One dies in holiday boating accident

By Nick Pfeiffauf
Staff Writer

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — The Altamonte Springs Fire Department reported two separate boating accidents Saturday, both involving personal watercrafts. One resulted in the death of a young woman.

The first accident occurred at approximately noon when firemen responded to a call on Bear Lake Road. According to witnesses, two teen-age females had been involved in a collision between their personal watercraft and a dock.

Rescue crews respond to two incidents, hours apart, on Bear Lake

Units from both Altamonte Springs and Seminole County responded and determined the injuries were possibly life threatening. Two helicopters were dispatched to take the victims to Orlando Regional Medical Center. The driver of the personal watercraft, Heather Stansfield, 18, was pronounced dead a short time after she arrived at the hospital. The passenger was treated and released the same day.

At approximately 3:45 p.m. Saturday, another call was received, this one from Balm Beach Drive, also on Bear Lake.

Witnesses said a 30-year old man who was not immediately identified, had been riding on a personal watercraft when he lost control. Again, both city and county units responded.

Firefighters and paramedics said they were surprised that two accidents would happen at the same lake, in such a short time.

When emergency workers arrived, they reported finding the man had suffered severe leg injuries and possible internal injuries. The man was also transported to Orlando Regional Medical Center.

The Florida Fresh Water Game and Fish Commission is investigating the accidents, since both took place on a waterway.

Election officials expecting an average turnout for Primary Day

By Nick Pfeiffauf
Staff Writer

Seminole County Supervisor of Elections Sandra Goard is predicting a 20 percent turnout at the polls in the county today.

"That's about normal for the first primary," she commented.

"The turnout has been running generally from 20 to 22 percent for the first primary," she continued. "One of the highest we've had was 28 percent, but that was before the National Voter Registration Act took place."

She explained that after the act came into existence, the number of actual registered voters was better known, and the percentages were lower.

"They probably would have been lower than expected before that, but we didn't have any way of knowing," she said.

Looking back at other elections, in the 1994 first primary, when Florida was selecting a governor, the Seminole County turnout was 24.4 percent. Four years later, also for the gubernatorial primary, the turnout was 13.4 percent.

She said the last presidential election first primary showed a 33 percent turnout, which was better than usual.

Statistics revealed this past May indicated a total of 172,657 registered voters in Seminole County. Of that number 57,716 were Democrats, 65,361 were Republicans, and 29,580 were all others.

SANFORD — The candidates are shaking a few more hands, kissing babies and buying advertisements. Only a few more hours until the polls close for Tuesday's Primary voting in Seminole County.

Supervisor of Elections Sandy Goard told her staff to report for work by 5:45 this morning.

Workers were dispatched to 122 polling places — some at churches, libraries, schools, country clubs and Salvation Army centers.

Police search for Radio Shack burglar

By Nick Pfeiffauf
Staff Writer

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Officers and investigators at the Altamonte Springs Police Department are looking for a burglar who stole a Radio Shack store.

"We're currently busy with the morning," explained Michael Nelson, public information officer with the department.

One case dates back two weeks, but police only received information in connection with the case late Thursday. Nelson said the store was called Radio Shack, 388 South SR-434 in regard to a burglary. Officers found the store's window broken out and some equipment lying on the floor.

Various electronic equipment valued at approximately $2,340 was taken from the business. Nelson said the store's video tape of the event was only made available yesterday. The surveillance tape shows the suspect as a black male, 5 feet 10 to 6 feet tall, weighing approximately 200 pounds. He was wearing a white shirt and dark pants. Investigators are now following up on several leads in the case.

but are asking anyone with information to contact the Altamonte Springs Police at 407-571-8291.

At around this morning, Nelson said officers began looking for a burglar who stole from the store.

Hugo Arroyo, 67, a Hispanic male, was reported missing Thursday morning at 11:30 from Life Care Center on Oriole Avenue. He was last seen walking westbound on Oriole. Officers said they were concerned because he is a stroke victim, walks with a shuffle and requires medication for hypertension. They hoped he could be located because he was believed to be wearing an Altamonte Springs Police Department Citizens at Risk bracelet.

The Orlando Police Department contacted Altamonte Springs to report they had located Mr. Arroyo through the bracelet. He has since been returned to Altamonte Springs and reunited with his daughter.

Nelson said anyone wishing to learn more about the Citizens at Risk program and the bracelet, which is free of charge, should contact PFC Paul Machovina at 407-571-8291.

the American Farriers Association which has a national membership of more than 2,200.

According to Cleland, a total of 20 full-time and 10 part-time farriers work in Volusia, Seminole, and Orange counties.

VanDusen said he doesn't worry about keeping busy. "I could work seven-days a week."

He sees an average of seven to 10 horses a day. "I try and see each horse every five or six weeks in the summer and every six or seven weeks in the winter," he said.

The reason for the difference between summer and winter, he said, is the presence of bacteria on the hoof during the summer months. A horse will stand in the mud and muck to keep cool in hot weather, and bacteria will attack the hoof. If left unchecked, the horse can become lame.

Part of a farrier's job is to scrape the clean the hoof, removing the bacteria.

"Without a hoof you have no horse," Cleland added.

One of the dangers of being a farrier is the horse doesn't always appreciate the tender loving care.

"I've dislocated both shoulders, had seven of my 10 toes broken, was kicked in the kidney, and had a draft horse kick me in the face," Cleland confessed. VanDusen said he experienced some of the same unkind treatment. The amazing part is both men are still around to talk about it.

In an effort to avoid such dangers, VanDusen said he has the animal's owner around during the first few visits — just so he and the horse can get acquainted. "One horse can take you out of this business — or kill you," he remarked.

But despite the dangers, the Florida heat and long hours, both men agreed they love their work. "I should have started doing this 20 years ago," VanDusen said with a smile.

Guide offers students healthy cooking tips

College food, it seems, has always been problematic. Even as far back as the 1630s, authorities had to close down a newly opened college in the Massachusetts Bay Colony when the headmaster and headmistress were accused of cruelly abusing their scholars by (among other things) denying them beef and bread, serving hasty pudding flecked with goat dung, and — according to one written account — offering "mackerel brought to them with their guts in them." The school? Harvard.

