Nervous Tension Affects A Heart

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB—Will a continuous heartbeat of 110 to 115 per minute in a 16-year-old boy cause damage to the heart? This is his rate when he lies down. He has palpitations at times while lying down. The doctor said it was normal but it was a little high. He had an electrocardiogram taken and a thyroid blood test. His blood pressure was 130 over 80. The doctor said his heart and thyroid are OK and nothing can be done about the fast heartbeat. A week later he passed out in school and the doctor said nothing was wrong. He weighs around 150 pounds and is 5 feet 10. He does not smoke or drink. He has allergies the year round and his head and nose are stuffed up and running. He also is high strung and loses his temper easily. I'm afraid his heart will wear out from overwork. I don't know whether to let things go as they are or take him to another doctor. Any advice you could give would be greatly appreciated.

DEAR READER: The normal heart rate has a wide range of variability. It's also affected by many different things you've always been impressed by a study of weight lifters who had a normal heart rate at rest of 72 beats per minute and just before competition, their rates were between 130 and 160 beats per minute, even though they weren't doing any work at the time. This will show you how much nervous tension can affect your heartbeat.

Sheriff Urges Laws To Prevent Smut

By DIANE PETRYK Herald Staff Writer

Reacting to police intelligence reports that topless bars and other businesses that deal in sex are heading for Seminole County, Sheriff John E. Polk is urging the county to adopt four anti-smut ordinances.

"You might say I want to close the barn door before the horse gets in," Polk said.

"The word is out that Seminole County is the place to come," he said. "I'm urging the commission to go ahead and adopt these ordinances before the problem arrives."

Crackdown on topless entertainment, he said, is being undertaken in Orange County, Brevard County, Daytona, Titusville and elsewhere nearby where Seminole County looks like a haven, he said.

At present, Seminole County has no ordinances governing topless or all-ude entertainments.

Polk suggests that the county adopt ordinances designed to regulate adult bookstores and mini-theaters, massage parlors, and prostitution, as well as topless and bottomless entertainments.

Seminole County has three topless clubs, all located in the same vicinity of U.S. Highway 17-42, although one falls within the corporate limits of Casselberry and would be subject to that city's regulations.

There are no adult bookstores or massage parlors in the county.

New ordinances would also allow the county to force businesses coming in to meet certain criteria, he said, and they can be controlled.

If the ordinances are passed, Polk said, he will make it impossible for such businesses to come into the county unless they are legitimate.

"You can't paint any type of business with a broad brush," Polk said. "There are some massage parlors that are legitimate."

As for prostitution, there is a problem with it in Seminole County, the sheriff said.

"You're going to have that until everyone dies off," he said, "but we can hold it down and give it underground so it isn't out in the open."

Polk said he is recommending the county adopt an ordinance like the one just adopted in Orange County, Orange County outlaws "lap dancing," in which the entertainer sits on the customer's lap and "booth dancing," which refers, Polk said, to "everything that goes on in a booth behind closed doors."

The Orange County ordinance also outlaws topless entertainment where liquor is being sold, he said. It makes a prima facie case against the owner, which means the owner is assumed to know what is going on if he has a liquor license, Polk explained.

Ordinances against specific behavior may result in the county "spinning its wheels on something that can't be controlled from a practical standpoint," Mrs. Glenn said.

Also a topless ban will often result in the purveyors of such entertainment coming up with some other mode of entertainment to circumvent the ordinance, she said.

"And then," she said, "you always have the group that says no one is demanding that anyone view these things. They say you can't legislate morals."

But Polk said he does not feel topless club regulation aims to dictate morals. "It's not that we're trying to legislate morals," he said. "It's the other things that go along with it that cause the problems, such as prostitution and drugs."

"They know their customers do not want to be harassed," she said. "It may mean moving to another location or going out of business."

"Neither do the entertainers want to be harassed or exposed on TV," Mrs. Glenn said. She has received Polk's recommendations and they are now with County Attorney Nick Clayton.

