Deputy injured in accident

SANFORD — A Seminole County deputy on duty in his patrol car was taken to HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital for observation Saturday afternoon after a traffic accident on 17-92 south of 13th Street in Sanford.

The deputy sustained neck and back injuries, Seminole County Sheriff's Department spokesman George Proechel said late Saturday. He said the collision happened about 4 p.m. Saturday.

The Florida Highway Patrol is investigating. No information was available about the driver of the other car.

Depression moving out to sea

MIAMI — The year's second tropical depression circled harmlessly about 300 miles south-southeast of Bermuda, and then headed away from the continent Saturday, forecasters said.

By 5 p.m., the center of the tropical depression was located near latitude 30.3 north and longitude 62.0 west, moving north-northeast at nearly seven mph. Maximum sustained winds were just under 30 mph.

The National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables said it probably would maintain its current course and weaken slightly over the weekend.

WEST PALM BEACH — Resuc-i-Rover will soon join Resuc-i-Anne, Resuc-i-Junior and Resuc-i-Baby at cardio-pulmonary resuscitation classes offered by the Palm Beach County Red Cross.

Rover, like the others, is a medical mannequin designed to respond like a victim who has stopped breathing or whose heart has stopped. But whereas the others are used to teach people how to perform life-saving CPR on adults, children and infants, Rover is used to teach people how to save animals.

Water futurists emerge

Pat Santell is pleased with using purified sewage to water her Sanford lawn and flowers.

SANFORD — A group of area residents and businessmen may not look much like futurists, but they are among those on the cutting edge of environmental consciousness.

They are the Sanford people who aren't watering their lawns with drinking water but purified sewage. Sewage becomes recycled water, a program Floridians of the future may accept everyday. But these Sanford futurists are just pleased with how green their yards look and how bright their flowers have become.

"I've had so many impatiens this year I've had to give them away," said Pat Santell, 2315 Cordova Dr.

Treated wastewater from the Sanford Reclaimed Water Program has been pumped to about 30 homes and businesses throughout the central portions of the city for about a year. By year's end, city officials say the highly-treated wastewater will be sprayed on lawns and shrubs at more than 300 locations.

SANFORD — With the inclusion of grant recommendations from commissioner Pat Warren, Seminole County's Community Service Block Grants will creep up by about $2,500 this year.

Warren was unable to attend the commission's review of 19 grant requests Thursday because her husband was ill. Warren submitted her recommendations Friday, which served to increase several grants above preliminary amounts based on recommendations of her four commission colleagues.

With the tallies complete, commissioners decided to spend $675,000 in CSBG awards this year, up from last year's $673,312. The final grants will be approved as part of the budget approval process in September.

Among the grant awards affected by Warren's input Friday were:

• $70,000 for Better Living for Seniors. Warren's input served to edge the grant upwards by $2,000. The grant will assist in providing meals and other services for the elderly.

• $5,000 for Spouse Abuse, $3,000 more than preliminarily approved Thursday. The grant will assist the agency provide shelter and counseling for victims of spouse abuse.

• $3,000 for the Visiting Nurse Association. Warren's recommendation of spending $3,000 modified the preliminary grant of $1,000 up.

• $7,000 for We Care, $2,000 more than the amount arrived at by the four commissioners Thursday. The grant will be used for suicide telephone intervention.

The new tourism

Florida affected by changes in attitudes, aging

By CATHERINE WILSON
AP Business Writer

MIAMI — New attitudes, the aging of baby boomers and the recession are changing the American outlook on travel, industry specialists say.

Travelers are looking for more package tours, delegating the planning and placing a higher premium on adventure than luxury.

"The customer is telling us they will not be doing business with us the way they did before," said Peter Yesswich, president of the Orlando-based, international travel agency.

Yesswich said the new traveler is more sophisticated, more discerning and more likely to book business directly in 1992. He said the second generation of baby boomers is more likely to book business directly in 1992.

His company, Robinson, Yesswich & Associates Inc., projects a national traveler profile from an annual survey of 2,500 households.

An examination of leisure time goals shows a generational shift in values from the simplicity and conformity of the '50s to the freedom and transience of the '70s and the materialist '80s.

Consumers, led by baby boomers having kids, now say they want self-entailing and simplified travel with more romance, fantasy and adventure, said Yesswich.

He interprets the findings to mean people want more family travel, more group trips with friends and occasional treats.

"They give themselves permission to splurge," Yesswich

Locals OK'd to hunt gators

By MARK FREEMAN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Two Sanford men and one from Lake Mary were among the chosen few to receive gator hunting permits this year. In all, only five in Seminole County were selected out of a statewide total of 12,000 applicants.

Sanford residents chosen were Raymond Coniglio, for hunting in the Lake George area, and James M. Warner, Jr., of 4252 S. Sanford Ave., who will hunt in the Lake Harney area.

Mark Darling, of 507 Sundance Dr., Lake Mary, will hunt in the St. Johns River. Others around the County include David Gaudes of Oviedo, and Tracy C. Kaley of Altamonte Springs.

Darling is looking forward to the hunt. "I've never done anything like this before," he said, "but I'll be taking along a friend from Orlando, Brian Troutman, who had an alligator permit a few years ago, and he promised to show me how to do it."

Both Warner and Coniglio said they had applied for a gator hunting permit each year since the month long hunts started four years ago. "I used to hunt alligators for the State," Warner said, "and I've been hoping to get a permit to do it for myself."

Henry Cabbage, state spokesman for the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission predicted a good harvest of gators this year. "I think those who hunt in the St. Johns River and Lake Jesup areas will be especially successful this year," he said. "There has been some heavy nesting in those two areas and many sightings have been reported of extremely large gators."

Cabbage explained the process. "Each hunter will receive 15 tags. Then from midnight Sept. 1 until midnight Sept. 30, the season is open for the hunters to work in the various harvest areas around the State."

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Many legislators took junkets

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — One out of four Florida lawmakers took trips in 1991 paid for by trade groups, government agencies or political associations, a newspaper reported Saturday.

An analysis of state records by The Tampa Tribune found expenses and honoraria included a $222-a-night hotel suite for the House speaker, two trips to Japan for a retiring lawmaker, and a $1,770 airplane charter for Gov. Lawton Chiles to play Santa Claus two days before Christmas.

Some 19 lawmakers reported receiving travel and lodging for trips inside Florida, mostly to speak to industry groups. Another two dozen jetted out-of-state, including some to faraway destinations such as Japan, Brazil, Nicaragua, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Germany, France, Belgium, England and Canada.

U.S. destinations included Los Angeles, New York, Denver, Aspen, Colo., Kansas City, Mo., Indianapolis and Washington, D.C.

"I don't think there's anything wrong, but I don't think I'll be taking any more trips," said state Sen. Roberto Casas, R-Hialeah, who attended an all-expenses-paid trip to a meeting of Hispanic lawmakers in Los Angeles.

"The reason is mistrust of elected officials," he said. "Voters see you went to California and they say 'they're taking a free trip.' We can't do it anymore."

One thing markedly absent from the reports was the lobbyist-paid hunting and fishing trips common before 1991, when lawmakers landed in hot water for not reporting them. Twenty-four lawmakers were charged with failing to report such trips and the unfolding scandal prompted the Legislature to ban all gifts from lobbyists valued at more than $100.

But they still can receive honoraria and government-paid trips.

The highest-ranking lawmaker to enjoy one of the privileges of power was House Speaker T.K. Wetherell, D-Daytona Beach.

The Florida Institute of Certified Public Accountants invited him to speak at a four-day convention in Vancouver, British Columbia, in June 1991, and told him to bring along his wife, Virginia Wetherell, who now heads the state Department of Natural Resources.

The couple stayed in a room at the Four Seasons Hotel costing $222 per night. The total cost of the Wetherells' trip: $2,486.

Rep. Mike Langton, D-Jacksonville, went to Japan twice in one year — once on the expense account of the Commerce Department and again with the help of the U.S. Japan Foundation.

Chiles wants lobbying disclosure

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Lawton Chiles says he wants laws by the next legislative session forcing lobbyists to disclose the activities he says scuttled some of his proposed programs.

Chiles says he blames lobbyists more than House or Senate members for failed parimutuel legislation and other bills he sought in the June special session.

"It just seems like every year when you get up to something that is important, bang, here comes the big bucks, and it disappears," Chiles told a group of youthful backers of his 1990 campaign.

In a mid-administration update, he urged the Leadership 2000 members to work to elect lawmakers in November who favor lobbying disclosure.

"Who gave it, who got it, how much did you get, how did you spend it? We feel like if we can shed some light on that, we will have a lot more success in some of our programs," Chiles said.

Jon Shebel, business lobbyist and president of Associated Industries of Florida, said Florida lobbyists currently must register and report how much they spend on lawmakers.

The governor apparently wants more detail, Shebel said. "Until we see a bill, it's difficult to comment."

Chiles said his staff is preparing legislation based on laws in California and other states. California has required lobbyists to detail their spending since the 1970s.

Student guilty in girl's hacking death

PENSACOLA — A life sentence has been recommended for an honor student convicted of hacking, stabbing and beating to death his 15-year-old ex-girlfriend after learning she was pregnant.

Sean Esty, 18, a University of West Florida freshman who had a penchant for weapons and who won academic honors at Pensacola High School, was convicted Friday of first-degree murder in the death of Lauren Ramsey.

Jurors deliberated for about 30 minutes Saturday before recommending that he be sentenced to life in prison without parole for at least 25 years.

Esty allegedly bought a 7 1/4-inch butcher knife at a grocery store shortly after 10 p.m. on the day the girl disappeared and then helped her sneak out of a bedroom window.

He was accused of stabbing her until the knife broke, pounding her with a bat he called the "purple people beater" and hacking her with a machete he had inscribed with the words "creeping death."

Assistant State Attorney Michael Patterson argued that Esty killed the girl because she was pregnant and he probably was the father. Her doctor had given her a Dec. 23 deadline to tell her mother she was pregnant.

Gainesville police say bodies not linked

GAINESVILLE — Police say the cases of two young women found dead in this city since March don't appear to be linked, although neither has been solved.

"We have no indication they might be related," Alachua County sheriff's spokesman Spencer Mann said, noting that just one was ruled a murder case.

When the body of Santa Fe Community College student Elizabeth Foster, 21, was found in a shallow grave March 26, fears were rekindled among local students that a serial killer could still be stalking Gainesville.

At the same time, family and friends of Judy MacFarlane criticized police for not trying harder to find the missing mother of four, Ms. MacFarlane, 30, disappeared in mid-January. Her 15-month-old daughter's body was found in a retention pond less than a mile from her home.

Escapes nabbed; tipster also arrested

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. — A woman who turned in two escape convicts to authorities in Florida came home to Binghamton and a welcoming party of state police waiting to arrest her, officials said today.

Nevada Sue Harrison, 30, of Greene, N.Y., was arrested early this morning at the Binghamton Regional Airport and charged with one count of burglary, said H. Karl Chandler, a state police senior investigator.

Ms. Harrison had been traveling with her fugitive boyfriend, James Dewitt, 38, of St. Johnsville, and his fellow escapee Robert Bullock, 34, of Bath, since the pair escaped June 17 from Camp Pharsalia, a minimum-security prison work camp in Chenango County, Chandler said.

She reported her traveling companions to police in Clearwater, Fla., Friday because she'd grown tired of her life on the road and just wanted to come home, according to Chandler.

The two escapees were arrested by Clearwater police without incident at a K mart department store around noon Friday, police said.

Ms. Harrison was being held on one count of burglary, Chandler said.

Blue Cross-Blue Shield and utility tout savings

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — In health care, the phrase "cost containment" may seem an empty one. But Florida's largest insurer and second-biggest utility think they've given the words real meaning.

And they can point to numbers to back up their claim.

More than $31 billion was spent on health care in Florida in 1990. If current trends continue, that figure will triple in just eight years.

But Florida Power Corp. saw its health care costs drop 3 percent last year. Costs this year are running just 2 percent higher.

The St. Petersburg-based utility attributes much of the savings to what they and Blue Cross Blue Shield of Florida, which administers Florida Power's $20 million insurance plan, describe as a groundbreaking "strategic partnership."

Eighteen months ago, the two companies set up an incentive arrangement in which Blue Cross Blue Shield receives a higher fee from the utility for savings in its health care costs.

The savings come through managed care concepts like selective contracts and utilization control, according to Ken Ota, executive vice-president of Blue Cross Blue Shield.

Bonny McCreary, an Orlando secretary for a Florida Power executive, knows the deal has saved her money. McCreary, 39, underwent a hysterectomy and five months of chemotherapy for ovarian cancer in the last year.

"Every doctor who walks by your X-ray sends you a bill," she said.

McCreary kept track of them. The full charges amounted to $27,071.28. But the discounts available through her company's insurance cut that to $22,946.55. She was responsible for a 10 percent deductible.

"I ended up paying — out of the whole thing — about $2,000," she said.

Florida Power is self-insured, meaning it pays for the health care of its employees itself rather than buying a policy from an insurer who makes the payments in exchange for premiums.

That's not unusual. Studies have found that most U.S. companies are self-insured with some managed in-house and others by third-party administrators, like the arrangement between Blue Cross Blue Shield and Florida Power.