Marialisa Calta

Of course, times have changed, and the quality of college food has improved in quantum leaps. On the plus side, many college cafeterias (Harvard's among them) offer vegetarian and vegan meals, salad bars, and ethnic specialties. On the negative side, fast-food franchises are popping up on campuses all over the country.

a very readable, sensible book called "The College Student's Guide to Eating Well on Campus," by nutritionist Ann Selkowitz Litt. This book should be required reading for every freshman. If you can't find it locally, try online, or order a copy ($12.95, plus $3.50 for shipping and handling) by calling, toll-free, (877) 242-1674. Give it to a college-age friend or relative.

Holiday In The Park
Feel that little bit of a nip in the air? Already humming a few bars of "Rudolph the Red Nose Reindeer?" Okay, so maybe not. But planning for Holiday in the Park, the City of Lake Mary's annual tree lighting event, has already begun. The date for this year's event is Friday, Dec. 1. Wife tired of spending life with alcoholic

DEAR ABBY: I am 55 and retired. My husband, "Mark," is 60 and an alcoholic. I want him to read this letter in your column.

I've gone through hell putting up with his alcoholism. He falls asleep with a cigarette still burning between his fingers. He uses the stove, forgets about it, and falls asleep. He talks to himself. I believe he has three personalities: the friendly talker; the one who "shuts down" and is angry at the world; and the rude, obnoxious person who emotionally abuses me. Mark's famous words are, "I have never hit you." Physically, no — but mentally I am beaten regularly.

We have no social life because he has to drink before we go anywhere — so I don't accept invitations. When he's not working, he drinks 95 percent of the time. Within the last two years, he's had two DUI citations (driving under the influence), so either I or one of our three children must provide his transportation to and from work.

All three kids say I should leave him. They love their father, but do not enjoy being around him. Mark has one brother, but they don't talk because of Mark's drinking. Besides the children and me, Mark has no one else.

He refuses to go for treatment. He promises to stop drinking, but doesn't. If he isn't in bed, I can't sleep at night because I'm afraid he'll burn the house down.

I want Mark and other alcoholics to know that besides complicating their own lives, they are ruining the lives of all the people around them.

I have concluded that I would be happier and have more peace of mind living alone in a trailer than in my house with an alcoholic.

SEEKING PEACE IN MISSOURI

DEAR SEEKING PEACE: First, contact Al-Anon. They offer information and emotional support to family and friends of alcoholics. Call 1-800-344-2666 for meeting information, 1-800-356-9996 for introductory literature. Their Web site is www.al-anon.org.

Second, listen to your children. They have your best interests at heart.

Third, speak to an attorney and ask for a trial separation. The attorney will protect your financial interests.

Fourth, ask your husband to leave. You must stay in your home to protect it from fire.

This may appear to be a drastic solution, but it's the only way to get his attention and find peace of mind. Don't feel guilty. You deserve to be happy, respected and safe.

DEAR ABBY: I am 20 years old and in a long-term relationship with my boyfriend, who is 36. My problem is he's experiencing problems having sex with me. He says he loves me too much to be able to have sex. He says he almost thinks of me as a child. He also told me that the best sex he's ever had was with someone he always argued with. Is this normal?

SEXLESS IN EDMONTON

DEAR SEXLESS: Some people find conflict to be a turn-on. This may be normal for him — but it isn't for you. I would be concerned about being with a man who thinks of you as "a child" and not as a mature woman. You have the right to a healthy, intimate relationship.

The two of you might benefit from couples counseling. It will give you more insight into this man. It will also give you the opportunity to express what you expect from each other, and what you want for yourselves. I wish you luck.

If the shoe (and the hoof) fits...

By Arthur Zielenki
Staff Photographer

Rocky needs a new pair of shoes. Rocky, a Tennessee walking horse, that is. And a local farrier is just the man to fit them on his hooves.

Brian VanDusen earns a living by shoeing horses (a farrier). It's a profession most people might consider a dying trade.

But after meeting VanDusen at Springdale Farms of Longwood, many people may be surprised to find the profession is alive and prospering in Seminole County.

VanDusen, who owns a 10-acre horse farm in Sanford, said he spent his entire life around horses.

"I use to work on my uncle's ranch in Texas during summer vacation," he said. Helping take care of the horses was just part of the everyday jobs he learned to do while growing up.

VanDusen didn't give serious thought to becoming a farrier until six years ago. At that time, he was working in construction but would talk to the farrier who would visit his farm to shoe his quarter horses.

"I wanted to get out of the rat race and decided to make the change," he explained.

As part of VanDusen's leap of faith, he worked with three different farriers for one year — without getting paid. He also attended a school in Oklahoma for 30 days.

The school, he said, normally takes 90 days to complete, but because of his prior experience he was able to become certified in a shorter time. VanDusen said certification can be obtained in two ways — from completion of the 90-day class, or from the Florida State Farriers Association, of which he is a member.

The Association, with 160 members, is headed by President Rich Cleland, of DeBary. Cleland has been president for the past two years, and said he is up for reelection this year. The Florida Farriers Association, he explained, is a member of Q: How many participants do you expect this year?

A: We're aiming at 2,000. That would be about 3 percent more than last year. And for the second year we are adding the age category of 50 through 54, so we hope more people of that age will be involved.

Q: What events will be new this year?

A: We are adding team volleyball, with six person teams, men or women. They are part of both the state and national games, so we want our local folks to be eligible for those. The team volleyball will be held Friday, Nov. 3, at the Salvation Army Gymnasium. We are also adding one additional doubles bowling event. We are working in partnership with the new bowling alley in Sanford, scheduled to open about the first of October.

Q: How much does it cost?

A: For a single event, the cost to participate is $6. Then, for each additional event it's only $2 more, and the price includes one of our new designed Golden Age Games 2000 T-shirts and a "goodie bag."

Q: I imagine, as usual, you have many fun events planned in addition to the competition.

A: We will have the usual talent show on Thursday, Nov. 2, the Friday night Rivership Romance cruise, the Wednesday night mid-week banquet at the Civic Center, and a Monday evening reception, sponsored by Central Florida Regional Hospital. It will be held in the hospital's banquet facilities.

Q: Is there a charge for the fun events?

A: Only for the cruise on the Romance, and the mid-week banquet. People will have to make arrangements for them ahead of time. The others are available at no charge.

Q: When can you register to participate in competitive games?

