LAKE MARY — Residents of Channel Drive in Lake Mary didn't want the headaches of living on lakefront property, but they've got them.

When Doug Forner bought his home at 101 Channel Dr. he knew he'd be near enough to the lakes around Lake Mary to occasionally enjoy its beauty but he wouldn't have to worry about water creeping into his back yard (or, worse yet, into his house) and other hazards of waterfront living.

"I was wrong," he said. "I didn't count on it backing up into my front yard from the lake across the road."

Forner said the water level in W. Lake Crystal and the Timacuan lakes (which are now one body): of water) are on the rise and have no place to go:

SANFORD — Reading is supposed to be fun.
But for those who don't have the experience of exposure to books on a regular basis, it can be a less piessurable experience.

That's why volunteers from Seminole High School take the time, several times a year, to go to Midway Elementary School and bring the joy of reading to students who might not have the opportunity to own books of their own.

Tuesday, ghosts, gobins, clowns and a variety of literary characters decended on the Midway media center bearing books for blossoming readers.

The characters were students from Seminole who love both reading and children. Bringing books and dressing up for Halloween, they delighted the youngsters who rashed to greet them when they arrived.

The books were provided by the federal Reading Is FUNdamental (RIF) program, which provides free books for economically disadvantaged students.

The volunteers were not merely delivering the books, they also took the time to read to the eager youngsters.

Plans submitted for high speed rail

Oy (ADAM YBOTIAMS Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - The race is on again to find a private group that has the right stuff to build a high speed rail in Florida.

This time, state government also is paying to go along for the ride.

Five companies submitted applications Tuesday for plans to finance, build and operate a rail system with trains sipping between Tampa, Orlando and Miami at speeds up to 300 miles an hour or more.

A similar push to link the urban areas by high speed rail failed five years ago when the developer who had the state franchise needed public money to build the project. The state has agreed to pay an average of $70 million a year over 50 years for a system that will cost up to $5 billion. State Transportation Secretary Ben Watta said he hoped the rail line would be operating in seven to 10 years.

"The state put its money where its mouth is in terms of long-range commitment to this project." Watts said after the proposals were released. "The high speed rail system will give us an alternative to both the automobile and the airplane." The five groups that will compete for the franchise to build the project include:

- Florida Overland Express, an Orlando-based consortium that includes GCC Alsthom Transport, the French company that builds the 200 mile an hour TGV bullet train that has operated in parts of Europe for 14 years. Other partners include Fluor Daniel, Odebrecht Contractors of Florida and Quebec-based Bombardier.

- Rail Florida, which is based in Fort Lauderdale and includes Raytheon Infrastructure Services, ABB Traction Inc. and Amtrak. The group wants to build a system based on ABB's Swedish X2000 train with top speeds of 150 miles an hour.

- Florida Maglev Consortium, owned by American Maglev Technology of Florida Inc. and Coleman Research Corp. The group, based in Edgewater, wants to employ magnetic levitation for trains with top speeds of 300 miles an hour.

- Florida Magpiane Inc., a Lakelandbased consortium of a dozen businesses that has designed a magnetically-levitated train that could travel 300 miles an hour.

- italferr-sis. t.a.v. s.p.a., a subsidiary based in Rome of the Italian State Railways. The group proposes trains with speeds between 120 miles an hour on existing rail lines to 186 miles an hour on a new system.

The applicants displayed their plans Tuesday for reporters, transportation of-ficials and one another at Department of Transportation headquarters in Tallahassee.

Each of the applicants paid $25,000 to seek the franchise, which will be awarded in early 1996.

The biggest surprise was the application by the Italian group, which had not expressed much interest prior to the deadline, officials said.

Representatives of each group had differing views on whether the state's subsidy would make the rail line viable. Some said the funding was crucial. One said his group didn't need it.

Eugene Skoropowski, project director of Overland Express, considered one of the frontrunners, said the group wouldn't have applied without the state money.

Our project is a true public-private partnership where the state would be an equity participant along with the private sector," Skoropowski said.

7-time drunken driving offender dares troopers to arrest him

PENBACOLA - Florida Highway Patrol troopers say Archie Montgomery can rest assured they will grant his wish to be arrested for driving with a permanently revoked license

But Sgt. Ed Joyner said he will be arrested because his name is on a list of people who have lost their driving privileges and been convicted at least six times of drunken driving, not because he dared troopers to arrest him.

