Labor Leaders Clay Williams To Battle For Asks Recovery Unionization Act Extension

Officials Consider Alliance Of Four Million Employees In 5 Big Industries

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Claiming they have information that some employers are joining in a move against unionization of workers, labor leaders yesterday disclosed plans for an alliance among employers of five great industries.

The unions to be grouped into a working alliance were named as the textile, oil, steel, automobile and tobacco industries. They have an aggregate membership of almost 4,000,000.

Francis J. Gorman, vice-president of the textile workers, announced the move, saying:

"We have reason to believe that employers in these industries, particularly in the automobile and steel industries, are organized to fight union organization and union activity wherever possible."

"There is no reason," he added, "why the workers in these industries shouldn't be mobilized to fight for their own interests."

The plan is to decide definitely what course to follow at a meeting here Jan. 25 of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor.

Labor sources disclosed the textile workers were laying plans for another nation-wide strike in the spring—a walkout they predict will rival the strike which raged for four weeks last September.

Workers, collective bargaining for the workers wherever they want to be used to it will probably be continued.

Also provisions for the elimination of unfair practices and permitting proper and desirable measures of co-operation between the members of an industry without penalty of the anti-trust laws are to have the merit and value that warrant their retention for the future.

"Edwards' collective bargaining for the workers wherever they want to be used to it will probably be continued.

The proposed regulations were discussed at length after the commissioners had assured County Board Chairman John McGaugh, Dr.

Records Of Gain In Business Hit High 4-Year Mark

Progressive Course Expected To Stay On Smoother Basis

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(AP)—The strong trend of nearly all branches of trade at the turn of the year already has developed sufficient force to lift the records of gain above all the comparative ones, as far back as 1931, the Weekly Trade Review of Dun and Bradstreet says.

Of greater significance than this, however, the survey says, is the assurance generally expressed that the well-constructed base on which achievement now rests provides for the continuance of prog-

Roosevelt Defies All Health Traditions

BOSTON, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Four hours, last night, he defied the President's will; observed his fifty-third birthday in 11 days—a abater of the tradition that the White House is a killer of men.

His smile is as cheerful as ever. His eyes radiate the good health he enjoys. There are a few more lines etched into his broad countenance. His hair is thinner. But, according to Dr. Ross T. McLean, the White House physician, Roosevelt is in better physical condition than when he took office.

The presidential appetite is said to be "top notch." Roosevelt said the President is now down to fighting weight—182 pounds. He keeps to training by taking a daily swim and exercising in the mansion pool at the close of each day's work.

C Of C Membership Drive Mounts To Within 35 Members Of Expected Goal

The standing of the various divisions of the Sanilac County Chamber of Commerce 1935 drive for 800 memberships and the honor of having the second largest chapter of commerce in Florida at noon today had reached the 760 mark.

Team workers who promised to raise the 1935 membership to 800 when they gathered at the Victory Supper on Wednesday night had brought in 20 additional memberships since that night and to noon today.

One membership came in through the efforts of John S. Kelley, attorney for the Ringling Circus interests and winter resident of the Pacific section.

The booklet is considered as a valuable publicity medium,

FLEMINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's defense team of money drafting evidence from his financial accounts to oppose the state's testimony that he had a mysterious income of $40,960, nearly the exact amount of the Lindbergh ransom figure.

Speaking before the trial of the Red Cross Blood Association convention, Williams advocated further trial before determining what form a permanent NRA set-up should take.

"I think there is general agreement that certain things provided for in the act and accomplished through the codes have such value in them and are so clearly indicated as proper that they should unquestionably be continued and retained," he said. "The banning of child labor has had wide approval and commendation. Provisions against wages below certain minimums and hours above certain maximums, administered under a method that permits elasticity both in an industry and between industries, have made such a valuable contribution both to relief and economy, and the principle of preventing the worker from being subjected to competition below minimum rates that for fixed hours represent a living wage is an acceptable measure of reform in American life, that there is general support for the continuation of these provisions."

"Edwards' collective bargaining for the workers wherever they want to be used to it will probably be continued.