A: Forms are available right now. People can stop at the City Recreation Department at City Hall, or at the Senior Center. If they prefer, they can phone us at 407-330-5697 and we'll mail entry forms to

Hiring pattern remains bullish

From staff reports

Judging from the latest survey, firms in the Orlando area, which includes all of Seminole and Orange counties, will close this year with a dynamic hiring scene. The information is from the latest Employment Outlook Survey by Manpower Inc., which has been released for the October-December quarter.

"As we approach the final months of the year," said Daniel G. Gavin of Manpower, "47 percent of business respondents will expand their workforces this fall, while nine report plans to cut back. Another 53 percent expect no change."

For the ending quarter of 1999 the outlook was bright when 30 percent anticipated recruiting more workers and only three percent forecast diminished payrolls. Three months ago, 57 percent said staff increases were indicated while seven percent predicted workforce declines. Gavin said, "While recruiting holiday help is always a factor at years' end, offsetting slowdowns in other industries influence employers' plans as well."

This fall, job prospects appear best in construction, durable and non-durable goods manufacturing, transportation/public utilities, wholesale/retail trade and services.

For the Orlando/Sanford area, the survey indicates zero percent expecting decreases in staffing and/or employment.

While the survey also checks employers who, at this time, "don't know," the local area indicated a zero percent.

This can be compared to the Daytona Beach area where a 13 percent decrease is expected and 17 percent don't know, and the Melbourne area with a 10 percent decrease projected with 23 percent not knowing. The state average is a four percent decrease for this next three-month time period and 33 percent still undecided.

Demand for additional workers throughout the country continues at record levels for the second consecutive quarter as 32 percent of nearly 16,000 respondents indicated plans for further hiring. Only seven percent expect declines and four percent are yet undecided.

The Manpower survey, conducted quarterly, is based on the results of nearly 16,000 public and private employers in 487 U.S. cities.

Street basketball festival returns to Orlando

Special to the Herald

ORLANDO - Hoop-It-Up, the official 3-on-3 Tour of the NBA and NBC Sports and the premiere street basketball tour in the U.S., will make its 12th annual stop in Orlando, September 16th and 17th.

More than 3,200 area basketball players are expected to compete in the tournament play at Disney's Wide World of Sports.

Orlando Hoop-It-Up offers fair and competitive 3-on-3 basketball action to players ages 8 and older of all skill levels, with divisions ranging from recreational to Top Gun (college experience or better), including kids (10 and younger), teens (17 and younger) and players over age 35.

Players must form teams of up to four members (includes one substitute) and register by Friday, Sept. 8. Teams are then placed in divisions with others of similar age, height and playing ability.

The Hoop-It-Up Tour is expected to host 140,000 players in more than 40 U.S. cities in 2000, more than a decade and millions of players after it began in six cities in 1988. The NBA sanctioned Hoop-It-Up as the official 3-on-3 basketball tour in 1992. An NBA-sanctioned Canadian tour was added in 1997.

"Hoop-It-Up has become the most popular basketball tour going, and I'm always excited by the quality of competition that I see," said Steve Johnson, NBA on NBC sports analyst, who has appeared on the Hoop-It-Up on NBC telecasts since 1991. "Whether you're 8 years old or have played top-level college ball, Hoop-It-Up provides an ideal venue for a hot street game. I've been proud to be a part of the tour for the last nine years and especially look forward to the Championships, which are the highlight of the tour."

At the home of James Worthy and Cynthia Cooper, the addition to this year's Hoop-It-Up will include a special "Hoops for the Homeless" event. The event will benefit the Orlando Food Bank and will feature a 3-on-3 basketball game between the Orlando Magic and the Orlando Magic.

SANFORD - It was truly a "Clash of the Titans" on Friday night as the Seminole High School Fighting Seminoles scored in the final second to edge the Lake Mary Rams, 27-20, at Thomas E. Whigham Stadium.

The game was originally scheduled to start at 7:30 p.m. but was delayed forty minutes due to inclement weather, however as the storms died down the excitement in immediately began to build, both on the field and in the stands.

Seminole running back Willie Bennett wasted no time getting the offense rolling as ALTAMONTE SPRINGS - Friday night's game at Tom Story Field was not quite what most people expected.

With Winter Springs having Chauncey Hampton and Johnnie Blake in the backfield and Lake Brantley featuring their vaunted wishbone attack, the game figured to be a high-scoring, ground battle, especially after a hard rainstorm that delayed the start almost an hour and turned the field into a swamp.

But the Seminole Athletic Conference contest turned into a defensive battle and neither team could score until there was only 8:15 left in the third quarter when the Patriots' Taylor Ramsaur found a wide-open Corey Dryden down the middle for an almost unheard of, for Lake Brantley, 42-yard touchdown pass.

That duo would hook up again with 9:39 left in the game for a 28-yard touchdown and Josh Demateis would add a 40-yard run with help of a great block by Francisco Banoes after a Bears turnover to give the Patriots a 19-0 victory in the opening game of the season for both schools.

Both teams will now have a week to prepare for crucial district games as Lake Brantley will travel to Oviedo to take on the Lions in a Class 6A-District 2 contest at John Courier Field on Friday at 7:30 p.m., while Winter Springs will travel to the Daytona Beach Municipal Stadium to tackle potent

The Oviedo defense came up big Friday night, stopping Lyman the Greyhounds for a 13-9 season-opening and Seminole Athletic Conference victory at the Carlton Henley Sports Complex.

Defense doesn't rest in Lion victory

By Tony DeGormier
HERALD CORRESPONDENT

LONGWOOD - Coaches can go an entire season without getting a chance to see how their team will respond with their backs to the wall.

Oviedo High School football coach Greg Register had three chances Friday night. Three times in their season-opener with the visiting Oviedo Lions, the Lyman Greyhounds attempted to convert on fourth-and-one situations. And three times, the Lion defense came up with a stop as Oviedo hung on for a 13-9 win.

The Lions (1-0) host Lake Brantley in a district contest next Friday while Lyman (0-1) opens its district schedule against Seminole.

"These kids are phenomenal human beings," said Register. "We knew that the defense was going stronger going into the season, but tonight they really stepped up and did a tremendous job."

At first it looked as if the Oviedo offense would own the night as the Lions scored on two of their first three possessions, rolling up 161 yards on their first 18 plays from scrimmage. But the Lions only managed 45 more yards on offense the rest of the night, never advancing past the Lyman 30.

