Bomb threat reported to fire department

SANFORD — There was a report of a bomb Sunday night at the Barn, 1200 French Ave., but the owner refused to search or evacuate the night club in which approximately 450 customers had gathered for a concert by country singer Johnny Paycheck.

According to a Sanford Fire Department report, the Seminole County Sheriff's Department received a report of a bomb at the Barn and then notified the fire department.

and Sanford police responded to the bomb scare at 9:22 p.m.

Barn owner Dale Gustafson refused to search or evacuate the building, according to the fire department report.

Fire Chief Tom Hixon said that his department has the authority to close an establishment in such instances. The fire personnel would then notify the Sheriff's Department, which would then respond with its bomb squad.

As to why the Sheriff's department would transfer a bomb threat to the fire department, Hixon said, "I'm as curious as you." Usually, they will only respond unless we request them. It is a matter of courtesy rather than jurisdiction.

The Sheriff's department communications division said it had no record of receiving a bomb threat call Wednesday night.

Hixon would not comment on why the decision was made not to search or evacuate the Barn until he spoke with Battalion Chief Ernie Ellenberg, who had authority at the scene. "Personally, I would have called in the appropriate people (bomb squad)," said Hixon.

Hixon said that if a bomb did explode, the responsibility is with the owner, once he is advised of the threat, but that the fire department can "supersede" the owner's denial of a search and evacuation.

"It's a judgement call. We do it all the time," said Hixon.

Sanford Police Chief Steven Harriet said, "If the fire department had told us to shut it down, we would have closed the place. We are there only to assist. You have to take them (bomb scares) serious, but most of the time it is someone just trying to inconvenience the owner."

Jay Murphy, a manager at the Barn, said he was in his office at the time of the bomb report. Murphy said he was not aware of any bomb threat, but said some people told him of fire and police vehicles in the parking lot.

Teenager shot while standing on corner

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Sanford police are investigating the Sunday night shooting of a 17-year-old Sanford boy, despite the unwillingness of the boy to cooperate in the investigation.

Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriet said today that Carlos Walker, 34, of Seminole Gardens Apartments, 1600 W. Fifth St., was standing on the corner at West 10th Street and Olive Avenue at about 10:20 p.m. when a shot was fired at him from a passing car.

Walker was wounded in his right leg by a single shot from a small-caliber, semi-automatic handgun, Harriet said.

Walker refused to cooperate with investigators, Harriet said, and there are reportedly no witnesses to the shooting.

Harriet said he does not know a motive for the shooting or what the outcome of the investigation might be. Walker continues to refuse to talk.

The area where the incident occurred is a known drug dealing site, he said. However, police have not determined if the shooting is possibly drug related.

Walker was transported by ambulance to Central Florida Regional Hospital, Sanford. He was released after treatment.

IN BRIEF

Man's car allegedly found to be cache for loaded, illegal guns

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — A Miami Beach man caught the eye of Altamonte Springs police when his car reportedly backed up with headlights out onto State Road 434. The resulting confrontation has led to charges of possession of a short-barreled shotgun and possession of a pistol with an altered serial number.

Police reported finding the loaded weapons in the car of Anthony Andrew Mori, 20, after police allegedly saw loose ammunition in that car. Both the shotgun and the .22-caliber automatic pistol had been shortened and the serial number had been cut from the pistol, police said. It also was equipped with a homemade silencer.

Police said that Mori was found at the entrance to a construction site, and was in an area where several burglaries have been reported. He was arrested at 2:13 a.m. Friday. Gulf tensions accelerate

U.S. fires on Iranian ship

By Herman D. Sandler
United Press International
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two American jet fighters, responding to an attack, struck a belligerent Iranian frigate with missiles today, leaving the vessel burning in the Persian Gulf, the Pentagon said. The attack came just hours after U.S. Navy vessels attacked and destroyed two Iranian oil platforms.

Pentagon spokesman Dan Howard said the attack occurred at 8:30 a.m. EDT today when the Iranian frigate Sahand approached three American warships, and was requested by radio to turn away.

The Sahand ignored repeated warnings from an E-2C Hawkeye reconnaissance aircraft flying overhead, and fired on three A-6 Intruder aircraft patrolling in the area.

retaliation for the Iranian laying of mines in the gulf, one of which apparently blew a hole in the side of the U.S. frigate Samuel B. Roberts last Thursday.

One of the three American ships, the missile destroyer Strauss, also shot a Harpoon at the Sahand, Howard said. "All the ordnance appears to have hit the frigate and it's heavily damaged. It's on fire at the moment," the Pentagon spokesman said.

He said the incident occurred about 10 miles southwest of Larak Island in the Strait of Hormuz at the mouth of the Persian Gulf.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater announced that six American warships attacked the Sirti and Sassan oil installations in the southern gulf.

"The intruders returned fire with two Harpoon missiles and a number of laser guided bombs," Howard said.

The exchange of fire took place about seven hours after American warships destroyed two Iranian oil rigs in the gulf in

Beaches are calling as spring is falling

By Brian Hedberg
Herald Staff Writer

Walk up to anyone catching rays and riding surf yesterday and quote Shakespeare: "If all the year were playing holidays, to sport would be as tedious as to work." You'll get anything from a puzzled look to a blackened eye.

All Shakespeare aside, it's kind nice to build castles in the sand anyhow. Weather's just right these days for the beach bums. But even a Daytona Beach lifeguard admits that water is mighty cold! Weather should continue that way, from the way those National Weather Service prognosticators say it. They say the next 24 hours will be partly cloudy, highs in the mid-80s and 20 percent chance of showers. Isn't there always a 20 percent chance of rain, even if the sky is clear as a bell? Even forecasters need an escape hatch to squirm out of their own predictions.

Although Florida is having a nice range of cool nights and warm days, you might want to escape it all and go somewhere where temperatures are a little more on the extreme side. Try Laredo, Texas, the nation's hotspot Sunday with 96 degrees. Or break out those earmuffs again and enjoy the 12 degrees worth of mercury in Bismark, N.D.

Spring is in full bloom, or should be say burst, in the lower Mississippi Valley, where slow-moving thunderstorms have produced large hail and damaging winds in Louisiana. And where there's spring, there's shades of The Wizard of Oz. Storms have spawned two tornadoes in Idaho.

One of the tornadoes touched down near Ririe, Idaho, Sunday night, destroying a shed and carrying a telephone pole across a field.

