More Jobs Now Available Experts 'Confident' Recession End Near

By ED PRICKETT Herald Staff Writer

Although no officials have notified any significant decrease in the unemployment rate in Seminole County, experts are confident the recession has bottomed out and a solid upturn is in the offing for months ahead.

And, a labor market analyst in Winter Park says, Seminole County is "growing... growing faster than Orange County" and that a great deal of that growth is in the south part of the county.

The office manager of the state employment office in Sanford, Ralph Prescott, said March was a "record month" in the number of jobs found for workers.

Concerning the availability of jobs, Prescott says, "We're getting more of them. Across-the-board jobs, all types." And Sterling Tuck, a labor analyst based in Winter Park, says the unemployment figure for February was 9.8 per cent, down slightly from the 9.9 per cent in January.

Tuck's calculations are based on a new accounting system instituted by the federal government. He expects to have the March calculations by the first of next week.

Economists point to an 8 per cent decline in the inflation rate for the first quarter of this year, compared to a 14.4 annual rate in the fourth quarter of last year as a positive economic indicator.

Tuck said he estimates the population in Seminole County to be near the 150,000 mark, compared to the slightly more than 80,000 persons who were reported living in Seminole County in 1970.

The Commerce Department's top economist, James L. Pate, predicts that the economy will grow at a rate of between four and six per cent in the second half of this year.

And the fact that surveys indicate Americans are ready to spend the $1 billion dollars in (Continued On Page 3A)

Dr. Glenwood Creech Commencement Speaker

Dr. Glenwood L. Creech, president of Florida Atlantic University, will deliver the commencement address at the Seminole Junior College graduation ceremony Wednesday April 22.

Dr. Creech has a distinguished career in education. Among his previous positions were those of associate professor, National Agricultural Extension Center for Advanced Study, University of Wisconsin; director, Division of Agriculture, W.K. Kellogg Foundation; and vice president for University Relations and professor of Extension Education, University of Kentucky.

Dr. Creech also has lectured at Cambridge and Reading universities in England, Trinity College in Ireland, University of Helsinki in Finland, and the University of California.

For the first time in its history, Seminole Junior College will hold the graduation ceremony on campus. And for the last time, students will graduate from Seminole Junior College.

The graduation ceremony, which in the past was held at the Sanford Civic Center, will take place at 8 p.m. in the spacious gymnasium that is a part of the new health facility at the college.

On July 1, 1975 the school will assume its new name — Seminole Community College.

DR. GLENWOOD CREECH lectured at Cambridge and Reading universities in England, Trinity College in Ireland, University of Helsinki in Finland, and the University of California.

Incorporation Papers Expected Any Day Longwood Volunteer F.D. Set To Meet City Head-On

By DONNA ESTES Herald Staff Writer

ANALYSIS

Kelley said when the incorporation papers are in hand, the volunteers will submit a contract to the City Council and it "will have to give us (the volunteers) what we want without question."

He said the volunteer department, now numbering 33 including the two new members accepted this past week, will probably also have some questions about insurance coverage.

"The City has almost put a halt to driving the fire vehicles," Kelley said, adding a volunteer department cannot function unless the men practice to know how to operate the equipment.

"Right now we are in the process of redrawing bylaws. The junior members, under 15 years old," Kelley said, "are not allowed to ride an emergency vehicle unless ordered to do so by an officer or the man on duty."

The City, with four paid fulltime firefighters, is somewhat dependent on the volunteers for assistance. But, city fathers put their food down in the past few months when some $12,000 in unpaid bills from 1974—more from the fire department than any other single department—were found.

The city bookkeeper found the bills stashed in desk drawers, in paid files and a myriad of other places. One bill, for a purchase made last September, was turned in for payment with a purchase order, signed by Fire Chief Roy LaBosiere, dated last month.

Most of the $12,000 in old bills have been paid from already lean city coffers. Council, faced with the unadmitted spending, has ordered economy measures in all city departments.

When the fire department financial statement was examined recently, it was found that neither gasoline used by department vehicles nor the 1974 bills was included in the expenditures column.

Kelley appeared before the City Council last week asking for more than $1,000 in bunker gear — helmets, coats and boots — saying the 20 sets on hand were not sufficient since additional men had joined the force.

Councilmen answered that a financial statement including all department spending during the first six months of fiscal 1975 must be reviewed first.

The issue which roused the volunteers' ire, however, was a City Council request last month that the volunteers' books and records be audited.

Council had received reports that donations were requested by the firemen from persons whose homes they had saved from destruction by flames. Other reports were that LaBosiere accepted donations and channeled the money into the volunteers' fund.

When the matter was discussed at a Council meeting, City Attorney Ned Julian Jr., said any donations which LaBosiere (Continued On Page 3A)

Justice Department Study Shows Sympathetic Juries

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new Justice Department study suggests that American juries are becoming more likely to side against the government in trials of political activists. In a carefully worded report, department analysts said government lawyers should take "a broader look at the decision to prosecute some controversial cases," partly because defense attorneys have learned how to pick sympathetic juries. The report made public Friday stopped short of recommending that the government drop charges in such cases.

Armed And 'Willing To Die'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Fugitive newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst and two companions are armed and "willing to die" rather than be captured, the San Francisco Examiner quotes sources as saying. "If the FBI shoots first, they will shoot back," the newspaper said. It quoted unidentified sources who claimed they have seen and talked to Miss Hearst, 21, and Symbionese Liberation Army members William and Emily Harris. "They are willing to die and they probably feel that it's better to die than spend years in prison. And if the FBI breaks into where they are staying, they will shoot," the sources were quoted as saying.

No Garden For The Fords

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gerald and Betty Ford of 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. won't be among the estimated six million Americans following the President's suggestion to try home vegetable gardening this year. It's not that the President and First Lady can't afford the tools and seeds or don't have the land available. They also have all the professional and amateur help any weekend tot would ever want. "We talked about it a lot and were going to, but the final decision was never made. Now they say it's too late" to prepare the plot, a press aide to Mrs. Ford said. "But I'm sure it will be considered next year. Maybe then."

CONCORD, Mass. (AP) — President Ford said today the Bicentennial observance here marked a time "to place the hand of healing on the heart of America." Ford was here to help launch both solemn and joyous ceremonies marking the nation's 200th birthday. In his prepared text for the occasion 200 years to the day after Minute Men fired "the shot heard 'round the world" at British Redcoats, Ford said: "Now is a time of reconstruction — not rancor."

Farish Takes 5th Amendment

Decision Near On McCain Hearing

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Attorney Joseph Farish Jr.'s refusal to testify ensures that a House committee will reach a decision next week on whether Supreme Court Justice David McCallin should be impeached, the committee chairman says. Rep. William J. Rish, D-Port St. Joe and chairman of the house impeachment committee, said Friday that Farish's testimony was not essential. But he said the committee had hoped "Mr. Farish would clarify some of the things regarding Justice McCallin in his favor or against his favor. Now we've had only one side of what's happened," Rish said. Farish refused to testify Friday, taking the 5th Amendment as McCallin did last week. The committee is scheduled to meet next Thursday for a decision on McCain and Justice Joseph Boyd. Rish said other hearings also probably will be held early next week. The committee instructed its counsel, state Ethics Commission Chairman Talbot "Sandy" D'Alamberte, to determine if Farish can be cited for contempt. Any contempt citation would require a vote of the full House, D'Alamberte said. McCain's attorney, James Russ of Orlando, informed the committee last week that McCain would not testify, and Rish announced this week the refusal was on the 5th amendment grounds prohibiting self-incrimination. "I think when the figure himself and his closest friend refuse to testify, they don't do anything for their side of the issue," Rep. John Forbes, D-Jacksonville, said. As soon as Farish of West Palm Beach had been sworn as a witness, his attorney, Robert Montgomery of West Palm Beach, read a statement saying he had instructed Farish to refuse all comment and records concerning any cases or activities of cases on grounds of attorney-client relations. He would testify only if releases were obtained from the client and courts, Montgomery said. When D'Alamberte tried to

Mrs. Sheldon Hyden was listed in "very critical" condition in the intensive care unit of Florida Hospital South in Orlando, a hospital spokesman said Saturday morning. Police report that a neighbor heard a gunshot in the Hyden home at 12:30 a.m. and notified police.

When police arrived, they found the wounded Mrs. Hyden, who was rushed to Florida Hospital North in Altamonte Springs and then transferred to Florida Hospital South. Detective John Hendy, investigating the shooting incident, reported no arrests had been made in the shooting. Altamonte Springs police arrested a 40-year-old Eatonville man and charged him with possession of stolen property. Jesse Lee Cleveland, 607 Fitzgerald Drive, was arrested at 3 a.m., at Wymore Groves Apartments and placed in Seminole County jail in lieu of $10,000 bond.

FIRE DAMAGES AREA CHURCH

The Wekiwa Springs Baptist Church, Wekiwa Springs Road, sustained an estimated $50,000 damages in a Friday night fire. Firemen from Forest City and Apopka checked the blaze and limited most of the damage to the rear of the building. The blaze apparently started in the education building. Rev. David Martin said the church was insured and complimented the firemen on their quick response, which was credited with containing the fire before more extensive damage could be done. ## Cardinal Industries President To Be Personality Speaker

Austin Guirlinger, president of Cardinal Industries, Inc., a modular apartment manufacturing plant, will be guest speaker May 6 at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce "Personality Breakfast." The "breakfast" will be held at the chamber from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m. Guirlinger is expected to present a slide show of the manufacturing plant and explain how the modular apartments are constructed in the plant and then transported to the apartment complex site and set up. Cardinal has received a zoning approval from the City Commission to locate a 48-unit complex on South Sanford Avenue, next to the Sanora housing development. Guirlinger said the plant, located on South Sanford Avenue, will start operation in June and said he hopes to employ 50-60 people by the end of 1975. He said the work force may be increased to over 100 people by mid-1976.

Sheriff's deputies reported Saturday burglars broke into the Geneva Grocery store on Avenue C in Geneva Friday night and stole more than $1,000 worth of merchandise. Store owner Fred Angle, 31, of Geneva told deputies someone broke the padlock on the front door and broke out the door window to gain entry into the store. Angle reported that $600 worth of cigarettes, $100 worth of cigars, a tape deck and radio, totaling $300, and several other items were taken. Don Baldwin, 40, Box 338 on Tusawilla Road, reported $700 worth of possessions were stolen from his house.

