A shot for Jackson

ATLANTA - Jimmy Carter has come up with a way to encourage children to get their vaccinations - offer them a chance to see Michael Jackson.

Jackson will give a free concert in May for children and families who participate in the Atlanta Project Immunization program, the former president said Monday. The goal is for 54,000 children to get their shots by May 1.

The Atlanta Project is Carter's ambitious effort to fight urban poverty by bringing together volunteers and businesses.

In Atlanta, only about 50 percent of children under age 5 are immunized. By comparison, in Bangladesh, some 80 percent are immunized, Carter said.

Carter said IBM has contributed computers to the Atlanta Project to maintain records on children who are immunized.

False alarm, again

EUGENE. Ore. — Police responding to a bystander's call about a man outside the courthouse aiming a gun at two buildings rushed to the scene and started to climb the stairs to the second-floor garden deck.

Instead of some crazed gunman, they found a construction worker, armed with a drill. He was fixing a handrail.

"We're not in trouble again, are we?" the worker asked Sgt. Frank Bone on Monday.

"No." Bone answered, slightly confused. Th the worker and his partner explained.

"It turns out that last week," Bone said, "someone mistook the poor guy's lunch sack for

Sears dishwashers pose hazard

WASHINGTON - Owners of 400,000 Kenmore dishwashers should stop using them immediately because an electrical problem with their timers could cause them to catch fire, Sears, Roebuck and Co. says.

Sears said Monday that leaks caused timers on 30 machines to short and overheat. Four of them caught fire, causing smoke damage to the surrounding countertop and cabinets, Sears

Sears said it is sending letters to customers who purchased one of the Kenmore dishwashers between February 1990 and October 1992.

Owners who have not received letters should check the model numbers. Sears said.

The numbers of the affected models are: 587.1400090; 587.1400190; 587.1400890; 587.1400990; 587.1440090; 587.1440590; 587.1469089; 587.1469589; 587.1510590; 587.1511590; 587.1530590; 587.1540590; 587.1541590; 587.1550590; 587.1574590; 587.1630590; 587.1640590; 587.1641590; 587,1650590; 587,1651590.

The dishwashers should be unplugged or their doors unlatched until they can be repaired. Sears said.

Citizens' groups plan attack on drugs in Sanford

Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Two new citizens groups met Monday night to search for solutions to growing concerns over drug activity in Sanford.

Both groups are responding to the challenge issued by Mayor Bettye Smith last week in which Smith dared citizens to offer solutions to the city's war on drugs and crime.

Several dozen persons led by Johnell Jackson, See Groups, Page 5A gathered last night at the Castle Brewer Court community center, while a group of home owners met for an exchange of ideas in the historic residential district.

The Castle Brewer Court meeting was to inaugurate the formation of a citizens group aimed at fighting drug related activities. "We plan to get a charter for the group and have our board officially sworn in," said Jackson. "We are operating with a 15 member board, but as of now,

Sheriff axes deputies, airs reasons

SANFORD - Sheriff Don Eslinger said he was not motivated by political vengeance or fear of reprisal from the black community in deciding to fire two deputies Monday for circulating whitesupremacist materials.

"They severely damaged their credibility," said Eslinger. "If they ever had to take action against someone in the black community or any minority, their actions would be called into question because of this. They compromised themselves."

Although Thorpe did not support Eslinger's re-election last year, Eslinger said Thorpe's opposition played no part in his decision to fire Thorpe, rather than suspend him as recommended by the Disciplinary Review Board.

"Absolutely not," commented

Administrative Director Steve Harriett, former Sanford police chief, recommended 30 days suspension without pay for Martin.

Bill helps hurricane victims

TALLAHASSEE — Legislation to help fix disaster response problems that occurred when Hurricane Andrew struck South Florida last year has moved through a House subcommittee.

The bill, approved Monday, includes annual insurance surcharges of $2 on homeowners and $4 on commercial policyholders to raise $10 million to match federal grants and help local governmer to during emergencies.

"It puts us in a posture of knowing who's in charge for the future so that we're ready to prepare ourselves and so that we're ready to protect ourselves and ready to recoup afterwards," said Rep. Elaine Bloom, D-Miami Beach, the Different officials and agencies would be responsible for different aspects of the response. For example, the Florida Department of Law Enforcement would be in charge of the Florida Highway Patrol. National Guard and relationships with the federal military, Bloom said.

The governor would have ultimate authority including the power with a single signature at the onset of a disaster to trigger all requests for federal assistance.

Know your state legislator

TALLAHASSEE - Everything you ever wanted to know about your state legislator is available through a trio of handbooks produced by the Legislature.

The House of Representatives publishes the Clerk's Manual every two years. It contains details about each legislator — House and Senate - what committees they're on and a host of biographical details.

Most lawmakers list their accomplishments in public office, their religious affiliation, what kinds of awards they've won and their military service.

Ninety-three of the 160 legislators were born outside Florida, including 21 in New York and eight in Cuba. For instance, there are 44 lawyers, 38 business people and salespersons, 18 real estate agents and 15 teachers in the Legislature. Nine lawmakers list their occupation as NAPLES - Attorneys for a man charged with strangling his ex-wife hope videotaped testimony of the couple's 4-year-old daughter, who was beside her mother under the covers during the murder, won't be accepted as evidence.

A year ago, Elizabeth Ann Allison used dolls to recreate the crime for Coilier County sheriff's detectives. But now she remembers nothing, and defense attorneys are trying to keep the tape from jurors.

Prosecutors, however, want to use the videotape of the little girl's testimony in this week's trial of her father. Michael Jude Allison, 39. He is accused of first-degree murder in the death of

The trial is set to open Wednesday or Thursday at the Collier County Courthouse, but Collier Circuit Judge Ted Brousseau is scheduled to decide at a 2 p.m. hearing today whether Elizabeth will be a witness, either in person or on tape.

Detectives coaxed the girl into making the videotape, defense attorneys J. Blan Taylor and Gary Ralph maintain, so that testimony shouldn't be allowed as evidence.

Also, Raiph and Taylor have filed a motion asking the judge to discussify the state of the ples enything about the murder

But proceeditors hold that the jury should hear Elizabeth's statements made just a few hours after her mother's death the night of Jan. 4-5, 1992. That testimony should be admissible, they argue, because that was when her memory was fresh.

Men's, women's potty facilities mulied

TALLAHASSEE - Most restaurants would not have to build more toilet fixtures for women than men under a bill that won a House subcommittee's approval Monday.

If the measure passes, it would weaken a 1992 Florida law that requires all but the smallest new public and commercial buildings to have three water closets for women for every two water closets and urinals for men.

"Let's say we are injecting some sanity into the issue of sanitary facilities," said the bill's sponsor, Rep. Lois Benson, R-Pensacola, "We are putting it back into perspective."

This year's measure (HB 575) would also exempt new or renovated buildings, certain hotels, campgrounds and other lodgings from the law. The exempted buildings, however, would be required to have an equal number of fixtures for each sex, or what has been dubbed "potty parity."