The National Weather Service said. The other tornado touched down south of Roberts, Idaho, but there were no immediate reports of damage.

The thunderstorms in Louisiana produced one-inch hail northeast of Keithville and east of Stonewall, and nickel-size hail east of Elm Grove and west of Heflin, the weather service said. Strong thunderstorm winds downed numerous trees near Kepler Lake in Bienville County.

Thunderstorms in Arkansas produced heavy rain that caused some flooding in Madison County Sunday evening.

Heavier rainfall totals for the six-hour period ending at 1 a.m. included 1 1/2 inches at Jonesboro, Ark.; an inch and a third at Knob Noster, Mo., and Little Rock, Ark.; and more than an inch at Memphis, Tenn., and Blytheville, Ark.

Showers and thunderstorms extended from eastern Arkansas and western Tennessee to southwestern Louisiana and southeastern Texas early today. A severe thunderstorm watch was issued this morning for northeastern Louisiana and most of northern and central Mississippi.

More than 2 inches of rain drenched Abilene, Texas, Sunday and minor street flooding was reported in Wichita Falls, Texas.

The southern and mid-Atlantic coast states reported fair weather today. Pleasant weather was also reported in the northern Plains and upper Mississippi Valley.

(Reports by United Press International and data provided by the National Weather Service were used in compiling this report.)

Intruders provoke Marine defenses

By Douglas Tweedale

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — "Highly professional" intruders who appeared to have military training provoked a 2 1/2-hour firefight this week in which U.S. Marines fired machine guns, flares and mortars, a sergeant who took part in the exchange said.

Marine 1st Sgt. Alexander Nevglovski Sr., who led a patrol of Marine sentries during the firefight Tuesday night, described the incident as seen from his hilltop position at a U.S. fuel depot outside Panama City, near the U.S. Howard Air Force Base.

"They were highly professional," Nevglovski said of the alleged intruders. "They were good."

U.S. officials have said 40 to 50 intruders and about 100 Marines were involved in the firefight at the sprawling 800-acre Arrajan tank farm, but Nevglovski said he personally only participated in an isolated 15-minute exchange of gunfire between about eight Marines and about 15 intruders.

But he said the entire confrontation involving other Marines lasted about 2 1/2 hours with sporadic exchanges of gunfire. "They received fire and they returned fire."

His account left unanswered many questions about the incident.

Nevglovski, 24, said he also was involved in an incident at same facility Monday night, in which Marine Cpl. Ricardo Villahermosa was accidentally killed when two patrols fired at each other in the dark.

Lt. Cmdr. Gregg Hartung said a 40-member team from the Joint Task Force Panama was expected to complete a report on its investigation of Tuesday's incident this week. The U.S. Southern Command, in charge of about 13,000 American troops now in Panama, did not report any casualties in the incident.

Nevglovski defended his men against the derision of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, de facto leader of Panama, who has scoffed at the American account of the incident and said nervous Marines shot at shadows, palm trees and each other.

"These are the most disciplined kids I have ever served with," Nevglovski said at a news conference. "I would put my life in their hands as I did that night, over and over again."

Nevglovski said his patrol was on a small hill overlooking one of the 36 underground fuel tanks when he spotted 12 intruders on another hill about 500 feet away at nightfall Tuesday.

"A couple minutes later, we were sort of surrounded," he said. "They were watching us, and we were watching them."

Asked what he thought the intruders' objective was, Nevglovski said: "They were training — using us for training ... trying to see what they could do. They were harassing us, trying to provoke us to open fire."

Nevglovski, who said both groups were using night vision equipment, said the intruders wore black uniforms and he could not discern their nationality.

The sergeant said he heard gunshots and saw three or four flashes.

"I tapped my machine gunner on the shoulder and told him to return fire," Nevglovski said. He said the gunner fired about 15 rounds of ammunition in response.

His patrol did not receive more hostile fire, but another group of Marines was "trapped" for about three hours by intruders on a hill about a half-mile away, Nevglovski said.

Asked whether the intruders seemed to have military training, he said, "In my professional thinking, they were very good at jungle warfare tactics."

A separate team from the Naval Investigation Service is probing Villahermosa's death.

Marine spokesman Cpt. Mike Hughes said Villahermosa's remains were flown to his hometown of Raleigh, N.C., Friday.

Julio Sosa, brother of Ambassador Juan Sosa, the U.S.-recognized ambassador from Panama, said anti-Noriega forces were trying to obtain a court order to stop the transfer of $20 million loan from Libya to Panama through a Swiss bank.

Shultz' shuttle diplomacy fails

When Secretary of State George Shultz announced his intention to try yet another round of shuttle diplomacy in the Middle East, it was widely assumed he had encouraging inside reasons for doing so. Otherwise, why would he repeat the shuttle carried out without result only weeks ago and following on the heels of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's inconclusive visit to Washington?

Now that Shultz has come back empty-handed once again, the puzzle is why he devoted so much time, effort and U.S. prestige in recent weeks to the hopelessly deadlocked Middle East. The secretary conceded only "inches" of gains during his six arduous days of negotiating with Arab and Israeli leaders.

The answer is that the secretary is stubborn, persistent and ever-hopeful of a breakthrough.

Although Secretary Schultz praised Jordan's King Hussein for taking a "constructive" approach to the U.S. peace plan, he had to face the bleak reality once again that the king cannot and will not negotiate for the Arabs in Gaza and the West Bank simply because the Palestine Liberation Organization will not permit him to do so.

Ever since the Arab world in 1974 designated the PLO as the sole "legitimate" representative of the Palestinian people, King Hussein has been unwilling to challenge the PLO's negotiating monopoly. The murder of West Bank Arabs for dealing with Israeli authorities in any way has sufficed to give the PLO a veto over all political matters in Gaza and the West Bank. Accordingly, West Bank Arabs have refused to meet with Secretary Schultz for no other reason than that PLO leader Yasser Arafat forbade them to.

So long as the PLO can control the West Bank agenda in peace or in violence as it does, there can be no settlement, even if Israel were eager to exchange territory for peace, which is not now the case.

Henry Kissinger has said the Soviet Union can help the nations of the Middle East to wage war, but the United States is the only nation that can help them make peace. But as former President Nixon has aptly observed, we cannot solve their problems, we can only help them solve them.