But instead of Florida Power paying the Jacksonville-based insurer a typical flat fee for that service, the two companies came up with a new twist — the incentive arrangement.

The incentive formula is tied to the nation's rate of health care inflation, which was at 8.8 percent last year, but the companies won't reveal any other numbers.

Under the plan, Blue Cross Blue Shield has to reach a certain level of savings to get paid at all. Its fee is a share of those savings. If it reaches a greater threshold of savings, it gets a bigger slice.

In the last 1 1/2 years, Blue Cross Blue Shield has made just over $1 million, quite a deal more than it would have made with a flat fee, said company spokesman Patrick McCabe.

Term limits, other amendments on the ballot

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — If you think eight years are enough when it comes to state and federal politicians, you'll like Amendment 9 on Nov. 3.

Enough signatures were verified this week to put the proposed constitutional amendment on the ballot, joining 14 other states where citizens are trying to limit terms through general election votes.

The only other signature drive that might make the Aug. 4 ballot deadline is a move to cap residential property taxes, said state elections worker Paula Reams. The first eight proposals are from the Legislature or the Florida Tax and Budget Reform Commission, an appointive body.

Nearly 530,000 names were submitted in Tallahassee last week supporting an amendment prohibiting politicians from appearing on the ballot for the same job after eight years in office. They can run for different offices, try a write-in campaign or return to the office in the following election.

It would apply to all 180 state legislators, six Cabinet members, the lieutenant governor, Florida's congressional representatives and its two U.S. senators. The governor is already held to two four-year terms.

"The volunteers of this campaign have mounted the most successful petition drive in the history of Florida," said Phil Handy, the Winter Park businessman who chairs Citizens for Limited Political Terms.

But lobbyists and career politicians will fight hard to defeat the proposal, Handy warned.

"This is obviously a first step, not a victory," he said.

Tallahassee lobbyist George Sheldon, co-chairman of a group of former legislators opposing the term limits initiative, said it would be very tough to defeat

Deputy's car retrieved from suspect

SANFORD — A suspect who fled Friday in a Seminole County sheriff's deputy's cruiser was apprehended minutes later, sheriff's spokesman George Proechel said Saturday.

Deputy Tom Yelalay had placed Sanford resident James Howington, 33, into the back seat of his cruiser under investigative detention, sheriff's spokesman George Proechel said Saturday. Yelalay had been called to Terrace Drive and Clermont Avenue in Sanford to investigate a car theft. Proechel explained Howington was not under arrest at that time and so was not handcuffed.

"He was put in the car for his own safety while the deputy was checking on property found inside the car that was stopped," Proechel said.

Proechel said Howington was cooperative, prompting Yelalay "to be a nice guy. He cracked the window in his cage so the suspect would get some air conditioning and be more comfortable."

Howington worked the window down from the rear seat, hopped into the front seat, and sped away.

Proechel said he was apprehended "minutes later, about three blocks away."

Howington, who had just been released from jail July 11 for dealing in stolen property, was arrested Friday and charged with grand theft auto. He is being held in the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Two car wreck

A two car collision was reported on Highway 17-92, in front of Flea World at 8:20 Friday. The Florida Highway patrol said the drivers of the two vehicles received only minor injuries.

According to the FHP, a 1980 Volkswagon, driven by Dexter L. Fairclough, 23, of Altamonte Springs, collided with a 1987 GMC, driven by Anthony Mays, 51, of Oviedo. The troopers estimated $1,000 damage to the GMC, and $5,000 to the Volkswagon.

Troopers said the passenger in Mays' vehicle, Robert Skinner, 29, of Orlando, was not injured.

Fairclough was charged with failure to yield the right of way.

Warrant arrests

● Thomas Lee Maner, 31, 1811 W. 16th Street., Sanford, was arrested Thursday at his residence. He was wanted for failing to appear on charges of possession of less than 20 grams of an unspecified drug, and possession of drug paraphernalia.

● Irvin Richard Beveritt, 63, 48 Seminole Gardens, Sanford, was arrested by Sheriff's deputies Thursday. At the time, deputies said he was at the Seminole County Courthouse, checking information on a traffic violation. He was wanted on a warrant issued Oct. 25, 1989, for failing to appear on a charge of theft.

● David Wayne Willett, 30, 123 Couchlite Court, Sanford, was arrested in Longwood Thursday. He was wanted on a warrant charging him with driving with a suspended license.

● Barbara Gillison, 38, 1603 W. 13th Street, Sanford, was arrested by Sanford police Thursday. She was wanted for violation of parole on a conviction of grand theft.

Incidents reported to Sheriff

● Valentino Bryant and Anthony Holly, both of Sanford, reported being robbed Thursday night at Southwest Road and 16th Street. They told deputies four men in a parked car approached them. They said two were armed, one with a 12 gauge shotgun with a pistol grip, and the other with a 9 millimeter handgun. They reported the four men took a total of $330 in cash and jewelry valued at $2,400 from them, fired a number of shots, then escaped in a car.

● $80 in cash was reportedly stolen from a car owned by Thomas Baughman, 749 Baywood Drive, Sanford, while it was parked at the boat ramp, on Highway 17-92 near Interstate 4 early Thursday morning.

● A 1985 red Toyota was reported stolen Thursday from the home of Debra Deaton, 637 Birmingham Court, #107, in Lake Mary.

Incidents reported to officials

The following incidents have been reported to Sanford police and Seminole County deputies:

Confusion over lakefront lease

By NICK PFEIFER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Confusion surrounds the City's lease agreement with the Monroe Harbour Marina. The lease calls for five percent of gross revenues, but the City has been asking two and a half percent.

A proposal is on the agenda for tomorrow night's City Commission meeting, to officially adopt the two and a half percent level.

"This was first brought up by Commissioner Lon Howell, during the July 13 City Commission meeting, and I wasn't on hand to voice my objections," said Commissioner A.A. McClanahan.

"I have plenty of concerns over this," McClanahan said. "The lease runs until May 31, 2022, and if we reduce the percentage from five to two and a half, the City is going to lose about $1 million in revenue."

City Manager Bill Simmons said, "We have only been asking two and a half percent since 1989." He added, "Back then, the Commission voted to reduce the amount from five percent from 1990 through 1999. The move now, is to extend that percentage through the end of the contract."

He added, "The problem is that our City Attorney William Colbert has informed us that paperwork we should have done to bring about the change is required by the State."

Colbert has now drafted a modification to the original contract, and is presenting it Monday night.

Simmons said that the actual lease agreement signed on March 14, 1987, calls for a $1,000 annual payment for gross revenues at the Marina under $100,000, then the payment of five percent of the revenues in excess of that amount.

"But we are only asking two and a half percent now," Simmons said, "which brought in $24,788 during 1991."

The matter was not on the agenda for the last Commission meeting. Howell brought it up near the end of the evening. McClanahan was not on hand.

Commissioners Howell, Bob Thomas and Whitey Eckstein voted in favor of asking the City Attorney to draft a proposal to officially reduce the percentage. Mayor Bettye Smith voted against it. "I told them we should bring this up first in a workshop meeting to discuss it," she said, "but the measure passed, so Mr. Colbert was instructed to come up with the new draft and it's scheduled for Monday night's meeting."

Smith agreed with McClanahan on the financial aspects of the change.

Rescue the dream

In his final speech as executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Benjamin Hooks captured the dilemmas facing the civil rights movement in general and the venerable institution in particular.

In many ways, the civil rights movement stands at a crossroads. Certainly Blacks as a whole, have made significant political and economic progress since the early days of the movement. Many have benefited from laws to eliminate the overt barriers to their achievement — and have won their share of the American Dream.

Indeed, Mr. Hooks cited figures that document those impressive changes: Thirty years ago, 70 percent of Blacks lived in poverty; today, he said, 70 percent live above the poverty line. And, as he properly noted, the NAACP has been instrumental in improving equality of opportunity.

Still, despite this progress, more subtle forms of discrimination, whether in employment, education or housing, have not been eradicated. They continue to limit the advancement of working- and middle-class minorities. Yet, as troublesome as lingering bias is, two even more intractable problems persist.

The first is the alarming number of Blacks who remain trapped in a kind of material and cultural poverty that defies easy solution. The lives of these people are not substantially bettered by legislative means, such as extending the Voting Rights Act or passing the 1991 Civil Rights Act.

What they need is a concerted society-wide effort to rejuvenate the cities — and that requires an investment, especially in education, that few are willing to make.

Mr. Hooks has called for a commission, like the Kerner Commission, to examine the plight of the cities in the wake of the Los Angeles riots. But of what use is another commission? The progress of the Kerner Commission has been virtually fulfilled because the remedies that were apparent after the explosions in Watts were ignored.

And that leads to the second problem. After the passage of the landmark civil rights legislation, too many whites thought that racism had been addressed and solved, and they rejected desegregation and affirmative action as ways to level the playing field.

Unfortunately, that attitude was cultivated by the Reagan and Bush administrations. Ronald Reagan was, of course, hostile to social programs that were perceived to aid Blacks. His antipathy to minorities, though, is best typified by his refusal to meet civil rights groups. President Bush's record on race has also been problematic. Witness his exploitation of Willie Horton, his original opposition to even moderate civil rights legislation and his feeble response to the Rodney King verdict and its aftermath.

The desolation of the cities and people's lives demands innovative approaches. In this respect, Mr. Hooks' endorsement of self-help groups is important. But the wider society must also rededicate itself to the task of rescuing the dream from the nightmare that too many inner cities have become.

TOP 27 INCOMERS AGAINST CLINTON

A primer for upcoming elections

Thirty-six days from today primary elections will be held. The primary election is scheduled for Tuesday, Sept. 1, 1992. Run-off elections will be held Oct. 1, 1992 and the general election will be held Nov. 3, 1992.

The delay in finalizing precinct lines was occasioned by the fact that supervisors of elections statewide were not notified until July 2, 1992. Seminole County now has 133 precincts. In spite of what is happening in Seminole County the situation in south Florida is much worse. Precinct lines were not resolved until noon, July 22, 1992.

The aftermath of the 1980 census was relatively simple compared to the results of the 1990 census. For example, after the 1980 census, committee men and committee women were listed on the presidential primary ballot. This year they are listed on the regular primary ballot and turn around time they had for qualifying was four (4) days, noon, July 6 until noon, July 10, 1992. Additionally, qualifications were done with a waiver from the supervisor of elections in the event their precinct lines had been changed. Certified letters were sent to 50 committee persons by July 17, 1992 informing them of these changes.

The delay in redistricting has caused voter rolls not to be available to the various candidates running for offices. The Seminole County Supervisor of Elections, Sandra Goard, had to prepare 58 different ballots for the upcoming primary election. In precincts where there are one or two voters, absentee ballots will be utilized to preserve voter privacy.

SEMINOLE OPINION

Seminole County now has two congressional districts: Districts 3 and 7. At the state level there are four (4) senate districts and five (5) house districts.

Everyone is aware that at the national level President George Bush is challenged by Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, and that incumbent Senator Bob Graham is up for re-election. Senator Bob Graham has nine challengers. Republicans are: Hugh Brotherton, Englewood; Bill Grant, Tallahassee; Rob Quartel, Orlando; Jim Mahorner, Atlantic Beach, is the one Democratic challenger. There are four write-in candidates: Charles R. Evans, Washington D.C.; Dan Fein, Miami Shores; Michael Alan Stern, Bradenton and Wayne Wiechart, Altamonte Springs. Write-in candidates pay no qualifying fee and their name is not printed on the ballot. They open a campaign account, take an oath and voters may write their names on the ballot in the November general elections.

In District 3 there are eight candidates for the U.S. House of Representatives. Democrats are: Corrine Brown, Jacksonville; Arnett Girardeau, Jacksonville; Andrew Johnson, Jacksonville and Glennie Milla, Orlando. Republicans are: George Grimsley, Jacksonville; Bob Harms, Jacksonville; Steve Kelley, Fernandino Beach and Don Weidner, Jacksonville.

The seven candidates for District 7 are as follows: two write-ins Roy D. Davis, Orlando and Ken McCarthy, Deltona. Republicans are Vaughn S. Forrest, New Smyrna; Dick Graham, Ormond Beach and John Mica, Winter Park. Democrats are: Adrienne Perry, Longwood and Dan Webster, Daytona Beach.

It is apparent that Seminole County voters have become a part of a much larger electorate pool and as a result our impact at the national level has been diminished. Among the candidates vying for the District 3 seat only one lives in central Florida. Four of the candidates seeking the District 7 seat live in central Florida; however, two are write-ins. Central Floridians will need to review the candidates and the issues carefully during the primary and general elections.

Hillary: I may be on front line

NEW YORK — It's the tail end of a killer day and Hillary Clinton settles into the sofa on the 14th floor of the Intercontinental looking remarkably alert and limp free, drinking spring water straight out of a plastic bottle.

The day broke some 15 hours earlier with a sheaf of headlines declaring that the campaign was manufacturing a "gentler, kinder" Hillary. Family Circle featured a political bake-off between Hillary's and Barbara's chocolate chip cookies recipes. More than one story talked about the "two sides" of the candidate's wife: heads up she's a lawyer, heads down she's a wife. And Republicans were comparing Hillary Clinton at the stove to Mike Dukakis in a tank.