The Highway Patrol is on the lookout for such drivers as part of a crackdown known as Operation Roundup.

Operation Roundup has targeted 3,264 past violators with six-plus convictions across

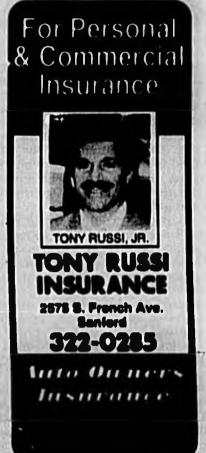

The threshold of at least six violations was picked because that number is a sure indication those motorists are violating the driving ban. It also is considered a manageable number as thousands more people have four or five convictions.

In a six-county pilot program 17 specially trained troopers have arrested 109 people with 785 prior drunken driving arrests since March 1, said FHP Capt. Ken Howes in Tallahassee. The test counties are Orange, Hillsborough, Dade, Manatee, Duval and Broward.

Now, the patrol is expanding the effort to all 67 counties by enlisting local law enforcement agencies and distributing information to troopers throughout the state on potential violators in their areas.

Too confusing I think that I shall never see, city codes so confusing about a tree.

Joyce Kilmer may not have approved of this change in wording of her famous poem, but in Lake Mary, this may be the case. It is not for us to determine whether or not the proposed Landscaping and Arbor Regula-tions ordinance to be discussed at this Thursday night's city commission meeting is necessary. No doubt, with the many officials who have spent hours, weeks and months delving into this, these codes are needed.

What we are suggesting here however, is that the requirements for paperwork to be filed in order to trim a tree in a person's back yard, or remove one which may be dying or in danger of falling onto the porch, are too

A person would have to have education in architectural drafting to comply fully with what the city appears to want in order to obtain a tree cutting permit. Maps of the property will be required, along with the location and size of each tree and shrub located on the property, as well as designations of buffer areas, buildings, and other requirements.

The homeowner would also have to know the names of each type of tree on the property. We question how many average homeowners would know the difference between a Shumard oak, Deodar Cedar, or Dahoon holly tree, all of which are listed along with 20 other species in the city's proposed codes.

This sounds like an opportunity to open a new business in Lake Mary. One which specializes in drafting maps and plans, and determining tree and shrub species for people planning to make applications for a trimming or removal permit.

We suspect, depending on how strictly these codes will be enforced, that they may have a tendency to make many people angry. especially those who believe they are doing what is right, only to find out they failed to follow the strict wording of the codes.

Regarding code enforcements, it must be stressed that codes should apply to one and all, not just a select few, with others, who may have "friends" being ignored in the enforcement.

This document of new codes however, stresses once again, the complexity of municipal government. Even a layman reading the wording can easily see where it will be relatively easy to be in violation and end up being charged $100 to $1,000 in fines.

In preparing such documents as this, as well as other documents in all of our local cities, the county, and state, we have no doubt responsible officials know exactly what they have presented.

The problem is however, that often, the people have no idea of what is said or written.

We suggest doing what students are taught from elementary school through college. Write for the people who will read it, so they will be able to clearly and easily understand what is being said. Then and only then will you have created a usable document, whether it's a code, an ordinance, or any other edict intended to govern the people.

GOP cuts through Clinton doubletalk

How soon they forget. Last November, the party of Clinton. Daschle and Gephardt suffered an historic thrashing at the polls. Republicans won control of Congress for the first time in four decades. They were given a clear mandate from the American people to change the course in which the government was headed.

Clinton and the Democrats made the election of a year ago a referendum on the GOP's "Contract With America." So when the electorate swept the Republicans into power, they knew precisely what they were voting for.

They were voting to balance the federal budget, to cut the most unnecessary federal spending, to slow the growth of runaway entitlement programs, to reduce the federal tax burden on families and businesses and to reshape the broken-down welfare system.

The Republicans have delivered on their mandate. In a series of votes on the House and Senate floor, the GOP passed legislation that whittles the government's annual deficit down to zero between now and 2002, that holds the growth of Medicare to 6.5 percent a year (saving $270 billion in the process), that returns $245 billion to American taxpayers over seven years. and that transforms welfare into a temporary. rather than permanent, entitlement.

To President Clinton's mind, the GOP's budget reconciliation bills amount to "economic blackmail, pure and s i m p l e . ' H e threatens to veto the entire package. which could cause the government to shut down and default on its debt obligations.

