CARLTON PAYS EULOGY TO GAS TAX STATUTE

Says It Will Be Largest Factor In Preserving Financial Integrity Of State

TAMPA, Oct. 30.—Governor Carlton, speaking here yesterday at the official opening of the new link of State Road Five, from Sulphur Springs to the Pasco county line, said the state gas tax distribution law, upheld Wednesday in the Supreme Court, was one of the most constructive measures ever passed in Florida.

"It will be the largest factor in preserving the financial integrity of the state and in carrying relief to the general property tax," he said.

The law allocates three cents of the state's gasoline tax to the road department and divides three cents among the state's 67 counties in proportion to area, population and roads built and included in the state highway system. It gives to the smaller counties more revenue than they pay in gasoline tax, taking away from the larger counties part of the revenue paid by them.

The governor explained how the law affects Hillsborough county and quoted figures to show that the state is giving more money to the county than heretofore. He called the law a victory for the administration, at the same time taking a "lap" at advocates of a road-building holiday.

The state has been curtailing highway construction for several years, he said, with the approach of the completion of Florida's highway system. During the last two years, he added, the surpluses have exceeded 40 percent.

"In 1929 we diverted from road construction to the reliefment of road indebtedness $2,225,000, over the same amounting with which we have lately contended," he said. "In 1931 we added $1,225,000 more and applied this to the roads built by counties. We have taken over for state maintenance 2000 miles of highway, making a total under state maintenance of approximately 8000 miles."

VON HINDENBURG ASKS MAGNATES TO JOIN IN TRUCE

Head Of Reich Makes Appeal At Opening Of Economic Parley

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—(A.P.)—President Paul von Hindenburg appealed yesterday to the men who rule Germany's industries to drop all cantankerous and join in a domestic truce that the nation may weather its economic crisis.

The army head of the Reich voiced his appeal at the first session of the economic advisory council, formed two weeks ago for the purpose of laying down a concerted economic program for the nation. Its 25 members include the industrial and commercial powers of Germany.

"I expect," he said, "that you will be animated by an inflexible will to ward off from our people whatever can be wrested off by Germany's own strength."

"Only the consciousness of devotion to duty and of supreme effort will enable our people to bear with dignity, and with a feeling that all belong together, whatever trials to be an insupportable fate."

"None of you will fail to realize to what extent Germany's situation is determined by world political and economic considerations. These constitute the great tasks of Germany's foreign policy."

"There can be no help from abroad, the president declared, unless there is union of the divergent factions at home. He warned that collaboration between the government and the economic elements of the nation is indispensable."

Those who heard the 81-year-old president's appeal compared it with two other public declarations he has made since he became head of the Reich—his famous war guilt speech on his eightieth birthday in 1927 and his address in March, 1930, in explanation of his reasons for signing the Young plan. Only on these occasions has he sharply broken his rule of reserve.

Chancellor Brüning, who organized the council and prevailed on President von Hindenburg to head it, outlined to the members the tasks that confront them. His speech was not made public.

The council is composed of representatives of Germany's commerce, industry, trades, agriculture and labor.

The stills, federal district administrator said, were found on a new avenue of attack by 11 prohibition enforcers and a 67-year-old state-registered operator of illicit stills.

Bethlehem Steel Corporation Votes Common Dividend

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—(A.P.)—A weighty piece of testimony was filed on the heap of evidence of returning confidence in the outlook for industry with the Bethlehem Steel Corporation's declaration of its 50 percent common dividend yesterday.

Wall Street had been inclined to look for an omission, or at least a reduction of the common dividend, since it was understood that even the preferred dividend would have to come out of surplus. But the directors unanimously ordered a repetition of the 50-cent payment.

The corporation's earnings statement for the quarter ended Sept. 30 and was one of the focal points in the corporation's history. After provision for depreciation and depletion, and interest on its funded debt, the corporation had a total of $1,602,000, before payment of preferred dividends. Provision for the regular preferred payment of $1.75 a share and the common dividend of 50 cents, left a total deficit for the quarter of $4,952,000.

Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem, said "sentiment had unquestionably improved. We think that in the last week we have noticed activity on the part of the buying public. Prices are being maintained very well."

Bethlehem's operations are currently at 31 percent of capacity. The corporation's earnings statement failed to reflect the 10 percent wage cut, which became effective Oct. 1.

American Hunter Killed In Combat With African Lion

NAIROBI KENYA, East Africa, Oct. 30.—(A.P.)—Details of a hand-to-hand encounter with a wounded lion near Tanganyika in which W. H. Herron, Aberdeen, Washington hunter, received fatal wounds, were revealed today.

A native gunbearer seized the wounded lion by the tail and pulled it away from Herron. It was learned, but his heroism went for naught because the victim died several days later while being taken to a hospital.

Herron, his wife, and two other Americans on a big game safari principally for the purpose of photography when Herron shot and believed he killed a lion. Herron then approached to make pictures. His companions were startled to hear him cry "He's got me."

A struggle ensued and his companions couldn't fire for fear of hitting Herron. A native dropped it away and another member of the party shot it dead. Several remarkable pictures were taken of the combat.

President Attacks Navy League Critic Who Hurlled Charge

point a committee including members of the Navy League to whom agencies of the government will demonstrate these untruths and distortions of fact. Such an inquiry will absolve the members of the league who have not participated in this statement. Upon its completion I shall expect Mr. Gardiner to make a public correction of his misstatements and an apology therefor.

It is desirable for the public to know the character of this indirect campaign of misinformation to defeat the efforts of the high officials of the navy department and the administration or reduction of federal expenditure not immediately essential in order that we may avoid increased taxation of the people in these times.

Far from proffering the apology the president is looking for Gardiner's last night said:

"I am somewhat surprised at the suggestion of the president that he himself will appoint a commission to look into matters touching on administrative policy, especially in view of the facts, as I understand it, that the Congress is the investigating branch of the government."

"Of course I should welcome the Congressional investigation that would bring out and publish all the pertinent facts."

Wednesday night the league issued a pamphlet saying the president had displayed an "abysmal ignorance of why navies are maintained and of how they are used to accomplish their major mission."

Accompanying this statement with an expression of regret, the league said it was necessary to make it "if we are to have a real appreciation of the impelling motives back of President Hoover's efforts, at every turn, to restrict, to reduce, and to starve the United States navy under the present plea of budget limitation, on which we may have further cause to comment."

The president's decision to have a committee make the inquiry is in line with a pronouncement of several weeks ago in which the president was pictured as ready to take to the country the issue of reduced naval expenditures.

At that time he was described as irate at efforts of navy department personnel to inflame public opinion against the budgetary cuts he was advocating.

Before issuing his statement, the president saw and approved an American note to the League of Nations "agreeing to participate in a one-year armament holiday beginning Sunday."

The American acceptance was not burdened by numerous reservations although it was indicated the United States had retained the right to complete vessels already being built.

On the subject of naval armament truces, the Navy League had a few caustic words to say in its statement Wednesday. It intimated that this country had been responsible for the one-year holiday suggested by Foreign Minister Grandi of Italy to the league last September.

Some members of Congress have expressed opposition to the reduced expenditures asked by the navy and have revealed an intention of opposing them when appropriate bills come up next winter. Both Chairman Hale of the Senate naval committee and Representative Britten of Illinois, who headed the last House naval committee, have said they would introduce legislation to build up the fleet to the maximum imposed by the London treaty.

The navy department recently submitted a budget estimate of $401,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933. This the president returned with instructions that $61,000,000 be tacked off from it. A second estimate was prepared which was described as pruning the original revision down by almost that amount.

Citrus Men of State Ask Aid To Bolster Prices

tion to every grapefruit grower in this state and its solution is a task of such magnitude that no single organization or group of producers can hope to adequately cope with it."