The candidate's wife had spent the day at the Texas caucus, the Emily's List luncheon, a powwow for congressional wives (dubbed "power wives" on the schedule) and eight other stops, where she offered everything from a wave to a 25-minute speech without notes. At the Women of Color reception, not surprisingly, a woman in my row offered this piece of high praise with a kicker, "Isn't she great!" (pause) "Gee, I wish she were running for the Senate."

Now, in Madison Square Garden, six female Democratic nominees for the Senate were speaking and everyone was talking about the year of the woman. Women have become the symbols of change in the political process. But what about wives?

Is it actually easier for a woman to be the candidate this year than the candidate's wife? Have we come that far? Or not so far? Hillary answers that with a knowing but cautious, "Maybe." We knew what it was to be a wife, she agrees. Over the past decades, we've learned what it is to be an independent woman. But we haven't yet figured out what it looks like to be strong, independent and wifely — especially First Wifely — all at the same time.

"I thought I understood that before this race was under way," says Hillary Clinton, who comes across as comfortable and thoughtful. "That's what I was living. I thought that with some stops and starts and changes along the way trying to get it all straight. I was a very lucky person because I had a profession that I valued, a marriage that I thought was a partnership in the best sense of the word and gave me a lot of personal satisfaction.

"I thought I understood how to walk through the minefield of defining myself and striking the balance between my own needs and family needs that we all struggle with all the time."

Now this mother, wife and lawyer finds the controversy that has followed her from conservative Arkansas to the national stage "surprising" and even "bewildering." Hillary had, to be sure, a rocky introduction to the American public. Her image was flanked by flowers and cookies, Tammy Wynette and Betty Crocker.

But much of the Hillary Problem, she suspects, is another case study about men, women, change. And this time also marriage. As Hillary says, "I thought we (women) were beginning to develop a framework for that kind of life we could lead, still married, still committed to family, still engaged in the outside world. And I've just been surprised I guess by the assumptions that bear little resemblance to how all of us — not just me — make our way through this uncharted terrain."

Where do we still get lost in this terrain? At the White House door? In the territory marked partnership? At the women's caucus Tuesday morning, Bill Clinton tells the audience of women, "We have to say that building up women does not diminish men."

Harvard Business School's Rosabeth Kantor says our trouble is with teams as much as with mates: "We don't understand teams in America. We have this idea there has to be one leader, one CEO. So we can't help comparing couples. We can't see it as both/and. It's either/or."

But more acute is this disparity between our view of marriage as a merger — two people as one — and our view of what it means to be a successful individual. It's not easy for women to be seen or to feel both professional and coupled. Ask any woman who ever felt awkward bringing her husband to a work event. We have few models of "two somenese," as Stella Rok once described it, relationships in which men and women remain two but together.

As Hillary Clinton knows well, "We're all trying to work this out. We're all trying to find our way and we don't have a common language." In the era of public partnership marriages, she says, "I may be on the front line."

Front lines are notoriously unsafe places. Cookies or not — the one I tasted could have used some more chocolate chips — there is no makeover in the making. A whole generation lives on these front lines now. Hillary Clinton has just become the most visible resident.

We have to say that building up women does not diminish men.

Eco-terrorism fuels campaign rhetoric

WASHINGTON — This presidential election may witness the outbreak of eco-terrorism with a political twist: spooking voters into believing that they have to choose between pollution and their pocketbooks.

It will be clean air vs. the auto industry; the spotted owl vs. timber; wetlands vs. development; global warming vs. economic growth. In each case, interest groups will be pitted against each other, and labels like "extremist" will be lobbed like so many pipe bombs.

This brand of eco-terrorism won't involve physical violence to achieve ecological goals, but can get just as bloody on a rhetorical level.

Charles Black, a senior campaign adviser to Bush/Quayle '92, gave a forecast of this strategy when he recently told interviewers, "As one of the most radical environmentalists anywhere in the Congress, (Al Gore) is the author of a proposal which would put the American auto industry out of business... His radical environmentalism would cost jobs."

Rather than center on Bush's environmental record, the GOP will spend its time in Arkansas generating examples of environmental degradation under the Clinton administration. "We're not searching for a specific location or site (like the Boston Harbor)," says Bush/Quayle '92 spokesman Tony Mitchell. "But we definitely want to define and point out the differences between the environmental record of the president and that of Gov. Clinton."

In a recent memo from Bush/Quayle '92 campaign headquarters, members of Congress were solicited to adopt under their own name pre-written editorials defending Bush's environmental record. These "editorials" are campaign literature dressed up as serious commentary in which Democrats are attacked and the president is hailed as a great environmentalist.

"We're all on the same side so it's not a situation where we're trying to impose our ideas on Republicans," Mitchell told our reporter Andrew Conte. In one pitch, members of Congress are urged to tell their constituents, "So, when the news media reports that President Bush has met trouble at the environmental summit, don't blame it on Rio. Blame it on Democrats in Congress."

The article, which is designed to be published in local towns across the country, brags that Bush "led the world by proposing to phase out carbonylfluorocarbons and other ozone-depleting substances by the end of 1995." In reality, the president led a protest against international timetables while dragging his heels before agreeing to reduce "greenhouse" gases. Bush has also argued it would be too expensive to reduce the use of these gases.

For their part, Clinton's camp will remain on a war footing in terms of Republican attack ads, poised to strike back swiftly and not repeat the mistakes of Michael Dukakis in 1988.

One of the most egregious errors was in the passive response to the now-infamous attack ads involving Boston Harbor pollution.

If presidential candidates can be held accountable for positions and platforms, what about their props? Some Democratic strategists believe that a possible return trip to Boston Harbor may be the poetic justice of this campaign season.

The Democrats have an opportunity to question something just as great — Bush's word. If Boston Harbor becomes a campaign issue again this year, it will be the Republicans, not the Democrats, who run for cover.

It will be clean air vs the auto industry.

Kiwanian, was with Chase & Company for many years while his wife, Marie, taught school. Before Marie married Martin she was one of the Stemper girls.

Well, Grace Marie "straightened" me out about one of my earlier columns about John and Polly Miller. Miller was for quite sometime a "drummer" — as salicemen were called way back when. Polly, or Pauline was one of the Stoudenmire twins. Her sister, Christine, married Frank L. Woodruff Jr.

Let me say at this point that Frank, Christine and Polly's husband, John, are no longer with us.

Miller gave up his job with the National Biscuit Company (Nabisco) and became the full-time director of education at the local First Baptist Church. John was ordained a Baptist minister in July, 1949. He served the local church until November, 1955, when he accepted a pastorate for the Hypoluxo mission of the First Baptist Church of West Palm Beach. Later John was called to serve as minister of education for a church in Sarasota.

It was there that John developed a tumor of the brain and his untimely death followed. Polly moved back to West Palm Beach where her daughter, Jeanne Lane, and son, David, operated a pet supply store. Polly is now employed at the store. It was not too long ago through this column that Polly found out Doris Lake, a physician and sister of Sanford's Buddy Lake, realized they both lived in West Palm Beach. Doris is now retired and also now married.

Writing about Grace Marie reminds me that during the 1947-48 church year I taught a Sunday school class of 10-year-old girls. It was rather unusual for a man to teach a class of girls. At least at that time, at the First Baptist Church. Grace Marie was a member of that class. At this time I had enrolled at Stetson University in DeLand and was taking a course in New Testament history.

I learned more about New Testament history by teaching my girls the same subject, giving them the same pop quizzes and "exams" I experienced at Stetson. Believe it or not, Grace Marie was one of several girls in that class who came through with a perfect grade. Jeanne Lane Miller was another along with Louise Benton and Dorothy Holloway. There were other girls in that class but my mind cannot recall them right at this point. Some might have been Joyce Jones, Beverly Cooper, Nancy Rountree, Jeanette Cleveland and possibly Annette Brooks, according to Grace Marie.

Oh, yes, during the 1950s Grace Marie wrote columns for The Herald. First she authored the "Celery Crate News" about Seminole High activities, then the "Seminole High News," and even later during 1956 through 1958, "Collegiate Echoes." The articles were well received and Grace Marie said she loved doing them.

One of these days we'll get around to doing a column on the Stemper family and the Stineciphers.

I'm sure most people know the U.S. Government conducts a census every 10 years to determine the number of people in this country. But I'll wager five out of the first 10 people you meet can't tell you why the census is taken every 10 years.

It's to determine congressional districts. For example, the 1990 census provided Florida with three more congressional districts. On the other hand, Michigan lost three districts, all because of population increases and decreases.

Consequently, there are census records for every decade in the history of the United States. However, and be honest with yourself, as well as with me, did you know that there are records for every decade except the census taken in 1880? It seems the records of that census were completely destroyed by fire. So, a special census was conducted in 1885.

Since I've shared that little known fact with you let me relate my favorite census yarn.

During 1990, the census was being taken in Seminole County. One day a young census taker was calling on folks who lived in the Osceola area. The young man arrived at a house along the St. Johns River where the road stopped. After collecting the information he wanted he remarked, "I suppose this is the last house."

"Oh, no," said the folks he was talking to. "There's an old lady who lives about 300 yards on up the river. Take that path along our corn patch and you'll go right to it."

Sure enough, the young fellow took the path and came to the house. The old lady was sitting in a rocking chair on the porch. He introduced himself as a census taker for the government and wanted to ask her a question.

"What's a census?" she asked. The young man explained it this way. "Every 10 years the U.S. Government has to find out how many people there are in this country and that's why I'm here."

"Do you mean to say," she asked, "you came all the way out here just to find out how many folks there are in this country?"

"That's right," said the census taker.

"Well," she said, "you can go right back to Washington and tell those stupid people up there they'll have to ask somebody else. There's no way in (you know what) I'd know how many folks there are in this country."

Now, don't y'all go and get all excited. The story is yarn, and just that. It isn't true. But I thought you'd like it. We'll be with you next Sunday.

Julia Goeb also uses city reclaimed water to irrigate her property in Sanford.

supply. Sentell just likes the way her yard looks.

"I think it's marvelous," said Sentell, past president of the Sanford Garden Club. "My yard is so thick, so green, I don't know how my strapping son pushes his mower through it."

And because the wastewater, unfit to drink, still contains high levels of nitrogen and phosphorus, it makes vegetation grow like crazy. Sentell said she doesn't have to fertilize her lawn.

Sentell said she was excited to learn of the city's plans last year to install the reclaimed water lines throughout the city. She wanted to be one of the first to sign up for the system.

"I was the second person to sign up," says Sentell. "I was the sixth of seventh home to go online."

One of the biggest advantages of the reclaimed water, say veteran users, is the low cost. Bill Marcoux, director of the city's reclaimed water program, said the reclaimed water cost $3.25 per month and five cents for each 1,000 gallons used. Regular "tap" water, costs $2.14 per month, but users must pay $1.42 per 1,000 gallons.

Julia and Michael Goeb connected their irrigation system at their 78-year-old home at 117 W. 10th St. to the reclaimed system this year. Julia Goeb said the system has already saved them a tremendous amount of money.

"We paid about $60 the month before to use 10,000 gallons of city water, including sewer and garbage," said Goeb. "Last month, we used 48,000 gallons of the reclaimed water and it cost us $5.83."

Goeb said the highly-treated wastewater doesn't smell. In fact, said Goeb, irrigation systems at many of her neighbors' homes are often smaller because of the "rotten egg" smell the shallow wellwater can produce.

The city's reclaimed water system is part of a $40 million program to stop the dumping of treated sewage into Lake Monroe. Much of the treated wastewater will be sprayed at a city agricultural site east of town, but homes and businesses throughout the city have also been offered the odorless water.

Consumers suffer with lowered savings rates

By PATRICIA LAMMELL
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — There are few breaks for consumers at the nation's banks these days. While interest paid on savings and certificates of deposit is falling fast, rates on credit cards and loans are dropping slowly — if at all.

"You can see how the consumer's getting shafted," said Robert Heady, publisher of Bank Rate Monitor, a North Palm Beach, Fla. newsletter that tracks consumer rates.

Banks have been dropping their rates on savings accounts, in response to steady interest rate cuts by the Federal Reserve.

Money market bank accounts yielded an average of 3.13 percent this week, while checking accounts paid only 2.48 percent. Bank Rate Monitor reported. Six-month certificates of deposit yielded 3.38 percent.

"These are some of the lowest rates since the Great Depression," Heady said.

Since interest rates peaked in April 1989, money market rates have declined 3.49 percent. Interest-bearing accounts have fallen 2.65 percent, and six-month CDs receded 5.96 percent during the same period, Heady said.

Some consumer loan rates have also come down. According to Bank Rate Monitor, 30-year mortgages fell to 7.98 percent this week and new car loans are down 2.73 percent to 9.81 percent.

But other consumer loan rates are still high. Unsecured personal loans have fallen just .72 percent since 1989 to 16.28 percent.

The average rate on conventional credit-card loans has increased .36 percent since 1989, to 18.09 percent.

This trend has been a boon for banks, many of which reported improved earnings in the second quarter.

Tourism

on package plans has been on the rise since 1988.

"It's important that you make it easy," he said, adding the trends work in favor of package tours, cruises and other organized vacations. "Value travel packages will be the ones that rise to the top."

There is less demand for new destinations and a high-potential for repeat business — pluses for Florida, where tourism is a $24 billion business, second only to California.

