Aggravated assault charged

SANFORD — Seminole County sheriff's deputies arrested David Reynolds and charged him with aggravated assault on Wednesday afternoon.

Reynolds, 18, was allegedly riding his bicycle through the Wrenwood subdivision off of Aloma Avenue at about 2:30 p.m. when he passed a group of students from Tuskawilla Middle School.

Deputies said the three young men told them that Reynolds stopped for no apparent reason when he passed them. They said he pulled out a .22 calibre Ruger automatic gun and pointed it at them.

Deputies said the youngsters said he told them they "better watch who (you're) looking at" and that he threatened to shoot them.

The students flagged down a deputy who arrested Reynolds a few blocks away.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held in lieu of $4,000 bond.

Christmas sales: Retailers optimistic

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Major retail stores in the Sanford and Lake Mary area opened earlier than usual this morning with managers optimistic at the official beginning of the Christmas shopping season.

Stores will be trying to lure choosy, budget-minded shoppers with bargains, special services and bonuses. Retailers know they may have to struggle to bring in sales.

One of the earliest openings this morning was the Wal-Mart store at 3653 Orlando Drive. Manager Mel Tomlin said she arrived at 4:30 this morning. "We opened our doors at 5 a.m.," she said, "and there were SANFORD — The Christmas shopping season may have officially begun today, but Christmas shopping season is also here.

A number of major stores in the Sanford area have increased their store security, although no one would say what is being done.

One store manager, who did not wish to be identified, said he had added some new security measures, but did not wish to reveal them. "All of our personnel know to be extra alert during this shopping season," he said, "so I don't really expect any major increase in shop-

Sanford Middle School organizes to thwart crime

By VICKI DeSORMIER

SANFORD — School safety at and around Sanford Middle School has been a concern for parents for quite a while.

"We feel that to protect the school, we have to do something about it."

"We felt it was time to do something like this," said assistant principal Lenny Sutton, who is helping to organize a Neighborhood Watch group. "We feel it is important to create a safe environment for our students both at school and in their communities."

School volunteers have organized a Neighborhood Watch group for the communities surrounding the school, which is located at 1700 French Avenue.

Sutton said that the first meeting of the Neighborhood Watch group will be at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, Dec. 1 in the school's cafeteria.

The organizers, he said, have done all the legwork in putting together the committee. Residents need only attend the meeting and be prepared to participate in the group's activities.

County saves money by merging mailings

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — A consolidation of mail services is saving money, says Seminole County's services director.

By merging the mailings of several departments in May, the county now saves an average of $40 per day by sorting mail together instead of separately, said Cindy Wright, director of the county's Central Services Department. A similar test program with the school board during November appears to be saving schools a minimum of $8 to $10 daily, Wright said.

Previously, the county, Sheriff's Office, Property Appraiser's Office,

State Attorney's Office, Supervisor of Elections and Finance Office each prepared and mailed their own correspondence separately, said Wright.

As a result, the county and other agencies rarely were able to qualify for the U.S. Postal Services' 0.049-cent per letter pre-sort discount which applies to 500 letters or more. At most, the county averaged 175 to 250 letters per day before May, Wright said. Now, the county's 1 1/2-person mailroom handles 600 to 700 pieces of mail, enough for the discount, she said.

With the temporary addition of the school mail, the work level has increased by another 150 to 200

Wind deposits plane on roof of home

JACKSONVILLE — A single-engine plane crashed into a field after losing power and then was picked up by burst of wind that deposited it onto the roof of a home.

Nelthorpe pilot, Eric Arnold, and his girlfriend, Cheryl Smith, were injured Thursday.

The couple had been sightseeing for about 45 minutes when the Cessna 172's engine apparently failed on approach to Craig Municipal Airport. Winds were gusting between 25 and 30 mph at the time, according to the National Weather Service.

The aircraft bounced as it hit a field, then was lifted by a burst of wind, clipped a tree and landed on the roof of a home. No one was in the home when the accident occurred shortly before noon.

Arnold, 23, and Smith, 24, of Mount Laurel, N.J., crawled from the plane and got off the roof on a ladder put up by a neighbor.

"I was amazed," said Lloyd Brown, who was fixing Thanksgiving dinner next door when he heard the crash. "You just don't see planes sitting like that on roofs of houses too often. It got a little too close."

Douglas invited to White House

MIAMI — Marjory Douglas, who has been the Everglades' most eloquent and enduring defender, was thrilled when President Clinton called a few months ago and invited her to the White House.

She wasn't told until Thanksgiving Eve, however, she would also be receiving the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian honor.

She was "ecstatic" at the news, said her longtime secretary, Sharon Richardson.

The 103-year-old Douglas will spend Monday and Tuesday nights in the White House as the Clintons' guest. On Tuesday, she is one of five people who will receive the Medal of Freedom — given for outstanding contributions to world peace, American culture or other public service — in a White House ceremony.

People, technology fight theft

GAINESVILLE — Retailers enjoying the post-Thanksgiving shopping crush should couple good employee relations with new technology to combat the twin threats of shoplifting and employee theft, a researcher advises.

University of Florida sociologist Richard Hollinger, who does an annual National Retail Security Survey of nearly 400 companies around the country, said retailers attribute about 40 percent of their annual inventory losses, or "shrinkage," to employee theft.

Much of this can be abated by improving relations with employees, he said.

Shoplifting, meanwhile, accounts for about a third of retail losses each year but is more dependent on local economic and crime trends, he said.

The overall inventory shrinkage rate of 1.88 percent represents more than $20 billion a year to the $1.1 trillion U.S. retail industry, but shrinkage has actually decreased from the 1992 rate of 1.91, which is good news for managers, Hollinger said in a news release issued in time for the busiest shopping season of the year.

The annual survey of 23 different markets from jewelry to hardware has consistently found the better companies treat and compensate their employees, the lower both employee theft and shoplifting rates will be.

Patient brokers

A little-known, enormously profitable facet of health care

By Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG — Karen Robbins, a Harbor Springs, Mich., grandmother, was promised she'd lose weight at a fancy Florida fat farm. Instead, she found herself in a lock-down psychiatric hospital, held against her will.

Elaine Goldman, a New York City school teacher, wanted a cure for depression. Instead, she wound up in a Los Angeles weight-loss center where she was charged $80,000 for treatment of anorexia — a disease she never had.

Edward F. Barlow, an Allons, Tenn., man with crippling back pain, thought he was going to "the No. 1 pain center in the nation." He ended up in a Florida detoxification program, where he was told to play volleyball.

These cases aren't flukes. Like scores of others, Goldman, Barlow and Robbins were victims of a little-known but enormously profitable cog in America's health care industry — the patient broker.

Working individually or for so-called referral services, patient brokers make their living by matching patients with treatment programs. The St. Petersburg Times reported in a copyright story.

Drinking too much? A broker will find you a place to dry out. Own a hospital with empty beds? A broker will find patients to fill them.

In theory, it sounds fine — sending people with problems to places that can help.

In fact, critics say, many patient brokers, eager to make a buck, refer unsuspecting people to inappropriate treatment programs. This pay-for-patients system not only hurts patients, it's siphoning millions of dollars from insurance companies and public assistance programs, driving up health care costs for all Americans.

"What we're seeing in this area is highly organized business crime," said Joseph L. Ford of the FBI's health care fraud unit. "Some of the companies involved are built on corrupt foundations.

"Everyone is making money, from the bottom to the top."

A nine-month Times investigation found:

• Patient brokers can make as much as $3,000 for every patient they send into treatment. In some cases, these finder's fees are shared with school counselors, public health workers, union representatives, even police and probation officers who help steer patients into the treatment pipeline.

"Each scheme is more diabolical than the last," said U.S. Rep. John Bryant of Texas. Investigations are under way or recently completed in at least nine states: Florida, Texas, California, Georgia, Massachusetts, Vermont, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Colorado.

The competition to get people into treatment is such that prospective patients are offered free plane rides, limousine service, vacations, beer, even ball money to get out of jail.

Criminal investigation into baby swap could begin next week

By Associated Press

WAUCHULA — A criminal investigation could begin next week into claims by a nurse's aide that the 1978 swap of two baby girls was intentional, authorities said.

Hardee sheriff's Capt. Arnold Lanier said Thursday the investigation could begin as early as Monday.

Meanwhile, an attorney for the Wauchula physician Ernest Palmer said he questions the claim by Patsy Webb, the former nurse's aide, that it was his client who ordered the swap at Hardee Memorial Hospital.