Clayton has been asked to render an opinion on the enforceability of such ordinances, Mrs. Glenn said.

Khomeini appealed for calm and national unity in a statement broadcast over Tehran Radio and indirectly across the United States of fomenting domestic problems.

Tens of thousands of Shariatmadari's supporters demonstrated in Tabriz, a city of some 2 million people near the Turkish border, and then set the radio and television station.

Reports suggested the entire city may be in the demonstrators' hands.

The demonstrators announced the local governor, Nur-eddin Gharavi, will be ousted, pledged their continued support for Shariatmadari, said police and army units had joined forces and demanded the proposed Islamic constitution be amended.

The protest followed a ballot by Iranian at the start of the week on a referendum turning Iran into an Islamic Republic and giving Khomeini absolute secular and religious power.

Shariatmadari opposed the constitution because he believed it gave Khomeini too much power. On Wednesday night his home in the holy city of Qom was stormed by a gang of gunmen. One guard was killed and nine others wounded. Shariatmadari escaped harm.

He didn't want to go to a home, and once my knife at his throat. They tore off his britches and took his money and threw him around," she recalled.

"After that he complained his back hurt him and I took him to the hospital twice for X-rays."

Two men were later arrested and charged with stealing $200 from the old man.

Mr. Battles was a member of the Bethlehem Primitive Baptist Church, Sanford.

Other survivors include two sons by his first marriage, Albert Battles of Hawthorne, Fla., and Lee Andrew of Jacksonville, and three granddaughters.

Fire Marshal To Inspect Old Jail

By DIANE PETRYK Herald Staff Writer

In response to a Sanford citizen's complaint, officials from the state fire marshal's office will inspect the old Seminole County jail Friday.

State Fire Protection Specialist John Nelson said he will inspect the building due to a complaint by Jane Cameron of Sanford.

Ms. Cameron said she is upset because the Seminole County Commissioners moved the elections office into "a fire trap."

Normally, the state doesn't concern itself with a county facility such as the jail, Nelson said, but they do get involved if there is a complaint.

Ms. Cameron describes herself as a private citizen active in public affairs. She said she has no personal relationship with anyone in the elections office.

Although Ms. Cameron said she would not be satisfied with a county official's report, procedure dictates the county be informed of the impending state inspection, Nelson said.

"Why should our most precious records be put in a fire trap?" Ms. Cameron asked.

"That building was condemned after a fire that killed 11 people," she said. "Why should our voting records be put in there?"

"What if we lost our voter registration cards?" she continued. "If we lost election results? We might be stuck with the same county commission forever."

Fire Sweeps Through Local Greenhouse

By DIANE PETRYK Herald Staff Writer

An afternoon fire swept through an Alamo Springs greenhouse Wednesday, destroying the $1,000-worth of plants and thousands of dollars of equipment and materials.

The blaze, which did an estimated $125,000 worth of damage, could have destroyed a row of greenhouses covering a total of three acres of land at the Alamo Springs Greenhouse and Nursery, but flames moving in the opposite direction, Buster said.

Flames burst on roughly the same spot as the fire started burning before they arrived, Buster explained.

The fire began either in a gas-burner system or a cooling fan, said nursery owner, Buster said.

Firemen were hampered in extinguishing the remains of the greenhouse due to a water main break between Route 68 and the main in the nursery located off Highway Drive.

The blaze destroyed the greenhouse and thousands of plants in hanging baskets, which were to be sold to florists.

Liability For Agent Orange

The Veterans Administration hasn't won any good-conduct medals for its handling of the Agent Orange controversy. And no wonder. The VA has been reluctant to investigate the suspected connection between exposure to this chemical defoliant widely used during the war in Vietnam and a variety of physical and psychological maladies reported by veterans.

According to the recently released General Accounting Office report on this subject, compiled exclusively from Pentagon records, thousands of U.S. Marines were exposed to Agent Orange during combat operations. Additional thousands of Army troops may also have been exposed but Army records were too disorganized and incomplete to permit a definitive finding.