With two diplomatic shuttles and an Israeli summit in Washington, the Reagan administration has again given its best shot as a peacemaker to the Middle East, where there is no peace. If nothing else, Secretary Schultz's efforts convince that the peace process in the Middle East will stay on hold until after the upcoming elections in the United States and Israel. Even if Arab leaders were willing now to sit down in Jerusalem as did Egypt's President Anwar Sadat, the coalition government of Israel, paralyzed by divisions, would be incapable of formulating a peace settlement.

Shultz must now cut his Mid-East losses and invest more heavily in other international problems from Panama to the Philippines.

It's time to let Europe defend itself

Democrats have hit upon the right message but the wrong examples when they suggest foreigners have been taking advantage of us.

Indeed they have been, but not by selling us too many cars and VCRs or by scooping up deals on downtown property. They've been using us by neglecting their defense obligations and leaving America to pick up the tab.

In Europe alone, the United States maintains more than 300,000 troops. They ensure that we stay committed to NATO defenses — a human tripwire in case of Soviet attack — but then so would 100,000 or 50,000 soldiers. No president could possibly shrug off the fate of that many Americans.

It's hard to see how fewer troops could be more vulnerable, either. The Soviets already enjoy an overwhelming advantage in conventional weaponry in Europe, especially in such bread-and-butter categories of offense as tanks and assorted armored vehicles.

Only Europeans can restore the balance. And they won't, recent experience suggests, so long as they think we might do it for them.

Unfortunately, the only presidential candidate to venture such an argument is Jesse Jackson, whose generally anti-military views hardly help the cause. Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis actually leans in the other direction, indicating he might increase troop strength in Europe if negotiations stall over reducing conventional forces.

Whatever happened to self-determination? The population of Western Europe exceeds ours. Its combined economy is larger, too, and utterly swarms that of the Soviet Union. Let the Europeans boost their defense commitments themselves.

To say this, unfortunately, is to risk being dubbed an isolationist. In fact, drawing down our troops would permit us to husband resources and better protect our interests everywhere else, including in those arenas where we inevitably find ourselves acting alone.

France even refused airspace to U.S. planes on their way to bomb Libya in response to a terrorist attack.

The United States devotes about 6.5 percent of its Gross National Product to defense, compared with an average of 3.6 percent for large NATO allies such as West Germany, and 2.9 percent for smaller allies such as Belgium and the Netherlands. This disparity is hardly surprising, since the Pentagon itself calculates, in an annual report to Congress, that about 60 percent of its budget is devoted to the defense of Europe.

Back in the 1950s, that made sense. Europe was still recovering from World War II, Germany had only begun to prove itself a reliable democracy, and the U.S. enjoyed unchallenged economic supremacy.

Everything has changed since then. European technology and products compete with, and sometimes surpass, those of the United States. No one believes Germany is about to prance off into another militarist tragedy.

Everything has changed, that is, except for those 300,000 American troops. They remain, awaiting a leader who will notice they're no longer needed.

JEFFREY HART

Who is George Bush?

As George Bush sails toward the nomination and then quite probably to the presidency against a lackluster Mike Dukakis, he leaves a lot of important questions unanswered.

We know all about the numerous governmental posts he has held. We know about his great popularity as a student at Yale, and about his war-hero record as the youngest fighter pilot in the Pacific theater during World War II. We know that eight years ago Bush was the candidate, against Reagan, of the Gerry Ford-Eastern Establishment faction of the Republican Party, that he called tax cutting "voodoo economics," and that Reagan gave him the vice-presidential nomination in Detroit as a sop to the "moderate" establishment Republicans.

Well, that was eight years ago. And then silence descended. In his new book, Larry Speakes, former Reagan press secretary, describes Bush as the perfect yes man, who, as vice president, was not identified with any policies in particular. The question then is, has Bush learned anything from his White House experience? Or is he still the establishment "moderate" Republican of 1980?

In particular, would he cut federal programs when such cuts are indicated? Would he collide with the interest groups in order to do so? Or would he raise taxes to keep the gravy trains rolling?

What are his personal views of Gorbachev and perestroika? Of NATO? Of SDI? These are complicated matters, worthy of reflection, but where Bush stands we don't have a clue.

Nor, judging by recent statements from the Bush camp, are we likely to get a clue.

The Bush pollster, Robert Teeter, has informed us that the planned campaign is not going to be about "Particulars" but about character — just what kind of a man we want to be president.

That is certainly a central matter, but it is not the only matter. After the spectacles presented to us this year by Hart, Biden, Jackson and Robertson, not to mention Jimmy Bakker, Jimmy Swaggert, and Oral Roberts.

Bush faulted on civil rights record

By Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta

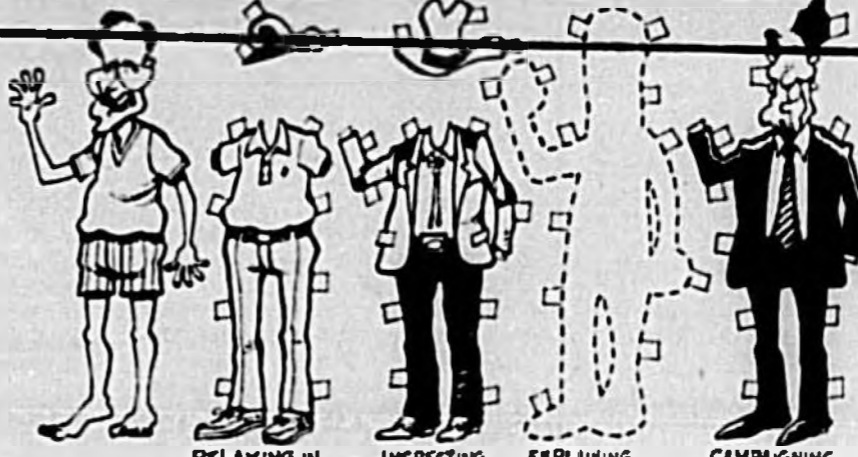

WASHINGTON — Vice President George Bush will have a hard time convincing voters he is a strong advocate of civil rights. He has not convinced the highest-level black serving in the Reagan administration, Samuel R. Pierce, Jr., the secretary of housing and urban development.

Pierce is the only Cabinet member to have observed Bush from the inside for the entire two terms of the Reagan administration. Unlike every other Cabinet position, HUD has had just one secretary for both terms.