"There's no credibility in what Patsy Webb says," Tampa attorney Cliff Somers said. "Dr. Palmer had nothing to do with this."

Webb came forward earlier this week "to clear her conscience" regarding the intentional swap of Arlena Twigg and Kimberly Mays.

Reggie and Ernest Twigg, who have long claimed the swap was intentional, are appealing a judge's ruling last summer denying them any claim to Kimberly, who went home in 1978 with Robert and Barbara Mays.

The baby swap came to light when the child raised by the Twiggs was being treated for heart problems and blood tests showed she wasn't their biological daughter. Arlena died in 1988.

"Their hope is that Kimberly will view Mrs. Twigg in a different light, with some compassion and understanding," said John Blakely, attorney for the Twiggs.

However, inconsistencies have arisen in Webb's story. She said the switch was made because Barbara Mays had cancer and that "They wanted her to have the good baby because she didn't have long to live."

Barbara Mays died of ovarian cancer in 1981, but her medical records show she wasn't diagnosed until June 18, 1980.

Also, Webb reported the child that went home with the Twiggs had a heart condition. Mays' lawyer, Arthur Ginsburg, said no one knew the seriousness of Arlena's condition until afterwards.

Furthermore, personal records allege that Webb was having emotional problems around that time.

Freedom from HIV camp brings grim new life for Haitians

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — For more than an hour, Michel talked animatedly and enthusiastically, waving his fork over his plate as he recounted the incredible events of the past two years.

There was a lot to relate — his political activism for Jean-Bertrand Aristide, his days in hiding after a military coup exiled Haiti's first freely elected president, his Coast Guard-intercepted effort to reach Florida by boat, and the 20 months spent awaiting release from an oppressive detention camp at the U.S. naval base in Cuba.

Then, the fork stopped in midair.

Michel's eyes narrowed as the question was translated from English into Creole: What did he think about detaining him and other Haitians at the camp because of their health condition?

"Some of those people had nothing wrong with them at all," he replied emphatically. "It was just an excuse by the U.S. government not to let them into this country. I don't have any health problems."

As the next question started, again about his health, he recoiled, jabbing his fork into the sauce surrounding his broiled snapper:

"And now you are asking personal questions that I am not obligated to answer."

Michel, 29, has tested HIV-positive. He is among more than 200 Haitians struggling to build new lives in the United States, shadowed by a deadly virus in a new country that has made them feel unwanted and deeply suspicious.

Because of his diagnosis, Michel spent 20 months in a U.S. government-created purgatory, living behind razor wire in stark tents filled with dusty, steamy heat and dispirited, sad-eyed people lying listlessly on cots.

"It was a nightmare," recalled Michael Ratner, a New York attorney with the Center for Constitutional Rights. "When I took the ferry crossing the bay, it was like crossing the River Styx."

The Navy base at Guantanamo Bay lies at Cuba's southern tip, separated from arid mountains by mine fields. An irritant to the island's communist regime, its main use is for year-round training for U.S. forces.

When Haitians flooded off their island after Aristide's ouster in September 1991, the base became a conveniently located detention camp. Coast Guard cutters patrolled the Windward Passage, stopping overcrowded wooden boats at sea and taking those aboard to Guantanamo.

About three-fourths of the 40,000 people who fled after the coup were sent back to Haiti.

Haitian advocates criticized the Guantanamo camp and court fights were waged. From a peak of 12,500 detainees, the camp dwindled to a little more than 200 Haitians — young men and women who tested positive for the virus that causes AIDS.

Although they had provided enough evidence of political persecution in Haiti to qualify for entry into the United States, they were stranded by a policy against admitting HIV-positive immigrants.

Rico, 33, described the frustration.

He arrived at Guantanamo on May 19, 1992, one day after fleeing Haiti after getting word that soldiers were waiting for him inside his home. He was interviewed by immigration officers and told a few weeks later that he had qualified for transfer to the United States. Within days, he was called at 8 a.m.

"That was the time they called you when you were going to the United States. I felt very happy. I was ready to leave. I wanted to get in contact with my family as soon as I got there."

Instead, he was taken to another camp, smaller and isolated.

"At first, they didn't tell me anything," Rico said. "Then, they told me this was the camp for the people with medical problems."

"I became very sad. I even cried a lot. I was thinking that if this was what I was going to get, I would have stayed in Haiti and risked getting killed by the soldiers."

The store employee told them that none of the items had been purchased by England.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $100 bond.

They said they saw a white pick up truck at that location, but when they approached the driver sped away and refused to stop. A few blocks later, the driver and passenger jumped out of the truck and ran.

Hendricks was stopped a short time later.

Police said he and another man who has not yet been arrested, went to the victim's house and advised the victim that they were going to shoot him and asked him to accompany them to a nearby park where they would shoot him.

Cops still seeking man for questions about charity scam

By VICKI DeBORNIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — During the Christmas season we are all in the spirit of giving and receiving.

The chance to do both may seem too good to be true. Seminole County sheriff's investigators said that in at least one case it is.

According to investigators, an illegal charitable solicitation is still being perpetrated in the metropolitan Orlando area, including Seminole County.

The investigators are seeking information on the whereabouts of Peter Michael Weed, whose last known address was in Altamonte Springs.

The investigators said Weed has been representing himself as the fundraiser for the Leukemia Society of America.

He tells those he contacts that he is selling $1 raffle tickets on behalf of the society, sheriff's investigators said. They noted that he tells his victims that the grand prize in the raffle is a $135,000 new home donated by M/I Homes, Inc.

Other prizes, investigators said he tells those who will buy a ticket, include a 1994 Tracker donated by Holler Chevrolet, a vacation to Hawaii donated by West Town Travel and 198 other prizes.

Investigators said that Weed tells the buyers of the tickets the drawing for the prizes will be televised on WFTV (Channel 9) on Dec. 31 and the drawing will be in compliance with all state laws concerning fundraising for charitable organizations.

According to investigators, the Leukemia Society of America told them that Weed is not authorized to solicit donations on behalf of the organization. They also said that they are planning no such drawing, televised or not.

Holler Chevrolet and West Town Travel also say they have no knowledge of the alleged donated items, investigators said.

Investigators are encouraging those who have been contacted by Weed, or who may be contacted in the future, to call investigator Robin Yolton at 330-6600, ext. 305; or Ed McDonough at 330-6694.

'Tis the season, but be careful

While some may have started early, today is the start of the official holiday shopping season. 'Tis the season to start spending money. 'Tis also the season to avoid trouble.

Shoppers will be out in large numbers to buy gifts as well as holiday wearing apparel. Shoplifters however, will also be out in full force.

Often, a store security guard or law enforcement officer will stop a person leaving a store, and question if merchandise is being taken without paying for it. In most cases, they may be right.

At times however, it's an honest shopper who is detained. A sticker which wasn't removed when the merchandise was paid for, may have set off an alarm. An item may have been placed in a bag and accidentally forgotten at the check-out counter. A small child may see an item and carry it off without the parents' noticing.

These are embarrassing moments. John Q. Public or his wife do not want to be accused of trying to shoplift.

The next 30 days will be a critical time for merchants. They must be on their guard against petit thefts at all times. Yet they and their clerks must try to maintain a spirit of cordiality to the customers.

Holiday shopping should be an enjoyable adventure. The spirit of giving can truly spur a person to a true feeling of satisfaction.

There are bound to be trials and tribulations associated with holiday shopping, but there are ways to help combat them. Be extremely cautious during purchasing and check-outs. Keep sales slips at all times.

Be constantly aware of where the children are, and what they are doing.

Try not to be upset because some clerk, who may have already worked for 10 or 12 hours, isn't in the best of moods.

Try to be polite, but don't start non-business conversations with sales people who have others to serve.

And if a shoplifting incident is witnessed, report it. The cost of merchandise taken by shoplifters will cause an increase in prices, which will be paid for by honest shoppers.

Have a good time with your holiday shopping. Take caution with you at all times.

Ross and Rush: the entertainers

The most significant difference between the two media-created P.T. Barnums of conservatism, Ross Perot and Rush Limbaugh, is that Rush was on the winning side of the North American Free Trade Agreement debate.