Hazel Henderson, a futurist author, takes the shift to simplicity a step further by promoting ecotourism as a growing market — in part because of the lending crunch.

"There just isn't going to be the investment capital" for large-scale resorts and attractions, but she sees a big profit potential in low-input ecotourism.

Florida can tap into that and capitalize on what she calls its historic treasures — St. Augustine, Key West and Cedar Key.

She also believes Florida could benefit from the calamities of California, saying the combination of overdevelopment, the Los Angeles riots, pollution and earthquakes have produced a unique public relations problem for the Golden State's tourism industry.

Barbara Bryant, director of the U.S. Census Bureau, told conference Florida was one of only four states growing more than 30 percent in the '90s.

The down side for Florida was low growth in regions where the travelers originate. Metropolitan New York and Philadelphia grew less than 4 percent, and Chicago and Detroit grew less than 2 percent.

One area she thought the industry could "begin to milk" is single, older women who want to travel, but not alone.

"I really think this is one end of the market that still has potential," she said.

Even Californians seem ready to jump on the Florida travel wagon.

Walt Disney World targeted its first television ad campaign in California in 1988. The state climbed from seventh in 1990 to second behind New York in 1991 as the source of Florida visitors arriving by air.

Bush meets with advisers on Iraqi defiance

By JOHN KING
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Bush met today with his top national security aides for two hours to assess Iraq's defiance of U.N. sanctions. "No options have been ruled out," a White House official said.

The meeting at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., produced no announcements on action.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said in a statement that the Bush administration would continue to consult with the United Nations Security Council and with its coalition partners on the latest crisis.

"Saddam Hussein has demonstrated a broad pattern of defiance and non-compliance with U.N. requirements. The president today considered this new record of non-compliance, the U.N. resolutions and their requirements and the full range of options for enforcing full compliance with the resolutions."

Bush arranged the meeting after canceling plans to spend the weekend at his seaside home in Maine.

Laura Melillo, deputy White House press secretary, said that no further meetings were planned by the president for the weekend.

She said that the White House had no immediate reaction to comments by Iraqi ambassador Abdul Amir al-Anabari at the United Nations on Saturday that he was optimistic a compromise to end the standoff could be reached.

"The U.N. Security Council is continuing negotiations," she said. "We don't have any response to the Iraqi ambassador's comments at this time."

Meanwhile, Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole suggested that it is likely that Bush will use force if Saddam continues his defiance.

"If he (Saddam) doesn't get the message in the next few days, it's going to be bombs away," Dole said in an interview on Cable News Network.

Among those joining Bush at Camp David were Vice President Dan Quayle, Defense Secretary

Richard Cheney, White House chief of staff Samuel Skinner, national security adviser Brent Scowcroft, CIA Director Robert Gates, Joint Chief of Staff Chairman Colin Powell and Undersecretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger.

"We continue to discuss this matter with the United Nations Security Council and to consult with our coalition partners. No options have been ruled out," Fitzwater said.

The meeting at the presidential mountainside retreat comes after a warning by Cheney that Saddam is continuing the impasse over U.N. inspection rights "at his own peril."

Bush arranged the meeting after canceling plans to spend the weekend at his seaside home in Maine. "There is no time frame" for any military action against Iraq, Bush told reporters in Ohio during a one-day campaign trip to Ohio and Missouri.

Cheney, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Colin Powell and national security adviser Brent Scowcroft were among those summoned to Camp David today to discuss military and other options to force Iraqi compliance with U.N.-ordered weapons inspections.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said that issuing an ultimatum to Saddam to comply by a deadline or face a new allied military assault was "still under discussion."

"We are prepared to act accordingly to enforce the resolutions," he said.

Administration sources said an ultimatum would set a deadline, perhaps within days, for Iraq to back down in the tense confrontation. Such an ultimatum would result from joint action by allies and the United Nations.

"We're looking at some space of time," said one source, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Cheney, speaking in Atlanta, said Saddam "is once again seeking confrontation with the rest of the world... He does so at his own peril."

As Bush huddled with his advisers, Iraq's ambassador to the United Nations said late Friday that his government would respond to U.S. demands today and that he expected the response to be "very positive."

Political risks of doing something vs. nothing

By TOM RAUM
AP News Analysis

WASHINGTON — President Bush has wound up in a box in confronting Saddam Hussein's latest defiance. If he moves militarily, he risks being accused of playing politics with war. If he does nothing, his foreign-policy leadership credentials may be tarnished.

Of course, Bush stands to gain the most if he can deliver a clean strike that humbles or removes Saddam Hussein from power and forces full compliance with remaining U.N. sanctions.

That would enable the president to climb back on the world stage and relive his glory days in the aftermath of the Persian Gulf war and might help to revive his sagging popularity in a presidential election year.

But any military action is fraught with danger — as President Carter learned in his failed 1980 effort to rescue U.S. hostages in Iran.

New bombing, no matter how surgical, carries the risk that American pilots could be shot down and paraded through Baghdad. And more civilian casualties in Iraq could turn world opinion against the United States.

It also seems unlikely that Bush would be able to rally international support for a new attack on Baghdad as easily as he could in 1990.

Saddam, whose belligerence has increased this spring and summer as Bush's popularity ratings at home have fallen, has proven a particularly resilient foe.

And if Bush tries again to topple the dictator, and fails, the president's foreign policy adeptness — which remains his strong suit — would be seriously called into question.

Even a compromise that ended the three-week standoff between Iraq and U.N. weapons inspectors at an Agriculture Ministry building in Baghdad could work against Bush politically — by bringing into focus the fact that Saddam remains in power, still thumbing his nose at the United States.

Such a compromise could defuse the current situation, but there seems little doubt that the issue of Saddam will return again in the campaign season to haunt Bush in a difficult political race.

At the same time, the crisis gives Bush an opportunity to seize the moment and at least change the national topic, much in the way that Democrat Bill Clinton was able to do earlier in the month. And any shift in the national debate away from Clinton's popularity and Bush's vulnerability has got to be welcome to the Bush camp.

Bush's decision to cancel a weekend at his oceanside retreat in Kennebunkport, Maine, to huddle with his top military aides on the stalemate has all the trappings of being politically driven.

While Bush aides deny political overtones, clearly Bush would rather be depicted conferring with top aides on a national security crisis at Camp David than golfing and boating in Kennebunkport.

And the crisis comes at a time when Clinton, still riding the crest of popularity from the Democratic convention and his six-day heartland bus tour, enjoys a comfortable advantage in the polls over the incumbent president.

A Cable News Network-Time Magazine poll on Saturday showed that Bush's approval rating had fallen to 30 percent, the lowest of his presidency and down 60 points from 18 months ago in the aftermath of the war.

If there is military action, no doubt there would be some rallying around the president. But it seems unlikely that Bush could receive the same spike in his popularity that the Persian Gulf War produced, suggests Stuart Rothenberg, a political analyst and newsletter publisher.

"The situation is quite different," he said. "We're in the middle of a presidential campaign and we've already had military action in the Gulf. And if he does something, it will serve as a reminder that Saddam Hussein was never eliminated in the Gulf War and that our victory was not as complete as we first thought."

Still, the president cannot afford the luxury of doing nothing and allowing Saddam Hussein to continue violating the U.N. sanctions. That would totally undermine Bush's finest hour, his victory in driving Iraq from Kuwait.

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole said Saturday that Bush may have "no choice" but to order an allied military strike on Baghdad. "If he (Saddam) doesn't get the message in the next few days, it's going to be bombs away," Dole told Cable News Network's "Evans and Novak Report."

New Disability Act phase begins today

By SONYA ROSS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Starting today, every mid-sized business in America must remove the physical barriers and strip job applications of questions that might bar disabled people from working there.

Disability groups say this phase of the Americans with Disabilities Act could help as many as 14 million of the nation's estimated 43 million disabled people.

The act is designed to protect the disabled from discrimination in employment, public accommodations, transportation and telecommunications.

Anywhere from 500,000 to nearly 1 million businesses could be affected. And some of those owners are worried it'll mean years of complicated discrimination suits over aspects of the law they weren't aware of or didn't intend to break.

"There is some fear and lack of education out there," said Terry Hill, spokesman for the National Federation of Independent Businesses, which represents about 690,000 companies.

"And there's no way to know when you're in compliance. We're just hoping for common sense to will out, at least in the early stages, so we don't get caught in court battles," Hill said.

The phase that goes into effect today requires businesses with more than 25 employees to remove disability questions from job applications and delete unrelated physical requirements from job descriptions.

It bars them from asking about a disability, limiting questions only to whether a disabled applicant can do the job.

To comply, businesses must accommodate disabled employees and job-seekers according to their disabilities, however they can best do that. Compliance can be as simple as lowering computer desks or as complex as overhauling entire hiring processes.

At least 63,000 disabled people are expected to find work over the next year as a direct result of the law, according to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

"It's not an affirmative action program for disabled people. But it is going to open up opportunities," said Jim Gleich, executive director of the Disability Rights, Education and Defense Fund.

Large companies were required to comply last January, while small businesses with 25 or fewer employees have until Jan. 26, 1993 to comply.

A six-month grace period for businesses to accommodate disabled customers also expires Sunday.

"The last thing someone with a disadvantage wants to do is create a problem for those who aren't disadvantaged," said Jim

At a glance

WASHINGTON - Here are requirements that mid-sized businesses - those with at least 25 employees - must meet beginning today to comply with the Americans with Disabilities Act:

□ Remove physical and communication barriers.

□ Provide "reasonable" accommodations, such as special equipment, interpreters or flexible working hours.

□ Remove job application questions on illnesses, injuries, disabilities and worker's compensation claims.

□ Remove unrelated physical requirements from job descriptions.

□ Limit medical examination reports to job-related concerns.

Van Allen, personnel director for Memphis, Tenn.-based Embassy Suites Hotels, which began its disabled workers program in the mid-1980s.

Embassy Suites invested $1 million this year on training employees to work with the disabled, Van Allen said. "The physical part of it - creating a wheelchair ramp in your business, putting in automatic doors - those are easy things to do. If that's all you do, you're not being friendly to the disadvantaged."

Some businesses are approaching the new law with a business sense - hiring the disabled, some say, is an inroad into a vast, untapped disabled clientele.

After establishing a program for deaf investors, Merrill Lynch saw a substantial increase in its number of hearing-impaired customers. The company has 81 financial consultants working with the hearing impaired, many of whom are either deaf themselves or relatives of deaf people. The program was the idea of analyst Christopher Sullivan of New Haven, Conn., who is deaf.

"There is a lot of skepticism and mistrust of the financial community on the part of the deaf community," Sullivan said. "It's taken a lot of effort to break down that wall of mistrust."

Sullivan said he would advise companies to train their employees on the best way to approach the disabled, and to invest whatever is necessary to accommodate the disabled in their offices.

"A business should not be too concerned with cost, because in the long run they get their investment back by the tremendous productivity of the disabled," he said.

NOTICE OF RECEIPT OF TRANSMISSION LINE CERTIFICATION APPLICATION

An application, number TA 92-08, for certification to authorize the location of a transmission line corridor, the construction, operation and maintenance of a 230 kilovolt electrical transmission line, and maintenance of the transmission line right-of-way, which will run from an electrical power plant in the vicinity of DeBary, Florida, to a substation in the vicinity of Winter Springs, Florida, was received by the Department of Environmental Regulation on July 2, 1992. The transmission line is commonly referred to as DeBary-Winter Springs. The Department of Environmental Regulation found application number TA 92-08 to be complete on July 17, 1992. The case is pending before the Division of Administrative Hearings, Case No. 92-40197L, prior to action by the Governor and Cabinet, pursuant to the Florida Transmission Line Siting Act, Chapter 403, Part II, F.S. The corridor will pass through the following local government jurisdictions: Volusia County, Seminole County, City of Sanford, City of Lake Mary, City of Longwood, City of Casselberry, and the City of Winter Springs. The transmission line right-of-way to be located within the proposed corridor will typically range between 120 to 175 feet wide. The entire corridor area shown will not be utilized.

A certification hearing will be held regarding this application in approximately six months. A notice stating the date, time, and location of that hearing shall be published in this newspaper at least 60 days before the hearing date. The Hearing Officer will receive testimony and evidence from the parties and the public at the certification hearing. If timely requested by a local government pursuant to s. 403.927(2), F.S., a public hearing shall be held in each county through which the corridor passes, to allow members of the public not parties to the certification proceedings an opportunity to testify under oath as to relevant facts about the case; testimony shall be subject to cross examination. The public should be aware, however, that the majority of the testimony and evidence in the case will be heard at the centrally located certification hearing.

State agencies and local governments will be studying the application and preparing testimony and evidence for the certification hearing. It is recommended that interested individuals review the application and bring matters of concern to the appropriate agency's attention as soon as possible (see below for listing of participating agencies).