Pierce's concern about Bush's civil rights stand was expressed to us by knowledgeable sources familiar with Pierce's private discontent about the vice president's hands-off attitude. He distanced himself from civil rights issues until the presidential campaign heated up last year. At that point, our sources say, he began courting Pierce's support.

Bush was lambasted by Democrats, some Republicans and black leaders recently when he took his familiar place in Reagan's shadow on the issue of the Grove City civil rights bill. The bill, which had overwhelming support in the Senate

Remembering when

By Arnold Sawislah
UPI Senior Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There is no special reason for remembering the 43rd anniversary of anything — except that the other morning of the voice of Robert Trout came out of the radio announcing the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

That was April 12, 1945, and Trout's familiar, authoritative voice, replayed in 1988, brought back that spring day long ago when, with no warning to us who did not live in Washington and know of his startling decline, FDR died.

To those of us who were only dimly aware of anyone else ever being president, nothing, not even the murder of John F. Kennedy 18 years later, compared to the numbing effect of Roosevelt's death.

It created a gaping hole in our lives, as if some familiar object of daily use like a bed we had slept in since childhood, suddenly vanished, leaving an empty place we could not imagine how to fill.

For us teenagers it was a nameless dread. For our parents, who had lived through the shock of the stockmarket crash, the grimy years of the Depression and the blood-soaked horrors of World War II, it was a specific fear of a return to grim days past just when the future seemed brighter. They saw visions of Hoover and Coolidge and Harding, and they were scared.

Most of us really knew no more of Roosevelt than the confident, cultured radio voice, the newspaper photographs of his face and the occasional spots of newsreel film, usually showing a seated man.

The well-informed knew he was a paraplegic, but there were puzzled looks, due as much to ignorance of his physical condition as to our own lack of sexual sophistication, when a civics teacher told us Roosevelt was such a handsome man that there would be a lot more nasty gossip about him had he been able to walk. (It would be interesting to know if she lived to learn the truth about FDR and Lucy Mercer.)

We have had only one president die in office since then, and that carried its own crushing blow, Kennedy's assassination was even more shocking than Roosevelt's death, but the added freight of anger, revulsion and suspicion about the crime occupied the public's mind. The sudden vacuum that followed Roosevelt's death was filled in the JFK case by Lee Oswald's capture and his murder by Jack Ruby.

Today, presidents come and presidents go. A 14-year-old in 1945 was born the year Roosevelt was elected and would have known no other president. In the lifetime of a 14-year-old today, there have been four presidents and a fifth is on the way.

Oddly, although FDR was in the White House for 12 years, he remained a distant mythic presence.

ANTHONY HARRIGAN

Coping with the auto glut

WASHINGTON — The American people have a tremendous stake in the automobile industry. This has been true since the advent of Henry Ford's Model T. It will continue to be true in the 1990s.

America's auto industry is not simply the Big Three—Ford, General Motors and Chrysler. It's the thousands of suppliers to the automakers, the companies that provide parts and raw materials. Communities in all parts of the United States have a profound economic stake in the well-being of Detroit.

This is important to understand when considering the outlook for the American automobile industry. Business Week recently reviewed the developing situation in a major article entitled "The Auto Glut." It pointed out that there is overcapacity world wide in the manufacture of automobiles. And while the U.S. industry has modernized and become leaner in the 1980s, it remains vulnerable. As Business Week noted, Japan builds two cars for every one it sells at home. The magazine said that "The U.S. market is the logical outlet for foreign cars because it's the world's largest with the lowest barriers to imports." And Japanese companies are willing to slash profits to the bone in order to preserve or increase market share. American companies aren't in a position to do that.

The situation is vastly complicated because of the so-called transplants—Japanese and Korean auto plants built in the United States in the last few years. By 1990, the Japanese transplants will account for at least 11 percent of North American automaking capacity.

The danger is that transplants will survive while American-owned auto factories are shut down or required to lower production. At that time, the U.S. public may realize that state officials and community boosters were shortsighted in striving to land Nissan, Honda, Toyota and other foreign plants. But it will be too late. Transplants with limited American content in their production may continue to operate when American-owned plants using largely American components are closed.

Faced with our request, Pierce took the diplomatic approach, listing the things he admired about Bush and leaving the rest unsaid.

and House, filled a loophole arising out of a 1984 Supreme Court decision in Grove City College v. Bell. The court ruled that a private organization, such as a university, had to apply anti-discrimination rules only to programs receiving federal funds, rather than to the whole institution.

Congress passed a law sewing up the loophole in March, but Reagan vetoed it. Congress overrode his veto.

Slavishly loyal to his president, Bush supported Reagan's veto. It is that kind of coalition politics that has guaranteed him the Republican nomination. But Bush apparently wants it both ways. His aides insisted that Bush is not anti-civil rights and that he would have signed the bill if he had been president. They pointed to a positive civil rights record during the four years Bush served in the House.

But other Bush observers — not with the campaign — reminded the public that Bush opposed the landmark 1964 Civil Rights Act while campaigning for Congress. Later, while vice president, he opposed sanctions on South Africa to try to force it to end its apartheid policy.

Cabinet sources say that in most cases, when Bush was asked by other Cabinet members to help craft policies that were supportive of civil rights, he ducked out.

A high-level Cabinet source told us Bush steered clear of the controversy over Bob Jones University in 1981 and 1982, calling it "too dangerous politically." (The university in Greenville, S.C., restricted black enrollment and banned interracial dating and marriage.)

Pierce's own reservations about Bush's civil rights commitment were leaked to us after he wrote us a letter on Feb. 26 citing four examples of Bush's positive involvement in the Reagan administration. None of the examples had anything to do with civil rights.

We had sent a letter to 33 former and current cabinet members, including Pierce, asking them for concrete "examples of policy decisions or actions in which the opinion or work of Mr. Bush has made a difference over the past seven years." We have previously reported on the lackluster response.

One knowledgeable source told us Pierce has been "very disturbed" with Bush's deliberate distance from civil rights issues in the administration until he needed Sam (Pierce) and other blacks to support him. But Sam is a gentleman.

Police chief's wife charged with trying to hire killer

APALACHICOLA (UPI) — The wife of Apalachicola's police chief was being held in the Bay County Jail without bail early today on suspicion of attempting to find someone to kill her husband.

Sheila Faircloth, wife of police chief Warren Faircloth, faces charges of solicitation to commit first-degree murder filed by the U.S. Customs Service and the State Attorney's office.

She was being held at the Bay County Jail because the Franklin County Jail lacks facilities for female prisoners, said State Attorney Willie Meggs.