The president is willing to take that risk, he said, because "I am not going to let anybody hold Medicare or education or the environ-ment or the future of this country hostage.

"I have proposed a plan," he added. 'that cuts wasteful government spending and reflects our values. It is the right way to balance the budget. By contrast, the Republican Congress is taking the wrong way."

They were given a clear mandate from the course in which the government was headed.

But how can Clinton be taken seriously? Back in January, he promised to "present a five-year plan to balance the budget." But when he unveiled his budget a month later, it called for $200 billion a year deficits well into the next century. When Republicans brought Clinton's bill to the Senate floor, it mustered nary a vote, not even from Democrats.

Since the president reneged on his promise to present a balanced budget plan, the GOP came up with one of its own. And Clinton's reaction was simply to rail against the spending cuts that the GOP proposed and warn of the cataclysm that would result if the budget was balanced in seven years' time.

Then Clinton did another flip-flop, deciding that he would propose a balanced budget of his own. But the plan he claims to be the "right way" to balance the budget would leave a $209 billion deficit in 2005, according to an analysis by the Congressional Budget Office.

And lest anyone think that the CBO is biased against the White House, President Clinton himself has previously acknowledged that the CBO "is closer to (being) right than previous presidents."

'Sarah' helps in Medicare battle

It's well known what "Harry and Louise" did to President Clinton's health care plan last year. This year, less visibly, "Sarah" has been helping Republicans win the Medicare fight.

"Sarah" is a fictional 67-year-old woman created by the powerful Healthcare Leadership Council to make the case that a typical senior citizen will be much better off financially if she has the choice of enrolling in a managed care program rather than relying solely on the current Medicare system.

The HLC also insists that offering manage care choices can save the government $70 billion over seven years, more than double the estimate of the Congressional Budget Office.

"Sarah" has yet to be featured in television ads the way "Harry and Louise" were by the Health Insurance Industry Association to defeat the 1994 Clinton health care reform plan, but a chart describing her case history has been used in countless congressional and press briefings and lately has been presented to seniors in focus groups.

The "Sarah" briefing is especially effective because it walks its audience through the various facets of a senior's medical requirements to make its points about cost ments to make its points about cost.

The HLC -- a coalition of big insurance companies, HMOs, hospitals, drug companies, and the health arm of the Business Roundtable -- may soon expose "Sarah" to a wider audience after the COP Medicare reform plan passes Congress as part of budget reconciliation, is vetoed by President Clinton, and becomes the object of renewed debate amid White House-congressional personations.

White House-congressional negotiations.

The Clinton administration and congressions. nal Democrats dispute the HLC's argument and figures. "I can make up numbers, too," said Bruce Vladek, head of the federal Health Care Finance Administration, who asserted that GOP savings will ultimately come out of the pockets of senior citizens or diminish the quality of care they receive.

"Under the Republican plan, the government will spend $6,700 per beneficiary in 2002, compared with $4,800 today," Vladek said in an interview, "but at current growth rates the cost would grow to $8,200. Of that $1,500 difference, a bit can be saved by greater efficiencies, but most of it will be passed on to

Democrats charge that support was bought at the cost of provisions that will allow doctors to raise fees and allow hospitals to form HMO-like provider networks while escaping regulatory standards.

Democrats also charge that the GOP plan will "force" seniors into HMOs and will deprive them of their right to see the doctor of their choice, although the administration did in 1994 -- that its plan expands "choice" rather than "forcing" anything.

These Democratic claims are what the "Sarah" story is being used to counter. As HLC president Pamela Bailey de-pains, spent four days in the hospital, and has to take medication for high blood pressure. Like other seniors, she also pays the Medicare Part B premium covering doctor visits.

According to the HLC, her out-of-pocket expenses for the year would come to $2,890 under the current Medicare system or $2,675 if Sarah purchased the most popular brand of "Medigap" insurance, costing $1,225, which covered prescription drugs and eliminated co-payments for seeing doctors.

Vladek asserted -- and Balley agreed -- that the bill for "Sarah" actually would come down to $1,775 a year if she bought more comprehensive Medicap insurance. Still, the HLC asid, joining an HMO would cut her costs to $610 a year. Choosing a separate "coordinated care" option -- a preferred provider network or "point of service plan" -- would cost her $1,110.

