Present plans are to restore and repair the north end of the ditch and to extend pipe beyond all the homes in the area as soon as enough pipe is available.

When homeowners expressed their happiness that work had begun, Mayor Frank Fasula said:

Foots Yelvington said this morning he would be more than happy to conduct the survey . . . if he was asked. . . .

By the way, there definitely will be a damage suit against the school board from one of the families involved in that Lake Mary mishap. . . .

First Action On Downtown Survey Okayed

The Downtown Merchants Assn. of Sanford, armed with $900 Thursday, authorized C. of C. Merchants Division chairman E. C. Harper Jr. to talk to W. W. Young, head of the marketing research division of the University of Florida, on conducting an extensive survey of the downtown Sanford business area. The $300 appropriation given to the Merchants Division by the City Commissioners Monday, was matched by the Chamber of Commerce and the Downtown Merchants Assn. to pay the expenses of the projected survey by the U. of F. research division, which has been successful in revitalizing many outmoded downtown business areas in the state. Harper emphasized that the services of the research team are free, but expenses for the members must be paid. Merchants, to save time and money, plan to enlist the aid of various civic organizations in getting interviews. In other business, the merchants also voted to support the C. of C.'s efforts to get the new post office here before the federal appropriation time runs out. Plans for "Old Fashioned Cracker Days" scheduled for the weekend of March 17 were discussed. Some merchants said that their employees were planning to go all out with long old fashioned dresses, aprons, overalls, horehound candy, and other "crackery" touches. "And let's go overboard and give our customers some real good bargains," suggested Penney's manager, Charles Robinson.

Lormann Protests SR. 427 In Letter To Commission

By Jane Caselberry
Mayor Al Lormann told members of the Longwood Town Council Thursday that SR 427 is in such poor condition and the shoulders so poorly maintained, he has written a letter to the county commissioners, asking that it be widened and paved from the intersection of SR 434 at Jean's Corner to the intersection of SR 436 in Allamonte Springs.

In other business, the councilmen heard complaints about a broken sidewalk on Lake St., piles of dirt on Oleander St. and a smelly garbage truck. A request for a street light on the corner of Magnolia and Oleander made by residents was granted and repairs and maintenance of the neon highway sign was discussed and the contract is to be presented at next week's meeting.

Carl Lommler, R. C. Carlton, and B. L. Helms were appointed to investigate the possibility of improving an access road from the Longdale Subdiv. to the downtown shopping area. ## Lake Hayes Residents Seek Lights

By Jean Lyles
The Lake Hayes Assn. met Thursday night at the Oviedo Town Hall to discuss the installation of lights in the Lake Hayes community, an unincorporated section some two miles south of Oviedo. The meeting was an organizational one in which the association was formed and officers and directors elected. Representatives from 19 of the 30 families which live in the area attended and heard a proposal and recommendations by representatives of the Florida Power Corp. to install lights in the community. Representing the power company were Robert Johnson from the Winter Park office and William Sadler from the St. Petersburg headquarters. They recommended that mercury vapor lights be installed, as they provide better lighting and fewer are required than the old type. Cost of the mercury lights would be higher than the old ones, the power men explained, but the difference in the number of lights required would greatly offset the higher cost. The mercury lights would cost $2.75 per light per month or $33 per year. The old type lights would cost $18 per light per year, they said. The total cost of mercury lights would be $95 per month. All families in the community will be contacted next week and another meeting will be held next Thursday night at the Oviedo town hall to decide on the installation. Under the power company's proposal the association would be billed for the lights and the company would sign a five-year contract with the association. The association elected Ralph Neely, president; Tony Daniels, secretary; and Leonard Falk, treasurer. Directors are Monroe Parsons and P. M. Smithson.