The point is that the same records studied by the GAO were available to the Veterans Administration for years. Yet the VA never stirred itself to examine these records to determine who might have been exposed to Agent Orange. That information would have enabled VA health investigators to contact affected veterans and begin studies to determine the effects, if any, of their exposure.

Instead, the records lay unexamined until Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., requested the GAO probe last May. It is also significant that the GAO findings contradict the Pentagon's contention that U.S. troops were always kept out of defoliated areas until the toxic chemicals dissipated, usually within four to six weeks. We know now that wasn't always the case.

Sen Percy, distrustful the VA, has asked the Department of Health and Human Services to conduct its own investigation of Agent Orange's side effects on humans. And the senator has also suggested that the VA and, or the Department of Defense notify veterans from units known to have been exposed to Agent Orange. These are appropriate suggestions.

A vigorous investigation of Agent Orange and its effects on exposed veterans is long overdue. And should this highly toxic defoliant be connected to any of the health problems reported by exposed veterans, the Veterans Administration has a clear obligation to provide whatever medical care is necessary.

Go East Comrade

Bring up the subject of Siberia and one remembers those Russian outcasts who are banished to that frozen wilderness without hope of ever seeing their families again. It has been a land of lost souls, labor camps and misery — the last stop for those who displeased the Tsar and first, and the Soviet leader later. Political prisoners and dissidents are still being sent to Siberia but for other Russians Siberia is becoming a land of economic opportunity.

The Siberian region makes up about half the area of Russia although it contains only a tenth of the population. Russians are volunteering by the thousands to take part in developing the area's vast natural resources.

Why? To make a buck, of course. One couple managed to save slightly more than $20,000 in two years — an enormous sum when compared to the average annual Moscow wage of $3,000. The government also provides fringe benefits for the Siberian settlers — such as longer vacations, free travel, larger apartments and trips abroad.

But they are still denied the freedom to criticize the government that is denied to all Soviet citizens. Their democracy remains a cruel sham. Until the Soviet people rise up and demand that the Communist party give them their basic human rights, this vast land will remain an enormous outpost of despair rather than an open frontier of hope and freedom.

BERRY'S WORLD

A Margaret K. Reynolds Memorial Fund has been established at Flagship Bank of Bunnell in memory of the late retired school principal who died on Thanksgiving Day. Patty Brown, teacher at Pinocrest Elementary School, has been named chairman of a special committee formed to oversee the fund and decide for what it will be used.

The idea began at Pinocrest, where Mrs. Reynolds served as first principal and later ended her career as an educator, and the fund will be used at the school to benefit its students.

Anyone wishing to contribute may do so by sending donations to the Margaret K. Reynolds Memorial Fund, in care of Flagship Bank of Bunnell, P.O. Box 100, Bunnell, FL 32111, or in care of Mrs. Marie Lewis, Pinocrest School, 66 W. 27th St., Sanford, FL 32711. For further information contact Mrs. Lewis, school secretary and long-time friend and associate of Mrs. Reynolds.

WASHINGTON — The special interest group opposed to mandatory deposits on beer and soda containers continue to pour millions of dollars into high-powered campaigns to thwart the recycling of bottles and cans.

In statewide referenda throughout the 1970s, opposition to proposed deposit laws has been financed almost exclusively by beer brewers, soft drink bottlers and the glass, aluminum and steel industries.

Ballot measures in Colorado, Massachusetts, Nebraska and Alaska have fallen victim to propaganda campaigns funded by the bottlers of Pepsi Cola, Coca Cola, Dr. Pepper and Seven Up; the brewers of Budweiser, Coors, Miller, Pabst and Schlitz beers; the Can Manufacturers Institute, the American Iron & Steel Institute and the Glass Packaging Institute.

That pattern was repeated this year in the states of Ohio and Washington, where initial surveys indicated that there was overwhelming public support for deposit laws.