Last year's live went beyond parity to what Rep. Benson.

Last year's law went beyond parity to what Rep. Benson, called "potty affirmative action."

The Intergovernmental Relations Subcommittee voted unanimously for the bill, gending it to the full Community Affairs Committee for further action.

'Golden Girls' lifestyle

Gerontologist: TV show a reflection of living today

By Associated Press

GAINESVILLE - The characters in television's "The Golden Girls" are a reflection of a living arrangement being turned to by more and more older Americans, a University of Florida gerontologist says.

Society is witnessing the end of the traditional three-generation family and the rise of the "domestic unit." said professor Otto von Mering.

"You can see a successful domestic unit in the 'Golden Girls,'" said von Mering, director of UF's Center for Gerontological Studies. "They invented a way of living less expensively and more safely by pooling their resources."

The older women roommates in the popular television show are part of a group von Mering calls the "fourth age" - a growing population group of greatgrandparents and others who live to an advanced age.

members of the fourth age pioneers of lifestyles not needed in decades past when people were not as long-lived.

in the United States, people are entering the fourth age in staggering numbers. In 1969, the 65-74 age group, at 18.2 million, was eight times larger than in 1900. But the 75-84 age group, at 9.8 million, was 13 times larger, and the 85-plus age group, at 3 million, was 24 times larger than in 1900.

The leaps in longevity are prompting older people to invent new ways of living. The increased life span also will force society to rethink mandatory retirement ages and entitlement programs for the elderly, said von Mering, who addressed a Sunday meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science on the issue.

Women are the pioneers of the fourth-age lifestyle because they account for 63 percent of the elderly in the United States, von trandparents and others who live to an Mering said. Considering that nearly 75 percent of the elderly poor are women, von He says the graying of America is making Mering said they are forging new bonds with others out of necessity.

The only reason some fourth-age people are doing well is that they have formed informal associations with others their age.

"These friendly arrangements 'in sickness and in health' keep people from going into a nursing home before the time may have to come," von Mering said.

In some cases, he said, the domestic unit provides more continuous, personal support than the elderly would receive from rela-

Even in cases in which children or grandchildren can give help, elderly family members may be reluctant to accept it because they don't like being told by younger people what to do.

It's easier, von Mering said, for older people to turn to others their age and maintain a sense of independence and connection with the real world.

Fire chief talks to SHDWA tonight

By MCK PPEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Fire Chief Tom Hickson will speak before tonight's meeting of the Sanford Historical Downtown Waterfront Association. His discussion is to center on inspection fees and

Prior to the talk, SHDWA will conduct its regular business meeting beginning at 5:30. Hickson's discussion will follow beginning at 6 p.m., with the public invited to attend.

The Sanford City Commission recently made some changes in the fire inspection fees and fines for false alarm responses. At one point, false alarm fines were levied by the city, but they were later rescinded, to begin at a different level. "Many people are confused over this," said SHDWA's Kay Bartholomew, "and some people are upset over the fines, but it may be because all of the details are not fully known by everyone."

She added, "We expect there may be many questions for Chief Hickson to answer, and this should be a very informative meeting."

In addition to Hickson's talk. the SHDWA program will also include information about the Seminole County School System's 'Partners in Excellence" project.

SHDWA is considered a "partner" with Sanford Middle School, and has been working on ways in which improve its assistance to the students and faculty. "We will have the county coordinator of the Partners program at tonight's meeting." Bartholomew said. "It's a new program, so we hope we have a good attendance to allow as much information as possible to be distributed."

The meeting is free of charge and open to the public with all downtown business owners and operators urged to attend.

The monthly SHDWA meet-ings are held at the First Street Gallery, 203 E. First Street in downtown Sanford.

But it took a 13-9 vote Monday before the Health Care Committee could even begin discussing the legislation, which is a version of the health care reform package backed by Gov. Lawton Chiles.

Chiles wants to set up Community Health Purchasing Alliances - CHPAs in Capitol parlance — to pool the purchasing power of the private and public sectors on a regional basis and bring thown the cost of health care.

Doug Cook, director of the Agency for Health Care Administration, said Chiles liked the House version.

Vince Rio, representing the Health Insurance . Association of America, told the committee that the measure it was discussing was the best of eight or 10 different versions of the CHPA proposal that have surfaced.

"This bill does by far the best job of achieving a delicate balance, where competition is enhanced," Rio said, adding that best thing about the legislation is that it doesn't lead to "oligarchy or monopoly."

Bill Bell, with Florida Hospital Associa tion, called the committee bill "a good model" and Jodi Chase, with Associated Industries of Florida, said the business coalition was "very supportive .. because it's a private-sector, market-driven

But there was dissent at the meeting voiced most strongly by Rep. James King, R-Jacksonville.

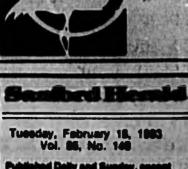

King and a dozen other lawmakers opposed committee Chairman Ben Graber's motion to skip subcommittee review of the CHPA bill. Graber, a Coral Springs Democrat, said he thought the bill was so important the entire Health Care Committee should consider it from the beginning.

The committee voted 13-9, largely along party lines, to go ahead and consider the bill: Graber later said he planned to vote on amendments to the legislation Tuesday.

Under the House bill, employers and health care providers would have the option of becoming members of the 11 alliances, which would be set up as private, non-profit organizations run by seven-member boards appointed by the governor. Chiles urged lawmakers on the opening day of their session two weeks ago to deal with health care reform in the first half of the two-month session. House Speaker Bolley "Bo" Johnson, D-Milton, said the full House would take up the issue by Feb. 23.

Less violence noted on Valentine's Day

By NICK PFEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Crime didn't exactly take a holiday during this past weekend. Valentine's Day however, brought about a change in domestic violence incidents.

On the average, in the northern Seminole County area, six to eight arrests are made each Saturday and Sunday in connection with disputes between married couples or close friends.

Seminole County Sheriff's spokesman George Proechel had once commented, "The weekends are usually the rough times for domestic violence. because people are home from work and spend more time with each other, and there is also more consumption of alcohol on the weekend which is often the starting point."

This past Saturday and Sunday, there were no arrests reported in Sanford, Lake Mary or Longwood connected with spouse abuse. Sanford police responded to two reported cases involving disagreements, but neither resulted in an arrest.

"The number of domestic violence cases were definitely down this weekend," Proechel said. "I would like to believe that the unusually low numbers were down in a direct connection with the romantic theme of the Valentine's Day period."

County boasts some of the best schools

We knew all along that Seminole County had some of the best schools in the state, but it feels good to have that sort of thing affirmed by the experts in the education field.

This past Friday, Betty Castor, the state's Commissioner of Education, traveled to Lake Mary to present all six district high schools with substantial grants in recognition for their achievement of statewide goals for school Improvement. Seminole County is one of the few districts in the state to have all of its high schools so honored. Some larger counties, including Orange, failed to have even one of their high schools earn any grant money.