Kimbrough Seeks 'Airing' Of Report

Seminole County Commissioner John Kimbrough said he will ask that a recently issued sealed Grand Jury report be the subject of a Tuesday commission agenda item. The report, issued April 8 by Circuit Court Judge A.J. Hosemann Jr., was ordered to remain sealed until those cited by the report have a chance to reply to the criticism. Hosemann received the interim report after the Grand Jury had been in session for two days. Hosemann ordered the report sealed and had two copies sent by certified mail to those persons or agencies involved in the report.

House Approves Package Of Malpractice Bills

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The House has approved a package of medical malpractice insurance bills designed to protect doctors who face the loss of their current coverage. Overwhelming approval of the five bills Friday completed House action on its package of seven malpractice measures. The Senate has passed a bill, similar to one passed by the House, which sets a four-year limit on filing most malpractice claims. Senate Commerce Chairman W.D. Childers, D-Pensacola, said he will have to study the House bills before deciding whether to consider them or take up differing Senate bills.

Heart Attack Claims General

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Retired Maj. Gen. William D. Hamlin, former commandant of the U.S. Army Signal School, has died of a heart attack at the age of 70. Hamlin suffered the attack and died Thursday. A 1929 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, he received a masters degree in communications engineering three years later from the University of Hartford. After serving as chief of the Army's communications service division, he was named commanding general in charge of the Army's signal school. He served as commandant of Fort Monmouth, N.J., from 1960 to 1962.

Mattiny Ordered To Jail

DELAND, Fla. (AP) — DeLand attorney John B. Mattiny has been ordered jailed after a judge found him in contempt of court for refusing to produce a file on an estate case from which money was missing. Circuit Judge Robert Durden ordered the former Volusia County School Board attorney to the county jail Friday until he produces his file on the estate of Beatrice Rasmussen, who died in 1965. Earlier this month Mattiny was charged with six counts of grand larceny stemming from his handling of clients' trust accounts. At that time he was freed on $2,500 bond.

Courts Consider Coverage

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The Executive Committee of the Florida Conference of Circuit Judges will be asked to consider admitting still and television cameras and reporters' tape recorders into courtrooms. The suggestion was made Friday to the conference president, Circuit Judge Parker Lee McDonald, during a southeastern regional meeting of the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi. McDonald said he will propose the trial program to the committee at a meeting next month. McDonald took part in a SDX panel discussion, "Free Press — Fair Trial."

He said he telephoned a probation officer about the appearance, but that officer didn't have any information on it and then he failed to contact his bondsman. ## Experts 'Confident' Recession Near End mail by the second week in May. A taxpayer can receive up to a $200 cash rebate on his 1974 taxes. And the tax bonanza on new home purchases says the government will give you a tax credit of five per cent of the home's sale price, up to a maximum $2,000. The homes purchased must have been built or under construction and previously unoccupied by March 28, 1975. Though economists predict brighter economic outlooks, experts say it may be as long as six months before the unemployment rate drops significantly. The reason, officials say, is businesses are reluctant to hire new employees until they're assured the economy has recovered a recession is at an end.

Longwood Volunteers Clash With City

received should have been placed in the city treasury since he (LaBossier) is a paid city employee. He also ruled that LaBossier could not be a member of the volunteers and further that it is improper for anyone to solicit donations from those whose homes or businesses were saved from fire. "The people are paying taxes for fire protection," Julian said. Kelley refused to permit the audit. The volunteers' treasury is no one's business, Kelley said, adding a contributor however, could ask to see the books. Kelley also asked the City this week to direct the $1,000 budgeted quarterly for volunteers' reimbursement into the volunteers' treasury. Kelly said the group has something in mind for the money, but it would not be used for equipment or to pay individual volunteers. He refused to elaborate. Julian said the City could not properly give money to an association that does not exist. And Council insisted the City's obligation is to the individual volunteers and checks would be made out to them as usual. What the volunteers do with their money is up to them, the Board said. The volunteers over the years have been a tight-knit group. They have always been able to muster an audience full of supporters at City Council meetings to emphasize their demands. Roger Mobley, a city native, has been a volunteer since he was a youth — for 12 years. The next oldest member, in terms of longevity, is Kelley. All the others have been volunteers for less than five years and most for less than three years. Kelley and LaBossier denied last week they joined forces two years ago to strip membership from 14-year veteran volunteer Bobby Widdis. Kelley insisted all the volunteers at the time, except Widdis, acquired the minimum standard of training for firefighters. "We believed we were better qualified than he," Kelley said, adding only a vote by the whole group can expel a volunteer. Kelley said he talked to Widdis in recent weeks inviting him to come before the group for a new vote. He said he believed Widdis "could come back in and help us out" and the members would vote for him.

Kelley was hard put to explain to the Council how Widdis, who was considered unqualified two years ago, despite his 14-years experience, could have suddenly acquired qualifications. It was revealed Widdis helped fight a $200,000 fire in the city last month. He was considered qualified to risk his life inside a burning building. Since Widdis was not a member of the volunteers at the time he was not covered with city insurance. Kelley told The Herald after a private conversation with Widdis some weeks ago he (Kelley) talked to many other members to determine they would approve Widdis. Kelley said now because of the flap at the Council meeting he cannot say how the members would vote on Widdis. "There's no way two men can stop anyone from being on the department," Kelley said. It takes a two-thirds vote of the membership to accept a new member and then the member is on probation for a year. "After the year if we want him to stay all right," he said, "if not we can boot him out." Kelley said in the five years he has been with the volunteers there has never been more interest in the organization than now. "I'd like to get the bickering with the City over and get to work on worthwhile projects," he said.

SIX ESCAPE FIRE INJURY

Fire of undetermined origin raced through the frame dwelling of the Henry L. Kidd family on S. Sanford Avenue early Saturday destroying the possessions of Kidd, his wife and seven children, ages 3 to 17. County fire units kept the blaze from spreading but the house was burned to the ground. Mrs. Merle Kidd said she was awakened by a "popping sound" and the house was in flames. She gathered five children in the house and ran to safety as Kidd, working at a Sanford restaurant, rushed home after being notified by a neighbor of the fire. Kidd said two of his children were not at home when the fire erupted.

Uric Acid Is Normal

DEAR DR. LAMB—What causes uric acid in one's system? Also, is it painful to have and is there a cure for it? Will a person always have it?

Dr. Lamb

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB

DEAR DR. LAMB—We all have uric acid. It is a normal byproduct of the constant replacement of cells in your body. The important gene substances of DNA and RNA involved in regeneration may produce it in the process. We all have constant regeneration. There are three-million new red blood cells formed every second. The lining of the small intestine is replaced every three days. The cell formation of uric acid is the most important source of elevated uric acid. It is closely related to protein metabolism. The substance has no apparent value in the body and the excess amount is normally eliminated in the urine. That is how it gets its name.

It is not painful or harmful as long as it stays in solution. Unfortunately, it forms salts that can form crystals. These lead to painful, swollen joints as seen in gout or can form deposits leading to gouty arthritis. The small amounts of uric acid we consider normal don't do this.

Some people have a tendency to form more uric acid than others. This may lead to gout, but it may not in other people. The most effective way to lower the uric acid level to normal ranges and prevent problems seems to be with agents that prevent its formation in the cells, a fairly recent medical development, and agents that increase its elimination from the kidneys.

Other medicines act directly to relieve the painful gout attacks. DEAR DR. LAMB—What, if any, are the symptoms of glaucoma? Is it more prevalent in men or women, or any particular age group?

DEAR READER—Glaucoma is a steady increase in pressure inside the eyeball. As the pressure builds up it destroys the seeing ability of the eye and causes blindness. Glaucoma can be a sudden development. The eyeball may be painful, and there may be a sudden dimming of vision.

More often it is an insidious disease. The pressure builds up slowly and the person is unaware that anything is wrong. There may be some colored rings around bright objects, or the vision may begin to fall, first with decreased ability to see objects at the side. The vision may remain good when looking straight ahead for some time.

Quite often the first sign of the disease is found by a routine eye examination that measures the pressure within the eyes. The earlier it is detected, the more likely the doctor can do something about it. Since nearly half of the adult blindness in the United States and Canada is caused by glaucoma, it is very important to have an annual check for early detection. This applies particularly to those over 50 years of age. Women after middle-age are most frequently affected.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I read your column saying one shouldn't eat raw meat. I'm a neat cutter and I got brucellosis at my place of employment. While all meat is supposed to be government inspected, I got this disease while handling and preparing the meat for sale. I think it would be much more dangerous to consume this meat.

I had a 106-degree temperature with the attack. After the antibiotics began to build up, the doctors could diagnose my condition. It took three weeks to spread the brucellosis germ that causes the fever and illness you had.

Of course, the meat has to be infected to begin with, and about five per cent of cattle in the United States still have brucellosis. Butchers, and slaughterhouse workers are exposed to this problem and are the group in the population most likely to get this disease from handling meat.

Beware The Coming Boom

After The Grandmother Of Recessions, Grandfather Expansion

The Herald Services
In the two decades to 1974 industrial production in the world's 24 richest capitalist countries - members of the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development - rose at an annual average rate of 5.5 per cent. Britain notched up only about half that average rate, and Japan scored double it, but all countries prospered until the 1974-75 slump.

Last year OECD industrial production fell. By the end of the year, the fall had accelerated to over 15 per cent and plant will become idle. Even when actual growth catches up with potential, it will take up to a year before unemployment stops rising. Before unemployment can be reduced and idle plant can be brought back into use, actual production must, for a time, rise faster than potential output.

The slump is opening the gap between actual and potential output. How fast? Assume (1) maintained 5.5 per cent annual growth in potential; (2) no further fall in OECD industrial production after this month; (3) steady recovery from the middle of this year to the long-term 5.5 per cent industrial growth rate by its end - then 1976 will begin with a 15 per cent gap between actual and potential output.

The gap will not be precisely 15 per cent. The growth of potential output could have slowed during this month; (3) steady recovery from the middle of this year to the long-term 5.5 per cent industrial growth rate by its end - then 1976 will begin with a 15 per cent gap between actual and potential output.

Most governments have already turned their policies around to fight against recession. Monetary policy has been eased and interest rates have tumbled. America's expected budget deficit seems to grow bigger with each news dispatch. But deflation takes time to have its effects, and it is working against a strong recessionary tide. The tide now seems unlikely to turn until 1976.