After that, the Rush and Ross shows are really variations of style on a demagogic theme. With his nasal whining, the small-statured Ross comes across as a folksy, down-home neighbor. With his thunderous prophecies, Papa-bear Rush ends up looking as whimsical as a clown. But the two men share the capacity not only to rock the boat, but also to convince everybody in the boat that there's a storm at sea.

Last year, Perot was riding high in the presidential sweepstakes. He made true believers of 19 percent of the electorate. Today, he would be lucky to scrounge up 5 percent of any vote.

But not Limbaugh. He is what teen-agers call "a happenin'." He is an entire media culture, simultaneously defining and symbolizing what is both wonderful and wretched about America.

Such uniqueness is only possible for the author of a best-selling book, the host of an extremely popular radio show and a jovial minstrel with an uncanny instinct for appealing to the lowest common denominator.

His cup still runneth over. Recently, he was featured on the cover of two weekly magazines,

Time and The New Republic, within a week. On the Time cover, an artist drawing had the screed of scatology. Howard Stern, and the prophet of pomposity, Limbaugh, screaming at each other. "Voice of America?" It queried.

The New Republic cover featured a half-and-half drawing of the faces of Limbaugh and David Letterman. "Are Rush Limbaugh and David Letterman the same person?" It asked. Incredulously, the one link between Letterman and Stern is Limbaugh.

That, beloved reader, is true fame, even if it is only for Andy Warhol's 15 minutes. Thoreau's "mass of men (may) lead lives of quiet desperation," but Rush Limbaugh is a reassurance that one day they will be restored to their pinnacle, disempowering the women, the minorities, the handicapped, the poor, the liberals and all of those other "misfits" whom Limbaugh refuses to include in his taxonomy of REAL Americans.

After that, the Rush and Ross shows are really variations of style on a demagogic theme.

Hope thrives on demagoguery. But Limbaugh does not fit the classic demagogic mold of James M. Curley, Theodore C. Bilbo, Father Coughlin, Eugene Talmadge or Joseph R. McCarthy.

There are two reasons. One, bigotry just isn't as fashionable any more. And two, Americans have become more sophisticated in their bigotry. Limbaugh helps them to enjoy a higher threshold of hate by clothing their bigotry in a mantra of cute euphemisms.

To Limbaugh, any woman who dares to assert her right to personhood is a "femi-nazi." Abortion rights advocates are anatomical embezzlers and blacks are, well... the slaves should never have been whipped.

The most comforting aspect of the Rush and Ross shows is the exorbitance of the American middle. Americans are essentially political centrists. Occasionally, they will stray from that center to momentarily embrace a demagogue or flirt with a third-party challenger.

Ross may have been dispatched, but Rush is going to be around for a LONG time. Bigot that he is, he is still a barrel of fun.

Many competing plans on table

WASHINGTON — Every place you turn on Capitol Hill these days there is yet another "comprehensive" health care reform plan being touted. Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, who has signed on to a plan authored by moderate Senate Republicans, says he expects some health care plan to emerge from Congress — it just won't much resemble the Clinton plan.

Over the coming months, as the health care debate revs up, there will be a great deal of talk about this plan or that plan. So here is a primer of the major plans now on the table:

McDermott Plan Named after Rep. Jim McDermott, D-Wash., this is the liberal Democratic plan that is closely modeled after the Canadian health care system. The plan would give all legal residents of the United States access to a basic benefits package that would cover — with a few minor exceptions, such as cosmetic surgery — all medically necessary treatments, including substance abuse.

The key to the plan: there would be just a single payer, the federal government or a quasi-federal agency. The plan would be paid for by substantial employer taxes and by other tax dollars. Individuals would pay nothing. Rigid price controls on doctors' and hospital fees would be imposed, and a total cap on medical care outlays would be established.

Gramm Plan Named after Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, this is the conservatives' plan. It does not seek the goal of universal coverage. Employers would be required to make available to employees a range of at least three kinds of health plans, including traditional types of fee-for-service coverage, a medical savings plan and the chance to buy expanded or additional coverage with their own money. No employer payments would be required, but employers could, as they do now, offer health care as a fully paid or partially paid benefit. Individuals would be given tax credits to pay for health care, and poorer individuals would be covered under Medicaid. The plan would allow for higher premiums for pre-existing conditions, but would mandate lower rates for people with "healthy" lifestyles. The plan anticipates that medical costs would decline because of competition. It would pay for the program by significant cuts in Medicare.

Cooper Plan Named for Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., this plan was authored by conservative Democrats and 17 moderate Republicans. It seeks to reform the current private-sector health care market. It would establish huge health care purchasing cooperatives that would bargain for health insurance plans and groups such as HMOs. The federal government would pay the premiums on individuals below a certain income level and would subsidize premiums of the working poor. The benefit levels would be set nationally by a health board. Health insurers would be prohibited from cancellations due to illness or for charging higher premiums for pre-existing conditions. Employers would be encouraged, but not required, to place employees in these cooperatives and to pay part or all of the premiums. The plan would be funded by raising $16 billion from higher taxes on corporations through elimination of deductibility of health care costs above the basic level, and by $6.5 billion from Medicare savings.

Michel Plan Named after House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., this plan was drawn up by the House GOP Health Care Task Force, led by Rep. J. Dennis Hastert, R-Ill. This plan is termed a "first step" toward health care reform, and not meant to be a comprehensive plan. It would require all employers to make available to employees at least one medical plan of a certain level of coverage and a tax free medical savings plan. A national board of state insurance commissioners would establish that basic benefits package. States could form voluntary insurance-buying cooperatives, which could negotiate for lower prices. Insurance surcharges to those with pre-existing conditions would be capped. Employers would not be required to pay premiums, but would be encouraged to do so. The plan would be financed by $17 billion in Medicare savings and changes in federal retirement rules.

Chafee Plan Named after Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., this is the plan of mainstream Senate Republicans, including Bob Dole. All individuals would be required to buy a basic benefits package that would provide for coverage of most doctors, hospital bills, drugs, mental health care and substance abuse treatment. The benefit levels would be established by a national commission. All employers above a certain level would be required to offer this minimum package, but would not be required to pay premiums. There would be no cap on premiums insurance companies could charge, but it is assumed that competition would drive costs down. There would also be no price-setting for doctors or hospitals. Individuals could deduct the full cost of insurance from taxes. The program would be funded through Medicare cuts.

So here is a primer of the major plans now on the table.

JACK ANDERSON

A town that won't give up

ALEXANDRIA, Mo. — As mayor of a flood-devastated ghost town, Bob Davis is remarkably upbeat — and thankful.

He has every reason not to be this Thanksgiving holiday:

This tight-knit town of 500 in the northeast corner of Missouri lost a valiant sandbag- and levee-battle with the Mississippi River on July 8. No one is yet able to live in Alexandria. It does have electricity, the houses are gutted, waterlogged floors inside have caved in, only 10 of the 120 homes and 62 trailers had flood insurance.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency had even advised the people to abandon the town.

"We were the first hit, and the worst hit," Davis says. Indeed, this blue-collar town got a double whammy from the record-setting flood of 1993: both the Des Moines River on its northern border and Mississippi on the east side busted the semi-circular ring of levees and drowned the town. Davis believes that at least three townspeople who died at flood-time from heart attacks were simply heartbroken at the loss and devastation. It could have been much worse.

For three weeks, the rivers ran through Alexandria. The depth was more than 20 feet. Davis knows because he has a flagpole about that tall, and the flag flying from it was waving underwater for days.

Prior to the levee breaks, Alexandria residents had two choices: work night and day to sandbag and fight the impending flood, or take all their possessions out. Most chose to fight. Many were lucky enough to save scrapbooks. Davis rescued his 1,400-piece pipe collection in time, including one Bing Crosby smoked.

The mayor drove our associate Dale Van Atta through the unlivable town in a can-cluttered car that Davis is pretty much living out of these days. All the houses are a dirty brown, with 5-foot high mud rings that will have to be sandblasted off. The yards and fields are dried and cracked. The brightest sights are the green street signs.

As he points out various sights in Alexandria, Davis calls a number of them "comical." Here's a shed that somehow was lifted up from a yard several blocks away and floated to its new location, over the high-wire fence around the property. How about those bleachers from the ballpark way over there? And as for "that red and white patio deck from over there, nobody's claimed it. Nobody knows where it comes from. Could be a town upriver."

The mayor was stoic about the fact that the town had scraped together $500,000 over the years and had just resurfaced their roads before the flood and were building a new community center. Davis thinks up to 200 of his people won't ever be coming back. But the majority will renovate and return.