That left the outcome in the hands of the defense.

After Tyrone Foster scored on a 4-yard run with 8:42 left in the second quarter to give Oviedo a 13-7 lead, the Greyhounds mounted a 15-play drive that started at their own 34-yard line and made its way down to the Lions' 1-yard line.

On third and goal from the Oviedo 3-yard line with seconds remaining in the half, Lyman's Mark McNealy churned toward the goal line. At first, one official signaled that McNealy had made it into the end zone, but the call was overturned, McNealy being ruled down at the 1-yard line.

"I thought we had scored and I was getting the kickoff team ready to go in," said Lyman coach Bill Caughell. "Then I turned around and saw that the officials had called it back."

Again the Greyhounds went to McNealy (who rushed for 150 yards on 15 carries in the first half), but he was stopped for no gain as the half expired.

Dudley Bates

"A Clear Choice"

Excerpts from Orlando Sentinel Editorial Endorsement - August 20, 2000

Why Dudley Bates

"His achievements stand up tall against Mr. Van Der Weide's."

"Mr. Bates urges a reasonable approach to development, one that encourages orderly growth while protecting the county's precious environmental resources ..."

"He (Bates) understands the region's need to have alternatives to roads and cars, and knows that only regional cooperation can produce mass transit solutions."

"Altamonte Springs, the city Mr. Bates served as commissioner and mayor, symbolizes some of the best municipal thinking in America ... that could be applied countywide."

A Fresh Approach to County Government!

Why Not Van Der Weide

"Although he showed promise when he first ran for office in 1992 ... a lackluster record shows that he didn't follow up much on that potential."

"He has a reputation as a man who prefers political scheming to good policy making."

"Mr. Van Der Weide's playing fast and loose with the facts has earned him sharp rebukes from County Commission Chairman Carlton Henley"

"He submitted no receipts for that trip resulting in the clerk of the circuit court's docking of his pay. Instead of making things right, he sued the clerk's office ushering in a long legal battle that has cost the taxpayers tens of thousands of dollars."

"Mr. Van Der Weide also has waffled on critical issues ... and has worked against sensible policies ..."

8 Years is More Than Enough!

The Bates Family

Dudley Bates Will...

- Bring Public Trust to Government
- Keep Public Safety Our #1 Priority
- Give Immediate Attention to Reckless Commercial Growth

growth in the area, which is inevitable, and we no longer have such a large habitat for wildlife."

Watson said anyone is welcome to join the Society, which studies all aspects of wildlife — not just birds.

"We do a lot of different things," Watson said. "We are interested in water quality, legislation focusing on wildlife and many other things."

The Society meets at least once a month and also sponsors a monthly field trip. For membership information, call Membership Coordinator Andrea Cantors at 407-323-3970. Watson said people can join the Audubon Society by attending the first meeting, which will be held 2 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 10, in the branch library located at 150 N. Palmetto St. in Sanford. For additional information, call 407-330-4855.

The field trip will begin at 7:30 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 16, and will meet at the library before heading to Rock Springs Run. For more information, call Darrell Leidigh at 407-323-2763.

using as a shortcut home from school. The suspect raped her and then told the girl "To go home and not tell anyone about this, to act like nothing happened." When the teen-ager got home, she told her brother to call 911.

Police were able to get a good description from the 13-year-old. She told police the man was between 5 feet 9 inches to 5 feet 11 inches tall. He had large sideburns and a medium length beard. The girl told police the man got into a red or rust-colored car, possible an older model Cadillac.

Cohen defended the police department for delaying publicity about the attacks. She said police weren't able to quickly determine the details of the Wednesday attack and wanted to proceed with caution before releasing details to the media.

Cohen said patrols in the area of the attacks have been increased, and officers were warning students, parents and school administrators to take precautions.

"One of the most important things is for students to walk home in groups," Cohen said.

"Don't walk alone, and stay on sidewalks or public areas that are visible."

Students are also warned not to approach strange cars or people.

"We also asked the neighbors who live around the schools to be on the look out," Cohen said. "If you have students who walk by your house, keep a look out for suspicious people."

Barrett's esophagus is serious and must be aggressively treated

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've had a hiatal hernia for 10 years. Now my doctor tells me that I also have Barrett's esophagus. What is this?

DEAR READER: At the point where the esophagus passes through the diaphragm on its way to the stomach, there is a ring of muscle that acts like a kind of valve to prevent reflux (backwash) of stomach acid into the sensitive esophagus. As we age, this muscular ring may stretch, permitting part of the stomach to slide up above the diaphragm.

Dr. Peter Gott

This is a hiatal hernia and is often — but not always — associated with reflux: periodic heartburn, bloating, indigestion, cough, and other symptoms. Reflux usually responds to antacids (Maalox, Gelusil and so forth) and to medicines such as Prilosec, Pepcid and Prevacid, which reduce acid production in the stomach.

In some patients, however, constant reflux changes the cells in the lower esophageal lining. The reasons for this are not completely understood, but these changes, called Barrett's esophagus, are serious: The altered cells can be pre-malignant, meaning that over time, they can turn into cancer. The diagnosis is usually made by biopsy during endoscopy, when a specialist examines the stomach and esophagus with a flexible fiberoptic device.

Barrett's esophagus must be aggressively treated with acid-suppressing medication to allow healing. Thereafter, patients must be closely monitored by endoscopy, because if the pre-malignant cells turn cancerous, surgery is indicated.

Follow your doctor's instructions about therapy. Once the reflux is controlled, the esophagus should heal, the cells will return to normal and you'll be over the hump. To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Hiatal Hernia." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My doctor has diagnosed me with emphysema. I'm 85, have never smoked and never had a lung problem. What gives?

DEAR READER: Emphysema, also known as chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, is yet another unavoidable consequence of aging. As we grow older, the lungs function less efficiently; pulmonary tissue simply wears out, as do other body tissues. Therefore, mild degrees of emphysema are universal in the elderly. I stress the word "mild" because, in most cases, the pulmonary changes (trapping of stale air with concomitant increase in lung expansion) do not cause noticeable symptoms — other than shortness of breath during exercise. The abnormal lung expansion is readily visible on X-rays, however. As you know, the development of emphysema is greatly accelerated by cigarette smoking, lung diseases (such as asthma and chronic bronchitis) and exposure to air pollution. Also, these factors produce more extreme forms of emphysema that may cause advanced disability. For example, a 60-year-old smoker will generally be more handicapped (because of breathlessness) than will an 80-year-old non-smoker.