Any attempt by a single grower, the resolutions continued, would involve tremendous sacrifice and would fail to accomplish the object sought. The resolving clause was as follows:

"Now therefore be it resolved, that we, the committee of 50 being a representative group of growers having no interest other than the welfare of all growers, do make solemn and earnest appeal to the groups addressed to immediately join in a united and definite program to create a more extensive and profitable market for Florida grapefruit and to take that they apply themselves earnestly and speedily to meet the present acute situation.

"We feel the situation is too serious to permit delay or wasteful quibbling. The welfare of the state is at stake and we ask that each organization, without delay, select a committee of three to join in developing and conducting a program in which all may join for the sole purpose of meeting the grapefruit problem successfully. The problem is not an impossible one but can only be solved by united effort."

The discussion culminating in the adoption of the resolutions opened with a statement by Chairman Norman H. Vinssing, of Babson Park, showing the collapse of grapefruit auction prices and outlining the reasons for the growers taking a loss.

"Market quotations yesterday," he said, "put the growers in red ink to the tune of 15 cents per box. Such a situation is intolerable, not only to the growers but to the general interests of the entire citrus industry in Florida."

General business in Florida prospered. No citrus grower is confined just to ourselves as growers. It touched all other lines of business.

With the clearing House last week controlling 90 percent of the citrus crop, Mr. Vinssing said such affiliated marketing organizations received daily reports of appropriate shipments and partitioned the number of reports controlling each day to the distribution centers.

"The figures on unsold cars," he explained, "gave us the button by which our entire distribution system was regulated. The data furnished a clear idea of pending market shifts. We could accurately figure on Texas movements and direct our fruit so as

Long Meat Market Freshly Decorated

At the busy winter season at the First Street market W. H. Long, one of Sanford's largest business meat dealers has been busy during the past few days decorating and renovating the interior and exterior of his store. Today it presents a colorful and neat appearance, and is the object of much favorable comment by customers and other business men.

The interior walls have been painted a clean white with white enamel base extending to the height of about six feet. The work is part of a white enamel and floor, brightened with a coat of battle ship gray. The meat boxes and huge refrigerators have been painted iridescent with white enamel, and the exterior is finished with white enamel. The scales have also been enameled in white. H. J. Bixton, Laurel Avenue painter, had the contract for the work.

in the normal year of 1931. Employment continues to be at this rate, "we shall have 1,000,000 persons out of work next year."

Green says show more men working in the normal year of 1931. When unemployment is high, it is likely that an effort will be made to keep men at work in part time, for up to the present figures had shown a normal increase in unemployment which had not been seen in the past few years.

Green said that a million men will be out of work in November, 1,000,000 in December, 1,100,000 in January, and 1,200,000 in February. He said that if the normal increase in unemployment is maintained, work hours will be cut and employment of men in part time work for as long as a year from November to April. League Told U.S. Will Join Arms Respite ported to be an agreement as it is felt that a sudden cessation of work in the naval shipyards would have serious effects upon employment.

The American note was in reply to an invitation extended by the League late in September urging the nations which are to take part in the general disarmament conference at Geneva in February to join an immediate arms truce calculated to further the success of that event as well as to relieve the burden of a heavy financial load.

The League then laid aside the Italian project which defined the obligations to be assumed and advanced a compromise. It is on this proposal that America acted yesterday.

Specific points such as whether worn out airplanes and obsolete warships can be replaced were not stated. These were left for determination in the declarations to be made by the various governments in accepting the proposal.

Before definite commitments are made, each nation will be acquainted with the measure of agreement which has been reached as to the exact nature and extent of the holiday.

America's acceptance has been taken for granted in view of the often expressed sympathetic attitude of its administration toward efforts for disarmament. In fact, the United States last September accepted a specific Italian proposal made at Geneva which failed of adoption when France and Japan opposed it.

The League then laid aside the Italian project which defined the obligations to be assumed and advanced a compromise. It is on this proposal that America acted yesterday.

