are looking for the suspect.

Woman reports harassment

Gayle Everhart of Onora Road in Sanford reported to police her former boyfriend was harassing her with telling calls and possibly following her, according to police reports.

Everhart said she believed her former boyfriend had been following her and that he had left a number of messages on her answering machine, according to reports.

Incident reported to sheriff

James Middleton and Jeffrey Brian Duggan, both inmates at the John E. Folk Correctional Facility, have filed a report that two men, apparently other inmates, entered their separate jail cells and beat them with fists. The Sheriff's department is investigating the incident.

Incidents reported to Sanford police:

• A TV and VCR were reportedly stolen Tuesday from the residence of Jennifer Mounts, 1403 W. First Street in Sanford.

• Fashion Flash, 430 S. Sanford Ave., owned by Lawanda Johnson, was reportedly burglarized Tuesday. Police said someone threw a brick through the front window of the business, and removed a $50 jogging suit from the hole in the broken glass.

• A storage shed at Rest Lawn Cemetery, 25th Street and Handy Ave., Sanford, was reportedly burglarized Monday night. Bernard Mitchell told police that items missing included a granite carpet and a green tent top, with a total value of $1,800.

• A burglary was reported Tuesday at the home of Missy Robinson, 920 W. 11th Street in Sanford. Items taken were reported to be a large ham taken from the freezer, and a rod and reel from the living room.

Teens forced off cliff, live

By JEFF MEYER
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — Two teenagers who survived a terrifying plunge off a 200-foot clifftop were forced to jump at knife-point in retaliation for a friend's suicide, authorities said.

Rodel Paris, 16, and Evan Rivera, 22, were among a group of people present Sunday when David Salanoa's younger brother shot himself in the head. Detective Ira Beaty said Wednesday.

The 14-year-old boy, whose name has not been released, apparently killed himself because he was upset over the death of an uncle killed in a gunfight with police days earlier, Beaty said.

Rivera drove the wounded boy to a hospital where he later died, Beaty said.

David Salanoa, 18, believed Rivera had something to do with his brother's suicide, Beaty said. Salanoa, his brother and Rivera were members of the same gang, but it's not known if Paris is a gang member, the detective said.

Salanoa, who was arrested Tuesday, was charged Thursday with attempted murder, kidnapping and petty theft. He remained jailed, without bail, Thursday, and could face up to life in prison if convicted on all counts. An alleged accomplice had not been arrested, Beaty said.

Shooting victim's father gets a visa for funeral

By The Associated Press

MIAMI — The State Department approved an emergency travel visa for a man who had been trying to leave Cuba for nearly two years, but the trip will be a somber one.

Jose Rafael Acosta, 49, will be coming to the United States for the funeral of his son, Jose Acosta, 23, one of three people killed Wednesday by a suicidal aviation worker at an office Christmas party.

"They were desperate to see each other," said cousin Helen Hernandez. "Now it had to be this tragic way. He's going to be able to see his son, but his son's not going to be able to see him."

State Department spokesman Philip Peters said the visa was warranted because of the family emergency.

There's something new to remember. From now on, when you make long distance calls within the 407 area, dial 0 or 1 + 407 and then the number you're calling.

Florida's tremendous growth has created a shortage of telephone numbers. By dialing the area code on every long distance call, numbers are freed up for new businesses and residential customers.

So remember, when you dial long distance, be sure to use the area code. And if you have a 407 long distance number on any programmed services, like Speed Dialing, Call Forwarding, or even a FAX machine, now's the time to reprogram them.

Early release: Write now

Governor Lawton Chiles is sending a proposal to Florida's Attorney General Bob Butterworth, asking him to check into all loopholes in the prison sentencing system. Chiles is seeking ways to eliminate the basic gain time that is shaved from the prison sentences given to child-abusers and murderers.

According to his communications director, the governor does not need to be convinced. He does not want Donald McDougall to be released from prison six years early, which is presently scheduled to occur before the end of this week.

The governor needs to know that the citizens of Florida are behind efforts to prevent McDougall's release. Prisoners should not be allowed to return to our neighborhoods within only a few years after a murder or child-abuse conviction.

The governor is sending a letter to the attorney general, calling for a study on ways to reform the sentencing system. Chiles has already received petitions signed by more than 6,000 persons, urging that McDougall be kept in prison.

One message that can be sent by citizens however, which would mean more than many copies of the same petition in your personal appeal. Write to the governor and tell him, in your own words, why you believe such prisoners must not be released early. Write from the heart.

A sentence of 30 years, with five or six shaved off because of "good behavior" is an injustice to the court and judge who arrived at the sentence.

The statutes that allow this must be changed. If it takes an outpouring of public opinion in the form of letters and phone calls to bring it about, it will be worth it.

Letters should be addressed to Governor Lawton Chiles, Capitol Building, Tallahassee, FL 32399.

Letters to Attorney General Bob Butterworth may be sent to the same address.

Write today, while the matter is still being considered. Let the governor, attorney general and legislators know how you feel.

Let's not allow convicted sex offenders, murderers and child abusers off with drastically reduced sentences.

Judicial system sick

Judge Alan Dickey was not called in the sentencing of the Basso girl. Judge Alan Dickey used his judgment in his decision. A few days later he sentenced a person to life in prison and should have given him the death sentence. Judge Dickey has a very limited sentencing power. We need to get back to punishing the guilty and maybe we wouldn't have so many repeating offenders.

Judge Dickey's sentencing a man in 1979 on a DUI charge cost my 18-year-old son his life. He fined the man $100 and gave him six months to pay the fine and set him free. Just 15 days later, after running several people off the road, he pulled out to pass a car and hit my son head on. My son didn't have a chance—he was on a motorcycle. The drunk had a .13 blood alcohol content. He had a long record concerning alcohol related incidents including three DUI's and accidents.

Yes, Judge Dickey is the cause of my son's death. Such light sentencing is the biggest reason we have this high crime rate today. I wonder who will be the next to die because some judge lacks the backbone to impose the maximum sentence on the criminal. It may be one of their own kids.

If we had stiffer penalties to match the crime, it would take LESS law to have MORE order. Parents should also be responsible for their kids' criminal acts.

If we would just use more common sense and try to live according to God's rules, we could get back to a decent society in this country.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

Letters to the editor are welcome. All letters must be signed, include the address of the writer and a daytime telephone number. Letters should be on a single subject and be as brief as possible. The letters are subject to editing.

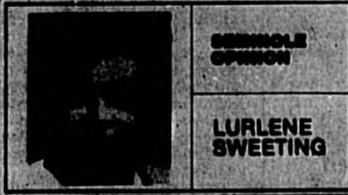

Meet Commissioner Van Der Weide

Commissioner Dick Van Der Weide is beginning his first term as an elected official. The geographical area he represents is west of Interstate 4, roughly from Markham Woods Road to Orange County. This encompasses part of Altamonte Springs, Wekiva, Sabal Point, Bear Lake and Sweetwater. The communities are stable, well developed and there is not much potential for further expansion.

Van Der Weide never seriously considered becoming an elected official until 1985 when he began lobbying about child care abuses. He recognized that becoming a part of the decision-making process was desirable.

Van Der Weide has been a community activist for years. He is a member of the national Selective Service Board. Former Governor Martinez appointed him to the Seminole County Planning and Zoning Board. Regionally, he has served on Health and Rehabilitative Services District 7 Advisory Council. He has also served on the Seminole County Republican Executive Committee.

Van Der Weide and his wife, Judy, moved to Central Florida in August, 1974. At that time Van Der Weide was regional director for York Steak House Systems located in Altamonte Mall.

SEMIOLE OPINION

LURLENE SWEETING

His wife became interested in child care and they developed businesses for themselves. They became owners and operators of four "Kid Stuff Child Care Centers." They sold one of the centers but continue to own one in Longwood, Altamonte Springs and Orange County.

Van Der Weide's child care advocacy led him to serve as president of the Florida Association for Child Care Managers and vice president of National Association for Child Care Managers.

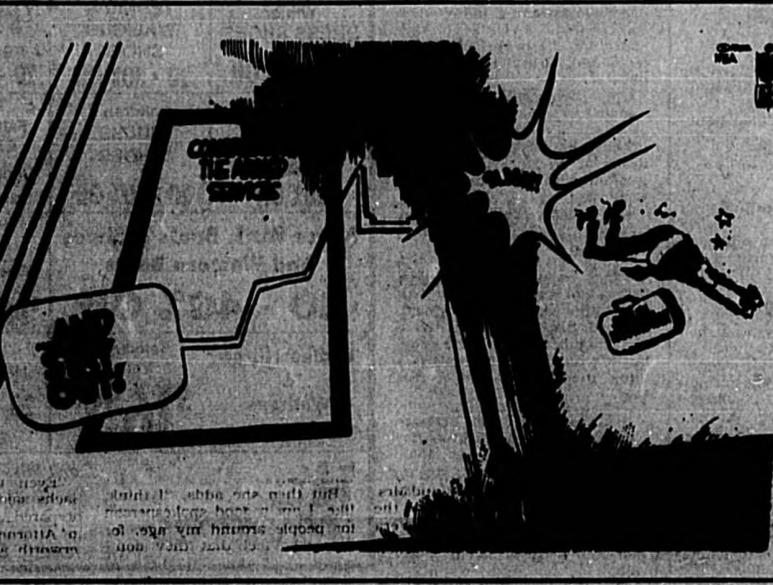

Van Der Weide is the second youngest of seven children. He always appreciated his father and the work he did to support the family. Work not only provides for the needs of a family, it brings dignity and enhances family cohesiveness. One of the most salient mandates he has as a commissioner is to attract meaningful businesses to Seminole County — businesses that pay more than the minimum wage. He is definitely pro-family and pro-jobs, as a means of maintaining one's family.