It may not have had a grocery store, school or traffic light before. But the town that people fondly call "Alec" had its volunteer fire department, two churches and even an absurdly painted tavern called "The Purple Cow" on the river. It was a safe, friendly town.

And it's a very stubborn town. As far as the mayor is concerned, "We're not going to give up. We made the town a beautiful place before, and we will again."

But according to Davis, little thanks are due FEMA. When the town was in its most dire straits, FEMA was a phantom. Its officials said they couldn't spare any dollars for help while the town was submerged, not until they could inspect the homes and determine they had been damaged.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency had even advised the people to abandon the town.

Parents advised to use season to teach children to give from heart

By Associated Press

WINTER PARK — The Thanksgiving-to-Christmas season can be used to teach children to give more meaningful gifts from the heart rather than from the store, a psychologist says.

For instance, encouraging a child to rake the neighbors' yard or wash their car can mean much more than simply letting the child buy a present, says psychology Professor Sharon Carnahan, director of the Child Development Center at Rollins College.

"Children can think of ways they will help other people," she said in a recent news release. "They don't need to go to the store and buy something."

are many ways to create family-centered holidays that stress relationships and time spent together instead of marathon shopping sprees and kitchen duty.

For one thing, have children make their gift "wish list" the last week of Christmas and not the first of the month. Having them do it as late as possible will help take their focus away from toys and games.

Planned activities at home also can include board games and get-togethers involving everyone.

"Rather than watch endless holiday specials," she says, "choose one or two that are meaningful. Pop popcorn and fix drinks and make it a family gathering."

Busy people can always modify holiday traditions to focus on relationships.

"We really lose the whole focus of what these traditions are for," Carnahan says. "Mom spends hours in the kitchen, and that doesn't create the kind of loving memory we want our children to take with them."

Parents also can make their children aware of ways in which other faiths observe the holidays. A quick trip to the library will turn up traditions of Hanukkah or the African harvest festival of "Kwanzaa," for example.

Families also can incorporate traditions from their country of origin.

"Children love to learn about all the ways holidays are celebrated," she said.

Supper was 'souper'
Mayor Bettye Smith serves Don Iise at the annual Soup-R-Supper celebration at the Sanford Civic Center Wednesday as the Rev. Bruce Scott, Bonnie Schumacher, "Pop" Weaver and Brent Adamson assist. The supper raises money for the homeless by charging some more fortunate members of the community for soup kitchen fare.

grandmother to visit. He showed us a picture of her father at the age of five or six in front of the home. She also gave us a picture of their wedding in the living room. That picture now hangs along the staircase on the wall.

The Valerinos moved to Sanford in 1980 from Altamonte Springs. "We lived in a housing development," he said, "but old houses have so much personality; that's what attracted us to them. You can drive down a street of new houses and they all look the same." "I always liked old houses with lots of trees and big porches," said Valerino. "I used to drive through Winter Park and look at them." It was Valerino who suggested they might find a nice old house in Sanford.

Four fireplaces were present in their home. Valerino pointed out that all four share the same chimney. "We really only use the fireplace in the living room."

Valerino was constantly praising his wife's work on the house. "My wife is responsible for most of it," he said. "She's always looking for old things to go with the era of the home."

"The tax records started appearing in 1910," said Valerino. "We think it was built in the early 1900s." Some refurbishing had been done before the Valerinos moved in. They basically began by stripping the doors. The heat and air was also intact before the couple bought the house. "We've done a lot of work. It took a lot of time, yet my wife did a lot of it," said Valerino. "We did a little bit at a time and everywhere." The old wood was replaced on the outside of the house early on.

"There was green astro turf going up the stairs," he said. "We ripped it up, took the staples out of the wood and varnished it." Two stained glass windows grace the staircase, one at the top and one at the bottom. New wallpaper and painting was another project of the family.

The living room is where the family spends a lot of time.

Shelves are lined above and below the picturesque bay window. "The shelves were my wife's idea," added Valerino. "She also added the arches." This window radiates such warmth in the room with the pillows gracing the bottom shelves. Shelves have been put over the bay window too.

Fond memories were held by Valerino about kitchen remodeling. "With a 'chuckie' in said, "While we were remodeling the kitchen we plugged the refrigerator into an outlet in the foyer as you come in. We even ate in the foyer. The kitchen had a gas stove and it was replaced with an electric one." Other new appliances were also added to the kitchen. He recalled pulling up layers of linoleum put down with black tar glue. "The kitchen had linoleum over these beautiful wood floors," he said. "It was a mess but we did restore the wood floors there."

"The upstairs bedrooms needed to be redone," said Valerino. "They were repapered and repainted." The master bedroom had a replica of an antique canopy bed along with one of the four fireplaces. Another bedroom down the hall had a fireplace and a large antique Lincoln bedroom suite. This room also had a bay window which was directly above the one downstairs in the living room. Down the hall a bit was the fourth bedroom. The room was accented by a double set of French doors leading out to a screened balcony. The brass bed which is an antique complimented the spacious surroundings.

An antique replica toilet was the main attraction in the upstairs bathroom. Valerino spoke of a time he remembered five people trying to carry the claw foot tub. "It's an antique and very heavy," he said. "We were going to work on it downstairs but five of us couldn't budge it."

Over 30 windows add light to this beautiful house. A true walk down memory lane with its collection of antique frames holding pictures from years gone by.

Security

lifting which we don't spot in time."

At least one major retailer in the area was reported to have doubled the number of persons hired for store security today.

Shoppers however, are not the only persons who obtain items without paying for them. University of Florida sociologist Richard Hollinger suggests store owners and managers should couple good employee relations with new technology to combat the twin threats of shoplifting and employee theft.

Hollinger, who does an annual National Retail Security Survey of nearly 400 companies around the country, said retailers attribute about 40 percent of their annual inventory losses, or "shrinkage," to employee theft.

Much of this can be abated by improving relations with employees, he said. Shoplifting, meanwhile, accounts for about a third of retail losses each year but is more dependent on local economic and crime trends, he said.

The overall inventory shrinkage rate of 1.88 percent represents more than $20 billion a year to the $1.1 trillion U.S. retail industry, but shrinkage has actually decreased from the 1992 rate of 1.91, which is good news for managers, Hollinger said in a news release issued in time for the busiest shopping season of the year.

The annual survey of 23 different markets from jewelry to hardware has consistently found the better companies treat and compensate their employees, the lower both employee theft and shoplifting rates will be.

"This finding reinforces the long-standing observation that well-trained, motivated employees are the most crucial element in establishing an effective program of retail loss prevention," Hollinger said.

Although many of the 386 companies responding to the anonymous questionnaire this year said they intend to increase their use of sophisticated product-tracking technology and employee background checks, the survey also found that co-workers tipped off their employers in about 40 percent of the dishonest employee cases.

Moreover, nearly 60 percent of the shoplifting cases were discovered by employees.

already about 50 people waiting in line. By the end of the first hour or so, the store was jammed with shoppers."

Tomlin said today is what she considers as the second biggest shopping day of the holiday. "We will probably have the largest number on the Saturday before Christmas, as we've had in the past," she commented.

Kmart, 3639 Lake Emma Road in Lake Mary opened at 7 a.m. this morning. Manager Wayne Wheeler says he has had a steady influx of customers since the doors opened. "We've really stocked up for this day," he said, "and we expect an excellent showing of customers starting their holiday shopping."

One of the newest major retailers in the area is the Target Store, on Lake Mary Blvd. in Lake Mary. It started operations just four months ago. The Target Store opened at 7 a.m. this morning. By 8:30, manager Ron Sargent reported an excellent turnout of shoppers. "We are concentrating on some of the major hot items this year, especially in the area of toys."

Sargent said he expected the largest crowds of the day would be out this afternoon.

Sargent agreed with many other retail managers that the economy has strengthened and consumers are signaling their willingness to relax and spend a little. Chances are the season will turn out better for many stores than it appeared a few months ago.

Most of the gifts are likely to be bought in the last 10 days before Christmas, but shoppers will still pack the stores this weekend. Some got a jump on the season on Thanksgiving, as Kmart opened its stores.

Many retailers were also opening earlier than usual today with special deals for early shoppers. Some department stores offered plush toys at reduced prices for shoppers spending a specific amount, and others supplied gift wrap and other services.