Business Honesty

John Pilgrim in one of his most interesting daily editorials discusses the subject of "business honesty". Just why business honesty should differ from any other kind of honesty is something we have never been able to understand; we nevertheless, recognize it as a fact that certain individuals do things in the name of their businesses which they would not think of doing in private lives.

Sharp practices are so often confused with good business. As Mr. Pilgrim declares, how many times do we find a man who, when questioned on his business methods, replies, "It may not be nice, but it is good business". We are inclined to believe that he is as wrong in his business psychology as he is in his morals. Practically every business depends to a large extent upon its good will and the public confidence which it enjoys. Dishonest methods may pay for a short time, or in a single deal, but in the long run they will ruin any business.

Deliberating upon this subject one is apt to run into the question, "What is honest, and what is not?" Just where does the border line lie? It is frequently said of a certain man, "He is fairly honest"; of another, "He is half way honest". Of course, both statements are foolish. One is either honest, or he is dishonest. There is no half way line. One who would take something for nothing, or lie to or deceive another, is dishonest. The degree of his dishonesty merely depends upon his opportunities.

That every man who manages to evade the law and keep out of jail is honest, is of course absurd. There are, in all probability, more dishonest men outside of jails than in them. It is unfortunate but true that men are not confined to prisons in this country for telling lies, unless they happen to be told on the witness stand or otherwise under oath. The fact that a man is not under oath when he tells his lie, however, does not make him any the less dishonest.

Nor is the man who engages in questionable deals, or such business practices as to mislead or deceive his customers, any the more honest because he cannot be indicted and tried for his offenses. Nor should he escape the brand of moral delinquency because he is able to refer to his methods lightly as "good business". Dishonesty is dishonest whether found in business life, politics, or in the home.

And where honesty is found wanting in business, business too is found wanting.

Building Today

One of the innumerable causes attributed to this depression is the so-called lack of construction which is said to characterize this country today. And yet the American Architect insists that there is more actual building today than during any average year. It, of course, does not reach the boom years around 1926 but exceeds that of almost any year prior to 1922. Ernest Eberhard, editor of the Architect, writes of the building activity at present as follows:

"In the few months just past, in New York City alone, there arose such nationally famous structures as the Empire State Building, the Irving Trust, Waldorf-Astoria and a number of others but little less prominent. This coming year will witness the greatest project of all—Radio City. Never has there been a year of such outstanding construction achievement—yet we hear people right in New York say, 'There isn't any building going on.' And what is true of New York is largely true of other cities.

"The present year, 1931, will close about two hundred million dollars over the four billion mark—a boom year for year prior to 1922. The year from October 1931 to September, 1932 will probably be slightly less than this, about four billion dollars. The volume of business passing through the average architectural office in the depression year of 1931, totals almost as much as the total average of the drug, hardware, department store and automobile businesses in the 1929 peak year. Such figures indicate the tremendous influence of the architect upon national prosperity, an influence which is not generally realized even by the profession itself.

"Residential work will probably be the first to show unusual activity during the coming year. Out of each 100 of our population 75 have not as yet been able to afford good housing standards. There is here a tremendous, unworked market, a market which may possibly be developed by new methods of construction which will make it possible to provide better accommodations at lower costs. Should such developments take place, and there are indications that they will, it is logical to expect that many outmoded dwellings will be cast in the discard and be replaced with cheaper and better structures."

SANFORD, TWENTY YEARS AGO

Joseph Pulitzer, proprietor of the New York World and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, and one of the most commanding figures in modern journalism, died yesterday aboard his yacht, The Liberty, in Charleston harbor. The immediate cause of Mr. Pulitzer's death was heart failure. He had been in ill health for several days but until a few hours before the end, none of those around him had any suspicion of the gravity of his condition.

Tomorrow before the break of day the hunters will be out with dog and gun will put in the hours of daylight in pursuit of quail, turkey and deer. There is probably no better place in the entire country that makes a better game preserve than both sides of the Celery Delta and the surrounding country.