In Washington, opponents amassed a treasury of more than $600,000, including a $65,000 loan from the can industry; generous contributions from Owens-Illinois, Anchor Hocking, Heublein, Kerr and other glass manufacturers; and large donations from Reynolds, Kaiser and other aluminum producers.

The proposal was rejected in a 60-41 vote. "They used almost $1 million essentially to buy the election with an advertising campaign that terrorized and confused people," says Philip Morley of Citizens for Recycled Beverage Containers, the Seattle organization that promoted the measure.

In Ohio, a similar ballot initiative was overwhelmingly defeated by a 73-27 margin after opponents spent $1.5 million on a campaign that included air warnings about empty metal bottles and cans.

"They conjured up visions of an army of cockroaches peering at the Michigan-Ohio border, waiting for approval of the referendum as they could invade Ohio," says Florida Nelson of Environmental Action, a Washington-based organization.

In fact, there have been no serious environmental problems in Michigan since the voters of that state rejected almost 60 years of industry claims and voted 69-31 to approve a deposit law in 1974 following.

In Ohio, a similar ballot initiative was overwhelmingly defeated by a 73-27 margin after opponents spent $1.5 million on a campaign that included air warnings about empty metal bottles and cans.

"They conjured up visions of an army of cockroaches peering at the Michigan-Ohio border, waiting for approval of the referendum as they could invade Ohio," says Florida Nelson of Environmental Action, a Washington-based organization.

In fact, there have been no serious environmental problems in Michigan since the voters of that state rejected almost 60 years of industry claims and voted 69-31 to approve a deposit law in 1974 following.

WASHINGTON — Behind the grim, bearded, bushy eyebrows of the Kremlin, a Soviet spy is busy plotting to overthrow the government of the United States. At 77, Brezhnev's health is clearly declining. Even if he doesn't die for a few more years, the health of the dictator's health may soon force him to retire.

U.S. intelligence agencies are trying to identify the ultimate source of the Kremlin's Russian revenue, the foundation for the top job are already being laid. There is a mounting concern that the Soviet Union is a major economic superpower.

More Under The Surface

By DONALD GRAFF

In the rush of events now shaking the Moslem world, by far the most bizarre has been the seizure of the Grand Mosque in Mecca.

It is difficult to imagine an outrage of similar magnitude in Western circumstances. Occupation of St. Peter's in Rome by making-handling fundamentalists from Appalachia would still be considered short of the mark.

At this point, the destruction of Islam's holy of holies appears to have no connection with the crisis in Tehran, oil politics or any other point of common interest or tension between Islamic lands and the rest of the world. It shapes up as the work of a small band of religious extremists consumed by their own fanaticism and with no interest whatsoever in that greater world.

But if the battle for the mosque has nothing to do with the broader political situation, it has a great deal to do with the situation of the country in which it occurred.

For all that it begins an increasingly open today's world scene at the leading oil exporter and the most influential power player in the Middle East, Saudi Arabia is as a nation is a fairly recent invention. It was placed together in a series of desert wars during the early decades of the century when one local chieftain, together and crisscross than his neighbors, overcame them one by one. He was Abdul Aziz bin Saud and the last of his conquests was the Hejaz, the coastal strip along the Red Sea containing the holy cities of Mecca and Medina and technically up to World War I a part of the Turkish Empire.

During the course of his own successful empire building, bin Saud made many enemies, not the least important being the previous local rulers of the Hejaz, the Hashemite family. In the post-World War I settlement, the Hashemites were compensated for their services with the Kingdom of Iraq, under British supervision, of Jordan and Iraq. It is one of the ironic twists of Arab politics that Jordan's King Hussein and the Saudis are currently the closest of allies on most Middle East issues.

Saudi Arabia's recent economic wealth and influence in the Gulf has obscured the fact that the Saudis are a people of the desert, which the long run should be the state, in the desert run have aggravated its weaknesses.