BE KIND TO THE ERRING.— Indeed, if it had been overtaken make such a one in the spirit of meekness; considering lest he also be tempted.—Galatians 6:1.There seems to be no disposition on the part of federal agents to "Bring 'em Back Alive."A good diplomat is a fellow who will laugh at the joke you're telling him, which he told you a few days ago.New residents are locating in Sanford almost every day, and they aren't Chicago gangsters either.If they do have another boom down days in Miami and Palm Beach, we hope we can hear its echo up here.Hit to nervous public speakers son is good, according to the best authorities, who believe that Sanford is coming into its own at last.It has about reached the stage now where folks are beginning to wonder whether Herbert Hoover is the "forgotten man," or General Johnson.Judging from the frequency of assassinations in Europe during the past year, Hitler's boast that he expects to rule for life may not be boastful after all.The way these federal agents are going after public enemies these days reminds us again that Al Capone, the king of them all, was sent to jail for violating no come tax laws.What this state needs is a new kind of tax which will produce sufficient revenue for all the necessary functions of government without letting anybody know where the money is coming from.Showing out at witness-the stand in the Lindbergh kidnapping trial that they are lying seem-to be a trick by which the defense hopes to confuse the jury. It is a poor defense but as a last resort, it may be better than nothing.The President's social security program will be a great blessing to all down-and-outers, but it will not make any of them rich at the expense of those who are actually working. And it is a program which will not break down of its own weight within a few years leaving everyone to shift for himself.One reason the city of Daytona Beach is having so much trouble over a city-wide sales tax is because the Homestead Exemption Amendment has wrecked their la-local tax structure. In some cases removal of the homes from local tax rolls will not make any appreciable difference in tax revenue; but in Daytona Beach, city of many homes, 45.98 percent of all the taxable property in the city consists of homesteads.Of the Administration's social security program, President Roosevelt said, "It has not attempted the impossible, nor has it failed to exercise sound caution and consideration of all of the factors concerned; the national credit, the rights and responsibilities of the states, the capacity of industry to assume financial responsibility and the fundamental necessity of proceeding in a manner that will merit the enthusiastic support of citizens of all sorts."The Nation's Wealth

Various "Share the Wealth" schemes, now making their appearance in Congress and intended to divide more or less equally among all the people in the country all the wealth in the country, provide an intriguing subject for those who are inclined to be statistically minded. It should be interesting to you to know, for instance, just how much you will receive when our wealth is equally divided. Just how rich we are.

Most people conceive of wealth primarily as money and money principally as cash or currency. Under this conception of wealth, we find by referring to the World Almanac, that every person's share is $45.51, since there is (or was on June 30, 1933) only $5,720,764,384 of currency in circulation in the United States. Thus if you have more than $45.51, you have more than your share.

But there is another kind of money which is sometimes recognized as wealth, and which it might be the aim of the "Share-the-Wealthers" to divide. It is sometimes called "credit money," or bank deposits. The trouble with this kind of money is that there is a one dollar liability against every dollar of it. But even so, if the bank depositors were equally divided among the people, and all the obligations against them cancelled, what would your share be?

We find, again by referring to the World Almanac, that on Aug. 12, 1933 there were 13,951 licensed banks in the United States and their deposits aggregated $31,737,728,000. In addition the deposits of the mutual savings banks amounted to $9,707,947,244. These combined deposits reached a total figure of $41,708,675,244. This sum, representing all the bank deposits in the United States, if divided equally among all the people, would amount to $339 each. If you have more than that, you have more than your share.

There is another kind of wealth which, though none the less wealth, might prove more difficult to divide than money in the banks. In this category are included such forms of wealth as street railways, motor vehicles, real estate, livestock, buildings, utility plants, and telephone systems, factories, mines, pipe lines, ships, and so forth. All of this type of wealth, including stocks and bonds, in 1929 amounted to $361,800,000,000, but by 1932 it had declined to $247,300,000,000. This represents a per capita wealth of $1,981.

The annual income from this type of wealth probably is not as great as is popularly supposed. According to the Treasury report recently released to the newspapers, there were 46 individuals in the United States in 1933 having incomes of a million dollars a year or more. The average income for these 46 persons was $1,800,000. Their combined income, thus, was $82,800,000. If the United States had confiscated all of the incomes of one million dollars or more, it would have acquired less than 1/48th of what it plans to spend for federal relief alone during the fiscal year of 1936.

Further, the taxable income of all persons in the United States having net incomes of $5,000 a year or more in 1933 amounted to $4,053,653,000, a sum just half as much as the cost of the federal government will be during the coming year. The Department of Commerce reports that the total income of all the people in the United States in 1929 was $80,000,000,000, but by 1933 it had declined to $46,800,000,000, or approximately $380 per capita.

The more one probes around with these figures and divides them by the total number of persons in the United States, approximately 123,000,000, the more convinced one becomes that we are not nearly so rich as we usually think we are.

The Automobile Show

The New York automobile show which was held in Grand Central Palace last week from practically every point of view was the greatest success in the history of the auto industry, according to Bert Pierce, automobile editor of the New York Herald Tribune, who says that the displays consummated at this show give ample indication that his December predictions of a great automobile year in 1935 were not far wrong.