One school, Lake Mary High School was given an additional honor for having more students enrolled in upper level math classes than any other high school in the state.

Students, who must be prepared for employment and post-secondary training regardless of their career pursuits, finally are" being encouraged to seek out the highest level of training of which they are capable.

For years, students were being encouraged to be "good enough" now they are being told to "be all they can be." As students improve and grow so will the quality of the schools.

Defining political capital

A new president affords us a unique opportunity to look at the use or misuse of political capital. There are several ways wall-ban daniel political capital. In the ultimate sense it is the amount of electoral popularity that would allow the President to be re-elected. This is a long-term view. A shorter view would be the amount of resources that might be invested or spent to accomplish a particular purpose. President Bush had a 90 percent popularity rating following the Gulf War. He understood that he had two options regarding the use of his impressive political capital with respect to the economy. One choice was to attempt to ride out the problems in the economy through the election without taking any dramatic steps, haping his popularity would carry him through. The other was to immediately spend some of his political capital by making the economy the issue, by telling the public the economy was bad and by proposing dramatic action to boost the economy, all with the hope that come election time he would have enough political capital left to be re-elected. He chose wrong and lost.

President Clinton has come into office promising the American people change. He will need to spend a lot of political capital to implement his economic program. His problem is that he may be forced to use some of his capital on matters unrelated to the economy and not have enough capital left to deal effectively with the Congress. For instance, he lost a small amount over his mishandling of the Zoc Baird nomination. He is spending considerably more on the issue of gays in the military. As President Bush can testily, you can born your assets very quickly in politics. As many have said, a day in politics is a lifetime.

President Clinton must face the fact that is hard If not impossible to quickly replace political capital. In my opinion, he should save the vast majority of his "bank account" for economic problems. In 1996 the honeymoon will be long over. If the promised changes have not been accomplished he will be in the same position as President Bush bankrupt. The issue to Clinton is not whether he wins or loses on the question of gays in the military, but how much the effort costs him. [1] and [1]

Higher taxes aren't the right answer

If you believe that you are undertaxed by the federal government, please write me in care of Americans. Yet, President Clinton informs us the this newspaper. Our new president seems to think that there are lots of you out there. And that if more of you paid your fair share of taxes, we wouldn't have the current deficit mess.

I'm not convinced. I think that, with few exceptions. Americans are sending more than enough tax money to Washington. As Ronald Reagan once observed: The problem of the deficit is not that Americans are taxed too little. It's that tural change in the their government is spending too much.

President Clinton is asking that Americans "sacrifice" for their country by accepting higher taxes. But why should taxpayers sacrifice when freely, the federal there is absolutely no guarantee that Congress will curb its profligate spending habits?

Just three years ago, you will recall, President from the taxpayers. Bush struck a deal with Congress in which he accepted new taxes in exchange for assurances of spending cuts. Americans were hit with a record tax hike of $165 billion over five years. But Congress continued to spend money like it was going out of style.

In fact, the record shows that for every new dollar of federal taxes raised since the 1990 budget deal, Congress spent roughly a buck and a half. The result is that Washington now government needs more.

Any additional revenues raised by the federal govern-ment will be like money down the proverbial rat hole. Until there is strucfederal budget pro-cess, until Congress is unable to spend government deserves not a dollar more

A constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget would do much to impose fiscai discipline on federal lawmakers. However, based on recent history, the likelihood of such a measure passing Congress is less than zero. Lawmakers have shown time and time again that they will not willingly surrender their license to spend other people's money.

There is hope, however. With a member of their party in the White House, the Democrat-controlled Congress may be willing not to surrender, but to share some of its power over the purse. President Clinton conceivably could push through budget reform this year, much as Reagan pushed through tax reform during his first year in office.

The first step toward budget reform would be to set a limit on annual increases in federal spending. It seems reasonable to peg yearly growth in spending to increases in the Consumer Price Index. If Congress wanted to exceed that spending cap, it should be required to muster a supermajority vote (two-thirds, preferably, but more likely three-fifths). Had President Bush won such a concession from Congress as part of the 1990 budget agreement, had the growth in federal spending been held to the inflation rate over the six-year span covered by the pact, the government would have saved $414 billion. That would be enough to to buy all the goods and services produced by Spain this year, or enough to give every working American a $3,300 tax cut.

Environmentalists see big picture

Throughout the scientific disciplines, including ecology, there has been a recent trend to step back to see the larger picture, to look at things on the macro, instead of just the micro

This is particularly true of complex interactive systems, be they the climate, the economy or the environment. One upshot of this evolution of method has been to elevate environmental conservation to what is being termed an ecosystem approach.

In its broadest sense, the idea is obvious to anyone who will but look about them. Our natural environment is increasingly fragmented, cut into smaller and smaller pieces, often isolated one from another. Migratory routes have been narrowed or cut and habitat has been reduced below the size; needed for species survival. The ecosystem approach calls for managing the natural environment to maintain the integrity of the ecosystem it represents.

A few years ago a team headed by researcher D.W. Crumpacker investigated how. extensively this country's natural vegetation has been altered in the past several hundred years. Looking at the lower 48 states, they found that development - from farms to cities and everything in between - had altered a total of 980,000 square miles of the nation's landscape, an expanse six times the size of the state of California. The changes include the loss of nearly 90 percent of the mixed elm and ash forests, 78 percent of the beech and maple forests and three-quarters of the original oak and hickory forests.

The way we've managed what remains, "is almost always to manage it in fairly small pieces, in fragments." says Stanley Temple, president of the Society for Conservation Blology. A forest, say, may be managed as patchworks of standing timber stated for cropping. An administrative boundary that has no relationship to the environment may dictate conflicting management practices for public grazing land administered by the Bureau of Land Management that adjoins land supervised by the National Park Service.

Michael Scott, a research biologist with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service says, "We used to manage for single species. I think we should be more concerned about managing for the integrity of self-austaining natural systems." In this approach, viable populations of species could be maintained before they enter the critical care ward of the Endangered Species Act.

Scott is working on a gap analysis project that now involves 22 states. The aim is to identify where gaps exist in the protective network of species' habitat. The map that will be drawn from the work, he says, can be "used to identify areas of highest species richness and to target areas for protection into the

Perhaps the most ambitious application of the ecosystem approach so far is the effort to save Florida's Everglades. This $420 million plan envisions, among other things, restoring the Kissimmee River to its natural flow, adding 146,000 acres to the Big Cypress National Preserve and expan-ding the Everglades National Park by 107,600 acres.

But the approach can apply to smaller projects on private land, too. Temple cites a Wisconsin electric company that has used its utility corridors "to link up some very endangered open grass land areas here in the Midwest, to allow movement of plants and animals between otherwise isolated patches of habitat." Last July the U.S. Forest Service embraced, at least on paper, a charter for cosystem management." It's a step forward for an agency best known in recent years for managing, principally to maximize timber clearcuts on public land financed in part by hefty taxpayer subsidies. Jim Senwood, acting director of the fiedgling effort, says, "If you recognize that we are concerned about biological diversity and we want to maintain it, you can't do that with the approach that we have used traditionally. You've got to look at things at an ecosystem level." To see the forest for the trees, as it were. As of now, however, the effort is mainly confined to the paper its charter is written on and a small team of experts holding meetings to determine what it might mean in actual use. "It is going to be a long process," Senwood concedes.