He became a 12-point per game scorer as a junior varsity performer. At the end of the year he was honored to the varsity where he responded with a 12-point game in his first start.

Last year as a junior he topped his total to 14 points and six rebounds per game. "In the summer I played every day and every night," said the senior about a game he was falling in love with.

It was on these basketball and gymnasium floors that a relative named Richard McCoy had his potential All State position of right ear.

"My coach is the guy that made me as good as I am," McCoy said about James Bell, a starting guard on the 1977 team.

The senior other man, his one in the line and call me "Baby." Anything to make me work and improve. It was my goal to become better than him and I finally made it," continued McCoy.

It is his outside jump administered by Bell that Coach Payne said he needed to promote his senior star to bigger and better things.

"Bruce is an asset as Bruce wants to be," said Payne. "He's got a lot of ability, but by game days on Island. He's definitely a major college prospect."

That ability has surfaced with 18 points and 10 rebounds a game for the Seminoles, which included a 20-point game in the recent State Tournament won by Sanford.

Which Import Sells Best?

By JAMES HUGHES

DETROIT (UPI) — Quickly now, what is the best-selling small car in the U.S. this year? You were wrong if you named an import. The feeling that foreign makes dominate small car sales in this country is what one auto industry analyst called a myth — one of many he said he encounters frequently in today's cluttered auto market.

In fact, the Chevrolet Chevette is the No. 1 selling subcompact in 1979. One has to go to fifth place on the complete list to find an import among compact and subcompact lines.

The top five in January/October sales were Chevrolet Chevette, Ford Fairmont, Ford Mustang, Chevrolet Nova-Citation and Toyota Corolla.

There also appears to be a misconception that foreign small cars are performing better in the U.S. market than domestic small cars. "There is no marked performance superiority in the foreign line," an analyst said. "In fact, domestic models picked up more market share than foreign models."

Impacted small car sales increased from 18.9 percent of total U.S. car sales in the first 10 months of 1978 to 24.4 percent this year. At the same time, domestic small car sales increased 8.2 points from 26.5 percent to 32.7 percent of the market.

"The X-body has been very successful in domestic sales and in building the sales base of many American car buyers," said Dave Power, president of the research firm. "But it has not reached the typical import level of sales in the U.S. market."

General Motors sold over three-quarters of the units in its own country and the X-body introductions, it was Ford or Chrysler.

'Hounds Pin Patriots 39-13

By SAM COOK

"Skip" Pletzer's Lyman wrestlers evened its season mark at 1-1 Wednesday night with a 3-13 conquest of Five Star Conference rival Lake Branley.

"It was a 100 percent turnaround from the other night," the bushy-haired Pletzer said referring to an opening season loss to Colonial.

"I was very pleased with tonight's performance. We were much more aggressive," said the Skipper. "Our bottom movement was much better and probably won the match."

The bottom movement, initiated by a transplanted Iowan Cory Stanley (132), allowed the Greyhounds to sweep the last eight weight classes enroute to victory.

"It wasn't as easy as it sounded," Pletzer said of his 26-point margin of victory. "We won lots of the matches with a strong third period."

There were no "almosts" in the next two matches as Larry Brown (147) and Terry Barrett (157) fashioned plans to build the Hounds' lead. Brown stuck Carl Helman at 135, while Barrett nailed Bob Kalich at 126.

The Lady Raiders began the new year at home with a pair of games including Central Florida Community College on Tuesday, January 8 at 7:30 p.m. and Thursday, January 10 at 7:30 p.m.

S.C.C. then hits the road for a pair of games against Broward Community College and Valencia Community College before returning home for a four game home stand beginning on January 22.

Oviedo's Game Plan: Run Around Them

The undefeated Oviedo Lions pulled out from their backwoods complex about 7:30 this morning to begin a 10-hour journey to Milton High for Friday night's semi-final round state football playoff game.

A journey they hope will bring them a step closer to playing for the state title a week from now. A victory over Milton ensures the Lions the homefield advantage. A loss would close out a remarkable year for a football program much maligned and often joked about in years gone by. But this is 1979 and the Lions are 12-0.