Kennedy Due To Announce Air Tests Will Be Resumed

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Barring a diplomatic miracle, President Kennedy will inform the world reluctantly tonight that the United States must resume atmospheric nuclear tests. The miracle would have to be a reversal of basic Soviet foreign policy. Otherwise, when the President goes on nationwide radio and television from his White House office at 7 p. m. EST, he will announce that the United States must resume testing because of the Russian test series last fall and the absence of an effective test ban. The last U. S. atmospheric test was conducted in Nevada on Oct. 30, 1958. Russia broke a 24-month moratorium last Sept. 1 and went on to fire test weapons that ranged above 50 megatons in nuclear explosive power. The President ordered a careful scientific evaluation of the Soviet tests. U. S. scientific studies and from this scientific appraisal came Kennedy's decision to order atmospheric test resumption. U. S. officials also expected the President to offer certain alternatives to atmospheric testing, in an effort to assure the world of this country's continuing desire for an ironclad test ban agreement with the Soviet Union.

Educational TV Seen As Solution To School Problem

"Educational television may well be one of the solutions to our school growth problems over the next eight years," Douglas Stenstrom, head of the Long Range Planning Committee told Citizens Thursday. "School officials are studying this closely and it is estimated that the use of educational television can make it possible to accommodate up to one-third more children in the same classroom facilities as would normally be required without the use of TV," Stenstrom said. "This should be a part of our long range planning." Stenstrom brought out the fact that the cost of supporting and maintaining the schools in Seminole County now exceeds four million dollars per year. He said that 65.8 percent of the money comes from Tallahassee and 3.4 percent from Washington with 30.8 percent coming from Seminole County. "Although the amount we pay is less than any of the other 65 counties in the state, none of our 23 county schools are unaccredited," Stenstrom pointed out. "This compares more than favorably with other counties and has been achieved despite the fact that we have been, since 1956, in the top four or five counties in the annual school enrollment increases."

A Price To Pay

There is a story about a roaming newspaper man who found material for his articles by interviewing unusual people.

One day as he was walking through a park he saw one of the most aged looking men approaching him. The man seemed to have a difficult time getting one foot in front of the other. His face was a mass of wrinkles, in fact, he was the oldest looking man the reporter had ever seen.

The man answered without hesitating, "Oh, I have drunk much alcohol in my life, smoking has been a habit with me since I was a little boy, and my companions have always been what many people refer to as "bad company."

almost beyond belief. How he is willing to suffer from self-inflicted disease can be seen, so clearly, in alcoholism.

According to recent studies of 1960 it is estimated that Florida has approximately 150,000 alcoholics which means that about three percent of the people of our state are now a part of what is one of the greatest health, moral, and spiritual problems of America.

No reasonable and loving person can ignore that there is a problem in alcoholism that demands attention and careful attention.

The theme of the service is One World in Christ in which the contributions of various countries to the hymns of the Christian church will be shown. This will be done through the singing of the four organized choirs of the church and what Mrs. George Touhy, Minister of Music, calls "the fifth choir—the congregation."

Craig Orseno of the Junior choir will have a solo portion of one of the hymns as will Cathy Folds, a member of the Pioneer Girls group. From the Senior choir Patsy Glenn Johnson is to sing a solo. Included in the hour of worship will be an anthem sung by the Chancel choir.

The ministers, the Rev. Grover C. Sewell Jr., and the Rev. Thomas H. Makin, not only encourage the Presbyterians to attend this 7:30 p. m. service, but extend a cordial invitation to others should their churches not have evening hour worship hours.

Spaghetti Supper

Beginning Of Lent Nears

Next Wednesday, millions of Christians will observe one of the most important and least popular holy days on the church calendar.

It is called Ash Wednesday, and it marks the beginning of Lent. Saints may look forward to Lent. But the ordinary struggling sinner is apt to wince at its approach.

Exercise is enjoyed least by those who need it most, and Lent is a rigorous spring training season, designed to exercise flabby muscles of self-discipline and obedience.

For many, the first Lenten exercise is a wrestling match with conscience. Even in churches which stipulate certain minimum rules of fasting and abstinence, it is up to each individual to decide what further acts of sacrifice and self-denial he will undertake voluntarily.

The decision may be made in the spirit of the small boy who solemnly informed his mother that he was giving up vegetables for Lent.

But if conscience wins the wrestling match, the rules which a person prescribes for himself during Lent will be based on an honest examination of his own spiritual needs.

Since every individual is different, the Lenten discipline which precisely suits one may be useless or even harmful to another.