But what consumers really want are discounts, and they'll get them. The recession made markdowns a way of life for stores, and price cuts are built into their holiday budgets.

Predictions for how the season will turn out have become a Christmas fixture, partly because the holidays are no longer the guaranteed money-maker they once were. Christmas 1992 was the first good holiday season for the retail industry in four years.

But the accounting and consulting firm Arthur Andersen said after surveying consumers that Americans are very confident and three-quarters will spend the same or more than they did last year on gifts, giving retailers a robust season.

Andersen competitor Deloitte & Touche found that consumers, for the most part, were not worried about higher taxes.

But America's Research Group, a consumer research firm, says 40 percent of Americans are uneasy about the economy and will spend less on gifts this year.

Regardless, consumers will be playing a cat-and-mouse game with retailers, delaying their spending and forcing nervous storeowners to cut prices even further.

Retail analysts who were pessimistic about the season during the summer, following months of disappointing sales, now are more upbeat. Salomon Brothers Inc. analyst Jeffrey Feiner said the so-so business that has prevailed until now should strengthen late in the season.

Edward Johnson, whose Johnson Redbook Service is closely-watched barometer of retail sales, predicts sales will be up 10 percent overall, maybe even more.

Information from Associated Press is contained in this report.

pieces daily. Wright said. The daily load is manageable for one fulltime clerk with a part-time helper, except Thursdays, she said. That's the day when the school board sends out 600 to 800 pieces to substitute teachers or vendors.

Wright said the weekly flood of mail strains the mail-room. But to hire another person would eliminate the savings, she said.

The county and the school board are working together to find cost-savings through consolidating services. The two agencies are considering building a joint administration center, possibly on Sanford's lakefront, to save construction costs.

that are designed to make the neighborhoods safer for all. Students, parents and community members are being asked to come to the meeting with suggestions on how each individual can help to make the area safer and how they can help one another achieve that goal.

Sutton said the staff, parents and students of the school want to be "a strong voice in making Sanford a safe place to live and in making the walking routes safe places for students to commute to and from school."

Some of the neighborhoods around the school are known for violence and drug activity and the school considers them hazardous for the students.

Sutton said the school has set a goal of creating a safe school and a safe community and he believes the Neighborhood Watch group is a strong step in that direction.

He said that anyone who is willing to lend a helping hand and who wants to get involved should attend the meeting.

"DADDY'S WHISPER"

Once again, Fall crashes in,
Summer's gone, and I wait for my friend.
Leaves fall like angels that descend.
Thoughts of you, lie deep within.
My heart so weak, this time of year,
Memories of you, are still so clear,
I hold your picture inside my heart,
we are never really, far apart.
Your cry, it echoes throughout the hall,
I've often thought I heard your call.
I kissed your brother and tucked him in,
Calls of "Daddy" did then begin.
I heard your whisper late that night,
I opened your door with all my might.
I stood so nervous, frightened within,
Whispers of "Daddy", I heard again.
To hear your whisper, to hear your call,
You know that Daddy, would give it all.
For I live my life with dreams of you,
Hoping someday "Daddy's Whisper", will all come true.

I Miss You, Baby Jared,
Love Daddy

Chicken pox vaccine on horizon

By LAURAN NBERGAARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Dr. Jo White sent her son to play with a friend who had chicken pox, testing whether an experimental vaccine would protect him from the itchy rite of childhood. It did.

By next spring, all U.S. children may be so lucky, as the government gets set to approve the nation's first vaccine against a disease considered more a nuisance than a killer even though it claims more than 90 lives a year.

"Some people have wondered if the gain is worth the cost of a vaccine for chicken pox," said Dr. Samuel Katz, a pediatrician at Duke University Medical Center. "But parents are knocking on the door saying they want this vaccine."

About 3.9 million Americans, mostly children, get chicken pox every year. Caused by the highly contagious varicella virus, it typically just causes severe itching and rash.

But about 9,000 people develop complications ranging from blood infections to brain damage. An average of 92 died each year from 1987 to 1991. Children with weak immune systems and adults are most at risk.

Christopher Chinna, 12, was one of those victims. The steroids the North Carolina boy was taking for a severe asthma attack suppressed his immune system, allowing chicken pox to shut down his organs one by one.

"It would have been kinder to shoot him

It would have been kinder to shoot him in the head than the way he died. If we had had a vaccine, he would be here today."

-Rebecca Cole

In the head than the way he died," said his mother, Rebecca Cole, who has lobbied for vaccine approval since Christopher's death in 1988. "If we had had a vaccine, he would be here today."

Mrs. Cole's wait may be almost over. The Food and Drug Administration is in the final stages of investigating Varivax, a chicken pox vaccine developed by Merck & Co. Approval is expected by spring.

Doctors predict Varivax will cut chicken pox to 240,000 cases a year with only four deaths. And a study sponsored by the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention found Varivax would cost $157 million a year but would save almost $700 million a year in medical bills and work lost by parents of sick children.

Japan and Europe have used a version of the vaccine successfully since the mid-1980s.

But its development here has been very slow. Doctors dalked giving healthy children a live vaccine for a usually mild illness. Others questioned whether it was needed when less than half the nation's preschoolers are inoculated against more serious diseases like measles.

Varivax is made from a weakened varicella virus that essentially exposes someone to very mild chicken pox, just enough to build antibodies to fight it. "You couldn't have a risky vaccine given for this type of disease," said White, a Merck scientist. "I gave it to my kids. It works."

Merck has test vaccinated 11,000 people since 1981. Almost every child showed immediate immunity; adults needed two doses. About 3 percent developed a few chicken pox lesions, and a few had fever and soreness, typical side effects of any vaccine.

In anticipation of FDA approval, a CDC panel has already drafted proposed guidelines for Varivax that recommend inoculation at age 1.

If approved, Varivax eventually would be incorporated into the one shot now given for measles, mumps and rubella, said Katz, who heads the CDC panel.

It also may carry a bonus: protection against shingles, a very painful nerve condition that strikes decades after people recover from chicken pox.

Scientists don't know if Varivax will protect for life — it hasn't been around long enough.

"But if it doesn't, we'll just give adults a booster," Katz said. "We'll see a rush for this vaccine. Parents are tired of chicken pox."

Mrs. Cole hopes Katz is right. "This is the disease that's made fun of. Mothers don't know. I didn't know, that it can be absolutely horrible when it's out of control," she said. "This vaccine is going to save lives."

Clinton's invisible adviser steps briefly onstage

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Many a Thanksgiving traveler owes something to Bruce Lindsey, even if they've never heard of him.

He's the short, neat, mild-looking guy with glasses who's always hovering near President Clinton. The one whose name rarely makes it into the photo caption, and that's just the way he's wanted it.

Clinton blew Lindsey's cover this week when he said his Arkansas buddy "had a lot to do with" bringing the American Airlines strike to an end.

The public mention — the first from Clinton, according to Lindsey's wife — could signal Lindsey's emergence as an out-front player. At any rate, his subterranean profile was briefly visible above ground.

Until recently, Lindsey held the double title of White House personnel director and senior adviser. With most jobs filled, he's dropped the first but kept the second, which has always better reflected his central role in the administration's affairs.

His White House quarters are closer than anyone else's to the Oval Office. He's been traveling with Clinton as candidate and president for two years, delivering good news and bad, heading off crises, controlling damage. Just last week, he accompanied Clinton to the West Coast. "He's like a family doctor," said longtime friend Skip Rutherford. "He diagnoses most of the problems before the world even knows they are problems. And he solves most of them before they ever become problems."

It was Lindsey, a labor lawyer, who called the White House shots on the American strike. He talked to both sides and decided Clinton should talk to them. The president's reassurances clinched the deal, just in time to avert airport chaos over the holidays.

And just in time to get Lindsey himself home to his wife and two daughters on the American flight he'd booked to Little Rock.

Lindsey, an avid pianist with a jazzy red sports car, has known Clinton and supported his career since the 1970s. When Clinton ran for president, Lindsey went through the rough times with him — not only physically but emotionally.

In New Hampshire, during Clinton's bleakest hours, Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., called to find out who was with the candidate. Told it was Lindsey, he said, "Everything's fine, then."

Lindsey's formal title was campaign director, but that barely began to describe what he did. He was a window on Clinton's habits, whereabouts, thoughts and feelings. He was keeper of the schedule, watchdog of the photo op, wry commentator on the campaign and the candidate.