"God they are big," surmised head coach Joe Montgomery. "They look great on film, we'll have to play our best game of the year by far to come home and play for the state championship."

Montgomery and his coaching crew have been busy putting together a game plan to stop a huge offensive line that sets up in front of a powerful slot-1 running attack. Milton's bread and butter.

"They're one of those 'three yards and a cloud of dust' football teams," pointed out Monty. "They take the ball and run behind those big guys on the line and just jam it down your throat."

"This may sound a little funny to picture in your minds," joked Monty, but they have a guard that stands maybe 5-10, he weighs 220 pounds and don't look for an ounce of baby fat. The kid has a 30-inch waist and 31-inch thighs," said a slightly amused coach Joe.

How do the Lions plan to attack and defend in game number 13 of the season? "We're going to have to run around them and throw over them," explained Montgomery. "They are just too physically big to go inside on."

"They'll both be ready by Friday night," assures Montgomery. "Myelin hasn't had any contact in practice this week because we wanted his hip to recover." Monty jokingly added, "I've never heard of a coach getting fired for not practicing his own running back on Thursday."

The Lion's got some good medical news in the returning form of guard Kevin Klumbert. He's been hobbled with a sore knee the last couple of weeks but looks to be just about 100 percent for the Milton game.

"On defense we'll need great games from Ray Williams and Troy Paganis to stop the run," said Monty. "Some of these kids have never been outside of Oviedo much less all the way up to Tallahassee."

"There's so much riding on the game I don't think the different environment will bother us too much... we plan to do plenty to keep their minds on the game."

The Oviedo crew will make a pit stop at Deak Walker Stadium for a final practice session late this afternoon which will give them a chance to get the kinks out from the bus ride.

After 48 minutes of football against Milton, the Lions want their next bus ride to be a trip to the state championship.

While quarterback Troy Keating is in good shape, jocularly added, "I've never heard of a coach getting fired for not practicing his own running back on Thursday."

"They'll both be ready by Friday night," assures Montgomery. "Myelin hasn't had any contact in practice this week because we wanted his hip to recover."

NOTICE TO TELEPHONE CUSTOMERS

We are planning changes that will increase some rates to six countries and introduce a lower international dial rate to ten countries.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Company (AT&T) has filed a new schedule of overseas rates with the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) which accomplishes the introduction of international dialing to 10 additional countries. This brings the total of internationally dialable countries to 74. The scheduled changes include rate decreases for 10 countries and selective rate increases to 6 of those countries for calls billed on the United States mainland to bring the overseas rate structure more closely into line with the domestic structure. In addition, it will now be possible to dial Aruba, which already has rates at the International Dial rate level. These changes are scheduled to become effective on February 17, 1980.

D. Maria Lee, T.N. Klinger Repeat Vows

Dorothy Maria Lee and Thomas Neil Klinger were married Nov. 17, at 3 p.m., at the St. Mary Magdalen Catholic Church, Altamonte Springs. Father Allen Michael Stahl performed the traditional candlelight and double ring ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. (Buddy) Lee of Sanford. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Klinger Sr., 1800 W. Lake Brantley Road, Maitland. Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose for her vows a formal gown of silk organza fashioned with a Mandarin neckline and tapered sleeves enhanced with reemboledered schiffli lace. Two rows of the same lace were repeated on the flowing crystal pleated skirt which terminated in a chapel train. A matching schiffli lace embroidered cap secured her chapel length veil of imported illusion. She carried a crescent bouquet of silk lily of the valley and silk miniature white carnations entwined with variegated ivy. Three pink and burgundy carnations centered the arrangement. Em Jones attended the bride as maid of honor. She wore a siesta print gown in Dupont Rose styled with a scooped neckline, split butterfly sleeves and a bouillon bodice. She carried a traditional hurricane lamp in a wreath of miniature pink and burgundy carnations interspersed with baby's breath. Bridesmaids were Amber Lee, sister-in-law of the bride, Sanford; Judy Facher, Orlando; Sharon Dunn, Sanford; and Carol Lee, sister-in-law of the bride, Deltona. Their gowns and flowers were similar to the honor attendants. Greg Popham served the bridegroom as best man. Ushers were Paul E. Klinger Jr., Dan Klinger, John Klinger and Bill Klinger, all brothers of the bridegroom. Shirley Snyder was the flower girl and Jimmy Snyder, the ring bearer. A reception followed at the Garden Club of Sanford. The couple departed for a beach wedding trip. They will travel to Lake Tahoe, Nev., in February, for two weeks of skiing. The newlyweds are making their home in Sanford. The bride is employed by Southern Bell, Orlando, and the bridegroom is a U.S. Post Office sub carrier in Maitland.