The application for certification, which more specifically depicts the corridor, is available for public inspection at the following locations:

- Florida Power Corporation offices:
- General Office: 3201 34th Street, South St. Petersburg, Florida
 - DeLand District Office: 142 East New York Avenue, DeLand, Florida
 - Longwood District Office: 563 East State Road 434, Longwood, Florida
- Department of Environmental Regulation offices:
- Tallahassee Office: 2800 Blair Stone Road, Tallahassee, Florida
 - Orlando District Office: 3319 Maguire Boulevard, Suite 232, Orlando, Florida
- Public Libraries:
- Volusia County Public Library: 130 East Henry Avenue, DeLand, Florida
 - Seminole County Public Library: 180 North Palmato Avenue, Sanford, Florida

Consideration may be given to this proceeding to corridors alternate to the route proposed by Florida Power Corporation. The applicant may propose corridors secondary to the primary corridor in order to preserve its options, and persons other than the applicant may also propose alternate routes for portions or all of the corridor. To propose an alternate corridor, persons must request to become a party to the proceedings (see below), and then must file a notice of proposed alternate corridor with the Hearing Officer pursuant to s. 403.927(1), F.S., with all parties, and with any local government in the jurisdiction in which the alternate is proposed, by no later than 60 days prior to the originally scheduled certification hearing. The filing must include the most recent United States Geological Survey 1:24,000 quadrangle maps, with a precise delineation of the specific corridor boundaries, a description of the proposed alternate corridor, and a statement of the reasons why the proposed alternate should be certified. Each party proposing an alternate corridor shall have the burden of providing the data necessary for the agencies listed in s. 403.928, F.S., to prepare a supplementary report, and the burden of proof on the suitability of the alternate corridor at the certification hearing. See s. 403.927(1), F.S., and Florida Administrative Code Rule 17-17.943 for further information and requirements.

Pursuant to s. 403.927(4), F.S.:

(a) Parties to the proceeding shall be the applicant, Florida Power Corporation; the Department of Environmental Regulation; the Public Service Commission; the Department of Community Affairs; the Department of Natural Resources; the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission; the St. Johns River Water Management District; the Central Florida

Regional Planning Council; Volusia County; Seminole County; the City of Sanford; the City of Lake Mary; the City of Longwood; the City of Casselberry; and the City of Winter Springs.

(b) Any party listed in paragraph (a) may waive its right to participate in these proceedings. If any listed party fails to file a notice of its intent to be a party on or before the 30th day prior to the certification hearing, such party shall be deemed to have waived its right to be a party unless its participation would not prejudice the rights of any party to the proceedings.

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of Chapter 120, F.S., to the contrary, upon filing with the Hearing Officer of a notice of intent to be a party by an agency or corporation or association described in subparagraph 1. and 2. or a petition for intervention by a person described in subparagraph 3. no later than 30 days prior to the date set for the certification hearing, the following shall also be parties to the proceedings:

1. Any state agency not listed in paragraph (a) as to matters within its jurisdiction.
2. Any domestic nonprofit corporation or association formed, in whole or in part, to promote conservation of natural beauty; to protect the environment, personal health, or other biological values; to preserve historical sites; to promote consumer interests; to represent labor, commercial, or industrial groups; or to promote comprehensive planning or orderly development of the area in which the proposed transmission line or corridor is to be located.
3. Any person whose substantial interests are affected and being determined by the proceedings.

(d) Any agency whose properties or works may be affected shall be made a party upon the request of the agency or any party to this proceeding.

Anyone wishing to become a party to the proceedings should file an appropriate petition pursuant to Florida Administrative Code Rule 28-5.207 with Diane K. Keating, Hearing Officer, Division of Administrative Hearings, DeSoto Building, 1230 Apalachee Parkway, Tallahassee, Florida 32306-1880. Copies of the petition should be sent to all parties. Those wishing to intervene in these proceedings, unless appearing on their own behalf, must be represented by an attorney or other person who can be determined to be qualified to appear in administrative proceedings pursuant to Chapter 130, F.S., or Florida Administrative Code Rule 17-103.020.

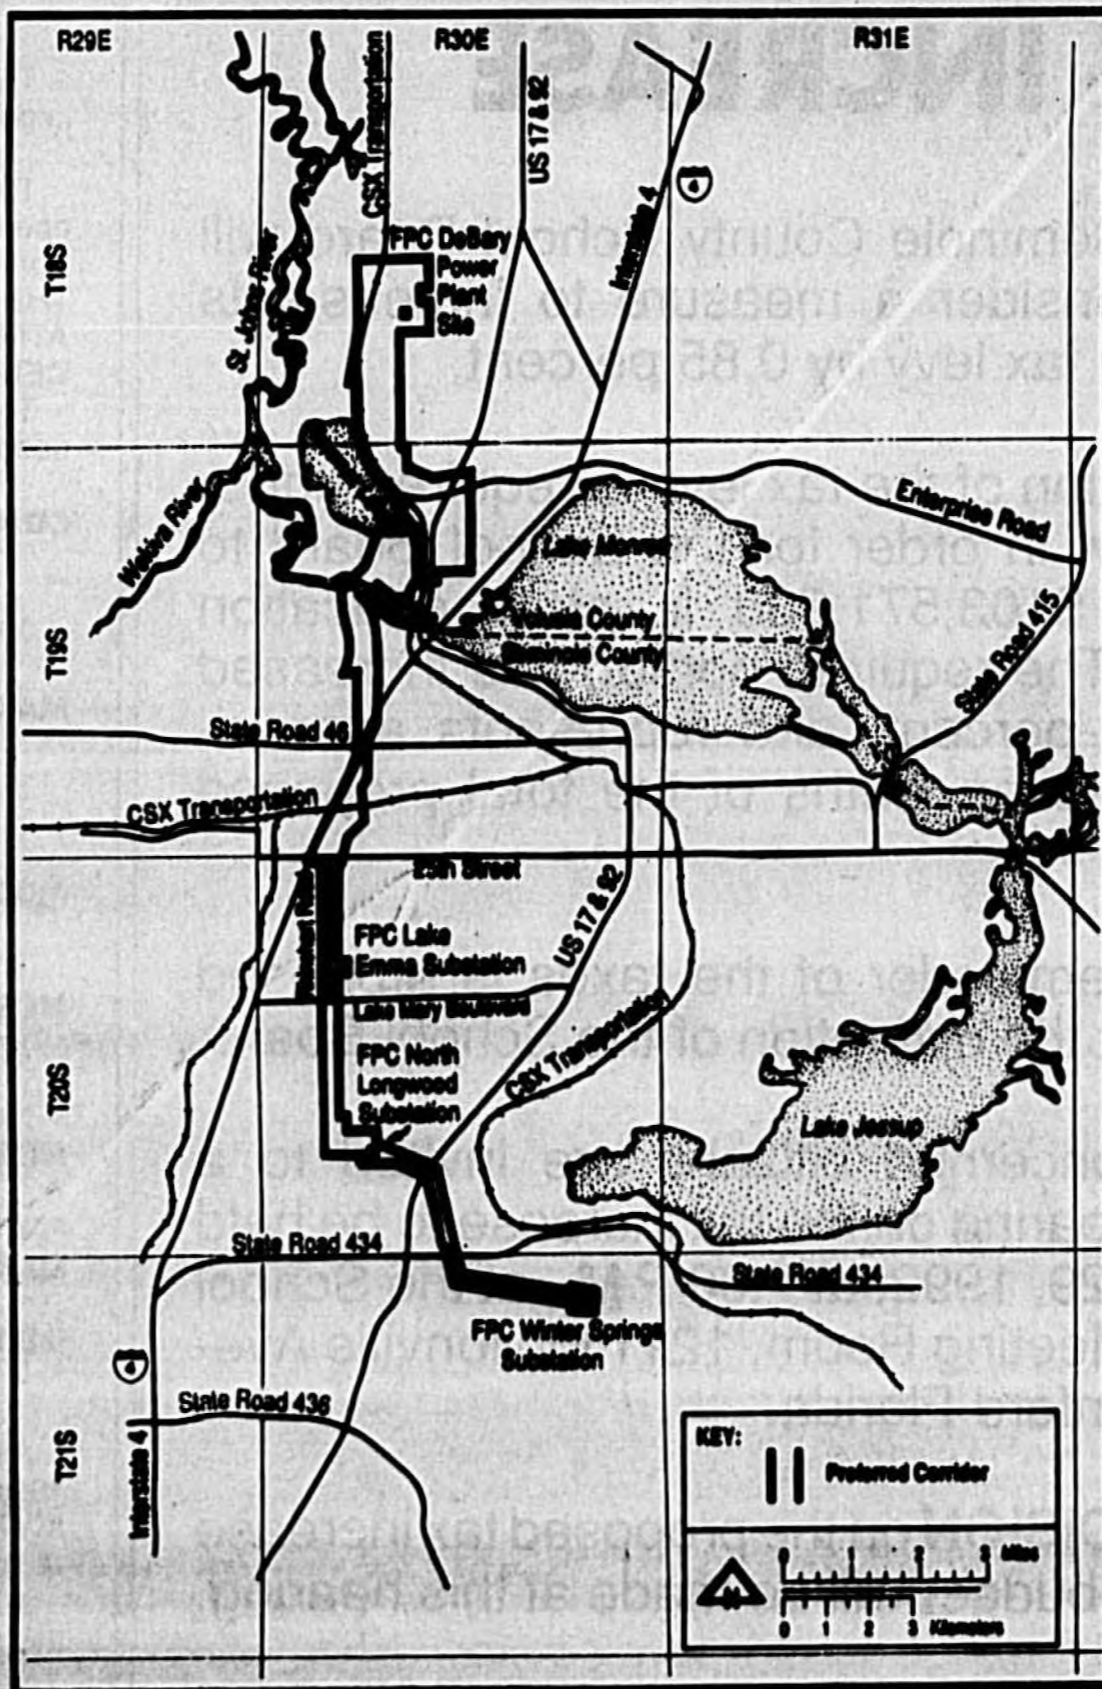

Pursuant to s. 403.931(1), (2), and (3), F.S.:

(1) Subject to the conditions set forth herein, certification shall constitute the sole license of the state and any agency as to the approval of the location of transmission line corridors and the construction and maintenance of transmission lines. The certification shall be valid for the life of the transmission line, provided that construction on, or condemnation or acquisition of, the right-of-way is commenced within 5 years of the date of certification or such later date as may be authorized by the board.

(2) The certification shall authorize the applicant to locate the transmission line corridor and to construct and maintain the transmission lines subject only to the conditions of certification set forth in such certification. The certification may include conditions which constitute variances and exemptions from nonprocedural standards or regulations of the department or any other agency which were expressly considered during the proceeding unless waived by the agency as provided below and which otherwise would be applicable to the location of the proposed transmission line corridor or the construction and maintenance of the transmission lines. Each party shall notify the applicant and other parties at the time scheduled for the filing of the agency reports of any nonprocedural requirements not specifically listed in the application from which a variance, exemption, or other relief is necessary in order for the board to certify any corridor proposed for certification. Failure of such notification shall be treated as a waiver from the nonprocedural requirements of that agency.

(3) The certification shall be in lieu of any license, permit, certificate, or similar document required by any agency pursuant to, but not limited to, chapter 126, chapter 161, chapter 163, chapter 165, chapter 166, chapter 203, chapter 205, chapter 206, chapter 370, chapter 373, chapter 375, chapter 385, chapter 387, chapter 389, chapter 403, chapter 404, the Florida Transmission Code, or 38 U.S.C. s. 1941. On certification, any license, easement, or other interest in state lands, except those the title of which is vested in the Board of Trustees of the Internal Improvement Trust Fund, shall be issued by the appropriate agency as a ministerial act. The applicant shall be required to seek any necessary interest in state lands, the title to which is vested in the Board of Trustees of the Internal Improvement Trust Fund, from the board of trustees before, during, or after the certification may be made contingent upon issuance of the appropriate interest in realty. However, neither the applicant nor any party to the certification proceedings may directly or indirectly raise or relitigate any matter which was or could have been an issue in the certification proceedings in any proceeding before the Board of Trustees of the Internal Improvement Trust Fund wherein the applicant is seeking a necessary interest in state lands, but the information presented in the certification proceeding shall be available for review by the board of trustees and its staff.

IN BRIEF

AROUND THE STATE

Pair shares Open lead

HAINES CITY — Gene Jones of Winter Park shot 69 and Fred Gibson of Orlando had his third straight 70 as they moved into a tie after three rounds Saturday in the 51st annual Cadillac Florida Open golf tournament.

At five under par 210, they lead the field by two strokes heading into Sunday's final round at the Grenelefe Golf & Tennis Resort.

Tied at 212 are Ron McCann of Orlando, Jeff Leonard of Tampa and Tom Hearn of Fort Pierce, who shot 70, 71 and 72, respectively, on the 6,900-yard West course.

Defending champion Joey Rasett of Plantation fought back into contention with a four under par 68 and was among four players tied at 213. The others were Damon Green of Orlando, who shot 69, and Will Frantz of Sarasota and Fred Cornell of Clearwater, each with 71.

The winner of the $72,500 tournament will earn $10,000, the runnerup $8,000.

Wyche, Buca battle heat

TAMPA — Sam Wyche isn't just fighting tradition in trying to turn the Tampa Bay Buccaneers around. He and his team are also battling the intense Florida heat.

Temperatures climbed into the 90s again on the second day of training camp and fatigue played mind games with some players during the latter stages of Saturday's morning practice.

"I got to throw my first temper tantrum to alert the guys to the fact that it's not all fun and games," said Wyche, who is starting his first season with Tampa Bay. The team hasn't had a winning record since 1982.

"We had a few guys who gave in a little bit to being hot and tired. Instead of thinking about football, they were thinking about how hot and tired they were," Wyche added.