Giving up vegetables, for example, might be just the ticket for someone who had developed an obsessive lust for carrots.

Most people, however, probably will find other appetites swollen by self-indulgence. In a society which is greatly concerned with creature comforts, it will be a rare person who cannot pinpoint at least one area in which he needs to bring the gratification of his senses under firmer control of the will.

Behind Lent's emphasis on acts of self-denial is an ancient Christian intuition that no pleasure is "innocent" if it does not so greatly desired that it threatens to usurp God's place as the object of supreme love and devotion.

"No man can serve two masters," Jesus warned his disciples. The real purpose of disciplining bodily appetites during Lent is to free the spirit to acknowledge God as its only master.

Giving up pet pleasures is not, however, the only kind of Lenten discipline that helps to free the spirit.

As Jesus pointed out in the parable of the sower, the cares of this world, as well as the pleasures, may become a weed that chokes out the seeds of life.

Pressure, tension, and harassment are at least as widespread in modern society as the penchant for self-indulgence. And they can be just as deadly to the human spirit.

The man or woman who is too tired to pray, too busy to worship, too drained of emotion to respond to another person's need for love, is scarcely closer to the kingdom of God than the less "responsible" souls who are preoccupied with the pursuit of pleasure.

For the over-worked and over-scheduled, simplification of life may be the best form of Lenten self-discipline. Instead of giving up coffee or cigarettes, they might consider giving up some of the hustle and bustle of the hectic pace that has driven them to dependence on chemical comforters.

Seafarers For Space

This country will need many John Glens—with a full supporting cast of scientists, engineers and technicians—for the great tasks of space exploration which have only now begun.

Today some 30,000 Americans in government, industry and the research field are said to be more or less directly engaged in our space effort.

Before this decade is out, it is estimated by United States space officials that more than 100,000 individuals will be involved.

In the words of Dr. M. H. Trytten, the National Academy of Sciences' director of scientific personnel, the job of finding and training these thousands of specialists "takes on the color of a mobilization effort."

He and many others concerned over the rising, unfulfilled demand for specialists believe the mobilizing must start among quite young Americans. The questions are how to stir their interest and search out their talents.

Recently Dr. Glenn Seaborg, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, suggested some strides might be made by reminding youngsters they don't have to be geniuses to jump into space science or any other variety.

Some science educators caution, however, that the road to competence is sufficiently long so that young people with a scientific or technical bent ought to begin studying math, physics and chemistry at a tender age.

Dr. John S. Richardson, expert in science education at Ohio State University, would go further and say that young Americans with possible goals in space and related fields should try quickly for the broadest possible scientific grounding.

His argument is that space activities compel specialists to break the traditional bounds of astronomy, chemistry, physics, biology, and the various divisions of engineering. They need mastery of all the standard disciplines so they can cross lines freely as demanded by their intricate and totally original problems.

Richardson adds that United States schools and colleges must of course do their part by altering the scientific curriculum to permit the free-flowing interplay the space age requires.

Yet with all their abundant concern, science educators confess they don't really know how to mobilize in mounting numbers the young technical talent the nation needs.

Young men once lured for the adventure of the sea, President Kennedy says space is the "new ocean" and Americans must sail on it. He might gladly pin medals on those educators who can induce today's youth, by the tens of thousands, to "sail" as space mariners and man the vital shore stations in support.

Political Notebook

WASHINGTON (NEA)—International co-operation for peaceful uses of outer space will be made by a United Nations committee meeting in New York March 19. This will probably be the first test of Nikita Khrushchev's sincerity in proposing that the United States and Russia pool their space research.

Khrushchev's big idea was welcomed by President Kennedy as a hopeful sign. But the Russian's effort to climb aboard the successful flight of astronaut John H. Glenn's Mercury capsule, "Friendship Seven," is also regarded with some amusement.

The United States has been proposing international co-operation in space exploration and the Russians have been blocking it for five years. Khrushchev nevertheless put forward the proposal in his congratulatory message to Kennedy as though it was a brand new idea—his—Khrushchev's.

Amb. Henry Cabot Lodge first suggested it to the UN Jan. 12, 1957. In September 1958 the late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles proposed that the UN take first steps in organizing international co-operation in outer space.