The investigation began when customs officials received a tip that Faircloth was looking for someone who would kill her husband for a fee, Meggs said.

Sewage plant violates law

JACKSONVILLE (UPI) — The University of Florida Sewage treatment plant has been violating state water quality standards and sending pollution into the Floridan Aquifer since 1982 and has not been cited or fined, a published report says.

A review of environmental records Sunday in the Florida Times-Union showed the type of bacteria common in human feces in water that had been returned to the environment after passing through a series of settling tanks and chlorination facilities. The Floridan Aquifer provides much of the drinking water in Florida.

State Department of Environmental Regulation officials Ernie Frey and Frank Watkins said they were not familiar enough with the case to explain why no enforcement action was taken. Both said they would check with Gainesville office manager Patricia Reynolds.

Bill would ban smoking in malls

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — The smoking war is being fought on a new battleground. More than two dozen legislators have filed a bill that would ban lighting up in shopping malls.

The bill, filed by Rep. Anne Mackenzie, D-Fort Lauderdale, would broaden Florida's 1985 Clean Indoor Air Act, which forbids smoking in specific buildings and requires employers and restaurant owners to set aside smoking and non-smoking areas.

The legislation would also give the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services the power to enforce the smoking restrictions. The existing law does not give that power to any agency.

The bill makes no provision for inspectors. If HRS can track down the offending smoker, it could enforce the $100 fine provided for in the 1985 law.

But some retailers argue that the ban might drive smokers away from malls.

"They gather here and wait for each other," said Albert Warner, manager of the Skylake Mall in North Dade County, describing many of his retired elderly customers. "They sit on benches and have a smoke. They settle wars on those benches. They elect presidents. Now you're going to stop them from doing it?"

Bauder, 81, found rewards of service

By J. Mark Barfield
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — To Keith J. Bauder, the path to business success is simple.

"Know-how, follow-through, service," that's the key," says Bauder, 81, of Sanford.

Driven with that slogan and a tireless energy, Bauder began and developed several successful businesses in New York and Central Florida. Service to his customers was the cornerstone of Bauder's achievements and several of the companies bore the "Better living through service" motto.

"I wasn't in it for the money," says Bauder. "I was in it to help people. I was always in the service business instead of the manufacturing business. My businesses were all started because there was a need for them. That's why they were successful."

Although Bauder now spends much of his day reading and tending his rose bushes, the docile lifestyle isn't reflective of his more active, younger days.

During his 52-year professional career, Bauder bought or began at least six businesses, developing them into profitable enterprises before selling them. When he retired, in 1977, he was president of Rich Plan of Florida, producing annual revenues of $8 million selling freezers and frozen-food plans to 10,000 Florida households.

In 1949, he was honored by the frozen food locker industry for creating a plan to save nearly half of the 3,200 frozen food locker businesses in the country threatened by the growing in-home freezer market.

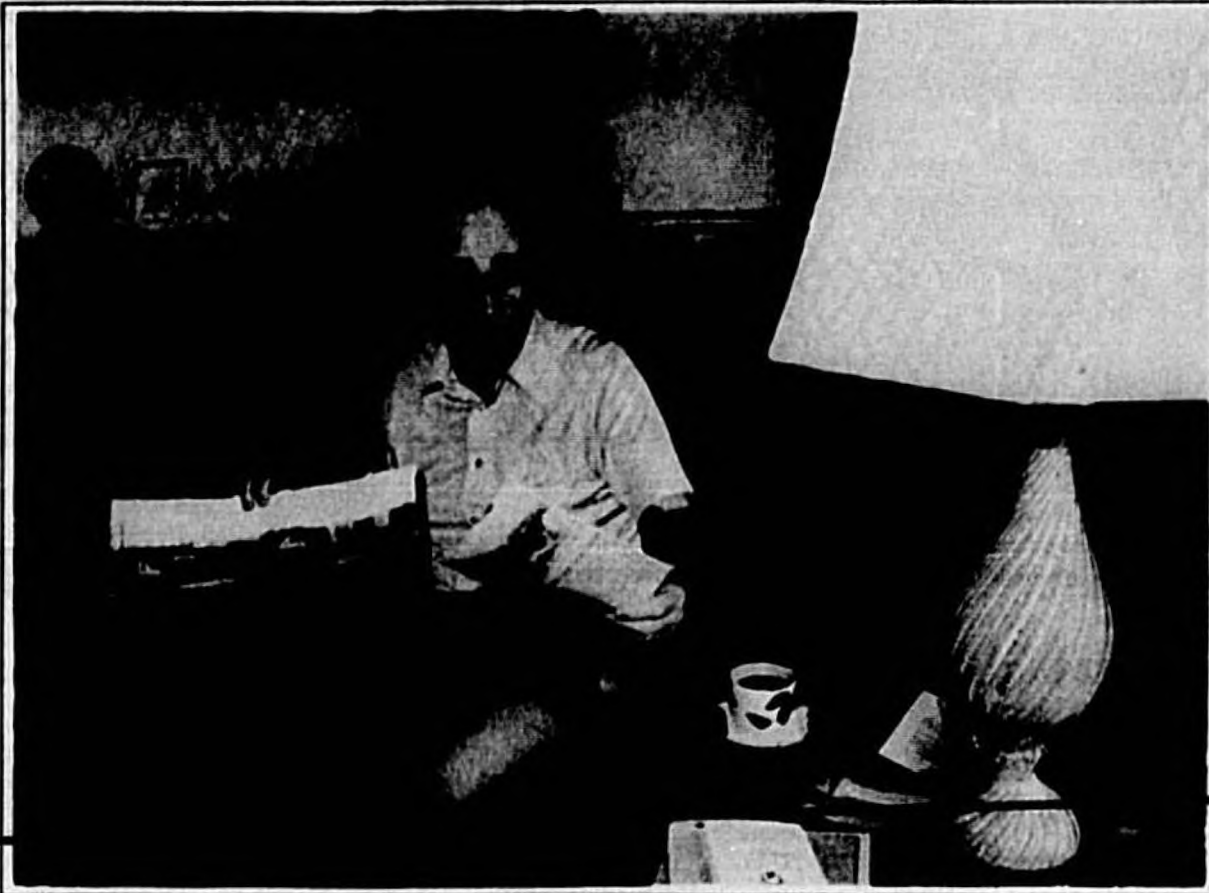

The son of a farmer-turned-salesman, Bauder learned early in life to make his own way.