Look at things on the macro, instead of just the micro scale.

An opportunity to jump start the Forest Service bureaucracy lies in President Clinton's pending "forest summit" to work out solutions to the whole gamut of issues involving the public forests of the Pacific Northwest.

Agreement that the future management of these forests be governed by an ecosystem approach could provide a basis for the summit's success, and advance the practice of ecosystem integrity as an element of sound environmental policy.

Shultz recalled, one key White House meeting, on Jan. 7. 1986, when he and Weinberger stoutly opposed the scheme while Vice President Bush sat shortly by, Shults was astounded when Bush leigned ignorance during TV interviews. And Shultz wrote: I was astonished to read in the Aug. 6,. 1987. Washington Post about an interview by David Broder during, which Bush said, 'If I had, sat, there and heard George Shultz and Cap express it (opposition to fran arms sales) strongly, maybe,I would have had a stronger view. But when you don't know something. It's hard to react. We were not in the loop."

Weinberger called him. Shultz wrote: "He was astonished too. 'That's terrible. He was on the other side. It's on the record. Why did he say that?""

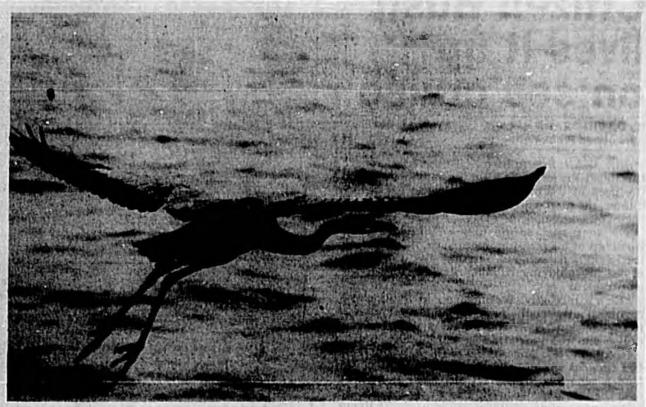

Shultz' dedication to Truth and principle carned him scant appreciation during his many years in government. Richard Nixon called him a "candy ass" when he resigned as Treasury Secretary in 1974 in protest to White House pressure to sic the Internal Revenue Service on the president's enemies. As Reagan's secretary of state, he was zlisliked by liberals for paying too little attention to Central America and reviled by the Right for being too moderate, not to mention being soft on the Soviets. The "Buddha" of the State Department: they called him - deliberate, plodding, colorless.

The Iran-Contra cabal especially detested him. After he objected to their overtures to Iran, his official travel requests were thwarted by Donald Regan's office. When the White House attempted to stanch leaks to the press by ordering lie detector tests for administration officials. Shultz publicly threatened to resign. At one point, CIA Director Casey wrote to Reagan to protest "the public pouting of George Shultz and the fatlure of the State Department to support what we

Jackson commented, "We are not going to wait for an incorporation before we start work. We have already organized our committees for research, personnel, media and parades, and we have participation by some outstanding peo-ple; blacks, whites, and Hispanics. We are all banding together to work on this pro-blem, and we will be taking action."

Jackson said his group has received support from Juanita Harold, grandmother of Henry Eaddy, the 19 year old youth killed in a shooting last Friday at Bethune Cookman College. "She said she is willing to work with us and do anything she can to help fight this problem," he said.

Jackson predicted the next meeting of the group and all interested persons will be held in approximately two weeks. "We expect to invite the mayor, police chief and sheriff to be with us," he said.

"We will be looking first at two goals, to clean up our streets through Florida laws that are already on the books, and a drive to have better regulation of businesses where drug deals are being made," he continued.

Meanwhile, across the city from Jackson's meeting, 15 people from the 300 to 600 blocks of Palmetto Avenue were gathering at the home of Michelle Otero. "We had hoped more of our neighbors would turn out." she said, "but we were happy that we had that many."

Otero had also invited Sanford City Commissioner Lon Howell to attend the gathering. "He didn't make it this time," she said, "but maybe he can be on hand for our next meeting."

"Various people came up with some suggestions on how to help eliminate the problem of drug sales in these neighborhoods," she said. "One man suggested a sweep be made by police of this ing the problem.

'Another person suggested that we should ask the TV stations to come in and confront the drug dealers and prostitutes on a first hand basis and publicly show what's going on," she continued. "Some suggested more police patrols, especially bike patrols, be added to the neighborhoods."

Otero said none of the ideas came out as being the total nolution. "But we have started people thinking now," she said, "and maybe if they continue to. give this problem some thought, by the next time we meet we may have more people attending, and more ideas to exchange."

"I didn't think we would come up with a solution with just one meeting." Otero said, "but at least we were able to get some people motivated."

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico - To the folks aboard the Regal Princess, he's the guy out jogging on the deck at 7 a.m., the fellow in the bar before dinner, the man who hugged the couple renewing their vows on Valentine's Day.

The love boat seems to have drawn George Bush out of his post-inaugural shell, and many of the 1,500 passengers sharing his Caribbean cruise are enjoying rubbing shoulders with the ex-president.

"He's a nice guy. We met him in the bar one night." Paul Needham, a telephone technician from Jackson, N.J., said Monday night as the cruise ship was docked at Pier 4 in Old San Juan.

Needham, 26, and his wife, Ellen, used their

"Groundhog Day," starring Murray as a smug weatherman who gets caught in a time warp and is forced to live Groundhog Day over and over again, made an estimated $15 million over the four-day period, industry sources said Monday.

The No. 2 movie was the Richard Gere-Jodie Foster romance "Sommersby," with $10 million.

Disney's new "Homeward Bound," an animal adventure story, was third with $7.3 million, followed by last week's box office winner, the "Lethal Weapon" spoof "National Lampoon's Loaded Weapon 1." It made about $6.3 million.

Among other new movies, "Untained Heart" was sixth with $4.2 million, and "The Temp" tied for ninth with $3 million.

MINNEAPOLIS - A man was caught in the act of killing a dying relative in the hospice ward of a hospital, police said.

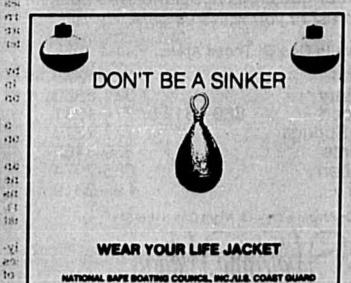

Mary Rita Kay, 57, who had been diagnosed with terminal cancer in October, was attacked Monday at Fairview Riverside Medical Center. police said. "The suspect was in the act and hospital staff and security attempted to stop him." but they were too late, Sgt. Richard Morrill said.