The 1960 Act of Congress setting up the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) authorized American co-operation with other nations for the benefit of mankind. Also, President Eisenhower gave the UN a four-point plan in 1960.

President Kennedy in his 1961 State of the Union address called for international co-operation in space research for weather forecasting, satellite communications and probes of Mars and Venus.

Finally, the UN General Assembly last December unanimously approved a resolution setting up the 20-nation conference in New York next month. Even the Russians approved it.

Head of the United States delegation for this meeting will be Francis T. P. Plinton, deputy to Adlai Stevenson at the UN. Dr. Hugh L. Dryden, deputy administrator of NASA and some of his top scientists will be technical advisers. Whom the Russians are sending has not been announced. Nobody ever knows till they show up. The General Assembly resolution of last December authorizing the Committee on Peaceful Uses of Outer Space to go ahead with its work is a comprehensive document outlining principles which are the basis for the New York agenda.

International law, including the United Nations charter, is to be applied to outer space. It is declared free for exploration by any and all countries. Celestial bodies are not to be made subject to national appropriation. An advance registration of all future launchings of outer space vehicles is called for with the UN secretary general maintaining a public registry. A voluntary exchange of information from outer space research is called for. So far, the Russians have provided only meager medical data on their flights.

The World Meteorological Organization, which is now studying how an international weather forecasting system might be organized and financed, is requested to make its information available to the UN space committee.

It will study the WMO report and make recommendations to the next General Assembly, convening in September, on how to carry out the plan.

Establishment of an international, satellite communications network may not come until later. International Telecommunications Union is holding a 1963 conference to allocate radio channels for space communications.

Other UN technical assistance organizations are called on to co-operate with member states in planning their communication facilities so that they can make effective use of satellite communication when it comes.

World's first large public library was founded in Boston in 1822.

Dick West Says: Word Inflation

WASHINGTON (UPI)—C. Northcote Parkinson, the noted author and word-watcher, has devoted much time to observing the behavior of the English language in its natural state.

In the course of his studies, he detected a verbal phenomenon which appeared to be forming a fixed, or constant, pattern.

This led to the formulation of Parkinson's Law on gobbledygook, stated as follows: "The printed word expands to fill the space available to it."

The testimony of Parkinson witnesses provided several specimens of language expansion—or so it seemed to Rep. Daniel J. Flood, a Pennsylvania Democrat who usually knows an inflated word when he sees one.

Give them enough space, he said, and they will expand into "canine control officer" and "utensil maintenance man."

Parkinson's Law kept coming into my mind as I was reading the transcript of a military budget hearing released today by the House defense appropriations subcommittee.

The testimony of Parkinson witnesses provided several specimens of language expansion—or so it seemed to Rep. Daniel J. Flood, a Pennsylvania Democrat who usually knows an inflated word when he sees one.

After first voicing bewilderment over the term "percentile limitation," Flood discovered that the Air Force was seeking a special clothing allowance for some 2,000 "recruiting salesmen."

"What in the world is a recruiting salesman and what do you want with 2,000 of them, anyhow?" the congressman inquired.

He said "It reminds me of what the Irishman said about the giraffe—'there is no such animal.'"

An Air Force spokesman, proving Parkinson's Law, then sent too many words chasing too little meaning.

"We use the term 'recruiting salesman' to describe those members of our recruiting force who contact as opposed to the remaining members of the recruiting service who perform support duties," he explained.

A few pages later, Flood stumbled across a budgetary item proposing an increase from $201,100 to $994,000 for "prefabricated meat."

"... This I do not believe," said Flood. "What in the world is prefabricated meat? Is it edible?"

It turned out that prefabricated means the meat has been boned.

Generally he perceived in men of devout simplicity this opinion: that the secrets of nature were the secrets of God—part of that glory into which man is not to press too boldly.—Sir Francis Bacon.

Dr. Crane's Worry Clinic

We medics often feel very irate because of the needless injuries that occur to children. Their thoughtless parents ignore the very A-B-C rules of "horse sense." So seraphic this case and test your foresight by means of the basic safety laws outlined below.

CASE L-463; Sally S., aged 8, now lies in a Chicago hospital.