Van Der Weide cited the airport in Sanford as a real possibility for further development. Currently there are three flights daily from the airport. Two flights go to New Jersey and one to Ft. Lauderdale. More light industry and operations like Triple A (AAA) along the I-4 corridor should be sought. As Seminole County's land area becomes utilized, the construction industry role as a major factor in our economy will diminish. We need to prepare for this possibility.

During his campaign Van Der Weide promised "Leadership that will Listen" and that is what he is doing. He has received numerous letters from his constituents relative to problems associated with refuse pick up in the unincorporated areas.

Van Der Weide and his wife, Judy, have been married thirty-one years and are the parents of three sons. However, Van Der Weide indicated that the person who has really garnered all of his attention is his one-year-old granddaughter.

ELLEN GOODMAN

Responsibility for war crimes

The reports piling on my desk contain little evidence of peace on earth. They offer even less testimony about good will. They are horror stories from Bosnia and they seem to arrive like malvolent New Year's greetings, bearing grotesque reminders of what people can do to each other.

The scariest of the lot carry accounts of mostly Serbian atrocities—of murder, rape, hate. They have been collected, typed and mailed by human rights activists, people whose daily work I do not envy.

Under the weight of such barbaric stories, the place that was once Yugoslavia has now come to symbolize something more than another war-torn country. For many, it has come to represent proof of some ultimate heart of human darkness.

Let up the Soviet rock, says a colleague who shares my reading and this is what happens. People revert to what is basic and less in human nature. Strip away the thinnest veneer of civilized civility, national community, law and order, says a friend, and we are again tribal, savage, brutal, murderous. This "tribal" view turns his post-Cold War hopes sour.

I don't agree. Not at all. It seems to me that people are anything and everything, possibilities waiting to crystallize. The species that conceals atrocities also collects evidence of atrocities, and is outraged by atrocities. Human beings who commit war crimes also created the concept of war crimes.

War and crime. Legal codes show right and wrong violence even shows in some, a watershed designed to deter war of its own intrinsic severity. To others, the world's re-education of Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic—by bomb or crush—merits the label "war criminal" which many in the world have stamped on this "ethnic cleanser."

But codes of war are more than moral boundaries to cling to as the darkness deepens toward brutality that we see again in Bosnia. Their existence says something else about the human character. They speak to the side of our nature that also demands some check on violence.

As long ago as the 8th century BC, there were efforts to control violence in cultures as different and independent from each other as the Chinese, the Hebrews and the Indians. Similar international codes were devised by Greek, Chinese, Roman, the Hindu, the Arab, and the wounded. Their existence suggests that human beings have "built" some moral right and wrong.

Codes of war were elaborated through the Middle Ages and into the 20th century. They grew like moral building blocks, from our best impulses and worst experiences.

We learn them best from the final war crimes tribunals—Some of which ironically took place in Yugoslavia—and from the Geneva Conventions. Under the conventions, war crimes grew to include killing or torturing prisoners of war or civilians, conducting experiments on people, forcing them into inhuman conditions, destroying their cultural heritage, deporting them.

Historically rape was not officially named as a war crime. Indeed, it was often a war perk. As recently as World War II, Moroccan Moroccan soldiers were given license by the Free French to rape women in enemy territory of Italy.

Now, in the wake of allegations that rape is a Serbian policy of war, sexual assault is added to the list of war crimes. The mass rape of Muslim women more than fits the Geneva Convention's definition of "torture or inhuman treatment...willfully causing great suffering or serious injury to body or health."

These laws may not have much greater effect in deterring war crimes than domestic laws have in deterring domestic crimes. With few exceptions, we only catch and try those criminals who lose their wars.

But at least the criminal codes of war make collective statements about who we are. They say that all is not fair in war. That some acts are not human, but designated subhuman. That as a world community we agree on a bottom line to violence. That great wrongs deserve justice.

These codes also say that individuals are responsible for their own actions. There is no defense in the claim that "he did it first." Not if the previous wrong is a week old or, as is often true in Yugoslavia, 600 years old.

The murderers and rapists alleged in the papers on my desk may or may not come to trial. Slobodan Milosevic may never hit town in the president's office or come to the prisoner's dock.

But the concept of war crimes is still essential to society. These codes place blame. Not on human nature but on our behavior as humans. They hold us responsible as the troubled world already holds many Serbians responsible. Not just for war, but for the crime.

Stress-related comp claims rise

SAN FRANCISCO — Irony for such a supposedly laid-back state, California has become the capital of workers' compensation claims for stress on the job.

And since the state accounts for one-sixth of the more than $60 billion in costs to this nationwide system in crisis, state and local coffers are being drained by what might be called one of the fastest-growing entitlement programs.

Stress-related claims in California have leaped 700 percent in the last decade, one reason why the Golden State this year has been paying off its debts with IOUs. Maybe it's understandable that Assistant Police Chief David Dotson, who wasn't getting along with former Police Chief Daryl Gates in the wake of the Los Angeles riots, took a stress leave. But what about at least three Los Angeles cops who filed workers' comp claims last year — alleging they suffered anxiety and stress simply from watching the famous videotape of the Rodney King beating.

In California today, it's almost routine for dozens of stress claims to be lodged on the same day or week of rumored or announced layoffs or plant relocations. California Insurance Commissioner John Garamendi cited one such example of a garment manufacturing plant shut down in Southern California last year. Twenty-six employees filed mental stress claims, using the same attorney and medical clinic and filing virtually the same medical report, which was constructed by a word processor from a checklist.

In another case, about 30 percent of the employees laid off by a Hawthorne, Calif., metal door-maker, Security Metal Products Corp., in the last several years claimed mental stress for as much as $25,000 each. The entire company, which now employs 125, moved lock, stock and balance sheet to Oklahoma, where claims for stress are not as compensable.

Stress claims can be business-busters for firms with otherwise proud, accident-free safety records. Gary and Brenda Dalich of B&O Apparel testified earlier this year that their apparel sewing firm of 200-plus workers got socked with just five stress claims — which caused their annual premium to jump in a year from $58,000 to $214,000.

And if Dynamics Electronics of Montebello, Calif., had not been saved by a wealthier parent firm, they would have gone belly up from stress claims. Forty of their 90 workers filed stress-related claims on the same day from the same legal office with identical symptoms. The company's workers' comp insurance premium jumped from $5,000 to $35,000 a month.

California Gov. Pete Wilson has been largely stymied from reforming this runaway by the various special interests — namely, lawyers — who are getting fat off of it. In 88 percent of the stress claims filed in California, according to a California Workers' Compensation Institute study, the first notice the employer gets that an employee has filed a claim is from a lawyer. And a whopping 98 percent of all stress claims are litigated.

Most states allow stress claims in one form or another. The most typical and justifiable is a traumatic event — such as a robbery or rape of an employee at a convenience store — which results in abnormal stress directly related to an on-the-job incident.

Other than that, most states like Arizona, don't allow stress claims unless they are "unusual, unexpected or extraordinary." Thus, Arizona denied the workers' comp claim of a Greyhound bus driver in Phoenix who maintained his regular contact with his boss, but became depressed and "ragged" after a nervous breakdown.

Coffers are being drained by what might be called one of the fastest growing entitlement programs.

A Bronx girl's diary about school, boys and gunshots

By CATHERINE CROCKER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Latoya Hunter is just 14 years old, but recently the mail brought a packet of letters from teen-agers in Brooklyn, many of them girls seeking advice about boys and their parents.

"As I was reading it, I couldn't believe it," says Latoya, whose face still has the softness of childhood. "I mean, I'm going through those problems now and they think I am an expert."

They think she is an expert because they know her deepest thoughts, expressed in a diary she kept during her first year in junior high school.

"The Diary of Latoya Hunter," published earlier this year, is about the stuff of young girls' lives — school, friendships, boys, television, the urge for independence and conflicts with her mother.

But the slim volume, which runs 131 pages, goes deeper. It is also about being a black, immigrant girl growing up in the Bronx.

Latoya wrote in her diary about the gray, treeless streets of her neighborhood, the deadly violence around her, teen-age pregnancy, the poverty of eating and learning at her school and her homesickness for Jamaica.

It's the ordinariness of her pre-adolescent world against this troubled background that draws the reader into her diary. Latoya rhapsodizes about her passion for junk food and TV, and, then, in painfully clear prose, writes about the gunshots that killed a store clerk who sold her candy.

"Today gunshots echo in my head," Latoya wrote on Jan. 9, 1991.

"They are the same gunshots that killed an innocent human being right across from my house last night. They are the same gunshots that have scarred me, I think forever."

Latoya's world has expanded beyond its old Bronx borders because of a devoted teacher, a chance newspaper article and her gift for writing.

"I think it was mostly luck," Latoya says.

But then she adds, "I think, like, I am a good spokesperson for people around my age, for kids who feel that they don't count in anything, that they're being held back from being who they really want to be by outside things, like parents and friends and the kind of environment you live in."

A 1990 newspaper article about the graduation of Latoya's sixth-grade class said her English teacher wrote "The world is waiting for Latoya!" on her report card. An editor at a publishing company saw the story and was inspired.

He contacted the teacher to ask if Latoya would be interested in keeping a diary her first year in junior high. Latoya was offered a $5,000 advance and will receive $25,000 for the paperback rights.

Her first entries began "Dear Diary," then she decided to personalize her journal because "You've become like a best friend to me." She named it Janice Page, after her best friend in Jamaica.

"I like guys," Latoya wrote. "There, I said it. It's easy to say to you, but my mother would give me a real hard time if she heard me say that. She believes a normal 13 year old should only play her parents, go to school, learn her lesson, and come home everyday, and listen to her parents some more."

She recounts her first relationship with a boy (they didn't go out, they just opened their hearts over the telephone), her brother's wedding (she was a bridesmaid in blue), the birth of her unmarried sister's boy, and a much-anticipated trip to Jamaica that left her deeply disappointed.

Her conclusion: "With understanding I think I will achieve anything I want."

On a cold and windy afternoon, Latoya, dressed in jeans and gold hoop earrings, was back in her old Bronx neighborhood, giving a reporter a tour. She harbors no nostalgia for it.