Morrill refused to give a motive and would not disclose how Kay was killed except to say that no guns or knives were involved.

The male relative did not resist arrest, police said. He was expected to be charged today. Hospital spokeswoman Jean Tracy said there were no restrictions on visiting family members CRASHI You have just become a statistic; one of thousands of Central Floridians involved in auto mobile accidenta everyday on our overcrowded highways. As bad as the situation may seem to you at the time, keep in mind that you can call on the experience and quality service of Sanford Paint & Body and Wrecker Services, Inc.

Located at 2601 Country Club Road, in Sanford, since 1980, Sanford Paint & Body is owned and operated by Fred Bussey. Sanford Paint & Body is "your one stop service shop." The shop can handle complete body repair service for foreign and domestic cars, emergency towing service, 24 hours a day and mechanical repairs on cars and trucks.

Sanford Paint & Body can completely handle insurance claim service for auto accident repairs, from a fender bender to major overhaul. From the moment your car or truck is towed into the shop, a well-defined process is set into motion. The insurance company is contacted with an estimate, parts are ordered and mechanical and body work is completed. The vehicle then goes to the paint shop, where it is preped and then painted. All paint is factory matched by paint code, paint work is blended and feathered to help make repairs not noticeable. The vehicle then goes back to the body shop for final prep and finishing touches, such as trim work, moulding, pin stripes,

Middle English Dictionary nears the z's

By JUDY DAUBENMIER Associated Press Writer

ANN ARBOR, Mich. - With six decades of definitions behind them, editors of a dictionary for a language abandoned 500 years ago are zeroing in on the Z's.

The Middle English dictionary project at the University of Michigan should be wrapped up in late 1997 or early 1998, closing the books on an effort that began in 1930.

"One of the things about dictionaries, they go on longer than you expect," noted Robert Lewis, the project director.

"This is really a masterpiece. It's like having a painting that's almost done, aside from the lower left-hand corner." said William Kelly, university vice president for research.

Middle English is the language of Geoffrey Chaucer and his Canterbury tales. Consisting of several regional dialects, it was an early stage of modern English.

The Middle English dictionary covers the period from around 1100 A.D., the time of the Norman invasion of England, to 1500 A.D., when the printing press came into use and began standardizing English.

The dictionary never will be a best seller. Those laboring over it say its $10 million cost - paid for the by the university and two foundations — has to be chalked up to love of literature.

Editors spent six years sorting out the S's, the most common letter in the language. Now they're wading through the W's, the second most prevalent letter.

Paper-bound installments are published periodically — about four a year now — and sold to about 1,100 subscribers, including literary scholars and editors of modern English dictionaries. The Japanese, enthralled with the English language, are faithful buyers.

The dictionary eventually will contain 70,000 words spread over about 15,000 pages. A supplement may add important words that were

The basis of the dictionary is 3 million slips of paper stored in cardboard boxes containing quotations culled from Middle English works from Bibles to legal documents.

Many were copied years ago by readers employed by Oxford University as part of its Oxford English Dictionary project and by readers at Cornell and Stanford universities. More were added by other readers, including some paid by the Works Progress Administration during the Depression, after the project came to

The task of giving meanings to a word has changed little over the decades.

An editor sorts quotations in which the word appears, arranging the slips chronologically and according to the various senses of the word. They are then stowed in the slots of a large wooden

The editor then crafts a proposed definition for each sense, working from one slot to the next.
"This work may look kind of boring to people on the outside, but every word is really a new challenge," Lewis said. "Granted there are formulae that we use, but every word is really different. It's been a real challenge."

Stone-age lifestyles offer hope of drop in breast cancer rate

By PAUL RAEBURN AP Science Editor

BOSTON - Breast cancer is 100 times as common now as it was in the Stone Age, a finding that suggests ways to dramatically reduce the frequency of the disease, a researcher said Monday.

Studies of Stone Age child-rearing also suggest that bables who sleep with their mothers may be at lower risk of sudden infant death syndrome, a researcher said.

The studies, presented at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, are products of the new field of evolutionary medicine. Its central tenet is that human society has changed drastically since the Stone Age but human biology hasn't.

Humans evolved to function under Stone Age conditions, which persisted for millions of years, and they are now out of sync with their environment in ways that lead to disease. researchers said.

"From the standpoint of our biology and chemistry, we're still Stone-Agers," said one author of the breast cancer study. Dr. S. Boyd Eaton of Emory University in Atlanta. "But our biology operates under different circumstances from those for which it was designed."

The determinations of Stone Age lifestyles come partly from fossil evidence but mostly from studies of present-day tribes of nomadic hunter-gatherers, who are the closest modern equivalents of Stone Age humans, Eaton said.

American women currently face a one-in-eight or one-in-nine lifetime risk of developing breast cancer, according to the National Cancer Institute in Washington. The risk in Stone Age women was about one in 800 or one in 900, Eaton said.

He found that women in hunter-gatherer tribes begin menstruating later than women in Western societies, have their first child earlier, have more children, nurse more frequently and have earlier menopause.

All of those lower breast cancer risk by reducing the rate at which certain cells divide in the mammary ducts inside the breasts, Eaton

More rapid cell division is associated with a higher risk of the out-of-control cell reproduction characteristic of cancer tumors, he said. Walle he would not recommend that American women begin having children at age 13, as Stone Age women did, he said that hormonal injections could be used to mimic Stone Age conditions.

possibly producing dramatic declines in breast cancer rates. "We by no means advocate doing this willynilly for all women now," he said. But studies should be done to determine the value of mimicking the hormonal changes associated with Stone Age child-rearing, he said.

Such treatment could also lower the risk of endometrial cancer and ovarian cancer, he said.

Groundwork laid for tax hikes

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - President Clinton is working to build momentum for a $500 billion package of tax increases and spending cuts, saying that most Americans may feel a pinch but the price of standing still "is far higher than the price of change. Republicans offered to cooperate on slashing the deficit after Clinton's first prime-time address to the nation Monday night, but were skeptical about his approach. "What the president has proposed so far is not 'shared sacrifice' but raw punishment," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-

Clinton today was meeting with Democratic congressional leaders and visiting a road construction project in town to demonstrate the kind of public works projects the economic stimulus portion of his plan would finance.

Clinton said the short-term stimulus part of his plan - $16 billion in spending on public works projects and $15 billion in tax breaks for businesses - would create as many as 500,000 jobs.

But most of his 11-minute nationally broadcast address was an effort to explain his decisions to raise taxes and cut government services and programs.

This is nothing less than a call to arms.

What the president has proposed so far is not 'shared sacrifice' but raw punishment.

to restore the vitality of the American dream," he said.

"The price of doing the same old thing is far higher than the price of change."