"Oh, Dr. Crane," her tearful mother began, "it is all my fault."

"For I had peeled some apples and put them in a kettle on the stove."

Sally toddled over there when I wasn't looking. She reached for the handle of the stew pan and tipped the hot apple sauce all over her arm and side.

"The doctors say it is a miracle she is alive. And she will have to undergo skin grafts, etc."

"Oh, how I wish I had never peeled those apples!"

Cooking is an essential of life, so never torture yourself when accidents happen in connection with necessary acts.

But always look ahead when you are dealing with dangerous items.

For example, NEVER use the front two burners on your stove if the back burners are free!

If Sally's mother had placed that stew pan on one of the back burners, Sally wouldn't have been able to reach it!

Mothers (and dads, too) make it a basic habit NEVER to light a front burner if a back burner is available.

This is a habit you should teach yourself, as well as your children, for in so doing you will save thousands of lives and avoid maimed or mutilated youngsters.

We medics and dentists must learn the simple habits of our profession so we don't have to think about them in a crisis.

You housewives should do likewise, and one of these rules is to use the back burners before you employ the front burner!

And if you finally MUST employ the front burners, be sure to turn the handles of pans or skillets back toward the rear of your stove.

It is a free handle sticking straight out, which tempts toddlers to reach up and explore, as was true in Sally's tragic case.

Don't leave an infant in the sink, wash basin or tub with water therein.

Even if you think you'll be gone to the telephone for just a moment, you women are notoriously poor judges of time.

A moment may be 5 minutes and the baby can drown in that time!

No lift the baby out; wrap him in a towel, and lay him on your lap or the bed or in his play pen.

Every year more people drown in bathtubs (and this includes babies) than in swimming pools!

And will you smokers please refrain from leaving matches around where youngsters can reach them?

Also, clear out your medicine cabinet of unused pills, for toddlers may swallow them, thinking they are candy.

Don't leave acids or lye around the house. Even if your frugality makes you want to save such dangerous substances, get rid of them and buy more the next time.

Teach your children never to break bottles or litter the streets.

And if they see boards with nails sticking up, at least turn the boards over and press the nails into the ground.

Don't hang scissors on a nail on the wall where they can slip off and drop, point downward, into a child's eyes.

After washing the dishes, be sure the paring knives are placed in a special section and with the sharp edge DOWN!

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long 4 cent stamped, addressed envelope and 20 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Quiet people and those who gab a lot don't say much.

Whenever there's a fire in the political pots there are plenty of smokes.

Whenever postal rates are raised we think business concerns should stop mailing bills.

Dear Abby: By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a nervous wreck. I am 54, a grandmother several times, and I feel like a servant in my own home. My problem is my mother. She is in her early seventies and enjoys the best of health. She has always been a meddler and troublemaker. She has lived with me for the past 16 years. I recently had my children and grandchildren here for dinner. Everyone left early in tears or anger. She is brutally frank, critical and sharp-tongued. My gentle, patient husband, eats his meals downtown to avoid her. We tried a home for the aged, but in three days they called and asked us to come and get her. She raised such Cain there that the home was in an uproar. She is domineering, sarcastic and cruel to everyone. I know it is terrible to feel this way about your own mother, but she has made my life miserable. She hasn't a penny. Don't say it's her advancing age. She's always been this way. Can you help me?

NO NAME PLEASE DEAR NO NAME: You've allowed your mother to run your life for so many years, she wouldn't know how to behave otherwise. Children can "spoil" their parents just as parents spoil children. Your first obligations are to your husband and family. When elderly folk become obstreperous and behave like children, they should be treated with the same patience, understanding and firmness. Don't expect any change in your

Jacoby On Bridge By Oswald Jacoby

One of the best things about a bidding gadget is to know when not to use it. South certainly expects to be in a slam after North's opening club bid and at first glance he might well try the three no-trump response to ask for ace. If South stops to think things over carefully he will realize that perhaps four clubs to the queen aren't enough to guarantee a satisfactory suit for a club slam. Therefore, South starts his campaign with a bid of two diamonds. He really is more interested in finding about where to play the slam than to find how many aces his partner holds. We The Women: By Ruth Millet