"It really makes you feel down to walk around and see the things around you," she wrote. "The only colors I see are brown and gray — dull colors. Maybe there are others but the dull ones are the ones I see. Maybe if the streets were cleaner, and I would see colors like red and yellow, my surroundings would be more appealing...."

Until she was 6, Latoya was raised by relatives in Jamaica while her parents were in the New York area struggling to make a new life for themselves. Latoya's old house, where she lived with her family on the second floor, has a chain-link fence in front and flowers in the planters that, she says, make it look better than it did when she lived there.

"It was the ugliest house on the whole block," she says. "And I never liked to bring anybody over."

Relatives live in the ground-floor apartment. Eager to see a newborn cousin, Latoya drops by for a visit. A stale smell fills the dark, sparsely furnished rooms. The walls are stained and cracked.

Today, her mother, Linneth, works evenings as a nurse's aide; her father, Linton, works overnight as a security guard. And Latoya now lives in a well-kept apartment in a blue house on a pre-lined street in Mount Vernon, a city just north of the Bronx.

The book's sales started out slowly, but the media response has been overwhelming. Latoya has been interviewed by reporters, appeared on television talk shows and news programs — including one that airs in Japan — and met the Jamaican prime minister.

Two movie companies are bidding for the rights to the book, says Richard Marek, her editor at Crown Publishing Inc.

But Latoya says wistfully that her parents have never talked to her directly about the diary's contents, although she believes both have read it.

"If I do an interview or something, they say, 'I'm proud of you' and stuff, but they never really said that to me about the book, like, you know, 'You did a good job and I'm proud of you.'"

She's a sophomore in high school, having skipped a grade in school. Ithaca College and Columbia University have already approached her, she says.

She wants to study psychology and also be a writer. She also says that after she has had a job for a year, she wants to have a baby.

Sitting at her dining room table, she fidgets with a pendant necklace belonging to her mother. She is shy, soft-spoken, but articulate. "It's like everybody's dream to be in America. And now that I am here, I just don't want to waste the opportunities I have."

But as doors open to worlds she never dreamed existed, there is a loss of innocence to which she is still adjusting. In her diary, she wrote: "I've never come across discrimination against me for being black."

Now she has.

A few weeks ago, when she went to the Manhattan office of a national women's magazine to be interviewed about her book, the woman at the front desk asked "if I was there to deliver anything."

"She could have said, like, 'Could I help you?' or something," Latoya reflects. "...I guess they didn't expect someone like me to be there."

our entire prison sentencing system to eliminate the basic gain time."

"Even before the meeting," Sachs said, "The governor had prepared a letter that will be sent to Attorney General Bob Butterworth, asking him to look into all legal resources the state has in order to find a hook with which we can legally hold McDougall, but all others in a similar case."

"He wants to eliminate the basic gain time," Sachs explained. "That's time that is shaved off a prisoner's sentence, even before he spends much time in jail. It's done because of the flaws in our system, and because of what some people believe is an overcrowding situation in our jails."

Woffinger said, "The secretary of the Department of Corrections is supposed to review special crimes to determine if a prisoner qualifies for the early release program." He added, "In the case of McDougall, it wasn't done, and we want to find out why."

Woffinger estimated it may be Tuesday or Wednesday before the Attorney General will issue a response. McDougall is to be released from prison in Madison County, on Thursday.

Some area residents cruised through Christmas aboard the Rivership Grand Romance. The floating holiday was an adventurous way to bring 1992 to a close.

Dinners

kept attendance down a little compared to last year's dinner. She said that they fed more than 450 at the dinner in 1991 at the mission.

"I'm glad the people had someplace else to go, too," Weaver said. "It gave them a taste of someone else's cooking for a change."

Orcutt said that in addition to food, those who came to the feast at Holy Cross had their choice of hundreds of items of clothing and toys for children as well as some clothing for young adults.

Each person who attended that dinner was also sent home with a stuffed penguin doll, donated by Sea World, a bag of candy and some fresh fruit.

"We had people from all over helping us," Orcutt said.

Weaver said that donated clothing and toys were given to those in need who came for supper at the mission.

"I think people went to the other place early in the day and came to us for supper," she said.

All in all, the organizers of both dinners said that their events went well.

"When you do God's work, He blesses you," Orcutt said. "We did a lot of His work yesterday (Friday), but it was exhilarating."

sends the "Way Back When" columns almost every week to her brother on the Florida East Coast. Her brother is Dick Maxwell. We talked about Dick being a member of that 1926 Seminole High School baseball team on which the late Red Barber played. And, she mentioned how much Dick like the columns.

It was great to see Sarah again. And folks, for the benefit of those of you who have not seen her lately, she looks absolutely great.

An elderly gent called and said he remembered, with a lad, the old St. James Hotel in Jacksonville when Sanford's "artist in residence," E.B. Stowe met Admiral Dewey, the Spanish-American War hero. My caller said he understood the hotel was situated on the site where Jacksonville's one-time famed department store "Cohen Brothers" was located. My caller said he also knew that the St. James was destroyed by fire, but he wondered when.

I got in touch with Stowe. The alert 95-year-old artist promptly replied, "1901."

Writing about hotels, I found out something about a local establishment I didn't know. I knew the long-standing Montezuma at Magnolia and Third Street was originally known as the Bi-Low Hotel. I was first told that by old-timer Ashby Jones. I now learn that the hotel had Sanford's first swimming pool. But that's not all; it was indoors.

Every now and then I drive by the Montezuma in my mind's eye and I can still see the ball players who roomed there in the summers. I can still see those dozens of wooden rocking chairs that once graced the front porch. I can still see A.H. Moses and his son Morris relaxing in those chairs. Moses and his son were produce brokers. They must have been successful. When the First National Bank closed during the Great Depression, Moses bought the bank building for $70,000. The cost to build it was $100,000.

When I pass that corner, I can still see Charles West, the well-known First Street Jeweler rocking away. Remember West's store? I'd say it was at least five feet wide and 12 feet in depth. It had to be the smallest store that Sanford ever had. West himself was a very diminutive gentleman and he and his store fit each other like a glove.

Another tid-bit about the Mathieux brothers, Oric and Joe, and their sister Eva. Not long ago Eva was presented with a certificate by the State of Florida for maintaining continuous family ownership of the original Mathieux homestead for 100 years or more.

And here's another tid-bit you might find interesting. A survey was made many years ago to determine if the Florida Everglades could be drained. Among the surveyors in the party was S.O. Chase, St., who later, with his brother Joshua, founded Sanford's well-known Chase and Company. Another was the man who later became president of Henry Plant's railroad that ran from Jacksonville to Tampa. Also a member of that party was the father of Oric, Joe and Eva Mathieux.

I ran into a fellow one day who said he remembered a grocery store on Elm Avenue around Fifth Street and another at Palmetto and 22nd Street. You must remember that "Way Back" then there was no such thing as zoning.

Folks, I recall the store on Elm Avenue between Fifth and Sixth Streets. It was owned and operated by the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lodge. They were the parents of two daughters, Vera and Hazel. Vera died about a year ago. Hazel married a ball player on that famed 1939 Sanford baseball club, Red Marion. He was the brother of the famous St. Louis Cardinal shortstop "Bats" Marion.

Now, about the store at Palmetto and 22nd Street. I understand it was operated by a Mrs. Huff. I know nothing about this store. Do you? If so, give me a call.

In a recent column I wrote about Cliff Proctor's Trianon being destroyed by fire right after its big first anniversary party. I've now been told that before the night spot became the Trianon it was called "Perk's Place."

I can recall only the name, "Perk's Place." But I freely admit I have no idea where it was or if it later became the Trianon.

We'll be with you again next Sunday morning.

Salvation Army, the letter carrier played Santa and was able to deliver the gifts along with some other toys collected by the Salvation Army volunteers.

"He (Capt. Bergen) went to Walmart on Christmas Eve and made sure that her wish would come true," said Mrs. Capt. Joy Bergen also of the Salvation Army.

The Milesea were living elsewhere in Sanford when they signed up for assistance with the Salvation Army. But Charlotte's financial situation forced a move to the Gabies Apartments on Magnolia Avenue where the landlord has helped get her through some hard times.

"We signed a seven month lease, but we didn't have to pay a security deposit or anything like that," she said.

Mike Novoset said he tries to help whoever he can.

"We're all poor people," he said. "I know how it is."

During the move, Charlotte admitted, she lost all of her photo identification and the appointment information from the Salvation Army regarding when she needed to pick up the food, clothing and toys they had gathered for her. She thought she would be disqualified without the paperwork.

"Certainly not," said Mrs. Capt. Bergen. "We had all these things ready and waiting for her. We never even knew there was a problem."

As a matter of fact, Charlotte will go to the Salvation Army on Monday to get food to fill her refrigerator, as well as more toys and clothes for Essence.

"We'll have Christmas all over again," she said.

Miles said that people in Sanford have been very kind and helpful as she is struggling to get on her feet.

"We just have Christmas all year long," she said.

World War II bases live on as zoos, hospitals, airports

From Staff and Wire Reports

One became a zoo. Another is a mental hospital. Two are spring training baseball parks. A couple more are prisons. Some are college campuses, airports and industrial parks.

Fifty years ago, they were among about 160 military installations, from tiny outposts to huge bases, that sprang up across Florida. They joined eight existing bases to train more than 1 million U.S. and allied troops for World War II. Nearly all were deactivated afterward.

Dozens of tourist hotels also were pressed into service. Miami Beach alone trained a fourth of the Army Air Force officers and a fifth of the enlisted men. Charlton W. Tebeau wrote in his 1975 book "A History of Florida."

"Virtually every hotel on Ocean Drive was taken over by the Army," said Miami historian Paul George. "The whole area was like an armed forces camp."

Soldiers and sailors, some on horseback, patrolled beaches and blimps flew overhead in search of U-boats.