To a large extent, the goal of preventive medicine is to help people avoid premature damage to their bodies. Age-related breakdown is built into our biological clocks. We owe it to ourselves not to add insult to injury by suffering premature disability as a result of damaging behavior. As yet, we cannot modify the consequences of aging — although with genetic engineering we may, in the future, be able to do just that.

In your case, the problem appears to be a result of the normal aging process. Emphysema is more the rule than the exception in people your age. Therefore, unless your physician has given you specific instructions, I believe that you can simply accept your mild emphysema and continue to lead as active a life as you choose.

oldest brick buildings in Sanford and the only one that survived the fire of 1887. It was Henry L. DeForest's first brick building in the downtown commercial district.

The building has been covered with a light coat of yellow and blue stucco but the original details have remained. The architectural style is Beaux-Art Classicism. At the roof there is an elaborate metal classical cornice the crowns the architectural composition and segmental pediments over the windows.

The Bishop Block
301-309 East First Street
Construction on the Bishop Block, built for J.N. Bishop, was completed in 1888. In the early 1900s City Hall, along with a milliner, jeweler, and a confectionery occupied the building.

The two story brick construction is in the Romanesque Revival style. It features a metal cornice, modillion and pilaster capitals and brick fretwork. The windows are divided by Romanesque-style pilasters. There is a low Romanesque arch at the main entrance. The exterior is essentially the same as when it was constructed.

The Meisch Building
224 East First Street
When constructed in 1923, the Meisch building was considered a typical example of American commercial architecture. Several original tenants included: Sanford Shoe and Clothing, Piggly-Wiggly Grocery, Hunt's Pharmacy, and the Lu-Beth Cafeteria.

Construction is reinforced concrete frame faced with tapestry brick and Arnold ornamental stone and stucco. The windows are copper trimmed with a Vermont marble base. Red and white decorative terra-cotta mission tile is on the facade parapet.

The Rand Building
108 East First Street
Home of Sanford's first newspaper, the Frederic H. Rand building was built in 1887, shortly after the Sept. 22, 1887 fire. Rand was the general manager and attorney for the Florida Land and Colonization Company.

The Beaux-Arts Classicism style features metal segmental pediments over the facade windows.

Federal Trust Bank Building
312 West First Street
In stark contrast to the older historical buildings along First Street stands the modern glass facade of the Federal Trust Bank Building on the corner of First Street and Elm. Formerly called First Federal Savings and Loan, the glass tower was constructed around 1975.

The Hester and Shepard Block
109 South Palmetto Avenue
The date on the old fire station says 1928. But according to Barbara Farrell, the building's owner, the date is misleading. Actual construction took place in 1887 after the fire, Farrell said. The brick building was remodeled in 1928. The 1928 date, stucco facade, and sun burst motif were added at that time. The building was constructed as a three story design but was reduced to two stories during the 1928 remodeling. The building served as the Fire House from 1890 to 1974, City Hall, police station, and jail. Some people say that the only legal hanging in Seminole County took place behind this building in 1923. The Sanford Zoo began here with a gift of a monkey named Jack to the fire station.

The U.S. Post Office Building was built in 1917 by Algernon Blair of Montgomery, Ala., with James Wetmore serving as supervising architect. When the new post office was finished in 1962, the building became the city library for Sanford, and in 1975 it became a part of the Seminole County library system.

The architectural style is Beaux-Arts Classicism. A remaining major feature of the original structure is the segmental pediment and stringcourse above the second story windows.

The PICO Block
114 West First Street
Built for Henry B. Plant, President of the Plant Investment Company (PICO) in 1887, the PICO Building served as a hotel for the railroads and two river steamers owned by Plant. The architect was W.T. Cotter, of Sanford.

The architectural style is Turkish. The brick building was built to look like a Turkish palace or mosque, and resembles another of Plant's hotels, the Tampa Bay Hotel. The windows have horseshoe and ogee arches. The decorative bartizan tower still remains, but the onion shaped dome has been removed.

The Hotchkiss Block
213 East First Street

Built in 1886, the Hotchkiss Block is one of the first two brick structures in Sanford that are still standing after the fire of 1887 that gutted most of the downtown area. Only portions of the brick walls were left standing. The building was rebuilt immediately and became part of the original commercial district. Built in the Romanesque Revival style, the windows are topped with rusticated arches with drop molding and keystones. The exterior is ornamented with a corbello brick modillion, a Gothic screen pediment and a fretted stringcourse along the northeast corner.

Constructed in 1887, this building was the home of Sanford's first newspaper, The Sanford Journal, and at one time housed the Telephone Exchange. The building was named Frederic H. Rand, who was the general manager for the Florida Land and Colonization Co.

When constructed in 1923, the Meisch building was considered a typical example of American commercial architecture. Original tenants included Sanford Shoe and Clothing, Piggly-Wiggly Grocery, Hunt's Pharmacy and the Lu-Beth Cafeteria.

OPINION

Our View

Primary Choices

Seminole voters have a full slate of candidates to choose from when they go to the polls Tuesday, Sept. 5. The Herald offers its opinion on who's the best.

Upon reviewing the strengths and shortcomings of those men and women seeking public office in Seminole County, we give our September 5 Primary Ballot endorsements to the following:

- District 1 County Commissioner: Tum Hagood.
- District 3 County Commissioner: Dudley Bates.
- District 5 County Commissioner: Daryl McLain.
- District 3 School Board Commissioner: Bob Goff.
- District 4 School Board Commissioner: Larry Furlong.

By endorsing Mr. Hagood and Mr. Bates, we firmly believe they would serve county residents with more commitment and honor than either of the incumbents Grant Maloy and Dick Van Der Weide. Mr. Maloy has served one term, Mr. Van Der Weide two terms.

At the same time, we urge voters to stick with District 5 County Commissioner Daryl McLain, who has served for eight years and is better qualified than either of his Republican Primary opponents — Don Nicholas and Bob West.

Mr. Hagood, 38, has a proven record of leadership in the City of Oviedo. He has served on the City Council for eight years, and is a past chairman and vice-chairman. He is an engineer with a Masters Degree from the University of Central Florida.