OUR WORLD WAR DEBTS

Senator Borah, with an utter disregard of political consequences, told French newspaper representatives last week that the Versailles treaty must be scrapped and the financial affairs of Europe adjusted on another basis. The senator might have been speaking for the administration in other circumstances, but it happens that Mr. Borah does not represent anybody's ideas save his own. President Hoover and Secretary Stimson have been emphasizing the administration's views from their lips and through the mouths of conviction. A large part of the American people...

BUY NOW! PAY NOW!

Many people are not paying their bills. They say they have no money to pay them. Surely everybody is not completely shy of cash. Practically everybody has some money. If that is true then everybody should pay at least part of what they owe. If each person did this, money would soon begin to flow much easier.

Other people who have money are holding it back because they fear to buy or pay their debts. They do not know what is going to happen. Prices may go lower and they can save a dollar. Mr. Jones, and Mr. Smith, the grocer and haberdasher, can wait until the weather changes or prices hit a lower level.

These are things which help to paralyze business. If you need some article, buy it. Pay for it now and take it home. If everybody waits, suddenly stocks of merchandise will be depleted and away, skyward, will go the prices. Then the buyer will rush in to replenish his own diminishing stocks and price, will go still higher.

DRUNKEN DRIVING

A few days ago a Mobile automobile driver who it is alleged was driving while drunk and struck another automobile with his car, afterwards speeding away from the accident and falling asleep at the wheel of his machine after stopping it abruptly in the middle of a downtown street, was arrested. Commenting the Mobile Press said:

Until such drivers are eliminated from the streets of this community, life and property will be unsafe.

Infinitely more dangerous than a criminal armed with a pistol is the drunken and reckless driver because he is armed with an infinitely more destructive force.

Irresponsible hands which guide hurtling tons of steel through traffic in the city without the mentality to control their vehicle must be restrained.

The case which has been recently reported indicates that the driver who was arrested did not possess the faculty for realizing his acts. His reckless past followed many of Mobile's most used streets and it was only through the intervention of Providence that it was not marked by maimed or dying figures.

Undoubtedly the accused will plead that he had no criminal intent, but if his accusers are right, he was guilty of criminal conduct.

All safety precautions and the every measure designed to protect life and property are set at naught by such drivers.

The fundamental requirement before accident prevention will be successful, is to devise some means whereby such drivers are definitely discouraged from their dangerous practices and apparently the only method whereby this may be done is, to administer drastic punishment when such cases are brought before the courts.

There is no defense for drunken driving. It is one of the most serious menaces of the present time and it must be stamped out whatever the cost may be to those who are guilty of the practice. If punishment is to be a deterrent, then such punishment should be as rigorous as the law allows. There are thus only, will drunken drivers be discouraged from their practices.

The declaration that a drunken automobile driver is "infinitely more dangerous than a criminal armed with a pistol" is not only a warning to the public but also a warning to the government.

A drinking fountain has been added to the convenience in Donnelly Park for the boys that pitch horseshoes, and play the shuffle board, as well as for the tennis players and the public generally. So, we can't say, "It is now time, etc." It has been done!—Mount Dora Topic.

Garden Club Notes

By Mrs. Harry Wight

I see the Garden Club of Sanford is planning a Plant Market which is an old friend under a new name, for the Woman's Club has had it since plant sales for years past. It would be impossible to say how much these sales have meant to Sanford since those long past days when the Woman's Club made its first slogan "A Palm, a Poinsettia and a Hibiscus" for every garden in Sanford, only we said "yard" instead of garden.

It is hard to realize that such a slogan could ever have been needed now that even the simplest homes have not only these, but many fine and rare garden subjects. There was a time however when a few women made a house to house canvass for the unsophisticated housewife and for the young housewife.

Few plant towns are gardening more intelligently than Sanford, especially since the intensive effort which in the last few years by the Garden Club, which gladly and loyally trace their beginning to the civic work of the Woman's Club.

Florida says that no other state can successfully grow such a variety of shrubs and other horticultural materials as Florida can.