Bailey claims that the federal government currently discourages seniors from joining HMOs and offers no "coordinated care" option so that only 9 percent are enrolled in Medicare HMOs, compared with 65 percent of the general public that's covered by managed care. Viadek says it's "a flat-out lie" that the government discourages HMOs, though he acknowledges that Medicare lacks a coordinated care option. nated care option.

Politics: How real is gender gap?

By now, the election-year alogans are well known. November 1992 marked "the year of the woman," because women, who voted in record numbers that year, are credited with putting a Democratic president and a significant number of congresswomen into office.
The election of '94 was dubbed "the revenge of the angry white male," because many Democratic and Independent men voted Republican.

But are elections really gender wars, and if so which sex will prevail in '96? The National Women's Political Caucus Issued a study last summer that concluded that the gender lasue has largely been overblown, saying race and religion are far more accurate indicators of how an individual will vote. Nevertheless. women's groups are gearing up to try to make '96 their year.

On Nov. 4, Women's Vote '96, a coalition of 110 women's or ganizations. will launch an advertising campaign that encourages women to vote. Meanwhile, Emily's Liet, a political action committee that raises money for Democratic and pro-choice women candidates, is goaring up the similarly named Women Votel campaign.

"The gender gap is real, and it's very significant," says Frank Wilkinson of Emily's List, who points out that though the political gap between women and men may be much smaller than that of, say, blacks and whites, its significance lies in the fact that it's a its significance ites in the fact that it's a relatively new phenomenon. Traditionally women have voted in roughly the same manner as the men who share their background. But beginning in 1980, women, especially college-educated women, began to part company with their husbands and brothers. That gap has been widening ever bines.

Emily's List plans to identify and contact Democratic women and encourage them to yote. The group will also promote the use of mail ballots in states where they are available. Voting by mail has proved to be particularly helpful to the nation's many exhausted mothers.

"You've got a woman, with a full-time job, she's racing home to get to her kide, completely overburdened," says Wilkinson. "How's she going to find the time to go out

The other big campaign is Women's Vote '96, which is run by the Council of '96, which is run by the Council of Presidents, a nonpartisan coalition of women's groups that includes Business and Professional Women/USA, the Black Women's Agenda, the YWCA and the American Nurses Association. The goal of this project is simple: Get women, all women, out to the polis, regardless of their political affiliation. Its print and television advertisements stress the issues that women say they care about most; jobs, crime and education.

"The prism through which women see all these issues in the family," says from Nativided, chair of Women's Vote '95.

Social issues like these tend to be the Democratic Party's strong suit, and women reflect this in the fact that the majority of them vote for Democrats.

But women are hardly a monolithic voting bloc. Indeed 47 percent of women who voted in the last election voted Republican. But Paige Gold, Republican Task Force chair of the NWPC of California, fears the influence of the GOP's far-right fringe could cause that number to deep.

Promising chance to end warfare

DAYTON, Ohto - Late-night landings of three jets bearing the leaders of Bosnia, Croatia and Serbia marked the start of a potentially difficult conference billed as the most promising chance to end warfare in the former Yugoslavia.

"I'm an optimist. I believe the talks will succeed." declared Serbian President Slobodan Milosevie, the principal power broker in the region, who arrived first at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base near Dayton aboard a Yugoslav Airlines Boeing Milosevic and presidents Alija Izetbegovic of Bosula and Franjo Tudjman of Croatia, who arrived within several hours of coch other late Tuesday, were spirited away after brief welcoming ceremonles.

Today, Secretary of State Warren Christopher will formally open the talks at the Midwestern military installation. Further negotiations will be conducted by Richard Holbrooke, the chief U.S. mediator whose shuttle missions to the Balkans laid the groundwork for the conference.

Promoting sobriety

WASHINGTON - A state's efforts to promote sobriety could yield an important Supreme Court ruling on commercial speech and government's power to rein in advertising for liquor, eigarettes and gambling.

After hearing arguments today, the nation's highest court must decide whether Rhode Island's ban on advertising liquor prices violates free-speech rights.

Many states have similar laws that ban, or in some way limit. liquor price advertising. Arkansas, Connecticut, Georgia. Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, New Hampshire, North Carolina, Ohio. Pennsylvania and South Carolina were listed as examples for the justices.

Rhode Island's ban has been enforced since 1956 as an attempt to reduce consumption of alcoholic beverages.