Bauder began working at age 10 raising rabbits, butchering them and selling the meat to the meat-rationed farmers near his home in Fort Plain, New York. As a high school student, Bauder read electric meters in Fort Plain and worked in a wholesale candy manufacturing plant.

Bauder says his parents' encouragement to work as a youngster was important to his later success.

"I learned to do things on my own, because my parents let me do it," Bauder says. "I didn't have to work, but I wanted money for fun. I didn't want my parents to give me money."

"Many parents hold their children back, and in later years, those kids are going to hold back in whatever they do. If they don't learn to work at an early age, they don't have the incentive to work later in life. I learned

In his Sanford home, Keith J. Bauder, 81, and oil distribution business, shows a photograph of his father's gasoline to do things because (my parents) let me do it."

Bauder had a great deal to learn from his father.

Victor Bauder left his family's farm at age 31 in 1907, the year Keith Bauder was born, to sell one-cylinder Olds engines for corn shredders. The following year, Victor Bauder introduced a new silo to New York farmers. During the next 17 years, he became general sales agent for the company, building up 73 sales outlets.

When Victor Bauder left the silo business in 1925 to begin a heating oil business, his son left school to join him.

"I got bored in school, and I started looking around for something to do," Bauder says. "I was eager to find something, and I knew my dad needed me."

Bauder helped his father by painting trucks, paving concrete and helping to service oil trucks.

Victor Bauder strongly influenced his young son.

"For the first nine years, I was a learner," Bauder says. "He was my education. I didn't finish high school so I could work for him."

Bauder says his father was a master salesman. For example, when his father sold a silo—delivered in pieces and assembled on the farm site—his father would visit the site to give personal assembly instructions to the carpenter. That was an example of the service touch, Bauder says.

In 1925, Victor Bauder began his own gasoline and oil storage and distribution business. By the time of his death in 1934, the business controlled nearly 35 percent of the gasoline business in the local three-county area, serving 75 independent gas stations and garages.

Bauder, his mother, Grace Bauder, and his brother Keith Bauder ran the business until 1945, when Grace Bauder retired and the family divided the company. The gas and oil business was sold to ESSO-Standard Oil Co., now known as EXXON.

Bauder took over the propane distribution business, which he started for the family in 1936, and then serving over 1,000 customers. He expanded the business to include sales of appliances and in 1946, he began selling a new device known as "television," the first units sold in the Fort Plain area.

In 1945, Bauder also expanded his 3-year-old frozen food locker service. Zero Frozen Foods to serve several hundred customers. The business prospered during war-time when farmers had plenty of their own meats and vegetables, but no way to store them. The company later incorporated under the Rich Plan frozen food corporation of Texas.

Bauder became active in the state and national frozen food locker trade associations. In 1949 was honored by national frozen food locker businessmen for helping to save nearly half the 3,200 locker plants in the country meet the competition of a growing number of in-home freezers by offering monthly frozen food plans to customers.

In 1952, Bauder retired to Longwood on advice of his physicians who told him to slow his pace of life. Within a year, he began a liquid fertilizer business that he later sold when it had expanded from one distribution truck to three.

After retiring, he also started or participated in three other businesses, a propane gas distribution company in New York, a pre-stressed concrete tower business in Winter Park and a state-wide private-label freezer wholesale business.

In 1960, he bought the Sanford Locker plant on West 13th Street. The business grew, became the Rich Plan of Central Florida, and in 1975, became the Rich Plan of Florida, serving most of the state. When he finally retired in 1977, the business was serving 10,000 families state-wide and producing $8 million in sales annually, Bauder says.

Now in full and final retirement, Bauder looks back on his career with pride. His walls are adorned with plaques presented by appreciative employees and trade officials.

Bauder sums up his life: "I was an insignia to my employees. I was known as 'KJB' to everyone. They didn't know me well enough to call me 'Keith' and they knew me too well to call me 'Mr. Bauder,' so they called me 'KJB.' It was an insignia and I'm an insignia."

Lawyers' stress detectors disagree on degree

By Brian Hedberg
Herald Staff Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE — Stress can reach into any profession, but lawyers experience no more job-related stress than any other profession, said Ray Ferrero Jr., president of the Florida Bar, despite a dissenting opinion within the association.

"I've been a litigator for 30 years and I don't find it particularly stressful. It's a kind of high pressure thing from time to time, but I have yet to see the symptoms of stress in my associates," said Ferrero, a practicing trial lawyer, from his Fort Lauderdale office recently.

Nevertheless, the Bar has had a standing committee on stress—the Professional Stress Committee—since around 1980, said a representative of the Bar's Tallahassee office. The committee presents seminars on the topic of stress management.

Dr. Allan McPeak, a co-chairman of the committee and a Florida State University researcher, found in a recent study that almost two out of five lawyers said they experience serious stress on the job. Some of the causes cited were too little time for too much work and having constant interruptions. His study noted that younger attorneys—particularly women—seemed to feel the most stress.

McPeak urged that the Bar do more to teach stressed-out lawyers how to handle on-the-job stress.

"Teaching stress management techniques would be a real service to the profession and the public. In terms of avoiding the harsher kinds of losses that could eventually be involved," McPeak said.

He said early attention to the problem would prevent problems ranging from sloppy case preparation to the more serious hazards of substance abuse and misappropriation of clients' money.

Ferrero said the Florida Bar already has established programs helping lawyers in each of those areas. Along with the Professional Stress Committee, he said, the Bar utilizes the services of a full-time counselor for lawyers seeking help with substance abuse. The Bar also works with independent corporation—Florida Lawyers Assistance Inc.—accessible by a WATS telephone line to attorneys who have turned to drug or alcohol abuse to escape job pressures.

Since 1987, when the Bar established its Client Security Fund, $3.2 million has been paid due to attorneys misappropriating clients' money, Ferrero said. He noted that the Bar is concerned with misappropriation no matter what the alleged cause.

Death toll climbs in weekend Palestinian riots

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Weekend rioting sparked by the assassination of a PLO leader in Tunisia left at least 16 Arabs dead and 137 wounded in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, prompting Israeli authorities to clamp curfews over much of the occupied territories.

In the West Bank town of Nur El Shams, the army said soldiers shot and wounded two Arabs Sunday when protesters, some armed with axes, attacked a patrol. In another incident, an Arab teenager was injured by youths who beat him on his way to his job in Israel.