Florida's flat landscape and balmy weather were ideal for flight training bases. Present-day airports in Sanford, Miami, Fort Lauderdale, West Palm Beach, Tampa, Fort Myers, Gainesville, Sarasota, Punta Gorda, Naples, Opa-locka, Leesburg, Daytona Beach and other cities started as military airfields or were temporarily turned over to the Army or Navy.

The weather wasn't always cooperative. A hurricane in 1945 ripped apart Richmond Naval Air Station, a blimp base 12 miles south of Miami. A fire sparked by the storm destroyed three huge hangars, 25 blimps, 366 airplanes and 150 cars.

Richmond has remained star-crossed. It became the site of Miami's MetroZoo, ravaged by Hurricane Andrew this year.

Also in Miami, the Navy turned an airline terminal and hangars into the Diner Key seaplane base. The terminal now is Miami's city hall and the hangars are auditoriums.

Elsewhere in Dade County, the Bayside Festival Marketplace is on the site of a submarine chaser school. Bicentennial Park was a Navy port, Miami International Airport was Miami Naval Air Station and Miami-Dade Community College's north campus is on another blimp base site. In Sanford, the Navy settled in at what is now the Central Florida Regional Airport.

In Tallahassee, Army pilots, including those of the famed all-black 99th Fighter Squadron, trained at Dale Mabry Field, now the city's airport. "One of the trainees accidentally while flying over the city fired his machine guns," recalled retired Florida House Clerk Allen Morris, then a newspaper columnist. "It scared the hell out of everybody."

No harm was done, but that wasn't always the case. "The slogan used to be, 'One a day in Tampa Bay.' That's how frequently they crashed," said Nick Wynne, executive director of the Florida Historical Society.

Pilots trained at three Tampa bases: MacDill Air Force Base, which remains active; Drew Field, now Tampa International Airport; and Henderson Field, the site of Busch Gardens, two breweries and the University of South Florida.

The Air Corps set up its largest aerial gunner school at Buckingham Field near Fort Myers. Lee County's mosquito control planes now use the field.

Arcadia became a hub of primary flight training with the reactivation of two World War I bases.

British pilots trained at Carlsrom Field where French aviators learned to fly during World War I. A civilian contractor, Riddle Aviation, conducted the training at Carlsrom and nearby Dorr Field.

G. Piers Wood Memorial Hospital, a state mental institution, is on the Carlsrom site, and DeSoto Correctional Institution is at Dorr.

"Unless someone had an aerial view map then and now, they would not recognize it as the same place," said Howard Melton, who had a wartime job fueling planes at the Arcadia fields.

Army contract training also was conducted at the Lodwick School of Aeronautics in Lakeland, now the spring training home of the Detroit Tigers.

The Los Angeles Dodgers training complex is on part of the former Vero Beach Naval Air Station. The rest is Vero Beach's airport.

WAVES who worked at the base had been housed across the Indian River in an old hotel, the site of a present-day Holiday Inn.

said Ruth Stanbridge, president of the Indian River Historical Society.

"We have quite a few couples now celebrating their 50th anniversary," she said. "That Indian River didn't separate them."

Pensacola Naval Air Station was a major pilot training site and retains that role to this day.

Several auxiliary bases in Pensacola also continue in use, except for Elyson Field. It was a helicopter training center from the 1950s through 1976 and then became an industrial park with truck terminals, a soft drink bottler and plants producing athletic wear, boats and dented lumber.

Jacksonville also remains a naval center. Lee Field, an auxiliary base at Green Cove Springs, was turned into a port for mothballed ships until 1984 and it, too, became an industrial park, said Landrea Rowell, of the Florida Aviation Historical Society.

In the Panhandle, Eglin and Tyndall Air Force bases and Hurlburt Field remain active, but another nearby installation, the Marianna Army Airfield, is the city's airport and site of a Sunland Center for the mentally disabled, an industrial park and a federal prison, said Claude Reese, president of the Chipola Historic Trust.

Immediately after the war it had been used for a tuberculosis hospital and Chipola Junior College, but it was reactivated from 1953 through 1960 as Graham Air Force Base, said Reese, who was a flight instructor there.

Orlando International Airport began as Pinecastle Army Airfield, said Frank Mendola, librarian for the Orange County Historical Society. It continued as a bomber base after the war and was renamed McCoy Air Force Base before being turned over for civilian use in the early 1970s.

Nearby Orlando Army Airfield continues partly as a military installation, the Orlando Naval Training Center. Another part is Orlando Executive Airport.

Mendola said. The Banana River Naval Air Station, a blimp base near Cocoa, also switched services. It now is Patrick Air Force Base.

IN BRIEF

Vitamin reduces risk of birth defects

BOSTON — A major new study buttresses a government recommendation that women in their childbearing years take vitamins to prevent birth defects.

The study in the New England Journal of Medicine offers the strongest evidence yet that the vitamin folic acid is a crucial nutrient for preventing spina bifida.

While earlier studies have shown that folic acid prevents new cases of spina bifida in women who have already had babies with this serious defect, the latest work shows it also is highly effective for the majority who have never had spina bifida children.

In September, the U.S. Public Health Service recommended that all women capable of becoming pregnant take four-tenths of a milligram of folic acid daily, the amount in an ordinary multivitamin. That recommendation was based in part on an early look at the study, conducted in Hungary.

In an editorial in the journal, Dr. Irwin H. Rosenberg of the U.S. Department of Agriculture Human Nutrition Center on Aging at Tufts University called the study "a landmark."

Until now, the strongest evidence that folic acid prevents birth defects came from a study sponsored by the British Medical Research Council. It found that women who already had a child with spina bifida could reduce their risk of producing a second one with the defect by 70 percent if they took the vitamin.

"The question that remained was: Were they an unusual group? This study answers that. If given to the population at large, you reduce the number of neural tube defects. It's a very important observation," said Dr. Michael Ratz, vice president for research at the March of Dimes.

Rifabutin approved for AIDS patients

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration approved the first drug to prevent a blood infection in people who have advanced AIDS, the agency said.

The drug, rifabutin, has been on a fast track through the agency's approval process, in part because it is for AIDS and in part because its results have been so positive. Clinical tests have shown it to be effective in blocking or delaying Mycobacterium avium complex, or MAC.

"As the first product approved for the prevention of MAC disease, this drug will provide significant benefits for AIDS patients," FDA Commissioner David Kessler said. "It's a welcome addition to the growing number of products used to fight AIDS and diseases that can accompany it."

MAC can cause night sweats, fatigue, fever, weight loss, abdominal pain, severe anemia and liver dysfunction. The disease is caused by bacteria related to the tuberculosis germ. Researchers have said it occurs in about a quarter of the people in the late stages of AIDS.

An advisory panel last February recommended that the FDA approve the drug, and the agency moved the following month to make it available to AIDS patients whose immune systems were severely impaired.

Early studies of the drug found that it nearly halved the rate at which AIDS patients developed MAC. Clinical trials eventually were conducted on 1,100 AIDS patients, the FDA said.

Nasal flu vaccine reduces disease

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — A nasal flu vaccine given to elderly nursing home residents along with traditional flu shots reduced the outbreak of flu cases by more than half, according to researchers.

The new vaccine has been tested on about 1,600 people around the country. If it proves successful in more tests, it could be on the market in the next three or four years, said Dr. John J. Treanor, an assistant professor of medicine at the University of Rochester.

In Rochester, the vaccine was administered by nose drops to elderly patients in three nursing homes over three years. Half the 523 patients were given the traditional flu vaccine and the new nose drops. The other half received the shot and placebo drops.

Of those who received only the shot, 14 percent developed the flu, Treanor said. Only 5 percent of those who got both the shot and the nasal vaccine became sick.

Treanor said researchers have not tested the effectiveness of just the nasal vaccine in elderly patients. But in other studies, the nasal vaccine used alone effectively produced flu antibodies in children, he said.

In otherwise healthy adults, the nasal vaccine is about equally effective as the traditional flu shot, he said. "In the elderly, it looks like right now, the combination may be the best way to go."

If the nasal vaccine gets federal approval, Wyeth-Ayerst will market it, said Audrey Ashby, a spokeswoman for Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories.

Marijuana ingredient OK'd for AIDS use

CHICAGO — A synthetic form of the ingredient in marijuana that produces the high has won Food and Drug Administration approval for use against the wasting effect associated with AIDS.

Doctors said the drug, called dronabinol, helps overcome severe nausea and stimulate the appetite of AIDS patients, who often suffer severe weight loss.

The FDA gave its approval Tuesday to dronabinol, which is marketed by Unimed Inc. of Buffalo Grove and Roxane Laboratories Inc. of Columbus, Ohio, under the trade name Marinol.

Dronabinol is a synthetic form of THC, or tetrahydrocannabinol, the main active ingredient in marijuana and hashish. Previously, dronabinol's use had been limited by the FDA to fighting the nausea experienced by some cancer patients undergoing chemotherapy.

Marijuana cannot be legally dispensed for medicinal use in the United States.

"There is widespread agreement on the positive role that a nutritional regimen plays in the health of AIDS patients, and it is our belief that Marinol, as an appetite stimulant, can be of great value," said Scott Broder, Unimed senior vice president of sales and marketing.

The FDA reviewed dronabinol's effectiveness against wasting after people with AIDS reported that marijuana improved their appetite, FDA spokeswoman Monica Revelle said.

Schooley said the approval marks a new openness on the part of the FDA in considering AIDS treatments.

Kidney stones prevalent in southeast

Over the past 10 years, the management of kidney stone disease has changed very significantly. Our understanding as to the causes of the disease as well as treatment options, both medical and surgical, have changed.

The most recent development that is fairly well known is the use of the "stone bath." The technical term for this is extracorporeal shock wave lithotripsy. This device utilizes electrically generated sound waves which are then passed through the body and focused on the kidney stone, resulting in the stone fragmentation. The stone fragments are then passed by the patient. This procedure is typically performed as an outpatient and most patients return to work within a very short period of time.