Asked once about Clinton's ingly impossible amount of weight in one campaign week, Lindsey deadpanned: "Different scales, different cities."

Another time, describing the type person the president-elect would put in his Cabinet, Lindsey said, "He wants people who ... go ahead and disagree with him when they disagree."

He could have been describing himself. Pryor once explained his faith in Lindsey this way: "Bruce tells the truth."

Lindsey's family never moved to Washington. He lives in a room in a Georgetown house and has seen his wife, Bev, only twice since September, when she became director of the state Department of Arkansas

She keeps close tabs on him, however, and became worried a few weeks ago when White House colleagues told her he had been losing weight.

She flew in and asked what was going on. Turns out his teenagers had been teasing him about getting fat, and he'd decided to lose 15 pounds.

Those who know Lindsey best say he's doing exactly what he wants to be doing, and enjoying it. "The most telling thing is that he's kept a sense of humor," says his wife. "He still laughs and has fun."

The future of Christmas trees lies in cloning, scientists say

By The Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION, Texas — One good Christmas tree deserves another — an another.

The Texas Agricultural Experiment Station is cloning pines, which the agency says will allow growers to save time by breeding a couple of good trees, then multiplying them.

"The cloned tree is the future for Christmas trees in the South," said tree grower Don Kachtik.

"We only have one type of tree that grows well in Southeast Texas, the Virginia pine, so we need a good one."

Kachtik, who was among the first to begin growing the Virginia pines in Texas soil, says he has several hundred perfect pines ready to be cut for the holidays.

Kachtik says a "good" Christmas tree must have a straight trunk that slips easily into a stand and lots of limbs to hold ornaments.

Growers also say their trees must grow rapidly and be immune to disease and insects.

This year's crop was potted in April 1990, then placed in a greenhouse for 6-9 months. In all, about 450 cloned trees are growing commercially in Texas, but not all are ready for trimming this year, Kachtik said.

Researchers expect more cloned Christmas trees to be available in coming years as growers decide to pay more for the cloned seedlings in order to get a more marketable tree.

The traditional Virginia pine seedling costs less than 7 cents compared to the current cost of 75 cents to $1.50 for a cloned tree ready to plant.

However, it's not likely that the cloned trees will cost consumers more, said Dr. Mike Walterscheid, forest specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Growers think they'll be able to sell 95 percent of the trees they plant using clones seedlings, Walterscheid said. "Right now, only 60-70 percent are sold because the others are ugly or they die from disease or something."

Brown's second at Sectional

JACKSONVILLE — The Level VI girl's team from Brown's Gymnastics of Altamonte Springs turned in a good performance to finish second in the Sectional meet in Jacksonville last weekend. In the 8-11 age group, Caroline Thompson finished third on the bars, fourth on the floor and fifth in both the vault and beam to wind up second in the All-Around with a 35.85. Also placing were Christy Shepard (first on vault, sixth on floor), Emily Cunningham (second on beam, eighth on bars) and Briana DePalo (seventh on floor, ninth on bars). Placing in the 12-14 age group were Rachel Kolb (third on beam and floor, fourth on vault and bars), third All-Around with a 35.40, Alexis Ford (first on bars, second on floor, fifth on vault), fifth All-Around with 34.85, and Nicole Thomas (sixth on bars, eighth on vault and floor), eighth All-Around with a 33.85. The next meet will be the State Championships on December 18th in South Florida.

AROUND THE NATION

Miami converts second chance

IRVING, Texas — Pete Stoyanovich's second-chance field goal after a blunder on a blocked kick gave Miami a bizarre 16-14 win over Dallas on a snowy Thanksgiving Day. Leon Lett, whose hotdog play in the Super Bowl let Buffalo's Don Beebe catch him from behind and stop a sure touchdown, touched the ball after a blocked 41-yard field goal try. The Dolphins' Jeff Dellenbach recovered on the Cowboys' 1 with three seconds to play. Stoyanovich, with his teammates scraping away snow to clear a kicking area, then hit the winner through the snowy mist from 19 yards out on a day better fit for tobogganing than football at Texas Stadium.

Greyhounds driven by both of last year's losses

From Staff Reports

LONGWOOD — Last year, the Lyman High School girls soccer team suffered all of two losses: the first ended a 46-game win streak and the other ended the Greyhounds' season. The two losses, both of which came in overtime, are etched in the minds of the returning Lyman players. "Our ultimate goal is the state championship," said Lyman coach Gary Barnett. "But playing in this area, you never know what can happen. The major difference between this year and last year is that the girls are hungry for that (the state championship)." The Greyhounds, state champions in 1991 and 1992, were favored to make it three in a row last year but were upset by Lake Howell 3-2 in overtime after leading 2-0 with less than 15 minutes left in the game. "They still remember the loss to Lake Howell," said Barnett. "There's a definite cringe whenever anyone mentions the losses to Seabreeze (3-1 in overtime in the finals of the Pizza Hut tournament) or Lake Howell. They remember it. It's still fresh, remembering what the loss was like. "It's not that we lost to Lake Howell or Seabreeze, but that it had been a long time since we lost an important game. For this season, it's a very good thing. The girls learned from it." This season, Lyman starts nine returners from last year's squad. On Wednesday night, the Greyhounds ran their record to 3-0 with a 2-0 shutout of the Lake Brantley Patriots. It was the third shutout of the season for goalkeeper Cheryl Roberts and the Lyman defense. "It was a great win," said Barnett. "It was our first big game. After two high scoring games, this was a test from a traditional rival. Lake Brantley had already played a couple of tough games. But the girls were really focused. They didn't need much instruction. They've all been there and know what it takes."

"Lake Brantley has a lot of good, young players. They're in the process of adjusting to a new situation, to playing the high school game. They have quality players and did a number of quality things. As the season goes on, the games will be even closer."

Danya Harris gave Lyman a 1-0 lead when she scored on an assist from Danielle Garrett with 7:15 remaining in the first half. Garrett made it 2-0 when she converted on a pass from Harris with 7:35 left in the game.

Lyman outshot Lake Brantley 25-7 and had a 9-2 advantage in corner kicks, forcing Patriot goalkeeper Alyssa O'Brien to make 12 saves. Roberts had to make two saves.

Lake Brantley won the junior varsity match, 2-1.

Nov. 3-0, Lyman will play again next Tuesday, when the Greyhounds will host Bishop Moore. Lake Brantley will host Lake Mary in a Seminole Athletic Conference match next Wednesday.

On to the 2nd round

Seminole and Lake Brantley look advantage of all of their available weapons in their wins of the first round of the state playoffs last Friday night. For Seminole, that included Donald Hunt (No. 6, left) tossing a halfback option pass to Cliff Branch for the game-winning touchdown in Seminole's 17-14 victory over Merritt Island. Lake Brantley employed a field goal from Tim LeCroix (No. 32, below) and a two-touchdown performance by Jeff Butler (No. 35) to eliminate Jacksonville-Mandarin 36-14.

Tribe, Pats host playoffs

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

SANFORD — Are the butterflies gone?

Last Friday night, both the Seminole and Lake Brantley High School football teams were understandably nervous, suffering through slow starts before posting impressive wins in the Sub-Regional round of the 1993 Florida High School Activities Association state playoffs.

Now, with the first-game jitters out of the way, the Tribe and Patriots hope to put together complete games as they host their respective regional championship games tonight at 7:30 p.m.

Tonight, the Tribe will host St. Petersburg-Dixie Hollins at Thomas E. Whitgham Stadium in the second round of the Class 4A state playoffs while the Patriots will host Lynn Haven-Mosely at Tom Storey Field in the Class 5A state playoffs' second round.

Once the head-to-head games settled down last week, they both turned to what they do best to win their first-round games.

Seminole (9-2) used a nearly impenetrable defense and a little offensive trickery during a 14-point fourth quarter rally to trim eighth-ranked Merritt Island, 17-14.

Lake Brantley (also 9-2) got another 200-plus yard performance from the state's leading rusher, fullback Jeff Butler, to better Jacksonville-Mandarin, 36-11.

Dixie Hollins (11-0 and ranked fourth in the final Florida Sports Writers Association's Class 4A state poll) advanced to tonight's game with a 34-33 triumph over Tarpon Springs last Friday.

Mosely (9-2 and ranked 10th in the final FSWA Class 5A state poll) already has one big road victory to its credit, topping Lake City-Columbia 24-13 in Lake City last week to advance to this evening's contest with Lake Brantley.