Your Body Must Convert Energy

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am totally confused. I was trained as a nurse and in my nutrition classes I was always told that 1200 calories a day is sufficient to lose weight, barring a few food faddists who propose 800 calories or less. Now I've read an excerpt from a book by a woman doctor and she claims that most obese women need to eat 1000 calories or less a day to lose weight. She also says it's not uncommon for women to have to cut back to 800, 600 or even 400 calories in order to lose. She goes on to say that she's the day of the balanced 1200 calorie reducing diet is over for the chronically overweight woman.

It seems to me that anyone needing to cut back to 400 calories a day might need some thyroid hormone. Is there some new research that I have missed? Finally, you tell me how many calories one can eat for a maintenance diet if you're 68 years old and very sedentary and are a 120 pound female 5 foot 3? DEAR READER — No, I don't think you've missed a thing. There's a basic law of nature that just doesn't change any more than the sun coming up in the east and going down in the west. That is the law of conservation of energy which states the energy can neither be created nor destroyed. Calories are heat energy. They can be transferred into physical work which is mechanical energy or into electrical or chemical energy or a variety of other forms of energy. But calories can neither be created nor destroyed.

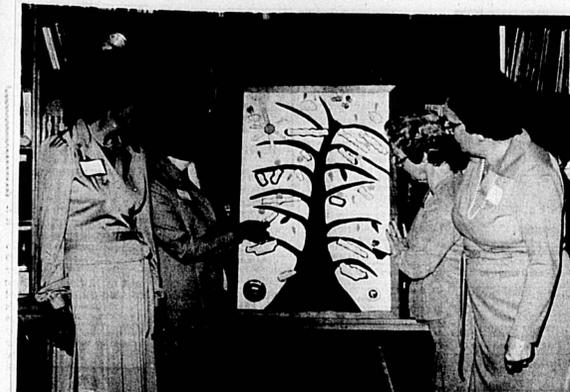

DEAR READER: I'm in a terrible spot and need your advice. I'm in love with a terrific man I'll call Larry. We plan to be married soon. Larry has a 7-year-old daughter I'll call Linda. Linda lives with her mother, from whom Larry has been divorced for three years, but he has the child over with him. My father, who had always been alert and in good health, has been in a state of shock ever since. He said he never in the world suspected anything. It was MY day, but with Linda hanging all over Larry and pushing me in the background, he even turned her picture to the wall.

A TREE GROWS IN FEDERATION Mrs. Leland Giddens, District VII Director, Florida Federation of Women's Clubs, "built" a federation tree for members of the Woman's Club of Sanford at an orientation coffee at the home of Mrs. Richard Fowler. Starting with the trunk to symbolize the foundation—the General Federation of Women's Clubs—Mrs. Giddens added branches to symbolize the various activities of the clubs and departments of the (FFWC). Taking a good look at the federation tree are Mrs. Walter A. Gidlow, club president, from left; Mrs. Giddens; Mrs. Roberta Kimble, District VII Scrapbook Chairman; and Mrs. M. R. Strickland, the club's second vice president and coffee chairman.