Clinton will formally unveil the four-year plan - which will include a new tax on fuels and sources of energy and an increase in the top individual and corporate income tax rate - in a Wednesday night address to a joint

House-Senate session. And while the proposed energy tax - to be based on heat content of various fuels will proportionately hit middle-income Americans the hardest, Clinton said 70 percent "of the taxes I will propose fall on the shoulders of those who make more than $100,000."

A White House official said Clinton's comments did not address total revenues to be generated, but rather that seven out of 10 tax increases would be almed at the ceiling of 31 percent to 36 percent on households earning more than $200,000 and individuals earning over $150,000; and impose an additional surcharge, probably 10 percent, on incomes over $1 million.

Monday night's address was the first time Clinton has used the $100,000 figure.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., in a televised GOP response, questioned whether Clinton would make deep enough cuts in government spending before asking for more taxes.

"We'll be working ... to make certain that 'sacrifice' isn't just a presidential code word for more taxes, more spending and more mandates from Washington," Dole said.

Clinton today was visiting a $3 million road repair project in Washington. Some 85 percent of the funds are federal.

Clinton told the nation he'd hoped to carry out campaign vows to reform health care, improve education and beef up the nation's infrastructure "without asking more of you. And I have worked harder than I have ever worked in my life to meet that goal. But I cannot. Because the deficit has increased so

Are Americans really ready for the new Clinton?

By JILL LAWRENCE An AP News Analysis

WASHINGTON - Candidate Clinton prevailed over two rivals running on doomsday fiscal plans and never quite answered a repeated question about his own economic program: Where's the pain?

Almost everywhere, President Clinton now concedes. His new proposals promise to hit bluecollar subdivisions and elegant estates, giant corporations and anybody who drives a car or heats a house.

The warm and fuzzy "people first" candidate has been born again as a deficit hawk, echoing Ross Perot's "shared sacrifice" rhetoric and Paul Tsongas' painful economic proposals. A new energy tax. More taxes on Social Security benefits. Oh, and good-bye to that tax cut for the middle class.

shocked at the increasing annual cash shortfall - this fiscal year it will be up around $327 billion. In his Monday night TV speech he even used charts, a la Perot, as he sought to justify his shift in Forget for a minute that experts said Clinton's package never added up even using lower deficit projections. Or the common assumption that publicly released numbers are more rosy than realistic.

Maybe he really was blindsided.

Or maybe he knew he wouldn't be able to do anything about the deficit unless he got elected first. And when was the last time full disclosure was a winning strategy?

Walter Mondale gave his advisers heartburn in 1984 when he told the country both he and Ronald Reagan would Clinton repeatedly says he's raise taxes, but only he -Mondale - would be up front enough to say so.

"We fought with him," recalls Bob Beckel, who was Mondale's campaign manager. "I said, 'You can't say it. ... Once you say it you're out of the game.' He said, 'I'm going to say it.' He understood the deficit problem and felt very deeply he had to put the warning down." Mondale was right, of course. But he also was trounced.

More recently, Tsongas and Perot captured the national fancy with tame-the-deficit campaigns. Some voters got religion, but not enough to give Tsongas his party's nomination or Perot the presidency.

Clinton understood full well what he needed to do. He went after Tsongas for proposing a gas tax hike and entitlement savings. He criticized Perot for recommending cold-turkey defl-cit-reduction he said would throw millions out of work.

And when he was down and out a year ago in economically depressed New Hampshire, he leaned heavily on an issue that may have saved his candidacy: middle-class tax relief.

Now that reality's hit, Clinton is on a course many Americans appear to oppose. Polls show about four in 10 believe Clinton's first priority should be cutting the deficit. Two-thirds to three-quarters oppose specific steps such as raising energy taxes or taxing a bigger share of Social Security benefits.

But such questions "emphasize the pain without emphasizing the payoff," said Andrew Kohut, director of the Times Mirror Center for the People and the Press. He said people need to understand what's in it for them.

Clinton is trying mightily to make the connection. As he put it last week at his town meeting. "There's no virtue in any of this unless it helps you."

On Monday he explained it this way: "When the deficit gets bigger and bigger and bigger.

the government takes more of your money just for interest payments. And then it's harder for you to borrow money for your own business or to afford a new home or to send a child to college."

The quick-take response to the Oval Office speech: 75 percent agreed that Americans are going to have to make some financial sacrifices, but fully 55 percent said they think most Americans are not ready for such sacrifices and only 34 percent said they had a good idea of where Clinton intends to lead the nation.

Moreover, only 56 percent of the 521 Americans contacted by an ABC News "Instant poll" had heard anything about the speech and 44 percent had not heard anything it. Of those who had heard, 59 percent approved of most of what he said and 27 percent disapproved.

The survey had a 5 percent margin of error.

For a while, as the White House floated hardship proposals in a vacuum, it seemed like Clinton had lost his populist touch. But the sure-footed ated Press.

campaigner is back - now to argue that his policies may have evolved, but his commitments to change and fairness are intact.

By Monday he had the pitch down pat: First he'd cut government staff and programs. Then he'd "ask the wealthy to pay their fair share." Then, and only then, he admitted failing to hold harmless "those of you who gave the most in the 1980s," the middle class. And finally he dismissed prospective nay savers as "defenders of decline."

Undoubtedly there will be many of them.

But Clinton sounds remarkably confident as he awaits the firestorm, perhaps because he's beaten steep odds before. He told business leaders last week that Americans are going to break with the past. "This year," he expects them to say. "we'll pull together and do our part.

Labor chiefs see Bob Reich as ally for workplace change

By ROBERT BURNS Associated Press Writer

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. - Labor leaders aren't sure they will like all of President Clinton's economic program, but they don't hesitate to heap praise on one of its main architects, Labor

Secretary Robert Reich. The 33 members of the AFL-CIO's governing executive council were hearing today from Reich and questioning him about Clinton's economic plan, which the president will unveil in an address to a joint session of Congress on Wednesday.

"When you have a guy like Bob Reich things can happen and things will happen." Morton Bahr, president of the Communications Workers of America, said Monday.

Labor leaders view Reich, a former Harvard professor and a key adviser to Clinton during the campaign and the post-election transition, as an innovator whose ideas on making American workers more competitive mesh with their own. 'What a breath of fresh air he is," said George Kourpias, president of the International Associa-tion of Machinists and Aerospace Workers. Kourpias recalled in an interview Monday that Reich had told the Senate Labor Committee in his confirmation hearing that he wanted to make it easier for workers to join unions. "That's something we haven't heard in years" from a labor secretary. Kourplas said. Robert J. Kalaski, director of communications please the trade unionists. He said recently that he expected Clinton to follow through on a campaign pledge to push for legislation banning the use of permanent replacement workers for strikers, and he declared himself in favor of raising the minimum wage.

The AFL-CIO executive council on Monday issued a declaration calling on Congress to raise the minimum wage by 50 cents an hour this year and next year, and then ensuring that in the future it remain at 50 percent of the national average hourly wage.

The minimum wage now is $4.25 an hour. The national average hourly wage in January was $10.74, according to the Labor Department.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland said after Monday's session that he expected labor unions to be "broadly supportive" of Clinton's economic program, while other labor chiefs said they were wary of a new tax on energy use.