Looming borrowing crisis

WASHINGTON - President Clinton and congressional Republicans seem willing to postpone the government's looming borrowing crisis by a few weeks. But it remains cosnarled in a budget fight that's far from resolved.

Clinton and GOP leaders planned to meet today at the White House for their first face-to-face talks about their fiscal differences in nearly two months.

White House spokesman Mike McCurry said the discussion would be limited to the government's borrowing authority, which could run out this month, but Republicans said they want to consider all budget disputes.

"I don't think you can talk about the debt limit in isolation." House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said Tuesday, "You have to include reconciliation, spending bills, the whole thing.

Bill would ban abortion procedure

WASHINGTON - A House bill to ban an obscure abortion procedure is shaping up as a major battleground in the attempt to legislate an end to abortion rights.

"This will be the beginning of the end" of the right to abortion, said Rep. Bob Dornan, R-Calif. He supports the bill. sponsored by Rep. Charles Canady, R-Fla., to ban a late-term procedure that backers call "partial-birth" abortion.

The House takes up the bill today. It would make the procedure a felony and subject doctors who perform it to fines, prison terms of up to two years and civil lawsuits.

As described by those seeking to ban the procedure, it involves a doctor pulling the fetus by the legs through the birth canal, inserting a seissors into the skull, the only portion of the body remaining in the mother, and sucking out the brains. It is thought to take place anywhere from 100 to 400 times a year.

Mom won't talk about son

BALTIMORE - After seven years in Jail for refusing to Jacqueline Bouknight walked free and revealed nothing more than a smile. Her attorneys call her a hero of civil disobedience. The judge who held her in contempt fears the child may be dead. And the advocate for the boy, who would be 9, pleaded with the 29-year-old mother to start talking.

"Jackie, it's a tragedy you have let this go on so long," court-appointed lawyer Mitchell Mirviss said during a hearing Tuesday in which a judge allowed her release.

Known in court records only as "Maurice M," the boy was barely 6 months old when he was taken from his mother and placed in temporary foster care after doctors found fractures on his right arm and shoulder. He also wore a body east to heal a broken leg.

When Ms. Bouknight won her son back several months later by taking parenting classes, the baby disappeared and Ms. Boukuight ended up in the Baltimore City Detention Center for refusing to say where he had been taken.

Search for a new leader

MONTREAL - Quebec's separatist government begins the search for a new leader today after the dramatic resignation of Premier Jacques Parizeau, who appalled even supporters by blanning immigrants for an achingly close loss in the independence referendum.

Parizeau, a key player in the French-Canadian separatist movement for two decades, expressed hope that his departure would help, not hinder, the crusade for independence of Canada's largest province.

Lucien Bouchard, head of the Bloc Quebecois separatist party in Parliament, distanced himself from Parizeau's remarks, in which he blamed Monday's defeat on "money and the ethnic

"His declaration does not reflect what sovereigntists feel," said Bouchard, who was the separatists' most passionate orator during the referendum campaign.

Public apology issued

TOKYO - Defense Secretary William Perry today issued an extraordinary public apology to Japan for the recent rape of a 12-year-old girl on Okinawa, allegedly by three U.S. servicemen whom Perry all but declared guilty.

In a speech to the Japan National Press Club, Perry said he was speaking for all members of the U.S. armed forces in expressing "my deep sorrow and anger for this terrible act" which triggered an enormous outcry against the U.S. military. President Clinton and other U.S. officials have expressed regret for the Sept. 4 rape, but Perry's remarks went further reflecting a deep concern of the Clinton administration that the incident could rupture relations with Japan.

Perry also announced that, in response to Okinawan protests against the intrusive American military presence on their bland. Washington and Tokyo will establish a "special action "omnittee" to recommend new measures that can be taken to consolidate or possibly reduce the U.S. troop population on Oktnawa.

A few heartbeats away from life of crime

By JANE E. ALLEN AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES - Some youngsters may be just a lew steady heartheats away from a life of crime, according to a study that links lower physicalarousal trafts with future law lessuess.

The study of juvenile delinquents found that if it takes more to make them sweat or speed their heartbeat, they are more inclined to a life of crime than juvenile delinquents with normal arousal rates.

"We think if you have low levels of arousal, you're seeking out levels of stimulation to bring levels to normal. Some kids join a gang, burgle a house," said University of Southern California psychologist Adrian Raine.