A plant market of 1931 in Sanford will offer many new and interesting subjects that have already been tried out and proved suitable on the section and will be an opportunity for those who love to study and make fascinating experiments in their own gardens.

Contacts were enjoyed by the guests and Mrs. Margaret Meyers entertained with a few vocal selections. Refreshment were served by the hostess at a late hour. Those invited to be with Mrs. Smith were: Mrs. G. S. Selman, Mrs. George Huff, Mrs. T. C. Phipps, Mr. J. D. Dancy, Mrs. O. H. Stenstrom, Mrs. L. H. Caldwell, Mrs. V. M. Williams, Mrs. R. E. Lindsay, Mrs. L. B. Bragg and Mrs. V. G. Methvin.

CARLTON PAYS EULOGY TO GAS

Legislature a factor headed by a little group which pretended, away from Tallahassee, to advocate a road building holiday, passed through the House a bill which devoted all the gas tax, at that time $13,000,000, to road construction and maintenance, one-half to the state and one-half to the counties.

The administration, in keeping with its program for tax relief, insisted that one-half this amount, a tax of three cents per gallon of gasoline, be applied to the payment of roads built by counties and thereby to the relief of the taxpayer, further insisting that the other half was sufficient for road construction and maintenance.

This program won. The law was upheld by the Supreme Court yesterday, and will stand as one of the most constructive measures in the history of Florida, the largest factor in preserving the financial integrity of the state and in carrying relief to the general property tax.

Governor Carlton told of other plans offered as substitutes, then turned to the result the gas tax allocation will have in Hillsborough county.

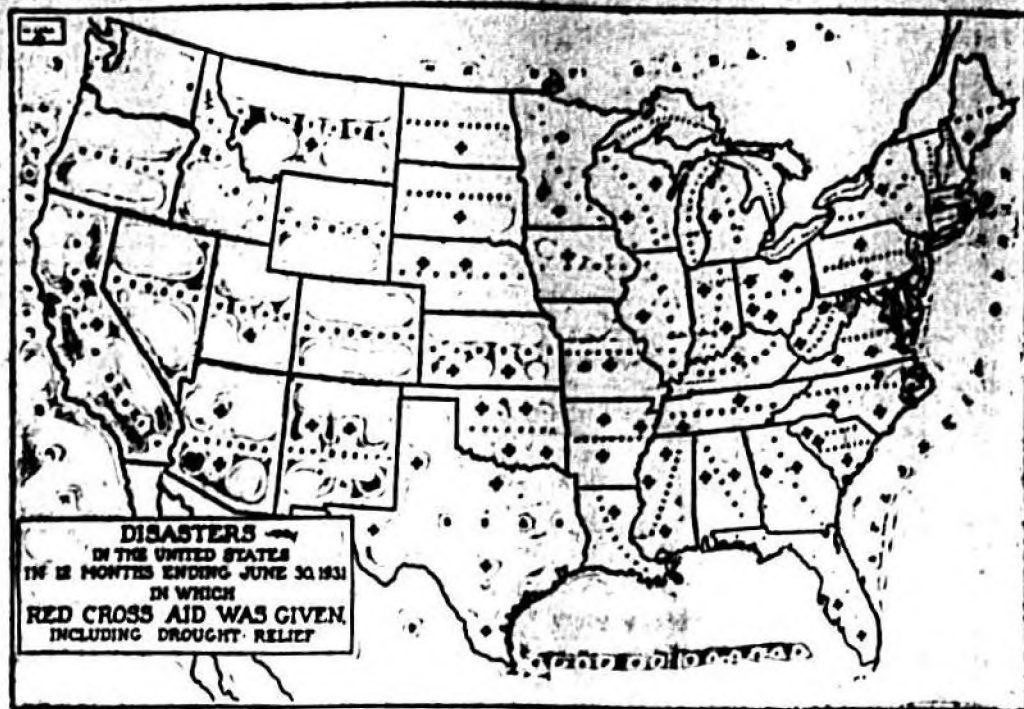

In 1928, preceding this administration, Hillsborough county received from the gas and automobile license tax $291,626.45 he said. "For 1931-32 it will receive $900,966.87. Of this total $564,221 goes to the county schools. It represents a difference between a five-month term and a nine-month term, or a difference in general property tax of about 12 mills.