The winner of the Seminole-Dixie Hollins game will play the Palatka/Springfield-Rutherford winner in the Class 4A Lower Bracket Semi-State Semifinal next Friday. The Lake Brantley-Mosely winner will battle the Orlando-Evans/Bradenton-Manatee victor in the Class 5A Lower Bracket Semi-State Semifinal championship.

Governor's Cup set for 28th running Saturday

By PAUL MARSEOLIA
Special to the Herald

NEW SMYRNA BEACH — One of Florida's most prestigious short track races returns to New Smyrna Speedway this Saturday, Nov. 27, with the staging of the 28th annual Governor's Cup 200-lap Late Model championship.

Many of Florida's top Late Model drivers are expected to be on hand for the $28,000 event, which is expected to get underway about 9 p.m. at the half-mile paved oval.

David Rogers, the winningest Late Model driver in New Smyrna Speedway history, is among the pilots pre-registered for the event, which is hailed as the Super Bowl of Late Model races in Florida.

Also expected to compete are World Series of Asphalt Late Model champion Pete Orr and three-time FASCAR (Florida Association of Stock Car Automobile Racing) Late Model champion David Russell.

Other local pilots expected to be in the field are Dick Anderson, Daniel Keene, Bruce Lawrence, Rick Elwood, Jack Cook, Tony Ponder, Rob Underwood, Ronnie Burkett, Wayne Anderson, Curtis Miller, Greg Froemming, Jimmy Britts, Jimmy Sills, Granny Tatroe, and Hal Perry.

Several out-of-town drivers also will be in the field, including Gary Balough and Randy Weaver.

The Governor's Cup dates back to 1965, when it was hosted at the old Golden Gate Speedway in Tampa under Frank Drey's promotion. Haydon Burns, the governor of Florida at the time, arranged for the trophy and was the first of several Florida governors to attend the event.

The race serves as a memorial to Al Keller, a Buffalo, N.Y., transplant who successfully campaigned stock cars, Midgets, and Modifieds throughout Florida.

Keller scored victories in a Modified owned by Drey at several Tampa area tracks such as Plant City, Phillips Field (near the University of Tampa), and Speedway Park.

In 1961, Keller scored a fifth-place finish in the Indianapolis 500 after opening the race from the 26th starting position. He died later that year in Arizona.

The Governor's Cup was run at Golden Gate Speedway in Tampa until 1983. After a five-year layoff, it was resumed at New Smyrna Speedway, where it has remained ever since and continues to draw some of the Speedway's top crowds of the season.

The winner of Saturday's FASCAR-sanctioned event will receive $5,000. An additional $1,500 will be awarded in lap money. The driver setting the fastest qualifying time will receive $100. The halfway leader also will receive $100.

Time trials get underway at 6 p.m. with racing action scheduled to start at 8 p.m., beginning with the supporting divisions which include Limited Late Models, Modifieds, Sportsman, Bombers, Mini-Stocks, and Run-Abouts.

Kendall Oil and Tilton Engineering are the major sponsors of the event. Other sponsors include: Horsen Around Farms, Russell Automotive, Action Performance, Race Car Fabrications, Late Model Digest, Boyd Engines, One Off Motorsports, DeLand Hi Performance, Southard School of Racing, and Hamke Racing.

A 50-lap Governor's Cup tune-up will be run Friday night at Orlando Speedworld.

For additional information, call the Speedway at (904) 427-4129.

Christmas trees in Florida

Today, most trees are plantation grown

Originally, the family Christmas tree came from the forest. Today, however, most Christmas trees are plantation grown in cultivated stands to provide consumers with the best possible trees.

While growing, Christmas trees provide many environmental benefits. They serve as wildlife habitat, increase soil stability, and provide a valuable and aesthetically pleasing improvement to the land.

Each year, the young trees must be shaped or pruned to encourage the tree to branch more quickly and gradually achieve the full bushy appearance people prefer in their Christmas trees.

During the three to six years it takes to grow into a well-shaped six to eight foot tree, the Christmas tree faces many hazards. Trees can suffer from too little sun, too much or too little rain, destruction by rodents, insects, disease, hail, fire, or by being overgrown by brush, vines, or weeds.

Many tree farmers allow customers to choose and cut their own Christmas trees. This has helped renew the tradition of the entire family selecting and cutting the Christmas tree.

Today's Christmas tree producer works hard to provide quality trees to market in the freshest condition possible. Many growers say that the hard work is all worthwhile when they see a happy family and the excitement of children as they help select the family's Christmas tree.

Nationally, about 30 million real trees are used for Christmas annually. They are grown on farms and plantations in Florida and in almost every other state and Canada.

Christmas tree harvesting does not upset the ecology. More than 85 million trees were planted this spring by Christmas tree growers to replace the 30 million trees that will be harvested this year. The rule of thumb is to plant two to three trees for every tree cut.

CONSUMER FOCUS

BARBARA HUGHES/GREGG

Purchasing a homegrown Florida tree is good for the environment because less fuel is used in transportation. This also supports the farmers of the state and boosts Florida's economy.

A tree that is moist when brought into the home and is kept moist by a "Jing" water through the base of the trunk will not be a fire hazard.

People still love the tradition of real, natural trees in their homes for the holidays. This tradition dates back to 1500 A.D. The first Christmas trees were decorated with roses cut from paper, apples, wafers, sugar candies and candles. Later, cookies in the shapes of angels, hearts, and animals replaced the wafers. Today's decorations vary with individual tastes. They include special ornaments, garlands and bright lights.

Natural Christmas trees are used everywhere in both home and commercial decoration. They are used in all types of indoor and outdoor displays.

Trees are recyclable! After the holidays, don't throw your natural tree away. Here are several suggestions on what to do with your tree after the holidays:

Place the Christmas tree in the garden or backyard and use it as a bird feeder and sanctuary. Fresh orange slices or strung popcorn will attract the birds and they can sit in the branches for shelter.

A Christmas tree is biodegradable: its branches may be removed, chipped, and used as mulch in the garden. Many communities utilize a wood chipper to make mulches for flowerpots. Once the branches are removed, the tree trunk can be chipped for firewood.

Large quantities of used trees make effective sand and soil erosion barriers.

Sunk into fish ponds, trees make excellent refuge and feeding areas.

Woodworking hobbyists can make a multitude of items including buttons, gavels, and candlestick holders from the trunks of recycled Christmas trees.

According to the Florida Christmas Tree Association, the tree farms in Seminole County are:

• Blosser Christmas Tree Farm, Brian and Shannon Flynn, 775 Pine Way, Sanford, 32773 (407)773-1037 — from Sanford south on Sanford Avenue, pass railroad tracks and turn left on Pine Way, ¼ mile on right — Sand Pine, Red Cedar, Leyland Cypress.

• Williams Tree Farm, Ted Williams, 4700 Paola Road, Sanford, 32771 (407)322-2982 — exactly one mile west of golf course on 25th St. (Paola Road) — Red Cedar, Leyland Cypress.

For more information about Christmas trees, or other tree farms, contact: Florida Christmas Tree Association, 1-800-554-TREE, or 1-800-554-8733.

Barbara Hughes/Gregg is director of the Seminole County Extension Service. Inquiries may be directed to her at the service, 250 W. County Home Road, Sanford, FL 32773 or phone 323-2500, Ext. 5556.

'Lazy bum' may need a dose of 'tough love'

DEAR MARY: I can't figure out where we went wrong. Our son is 28 years old and really the only way to describe him is "a lazy bum." He can't hold a job for more than a few months; he's sloppy and dirty about his personal belongings and grooming; he can't maintain a decent relationship with a woman, and frankly, I'm sick and tired of providing free room and board.

He acts more like a 15-year-old than a grown man. He always talks about what he's going to do, and about his bad luck, but I think he's his own worst enemy. I'm telling you, this is not the way he was raised; we're hard-working, middle class people who tried to teach our kids the right values.

Two of them are fine, but this one has been smoking marijuana on and off since he was in high school, and while I used to think it was no big deal and he was just taking longer to grow up than his brothers, I'm beginning to wonder if maybe he's done some real damage to himself.

SICK AND TIRED DAD
DEAR SICK AND TIRED: You have every reason to be sick and tired of carrying this perpetually adolescent man. I don't know if he's done some serious damage to himself with the marijuana and whatever else he may be using, but I do know that it's time for you to stop providing a safety net every time he falls.