Even if it does turn before that, a double-figure gap between potential and actual industrial production is certain by the end of this year. Governments will want to close it, because (1) unemployment is already high and will go on

Will New York City Become Another National Problem?

NEW YORK - (LENS) - Despite New York City's size and wealth and status as the country's cultural and financial center, it is in financial peril, seemingly on the brink of bankruptcy.

During the past year it has been borrowing so frequently that its obligations now make up fully 25 per cent of the country's outstanding municipal securities. Bankers are increasingly reluctant to handle more of its offerings, except at interest rates far above those other municipalities must pay to borrow. Moreover, there is little relief in sight. Abraham Beame, the doughy and ebullient (61) mayor who first took office 166 months ago, is finding it extremely difficult to balance the city's present $11-billion budget. The new financial year that begins in July will be worse; outlays of $13 billion are forecast.

Although the city's plight has been exacerbated by the recession, most of its problems are of its own making. Traditionally, New York has tried to do too much for its people. It has its own college and university complex and its own housing and hospitals, and has helped to finance an impressive range of social services. But the ability to pay for all this has been deteriorating. Lately inflation has taken a toll, but the city's tax base has been eroding for years as a result of the flight of the more affluent to the suburbs and the loss of commercial and industrial firms to more favorable economic environments.

During the past five years the city has lost over 300,000 jobs, and well over 10 per cent of its work force is now unemployed. Without a revival in business activity, it is estimated that 15 per cent of the population will be receiving public assistance next year.

New Yorkers are already the most highly taxed Americans. In addition to federal and state levies, they pay an 8 per cent city sales tax on consumer goods and a local income tax of up to 3.5 per cent. Resident property owners are taxed at close to 7.5 per cent of assessed valuation (Beame is proposing over 8 per cent for next year) and pay many other charges and fees.

Most authorities fear that fresh increases will lead to renewed exodus of business and middle income residents. Even blacked and Puerto Rican spokesmen, who formerly threatened turmoil unless their demands for assistance to their communities were met, fear that New York could become another Newark.

A drive has now been mounted to reduce the city's responsibilities. Mayor Beame has announced that he will shut down a number of day-care centers, reduce fire, police and sanitation services, increase the size of classes in the city's schools and raise teaching loads in the city's university system. These demands have understandably encountered opposition from trade union leaders.

The Seminole Junior College golf team travels to Lake City Monday to compete in the Division championship. The tournament will be at the Lake City Country Club. Seven Division teams will be competing in the 27-hole event. Lake City and Seminole Junior College, who have split their two matches this season, are the favorites. The Raiders boosted their season slate to 12-4 Thursday with a 365-333 win over Lake Summit at the Mayfair Country Club. Chip Harkins paced SJC with a 33-36-74. ## Weatherman Lures Anglers Onto Seas

The weatherman finally smiled upon ocean anglers Thursday. Charter boats, idle all week due to winds and rough seas, got outside.

Trolling boats loaded king mackerel, bonito and Spanish mackerel. The large bottom fishing craft also had a successful day.

Captain Al Kline on the "Snow White 3" steered his catches have been made. Five gallons per boat is the limit, regardless of the number of people in the boat.

On the local fishing front, a leftover note from last week shows a heavy string of bass for William Martin and party at the Osteen Bridge Fish Camp last Saturday.

Using a black plastic worm, Martin pulled in bass weighing three and a half, five and a half and 10 pounds.

Hood Coker fished out of Marina Isle Camp, landing 12 beautiful big bream on a "Beetle-Spin" lure.

Bob King, former manager of the camp, got in a couple of good bream fishing trips this week. He was accompanied on one by Henry Russell, who helped him put 47 in the boat. On another day, C.O. Perney was his partner and the two landed 50 bream.

Bob said that he counted 14 boats sitting on the bream bed on his last trip and that he was sure they took from 500 to 600 bream.

This bream bed was in Lake Jessup, and David Hiley of Hiley's Camp confirmed that the shellcrackers were thick early in the week. David also mentioned the few speckled perch now being landed are still full of roe.

Most of the experienced bream fishermen anticipate another bedding season at the end of the month and expect catches to be even better.

Al Lemon Bluff, Gerald DeYoung said that the heavy rains brought the water level up by at least 10 inches and that the current once again is flowing in the proper direction. However, fishing has not been good because the water has been muddied by the rains.

One bass of nine pounds was taken on a live shiner at Lemon Bluff and isolated school bass have been striking in the area. As soon as the water clears up, DeYoung expects fishing to be tops again, with bass the main attraction.

The "Rebel" plug paid off for Doug Copelan with four bass Wednesday and three more Thursday as he tried his luck at Wekiva River Haven Camp.

Redbreast, enough for family fish fries, are hitting in the Wekiva and huge catfish in the 30-pound range have been spotted. But no one has been able to tease them into taking a baited hook.

Good bass catches continue to come in at Camp Seminole on the Wekiva. Bill Hawkins landed a pair of five pounders last week.

Judy Sellers caught her third bass last week — 26-inch long, 14-pound beauty using a Garcia ultra-light rod and reel with six-pound line and devil-horse lure in a lake near Osteen.

Also, Delbert Euga, who returned from meetings in Tallahassee, relayed this message from Bill Woods, chief of fisheries for the Florida Fish and Game Department:

"If anyone observes any illegal fishing activities, such as illegal or unmarked trot lines or fish traps, call 1-800-343-8620 (toll free) — the Ocala Regional office.

"They are in contact with all area officers by radio. This will enable them to get to the scene promptly and enforce the law."

Iverson Takes Lead; Sanders Plots Charge

PENSACOLA (AP) — Don Iverson has broken out of a tightly bunched field with a six-under-par 66 to take the lead in the $25,000 Pensacola Open Golf Tournament. But flamboyant Doug Sanders, a two-time champion here, has begun his move.

Iverson carried a nine-under 132 into Saturday's third round, holding a two-shot lead over Jerry McGee.

Six players were tied at 136, and Sanders came in at 137 in a six-way deadlock for ninth place after a scintling 64 in quest of his first victory since winning the Kemper Open three years ago.

"I've got to make $2,000 this week just to pay the doctor's bills," said Sanders, suffering from a severe cold.

"I can't breathe in my chest because it is so congested," he said. "The doctor told me to go to bed for five days and just rest. But I couldn't drop out of that. But I couldn't drop out of that. I just dropped out of one not long ago and they might think I wouldn't honor my commitments.

"It's my own stupid fault for not taking better care of myself," he said. "I'm just completely run down."

The stocky, 5-foot-10, 190-pound Iverson, whose only victory came in a satellite event, found himself in the lead for the one-inch tap-in for a birdie on the par-5 14th and later three-putted from 30 feet for a bogey at No. 17.

Sanders, a 20-year veteran, had five birdies on the last six holes of the front side at the 6,579-yard, par-71 Pensacola Country Club course. And he bogied the only one he failed to birdie in that stretch — No. 8, when he missed the green.

THIS NEW WEAPON IS GOING TO TAKE SOME GETTING USED TO!

Dad and Mom . . . Shealy and Emmeline Best, who have just received their 15 year pins as members of the Roller Skating Rink Owners of America. "We've always wanted a business that gave happiness and health to children. And we always hoped that our son, Chuck, and daughter, Sheala, would join us in our careers. We always knew that the family who skated together, stayed together, and that's the way it's been with us.

Because You Cared . . .

Our lifelong dream of owning our own family skating rink has been a reality for almost 15 years. Our family's first rink opened in 1961 on Airport Boulevard (then Onora Road). In April, 1973 our new Melodee Skating Rink opened on 25th Street in Sanford. It's been a lot of hard work for our entire family but we've loved every minute of it. Because we've worked together to build something beautiful for the children of our community, and you've supported us every inch of the way.

Because You Shared . . .

Our skating shows have raised approximately $20,000 for such charities and worthy causes as the HEART FUND, MARCH OF DIMES, SCARC, TAFETA, CENTRAL FLORIDA ZOO, CANCER SOCIETY, AREA SCHOOLS AND PTA'S AND OTHERS. We humbly thank all those who helped us help others, and we bless every child, big and small, who put on their skates and performed for those who were less fortunate.

Meet The Family . . . . .

Our Daughter, Sheala Best Albers

Professional skater, teacher and producer-director of our shows. Sheala just received her 13 year certificate from SRSTA. She has created more than 20 shows utilizing local skaters. Her pupils range from 8 months (believe it or not) to 74 years of age. She teaches beginners, fundamental, and basic dance classes and also gives private and semi-private lessons to advanced skaters. Sheala loves every minute of her professional activities and it shows.

Our Son, Chuck Best

Manager of Melodee and professional skater. Member of SRSTA (Society of Roller Skating Teachers of America) for seven years. Chuck enjoys speed skating, roller hockey and teaching and supervising youngsters. He is interested in the A.A.U. program for roller skaters and will start a new group in May for the young people of Melodee. He works with Scout leaders and assists Scouts in earning their merit badges, and still finds time to keep the peace and coach 3 hockey teams at our rink. Your children are in good hands with Chuck.

Come See Us . . . . .

We're proud of how we've been accepted in our community and we're proud of our hundreds of friends. Come see us soon and tell us that you've seen our ad of thanks. Then we'll know we've found a way to say "Thanks, each and every one, for caring, for sharing, for being part of the Melodee family of friends."

Old Houses

What Tales They Could Tell. . .

By JEAN PATTESON
Women's Editor

They don't build houses like this anymore, with three-story towers and jutting attic windows and lattice framed verandahs. And not too many folks live in homes the way they used to, from generation to generation, the same family in the same house.

In Sanford, one of the few old homes which has remained in the same family close to 100 years, is the old Doudney house (better known, perhaps, as the Vaughn house) at 2000 Park Avenue.

Abby Doudney Hutchison was born in that large old house three days before the dawn of the 20th century. For the past 75 years she has lived there, first as a child, then in 1928 a new bride renting the lower floor apartment from her mother, and finally in 1936, she and her husband, William C. Hutchison Sr., moved with their two children, William Jr. and Perrose into the upper two floors of the dwelling. At present, Mr. and Mrs. Hutchison are in the process of moving across the road into a smaller house at 1921 Park Avenue—the very site, Mrs. Hutchison recalls, where the Evans family who lived on Magnolia Avenue once had their private cemetery, and where her own father, Alfred C. Doudney, was buried in 1901.