Mr. Hagood would bring fresh ideas to the job and a promise of bold leadership. Mr. Maloy, while providing solid constituent services, has barely made a mark during his tenure as commissioner. He rarely debates issues during commission meetings, and when he does, it's usually to voice negative opinions. Young Mr. Maloy hasn't brought to the job the visionary leadership so many expected from him.

Mr. Bates, 59, served 18 years on the Altamonte Springs City Commission, the past 12 as mayor. He is a conservative Republican, successful business man (General Manager, Kroger Equity) and proven leadership in controlling growth in a reasonable manner.

Mr. Bates would bring a statesman's attitude to the District 3 office, unlike Mr. Van Der Weide who has spent the last two years embroiled in his own "Travelgate" saga. His personal feud with Clerk of the Courts Maryanne Morse has been petty, and it's time to end the bickering by electing Mr. Bates.

Returning Mr. McLain to office will benefit not only the residents of District 5 but all county residents. Mr. McLain is a man of his word. He has not broken promises. He is accessible and is fiscally conservative. He has championed public decency without getting pious or self-serving in the process.

His opponents, Mr. West in particular, have sunk to all-time lows in their bid to defeat Mr. McLain. Mr. West, for example, is sending out a letter written by Millard Hunt that contains a deliberate lie. The public should demand better from Mr. West, the candidate who boasts he is the moral choice for office.

In the school board races, Mr. Goff and Mr. Furlong have proven their desire and ability to make a highly respected school system even better. They frequently clashed early in their first terms. They offer different views but share a common goal — to make Seminole County Schools the best in the state. They have succeeded in doing just that, as the county schools consistently rank high in numerous categories.

Mr. Furlong is far and away more qualified than his opponent, Sylvia Pond. The same can be said for Mr. Goff in his race against Dede Schaffner. We find Ms. Schaffner's bid for school board to be a bit dubious. She is already a high-paid administrator within the county school system, and we believe she would be nothing more than a rubber-stamp for Superintendent Paul Haggerty.

Those are our choices for county offices — Hagood, Bates, McLain, Furlong and Goff. You, the reader, may disagree with our choices, but we trust you'll agree with our belief in the importance of voting. Vote for your candidates of choice in Tuesday's election. This is among the greatest privileges in a free nation. Let your voice be heard.

Payne believes city has come to fork in road

To the editor:

The renewed interest in one-way pairs at the intersection of Central Avenue and Broadway Street brings hope that less-destructive solutions to the traffic problem can be found. While passions run high, everybody involved has the best interests of the community at heart.

It seems to me that it comes down to this: The Florida Department of Transportation (FDOT) owns SR434 through Oviedo; the Turnpike Authority controls Toll 417 west of Oviedo. One of those will be the "missing link" for the regional highway system. Where do we want the heavy traffic and heavy trucks to go?

One school of thought sincerely believes that the city can succeed in getting FDOT to greatly increase the traffic capacity of SR434, and not sacrifice the character of our town. The city can ask the state to lower speed limits, narrow the lanes, allow more traffic lights, and such. Since the state is paying for the project, what prevents them from just saying no? The city can enact zoning laws and architectural standards to try to control development. Developers have extensive experience in getting around such standards. Just drive around the Orlando metro area and ask yourself, "Is what I'm seeing what residents wanted, or developers?" SR434 in Oviedo, or Central Avenue, has many cross streets leading into established neighborhoods. Sweetwater Park is on its east side, Boston Hill Park is on its west. Students going to Lawton Elementary, Jackson Heights middle and Oviedo High Schools commonly cross this road. The road crosses the Cross-Seminole Trail in two places. Over 100 homes and businesses lie along the route. Can FDOT increase the flow of traffic without severe damage to the surrounding community? The Florida Department of Transportation is not in the business of creating graceful city boulevards. Its mission is building highways. To fulfill this mission, the state has created an 800-pound gorilla of a bureaucracy. Can we tame this beast?

History is not encouraging. Before Toll 417 was put in, the City laid plans for a toll-free road to run parallel to it from SR434 to Red Bug Lake Road. The city was given to understand that this would be a waste of money, as there would be no toll on this section. The other school of thought holds that the better solution is to convince the state to lift the tolls on Toll 417 west of Oviedo to bypass this traffic around town, connecting back to SR434 south of Mitchell Hammock Road. Where is the safer, better place for the high-traffic corridor to go? Along Central Avenue, with neighborhoods, parks and schools on both sides? Or, 1.5 miles to the west, on a limited access super-highway? Now, no one is trying to say that getting this will be easy. There is both State bureaucracy and our famous muck fields to contend with. But, this is not the first time a good community project was labeled "impossible."

It seems to me that we first ought to go to the wall for our Bypass, before surrendering Central Avenue to FDOT. Once Central Avenue is made into a high-traffic corridor, we can't go back to the state and say, "We changed our minds — we'd rather have a bypass." On the other hand, if we try to get our Bypass but fail, the state is not going to say, "Sorry, we've forgotten how to make four-lane highways — you missed your chance." Oviedo has come to a fork in the road. On Sept. 5, the people of this city will choose the direction for our future. Think carefully about which way we ought to go.

Sincerely,
Jeffrey Payne, Secretary
Old Jovantown Development Group of Oviedo

Furlong thanked for his integrity

To the editor:

In this election year, we are continuously reading about the candidates and all of their campaign promises. We as voters are always skeptical to say the least. However, once in a while a candidate does come along and makes the promises and keeps them. Such is the case of Larry Furlong, running for re-election to the Seminole County School Board.

When he was county commissioner, as part of his campaign, he promised to donate a portion of his salary to an outstanding student from the Seminole County

School District. He kept that promise. My daughter received a $900 scholarship from Mr. Furlong. Basically, the requirements for the scholarship were that the student not only excel academically, but also be an active participant in the school community.

My daughter continued her involvement at The University of Miami and has realized her dream of becoming an educator herself. She teaches special education. She received not only her undergraduate degree, but her master's degree as well.

A sincere thanks to Mr. Furlong for his integrity and generosity.
Sincerely,
Sandra Andujar

Elam: Goff does job he's paid for

To the editor:

Dede Schaffner's public forum tirades about her opponent for election to the School Board, Bob Goff, tells me clearly that the only thing she has to offer voters is a mud-slinging campaign.