One of the problems caused by adolescent abuse of alcohol and other drugs is what is sometimes known as "amotivational syndrome." One of the primary characteristics involves stunted psycho-social development, so you may be correct in your observation that he behaves more like a 15-year-old than a grown man.

Overcoming these problems is

DRUG COUNSELOR

neither quick nor easy. But it is possible if he wants it. In the meantime, you'd better start practicing some "tough love" in your expectations for his behavior if he is to stay in your home. You may need to seek the help of a trained counselor to establish your expectations and consequences. He's had enough time to grow up. We don't know if you can be a part of the solution, but you can at least stop enabling the problem.

Legionnaires make history

Jim Smith (left), commander of the American Legion Post 53, Sanford, welcomes Bruce Thlesen, national American Legion Commander from Indianapolis, who paid an official visit to the Sanford American Legion Tuesday. During the Sanford Legion's 75-year history, this is the first time a national commander has visited the post.

Sister has regrets over not attending brother's wedding

DEAR ABBY: This is the first time I have ever written to you, but I felt I had to share my experience for "Confirmed Bachelor," who wrote saying that he was gay and that at the time of his sister's wedding, he was not invited to any other family gatherings because others disapproved of his "lifestyle." When I was 18, I was asked to be a bridesmaid at my brother's wedding. At the time, I couldn't afford to buy the required dress, so I declined.

My brother and I have grown even closer over the years. It is now 20 years later, and I realize I made a terrible mistake by not being in his wedding, as it must have hurt him. I can't change the past, but I can tell "Confirmed Bachelor" that his sister must love him dearly to ask him to "give her away" since their father is deceased.

He should consider it an honor to have been asked, and he should go to the wedding and give his sister away out of his love and respect for her. I guarantee he won't be sorry — and he won't be like me, looking back and wishing he had...

DEAR BEEN THERE: I recently heard again from "Confirmed Bachelor." He said he decided to go to his sister's wedding and accept the honor of giving the bride away since their father was deceased.

He said he was cordially accepted by all in the wedding party with the exception of the groom — but in the end, his new brother-in-law thawed out, and a good time was had by all.

DEAR ABBY: I am a single mother of two children. I have a full-time job that is very uncertain. There have been rumors that my place of employment may go out of business. Many employees have been laid off. I also deliver newspapers, beginning at 3 a.m., seven days a week, rain, snow and holidays.

Newspaper carriers have to provide their own transportation and pay for their own supplies. If a customer fails to pay for his or her newspaper, the carrier has to pay for it.

Most carriers of morning papers are hard-working, conscientious workers, delivering about 250 newspapers in the wee hours of the morning, in order to get the paper to subscribers between 5 a.m. and 7 a.m.

Abby, restaurant servers, hairdressers, luggage carriers — even doormen — receive tips from their customers, but very few newspaper carriers ever get tipped.

Perhaps if you run this, it will be a gentle reminder to those who otherwise would never give it a thought. Thank you.

SINGLE WORKING MOM
DEAR WORKING MOM: A "reminder" can't hurt — but how about enclosing a modest "happy holiday" card (with a return address) in your newspapers?

THE PRICE OF "FREE" WILL

You might say that "the price of free will" is a contradiction in terms...but is it? Slowly, then increasingly faster, this gleaming, blurring jet-propelled bird skims the runway, until, with a shriek, and then a roar, it thrusts skyward, able to transport us anywhere in the world within hours. Emmeshed in the magic of the moment, some might feel drawn to follow an impulse, buy a ticket and "leave our cares behind". It is possible, you know. Plastic credit is easy enough to obtain, as most of us realize. Yet, if we use our free will inappropriately, we still pay the price. Truly, God Himself gave us free will...and the ability to discern what is practical from what is possible. By worshipping God and meditating upon His Word, God will show us the way. Follow His will. Your destination is sure...and God has paid the price.

Consult a specialist about peptic disease

PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been diagnosed with a hiatal hernia and an inflammation of the esophagus. I'm on Zantac three times a day, yet the burning sensation is still there every day, all day. Should I still have this much burning while the medication is coupled with a diet to avoid heartburn?

DEAR READER: You are suffering from a common malady called gastroesophageal reflux disease, the backwash of irritating stomach contents into the delicate esophagus. This causes chest pain, heartburn, gas, and other digestive abnormalities. GERD usually responds to H2 blockers: drugs, such as Zantac or Prilosec, that reduce the formation of stomach acid.

If medicine has not relieved your symptoms, you should be examined by a gastroenterologist, who will examine your esophagus with a lighted tube to detect the presence of Barrett's esophagus, a pre-malignant lesion that may accompany GERD, for which surgery may be necessary.

In my opinion, anyone with symptoms caused by peptic disease (ulcers or hiatal hernia) that do not respond to customary therapy should be under the care of such a specialist.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Six years ago I took chemotherapy for lymphoma cancer. Luckily it worked well, although the medication has caused nerve damage in my feet and ankles. I suffer with horrible pains, burning and soreness almost constantly. The problem seems worse at bedtime. My doctor feels pain blocks will not help, and I'm hoping you can give me some advice on what, if anything, might provide relief.

DEAR READER: This is a difficult problem because although the chemotherapy may have affected the nerves in your feet and ankles, you needed the treatment. Therefore, you're stuck with a trade-off.

Neuropathy (nerve damage) can obviously be helped by pain medication, such as codeine and Vicodin. On occasion, anti-depressant drugs (such as Elavil) may, for unknown reasons, relieve symptoms such as yours.

Ask your doctor to prescribe

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

When playing bridge, you think about bids and plays. But sometimes you must also enter the mind of an opponent and ask yourself what he is thinking. That is true on today's deal, taken from the latest issue of the French magazine Bridge Plus.

To test yourself, look only at the north and east hands. Against four spades, your partner leads the heart seven, queen, ace, four. Plan the defense.

As the editor, Gilles Queran, says, your three-heart bid has a lot to commend it opposite a passed partner. It doesn't hurt to mix up your pre-empts because the opponents will find it more difficult to read the cards.

You can see three potential defensive tricks. But if South has his three-spade bid, your partner must be looking at a Yarborough. Therefore, you must assume partner has led a singleton. Was your plan to return the heart jack at trick two, asking partner to switch to a diamond after (hopefully) ruffing? Then, knowing partner started with only one spade, did you exit with a minor?

Good, but not good enough against an expert South will ask himself: "Why didn't East play a third heart at trick four, hoping West could ruff with a higher spade than dummy's 10?" The answer is obvious: East knows that West cannot ruff higher than the 10. South will win trick four in the dummy and take two spade finesses to pick up your Q-J and make his contract.

The solution? Ask for a club switch by leading the heart three at trick two. South will think you are angling for a ruff and will cash the spade ace: one down.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Nov. 27, 1993

Something you've always treated as a hobby could be put on a paying basis in the year ahead. However, it may require someone with marketing expertise to get it out to the public.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today if you have to perform some distasteful assignments, make every effort to see they are done properly. If not, they will have to be reworked and could be even more distasteful. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There could be a good reason for it today if companions resist your methods and procedures for doing things. Before getting miffed, see why they're opposed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)

Your probabilities for achieving your objectives today look very good. The problem is you might go after something you think you want, only to discover you don't once you've attained it.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't be intimidated today by rank or trappings of power. Just because someone has a title, it doesn't make this person automatically smarter than you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Things should work out rather well for you today, but they might not be optimum or exactly as you desire. Be grateful for anything that puts you on the plus side of the ledger.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today is a day of give-and-take. If you want concessions from others, you must be prepared to make compromises and concessions yourself. Nothing is apt to move until you do.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Friction with co-workers is a possibility today if the duties and responsibilities aren't equally distributed. Each should see how much he/she can do, not how little.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A friend won't appreciate it today if you make light of his/her problem. This matter is extremely serious as far as your pal is concerned, so treat it with understanding.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Do the best you can today, but don't expect things from yourself you know you can't deliver. If your expectations are unrealistic, it will dilute your effectiveness.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In order to be an effective salesperson today, your presentation must be sincere. You're not likely to have any luck selling things or ideas in which you don't believe.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If something should be readjusted in an a business arrangement you recently made, don't let too much time elapse before correcting it. The calendar isn't your ally.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be consistent in your methods and procedures today if you hope to achieve your objectives. Doing things in fits and starts may look impressive but will prove to be unproductive.