"It broke my heart," said the attractive and energetic Mrs. Hutchison, "to think of strangers moving into our house. But now it has been saved for the family by a wonderful stroke of good fortune. My daughter Perrose and her husband have decided to buy the house and move in when he retires from the Navy in about five years' time. Their children will be the forth generation to live in that house."

The original five-acre property was deeded to a Mr. Wellington by this city's founder, Gen. Henry S. Sanford, some time before 1880. Wellington started building the house, and while it was still under construction, it was purchased by Alfred Doudney in about 1892.

"Yes," mused Mrs. Hutchison. "My mother set up housekeeping over there, and my brother, Sanford, and I were born under that roof."

Sanford Doudney was tax assessor in Sanford for many years, and his son, Alfred C. Doudney II, still lives in this city.

"My father came to this country from England in search of a long-lost brother who had sailed to Florida and not been heard of for years," Mrs. Hutchison related. "Ironically, after the brothers were finally reunited in Sanford, it was my father who stayed on and his brother who returned to the Old Country."

"Father built an icing plant in Sanford. He was the first man to refrigerate the freight trains running north from here with produce."

Sadly, it was an accident at that icing plant which caused her father's early death. "One day, the plant manager came rushing up from the basement where all the machinery was kept, screaming that the ammonia was leaking. My father rushed down and eventually closed the tank, but he had inhaled so much of the gas that it led to a lingering illness and his death two years later."

Mrs. Hutchison was barely three years old at the time. Ten years later, her mother remarried a Sanford native, Alexander Vaughan. "I shall never forget how perfectly lovely she looked on her second wedding day," sighed her daughter. Mrs. Vaughn died in 1956 at the fine old age of 90. She had been in hospital only once in her life — to have a broken collar bone set — and is best remembered for the willing volunteer work she did in Sanford, particularly through the Episcopal Church Women.

"I wish you could have known the house in the old days," Mrs. Hutchison said. "It sat alone on five acres of countryside. Park Avenue ended at 20th Street in those days, and our house was right at the end of the avenue. The city limits were at 10th Street."

"That put us about a mile and a quarter out in the country," she smiled. "I remember how parents would drive out in horse and buggy on Sundays and leave their children for the day. We played on a 'roller coaster' we'd rigged up from the barn roof, and my mother would serve delicious homemade icecream that had been kept frozen in the icing plant."

"We had a windmill to raise water," she continued eagerly. "And if the wind didn't blow, we had to pump water by hand."

The Doudney house sits at the highest point in Sanford — about 55 feet above sea level. "My father was the civil engineer who first surveyed Park Avenue. He chose the site well," Mrs. Hutchison commented.

Plans were made in 1922 to extend Park Avenue several blocks further south. But there was one problem: the Doudney home sat right in the middle of where the new road was planned. So it had to be removed — "with muscles and huge, smooth logs used as rollers. It took six months," Mrs. Hutchison recalled. "Now the house faces east instead of north, but I like it better this way," she added.

In 1937, the historical house was completely remodeled inside, and it remains today one of the most gracious and comfortable homes in the city.

Charm Of Sanford 100 Years Ago Lingers In Her Historical Homes

Old Homes harbor ghosts of the past; new ones project the lives of their inmates into the future. A modern home vibrant with the personalities who dwell in the here and now, is the Wilson Place home of Leroy and Norma Robb (left). Constructed around a large pool, almost every room affords a view of inviting blue waters. I love it, says Norma, because it brings the outdoors, indoors.

"If only we knew . . ." sighed Mrs. James (Leticia) Lee, surveying the tall-ceilinged living room and adjoining parlor of her 113 15th Street home.

"If we could find out when it was built and who lived here and what they were like . . . but so much is lost with the passing of time."

Mrs. Lee does know that her home is pretty close to celebrating its centenary. She believes it was built in about 1880. But unlike the Doudney home, it has not been occupied by generations of just one family all those years. With the changing of hands, the threads of the lives which once lived in the rambling house have tangled or snapped. Ghosts lurk; but there is no family Bible, no yellowed photograph album to span the years and conjure up those ghosts.

Still, a sense of history pervades the Lee home. In the parlor hang portraits of Leticia's father and his sister as children; of Leticia as a young girl; of her own three children and soon she hopes to have one of her first two grandchildren.

As with many of Sanford's older homes, the Lee home is ideal for a growing family, but rather huge and empty once the youngsters have flown the nest. However, just as with most families, it's wonderful to have all that space when the children and grandchildren do come home to visit.

Leticia and her husband, James, who is district supervisor for the Seminole County Parole and Probation Office, have raised all three of their children in their historic old home over the past 18 years.

Massive beams, wood paneling and latticed windows give the James Lee home distinctive character. (Herald Photos by Jean Patteson)

"We feel we're part of the place by now," she explained. Their daughter Kathy is now married and living in St. Petersburg; she has two children, Jamie, 4, and Lee, 2. A second daughter, Linda, is at the University of Florida in Gainesville, and their son, Jim, is an assistant theatre manager in Jacksonville.

All three generations love the old house, says Leticia, and the grandchildren are particularly fond of the games they can play up and down the steep staircase which is divided at the base by a high paneled landing and sturdy bannister.

While she is fond of the airy parlor with its prettily latticed French doors and bay windows, and while the imposing entrance and living area is most unusual with its heavy timbers and large fireplace, it is the dining room which Leticia enjoys most.

Lit by a Tiffany-style lamp patterned with windmills on a sunset-colored stained glass, it is a long, tall room where one can easily imagine elegant ladies and attentive gentlemen sitting down to a grand banquet.

Interesting antiques enhance the historic character of the house — a china cabinet from Leticia's mother; cut glass pieces from her grandmother. Much of the upholstery, caning and refinishing Leticia has done herself.

Brand new and still waiting for memory-makers to take up residence are the homes at The Oaks on West 25th Street, Sanford. Yet already these rough-sawn cedar homes shaded by massive oak trees embody the spirit of the future—a marriage of the privacy and spaciousness of a single family home with the small, minimum- upkeep yard of a condominium—enjoyed here by Jeff and Lynne McKee.

Name Changed

At the April 10 meeting of the North Orlando Garden Club, held at the home of hostess Sally Bowersox, 70 South Cortez Ave., at 7:30 p.m., the members voted to change the name of the club to the Community Garden Club of Winter Springs.

Janet Pottinger, president of the club acted as hostess for the evening.

Since the name of the city of Winter Springs had been changed from the Village of North Orlando in 1972, the members felt they also should be identified with the name Winter Springs.

A decision to separate from the National Federation of Garden Clubs was made at the meeting. The members decided that they would concentrate on a more local and community minded level in the future.

The meeting featured the exchange of potted plants between the members.

Several weeks ago, the club had presented the Winter Springs Elementary school with a Cherry Laurel tree, as one of their projects.

The meeting featured the exchange of potted plants between the members.

To help with this expense and other future projects, the club held a Hummage Sale on April 12 at the Super Value Store on SR 436. The club realized $35 from that event.

Firefighters

Congratulations are extended to Carl "Sonny" Mitchell, Roger Roy, Jimmy Graham

Auxiliary Busy

The members of the Ladies and the Auxiliary of the Ladies

And Tim Lathan who graduated from the 200-hour Minimum Standards Certification Course for Firefighters, at a ceremony held at SJC on April 18 at 7 p.m.

In attendance from the city were Fire Chief Charles Holzman, Councilman John Daniels and his lovely wife, Mary, and many of the Winter Springs Volunteer Firefighters.

Members of the Winter Springs Fire Dept. and Volunteer Fire Depts., came out in force to participate in a successful car wash held on April 12 at the Sunoco Service Station on Highway 17-92.

Proceeds from this event will go to aiding the Volunteers in their civic projects.

Golf Success

The first of a two-day golf project was termed a "complete success" by President Ernie Hendrix of the Winter Springs Jaycees.

The affair was held at the Tusawilla Golf Course all day April 12. Four lucky people won free golf balls for hitting the ball within a 15 ft. radius and one gentleman won a free round of golf for the same feat.

Ten members of the Jaycees helped to make the day a success, with the realization of $150 to help towards the club's charitable projects. Special mention and accolades go to Vicki Hendrix, wife of President Hendrix for being the only woman to help out at the affair.

There will be another golf program held this weekend at Sheeh Golf Course.

Speak Out

This city has a great many "sidewalk superintendents" who are vocal about just how this city should be governed and planned. They now have an opportunity to do something about their ideas.

Musical Fete

The Lively Socialites, Winter Springs Senior Citizen Club, will hold a meeting at the Highlands Club House on Shepherd Road at 1:00 a.m. on April 25. Featured will be a choral group from Seminole High School to entertain the members and guests.

Everyone in the community who is over 55 years of age is welcome to attend. Just bring a sack lunch with you and coffee and a delicious homemade dessert will be served free of charge.

There are many opportunities open to the senior citizens in the city, but most programs require 10 or more members before they can be subsidized by the County or the federal government. Members are needed, and you will be welcomed!

Good Neighbor

GOOD NEIGHBOR OF THE WEEK... M.F. Scott Kenneth of S. Devon. Scott has lived in the city for several years and has been actively involved in many community projects over those years. He is currently a Winter Springs police officer and is now Deputy Fire Chief of the Winter Springs Volunteer Fire Dept. His assistance in the fire department has been invaluable, and to quote one supporter, "I feel the department couldn't function without him." He donates an excessive amount of time to help the radio communications of this city in running order. He is a qualified emergency technician and works with the American Red Cross on its disaster team.

He has instructed members of the Winter Springs Junior Police in the field of communications, and is also working with the Junior Police to obtain training in Red Cross First Aid procedures.

According to one volunteer, "We have come a long way with Scott's assistance in upgrading the Volunteer Fire Dept. He is a real good guy!"

Enthusiastic praise from the men you work with is one of the highest forms of compliments you can be paid! From all reports, Scott deserves all the accolades he receives.

Real Estate Investments

BY LARRY SAXON

Dear Mr. Saxon, How do you find the total acreage in a rectangle or a square?

Dear Mr. A.U. Multiple the total square footage by 23 and total off 6 places.

Dear Mr. Saxon, Can I exchange a mortgage I hold for a duplex (income property) and have the transaction qualify as a "tax free" exchange?

Dear C.W. No. This does not qualify as a "tax free" exchange because this is an exchange of personal property for real estate, so consequently is not a "like for like" exchange.

Dear Mr. Saxon, I have been offered a good price for my commercial building, but I am afraid to accept it because I've owned it for years and I know the income taxes on the sale would wipe me out. Is there any way I can take this sale and reinvest the money and not pay taxes?