The study, which appears in the November issue of the American Journal of Psychiatry. focused on the autonomic nervous system, which controls functions such as heartheat and perspiration.

Raine and two other rescarchers followed 51 English boys, beginning in 1978 at age 15. Two-thirds were juvenile delinquents, considered antisocial by their teachers while tacking criminal records. The remaining third were not considered delinquent.

that by age 29, 17 of the delimpients had cituinal records and 17 delinquents lind straightened out. The 17 nondelinquents had remained on the straight and narrow path.

Rame found that definquents who turned to erime had heartheats that were slower by an average of othe beats a minute than the delinquents who straightened out and the non delinquents. They had sweat rates that were three times slower than nondelinaments:

Eating jellyfish: Music to the teeth

By GIMA O'BRIEN The Mobile Register

MOBILE, Ala. — Americans may know them more for brining pain to the toe, but jellyfish — properly prepared without the offensive tentacles — are known by some as "music to the teeth."

That's how they describe the sliced and cured version of the invertebrate in Malavaia. And if Floridian Jack Rudioe has his way. soon Americans also will be reveling in the Asian delicacy.

"Actually, cold, fresh jellyfish slices with ginger sauce is quite tasty," the self-taught scientist said.

Rudice, president of Gulf Specimens Marine Laboratories in Panacea, Fla., has received grants for his jellyfish work and studied in China and Malaysia with jellyfish

The light orange jellyfish slices served raw are similar to gummy worms, but longer, thinner and scraggier, not quite as chewy and a little chunky in parts.

A jellyfish dish called got sua tom thit served at Kim Long's Chinese and Vietnamese restaurant in Biloxi, Miss. — which is served with pork, shrimp, cilantro, nuts, carrots and turnips — has a sweet and slightly spicy flavor.

But don't worry - only the globular part is served; the stinging tentacles are removed. Then the invertebrate's body is cured with salt and alum.

Rudioe and Auburn University scientist Peggy Haieh would like to see the flattened meats sold in health food stores as a high source of protein with no fat or cholesterol and minimal calories and carbohydrates.

"This is a natural diet food," said Ms. Hsieh, a protein chemistry scientist who teaches food development and analysis.

Originally from China and Taiwan, Ms.
Hsieh explained that formal dinners there always include a jellyfish salad as an appetizer. Weddings and New Year's dinners are just not complete without it.

"As I remember, jellyfish was so expensive, so jellyfish was always served in the banquet, the first course," she said.

The edible, cantaloupe-size cannonball jellyfish found in the Gulf of Mexico and south of Chesapeake Bay compares, favorably to the larger species harvested, processed and eaten in Asia, she said. In the Far East, overharvesting and pollution have decreased jellyfish populations to the point that dealers are looking elsewhere for their supply, she said.

Cannonball jellyfish could be a new kind of harvest for thousands of Gulf fishermen affected by new restrictions on gill nets for fishing, but Rudloe said few have considered it seriously: "People are still very conservative about it."

No one is Alabama is jumping into the iellyfish market. Harber Chang, owner of Pacific Gulf fisheries in Bayou La Batre, said he worked with a man from Taiwan a few years ago to catch and sell cannonballs. But it did not work out and the man returned to

A fishery in Port St. Joe, Fla., is getting into the jellyfish business, with plans to harvest up to 10 million pounds a season. That has prompted Florida officials to look at how many jellyfish can be harvested without having negative effects.

"We are very concerned," said Fritz Wettstein, senior management analyst with the Florida Department of Environmental Management.

"We're only going to be permitting a few vessels, so we don't think he's going to be able to get them all."

Son ashamed of mom exposes own deceit

DEAR ABBY: I am the only liv-ing parent of a 26-year-old profes-sional son I'll call "Charles." He lives in another state and wants me to visit him soon.

Charles confessed that he has told his friends and business associates that I have several college degrees and hold a much higher position in the company I work for. He claims he had to build me up in order to gain their acceptance, and when I come to visit him, I will have to back him up.

It is obvious that my son is ashamed of me and doesn't realize that whatever he says can be checked, and his being exposed as a liar would be far more embarrassing than having a less-than-prestigious background.

Two told Charles in no uncertain terms that I waste to gially him until terms that I refuse to visit him until he sets the record straight. He has flatly refused to do so.

Abby, I may not have the "pedigree" my son would like me to have, but I have to live with myself, and I am standing firm in my decision.