Most treatment modalities will relieve the immediate problem caused by the kidney stone, however, the key to effective therapy is the diagnosis of the reason for the stone and a subsequent treatment for the metabolic problem. A first time stone-former needs evaluation. These patients carry a 50 percent chance of forming a new stone within five years. A battery of laboratory tests on the blood and urine should be performed and appropriate X-ray studies need to be done.

A dietary history is also necessary and the patient may have to make some changes in the kind and quantity of foods that he or she may eat. Urinary tract calculi or stones impose a significant burden on the economy due to the amount of time lost at work. It also imposes increased economic stress due to the amount of care that these people require.

There are several kinds of stones a stone-former may create and it is equally important for the urologist as well as the patient to try and recover any stones that are passed so that they can be analyzed. This may help in the treatment plan.

Although the method of ESWL, as well as ureteroscopic extraction of stones exist (ureteroscopic extraction entails the placement of a small operating instrument into the ureter (or drainage tube of the kidney) through which various methods of stone extraction are performed. There are cases where it is necessary for the urologist to perform open surgery on the patient in order to render the patient stone free.

Kidney stone disease is a major problem in the southeast portion of the United States. Good hydration or taking in plenty of fluids and a moderate diet is advised. If you think you have kidney stones, please contact your family physician or your urologist for further information.

Anthony J. Archola, M.D. is a urologist at The Urology Center, 143 Medical Plaza Dr., Suite 101, in Sanford.

Doctors say chickenpox drug rarely used

By CLIFF EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO — A drug approved by the federal government this year to treat chickenpox isn't needed in most cases because the disease is so mild, a pediatricians' group says.

Four million youngsters get chickenpox each year, but only a few suffer complications, and the disease kills fewer than 100 children with no other apparent ailments annually, the American Academy of Pediatrics reported Sunday.

The academy said the drug acyclovir offers only marginal benefits to children with chickenpox and in most cases isn't worth the time and money involved in getting a prescription.

Two pediatricians not associated with the academy's opinion agreed. The drug's maker, Burroughs Wellcome Co., did not.

"Because of the impossibility of predicting who will have serious disease and who will not, it is a well-established modern medical pediatric practice to treat and vaccinate many children for certain diseases," spokeswoman Kathy Bartlett said.

Chickenpox usually makes children sick for several days with a rash on the trunk, arms and face, and possibly a mild fever. Adults often get much sicker, and some children may suffer complications because of impaired immune systems that make them especially vulnerable.

Varicella zoster virus, which causes chickenpox, also causes shingles in adults.

The 45,000-member academy, based in suburban Elk Grove Village, said physicians should use acyclovir for chickenpox patients older than 12 who are not pregnant and those with impaired immune systems.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved acyclovir in February for treating chickenpox after research showed the drug, sold as Zovirax, can hasten recovery by about a day and relieve some symptoms.

The FDA authorized acyclovir several years ago for treating genital herpes, which afflicts 5 million to 20 million Americans and is caused by a virus very similar to the one causing chickenpox.

Burroughs Wellcome estimates treating chickenpox with acyclovir can save the economy $400 million annually, mainly by getting parents back to work faster by lessening the time they must care for their sick children.

But the pediatricians say treating 4 million people yearly will cost $200 million to $312 million, given an individual drug cost of $50 to $78, depending on the size, weight and location of the patient.

Added to that would be an estimated $30 per patient to visit the doctor to get a prescription, said John Modlin, professor of pediatrics and medicine at Dartmouth Medical School, who was not associated with the academy statement.

Many forms of arthritis can be cured at home

By DR. MICHAEL FREEDMAN

NEW YORK — Arthritis strikes one out of every seven Americans, but it's not just one disease.

The most common form is osteoarthritis, a deterioration of the rubber-like cartilage that acts as a shock absorber between the bones in weight-bearing joints, such as the knees. It is a common ailment after age 60.

When the cartilage deteriorates, it may get tears. Pain comes from bone rubbing against bone.

Rheumatoid arthritis, which can occur at any age, is caused by the immune system attacking tissue around the joints, bringing on inflammation of the synovium, the lining of the joint capsule. This problem may eventually lead to disease of the cartilage itself.

Other forms of arthritis include Lyme disease arthritis and gout, where excess uric acid accumulates in the joints and causes painful swelling.

Anyone who thinks they have arthritis should see a doctor because arthritis can represent a more serious illness.

Many forms of arthritis, including gout and Lyme arthritis may be cured, while the symptoms of osteo or rheumatoid arthritis can be lessened with certain medications.

Home exercisers have become somewhat of a fad. But if you are 35 and older, have high blood pressure or other risk factors for coronary artery disease, or back problems, check your doctor before getting started on any exercise program.

If you get new equipment, start slowly and make sure you know how to use the machinery. Thousands of Americans each year injure themselves on exercise equipment.

The notion of "no pain, no gain" is not only wrong, but dangerous. Pain is a signal from your body that you should never ignore.

Before starting a strenuous routine, always warm up first by either running slowly in place or using your machine at a very slow pace. It also is a good idea to stretch before exercising to prevent muscle tears.

After exercising, cool down gradually to avoid any sudden drop in blood pressure — and muscle soreness later.

One of the advantages of home workouts is that you can read, watch television or listen to music while you're at it.

Diverticulosis, a common ailment among people 50 and older, occurs when pouches called diverticula protrude through weak spots of the colon.

But a high fiber diet may help prevent the condition. With age, your muscles can weaken and become less able to push waste along. Foods such as wheat bran, whole grain products and fresh fruits and vegetables help keep stools soft and easier to pass.

If one of the pouches become inflamed and infected, a condition known as diverticulitis, doctors may recommend a temporary low-fiber diet and prescribe antibiotics.

Once the inflammation clears, a high fiber diet can be resumed.

SOUND ADVICE

NICK SPINA
CERTIFIED HEARING INSTRUMENT SPECIALIST

Have you ever blown a dog whistle and wondered why you did not hear a sound? The sound it generated was at a pitch too high for the human ear to hear but was in a range easily heard by the dog which has much better high frequency hearing than we humans do.

If you are having trouble understanding what someone is saying, ask them to speak slower. This may actually help more than asking them to speak louder.

Question - My hearing keeps getting worse, is there any point to trying a hearing aid since it may not be strong enough if my loss continues to increase?

Answer - A hearing aid is usually in that has enough "reserve power" to cover small changes in hearing. If this is a concern to you, be sure to mention it at the time of testing so an instrument with additional "reserve power" can be ordered.

Bush may explain Iran-Contra notes

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Iran-Contra prosecutors plan to question President Bush and other administration officials about why they failed to turn over relevant notes the then-vice president took six years ago, officials familiar with the investigation say.

Bush, who pardoned former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and five other Iran-Contra figures on Christmas Eve, began keeping the notes in November 1986 as the Iran-Contra scandal was erupting, said the officials, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The White House didn't tell Iran-Contra independent prosecutor Lawrence Walsh about the material until two weeks ago.

"There are a lot of questions and a lot of people to talk to," one official said Friday.

In another development, The Los Angeles Times reported today that three top Democrats, including Les Aspin, President-elect Clinton's choice for defense secretary, assured Bush weeks ago that they would support the Weinberger pardon.

Aspin and House Speaker Thomas Foley expressed their support after an intensive lobbying campaign on Weinberger's behalf, the newspaper said, adding that the campaign was led by Weinberger lawyer Robert S. Bennett and longtime friend William P. Clark, interior secretary in the Reagan administration.

The Times, quoting two people identified only as familiar with the lobbying campaign, said the effort succeeded in gaining bipartisan congressional support for the pardon without stressing that five other former government officials also should be given clemency.

The Times did not reach either Aspin or Foley for comment.

A third Democrat, Sen. Dennis DeConcini of Arizona, told the newspaper Friday that he called Bush without any prompting from Weinberger supporters because he thought the Iran-Contra affair "had gone on long enough." Bush will release his Iran-Contra notes to the public if Walsh returns a copy of the president's earlier interview with investigators, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Friday.

"We plan to release them (the notes) with the testimony given to the independent counsel and Weinberger's notes. We've called for Weinberger to release his notes. I think he's agreed to do that," Fitzwater said in an interview.

"We have nothing to hide. We'll make all this material public," he said, adding that he had "no idea" what was in the notes.

In today's editions of The Washington Post, lawyer James Bronsahan, who was prosecuting Weinberger for Walsh, is quoted as saying a White House legal official notified Walsh's office on Dec. 11 of the notes, "and that they were embarrassed — that they should have been produced before."

Bronsahan said the typed, dictated notes contained Bush's "ruminations about the investigation and refer to his disappointment that (former Secretary of State George) Shultz made his notes available" to Iran-Contra prosecutors.

Bush has said repeatedly that he was generally "out of the loop" on the Iran-Contra initiative.

Prosecutors had planned to interview Bush earlier this year, but put it off until after the Nov. 3 election.

Now, Iran-Contra investigators "will want to talk to Bush in detail about these latest matters," said another official, also speaking on condition of anonymity.

Saints, Raiders win

The final NFL weekend started with New Orleans beating the New York Jets 20-0 and the L.A. Raiders hurting Washington's playoff chances with a final minute 21-20 victory. For the Redskins to make the playoffs, Green Bay (9-7) must lose to the Minnesota Vikings.

Sanford's Jeff Blake played in relief for the Jets after starting quarterback Browning Nagle was injured and finished 1-for-6 passing.

New Orleans (12-4) will be at home next weekend for a wild-card playoff game against either Philadelphia or Green Bay.

Kaleo leads Gray comeback

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Maryland's John Kaleo threw two touchdown passes, including the 18-yard game-winner to Clemson's Larry Ryans with 2:50 remaining, as the Gray rallied to a 27-17 win in the Blue-Gray All-Star Classic.

Arkansas linebacker Raylee Johnson sealed the victory 27 seconds later when he knocked the ball from Blue quarterback Alex Van Pelt, picked it up and ran 40 yards to the end zone.