Dear C.W. Yes, there is — providing you use the avenue of the tax-free exchange, and design the wording of the Deposit Receipt and escrow to conform with the Internal Revenue Code requirements.

Many "sales" have been converted to tax-free exchanges by a competent exchange and investment specialist in cooperation with the client's C.P.A.

The main requirement is in the designing of the transaction before it goes too far. This is definitely a case of "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Consult with a trained exchanger at once. When he knows your circumstances and needs, he can locate the proper property, design a transaction, and confer with your C.P.A., permitting you to use all of your equity in the acquiring of the new property without having a portion drained off in taxes.

Simply because they're the kind of people who aren't willing to listen to tales of woe about the economy. They're the kind of people who are willing to get off their duffs if customers don't come to them. Instead,

Askew Proclaims Realtor Week Throughout Florida

Florida Governor Reubin Askew today proclaimed April 20-26 as Realtor Week in recognition of the role Realtors have played "in seeking solutions to the problems of our cities, towns and environment through the activities of their broad Make America Better Program."

In his proclamation, Governor Askew also noted that the right of private real property ownership is "one of the most fundamental of human rights." He added that Realtors have vigorously defended this right, "which is a safeguard of our free society."

"Citizens of this and all of our United States have benefited in countless ways from the efforts of Realtors in civic affairs, for charitable causes and, most importantly, in the sharing of their professional knowledge of real estate matters for the good of our communities and our state," he added.

Governor Askew added that there are 500,000 Realtors and Realtor-Associates nationally who are pledged to a "rigid Code of Ethics and dedicated to maintaining high professional standards through continuing education of its members."

He urged citizens to join in the Realtor Week observance through appropriate and significant programs of civic betterment.

Security First Federal To Open Longwood Office

Security First Federal Savings and Loan Association has received approval of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to establish a new office in the Longwood Village Shopping Center, according to an announcement by George C. Boone, Jr., president of the Association.

Longwood Village Shopping Center is located at the intersection of State Road 434 and 14 in Seminole County.

The new Longwood office will be served by the same computer system which serves the Association's present offices, Mr. Boone pointed out.

"Because our existing 12 offices are computer-linked, and our new Longwood office will be served by the same computer, our customers enjoy the convenience of being able to make deposits to their savings accounts and withdrawals, as well as mortgage payments, at any of our offices, regardless of where the account was opened," Mr. Boone said.

With the opening of the Longwood office, Security First Federal will be serving a six county area in East Central Florida stretching from Orlando to Daytona Beach and up to St. Augustine Beach and surrounding areas.

Mr. Boone added that "all savings and home loan services will be available at the new Longwood office." There are presently

'Don't Wait For Mountain To Come To You' Good Housing Buys Are Available

BY JULIAN STENSTROM

They go out and list houses, lots, groves, farms and acreage. If they're fortunate enough to come up with a few prime listings they contact friends, former customers, even relatives and let them about the good buys they've listed.

Also, real estate offices in Central Florida are not entirely void of customer traffic at this time.

We ran into a real estate sales gal the other day who said she'd turned more property during the first three months of 1975 than she had during her previous two years in the business because the economy taught her one lesson.

"If the mountain does not come to you, then you go to the mountain."

This proves that there are some good buys in Central Florida and, consequently, the real estate market during the first quarter of 1975 has demonstrated some activity.

Of course, the market has not sped along like it did during 1973 and the early part of 1974. But, there is activity and the weekly reports of real estate transactions in The Herald are evidence of that.

And, the outlook doesn't appear to be all that bad, either. Some builders and developers in Seminole County are still constructing homes and those that were started before March 26 of this year and remain unsold probably won't remain in that status very long since Congress has enacted the tax credit legislation.

The inventory of homes falling into this category should start moving at a rather rapid pace and when these homes are purchased you can rest assured that the developers, contractors and builders will be constructing more new homes.

Most local builders and developers agree with their counterparts around the country that the recessionary side has turned and things are looking up.

Big Factor Of course, a big factor in the housing market is motivation. That's the key to all.

If a homeowner has been transferred, if he's lost a job and he's moving back to the north, if he can no longer afford the property he now owns, if his family has outgrown his present residence, or even if his present income dictates that he move up or down, he's likely to be motivated to put his home on the market.

Depending upon the degree of motivation, he's likely to consider any fairly reasonable offer he may get for his property.

We know of homes in this area properly priced at $18,000 going for $14,000. We know of $60,000 homes here going for $50,000.

A homeowner can't be expected to give his home away. But, the fact remains that there are some pretty good buys around. And, lately as least, people selling their existing homes have been accepting reasonable offers even if lower than the asking price.

There's another bright light on the economical horizon. The Florida Department of Commerce flatly states that this state is gaining 7,700 new residents each and every week.

That amounts to 1,100 new residents everyday that passes and these people have to have places to live.

True, apartment complexes and condominiums in Florida are in an overbuilt status at this time, but gradually the apartments are being occupied and little by little the condominiums are being purchased.

Florida is still the Garden of Eden in the minds of many, many northerners who come here for a visit and declare their intentions to return one day and permanently reside here. They've been coming for years and they're going to continue to come — probably in greater numbers than they have in the past.

Effects Sure, the recent recession has had its detrimental effects upon Florida and its people. However, the effect was felt mostly by the home construction industry and the auto dealers. When construction begins again, even on a moderate scale, the auto dealers will get their businesses back to normal and Florida will again be on its merry way of growth and development.

The 1975 president of the Seminole County Board of Realtors is Barton Pilcher, who owns and operates his own brokerage firm, Callbart Realty of Sanford.

Realtors Developing Own Service

The Seminole County Board of Realtors is in the final stages of developing its own multiple listing service and expects to go to publication soon, according to president, Barton Pilcher of the Sanford firm of Callbart Real Estate.

Pilcher said the service will be devoted exclusively to the benefit of the property owners in Seminole County.

"We all would like to follow his recommendation," Pilcher said of the recent talk to the board by super salesman Art Grindle. The talk dealt with patriotism and motivation. Pilcher said the board would like to be identified as "fighters" and appreciate Grindle's focusing on this type attitude.

Pilcher recently was in Atlanta attending a seminar, part of a series designed for realtors to receive a CRB (Certified Residential Broker) title, considered by realtors as nearly equivalent to a college degree.

To receive the designation, minimum experience of five years operating as a broker is required in addition to completion of educational courses.

The graduate realtor institute series includes three one-week long education courses on almost everything in the business from selling to managing and ethics.

The four three-day RNMII courses held in various parts of the county deal with the problems of the residential brokerage business.

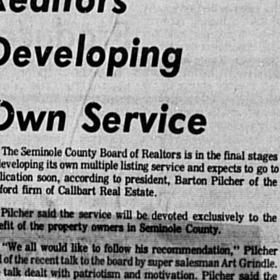

Pilcher has taken three of the courses so far held in Boise, Idaho; Charlotte, N.C. and Atlanta. He plans to attend the fourth and last in the series in Washington, D.C. this fall.

The course in Atlanta was devoted to communications in real estate operation, Pilcher said.

Special interest such as Chamber of Commerce material, school and recreational information, civic and religious institutions, maps, drivers license booklets, brochures and information on suitable housing. The client is periodically contacted, continued Mr. Jordan, until they arrive.

A specially trained Relocation specialist is in charge of each family and is available to serve their every need including a special tour of the new area, total assistance in getting the family acclimated to their new neighborhood, and helping them accept their move, he said.

Mr. Cliff Jordan and the entire staff of Cliff Jordan & Assoc. will be happy to accommodate any resident of Casselberry and Sanford who may be relocating and would like additional information on "total comfort level" services.

Name Changed

At the April 10 meeting of the North Orlando Garden Club, held at the home of hostess Sally Bowersox, 70 South Cortez Ave., at 7:30 p.m., the members voted to change the name of the club to the Community Garden Club of Winter Springs. Janet Pottinger, president of the club acted as co-hostess for the evening.

Since the name of the city of Winter Springs had been changed from the Village of North Orlando in 1972, the members felt they also should be identified with the name Winter Springs. A decision to separate from the National Federation of Garden Clubs was made at the meeting. The members decided that they would concentrate on a more local and community minded level in the future.

The meeting featured the exchange of potted plants between the members.

Several weeks ago, the club had presented the Winter Springs Elementary school with a Cherry Laurel tree, as one of their projects. It was decided at this past meeting to continue this practice and to present the school with a plant, tree or piece of shrubbery each month until further notice, in an effort to help to beautify the school grounds.

To help with this expense and other future projects, the club held a Rummage Sale on April 12 at the Super Value Store on SR 436. The club realized $35 from that event.

Real Estate Investments

BY LARRY SAXON

Dear Mr. Saxon, How do you find the total acreage in a rectangle or a square?

Dear Mr. A.U. Multiple the total square footage by 23 and point off 6 places.

Dear Mr. Saxon, Can I exchange a mortgage I hold for a duplex (income property) and have the transaction qualify as a "tax free" exchange?

Dear C.W. No. This does not qualify as a "tax free" exchange because this is an exchange of personal property for real estate, so consequently is not a "like for like" exchange.

Dear Mr. Saxon, I have been offered a good price for my commercial building, but I am afraid to accept it because I've owned it for years and I know the income taxes on the sale would wipe me out. Is there any way I can take this sale and reinvest the money and not pay taxes?

Dear C.W. Yes, there is — providing you use the avenue of the tax-free exchange, and design the wording of the Deposit Receipt and escrow to conform with the Internal Revenue Code requirements.

Many "sales" have been converted to tax-free exchanges by a competent exchange and investment specialist in cooperation with the client's C.P.A.

The main requirement is in the designing of the transaction before it goes too far. This is definitely a case of "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Consult with a trained exchanger at once. When he knows your circumstances and needs, he can locate the proper property, design a transaction, and confer with your C.P.A., permitting you to use all of your equity in the acquiring of the new property without having a portion drained off in taxes.

'Don't Wait For Mountain To Come To You' Good Housing Buys Are Available

BY JULIAN STENSTROM

"To be or not to be?" might have been the big question for William Shakespeare.

But, if the Bard of Stratford had been in the real estate business today and the economy of his area was like it is around Central Florida today his big question just might have been, "Should I open the office today or get in a little fishing on the Avon?"

We suppose there are some real estate brokers and salesmen in Central Florida who might as well leave the office closed and do a little fishing on the St. Johns.