I can't discuss this with my family or friends because I fear they would think less of my son were I to expose him for the shallow, deceit-ful person he is. Please advise me.

HIS MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: My hat is off to you. How unfortunate that your san felt it necessary to lie to his business associates and friends in order to impress them.

Your determination to be totally truthful far exceeds any "degrees" or lefty positions you might have attained.

MY DEFINITION OF MATU-BITY: the ability to stick with a jeb without being supervised, the ability to carry money with-out spending it, and the ability

Fish in diet said helpful against cardiac death

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN AP Medical Writer

CHICAGO - Adding a little fish to a diet can reduce the risk of cardiac arrest, a study found.

People who cat the equivalent of 3 ounces of salmon a week are half as likely to be stricken as those who cat no fish, according to the study published today in The Journal of the American Medical Association.

The findings may seem to conflict with a well-publicized study this spring by Harvard researchers, who found that men who ate fish several times a week were just as likely to have heart trouble as those who ate fish once a month.

"(But) we view these results as complementary and not in conflict with earlier findings," said the lead author of the new study, Dr. David S. Siscovick of the University of Washington in

The studies differed in two key ways, Siscovick said. The Scattle study focused on cardiac arrest rather than overall heart disease, which was the chief concern of the Harvard study.

Also, the Seattle study explored the value of cating some fish compared to eating none, rather than the Harvard report's focus on eating more versus cating less.

In the latest study, "modest" amounts of seafood containing two key omega-3 oils were sufficient. Siscovick said.

The oils are unique to fish, and are especially plentiful in salmon, herring, mackerel and anchovies. To a lesser degree, they are present in oysters, sardines, rainbow trout, albacore tuna and other fish and shellfish.

Two 3-ounce servings of albacore tuna provide as much of the oils as one 3-ounce serving of

No one knows why omega-3 oils might prevent cardiac arrest, but one theory is that they may help regulate the movement of chemical compounds called electrolytes - calcium, potassium. sodium and others — in and out of cells.

Cardiac arrest is different from what most people regard as a heart attack. In a heart attack, a blocked artery prevents the heart muscle from getting enough blood, and part of it dies. Most victims survive.

In cardiac arrest, the problem isn't clogged arteries, but rather a scrambling of electrical impulses that regulate the heart's rhythm. instead of pumping, the organ just quivers. Most victims die before emergency workers can jump-start their hearts.

Siscovick's team measured the levels of the two key oils in red blood cells in their subjects and found that higher levels were associated with lower risk of cardiac arrest. That strengthens the

Oil therapy helps loosen ear wax

DEAR DR. GOTT. It seems that my ears plug up at least once a year, even after using home remedy solutions. I went to our HMO doctor and he said over-the-counter stuff is no good and told me to put two to three drops of cooking oil in my ears every other night and to return to his office after two weeks for ear lavage. Before I use the oil treatment, I'll await your advice.

DEAR READER: Ear wax can be difficult to remove, especially if it is hard and adheres to the car canal.

Your HMO doctor was correct: A couple of drops of light oil -any oil will do -- in the ear for a day or two (two weeks is, I believe, unnecessarily long) should soften the wax, dislodge it and make for easy removal.

Most doctors use an ear syringe with a jet of warm water for this purpose. After appropriate preparation ...ith oil, this technique usually suffices.

However, more aggressive therapy may be required for really troublesome wax accumulations. In such instances, some physicians use a Water Pic; specialists often rely on a special vacuum device. In some cases, the wax may have to be manually picked out of the ear by an otolaryngologist, using an operating room microscope.

The oil treatment is safe and inexpensive. I encourage you to use it as a first step. Remember the prohibition against putting objects, such as hairpins and cotton swabs, in the ear, because they can perforate the eardrum or cause serious infection.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 29-year-old woman with a hot, burning sensation that oc-casionally shoots through my left breast. I have been to several doctors, who say it may be caused by a pinched nerve. Do you agree?

DEAR READER Breast pain may not come from the breasts at all. There are many causes of so-called "chest wall pain." ranging from a strained pectoralis muscle (beneath the West continued with the spade ace and a third spade to East's queen. That was three tricks in for the defense -- but where was number four coming from? Looking at the dummy, clearly not from the miners. If South didn't have the club king, the finesee was working. As the only chance was from hearts, East led his last spade.