At least 14 Palestinians were killed and 135 wounded by army gunfire Saturday when protests erupted in the occupied territories hours after the slaying of Khalil Al-Wazir, one of the closest aides to Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat.

Two more Palestinians died Sunday as a result of gunshot wounds suffered during the previous day's violence.

Saturday was the bloodiest day of protests since the anti-Israeli uprising began Dec. 9. At least 158 Arabs have died in the 4-month-old Palestinian uprising.

Banks open; no withdrawals

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — Panama's banks promised to resume limited operations today for the first time in nearly two months but depositors still will be unable to withdraw cash from them.

Panama's economy has been operating on a virtual cash-only basis since the government closed the banks on March 3 in the face of a cash shortage caused in part by U.S. economic sanctions and the freezing of Panamanian government funds in American banks. Panama uses the dollar as its currency.

The Reagan administration supports deposed President Eric Arturo Delvalle, who was ousted by supporters of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega in the National Assembly on Feb. 26, the day after Delvalle tried to fire Noriega as chief of the military. The National Assembly then named Noriega ally Manuel Solis Palma to replace Delvalle, who remains in hiding somewhere in Panama.

Billy Graham preaches in China

BELING (UPI) — Delivering his first sermon ever in China, evangelist Billy Graham called for a "moral modernization" of the world's largest officially atheist nation.

Graham later autographed Chinese Bibles for dozens of worshippers after the Sunday morning service.

The tall, bespectacled minister spoke for nearly an hour to several hundred people who crowded into the headquarters of the Three-Self Patriotic Movement, the officially sanctioned Protestant church in China. The octagonal church hall is hidden down a narrow alley in southeastern Beijing.

"There is a modernization program now in China, and it is my prayer there will be a great moral modernization program also," Graham told the worshippers, mainly aging men with little white goatees and old women bent reverently over their Chinese prayer books.

Many in the congregation appeared moved and nodded their heads at Graham's words, conveyed to them by an interpreter whose voice rose and fell with Graham's and whose gestures followed those of the evangelist.

Local drugs blamed on immigrants

By Susan Loban
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A small number of immigrants from Haiti and Jamaica "play a significant role" in cocaine trafficking in north Seminole County, including Sanford, said City County Investigative Bureau Commander Lt. Donald Ealinger.

Ealinger was responding to testimony by Florida officials, who are telling Congress that a growing number of illegal immigrants are drawn to deal in narcotics at a time when successful prosecution of aliens on drug trafficking charges is proving difficult.

"We certainly don't have the problem like in Washington, D.C. where 'possees' of Jamaicans are taking over the drug trade with great violence," Ealinger said. He added that it is difficult to determine the immigration status of foreign nationals who are arrested in the U.S. Ealinger said local lawmen report such arrests to the U.S. Department of Immigration for that department to identify and deal with illegal aliens.

About two years ago, Seminole County Sheriff John Polk testified in Washington, D.C., to a congressional committee probing the difficulty of prosecuting illegal aliens who are arrested on drug charges and bond out of jail. Polk and others testified that such aliens disappear and assume a new identity until they resurface, perhaps to be arrested again in another location.

Congress continues to probe the issue, with Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., in congressional testimony recently, saying the "financial rewards" from the "coupling" of illegal immigration with narcotics has "drawn more and more aliens across our borders."

"And it's a sad irony that at a time when this country is finally cracking down on the hiring of illegal aliens (who pick crops that thousands are now being smuggled into the country to man illegal drug enterprises)," Chiles added.

He testified before the Senate Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on Immigration and Refugee Affairs on behalf of a series of bills he has sponsored to get tough with "alien felons."

In one instance, he said, Orlando police executed a search warrant and found a Haitian crack dealer in possession of "eight different Social Security cards in his wallet along with $10,000 in cash."

Overall, he said, less than 5 percent of all illegal aliens arrested by Orlando police on narcotics charges have been successfully prosecuted.

Smith said many of those arrested have little problem making bond. "They'll make a $25,000 bond like it's a fine," Smith said during questioning.

He said that, in Orlando, "the number of illegal aliens who deal in crack cocaine has increased by more than 300 percent" in the past two years.

In addition, Smith said, a recent "trend has developed" where Haitian and Jamaican drug dealers are "starting to work together in the cocaine distribution business."

Chiles' legislation—five bills in all—would require mandatory detention of aliens convicted of aggravated felonies, including murder, kidnapping and drug trafficking.

Bombs explode outside Jewish, Saudi buildings

FRANKFURT, West Germany (UPI) — Bombs exploded within a few minutes of each other early today outside the Jewish Community Center and the office of Saudi Arabian Airlines in downtown Frankfurt, causing considerable damage but no injuries, police said.

It was not known whether there was a connection between the two attacks.

No organization took responsibility for the bombings. Police said political motives were possible.

The first bomb exploded about 18 feet outside the entrance to the Jewish center at two minutes after midnight.

A police spokesman said it had been thrown over a fence into the front yard of the center.

The explosion broke windows in the center, damaged a Volkswagen bus belonging to the center parked outside, and damaged buildings across the street.

Eight minutes later another bomb went off outside the Saudi airline office about 1 1/2 miles from the center. It broke windows in the office. No people were injured.

Police ordered a search for a red Volkswagen with two men and a gray BMW with one man.

Witnesses told police the autos had been seen at the locations.

Traces of blood were found outside the airline office but police said no injuries were reported. It was considered possible that one of the bombers had been injured.

Total damage was estimated at several hundred thousand dollars.

On Sunday in Germany and elsewhere there were observances of the 45th anniversary of the Jewish uprising in the Warsaw ghetto that was bloodily put down by the Nazis.

The bombings also coincided with clashes between Israeli troops and Arabs in Israeli-occupied territory. The clashes followed the murder in Tunisia of the military deputy to Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat.

FAA to probe Texas Air

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Transportation Secretary James Burnley announced Sunday the government will expand its "intensive inspection" of Texas Air Corp.'s Eastern Airlines to the fleet of its flagship carrier Continental Airlines.

Burnley said as part of a review of Texas Air operations, almost $1 million in proposed penalties pending against Continental for safety violations were found in the files of the Federal Aviation Administration, an agency under the department's umbrella.

"When we went back through the files all over the country, we found there was a good deal going on with respect to Continental," he said.