AROUND THE REGION

Allison back in the saddle

TALLADEGA, Ala. — Davey Allison isn't blaming anybody or holding any grudges. He's just happy to be able to get back in a race car this weekend, at least long enough to earn some Winston Cup points in Sunday's DieHard 500.

Allison was injured last Sunday in a spectacular crash at Pocono International Raceway, spending most of the ensuing week in an Allentown, Pa., hospital.

Within hours of his release from the hospital Friday, Allison was in Talladega, making sure he could handle the physical problems of getting into and out of his Ford Thunderbird.

The next big test came Saturday, when he took his car onto the 2.66-mile high-banked oval for some practice laps, a NASCAR requirement for any driver starting a race.

He ran 13 laps, 10 of them at speed, making one lap alone on the racetrack at more than 189 mph, as well as four laps in a seven-car pack.

Bobby Hill Jr. qualified Allison's car third in the 40-car field for Sunday's race, at 190,257, and is expected to get back behind the wheel after Allison takes the green flag in order to earn the championship points.

Irvan wins Fram Filters 500K

TALLADEGA, Ala. — Ernie Irvan passed Dale Earnhardt three times from the end and held on Saturday to win the Fram Filters 500K, the first Busch Grand National stock car race at Talladega Superspeedway and the fastest in series history.

Earnhardt, who started from the pole, was at or near the lead throughout the 117-lap race. He appeared to be in control until the first turn of the last lap on the 2.66-mile oval.

That's when Irvan drove low on the high-banked track and, followed by third-place Michael Waltrip, raced past Earnhardt into the lead. Earnhardt was left to battle for second with Waltrip, Todd Bodine and Hut Stricklin.

Waltrip won that battle in a photo finish, barely nipping Bodine, who was just ahead of Earnhardt and Stricklin.

OLYMPICS officially begin

BARCELONA, Spain — Olympic Stadium — built 60 years ago in anticipation of just such a moment — teemed with colorful performers, ecstatic crowds and joyful music Saturday as the 1992 Summer Olympics got under way.

Performers dressed as yellow birds flirted with blue flower people while giant stick figures wobbled through the majestic stadium atop Montjuic hill during Saturday's ceremonies.

Today, boxers will box, shooters will shoot, swimmers will swim and the much-heralded U.S. basketball team will face its first Olympic challenge of '92.

But Saturday belonged to the singers, dancers and the various pagentry that traditionally marks the opening of each Olympics.

Cyclones come to life

Chunat tosses one-hit shutout as Post 53 wins tourney opener

Jeremy Chunat needed only 77 pitches to throw a one-hit shutout of Fort Pierce Post 40 in the American Legion 'B' Area Tournament Friday.

From Staff Reports

VERO BEACH — So much for fatigue and complacency.

The Sanford Post 53 Cyclones, having trudged through the final month of their summer schedule in less-than-inspired fashion, came to life brilliantly Friday night, defeating Fort Pierce Post 40 8-0 in the opening round of the American Legion 'B' Area Tournament.

In the other bracket of the four-team playoff, host Vero Beach embarrassed Melbourne 26-4. Saturday's schedule had Fort Pierce and Melbourne playing in an elimination game at 11 a.m. before Sanford (25-10) and Vero Beach tangled at 2 p.m.

Two games are also scheduled for today. At 1 p.m., the winner of the Fort Pierce/Melbourne game plays the loser of the Sanford/Vero Beach game for the right to play the winner of the Sanford/Vero Beach game at 4 p.m.

The "if necessary" game is scheduled for 5 p.m. Monday.

The Cyclones — Seminole High School's summer team — were led by pitcher Jeremy Chunat, who took a no-hitter into the sixth inning before giving up a single. He finished with the one-hitter, striking out 10 and walking two while throwing just 77 pitches in seven innings.

Chunat got all the offensive support he needed when the Cyclones struck for three runs on two hits in the bottom of the first inning.

After Scott Ferguson led off with a single and was picked off first on a steal attempt, David Eckstein singled, Matt Diemer then hit a ground ball that was misplayed for an error by the Fort Pierce shortstop before Matt Freeman walked, loading the bases.

Chunat followed with a walk to force in Eckstein with the first run. John Lugerling made it 2-0 when he hit into a fielder's choice that forced out Chunat at second but brought home Diemer. Lugerling then attempted a delayed steal, getting in a rundown that allowed Freeman to score before he was tagged out.

Sanford added four more runs in the fourth. With two out, Lugerling and Delon Daniels both singled. Rob Morgan followed with another single that scored Lugerling and sent Daniels to third. On the throw home, Morgan took second. Todd Braden then stepped in and singled home Daniels.

After Braden stole second and Freeman walked to load the bases, Eckstein singled in Morgan and Braden before Freeman was thrown out trying to advance to third.

In the sixth inning, Daniels led off with a walk and Morgan singled him to third base. Two outs later, Eckstein walked to load the bases for Diemer, who also drew a walk to score Daniels with the Cyclones final run.

Eckstein led the nine-hit Sanford attack by going 2-for-3 with two RBI and a run scored. Morgan was also 2-for-3 with one RBI and a run scored. Daniels went 1-for-2 and scored twice. Lugerling and Braden were both 1-for-3 with a run scored and an RBI.

Chunat was 1-for-2 with an RBI. Ferguson contributed one hit in three at bats. Diemer scored a run and drove in a run. Freeman also scored a run.

Fort Pierce's only hit was by Furtado, the team's second baseman, in the top of the sixth inning.

Dodgers fall into losers' bracket

By BILL KERRIS

APOPKA — Experiencing both the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat within 24 hours, the Altamonte Springs Dodgers found themselves faced with a do-or-die situation in the National Amateur Baseball Federation regional tournament at Apopka High School.

After beating Boone Friday night 8-4 with a five-run seventh inning, "the roof caved in" on the Dodgers Saturday morning as they plummeted into the losers' bracket at the hands of Dr. Phillips, losing 10-1.

"We played flat after a hard game Friday and they beat our brains in," said Altamonte Springs coach Jay Bergman. "Our guys didn't give the game away, they just killed us. We're all right. It's no big deal at all. We just got thrown into the losers bracket, and will have to take a 'this is it' type of attitude."

Altamonte, a kind of Seminole County All-Star team from the NABF member high schools, plays the winner of Saturday's West Orange/Boone contest this morning at 10 a.m. With a win, the Dodgers would play again at 4 p.m.

"It all boils down to whether or not you're strong in pitching," said Bergman. "And we definitely are, since we've got three good pitchers left. If our bats get going we'll be all right, and they will, I hope."

The bats did come alive Friday in support of Brett Black, who struck out seven, allowed five hits and withstood two-run outbursts in the fourth and sixth innings. "That was a pretty gutsy performance by Black," said Bergman. "He stayed right with them the whole game."

The offense collected 10 hits, led by Frank Harmer (3-for-3, home run), Kevin Stuckey (2-for-3), Todd Bellhorn (2-for-3), Jeff Butler (1-for-3), Black (1-for-4, one RBI) and Randy Stegall (1-for-4).

Altamonte trailed 4-3 with two outs and the bases loaded in the seventh inning when a seemingly simple ground ball off Stegall's bat turned into a three-run boon. As Stegall hustled for an infield single, Harmer charged home and jarred the ball away from the catcher. When the ball flew away, Stuckey crossed home as well, giving the Dodgers a 6-4 lead.

Harmer also was Altamonte's top hitter Saturday, contributing a single and a double. Providing the other three hits for the Dodgers were Jake Winger (1-for-2) and Jason Jalliet and Wes Ilier (both going 1-for-3).

Travlos picks Flagler

Lake Mary High School graduate Mario Travlos (No. 10) has signed a grant-in-aid to play soccer for Flagler College in St. Augustine. Travlos, who had 14 goals and 10 assists for the 26-3 Rams last year, was an All-Seminole Athletic Conference selection.

A decade has passed since Lake Brantley High School graduate Mike Beams (left) and Lyman High School graduate Derek Livernois (right) were teammates on the Seminole Pony All-Star team. This summer, the two were teammates once again, this time playing for the New Britain (Conn.) Red Sox in the Eastern (AA) League.

Ex-stars teammates once again

By TONY DEBORNER

NEW BRITAIN, Conn. — Hit the rewind button on your time machine and go back to the summer of 1981. Playing for the Seminole Pony League All-Stars are two boys named Derek Livernois and Mike Beams.

Fast forward a few years. Livernois is drafted out of Lyman High School by the Boston Red Sox in the spring of 1985. Skip to the next year. Beams is taken by the Houston Astros out of Lake Brantley High School.

Now run it back up to the present, where Livernois and Beams are teammates once again, this time for the New Britain Red Sox, the AA Minor League team of the Boston Red Sox that plays in the Eastern League.

It's even more unlikely than it sounds. In an organization traditionally desperate for pitching, Livernois seemed to be on the fast track to Fenway Park, pitching well

Grace & Co. reports loss

BOCA RATON — W.R. Grace & Co., a world leader in specialty chemicals, reported a net loss of $99 million in the second quarter due largely to projected one-time costs from the planned sale of oil and gas businesses.

The company on Monday reported an increase of 11 percent in net operating earnings of $64.1 million, but noted the planned sale of two-thirds of its publicly owned Grace Energy, would cause $163.1 million in projected losses. The $99 million loss, or $1.11 per share, compared with net income of $57.6 million or 66 cents per share a year ago.

Sales and revenues for the second quarter were off two percent to $1.37 billion because of the absence of sales from businesses sold in 1991, the company said.

Earlier this year, the company bought outstanding shares of Grace Energy in preparation to sell it.

Ryder Systems increases profits

MIAMI — Ryder System Inc. reported increased profits for the second quarter because of strong results in the company's highway transportation division.

Net earnings for the period ended June 30 were $37.6 million, or 47 cents per share, compared with profits of $31.6 million, or 26 cents per share, for the same quarter last year.

Second-quarter revenue was $1.33 billion, compared with $1.28 billion in the same quarter last year.

"Our highway transportation services performed particularly well in the quarter, but that performance was offset somewhat by weakness in our aviation services," said M. Anthony Burns, chairman, president and chief executive officer.

He added that fewer airline travelers had led to a reduced demand for engine overhaul work by Ryder Airline Services.

Non-city construction increases

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Construction trends in the unincorporated areas of Seminole County continued to build in June, according to a county permit report.

New housing construction is up 22 percent compared to a year ago, according to the report. The housing permit activity for the first eight months of the fiscal year are up 7 percent over the same time last year. The county's fiscal year begins in October.

"Construction is picking up month by month," said county Building Official Dave Belz. "Let's hope it continues."

A total of 97 new home permits were issued last month, compared to 79 in June 1991. So far this fiscal year, 708 housing permits have been issued, compared to 659 for the same period a year ago.

The demand for reroofing permits should remain high through September, said Belz. Many roofers are unable to keep up with the demand, he said. In June, 1,564 permits were issued in June under the "all other" category that includes roofing permits. Last year, 364 "other" permits were issued in June.

Commercial construction also shows signs of strengthening. Ten new commercial permits were issued in June, compared to half that many in June 1991. So far this fiscal year, 59 commercial permits have been issued compared to 42 during the same period a year before, a 40 percent increase.

Construction permits of all types totaled $21.2 million in June, according to permit applications. Last year, $14 million was spent on construction during June.

FP&L Group earnings decrease

Associated Press

JUNO BEACH — FPL Group, Inc. reports that second-quarter earnings were down due to milder weather despite an increase in the number of customers.

The company announced net income of $103 million, or 60 cents per share, for the period ended June 30. That compared with $131 million, or 81 cents per share, in the second quarter a year ago, before an after-tax charge of $56 million, or 35 cents per share, for the restructuring of FPL's operations.

"Although we experienced a 1.7 percent increase in the number of customers, second-quarter earnings were adversely affected by lower electric sales due to mild weather this year, compared with unusually warm weather in 1991," James Broadhead, chairman and chief executive officer of FPL Group, said in a statement.

"The lower sales were partially offset by a reduction in operations and maintenance expenses resulting from our ongoing cost-control efforts and the restructuring of FPL," he added.

Florida Power & Light Co.'s contribution to FPL Group's net income was $102 million, or 59 cents a share, compared with $127 million, or 79 cents a share, excluding the restructuring charge.

Juno Beach-based FPL Group, Inc. is a holding company with Florida Power & Light, the state's largest utility, as its principal subsidiary.

Barnett says merger may cost millions

Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — Barnett Banks Inc. said it will cost $65 million to $85 million to complete its merger with First Florida Banks Inc., a cost that could wipe out earnings in the quarter that the deal is completed.

Barnett, Florida's largest financial institution and the nation's 18th-ranked, scheduled a special stockholders meeting for Sept. 18 at the Barnett Office Park in Jacksonville to vote on the merger.

Barnett, with $32.4 billion in assets, announced in May that it had reached agreement to buy Tampa-based First Florida for more than $400 million in stock. First Florida is the state's fifth-largest banking company with $5.3 billion in assets.

Barnett said $65 million to $85 million charge to earnings would include the costs to close down overlapping branches, lay off employees, as well as conversion of computer systems and other costs.

Barnett has said it will close up to 100 branches.

Sharing the gift of music

Milton Hackney still practices on his violin every day.