"Do you think Women are Emotional Spenders?" was the intriguing title of an article in a recent issue of a magazine devoted to the American home. Expecting to find a "Yes" answer to the question, I was surprised to find it answered in the negative. Maybe that is because the article was written by a man. Only a woman knows (for she certainly isn't going to tell a man) just how often she does buy something to get an emotional lift. When a housewife gets cabin fever and takes off on a rainy day for a shopping expedition, almost anything she buys is bought to lift her spirits. Whether she shops for a silly hat, a dress in a shade that makes her "feel good," or for some gadget for the house, she is buying to add a little zest to a dull day. When a woman has a birthday that marks a 10-year milestone, and a long look in the mirror is anything but reas-

TUESDAY WELD and Elvis Presley in a scene from 'Wild in the Country' coming to the MovieLand Drive-In Sunday.

Presley Film Drive-In Bound

Jerry Wald's production of "Wild in the Country" offers to millions of Elvis Presley fans an extraordinary drama of the rehabilitation of a gifted rural boy from delinquency to fresh promise as an aspiring young American writer. The unusual role played by Presley gives the public unexpected insight into his stature as a serious actor, and presents, in memorable support, a cast headed by Hope Lange, Tuesday Weld, Millie Perkins and Rafer Johnson. In CinemaScope and Deluxe Color, the film opens Sunday at the MovieLand Drive-In Theatre. Based on the novel by J. R. Salamanca, with a screenplay by Clifford Odets, this is the story of a Shenandoah Valley farm boy named Glenn (Elvis Presley) whose endless collisions with the law have brought him to the point where he must go either to reform school or into the permanent custody of a probation officer appointed by the court. It is Hope Lange, playing the part of Irene, the psychiatric social worker who shifts the balance of the court's opinion and becomes the influence for good in the boy's life. The other feature on the program will be "Home From The Hill." Both films will play through Tuesday. On Wednesday and Thursday, "La Parisienne" with Brigitte Bardot and "Gunfight at Dodge City" will play. On Friday and Saturday, "Burn To Speed," "The Wild Road" and "Devils On Wheels" will play.

JENNIFER JONES and Jason Robards in a scene from "Tender is the Night" coming to the Ritz Theatre Sunday.

Fitzgerald Story Ritz Bound

In bringing to the screen F. Scott Fitzgerald's classic novel, "Tender is the Night," 20th Century-Fox has captured the complex world of a group of American pleasure-seekers in Europe during the turbulent Twenties. Jennifer Jones, Jason Robards Jr., Joan Fontaine and Tom Ewell star in the CinemaScope-Deluxe Color drama, opening Sunday at the Ritz Theatre, which features Jill St. John, Cesare Danova and Paul Lukas in supporting roles.

Biddy All-Stars In State Play

All you big-talking fishermen had better get your biggest yarn on in for the Fishing Liars Contest because it will end March 17, and that only leaves barely enough time for some of the long-winded ones to finish.

Here's a good one from Wilford Harris, Route 2, Sanford:

"I was down on the St. Johns River fishing when I heard an awful commotion in the water. It sounded like a large shark or a whale had somehow gotten into the river and it was too shallow for it to swim.

"It flopped around until it landed on a sandbar where about half of it was above water. To my surprise, I saw it was a catfish.

"I knew I couldn't handle it with the hooks and lines I had, so I went home and got a rope. I went to the machine shop and had a hook made. It was made of a three-quarter inch steel bar, so I thought it would hold the fish.

"Now, my dad had told me when I was a little boy that the way to catch big catfish was with chicken intestines and tobacco juice. I got me some twist tobacco and killed a couple of chickens so I could use the intestines and put them into a bucket with a little water. I let them soak while I got ready.

"After I got everything ready, I set the bucket in the car and went back to the river. I backed my car as close to the water as I could and tied one end of the rope to the back bumper. I put the hook on the other end of the line and used a gallon jug for a float, then baited up and threw it as far as I could.

"I didn't have to wait long until I saw the jug go under. I jumped in the car and stepped on the gas. I guess I was too excited, for I jerked too quick and he hadn't swallowed the hook.