I have watched Seminole's school board over the past several years. Whether you like his interpersonal style or not, Goff has consistently held the system's economic and educational feet to the fire, and rightly so. As a tax paying voter, we be thankful Goff takes the time to intelligently challenge status quo reports by the system's leadership and staff. I am convinced that his efforts, in large part, have helped Seminole County earn the reputation as one of the top 10 school systems in Florida and one of the top 100 school systems in the country.

Mrs. Schaffner, welcome to politics 101. If all you have to campaign on is your opponent's straightforward personality then you just don't get it! Whether you like it or not, Bob Goff had a credible, and admirable record of living up to his job description found in our State Statutes (Title XVI, Section 230, District School Systems). The long and short of it is that he is doing the job we, the voters, pay him to do.

It's time for the end-of-the-summer blues

Joan Ryan

This year we didn't even get until Labor Day to wring the last few drops from summer. School started in our district last Tuesday. I'm not ready. I never am. For some people, winter is the most depressing time of year. For me, the most depressing time of year has always been that cross between the end of summer vacation and the start of school. It's not that I mourn the loss of sunny weather; the sun just isn't as hot and sticky as the sticky atmosphere of a muggy crispness to summer's brightness. What plunges me into a funk at the start of school is that suddenly, from one day to the next, life must reorganize itself into some semblance of structure. Gone are the lazy mornings watching TV in our pajamas then drifting perhaps to the park or the beach. (It is for such summer mornings, I always think on those days, that I work only part time.) Gone are the formless evenings of staying late on a neighbor's patio or walking into town after dinner to rent a movie, paying no mind to bedtime. Gone, for my son, are the afternoons of reading whatever he wants, not what a teacher assigns. And gone, too, for him are long moments of staring into space. See Ryan, Page 8A

Continued from Page 4A without me instinctively (OK, compulsively) asking, "Isn't there something you should be doing?"

In that sense, summer is more a state of mind than a season. Time shakes loose from the power-pack of schedules and seems to stop, or at least to slow to a lazy stroll. Even as adults, we happily lose our temporal bearings as our children's summer days mingle like streams of smoke with gauzy memories of our own: The faintest scent of Sea & Ski sunscreen on my son sends me back 30 years to Graydon Pond and white lifeguard chairs, peanut butter sandwiches packed in vinyl beach bags and ice cream trucks with thick freezer doors.

During the summer, perhaps because everything slows down, we notice things that escape us the rest of the year. How the sky looked like rainbow sherbet late one day as we walked the dog. How the tomatoes smelled like warm soil. How the seagulls left constellations of foot prints in the sand.

I think about these languid weeks of summer whenever I try to figure out where I stand on year-round schools. Intellectually, I favor them. Students are away from school so long that the first month of the new term is spent reviewing past lessons. And summers are meats, bread and drinks in little cardboard boxes for my son's lunches. I put off buying school supplies (as if school won't start if I simply avoid the purchase of pens and pink erasers). I am not ready for that other life, of packing lunches, hollering for everyone to please hurry up, planning meals, letting the clock dictate when we eat, do homework, read, bathe, go to bed. I'm not ready to give my life over to compartmentalization, in which virtually every hour five days a week are divided up into appropriate slots of activity and responsibility.

I need a few more afternoons of doing nothing but feeling the sun dry our wet skin after swimming. I need more evenings of watching the outline of my son disappear in the fading light as he shoots baskets in the neighbor's driveway. I haven't eaten enough white corn yet. Eventually, without even noticing, I'll fall into a schedule and summer will fade as it always does. But not yet.

increasingly expensive for working parents who must pay for camps and all-day childcare.

But don't ask me for a reasoned position today. I face the end of summer with the maturity of a first-grader. My adult version of crying and holding my breath is to go into deep denial. I won't buy lunch shoots baskets in the neighbor's driveway. I haven't eaten enough white corn yet.

Eventually, without even noticing, I'll fall into a schedule and summer will fade as it always does. But not yet.

The Way We Were: A trip down Memory Lane

While going through some of my old scrapbooks looking for a particular item, I found one scrapbook with items in it that might possibly interest you. It is filled with clippings, programs, cards, etc., that were significant to me during the 1960's and 70's.

There are also some older items in the front dating from 1936 which I will tell you about first. These may send you looking into your memorabilia to find like items.

Cradle Roll Certificate

On the first page is a large Cradle Roll Certificate, certifying that I was a member of the Cradle Roll Department of Sanford First Baptist Church Sunday School. My name was enrolled the 25th day of September, 1936; I had been born on Sept. 19.

Grace Marie Stinecpher

It was signed by Miss Allie Trafford, Superintendent of the Department, and S.J. Nix, Sunday School Superintendent.

I remember my mother telling me that "Miss Allie" had walked out to our home on 2404 Park Ave. to give this to her and also a small gift for me. Miss Allie served as the church's financial secretary and church missionary 1919-1942. In 1919 she was paid $25 per month; in 1925, $60 per month. She lived near the church, never owned a car, and walked everywhere visiting in the name of the church. Dr. W. P. Brooks, pastor 1929-62, called her "my right arm."

She also served as church clerk 1927-42. I was too small to remember much about her, as she died soon after she returned in 1942, but I remember being impressed with her excellent minutes and other record keeping while I was researching the church's archives for the history of First Baptist I wrote for our 100th anniversary in 1984.

Kindergarten Diploma

The next item in the scrapbook is my kindergarten diploma dated June 4, 1942. This certified that I had completed with creditable manner a course in Kindergarten as follows: phonics, spelling, arithmetic, writing and art and was eligible to enter first grade. It was signed by Ruth Gordon Wright, graduate of Tennessee College at Murfreesboro.

Mrs. Wright's school was called "The School of Childhood," and it was located on the northeast corner of Oak Avenue at Fourth Street, next to the Woman's Club.

She must have had children from ages 3 to 5 as in the picture I have of us on the front steps taken 1941-42, most are one or two years younger than I. I know that I went there two years.

I also took dancing from Mrs. Wright which I have mentioned before. When I recently toured the former Ritz Theater during the Sanford Historical Society meeting, memories came back of performing on that stage during dance recitals.