Almost 70, deft fingers still coax violin's sweet strains

By BOB FREEMAN
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Milton Hackney started playing the violin when he was five years old in his home town of Tampa. When he was six, he took up the clarinet, and at seven, the trombone. He gave up the clarinet and trombone, but he still plays his violin in his Sanford home.

"I try not to practice more than two hours a day, and sometimes I practice without the bow so that my chin won't get too sore to play," he says.

Milton's older brother played a fine trumpet, he says, when the two were small and his brother was a member of a boy's band. Milton couldn't find a spot in that happy scenario for his violin.

"I was practicing and my mother came in and found me crying," he says. When she asked what the problem was, Milton explained that he wanted to play with his brother but there was no place for the violin in the boy's band. Through the ministrations of the band leader and with his mother's support, Milton took up the clarinet and joined his brother in the band. It was the start of a lifetime of music.

In that era, when many looked askance at a life as a professional musician, Milton's parents were totally supportive. Of course, he comes from fine Florida pioneer stock — his great-grandfather having once owned the land that is now St. Petersburg. When his widower great-grandfather was shot from the rear by a man he challenged to a duel, his grandfather went out to support his siblings, but the musical bent hadn't yet surfaced in the Hackney clan, and he turned to mechanic's work.

Milton has made a living playing music, which he says he dearly loves but he admits he almost hates the lifestyle. You can be doing very well one day, and out of work the next, he said.

"I've been on top of the world and on the bottom so many times I can't count them," he says.

Once when he was on top of the world he played with a string group when Ray Price recorded "For the Good Times." He also played with Vaughn Monroe's band at Guy Lombardo's Port of Call Club in Florida.

Back in those days, he still played the clarinet and trombone, he says, and he played with a number of jazz groups in clubs around the country, but as he matured his particular interest turned to the violin.

He ended up in New York, Nashville and even Louisville before this retirement. In New York, he played on a number of recordings. In Nashville, as a member of the string back-up group, the first thing he played was the jingle Eddie Arnold recorded for Farmbest milk. He also ran away and joined the circus — at least he played for a time with Ringling Brothers.

Eventually, he ended up at Disney World where he led a trio for a decade. They played regularly in a gourmet restaurant and had the opportunity to play many special events, such as the annual party for the original seven astronauts, and for the Russian diplomats who visited the Florida attraction.

"We learned a number of Russian tunes but when we played Dr. Zhivago we really pleased the Russians," he says. The American interpreter explained that the Russians interpreted the movie as a compliment to them, and Milton was SANFORD — One Lake Mary High School assistant principal says his students keep him in touch with the latest music. That helps, because his other career depends on it.

Kids share camp with service club

It wasn't the weather that warmed Kiwanians' hearts

By WALT SMITH
Special to the Herald

Hot weather does not stop big hearts from helping others.

On Saturday, July 18, the Sanford Kiwanis Club descended on Camp Challenge in Sorrento and treated around 100 campers and their counselors to three hours of entertainment and a meal.

Most of the campers are confined to wheelchairs and need a lot of assistance from the counselors. Their enthusiasm and gratitude were payment enough to the many entertainers. Orlando Thunder cheerleaders Janet Sharkey, Sharon Moore and Laurie Leslie opened the program with their cheers.

Leslie Wilbur of Wilbur Farms on West Highway 46 brought small animals for the children to touch and pet.

A big hit this year was "Bon Bon" and all her clowns in their colorful costumes. Bonnie Moran and a dozen more clowns performed akits, magic, face painting and talked to all the kids.

Peter Pan was there too. Meia Brooks, was dressed as Peter complete with pointed cap, long feather and tame cockatiel on her shoulder. Her husband, Jim Brooks, Kiwanian, was chairman of Camp Challenge outing for the second consecutive year.

Pat Hitchmon, director of Tajiri Arts and Seminole County Teacher of the Year, brought some of her young girls who sang and used sign language in their performance.

Grace & Co. reports loss

BOCA RATON — W.R. Grace & Co., a world leader in specialty chemicals, reported a net loss of $69 million in the second quarter due largely to projected one-time costs from the planned sale of oil and gas businesses.

The company on Monday reported an increase of 11 percent in net operating earnings of $64.1 million, but noted the planned sale of two-thirds of its publicly owned Grace Energy, would cause $163.1 million in projected losses. The $69 million loss, or $1.11 per share, compared with net income of $57.6 million or 66 cents per share a year ago.

Sales and revenues for the second quarter were off two percent to $1.37 billion because of the absence of sales from businesses sold in 1991, the company said.

Earlier this year, the company bought outstanding shares of Grace Energy in preparation to sell it.

Ryder Systems increases profits

MIAMI — Ryder System Inc. reported increased profits for the second quarter because of strong results in the company's highway transportation division.

Net earnings for the period ended June 30 were $37.6 million, or 47 cents per share, compared with profits of $31.6 million, or 36 cents per share, for the same quarter last year.

Second-quarter revenue was $1.33 billion, compared with $1.28 billion in the same quarter last year.

"Our highway transportation services performed particularly well in the quarter, but that performance was offset somewhat by weakness in our aviation services," said M. Anthony Burns, chairman, president and chief executive officer.

He added that fewer airline travelers had led to a reduced demand for engine overhaul work by Ryder Airline Services.

Non-city construction increases

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Construction trends in the unincorporated areas of Seminole County continued to build in June, according to a county permit report.

New housing construction is up 22 percent compared to a year ago, according to the report. The housing permit activity for the first eight months of the fiscal year are up 7 percent over the same time last year. The county's fiscal year begins in October.

"Construction is picking up month by month," said county Building Official Dave Beltz. "Let's hope it continues."

A total of 87 new home permits were issued last month, compared to 79 in June 1991. So far this fiscal year, 708 housing permits have been issued, compared to 659 for the same period a year ago.

The demand for reroofing permits should remain high through September, said Beltz. Many roofers are unable to keep up with the demand, he said. In June, 1,564 permits were issued in June under the "all other" category that includes reroofing permits. Last year, 364 "other" permits were issued in June.

Commercial construction also shows signs of strengthening. Ten new commercial permits were issued in June, compared to half that many in June 1991. So far this fiscal year, 59 commercial permits have been issued compared to 42 during the same period a year before, a 40 percent increase.

Construction permits of all types totaled $21.2 million in June, according to permit applications. Last year, $14 million was spent on construction during June.

FP&L Group earnings decrease

Associated Press

JUNO BEACH — FPL Group, Inc. reports that second-quarter earnings were down due to milder weather despite an increase in the number of customers.

The company announced net income of $103 million, or 60 cents per share, for the period ended June 30. That compared with $131 million, or 81 cents per share, in the second quarter a year ago, before an after-tax charge of $56 million, or 35 cents per share, for the restructuring of FPL's operations.

"Although we experienced a 1.7 percent increase in the number of customers, second-quarter earnings were adversely affected by lower electric sales due to mild weather this year, compared with unusually warm weather in 1991," James Broadhead, chairman and chief executive officer of FPL Group, said in a statement.

"The lower sales were partially offset by a reduction in operations and maintenance expenses resulting from our ongoing cost-control efforts and the restructuring of FPL," he added.

Florida Power & Light Co.'s contribution to FPL Group's net income was $102 million, or 59 cents a share, compared with $127 million, or 79 cents a share, excluding the restructuring charge.

Juno Beach-based FPL Group, Inc. is a holding company with Florida Power & Light, the state's largest utility, as its principal subsidiary.

Barnett says merger may cost millions

Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — Barnett Banks Inc. said it will cost $65 million to $85 million to complete its merger with First Florida Banks Inc., a cost that could wipe out earnings in the quarter that the deal is completed.

Barnett, Florida's largest financial institution and the nation's 18th-ranked, scheduled a special stockholders meeting for Sept. 16 at the Barnett Office Park in Jacksonville to vote on the merger.

Barnett, with $32.4 billion in assets, announced in May that it had reached agreement to buy Tampa-based First Florida for more than $400 million in stock. First Florida is the state's fifth-largest banking company with $5.3 billion in assets.

Barnett said $65 million to $85 million charge to earnings would include the costs to close down overlapping branches, lay off employees, as well as conversion of computer systems and other costs.

Barnett has said it will close up to 100 branches.

Sharing the gift of music

Milton Hackney still practices on his violin every day.

Almost 70, deft fingers still coax violin's sweet strains

By DEL FREEMAN
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Milton Hackney started playing the violin when he was five years old in his home town of Tampa. When he was six, he took up the clarinet, and at seven, the trombone. He gave up the clarinet and trombone, but he still plays his violin in his Sanford home.

"I try not to practice more than two hours a day, and sometimes I practice without the bow so that my chin won't get too sore to play," he says.

Milton's older brother played a fine trumpet, he says, when the two were small and his brother was a member of a boy's band. Milton couldn't find a spot in that happy scenario for his violin.

"I was practicing and my mother came in and found me crying," he says. When she asked what the problem was, Milton explained that he wanted to play with his brother but there was no place for the violin in the boy's band. Through the ministrations of the band leader and with his mother's support, Milton took up the clarinet and joined his brother in the band. It was the start of a lifetime of music.

In that era, when many looked askance at a life as a professional musician, Milton's parents were totally supportive. Of course, he comes from fine Florida pioneer stock — his great-grandfather having once owned the land that is now St. Petersburg. When his widower great-grandfather was shot from the rear by a man he challenged to a duel, his grandfather went out to support his siblings, but the musical bent hadn't yet surfaced in the Hackney clan, and he turned to mechanic's work.

Milton has made a living playing music, which he says he dearly loves but he admits he almost hates the lifestyle. You can be doing very well one day, and out of work the next, he said.

"I've been on top of the world and on the bottom so many times I can't count them," he says.

Once when he was on top of the world he played with a string group when Ray Price recorded "For the Good Times." He also played with Vaughn Monroe's band at Guy Lombardo's Port of Call Club in Florida.

Back in those days, he still played the clarinet and trombone, he says, and he played with a number of jazz groups in clubs around the country, but as he matured his particular interest turned to the violin.

He ended up in New York, Nashville and even Louisville before this retirement. In New York, he played on a number of recordings. In Nashville, as a member of the string back-up group, the first thing he played was the jingle Eddie Arnold recorded for Farmbest milk. He also ran away and joined the circus — at least he played for a time with Ringling Brothers.

Eventually, he ended up at Disney World where he led a trio for a decade. They played regularly in a gourmet restaurant and had the opportunity to play many special events, such as the annual party for the original seven astronauts, and for the Russian diplomats who visited the Florida attraction.

"We learned a number of Russian tunes but when we played Dr. Zhivago we really pleased the Russians," he says. The American interpreter explained that the Russians interpreted the movie as a compliment to them, and Milton was

Kids share camp with service club

It wasn't the weather that warmed Kiwanians' hearts

By WALT SMITH
Special to the Herald

Hot weather does not stop big hearts from helping others.

On Saturday, July 18, the Sanford Kiwanis Club descended on Camp Challenge in Borrento and treated around 100 campers and their counselors to three hours of entertainment and a meal.

Most of the campers are confined to wheelchairs and need a lot of assistance from the counselors. Their enthusiasm and gratitude were payment enough to the many entertainers. Orlando Thunder cheerleaders Janet Sharkey, Sharon Moore and Laurie Leslie opened the program with their cheers.

Leslie Wilbur of Wilbur Farms on West Highway 46 brought small animals for the children to touch and pet.

A big hit this year was "Bon Bon" and all her clowns in their colorful costumes. Bonnie Moran and a dozen more clowns performed akita, magic, face painting and talked to all the kids.

Peter Pan was there too. Meta Brooks, was dressed as Peter complete with pointed cap, long feather and tame cockatiel on her shoulder. Her husband, Jiml Brooks, Kiwanian, was chairman of Camp Challenge outing for the second consecutive year.

Pat Hitchmon, director of Tajiri Arts and Seminole County Teacher of the Year, brought some of her young girls who sang and used sign language in their performance.

Kiwanian Dick Forbes gave each camper one of his famous, handmade "Whirlybirds," small wooden stick helicopters which take off and fly when placed between flat palms sliding quickly over the whirlybird stick.

After 30 years, how was it? Just wonderful!

Just ask those attending Seminole High School's 30th reunion how it was and the answer will surely be, "Just wonderful."

Seventy-five members of the class of 1962 plus their spouses and guests were in Sanford last weekend to celebrate and just have fun. "Everyone looked so good," said Carol Ann Carroll Smith, reunion coordinator and arranger. "I don't think we look like we are 50," she laughed.

Festivities got underway Friday night, July 17, with a barbecue and all the trimmings held at the American Legion building on Sanford Avenue. This event was attended by families in addition to teachers Nellie Coleman and John Colbert, and their spouses Boyd Coleman and Val Colbert.

The traditional banquet was held Saturday night at the Seminole Country Club with Ronald Getman, a major in the Florida Highway Patrol, serving as master of ceremonies. They were all in the mood for a good time and so that was the order of the evening.

The school colors of orange and black were used in the decor. The crowd feasted on steampunk round roast and a variety of heavy hors d'oeuvres. Memorabilia from high school days were on display and the classmates re-lived the good old days of 1962.

Kathy and Tim Register of the "Back Spin" led the revelers in country line dancing while some did the twist and others toyed around with hula hoops.