On the other hand, we know some real estate brokers and salesmen you couldn't keep away from their offices if you chased and padlocked the portals.

Why? Simply because they're the kind of people who aren't willing to listen to tales of woe about the economy. They're the kind of people who are willing to get off their duffs if customers do not come to them. Instead, they go out and list houses, lots, groves, farms and acreage. If they're fortunate enough to come up with a few prime listings they contact friends, former customers, even relatives and tell them about the good buys they've listed.

Also, real estate offices in Central Florida are not entirely void of customer traffic at this time.

We ran into a real estate sales gal the other day who said she'd turned over property during the first three months of 1975 than she had during her previous two years in the business because the economy taught her one lesson.

"If the mountain does not come to you, then you go to the mountain."

This proves that there are some good buys in Central Florida and, consequently, the real estate market during the first quarter of 1975 has demonstrated some activity.

Of course, the market has not opened like it did during 1973 and the early part of 1974. But, there is activity and the weekly reports of real estate transactions in The Herald are evidence of that.

And, the outlook doesn't appear to be all that bad, either. Some builders and developers in Seminole County are still constructing homes and those that were started before March 26 of this year and remain unsold probably won't remain in that status very long since Congress has enacted the tax credit legislation.

The inventory of homes falling into this category should start moving at a rather rapid pace and when these homes are purchased you can rest assured that the developers, contractors and builders will be constructing more new homes.

Most local builders and developers agree with their counterparts around the country that the recessionary tide has turned and things are looking up.

A homeowner can't be expected to give his home away. But, the fact remains that there are some pretty good buys around. And, lately at least, people selling their existing homes have been accepting reasonable offers even if lower than the asking price.

There's another bright light on the economical horizon. The Florida Department of Commerce flatly states that this state is gaining 7,700 new residents each and every week. That amounts to 1,100 new residents everyday that passes and these people have to have places to live.

True, apartment complexes and condominiums in Florida are in an overall status at this time, but gradually the apartments are being occupied and little by little the condominiums are being purchased.

Florida is still the Garden of Eden in the minds of many, many northerners who come here for a visit and declare their intentions to return one day and permanently reside here. They've been coming for years and they're going to continue to come — probably in greater numbers than they have in the past.

Effects Sure, the recent recession has had its detrimental effects upon Florida and its people. However, the effect was felt mostly by the home construction industry and the auto dealers. When construction begins again, even on a moderate scale, the auto dealers will get their businesses back to normal and Florida will again be on its merry way of growth and development.

Realtors Developing Own Service

The Seminole County Board of Realtors is in the final stages of developing its own multiple listing service and expects to go to publication soon, according to president, Barton Pilcher of the Sanford firm of Callbert Real Estate.

Pilcher said the service will be devoted exclusively to the benefit of the property owners in Seminole County.

"We all would like to follow his recommendation," Pilcher said of the recent talk to the board by super salesman Art Grindle. The talk dealt with patriotism and motivation. Pilcher said the board would like to be identified as "fighters" and appreciate Grindle's focusing on this type attitude.

Pilcher recently was in Atlanta attending a seminar, part of a series designed for realtors to receive a CRB (Certified Residential Broker) title, considered by realtors as nearly equivalent to a college degree.

To receive the designation, minimum experience of five years operating as a broker is required in addition to completion of educational courses.

Educational requirements include graduation from the Real Estate Institute series and four courses offered by the Realtors National Marketing Institute (RNMI).

The graduate realtor institute series includes three one-week long education courses on almost everything in the business from selling to managing and ethics.

The four three-day RNMI courses held in various parts of the country deal with the problems of the residential brokerage business.

Pilcher has taken three of the courses so far held in Boise, Idaho; Charlotte, N.C. and Atlanta. He plans to attend the fourth and last in the series in Washington, D.C. this fall.

The course in Atlanta was devoted to communications in real estate operation, Pilcher said.

Single Family Home Sales Rose Sharply In February

CHICAGO—Sales of existing single-family homes rose sharply in February, a survey by the National Association of Realtors Department of Economics and Research has revealed.

The seasonally adjusted index of existing home sales activity slipped to a four-year low of 87 in January (1972-100), but rebounded to 97 in February, the department reports.

"This turnaround—the largest month-to-month gain ever posted in the seven-year history of the index—is the first hopeful sign that a housing recovery may be in progress," said Ken Kerin, department director.

However, Kerin cautioned against reading too much into a single monthly change in the index. He acknowledged, however, that the magnitude of the gain nationally, and the fact that healthy advances were posted in every region of the nation, "is encouraging."

By region, existing home sales in February were up 19 per cent in the Northeast; 11.8 per cent, North Central region; 11.9 per cent, Western; and 9.7 per cent, Southern.

"Perhaps we have seen the end to the year-long slump which has plagued the existing home market," he said.

"A primary reason for improved sales figures is that mortgage funds are flowing back into the credit-starved housing market."

The department's mid-March market survey found that virtually every area of the nation was experiencing improvement in the availability of mortgage credit. This was accompanied by modest to substantial reductions in interest rates, with keen competition developing among lenders in many areas.

Furthermore, the department noted, downpayment requirements and interest rates were being relaxed almost on a weekly basis, with 90 and 95 per cent conventional mortgage reappearing.

These had almost disappeared from the market according to a department survey six months ago.

"Borrowers seeking a conventional loan to finance a new home found ample or moderate supplies of mortgage money in more than 90 per cent of the nation's market areas," Kerin said. "And only 8 per cent of the areas surveyed still were saddled with tight or virtually unavailable mortgage resources," he added.

Hughes added that executives of a Texas company have been to Orlando twice, an Illinois manufacturer has inspected local facilities, and executives from Indiana, Arizona and California have scheduled visits before the sale ends April 30.

In addition to these 14 inquiries, requests for information have come from six firms interested in buying large apartment complexes, six companies seeking information on other investments, and two individuals who may start up new companies in the Orlando area.

As expected, the largest number of inquiries, or 17, asked about bargains in homes, apartments and condominiums. Every inquiry has been promptly answered, Hughes said.

The sale is believed to be the first organized, community-wide effort by any city in the country to offer discounts, rebates, and cost reductions in all forms of industrial and residential properties.

Coinciding with the sale, Hughes said two companies that have been negotiating for space have decided in favor of Orlando.

Super Food Services, Inc., a Dayton, Ohio, based company with annual sales of $260 million, will construct a 261,000 square foot distribution center in Orlando Central Park, a major Orlando industrial complex, at a cost of $6 million. The company has leased space in the park since 1969. The expansion will increase employment from 180 persons to more than 300 persons. Super Food Services expects to double the center's size within three years, increasing employment to about 450 persons.

The second firm, headquartered in New England, cannot be identified at this time but is expected to announce a new plant in Orlando to produce sophisticated electronic equipment.

Larry Saxon, Realtor, is located at 2017 S French Avenue (Hwy 17-92) in Sanford. The firm specializes in Seminole County residential, commercial, vacant and investment properties. Realtor-Associates are Barbara McLean, Kay Aldred, and John McLean.

Saxon is a member of the Seminole County Board of Realtors, Orlando-Winter Park Board of Realtors, Multiple Listing Service, National Association of Realtors, National Real Estate Marketing Institute, Florida Real Estate Exchange, Commercial and Investment Groups and is a graduate of the Realtors Institute.

One of the specialties of this office is the handling of real estate transactions by exchange or will or the usual sale method. The exchange practice really started about 20 years ago while an accountant recommended use of an internal revenue code section which makes it possible to make a profit in real estate and defer capital gains.

As an example, if property purchased 15 years ago grows in value from $15,000 to $110,000 when it is sold now, the capital gains tax would amount to about $25,000. But if the land were exchanged for other property and no money changed hands the tax is deferred. Through a series of pyramid exchanges it's possible to defer payment of these taxes "until the day you die," said Saxon.

But only about 25 per cent of all exchanges are made for tax benefits. The remainder are made because of the uncomfortable circumstances surrounding the ownership such as the inability to meet mortgage payments or undesirable geographic location.

State Board Moves To New Location

By JULIAN STENSTROM

It was in April of 1925 that Florida realtor Walter Rose went to Tallahassee.

The realtor, a member of the recently created Florida Association of Realtors, lobbied House member after House member and Senator after Senator. Finally, Rose convinced enough of them that the state needed a real estate commission.

Consequently, the Florida Real Estate Commission came into existence and this month the organization is quietly celebrating its golden anniversary.

There won't be a lot of fanfare.

About the only noticeable thing, aside from business as usual, will be the fact that the Commission is leaving its cramped quarters at the State Office Building on Morse Boulevard in Winter Park and moving to a new suite of offices.

Toward the end of the month the Florida Real Estate Commission will occupy the second floor of the modern 2099 Building, located at the intersection of Lee Road and Interstate 4.

The new 15,000 square foot office complex will house 85 of the Commission's 133 employees. The other 36 hired hands are field investigators and they're located throughout the state.

Back to Walter Rose: In appreciation of his efforts in getting the legislature to establish the Real Estate Commission to regulate the real estate profession in Florida, Governor Martin appointed Rose to be the first chairman of the Commission.

And, legislators then made the same mistakes as legislatures do today.

The Florida legislature created the Florida Real Estate Commission, but somehow overlooked appropriating any money for its operation.

Rose was also the first real estate broker in Florida to be registered and he received Certificate No. 1.

But, before the ink was dry on his initial certification, he had to dig into his own pockets to finance the newly created Commission's operations.

By 1929 the Florida Real Estate Commission had registered 4,615 brokers. By 1956 the number had reached 25,000. Today, the Florida Real Estate Commission regulates the activities of more than 100,000 real estate brokers and salesmen.

Today the Commission is under the direction of three brokers who are appointed to three-year terms by the governor. Presently serving as chairman of the Commission is Charles F. Faddis of Pensacola.

The other two Commission members are Edgar L. Schlitt of Vero Beach and John R. Wood of Naples. Branch offices are maintained in Jacksonville, Tampa, Winter Park, St. Petersburg, Fort Myers, Miami, Fort Lauderdale and Fort Walton.

Commissioner Faddis, reflecting on the ideals espoused 50 years ago by Rose, finds the founder's views as fresh today as they were then.

"Rose knew," said Faddis, "probably more than anyone else, what Florida would become. And, he knew the land was basic to Florida's health."