The Blue dominated the first half, building a 14-0 lead while outgaining the Gray 259-100. The Blue finished ahead 372-326.

Kaleo was named Gray MVP, completing nine of 15 passes for 147 yards. Ryans led receivers with four catches for 64 yards.

Indiana quarterback Trent Green was Blue MVP, going eight of 15 for 99 yards and directing both scoring drives in the first half.

HONOLULU — Dan Elchloff kicked a 48-yard field goal with 2:57 left, capping a 7-minute, 15-play drive that gave Kansas a 23-20 victory over No. 25 Brigham Young in the Aloha Bowl.

The Cougars (8-5) responded by moving to the Kansas 35 before a pass by quarterback Tom Young was intercepted by Charley Bowen.

BYU kicker David Lauder missed three field goals, including a 42-yarder with 12:49 to play.

Young, a descendant of Brigham Young and brother of San Francisco 49ers quarterback Steve Young, was 15 of 31 for 262 yards and one touchdown in his first start. He was sacked six times, three by tackle Dana Stubblefield, selected as the game's most valuable player.

Kansas (8-4) quarterback Chip Hileary's 1-yard run with 11:26 remaining and ensuing 2-point conversion run tied the game 20-20. Hileary completed 11 of 23 for 126 yards.

Bush, Pryce, Walraven top county selections

From Staff, Wire Reports

JACKSONVILLE — All but one Seminole County's six public high schools were represented somewhere on the all-state football teams released this weekend by the Florida Sports Writers Association.

Seminole High School, the only Class 4A school of the sextet, had three players honored while Lake Brantley, Lake Mary, and Lyman each had two players named to the Class 5A state teams. Lake Howell was represented on the Class 5A second team by one player.

Oviedo was the only school not to have a player selected.

The only first team pick of the group was Lake Brantley linebacker Daryl Bush, who was named to the Class 5A first-team defensive unit.

When the Central Florida Classic tipped off last Saturday, Gainesville-P.K. Younge and Lake Brantley weren't among the favorites, mainly because of their combined record of 5-6. But in Wednesday's title game at Oviedo High School, Israel Wilcox (No. 33) led P.K. Younge to a 72-60 win over Matt Certo (No. 34), Bob Coberly (No. 30) and the Lake Brantley Patriots.

ORLANDO — Just how good are the Lyman Greyhounds?

Ranked No. 2 in the Florida Athletic Coaches Association Class 4A state poll, owners of an 8-0-2 record and winners of this year's Goldenrod Rotary tournament, the Greyhounds are off to a great start.

But how good are they?

They — and most anyone else who's interested — will get a pretty good indication when they try to become the first Seminole County team to win the 14th annual Pizza Hut Invitational boys' soccer tournament championship this week.

Play begins at 11 a.m. Monday at Bishop Moore High School and at noon at Edgewater High School.

If the Miami Hurricanes win the Sugar Bowl, they'll be the best team of the year. But are they the greatest college football dynasty of all time?

It's a question with no definitive answer, like debating whether the 1927 Yankees could have beaten the Big Red Machine or whether Terry Bradshaw's Steelers were better than Joe Montana's 49ers.

Still, it's a question that will certainly be asked if top-ranked Miami beats No. 2 Alabama on New Year's night, a victory that would give the Hurricanes:

- Five national titles in 10 years, the most ever during that span, and three championships in four years, matching Notre Dame's feat from 1946-49.
- Two straight national championships without a loss or tie, last achieved by Oklahoma 36 years ago.

- Thirty consecutive victories, fourth-longest streak since World War II.
- Bowl victories in six straight seasons, one short of the NCAA record.
- A top three finish in The Associated Press poll for the seventh consecutive season. No other school has done it more than five straight times.

That's enough to convince several longtime college football watchers that Miami is in a class by itself. They believe no one else in the modern era has dominated a decade quite like the Hurricanes, not even the Oklahoma teams that won 47 straight games from 1953-57, the Notre Dame squads that won four national championships in the 1940s or the Alabama teams that won six titles in the 1950s and '70s.

"If they win five championships in 10 years, I'd have to say they're the greatest ever," said Pat Harmon, historian at the College Football Hall of Fame near Cincinnati. "If that's MIAMI — They've never won a national title, and they won't win one this year. Many proclaim them the best team in America, but no trophy or championship rings accompany the compliment.

This season probably will end like too many others for the Florida State Seminoles. They'll win a bowl game to finish 11-1, capping a campaign that would be a dream at most schools but maddens Tallahassee fans intent on the bottom line, which reads:

No. No. 1.

"It's kind of like, 'Ho-hum, here we go again.'" Florida State coach Bobby Bowden said.

In the final month of the regular season, Florida State took out its frustration on Maryland, Tulane and Florida, winning by a combined 184-52. The Seminoles may be better than ever, but they're still not national champs.

Wags say FSU stands for Finishes Second Usually, and second is where the Seminoles likely will wind up if they beat Nebraska in the Orange Bowl on New Year's night. They're ranked third now, poised to climb ahead of the Miami-Alabama loser in the Sugar Bowl's national championship game.

Some say Miami, one win away from its fifth title in 10 years, has built the greatest dynasty ever. If not for five losses to the Hurricanes since 1987, the same might be said of Florida State.

The difference between the two programs?

"A kick," Bowden said.

Florida State's shot at the national championship has gone wide right each of the past two years. The Seminoles missed a field goal on the final play of consecutive losses to Miami — 17-16 in 1991 and 19-16 this past October.

Those are two of Florida State's nine losses since '87. Take away one defeat each season — six were SANFORD — HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford has been working on a new cooperative effort with the Foundation for the Advancement of our Community Through Schools (FACTS) to help teachers advance their degrees and to help other school employees become teachers.

Recently, the two groups combined their efforts and their resources to award scholarships and grants to nine Seminole County school employees.

The scholarships, valued at $250 apiece, were given to five teachers from across the school district.

Four grants were given to non-instructional employees.

The scholarship winners were:
● Jeane Swaynos of Seminole High School in Sanford.

● Judith Ivey of Longwood Elementary School in Longwood.

● Evon Lisle of Lake Mary High School in Lake Mary.

● Mary McDonough of Rock Lake Middle School in Longwood.

● Lynn Keaton of the Rosenwald Exceptional Student Center in Altamonte Springs.

The non-instructional employees who were given grants were:

● Betty Ann Cote of Woodlands Elementary School in Longwood.

● Isabel Schopf of Tusawilla Middle School in Oviedo.

● Pamela Fowler of English Estates Elementary School in Fern Park.

● Cynthia Robinson of Pine Crest Elementary School in Sanford.

The HCA-FACTS scholarship program was established in 1991 to encourage school district employees to further their education. To date, over 66,000 has been awarded to employees across the district.

There will be more scholarships awarded in January.

The application deadline is Jan. 15, 1993.

School shows a lot of respect for everyone

SANFORD — Tim Seibert thinks that one of the most important elements of education has got to be to teach the youngsters to respect one another, the teachers and themselves.

Seibert said that the students on his campus are learning that lesson by the examples being set by the faculty and staff at the school.

"We are teaching everyone to respect others," Seibert said. "It is not a difficult thing to do. Everyone just has to be aware of others and to treat them with respect."

He said that the attention given to that one detail has made all the difference in the world at the school. He said that the "happy, cheerful" attitude has carried over into all aspects of their lives.

He said that student disciplinary problems have also decreased dramati-

In addition to stressing respect, the school is putting an emphasis on communication. One of the primary areas they are working on is in the area of parent-school communications.

Often, Seibert found that the parents had no way to get to the school to participate in PTA activities or to have teacher conferences. He decided that the best way to solve that problem was to bring the school to the parents.

Last year, he began having PTA and teacher meetings at a satellite location in the West Sanford Boys and Girls Club on Persimmon Avenue in Sanford.

"We find that so many parents have wanted to get involved but did not because they did not have the transportation to get to the school to do things," he said.

The results, he said, have been pleasing. He noted that parent participation is up with the increase in communications.

The Pine Crest student government works hard to make the school a better place. President Nelson Beverly, vice president Jennifer Poole, secretary Jessica Poole and treasurer Julius Francis lead the forces.

SANFORD — Kids helping other kids become winners.

That's the philosophy behind the Cross-Age Tutoring Program that is being implemented at Idyllwild Elementary School in Sanford.

The Cross-Age Tutoring program has been published by the American Guidance Services and a pair of teachers at the Sanford school are conducting a field test on the materials.

The first graders in Mary Ann Massoll's first grade class are getting some help in their studies from the STAR (alternative education) students in Ann Milburn's class. The fifth grade students, who are considered at risk of dropping out of school before completing high school, are given more personalized attention and work that is customized to their personalized needs.

The STAR students have completed a three part training session on how to be a "winner" in school.

Milburn said that the students have been learning to have a better attitude toward their school work and toward education in general.

The STAR students have been taking a few hours each week to read to and offer tutoring assistance in areas where the younger students might need some special assistance in their studies.

"It's working very well," said Milburn. "We're pleased with the results."

In addition to helping the students with their school work, the fifth graders are learning about how to take responsibility for themselves and for others.

"They are also showing the younger students the positive attitudes they have learned about school," Milburn noted.

Average SAT score up 100 points at state schools

TALLAHASSEE — The average freshman SAT score at Florida's nine state universities is 1,057, up 100 points from 1990, and 157 points above the university system's minimum standard.

But the average score that Florida high-school students get on the Scholastic Aptitude Test is 882.

Access wasn't much of an issue when the state Board of Regents raised admission standards in the 1980s. The goal was to get high school students to take a solid college-prep curriculum, not to make state universities elitist.

The University of Florida abruptly quit reporting freshmen's average SAT scores last year, when they passed 1,140.

Too many good students were being scared off, thinking their scores would be too low to be admitted to Florida's largest state university. The average SAT for this fall's freshmen was 1,152.

That's higher than the average at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the University of Texas at Austin, and other top American public universities.