"New standards of transportation units were offered to the public in the several hundred cars on display," Mr. Pierce writes. "These included great advances in mechanism, styling, endurance, riding ease, fuel economy and general readability. Even the minor appointments of equipment were not neglected in the widespread efforts of the manufacturers to far outdo any previous offerings.

"Motorists were amazed at the progress which had been accomplished and few of those who visited the exhibition had even the remotest idea of obtaining a new car could resist the urge to fill an order blank. The number of prospective buyers registered with the various companies furthered the belief that the New York area, which has led the nation in sales, will increase its leadership during 1935.

"While the attendance since the opening of the show had been soaring to new heights, the greatest throng was present last night. Each of the three floors of the Palace was taxed to capacity and the aisles were filled with thousands viewing the automotive debutantes of this season. The ensemble of construction seemed to be the biggest single factor under consideration, although other phases of the new cars received much attention.

"The increased luggage space which was featured at the backs of many vehicles, attracted widespread interest and hundreds of complimentary comments were heard for the roomier accommodations given to this important adjunct to touring."

SANFORD TWENTY YEARS AGO

If the Senate passes the post office appropriations bill in the form in which it has passed the House, every amateur postmaster in the State of Florida will lose his job. In as much as this reform is backed by the prudence of strong record legislation of the Postoffice Department it is very likely to pass the Senate and become a law.

Among the prominent visitors to the city on Saturday was W. H. Moorer, sales manager of Chase & Company of Jacksonville and Sanford. Mr. Moorer is a young man in years but old in experience, coming to Florida many years ago after a most useful career in California with the Fruit Growers Exchange.

The men who can afford to have large stables and kennels are buying pine straw for bedding for their animals. They have found Louise King of Atlanta, Ga.,

How Congress Works
—A series of articles on the work of Congress will be presented in this column.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT

Many bills—actions—are done in and taken by each House of Congress by unanimous consent. If there is no objection on the part of any member, then consent is granted.
If a member says, however, "I object," that settles it.

In many instances the granting of the request saves the passing of motions or the making of rules.

Many bills are passed by universal consent. The theory is that if no one cares to object to a bill, certainly many would not vote against it.

Both party organizations appoint several members at each session of Congress who make it their business to study bills of a minor or private nature and be ready to object or insist on what they believe to be proper amendments before consent is granted for the bill to be passed.

In the House these groups are known unofficially as the "wrecking crew." In the Senate they are more of a free lance proposition with individual senators.

A member may object to a bill and ask questions about a specific article. This gives the author a chance to explain or defend his measure. The bill may be debated until someone sheets a written "objection" or "objection order," when objection immediately must be made or withdrawn.

On consent days in both Senate and House members with bills on the calendar are most patient, patient, and persuasive in their manners toward the "wrecking crew" and those others who make it their business to inquire into the merits of bills coming up.

HAUPTMANN'S BANK ACCOUNTS
UNDER PROBE

Fuchs visited the firm with Hauptmann a half dozen times.

Near the close of their case, prosecutors pointed away at the segregation house and garage finds that developed when Bruno was trapped with gold-backed ran-chips and gold-backed ran-chips last September.

In the house a closet panel, brought into the light, revealed the celestial address and telephone number of James F. "Inkie" Constantine, state witness, swore on the garage beams, completely concealed, some rolls of camouflage fabric.

John Bruno, the old administrator of Hauptmann's, has accused Hauptmann as the former John to whom he paid the $40,000 ransom in St. John's Cemetery the night of Sept. 2, 1932.

Striking back, the defense sought to cast a screen of doubt over the words and numbers on the two trial panel.

They fought unsuccessfully, as bar the carpenter's admission that he wrote them, chief of Counsel Hauptmann, contending the words were in the nature of a confession.

Overruled by Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, Bally repeated that Bruno's constitutional rights were being flouted as Benjamin Arce, assistant to District Attorney Samuel J. Foley of the Bronx began to read from Foley's interrogation.

"Is that your writing on the board?" Hauptmann was asked at the time.

"Yes, all over it," he replied, Arce said.

Why did you write it on the board?"

"I must have read it in the paper about the story. I was a little interested, and kept a little bit record of it, and maybe I was just in the closet and was reading the paper and put down the address."

"How did you come to put the telephone number on the board?"

"I can't give you an explanation about the telephone number."

At the close of the trial, the jury was sent to the jury room.

After a short time, the foreman came out and announced that the jury had reached a verdict.

"Guilty," he said.

Arce then asked the court to sentence Hauptmann.

"I sentence Hauptmann to death," said Justice Trenchard.

"Is that final?" asked Arce.

"Yes," said Trenchard.

"Is that final?" asked Arce.

"Yes,"