Barely. While their nearest competitors, Cafe Sorrento and Mudfish, both won at Chase Park Monday night, T.R.C. (Tim Raines Connection) showed no signs of easing up as the league-leaders rolled to their sixth straight victory, 6-2, over Coaches Locker Room. Philadelphia Phillies farmhand Mike Merthie did most of the damage for TRC, ripping a baseclearing double in a five run first inning and later driving in his fourth run of the game with a sacrifice fly. Pitcher Tom Gracey helped his own cause with two hits and an RBI, while scattering nine hits and holding Coaches Locker Room scoreless until the sixth.

Cafe Sorrento used a six-run second inning to crase a 3-0 deficit and went on to win its third straight game, after an 0.2 start, 8.6 over Ken Rummel Chevrolet. Bobby Wells and Jerry Litsuan drove in a pair of runs each as Sorrento won the battle of 2-2 teams. □Sec Softball, Page 2B

The win moves the Rams into tonight's 7 p.m. winner's bracket contest with the winner of Monday night's late game between the host Lyman Greyhounds and the Daytona Beach-Seabreeze Sandcrabs. DeLand will play the Lyman-Seabreeze loser at 4 p.m.

game, but put them to good use, scoring three runs in each of the first and second innings to take a 6-1 lead. With the lead in hand, the Rams turned the game over to pitcher Ben Rovito, who scattered 10 hits, while striking out 12 to give Lake Mary its first victory of the season. The Rams had lost their season opener to Orange County power, Boone, 1-0 Saturday night.

Rovito's batterymate, catcher Rene Perez.

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS - Making like Boston Red Sox pitcher Frank Viola, Sarasota High School junior left-hander Doug Million proved to be too much for host Lake Brantley as the Sallors bested the Patriots 5-1 in the Championship Game of the 1993 Big Blue Bonanza Winter Baseball Tournament at Lake Brantley High School Monday afternoon. Viola, who lives in Tuskawilla during the off season, was on hand to throw out the first pitch for the championship contest.

In a game played earlier Monday, defending Class 4A State Champion Sarasota-Riverview ripped Deltona 9-2 to claim third place.

Silver Hawks, Rams get votes in Basketball poll

By DEAN SMITH Herald Sports Writer

SANFORD - With district's starting this week, maybe the respect is finally coming for Seminole County basketball team's.

After being totally ignored by the state basketball pollsters last week. both the Lake Howell and Lake Mary girls' basketball team's received votes in this week's poll.

But the surprising thing about the voting was not that the two squads got votes, but that they both moved way up in the rankings. While neither team is in the top 10, Lake Howell's vote total (seven) would get the Silver Hawks ranked 11th, while Lake Mary received three votes, which would be good for 14th in the rankings.

The only other area team getting votes in the girls' poll was Jones, the top seeded team in the 3A-District 5 tournament which will be held at Seminole High School. The Tigers got four votes, the first time they have received notice this year.

On the boys' side of the ledger, no Seminole County squads are receiving votes, but 4A-District 9 competitor Spruce Creek is ranked No. 9 in this week's poll. Of interest to local fans is the fact that Lyman. which has struggled this season. ended the Hawks' 19-game winning streak this past Saturday night.

Jones' boys team, which will be in Seminole's district next week at New Smyrna Beach, also got votes TALLAHASSEE — Here is the state prephenticiball pull for the week ended Saturday as voted by the Florida Sports Writers Association. Firsts continue at Daytona 500

By MIKE HARRIS AP Motorsports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH - Firsts have become the norm at Daytona 500 - for almost everybody but Dale Earnhardt.

The victory by Dale Jarrett in Sunday's Daytona 500 was the fifth straight time NASCAR's biggest race was won by a first-timer.

Darrell Waltrip, who chased a Daytona win for 17 years, finally won in 1989. Victories followed by Derrike Cope, Ernie Irvan, Davey Allison and now Jarrett. Kelly Jarrett, Dale's wife, said her husband had a premonition that Sunday might be his day. "I can certainly believe this," she said. "Four days before we came down here, we were coming back from a wedding and Dale said in this real boyish fashion, 'I know I might be the first car out, but I feel like I might win the Daytona 500.'

Jarrett's victory was his second as a Winston Cup driver but first for his team owner -Washington Redskins coach Joe Gibbs - in only his second try. Earnhardt, though, failed for the 15th straight time to win the 500 — the only major event he hasn't won.

Earnhardt won three races the Busch Clash, a qualifying race for the 500 and the Goody's 300 Grand National event - in the week prior to the big one. Then he came up empty, finishing second to Jarrett by .19-seconds - less than two car-lengths.

The five-time Winston Cup champion tried to be philosophical through his obvious disappointment.

"Everybody wanted to know if I could finally win the Daytona 500 on my 15th try," he said. "I guess it'll take at least 16 now. ... I'm getting tired of winning everything up until the 500 and then not win it. But we've had some pretty good seasons in the past when we didn't win the Daytona 500, so maybe that'll happen again this year."

In Sunday's race, there were a couple of other important firsts, among them seven-time Daytona 500 winner Richard Petty watching his first 500 as simply a team-owner. It was the first time he didn't take the green flag for the season-opening race in 31 years.

"I'm not a race car driver any more." Petty said after watching his new driver, Rick Wilson, get caught up in a crash midway through the race, "I've got to pay the bills." Another first was the run by

Winston Cup rookie Jeff Gordon, who took the competition and the fans by storm in his first 10 days as a member of the stock car elite. The 21-year-old posted the 12th fastest lap in time trials. won the other qualifying race and then finished a fifth on Sunday, running second as late as two laps from the end.

"This is going to be hard for me to top," Gordon said. "Everybody, is going to be expecting this every weekend, I hope this happens every weekend, but I can't guarantee Going down the backstretch on lap 198 of the 200-mile race. it appeared that Gordon and Jarrett, who was third, might hook up to get past Earnhardt. Instead, Gordon stayed behind Earnhardt and Jarrett slipped past Gordon and then made his own move past the leader.

"I wanted the best finish I could possibly get," Gordon said. "I wanted to wait until two to go and then have Jarrett and I pull out and go by Earnhardt. I came here to win the race. I didn't come here to help Dale (Earnhardt) win the 500. But it got shuffled up and kind of messed me up, but congratulations to Dale Jarrett. He did a DAYTONA BEACH - As he sat in the control truck at the Daytona 500 on Sunday, CBS producer Bob Stenner recognized a unique situation developing on the Speedway track and in his headset.

Dale Jarrett was speeding toward victory in the Super Bowl of stock car racing and his father, Ned, was sitting in the analyst's seat for CBS, at first describing what was happening and then rooting for it.

Stenner never healtated. When he started, I hit everybody's key and said, 'Lay out," "the producer said. "Then I said, 'Ned, root your son home."