"I guess I shouldn't be too disappointed because we are still eating catfish stew—you see, I jerked off 25 pounds of that fish's upper lip."

There are other big things happening around here too. Something I forgot to mention last week was that shad fishing picked up so at one point that every camp on the St. Johns in the Sanford area had rented all the available boats before 8 a. m. three days in a row.

Crowe's camp had a dozen people waiting to go fishing and Jim Crowe said a phone check with the other camps showed that all their boats were gone too.

That's the first time that has happened as far as anyone can remember and it means that, at that particular time, there was hardly a square foot of the shad country that wasn't under the bottom of a boat.

No record had been responded to the heavy fisherman traffic, but three Annapolis, Md. men did as well as anybody. Harry O'Berry, Clarence Whitaker and Earl Wheeler had their limit of 45 each day Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

The T League standings remain the same this week with the Herald team in first, Wieboldt's Camera Shop in second, and Karm's Insurance in third. Sinko's Tavern is in fourth, Nationwide Insurance in fifth and Thriftway is in sixth.

Delinquency Rises With Hike In School Population

Angel Tells Jaycee Group

"You've heard the figures on the increasing school population," John Angel, Longwood School principal, told the Jaycees Thursday, "and along with this will go rising figures on juvenile delinquency and dependency."

"The members of the Juvenile Council want you to remain aware of the problems that are facing our county and our community and be ready to help when a solution can be worked out that will not just rehabilitate, but work toward prevention of delinquency and dependency," Angel said.

"More and more we feel the need for a foster home plan, to make provision for the help that is so badly needed," he said. "This should be a part of our county government program, money should be made available, because the people who really want to help and are capable of doing so cannot afford it financially."

"The Juvenile Council has a skeleton plan, and we have people who care, who are working hard to try to find a solution to these serious problems. In the meantime, we have embarked on a program of educating the community to an awareness of the situation as it exists right here and now."

In other business, Jaycee registration chairman Bob McKee reported that the first two days of Operation Registration in the county was well received and many new names put on record in the initial attempt. McKee emphasized that the registration trailer will be in downtown Sanford all day Friday.

Democracy Theme Wins Praise

This composition entitled, "I Learn the Meaning of Democracy" was written for a sophomore English class at Seminole High School by DeJores Newsom. Her teacher feels that it worthy of publication.

"The meaning of democracy is a topic which requires an endless amount of thought. I don't feel your opinion of what democracy means should ever be a definite set of limitations.

"Democracy is not just another form of government. It's a way of life, a rule of daily living and the principal foundation of man's earthly freedom.

"Webster's dictionary states the meaning of democracy as 'government by the people, supreme power held by the people.' This statement though true does not even start to truly define democracy.

"I am still learning the meaning of democracy as I live day by day in its relation to its suppressors and its allies. I also get a better conception of democracy as it deals with our past history, our present activities and future history.

"Democracy deals not only with the understanding of the majority but also for the individual and for the minority. It was designed for the protection of the weak from the strong.

"I can only say apart from what I already have that the conception of democracy is not achieved in a day, a week, a month, nor a year, but it requires a life time, a lifetime of keenness, observation, appreciation, and a close relationship with its goals and victories.

"As a member of this democratic society, I feel I can safely say that there has never been and never will be a more just, Christian and proud way of life in the past, present or future society for mankind."

People In Favor Of Reapportionment, Bryant Says

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Gov. Farris Bryant said Saturday he supports the reapportionment plan calling for 48 senators and 104 representatives in the State Legislature, but does not think any great effort will be needed to get the voters to approve it. Speaking on his weekly taped radio show, "Ask The Governor," Bryant said he believed the plan was generally understood by the people. He said it was worked out in the 1961 Legislature as a compromise. It will give no additional strength to small counties, he said, while awarding seven new Senate seats and nine new House seats to medium and large counties. "I think there is a general understanding and approval of the plan," Bryant said. The governor, commenting on campaigns nationally for a shorter work week, said he generally is not too sympathetic to moves made just to shorten the work week for the sake of less work. "I am one of those people who believes there is a dignity and a value in labor entirely aside from what you produce," he said.