"So we're going to extend the ramp inspection, intensive inspection, that we began on Eastern last Wednesday to Continental as well, beginning tomorrow (Monday)," Burnley announced Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press."

"It will be just like the Eastern investigation," he said. "We'll have people who will be walking around the planes, and through them, and talking to the maintenance personnel and the folks in the cockpit, and making sure that anything that can be readily identified is corrected."

The FAA announced Wednesday it was starting a 30-day ramp inspection of Eastern's 267 planes and levied a fine of $423,500 against the company.

Braves win 1 for skipper

United Press International Chuck Tanner, the eternal optimist, was running out of encouraging things to tell his Atlanta Braves...

"It was kind of frustrating," Tanner said Sunday after Zane Smith tossed a four-hitter and Damaso Garcia stroked a two-run homer to carry the Braves to their first victory in 11 games since the 1986 season...

Smith, 1-2, gave up four singles while striking out five and walking one in hurling Atlanta's first complete game of 1988.

Don Sutton, 0-2, had the Braves shut out, surrendering only two singles over five innings but Atlanta went ahead 2-1 in the sixth...

At Chicago, Andy Van Slyke hit two home runs to key an 18-hit attack that powered the Pirates to their sixth victory in their last seven games...

At San Diego, Jeff Leonard pitched a one-hitter and the Giants scored another on catcher Mark Parent's throwing error...

At Cleveland, John Farrell went 8 1/3 innings, allowing only one run on four hits and three walks while striking out four...

At Boston, Mike Greenwell went 3 for 5 with a three-run homer and six RBI to lead the Red Sox' 20-hit assault.

At New York, rookie Kevin Elster singled home Mookie Wilson with two out in the ninth inning to send the Mets to their sixth straight victory.

At Detroit, Chet Lemon singled home two runs in the second and set up two more with a fourth-inning sacrifice to pace the Tigers, who won despite three Royals home runs.

Expos trip Phillies

MONTREAL (UPI) — Montreal Expos first baseman Andres Galarraga and Philadelphia Phillies Manager Lee Elia both were worried about getting hurt by a home run Sunday.

Galarraga broke a 2-2 tie with a two-run fifth-inning homer and Pascual Perez allowed only four hits over seven innings as Montreal won 5-2 to hand Philadelphia its seventh straight setback.

Bill Dawley, 0-1, who was recalled Saturday from the minor leagues, gave up a lead-off single to Herm Winningham in the fifth and Galarraga followed with his second homer to give the Expos a 4-2 lead.

"I was worried about my sore left thumb which I hurt during a fight in winter baseball," Galarraga said. "But now I am getting that thought off my mind. I am just swinging away. I wasn't thinking home run. I just wanted to get some contact."

For Elia, it was an all too familiar scenario. "Once again today a home run did us in," Elia lamented. "We tied the game and we were back in it. But they won it with that home run."

Former Expo David Palmer, the Phillies' starting pitcher, had tied the score 2-2 in the fifth with a two-out homer over the left-field fence.

Palmer left the game with a muscle spasm in his right arm before facing the first batter. Montreal took a 2-0 lead in the second. Tim Lincecum walked off Palmer, who was making his first appearance of the season...

The Phillies narrowed the lead to 2-1 in the third. "We haven't done very well on this road trip," Elia said. "We are 0-6 but maybe New York will help us."

Nuggets whip Mavs

DENVER (UPI) — The Denver Nuggets used a long victory streak and help from a slumping player to increase their lead over the Dallas Mavericks in the Midwest Division.

The Nuggets whipped the Mavericks 133-122 Sunday to improve to 52-27 — 1-2 games over Dallas — and gain their best victory total since joining the NBA.

"We still have to win our remaining three games before I feel real good about our position," Denver Coach Doug Moe said. "We just can't let up. We've been playing must games for a month."

Meanwhile, Jay Vincent broke out of his slump with 20 points, all in the second half. "It really feels good to do it

Lithium can cause bad side effects

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been taking 1200 milligrams of lithium daily for 10 years. I don't feel suicidal any more, but have developed a gitter. The trembling in my hand is a nuisance as is my clumsiness. Are these conditions and my lack of concentration due to my age (59) or the lithium?

DEAR READER: Lithium is a marvelous drug for certain hyperactive emotional states. However, it can be dangerous if the level of medicine in the body rises to toxic levels. Lithium toxicity produces irritability, lack of coordination and trembling, among other side effects. You should have periodic measurements of lithium blood levels. In this way, the dose of medicine can be altered, depending on your needs. You also should have blood tests for thyroid function, because, in the presence of gitter, you may have developed an overactive thyroid gland.

I doubt that your symptoms are due to your age; more likely, they are the result of the lithium or the thyroid gland. Ask your doctor to order the necessary tests.

Because of your interest in this area, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report on Mental Health and Substance Abuse. Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I developed great toe swelling, which spread to my wrists, fingers and all other toes. Tests rule out gout and arthritis. The pain has diminished, but the swelling persists. Could this be related to the Premarin I took?

DEAR READER: Probably not. In some women, female hormones such as Premarin can lead to fluid retention, including puffiness of the feet and hands. However, from your description, I doubt that Premarin is the culprit. I believe that your doctor should test you further to determine the cause of your un-

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
Rubber-bridge fans deprecate the tournament player's efforts to win overtricks. That attitude is unjustified - the skill used by the tournament expert to squeeze out an overtrick can just as easily be used to make an ambitious contract. There's nothing dramatic about today's three no-trump contract, so to appreciate the clever work done by declarer to make 12 tricks, imagine that you are the declarer in six no-trump, with a friendly diamond lead.

South won East's diamond jack with his queen and played a high spade. When West showed out, it seemed unlikely that the heart suit would split well for declarer. South had 11 tricks with the opening lead, so the 12th trick would depend upon either the hearts dividing or perhaps the jack being doubleton. However, even with a bad heart split, 12 tricks were there if West, the defender holding the king of diamonds, also held length in hearts. To exert pressure upon West, declarer first had to give up a trick, so he played the club jack from his hand. East won the queen and returned a diamond. South took the ace and then cashed dummy's A-K of hearts. (If the jack fell, he could next win his 10 and return to dummy with a spade to cash the remaining honor.) Then he played his club ace and the remaining spades. When the last black winner was played, West had the choice of jettisoning the king of diamonds, thus making declarer's 10 a winner, or guarding the heart jack. Either way, declarer had 12 tricks.