That's exactly what Jarrett did, discarding the old "no cheering in the press box," adage for some old fashioned father-son emotion. It became a special bit of television. It was also a 180-degree reversal of Jarrett's reaction the first time he was broadcasting a race his son would win.

in 1991, Jarrett was working for ESPN at Michigan Speedway when Dale goomed toward the finish line in front. "I backed away that time and let Bob Jenkins and Benny Parsons call it." he said. "It was my choice."

After that race, Jarrett heard some criticism. "People said, 'That's your boy. You ought to be jumping up and down."

At Daytona, he was moving in that direction and Stenner recognized the potential of the emotion. "It seemed so natural," the producer said. "It was a great reaction. "I don't think he anticipated

Dale winning. I think he knew Dale's was one of the cars with a legitimate shot to win."

in fact, at a production meeting 10 days before the race, Jarrett told Stenner that Dale had a good chance at winning Daytona. "When he qualified on the front row, Bob said to me, 'Hey, you were right.' "Jarrett

"I felt confident before the race. I thought he had an excellent chance. I think those close to the sport knew Dale would be strong."

As the race evolved, Jarrett wasn't so sure about his son's altuation. "With 10 laps to go, he made some high moves. I didn't know whether he was cooling his tires or just unable to stay low. With two laps to go, I said, 'It's time. He has to go now.' He knew It, too. He moved on Gordon. Earnhardt was getting looser. Once he was by Gordon.

he was in good shape. It was at that point that the excitement began creeping into Jarrett's voice and Stenner called off the rest of his troops. "A father broadcasting his son's victory ... we've never had the situation before and I don't know if anybody else has," the producer said. Jarrett said he was aware of his obligations as a broadcaster to be impartial. Still, that was his son out there. "I try to be as professional as I know how to be all the time," he said. "This was a unique situation, a special opportunity and challenge I en-

"When Stenner asked the others to back off and told me to do the call, he said, 'Be a father.' That got me pumped. I got a little more emotional. It was a natural father's reaction. I Did he think he said too much? Jarrett chuckled at the question.

"I wanted to say more," he said.

DEAR ABBY: (I never thought I'd be writing that!) I am a man in my late 60s, average in most respects - with one exception: I am recovering from a radical mastectomy as a result of breast

It started with a lump in my right breast, which proved to be malignant. My oncologist said that approximately 5 percent of all breast cancers occur in males. They are often fatal for two reasons: (1) Very few men are aware that males are subject to breast cancer, and therefore do not check themselves for lumps as women do. (2) The lump is usually ignored until it spreads beyond control. If you print this warning, it could save many lives. You may use my name.

One party of three ordered very expensive dinners, which included the best wine in the house and they ran up a really big bill. The other party of three had an average-sized bill.

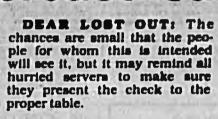

Well, the party that had the really expensive dinners had to get to the theater, so they asked me to give them their bill in a hurry. By mistake, because I was so rushed, I gave them the bill for the table of three who had ordered the cheaper dinners. Abby, they paid the bill and walked out, knowing full well that the check they were paying was not theirs! To make a long story short. because I didn't want my boss to know I had made such a dumb mistake, I paid the difference out of my own pocket. Since I was so new on the job, I was afraid I might have been fired if I couldn't even keep the checks straight.

It's too late for me to do anything about this, but just about everybody in this town reads "Dear Abby," so I hope you publish this so those people will see it. I want them to know that they are their dinner at the expense of my children.

driving by a pasture, spotted

some horses, and stopped so her child could "pet" the horse.) I was heartened that you noted that this could easily have been a cow, and even though the young mother was trespassing on private property, the owner of the horse was liable for injury (in this case, the death) of the child.

1, too, have horses, and live near a public bike trail. Since this trail opened, we have had people park in our yard, climb the fence, pet the horses, feed them candy, jump up and down on the fence, break branches off our trees and shake them at the horses!

I came home one day to find a stranger pitching hay over my fence. He said he thought the horses "looked hungry"! Have you ever heard anything so ridiculous?

Another day, a young mother sat her 15-month-old child on the fence (with the child's legs inside) and both were patting my horse on the head!

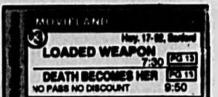

Abby, my horses are gentle. However, an animal is an animal, and by nature very unpredictable. One of my horses is more than 17 hands high, but nothing deters some people from petting him. A prominent Lexington horse breeder lost a court case when a man climbed hs fence to pet some thoroughbred stallions. The man was severely injured and sued the breeder. Despite the signs posted "PLEASE DO NOT PET THE HORSES" - the breeder lost the case. NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 79 years old and have suffered hot flashes for about a year. I never had a problem with regular menopause and my doctor prescribed Premarin because of a lack of estrogen. I'm reluctant to take this medication because my pharmacist said it might cause cancer. Is there an alternative?

DEAR READER: The symptoms of menopause, such as hot flashes and irritability, ordinarily occur at the time a woman stops menstruating, not many years later, as in your case. Thus, while you could be experiencing signs of estrogen deficiency, I think you should verify this with a gynecologist. Perhaps you are really suffering from vascular irritability due to another cause -- hypertension or diabetes, for instance.

The use of supplemental hormone (Premarin and similar products) is no longer controversial. The drug will, indeed. alleviate the symptoms of menopause, as well as retard wrinkling and osteoporosis. Postmenopausal estrogen does not cause breast cancer.

Nonetheless, it is associated with a significant risk of uterine cancer, unless it is taken in a cycle with progestin, another female hormone. Ask your gynecologist about this.

Given your age, you may choose to avoid the expense and inconvenience of hormone therapy: if you're patient -- and if your symptoms are caused by a delayed reaction to menopause -they should disappear in a few

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Menopause." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

In tournament bridge nowadays, almost all players bid much more than they used to. Putting pressure on the opponents to try to force errors has become almost de rigueur.

One weapon in this armory of attack is the five-card weak two-bid. It isn't really my style. but it does have its moments, as in today's deal. North was aggressive in bidding four hearts, but he was expecting a six-card suit opposite.

West led the diamond king: five, three, four. He continued with three rounds of hearts to stop a diamond ruff in the

. To make the contract, South had to establish a spade for a diamond discard, and he had to find the club queen. He played a spade to dummy's king, cashed the ace and ruffed a spade in Declarer judged that West had three diamond honors, the A-K-Q or A-K-J, because East hadn't played a higher diamond at trick one. Along with the A-K of hearts and spade queen, that made at least 17 points. Clearly East, not West, had the club queen. However, South had to be careful. He led the club seven to dummy's king. Next came the club jack. East didn't cover, so the jack won the trick. Now followed a spade ruff, the club ace, a club to dummy's 10 and the fifth spade for a diamond discard.

If East covers the club jack. declarer wins with the ace and plays the club nine to dummy's 10. Then, after a spade ruff, the carefully preserved club two is led to dummy's four to allow the discard on the spade 10.

Count the points and watch your spots very carefully.