The remainder of this amount, $336,744.87, or the equivalent of about eight mills, is applied to road indebtedness. Other counties in the state have enjoyed as much, and many of them, more relief.

Furthermore, the state has expended in Hillsborough county since July 1, 1929, for road maintenance, $60,160.99 as against $58,100.50 for all time prior to that date. For road construction since 1923 the state has expended in this county $1,123,004.06, as against $1,243,848.50 for all time prior thereto."

Governor Carlton concluded his address with a discussion of roads as an investment.

DISASTERS HIT 38 STATES IN PAST YEAR

In a year of unusual weather conditions all over the world, the United States was especially hard hit, and in the twelve months ending June 30, 1931, the American Red Cross had given disaster relief in thirty-eight of the forty-eight states.

With the exception of a mine explosion, an epidemic of typhoid fever, a mine cave-in and a railroad accident, these disasters were all due to the elements. They were forest fires, tornadoes, floods, storms, cloudbursts and drought.

The drought, which spread over twenty-three states in the summer and fall of 1930, and has again wrought untold havoc in northwestern states in 1931, accounted for Red Cross relief in twenty-three states. The other disasters were, without exception, carried on simultaneously with the drought relief, and placed a heavy burden, not alone upon the funds of the national Red Cross, but upon its trained personnel of disaster relief workers.

At the peak of the drought relief, more than two million persons were being fed, clothed or given other help, and in all of the work more than 2,750,000 men, women and children were cared for by the Red Cross.

Funds for the drought relief were obtained, in part, through public contributions, because of the magnitude of the numbers affected. The public gave more than $10,000,000 and the American Red Cross appropriated $5,000,000 from its treasury. The cost of the other disaster relief operations was borne from the Red Cross treasury, and local funds contributed in the stricken communities.

This disaster work of the Red Cross is supported, in part, from the annual roll call for members which occurs each year between Armistice Day and Thanksgiving Day. Each person who joins as a member of the Red Cross is contributing toward this effective and important emergency relief, should calamities occur anywhere affecting the lives of their fellow citizens.

rebellion against the laws of the United States."

So the detective squads swept into the Lexington yesterday and with gun, ready and a hotel clerk leading as guide, ascended to the gang's capacious suite. Not a creature was stirring, not even a bell boy. The clerk said they had checked out Wednesday.

The raiders found one wall had been pulled down to enlarge the kitchen of the Capone suite and make way for a huge electric refrigerator, scores of pots and pans and two complete sets of china and silverware.

There were five assorted radio sets, console models, one of them adjusted to receive alarms broadcast to the cruising detective squads that so often have gone hunting the "big fellow's" gunner.

The detectives finally came upon the last two remnants of the Capone household, his cook and dishwasher. These two were hauled away to the detective bureau in the hope that information might be wrung from them. All they learned was that Capone had been so entranced with Aladdin's rendition of spaghetti that he was hired at $20 a week, from and board, to preside over the Capone cuisine. Autiliano came along at $75 a month, bed and board, as deputy chef and dishwasher, and he regretted that both were given notice Wednesday. The police will recommend their deportation.

Higginbotham Hears Family Accuse Him

AMITE, Louisiana, Oct. 30.—(A.P.)—Calmly fingering a worn Bible, Fin Higginbotham, 56, described by his family as a "prohibitionist of the sterner order" sat in district court today, and heard his wife and children testify against him in his trial for slaying his son, David, 22, whom he accused of selling liquor.

Higginbotham was indicted for manslaughter when David was fatally wounded in an argument which followed his father's finding a gallon jug of whiskey in a barn, leading the elder man to believe his son was bootlegging. Two other sons obtained the gun and fired, wounding their father.