"The license law brought professional stature to the real estate business, and," continued Faddis, "that was what Rose knew had to happen."

"Over the long haul, the next 50 years looks good," said Faddis. "America is still the No. 1 choice of emigrants throughout the world."

Right now the market is rising from one of the valleys — just like it did after the Sanford Naval Air Station was moved to Georgia in 1960. The market came back and from 1969 to 1974 this area enjoyed one of the finest real estate markets in its entire history.

For instance, Sanford recently approached federal officials about a plant in the southwestern section of the city and was told that only a plant developed on a regional basis would be considered. # Lumber Dealers View '75 Outlook

ORLANDO — The state's lumber and building material dealers this week took a long look at the economy and its future in relation to the building trades in Orlando.

At its 55th annual convention and exposition at the Sheraton Towers Hotel the Florida Lumber and Building Material Dealers Association heard key industry speakers examine the "Challenge of Change" theme of the convention.

Over 2,000 delegates, including retailers, architects, and builders from Florida and neighboring states, viewed exhibits by 134 of the nation's manufacturers and suppliers set up in the hotel's big exposition hall.

The do it yourselfer is getting more attention than ever from Florida lumber and building material dealers during the current slump in new housing starts. This was evidenced at this year's show as suppliers offered materials aimed at this important market, according to Al Spain, executive vice president of the sponsoring association.

Carl A. Walker of Fort Myers, association president, said keynote speaker for the kick-off breakfast was John A. Walker, executive vice president of Lowe's Companies, North Wilkesboro, N.C., a chain of building supply outlets throughout the east.

"Come Alive in '75" was the challenge thrown out by Robert Spear Horton, president and chairman of the board of Standard Lumber Company, Winona, Minnesota, and current president of the National Lumber and Building Material Dealers Association.

Following Horton was Mike Pekarek, head of National Cash Register's Special Bureau, Dayton, Ohio, who gave a fast-moving review of today's dynamic marketplace, constantly being challenged by a rapidly changing world.

Build Products Gain Slowed By Inflation

NEW YORK, N.Y.—Building products manufacturers on the average experienced a small gain in profits in 1974, but almost all of it was due to inflation, it was reported today by the F. W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Company.

McGraw-Hill Information Systems Company, an authority on the construction market, is noted for its Dodge Reports on Construction Activity and Sweet's Catalog Files of building product information. The latest report is based on it Dodge Division's periodic review of a group of 53 building products firms in 14 different product categories.

George A. Christie, vice-president and chief economist of F. W. Dodge pointed out that the past year's severe inflation influenced costs as much as sales. "Inflation's impact on profits was felt mainly through the appreciation of inventory values," said Christie. "Even here the effect was blunted in 1974, as many firms exercised the option to switch accounting methods in order to avoid taxation on these paper profits."

INCLUDING HOME EQUIPPING!

According to the Dodge economist, nearly half of the 53 firms in the Dodge sample reported a change from FIFO to LIFO inventory accounting in 1974. "Had it not been for this change," he said, "last year's earnings for the building materials industry would have been substantially higher."

Full-year profits of the firms in the 14 groups reviewed by Dodge were: Aluminum (3 companies), up 100 per cent; Iron and Steel (3 companies), up 50 per cent; Plumbing Fixtures (3 companies), up 50 per cent; Electrical Fixtures (4 companies), up 8 per cent; Tools and Hardware (3 companies), up 2 per cent; Cement (8 companies), down 2 per cent; Heavy Equipment (5 companies), down 7 per cent; Forest Products (4 companies), down 11 per cent; Controls (4 companies), down 18 per cent; Glass (3 companies), down 21 per cent; Multiproducts (5 companies), down 21 per cent; Gypsum (2 companies), down 28 per cent; Heating and Air Conditioning (3 companies), down 64 per cent; Coatings (3 companies), down 83 per cent.

Labor Raises Frames' Cost

By LOUISE L. GILL, Economics Agent

The cost of skilled labor has made some picture frames more expensive than the artwork they hold. You can cut some of the costs by making old frames or buying frames yourself.

With a little shopping around, you may be able to find just the right molding on an inexpensive, ready-framed picture. You can use it as is, or cut it down to the size you need. The glass is already in, and you may even be able to salvage the mat. Or dig through a second hand store for an old frame, and apply a little work to refinish, restyle or cut it down to size. Sometimes an overly ornate frame can be made lighter by removing one extra border or ridge. If scrolls or decorations are paper-mache or gesso plaster, you can usually loosen them by tapping the frame.

Remove the old finish with paint remover and apply fresh paint or penetrating sealer for a natural finish.

New frames can be built to size from pre-cut metal or wood moldings. The moldings can be purchased from most framing or hardware stores and come with assembly directions. Wood moldings are available unstained or already finished.

Also in the market are one-piece plastic frames in standard sizes. You just slip your picture into the "box" and hang it on the wall.

Making your own frame from molding is a matter of fitting four pieces together to form a rectangle or square. The inner edge of the molding must be grooved to fit over the picture, glass, and backing to keep them from falling through. Ready-made picture molding will have the groove when you buy it. If you buy molding from a lumberyard, ask the dealer to groove it for you, if you do not have a routing tool at home.

Cut the molding strips to size with a fine-tooth saw, using a miter box to hold the saw at the correct angle to make slanted edges which can be joined in a perfect square corner. The strips are fastened together with finishing nails and glue. For a finished appearance, drive the nails below the wood surface and fill the holes with plastic wood or putty.

For more depth or weight, you can glue several moldings together. An odd number of moldings with the heaviest on the outside works best.

Temporary frames can be used if you like to change pictures often. Metal or plastic braces joined by a tight cord on the backside of the picture hold the matted print and glass together. These braces can be found at most frame stores and some hardware stores.

And don't forget frames for your children's artwork.

Realtors Endorse New Bill

A bill which is to be introduced during the 1975 session of the State Legislature to create a separate department of real estate has been endorsed by the Florida Association of Realtors.

If adopted, the measure would become effective July 1, 1975, and result in transfer of the existing Florida Real Estate Commission (FREC) into the new department. The act would also create a division of condominiums and cooperative units within the new department.

James D. Mott, president of the Florida Association of Realtors, (FAR) points out: "The Real Estate Commission today is charged with the administration of the Florida Real Estate License Law and supervision of the state's more than 107,000 registrants. Yet it is only one of 27 boards and commissions of the Department of Professional and Occupational Regulation (DPOR) most of which have no related activity or problems comparable to those of the real estate business."

Noting that the number of registrants supervised by the FREC is virtually double the number for the next largest group within DPOR, Mott says: "We feel that the real estate business today is so large and so complex that its regulation should be administered by a separate department."

'Good' Year Seen By Realtor Chief

Art S. Leitch, president of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS, has good—but not great—expectations for home buyers during the balance of 1973.

The San Diego REALTORS feels that some changes in the mortgage market picture, first noted by him in late November, should take full effect later this year.

"In my travels late last year, REALTORS were reporting that mortgage money was returning to their institutions and that the record-high interest rates had dropped somewhat," the president said.

The National Association's Department of Economics and Research also noted some improvements nationally by late last year and has predicted at least a partial recovery for the housing industry in 1973.

Leitch emphasized, however, that home buyers, sellers and REALTORS should not expect easy access to mortgage money, nor a return to relatively low-interest mortgages.

"Our best estimate is that 1973 will be better than 1974, but certainly not a banner year. We should have a clearer picture in June," he added.

One of his jobs throughout the year will be to keep the public and REALTORS informed about national trends of this sort and challenges to the right of property ownership.

"In the course of the year I will have attended numerous state association conventions and other functions. I will use those occasions to inform the public about pending legislation and urge REALTOR action at state and national levels when appropriate."

Realtor Board Offers Tips On Selling Home

There's a great deal more involved in selling your home than putting a "for sale" sign in the front yard and running an ad in the newspaper.

— Remove all unnecessary articles from your basement and attic.

— Create a good first impression by keeping the lawn trimmed and edged—and be sure the front door and entryway is clean. Fences and gates should look as good as the rest of the house.

— Redecorate dull and dingy walls and ceilings. An investment in new kitchen wallpaper will pay dividends. Remember the house should look good to a large segment of buyers. Conventional white and easy-blending pastel colors will appeal to a wider range of people.

Stenstrom Approaches 20th Year

Stenstrom Realty, one of Sanford's largest real estate brokerage operations, is approaching its 20th year, according to Herbert E. Stenstrom who founded the organization in early 1956.

Stenstrom began his real estate activities in a downtown office and soon put together a formidable sales force. With a strong emphasis upon training and professionalism, the operation has been highly successful and today is recognized as one of the top real estate organizations in central Florida.

Stenstrom relocated his office in 1964 and since that time has been situated in a modern suite of offices at 2566 Park Drive.

The firm specializes in both residential and commercial sales.

New Money, Lower Rates To Spur Sale Of Homes

CHICAGO — Improved availability of mortgage money, generally lower interest rates and a somewhat tighter rein on inflation are expected to spur sales of existing homes during the remainder of 1973, but construction of new homes for the year may not surpass last year's depressed rate.

That was the forecast from Ken Kerin, director of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS Department of Economics and Research, in a report issued for Realtor Week, April 21-26.

Kerin added two qualifying statements to his prediction for existing home sales: First, the pace of recovery from 1974 "will be modest and will not match the robust growth rates recorded during prior periods of expansion."

"And there still is a danger that a resurgence of inflation will cause reversal in monetary policy, sending interest rates back through the roof once again." If that should happen, he indicated, there would be little cause for even modest optimism concerning expansion in existing home sales activity.

He noted that the much-heralded improvement in mortgage credit during the final quarter of 1973 was slow in stimulating sales of either existing or new homes.

This, he said, was due primarily to consumer caution brought about by a number of factors:

— The question of whether inflation could be brought under control still was paramount in the minds of most Americans.

— Fearful of unemployment, many potential buyers were reluctant to assume the greater mortgage debt associated with moving up the housing ladder.

However, February marked the end of a year-long slump in existing home sales, and, barring a reversal in the mortgage market, the sales outlook remains favorable for the remainder of 1973.

As for new home construction, the picture is not as encouraging. Kerin anticipates that there will be no measurable increase in construction over the 1.33 million annual rate in 1974.

This is largely due to the fact that there was an inventory of about 400,000 unsold new homes at the end of 1974 to carry into 1975, he explained. However, he feels that a tax credit measure approved as part of the tax reduction bill should help eliminate that inventory.