Universities pick students on the basis of SAT scores and high school grades because they don't have a better way.

"At some point, a better SAT or better grade-point does not make you a better student," John Lombardi, president of the University of Florida, said. "When you get to the levels we're talking about, there's not much difference."

Lombardi says the SAT's reliability as an indicator of a student's potential plummets somewhere in the 900s. What tests like the SAT measure dependably, he says, is "the style of learning" high school students encounter, not ability to do university work.

At the state's second-largest university, the average freshman SAT score hit 1,092 this year. It shows Florida State University can compete for top students, President Dale Lick said. But it also means the Tallahassee school is turning away students it would be proud to have.

"I've taken the SAT three times," said Jessica Woodham, a senior at Leon High School in Tallahassee, adding that she plans to take it again next month.

Woodham has a B average and has made all A's this year. But her SAT score is in the low 800s. She's afraid she'll have to go to college out of state.

Woodham said her brother sailed into Florida State three years ago with SAT and high school scores comparable to hers.

Though urban public universities are supposed to serve local people who can't go away to college, the SAT score inflation has hit there, too, making it tougher to be admitted than in similar systems in other states.

Hollie Albershardt

Dazzler of the Week

Hollie Albershardt, an eleventh grader at Seminole High School, has been selected by the school's Dazzler Dance Team as Dazzler of the Month.

Daughter of Rebecca Albershardt, Hollie has been a member of the dance team for two years. She enjoys modeling, clubs and horserback riding.

"Hollie said the dance team is a learning experience and something she will carry with her all her life. "It has given me dedication...to find something and stick with it," she said.

She added, "My goals are to go to college and study dance and hopefully returning to Seminole to become the next Mrs. (Maureen) Maguire (Dazzler dance instructor) and to teach future dancers."

Artist trades time between painting, miniature horses

SANFORD — Painting is her first love but her five miniature horses come a very close second.

Le Ann Stewart, born in Scottsdale, Ariz., has been a resident of Sanford for the past four years. Le Ann trades her time between her two loves, her miniature horses and painting. She is a member of the Orlando Arabian Horse Association and the Florida Miniature Horse Club.

She specializes in oil paintings of portraits, wildlife, landscapes and her favorite subject, horses. "Although I have been painting many years my serious painting didn't begin until about four years ago. Since that time I have been building a portfolio, exhibiting my paintings in small or private exhibitions and doing commissioned paintings."

"I enjoy attending horse shows and functions to obtain material and ideas for my paintings," she explained. "When I paint, I paint, and I connect what I see and then I study my photographs. I found it strange that if I study those photographs to try to get a feel for that horse's personality and then always in my painting I find there is one point where there is such a struggle. It's like I haven't got it yet."

"I couldn't tell you exactly what I am trying to reach but my insides know the feeling I am trying to project out from that painting. From that point on until I get the painting to where I want to get it from, the struggle, and then when I finally get it, it's like, wow, what a time, I finally accomplish the feelings that personality has projected to me from its photograph."

"It makes me feel good about it when I feel like I have captured on canvas what that subject is projecting. I like to do collective paintings. Two or three horses on one canvas. Horses just seem to be my specialty. I am very proud of one of my paintings which I have named "Country Pleasure." It appeared on the cover of the Arabian Express magazine. I have also been featured in the 'Arabian Vision' magazine and the 'Horse and Pony' publication in Florida."

Horses, in many colors and many breeds, are featured throughout her house. There is a beautiful Palomino with a lovely young lady standing beside it, a young foal being held ever so gently by its proud owner and two young colts frolicking in a field. The paintings are all so exquisitely done.

"I did a commission for Christmas a couple of years ago. This lady brought in two photos of her horse. One was just of his head and the other was this horse jumping from the side view. I wasn't sure I could do it and she told me she knew I could do it because she had seen my work before."

SANFORD — Like all little girls, Cheryl Polk Parker adored her daddy — so much so, that she followed him into law enforcement.

"He thrived on law enforcement and serving the community," she said. Cheryl had little interest in it until she began working with the Victim's Advocacy program following her divorce, she said, which eventually led her to attend the Law Enforcement Academy.

Following her completion of the courses there, she worked four years with both the Longwood Police Department and the Sanford Airport Authority, emulating the goals of her late father.

John E. Polk began his career in law enforcement with the Highway Patrol in the weights division, Cheryl said, where he worked when she was born. When he moved on from there, he became Sheriff of Seminole County, a job he held until his retirement 22 years later, on Dec. 31, 1990.

"He served a lot of citizens in Seminole County and throughout the state, and was very active in lobbying for laws both in Washington and at the state level," Cheryl said. He was also active in the Florida Sheriffs' Association and was supportive of many local charities.

The Westbrooks honored on golden wedding anniversary

Congratulations are in order to Catherine and Clinton "Clint" H. Westbrook, who celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Dec. 13. They were each born in the New York City area and met in high school.

On their anniversary, they were entertained by their children at a dinner for 26 at the Polynesian, Walt Disney World.

Their children and spouses are: Clint Jr. and Fifi, Orlando; John and Pam, Mt. Dora; Jim and Laura, Orlando; and their daughter and husband, Cathy and Col. Tom Samples, who are stationed in North Carolina with the U.S. Air Force. There are seven grandchildren.

The Westbrooks are members of the Nativity Catholic Church. Their hobbies are gardening and travel. In 1991, they flew to Hawaii for the 50th anniversary of the bombing of Pearl Harbor. During this time they met President George Bush.

Catherine said she has belonged to the same bridge club for 30 years, going back to the days when she was a Navy wife and wives played a lot of bridge in those days.

The Westbrooks' wedding story dates back to the bombing of Pearl Harbor and the sinking of the Arizona on which Clint was assigned. Later, he was assigned to a new ship in time for the invasion of North Africa.

Following World War II, the Westbrooks settled in San Francisco with their oldest son, James. According to Catherine, "Homesickness drove us back to New York." Their daughter, Cathy, arrived in 1948. The Navy recalled Clint in 1950 and they made their home in Newport, R.I.

Another son, John, was born in 1956 followed by the birth of Clint Jr. in 1957.

The Navy stepped in again, this time transferring Clint to Sanford Naval Air Station in 1960. Clint retired in 1967 and became Seminole County's civil Because Sheriff Polk was so actively involved in the lives of Seminole County citizens, Cheryl decided to do something to preserve both his memory and his heritage, and said she has completed the first two chapters and an outline of a book about her father. She hopes to publish it for sale upon completion, she said, which she expects will be within the next year.

Cheryl particularly remembers three trips her father made to London, she said, where he helped create the Sheriff's self-insurance fund for all departments. She recalls that he stayed at Scotland Yard and dealt with Lloyd's of London in the negotiations, and that he suffered a heart attack during one trip which required her mother and brother to travel there to bring him home. He refused to be slowed down, however, and ultimately accomplished his goal on a later trip.

Cheryl said she remembers a story after story of her father's experiences which demonstrate his love of hands-on law enforcement. He was as likely as not to be involved in a high-speed pursuit as any officer on his force, she said, and delighted in stopping potential violators who reacted with threats of calling the sheriff to report him.

Well, I took on the job. I worked so hard on that horse because she wanted an 11 X 14. You had to do details so I went in and studied that breed of horse, the eyes, the head and everything else trying to get what looked like this little black horse. She came over and picked it up a couple of days before Christmas.

"When she came in, I was feeling uncomfortable about what her reaction would be; she started to water up and she said, 'Oh, my word, you have got it.'" "This horse had died and there were no other pictures available. I was so happy that I asked her to call me back and let me know what her husband said when he unwrapped it. She called back and said, 'My husband could not believe it. That was his horse.' I felt so good and especially because I know how it feels to lose something so dear."

"My ideal is to work on two or three paintings at a time. I will work on one a couple of hours and then I will take a break and then I go to a second one. I can't work four hours on one because it is so draining.

An eye-catching painting in the hallway of a lovely ballerina bent over in a semi-kneeling position is somewhat out of context, she explained. "This one was late at night. I used to be a jewelry designer and I painted late in the evenings or on the weekends. I came home late that night and it was like everything fell into place. I didn't have to think about anything. Her hair — I just put paint on the palette and I went like that and it was there. I couldn't believe it. I was astounded what was coming out. The whole painting was like that. That was one of the very few that was just instant."

The Christian Education Committee of Historic St. James A.M.E. Church will present its third program in its monthly African-American history series today during the Sunday School hour, 9:30-10:30 a.m. In keeping with the holiday

After the invocation and a panel discussion on "Building Family Unity" in the community, the program will continue with the lighting of the seven candle candle-holder (kinara) which is symbolic of the entire Kwanzaa concept.

The closing activity of this month's presentation will feature the Karamu (kaa-ra-moo) which means feast and will include African-American food for tasting and a brief fashion show of African attire.

Other churches are invited to use this as a field trip for its Sunday School participants. Historic St. James A.M.E. Church is located on the corner of 9th Street and Cypress Avenue.

Pastor Pitts and his members also wish to invite members of the community to their one-hour Christmas Eve service.

An extra-special guest was Misty, the wonder dog, who performed her tricks to the delight of those present.

Kiwanians help needy

Within a 3-day period, the Sanford Kiwanis Club shared the spirit of Christmas with over 600 children and hundreds of needy families.