War Ration Book One

The next page holds a War Ration Book that has my name on it. It was certified by my mother, Marie Stinecpher, that all information was correct. My name and address is there as well as the facts that I was five years old, had blue eyes and blonde hair, was three feet nine inches tall and weighed 45 pounds. It was signed by Lillian L. Dunlap, registrar, on May 7, 1942.

There are warnings on the front of the book: (1) Punishment up to 10 years imprisonment or $10,000 or both for violating rationing orders and regulations, (2) This book must not be transferred or it would be taken from the holder by the Price Administration, (3) If the named person departed from the United States or died, the book must be surrendered, (4) Any person finding a lost book must deliver it promptly to the Ration Board.

I do not remember much about rationing since I was aged 5 through 9 during the war. I do remember, though, going to Seminole High School with my mother to get ration books.

A few other things, briefly, that I remember about rationing during the war. We luckily had a 1941 Chevrolet that my dad had bought before the war began, but he did also buy a bicycle to ride to work in order to save gas. We couldn't travel far because of gas rationing, so all of our summer vacations were spent at nearby New Smyrna Beach. Therefore I did not see my Tennessee relatives (my dad's family) from the time I was 5 years old until I was 10. When I did see them in 1947, it was almost like for the first time.

Spelling Trophy

There is the newspaper picture of me and Junior High Principal R. E. True with the large spelling trophy that I won in 1950 as Seminole County Spelling Champion. I have written about this experience before, but I will ask again — does anyone know what happened to this large trophy? Each winner had his/her name engraved on it and it traveled to the various schools with the winner. It has to be somewhere, even after 50 years! I do have a small trophy that I will eventually donate to the Sanford Museum.

Church Bulletin Information

There are two First Baptist Church Bulletins from the 1950's. One is dated December 30, 1956 and gives the Student Night at Christmas Sunday evening program. This used to be an annual event with college students presenting the program. Those students taking part that year were Nancy Rountree (FSU), Johnny Bowen (FSU), Al Phillips (Stetson), Howard Allred (?), Wesley Giles (UP) and myself (Stetson).

The next bulletin is dated April 6, 1958, which was Easter Sunday, and tells of the upcoming Youth Week. Al Phillips was Youth Pastor, I was Minister of Education and John Dinkins was Chairman of the Youth Deacons. I will remember that Al and I had to attend both morning worship services to receive a key to the church and that we were in charge of the service that night and also the next Sunday morning. Since both Al and I were Stetson students, we couldn't attend the other activities during the week, but this was the first of a long string of Youth Weeks that I was involved in.

When I taught school in Orlando (1958-61), I was a member of North Park Baptist where I was involved in several Youth Weeks as Sunday School teacher and WMU Director. When I moved back to Sanford in 1961, I began working with the young people in Training Union at First Baptist and helped organize Youth Weeks for about 10 years. These were fun times with lots of good memories.

The truth about good health in a nutshell

Editor's note: Russ White is out on vacation. He'll return next week, so until then, the Herald will run columns from the Best of Russ Collection.

Every now and then, I'm struck with how dumb I am. Who would have ever guessed that Seventh-day Adventist Church leaders would begin endorsing nuts.

That, they are. An "Adventist Mortality Study" — 20 years in the making — required the assistance of 34,000 Adventist volunteers in California.

One group of nut-eating Adventists devoured two ounces of nuts four or five times a week. Another group ate no nuts. The nut eaters ended up twice as healthy as the no nuts.

Some likened participation in the Adventist mortality study to a religious experience — an almond joy. A few snickered about working so hard for peanuts.

The Bible doesn't contain specific references to nuts. That's why I asked my pastor if the Macedonians grew them. No, he said, it was more likely the Macadamias.

Adam and Eve lived in a garden where they were free to eat from any tree except the tree of life. They were told, in fact, not even to touch the one tree. When they did, they were history. Alas, Adam knew less about hard-shell fruit (nuts) than he did bad apples.

The Magi brought gold, frankincense and myrrh but no cashews to the Christ Child. The Christmas song, however, begins with "Chestnuts roasting in an open fire..."

Anyway, I've been eating nuts religiously for three times as long as the Adventists' study. My cashew capacity is colossal. At parties, I'm the simpleton who pilfers the cashews from the mixed-nut assortment. I've tried to stop. I've sought help.

I have an old baseball card of Harry "Peanuts" Lowery. He helped the Chicago Cubs win a pennant in 1945. He hit .310 in the World Series. The Cubs lost the Series to the Detroit Tigers in seven games. They haven't won a pennant since. Lowery died in 1986.

Tom Cheney was never called "Peanuts" but he had a peanut farm in Georgia. He could pitch peanuts or baseballs but not at the same time. Cheney often reminded me of Mr. Peanut, especially when he was being shelled by opposing batters.

Years ago, the balcony section of theaters were known as peanut galleries. The gallery patrons used to throw peanut shells on those sitting below — or on the actors. Kids sat in a special Peanut Gallery when they were on the Howdy Doody TV show.

Even though his comic strip was first called "Li'l Folks," Charles Schulz didn't achieve his glory until it was known as "Peanuts."

When I began this column, I was nourished by a peanut butter and jelly sandwich my wife packed for me. That was hours ago. I'm thinking of having cashews when I get home. I want to be sure to have my two ounces of nuts for the day even though I'm not a Seventh-day Adventist. I assume nuts are good for everyone regardless of faith.

Reading this column about nuts contains approximately the same nutriment found in five pistachios. One day, you'll want to thank me for your good health.

Russ White's column appears daily in the Seminole Herald.

GRAMKOW FUNERAL HOME

HOW DO YOU BUILD A COMMUNITY?

It's really very simple, families build a community. They build trust, confidence and security that sustain us through the good times, as well as times of trouble. For over 45 years, the Gramkow family has been given the privilege to serve the families of our community during one of life's most difficult times. So how do you bring a family tradition of caring service into the next century?

Simple, you continue to focus your attention on those values that time cannot change...

...You treat each family with heartfelt compassion, just like they are your own.
...You continue to listen to every family member and solve each problem with the best interest at heart.
...And you continue to pass on the values of your generation to the next generation by developing a family tradition of values of caring service into the next century.
...Simply put, you continue to focus your attention on those values that time cannot change...

As an honored member of our community, this is my pledge to you. We will continue to serve these values, for every generation, for Our Family, Our Community.