The measure allows buyers of homes under construction by this past March 23 a tax credit of 5 per cent on the purchase price, up to a $2,000 maximum.

The picture for multi-family unit construction also is cloudy, Kerin says. "Despite a favorable rental market and improvements in the availability of mortgage money, multi-family starts this year will be slow in recovering from their extremely depressed level."

Single-family home starts in 1974 were off about 20 per cent from year-earlier totals, but multi-family construction dropped more than 50 per cent, Kerin noted.

"Problems plaguing this segment of the industry (multi-family) include concern over land use and environment, pending tax reform legislation and accelerating operating expenses," he added.

Although the total outlook for the near term is relatively uncertain, Kerin sees the long-term outlook as good.

"Once normal supply and demand relationships are restored, the market will put forth increased levels of housing production to provide for replacement of substandard units, and to accommodate the rising rate of household formation expected during the remainder of the decade."

"The fastest growing segment of the population will be in the 25-to 35-year-old group. Housing demand by this age group always has been strong and is a positive factor in the outlook for both the existing and new home markets," he added.

Finally, Kerin called attention to an expected trend in new home construction during 1975: Homes will be smaller with fewer bedrooms and more entertainment areas.

Factors influencing this change, he said, are:

— The rapid growth of single-person households and smaller families.

— Concern over the availability and cost of energy.

On this last point, Kerin added, "To a greater degree availability and rates and by searching for the home to fit the buyer."

At last, legislators have decreed that the head of a household will be permitted to make 500 calls a year. This automatically rules out a number of my friends who are named Deborah, Gertrude and Mary. Women have become experts on wine anyway as they sip from their wine glasses. "I'm not a wine drinker," says my neighbor. "All that used to be wine was a wash of grape and a wide with size 10 1/2 feet.

It was easy to tell when a man had a fresh batch of wine made under the sun. The purple legs. What he served in stockings he invested in corsets. At one time my uncle Guzzler figured what he had been drinking to wine would sell. The following year he was known as 32871. Some close friends still call him 323.

He often bragged that wine was responsible for him coming from a family of long brewers. In fact his father did buy wine. He was a wine drinker. Hence wine making can be a hobby.

Lake Brantley Has New 'Renaissance'

By THOMAS CLAYTON

Lake Brantley has come up with another first, and a lot of work has been put into it. The school has a new magazine called the "Renaissance." Why pick a name like that? The magazine is a revival of the old "Renaissance" which was published in the 1920s. The students and advisors of the magazine did not want a totally new magazine. They wanted a magazine that was a revival of the old "Renaissance." The magazine is published by the school and is a great asset to the school. It will become a permanent part of the school's tradition.

Williams Questions Wrongdoing County Board Seeks Insurance Probe

By BILL BELLEVILLE
And ED PRICKETT
Herald Staff Writers

Seminole County Commissioners Dick Williams and John Kimbrough tomorrow will ask for a resolution demanding an investigation "into improprieties that exist in the Insurance Advisory Committee."

Today, Williams said that there seems to be doubt in State Attorney Abbott Herring's mind as to any wrongdoing evident in the committee.

Williams was especially critical of the manner in which Herring's investigation was communicated to him and Kimbrough.

Herring said in a letter to County Attorney Tom Freeman that "I personally believe that the letting of the health insurance for the current year by the county has the appearance of possible improprieties."

"I think at this time the important thing is to remedy what appears to be a bad situation and to eliminate any possible allegations of conflict of interest, such as that which presently shrouds the insurance advisory committee," the letter said.

Williams said that Freeman, in a letter to Herring, told the state attorney the problem was alleviated because, "It is the present intention of the Board of County Commissioners to abolish the Seminole County Insurance Advisory Committee prior to the next fiscal year. In addition, the board created a position of Seminole County Insurance Officer two weeks ago."

Williams said he never received a copy of that correspondence. "To me, the decision was made to squelch the state attorney's investigation without our knowledge. To me, it's an obvious cover-up by Freeman of something. I think people in Seminole County ought to know what it is he's trying to cover up," Williams said.

Williams said if there's a possibility of something wrong with the committee he wanted it investigated. "It wasn't in on a decision to squelch a Grand Jury investigation," he said.

Both commissioners failed to receive Herring's report and Kimbrough only became aware of the report after requesting a copy from Herring last Friday. Williams has yet to receive a copy.

David A. Hall, investigator for Herring's office, handled the investigation into the committee. In a memo to Herring, Hall said, "I contacted County Attorney Tom Freeman by telephone and asked him what his feelings were on the report that Mr. Herring had sent him. Mr. Freeman said that he hadn't given it much attention."

Contacted at his office today, Herring said his office already has investigated the matter and decided to turn it over to Freeman instead of taking it before a Grand Jury.

Herring said he was "trying to save the taxpayers' money" by not having the Grand Jury look into the issue. He said all a Grand Jury would have done is make recommendations, which Freeman apparently already has done.

Both commissioners say they will also ask Freeman why they weren't consulted on the report.

Herring also has been quoted as saying the investigation by his office may have prompted State Rep. Bob Hattaway's bill for non-partisan election of state attorneys.

The impetus for that bill came from County Commissioner Mike Hattaway.

Herring had no answers as to why Freeman didn't contact fellow commissioners.

However, he did say that perhaps it was because Freeman was new at his job and just hadn't had time to keep Kimbrough and Williams up to date on all matters concerning Seminole County.

Jury Report Clears County Operations

A Grand Jury report released Friday containing investigation results from complaints about six areas of county operation shows that there are no substantial grounds for indictments in all six cases, The Herald has learned.

Copies of the report were sent to Seminole County Commission Chairman Sid Vihlen Jr. and to Casselberry Mayor Bill Grier, with the indication they were to reply to the report within 10 days of their receipt of it. One reply reportedly has already been received by the court.

The six areas investigated by the States Attorney's office are:

- An inquiry as to the last audit of the Seminole County Building Department. The Grand Jury found that the department was audited in 1973 by the Auditor General and another audit will be conducted within the next year within the regular procedures of the Auditor General.
- An impropriety in the handling of examinations in the Seminole County Building Department. No evidence of impropriety was found.
- That the County Commission had allowed a variance to a general contractor to allow the use of aluminum wire. The Grand Jury found that a variance to the electrical code was properly passed by the Commission with their authority under county ordinance. However, where such ordinances amount to a violation of the code, that provision should be made for extra safety precautions to be taken in such circumstances. Such variances should be granted only with restraint and proper precautions for public safety.
- That a General Contractor was forced to allow certain electrical contractor to work on a certain job as a result of undue influence by a county public official. No evidence of any thing of this nature was found. No names were cited in the report.
- Allegations of improper practices that are being permitted in construction industry in Seminole County.
- Here, the investigation revealed a violation of the electrical code of Seminole County as adopted by Casselberry and approved by a city electrical inspector for the city. Casselberry has been notified of this violation.

Board To Get Report

The first item on the Seminole County Commission agenda Tuesday is expected to raise some heated dialogue among Board members before it's laid to rest.

Commissioner John Kimbrough has asked that a recently-issued Grand Jury Report be the subject of early morning commission discussion. Administrative Assistant Betty Simcoe has scheduled the item to come up immediately after the reports from the road superintendent and county engineer, which begin at 9:30 a.m.

Kimbrough would not elaborate on the reasons for placing the Grand Jury report on the agenda, since the report has been ordered sealed by Circuit Court Judge A. S. Hosemann. The report allegedly contains no indictments is scheduled to be opened 10 days after the individuals or agencies mentioned in the report have a chance to reply to charges mentioned within.

Kimbrough's agenda item has generated speculation that the Board of County Commissioners, or agencies under their control, may be cited in the report.

The sealed report should be made public sometime before tomorrow.

Also, Tuesday, commissioners will:

- Consider bids for a VHF radio communications system for the Department of Public Safety.
- Consider bids for P.U.C. pipe for the Parks Department.
- And beginning at 7 p.m. will:
- Consider an ordinance to establish an Airport Zoning Commission. The ordinance, which was suggested by Sanford Airport Manager Red Cleveland several months ago in a work session, would create

President Ford On TV Tonight

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford appears on CBS television tonight in an hour long interview being broadcast live from the White House.

Harassment Report Slated

Pleicoles is expected to have a report at tonight's 7:30 city council meeting on disciplinary action taken against Patrolman Terry Baker. Baker was accused last week of systematically harassing and encouraging his colleagues to stop and search the vehicle of an out-of-county resident.

City Chairman J. H. Grant told city council last week he received complaints from Joe Kinsey that Baker became involved in a family problem and was following Kinsey each time he went through the city.

Grant also reported that Baker had placed a notice on the police station bulletin board requesting fellow police officers to follow Kinsey as well.

Pleicoles told council it is usual practice for an officer to post notice of dangerous individuals on the bulletin board to "help save a life."

The city council police committee, H. A. Scott and Gerard Connell, were requested to conduct an investigation of the incident.

Baker, a resident of the city since a youth, attended Lyman High School prior to going into police work. His family has been active in the athletic boosters organization at the school.

Kinsey, contacted by The Herald at his home Sunday, was unable to participate in a personal interview. He has been hospitalized several times in the past few months for treatment of a serious illness.

Kinsey did say, however, he complained to Grant of the harassment by Baker. He said he had been a member of the Knoxville, Tenn. police department for 32 years prior to his retirement in 1960.

Homer Clonts, city editor of the Knoxville, Tenn. News Sentinel in an telephone interview with The Herald, said Kinsey joined the Knoxville department in 1928, putting 22 men in jail during his first night on the beat.

After 13 years, Clonts said, according to the News Sentinel's file on Kinsey, the man was made an inspector in the

Comptroller Vote Offered

State Rep. Bob Hattaway, D-Altamonte Springs, says he will submit to the people the question of whether or not to create the position of comptroller in a referendum held during the presidential primaries in March or May.

Hattaway said this morning that decision was reached over the weekend after meetings with County Commission Chairman Sid Vihlen Jr., and County Commissioner Mike Hattaway.

Both Vogt and Wilson expressed reservations over the issue. Both agreed, philosophically, with creation of a comptroller's office, but were hesitant because they said the issue has created a "civil war" in the county.

Vogt said he felt the matter should be taken to the people for a vote. That can only happen if Hattaway is successful in pushing the measure through the House.

For that, he will need the help of Fechtel because an "unwritten law" states a local bill must have the full support of the entire delegation before it becomes a law.