In addition, 39 club members rang bells for the annual Salvation Army Kettle fund-raiser at four Sanford businesses for eight hours. According to Walt Smith, club president, Sanford Kiwanis has raised more money for the local Salvation Army than any local civic club. He said, "It looks like they might repeat themselves this year. By Bernice Bede Ouel YOUR BIRTHDAY Dec. 27, 1992

Generally speaking, you should be lucky in the year ahead. However, you are apt to be most fortunate in love, which could be the most important of all. Times ahead look promising for the unattached.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) People who come to you for help today might receive more advice than substantial assistance. Parting with your resources could be a painful experience for you. Capricorn, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Capricorn's Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You have excellent leadership qualities which are likely to be obvious to everyone except yourself today. It's a shame to rain on your own parade.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Feeling sorry for yourself today is an unproductive use of emotion and energy. If you want to feel good about yourself, do things that are helpful to others.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Do not discuss a matter that you are enthusiastic about with a negative friend today. His or her dark perspective could overshadow your optimism.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be sure you know what you want today. Otherwise, you may strive very hard for something only to discover it provides you with insignificant gratification when attained.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you lack total faith in your ideas or plans today, it will be very difficult for you to gain the endorsement of others. Believe in your cause or bow out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be realistic regarding what you expect from others today, or else you could be severely disappointed. Put yourself in others' shoes to get the proper perspective.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You will be supportive of people you love today, yet you might re-SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Try not to be overly protective of those in your charge today. Your intentions will be good, but they might find the restraints too restrictive.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Try not to be stingy with your resources or possessions today, but, by the same token, if you have something you would rather not lend to a poor risk, say "no."

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your leadership qualities will be evident to your peers today, although you might not recognize them. Don't take a back seat if they are calling for you up front.

Brother Anthony, a member of a silent order, features occasionally in David Bird's articles about the monks of St. Titus. He is an indulgent person, but his patience reached breaking point when today's deal was played. Brother Anthony was sitting East.

West, the Abbot, feeling safe because his partner could never utter a bid, opened with a psychic one club. However, his bid was out of turn. The tournament director told South that if he opened the bidding, East would be forced to pass throughout!

Deciding he had to open to exact the full penalty, South began with one club. North raised to five clubs.

Enough is enough, thought Brother Anthony, looking at his 22 points. "Double," he said, surprised to notice that his voice had broken since he took his TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may feel a strong desire to socialize with friends today. Try to select a quiet atmosphere, because although you might need companionship, you don't need a loud environment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You have a subtle, authoritative charisma today. This enviable asset could enable you to take command of situations without shaking everyone up.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Instead of making snap judgments today, take adequate time to sift through all of the information at your disposal. Each fact could be significant in its own way.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Proceed cautiously if you are required to make any financial or VIRO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Take pains to be extra tactful of people with whom you deal on a one-to-one basis today. Kindness and understanding will help you accomplish your objectives.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Projects where you utilize your imagination and resourcefulness could prove to be especially rewarding for you today. Keep your focus on creative endeavors.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) People who already like you will be even more enamored today because they will see exceptional qualities in you that are absent in others.

For some moments, only the ticking of the grandfather clock could be heard.

The Abbot led the heart 10: six, king, ace. The declarer, Brother Xavier, then took the next eight tricks with the diamond ace, two diamond ruffs in hand, the heart queen, the spade ace and three spade ruffs in the dummy.

North was on lead, holding two diamonds and the A-8 of clubs. East had his four trumps. South retained two hearts and the 10-8 of clubs. On the lead of a diamond, Brother Anthony could only ruff high and play back the club king. But the lead of dummy's last diamond allowed declarer to score his club 10 with a coup en passant. Five clubs doubled and made.

"What do you mean by breaking your vow of silence, just to double a cold game?" demanded the Abbot.

GARAGE SALE GUIDELINES

1. Advertise what people want! Children's clothing, dishes, collectibles, tools, books and antiques are the most popular items.
2. Make it convenient to shop at your garage sale! Be sure there is adequate parking space. Post signs with directions to parking areas. Make arrangements with neighbors.
3. Make it easy to pay! Have plenty of change and a system for handling. Make sure one person is on duty at all times at a centralized location preferably with a calculator or adding machine.
4. Provide prices. Do not make every person ask. "How much is this?" Prices make for quick, effective sales or a good place for customers to start bargaining.
5. Get an early start. Set up displays the evening before, if possible.
6. Departmentalize. Separate the inexpensive items from the more costly areas. Group furniture, clothing, toys, lawn equipment and other items with similar merchandise.
7. Separate. Establish one area for "Under $5", another for "Under $11". Consider having a batch of items that are "FREE with purchase of $5". Remember the youngsters, too. Encourage this with small, low-priced items that are appropriate for this purpose.
8. Time your sale carefully! Have it at a time when most people are at home and unencumbered with special events. Do not schedule your sale during your usual work hours.
9. Be prepared for handling your sale in the newspaper. Be prepared to handle your sale in the newspaper. Be prepared to handle your sale in the newspaper. Be prepared to handle your sale in the newspaper.

Top retailers target improved sales

By NICK PFEIFER
Herald Staff Writer

According to major business reports, the nation's three top retail stores are Wal-Mart, Kmart, and Sears. Each is maneuvering to improve sales, but two of the three are facing problems.

Wal-Mart is fighting allegations by an NBC television program regarding the use of child labor overseas, in producing products identified as "Made in America."

A published report of possible massive lay-offs and small store closures has been associated with Sears stores.

Kmart meanwhile, sits in the middle, hoping to be number one in the as-soon-as-possible future.

All three stores are prominent in the Central Florida shopping community. Wal-Mart is located at 3653 Orlando Drive in Sanford.

Kmart is located at 3639 Lake Emma Road in Lake Mary, and 3101 Highway 17-92 in Sanford. An expansion project is presently underway at the Sanford location. When completed, it will provide almost double the retail space that had been provided at the store, one of the oldest Kmart's in the area.

Although there are some subsidiary Sears connected operations in the Sanford area, the main Sears operation is located at the Altamonte Mall.

Sears had at one time, been rumored to be under consideration as one of the original six major tenants. Spokespersons at Melvin Simon and Associates, developers of the mall, have not confirmed that Sears is being considered, although only four major tenants have been approved at the present time. They include J.C. Penneys, Dillard's, Parisian, and Burdines. Another retailer, Montgomery Ward, has also been contacted by Simon, but no agreement has been reached at this time.

Wal-Mart defends policy

By ROCK GLADSTONE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Wal-Mart Stores Inc. vehemently denied allegations in an NBC report that its commitment to sell American products is phony.

The "Dateline NBC" report says that despite Wal-Mart's fervently patriotic image, the nation's No. 1 retailer imports increasingly vast quantities of merchandise, exploits sweatshop child labor in Bangladesh, has done business with a suspected garment smuggling operation in China and displays foreign-made clothes on racks that proclaim "Made in the USA."

Wal-Mart stock dropped $1.75 a share to $63.87 1/2 Monday on publicity about the report, which aired earlier this week.

Wal-Mart spokesman Don Shinkle said that imports account for only 5.8 percent of the chain's total marketed goods. He also pointed out that some of the NBC report was attributed to organized labor, which has fought Wal-Mart before over its non-union policies.

"Wal-Mart stands behind its Buy America program," Shinkle said from the company's Bentonville, Ark., headquarters. "We find it incredible that NBC and a coalition of labor unions would attack a program designed to do nothing more than create jobs in this country."

Sears may close up to 100 stores

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Sears, Roebuck and Co. plans to close up to 100 of its smaller stores, eliminating up to 5,000 jobs nationwide, according to a Chicago Tribune report.

The report, citing company sources it did not identify, also said Sears plans to shrink its money-losing "Big Book" mail order catalog, which dates to the company's beginnings in 1886. It said Sears will probably switch to specialty catalogs.

The store closings are to be announced next month, the Tribune said. The newspaper did not say when the closings would take place. Sears has cut more than 48,000 jobs since 1990, but no stores have been closed.

Kmart: We're reinventing business we invented

By NICK PFEIFER
Herald Staff Writer

Kmart, founded in 1890 by Sebastian Spering Kresge, a traveling salesman from Pennsylvania, observed its 30th birthday this past year. Store expansion projects are underway across the nation, including the doubling of retail space at the Sanford Kmart store, 3101 Highway 17-92.

Kmart's 1991 Annual Report says, "We've changed the way we look, feel, think and act. We're reinventing the business we invented - and there's a lot more to come."

Kmart has 2,400 stores nationwide. The report predicts, "By 1995, 2,500 Kmart stores will boast fresh surroundings, wider aisles, modern displays and a broad assortment of quality and popular merchandise."

Net earnings were reported at $859 million, up 13.6 percent from $756 million in 1990. Fourth quarter earnings were up 19.2 percent from the same period in 1990.

Kmart recently opened a prototype store in Oak Park, Michigan, showing a complete redesign of the physical layout. The concepts developed in the new facility will be used to incorporate new ideas into other stores.

In addition to Kmart stores, the corporation subsidiaries include Builders Square, OfficeMax, F&E Membership Warehouse, Pay Less Drug Stores, the Sports Authority, and Walden Book Company.

Flea World sets record, makes donation

By NICK PFEIFER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Flea World, on highway 17-92 south of Sanford, reported a new attendance record last Sunday. Over 10,000 cars were reported on that day.

The record did not come as a surprise however, as the Sunday prior to Christmas has traditionally been the busiest day of the season.

Optimism continues high that a new record may be set at an even higher level in the 1,800 parking spaces before the end of the holidays. Final figures have not been revealed.

According to Flea World's Bill Patti, "The record attendance is partly attributed to the popularity of the newly expanded Fun World, the seven acre family fun park at Flea World."

He continued, "Fun World has been promoting the concept that parents can relax while they shop, by dropping the kids off at Fun World."

He also attributed the arrival of Santa on the day after Thanksgiving, and a new array of decorations as part of the contributing factor to the improved attendance.

This past week, Flea World owner Syd Levy presented a check for over $900 to Irene Brown, director of the Sanford Christian Sharing Center. The money was raised over the holiday season during the Flea World's annual company Christmas party.

"I'm proud that my employees are unselfishly giving back something to the local community," Levy said. "They have found the true meaning of the season, and I hope that next December, we'll find even more funds to brighten up the holidays in Sanford."

Brown called the gift her "miracle money." She said, "The center didn't have the funds, but when Mr. Levy called to tell us of the donation, we purchased 60 turkeys worth $650 for giveaways to needy Sanford families. We think of it as our Christmas miracle."

This is the second year that Flea World has made a Christmas donation to the center.