A number of gag gifts were presented. Sally King was awarded a Florida flamingo for having traveled the greatest distance from California. Other classmates arrived from Colorado, Oregon and Texas.

Winner of having the youngest child award went to Dr. Robert Williams who attended with his wife, Audrey. The couple are the parents of a 16-month-old daughter and received a pewter baby platter.

Measure people by character, not by how they earn a living

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, a parent took exception to the attitude of a school principal who apparently demeaned ditchdiggers. I, too, am a professional who gets angry when people look down their noses at those who perform manual labor or work at minimum wage jobs.

My parents taught me that you measure people by their character — not by how they earn their living. That letter brought to mind a poem my mother used to read to me when I was little. I don't know the author, but it goes like this:

If you can't be a tree on the top of the hill
Be a shrub in the valley, but be the best little shrub on the side of the hill
Be a bush if you can't be a tree.

We can't all be captains — there's got to be crew.
There's something for all of us here.

There are big things to do, and

After 30 years, how was it? Just wonderful!

Just ask those attending Seminole High School's 30th reunion how it was and the answer will surely be, "Just wonderful."

Seventy-five members of the class of 1952 plus their spouses and guests were in Sanford last weekend to celebrate and just have fun. "Everyone looked so good," said Carol Ann Carroll Smith, reunion coordinator and arranger. "I don't think we look like we are 50," she laughed.

Festivities got underway Friday night, July 17, with a barbecue and all the trimmings held at the American Legion building on Sanford Avenue. This event was attended by families in addition to teachers Nellie Coleman and John Colbert, and their spouses Boyd Coleman and Val Colbert.

The traditional banquet was held Saturday night at Timacuan Country Club with Ronald Getman, a major in the Florida Highway Patrol, serving as master of ceremonies. They were all in the mood for a good time and so that was the order of the evening.

The school colors of orange and black were used in the decor. The crowd feasted on steamship of round roast and a variety of heavy hors d'oeuvres. Memorabilia from high school days were on display and the classmates re-hashed the good old days of 1952.

Kathy and Tim Register of the "Back Spin" led the revelers in country line dancing while some did the twist and others toyed around with hula hoops.

A number of gag gifts were presented. Sally King was awarded a Florida flamingo for having traveled the greatest distance from California. Other classmates arrived from Colorado, Oregon and Texas.

Winner of having the youngest child award went to Dr. Robert Williams who attended with his wife, Audrey. The couple are the parents of a 16-month-old daughter and received a pewter baby platter.

Carol Cleveland Norman of New Smyrna Beach received an anklet for her efforts in compliing information into a treasured historical booklet. Carol Wheeler Benson of Oregon, who made each classmate a wind sock decorated with a Seminole Indian head, received the prize for having the most children and grandchildren.

Among the unique door prizes were antique bricks from the old Seminole High School which stood at the present site of Sanford Middle School until it was recently demolished. These bricks were cleaned and stenciled with 1927-1981 by Cathy Behrens. The present SHS was completed in 1981.

Assisting Carol Ann as co-chairman was Ann Schumacher Esterson. This is the third time Carol Ann has coordinated and arranged the reunion — the 10th, 20th, and now the 30th. Pat Bentell secretly collected a love offering to purchase Carol Ann a gold bracelet for her efforts. She also received a plaque.

Carol Ann was speechless but exclaimed afterward, "After all the hard work...the patience of my husband...just sitting back and watching...all the hugging and love...it was worth it."

Among the others on the reunion committee were: Carol Cleveland Norman, Carol Chambers Sweeten, Jean Henson Jones, Linda Echols Carter, Jean Crews Cohen, Cathy Moran Behrens and Glenda Wilford Edwards.

Classmates do lunch
Merritt Phillips Lane of Carrollton, Ga., was back in town last weekend for the SHS 30th class reunion and to visit with her mom, Jane Phillips, and longtime friends. A motivational speaker, Merritt invited six close classmates for a champagne luncheon at her mom's home on Lilly Court where she grew up. The guests reveled in Jane Phillips' hospitality which took them back nearly 30 years as they recalled the lovely bridal parties in the Phillips home. It was like a trip down Memory Lane for Jane. She had entertained at bridal fetes for them all.

The classmates arrived early and stayed until almost 5 p.m....just reminiscing. They brought photographs of their families and Merritt brought a video of her family which she showed along with a video she taped during the gathering.

Attending from Sanford were Vida Sue Smith Christensen and Rose Kratzert Weekley. Other classmates were: Carol Sue Higginbotham Boniface, Fredericksburg, Va.; Debbie Scott Johnson, Marietta, Ga.; Mary Pat Wright Campbell, Raleigh, N.C.; and Jean Robeson Schwartz, Panama City.

About the luncheon, Jane said, "I enjoyed doing it...being a part of it."

Bridal fete for Erica
Erica Smith, who will become the bride of Mark Wolfgang in a garden ceremony at Perry's Ocean Edge Resort in Daytona Beach Aug. 1, was honored at a bridal shower luncheon Saturday, July 18, at Heathrow Racquet Club. Lisa Robertson was hostess for the event.

For the most part, guests enjoyed visiting with each other and shared the excitement when the bride-elect opened her many lovely gifts.

The luncheon menu included a Trio Salad of shrimp, chicken and tuna surrounded with fresh fruits, baskets of freshly baked breads, a dessert tray and coffee.

Others attending were Vera Smith, the bride-elect's mother; Vida Smith, her grandmother; Susanne Smith, her sister-in-law and matron of honor; and Sue Christensen, her aunt; Susan Billa and Stephanie Dukert, high school friends; and lifelong friends, Jan Le Roy, Glynda Alderman and Glynna Hood; and at vantage points. The dinner for 40, including the wedding party, families and out-of-town guests included tossed salad, beef roast, chicken Marsala, roasted potatoes, ice pilaf, a medley of green and golden garden squash and three cheesecakes.

Bridesmaids' luncheon
Doris Gormly, great aunt of Lee Dingle, was hostess to the traditional bridesmaids luncheon honoring Lee and her attendants on July 17. Site of the pre-nuptial event was the Bubble Room in Mattland.

Here, the guests enjoyed the amenities of the sun-filled facility and ordering from the menu. Lee presented her attendants with the headdresses they wore in the wedding and quilted photo albums containing photographs of the bridal parties. The bridesmaids are: Wendy Cash, matron of honor; Molly White, Dawn Connel and Amy Shinn. Others attending were: Kathy Dingle, mother of the bride; Tish Lee, the bride's grandmother; Linda Maliczowski, the bride's aunt; and Joyce Sawyers, her daughter, Donna Hobbs, and granddaughters, Michal Hobbs and Jenna Hobbs, flower girl.

Nurses reunion
Jean Metts has returned home safe and sound, but with a flu-bug, after attending her nurses' reunion in Columbia, S.C. Alumnae from the classes of the 1930s to 1966 of South Carolina Baptist Hospital and College for Nurses gathered at the Sheraton in Columbia for a two-day con-fab.

According to Jean, it was a "wonderful and fun" weekend.

The couple were married July 4, 1932 in St. Agatha's Church, Canastota, N.Y. by the Rev. William Church. Rose Lumbraso, sister of the groom, served as maid of honor and the late Mr. Mario Romagnoli was best man.

A party followed in the church recreation center for approximately 65 friends and relatives from Florida and Texas. Entertainment was provided by pianist James Thomas. Reception assistants were Mary Varner and Florence Roman.

The Lumbrazos have three children, Jane Dryer of Spring, Texas, Linda French of Casselberry, and Darlene Fennell of Cape Canaveral. They have seven grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

The couple are retired. Mr. Lumbraso was the Texaco service station manager in Chittenden, N.Y.

The couple's secret for a long marriage is respect and patience.

The Ida and Joe Golden family gathered for a two-day celebration.

Family reunites to share history, prayer, barbecue

The Ida and Joe Golden family members gathered in the Osteen/Sanford area to celebrate their family reunion for 1982. The Golden family, natives of Ralston, Fla., joined together on Saturday, July 18, with the oldest uncle, Leroy Joe of Bartow, who has been married 44 years, and the oldest aunt, Helen James of Osteen. With prayer, the two-day celebration began with a cook-out with family members chatting, visiting, and talking about the history of the late Ida and Joe Golden family. Uncle Leroy Joe is indeed a walking history book with knowledge from over 65 years.

The Sunday worship service for the family was held at the family church, St. John Missionary Baptist, where Eugene and Juanita Golden are members. "The family that prays together stays together" is the motto of the Golden family. The Rev. Robert Doctor delivered the message of the morning.

Family members attending the two-day celebration were from DeLand, Titusville, Gainesville, Bartow, and Osteen. Ida and Joe's children attending were Eugene Golden and wife, Juanita, Sanford; Johnnie Lee Golden and wife, Loretta, Gainesville; Elizabeth Golden Jordan, Osteen; Ruby Golden, Osteen; Leslie Golden, Orlando.

The host committee says thank-you to Maxine Alexander, Lillie Worthy and the Golden sisters for a fun-filled weekend of togetherness.

Measure people by character, not by how they earn a living

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, a parent took exception to the attitude of a school principal who apparently demeaned ditchdiggers. I, too, am a professional who gets angry when people look down their noses at those who perform manual labor or work at minimum wage jobs.

My parents taught me that you measure people by their character — not by how they earn their living. That letter brought to mind a poem my mother used to read to me when I was little. I don't know the author, but it goes like this:

If you can't be a tree on the top of the hill
Be a shrub in the valley, but be
The best little shrub on the side of the hill.
Be a bush if you can't be a tree.

We can't all be captains — there's got to be crew. There's something for all of us here. There are big things to do, and

ADVICE
ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

there's lesser to do
And the task you must do is the near.

If you can't be a highway, then just be a trail.

If you can't be the sun, be a star.

It's not in the job that you win or you fail
Be the best of whatever you are.

SUBMITTED BY MARK HENRY JENSEY

DEAR MARK: I remember that poem. It's been around for at least half a century. Title? Author? Readers, help!

DEAR ABBY: For the past 10 years, my stepmother has presented me with her list of gift ideas a month or so before her birthday and the holidays. I have never asked her for a list. She just presents one. I wouldn't mind a few suggestions every now and then, but I dislike being put in the uncomfortable position of having to get whatever she has on her list.

How can I tell her that I am fed up with her lists?

DEAR ABBY: Simple. Head her off at the pass. Before her birthday — or the holidays, whichever comes first — tell her she need not give you a list of gift ideas because you have already selected her gift. And if she ignores your request, ignore her list, and give her whatever you think is appropriate.

Problem? Write to Dear Abby.

Cassanova

Continued from Page 5B songs ranging from sultry love ballads to the up-tempo "hip-hop" beat of today. Cassanova says he wrote all of the songs except "Can't Get Enough of Your Love" which was written by Barry White and rearranged by Cassanova into a love ballad with Barry's approval. A 12-inch re-mix is scheduled to be released in September says Cassanova and the album can locally be purchased at record stores such as Peaches, Jazzette Records, Caribbean Records, and Jay's Records and Triple A Records in Sanford. "Jus' Another Love Affair" is available on CD, cassette and album. Cassanova loves children and mankind. He is an assistant principal at Lake Mary High School and regardless of how late his musical nightclub sets keep him out, he can always be seen on Sunday morning teaching Sunday School at his home church, the Providence Missionary Baptist Church. Cassanova says he keeps his priorities in order because if it were not for his faith in God he could not be successful in his two chosen careers. Gerald says he gives special thanks to his mother, Rosa, whose love he says has given him strength in many ways. "Thanks for being there, Mom," he says. He also extends appreciation to his loving and devoted family, his sisters Murelda, Geraldine, Cynthia Veniece, brother James, and Aunt Beatrice. He also thanks the faculty and administration at Lake Mary High. Special thanks to all of his students for keeping him in touch with the latest music, steps, and sounds of today. He says he couldn't have done it without his good friends Charles Mitchell, Sly Polk, "Rashad Mac" and everyone at Urban Records. "A sincere thank you goes to God for all He has given me, and to my pastor, the Rev. James D. Hagins." Cassanova's last words of appreciation go to his father, the late Gerald "Brownie" Cassanova Sr., and in memory of his dad, he dedicated his album "Jus' Another Love Affair."

Graham

Continued from Page 5B service (Air Force) and began disc jockeying," he explained. Graham left the service in 1985. He had purchased expensive electronic equipment while in the service, a musician's major expense when getting started. Graham began making music with Lewis in 1988. After years of practice, they have perfected their own style of rap music with bass that is unlike any other. Graham said. "We don't like to just blast their ears off. It's different. We changed things around a little." He said friends encouraged them to turn professional. "A lot of people kept tellin' us it sounded pretty good. We made some demo tapes out of the house and placed them on consignment. We started to get offers," he explained. Eventually they signed with Joey Boy in Miami. Lewis writes most of the lyrics for Basas Patrol. Graham is disc jockey, producer and computer whiz. Their music deals with relationships, street life and girls, Graham said. And there is no profanity. "My mom even listens to it."

Basas Patrol is currently on nationwide tour but will return in August. "It's two different lifestyles, being on the stage, traveling. It's exciting but it's also to come back home to Sanford," Graham said. It's like coming back down to earth again, he said.

Continued from Page 5B rewarded with a bottle of fine Russian brandy for his efforts. "I told him I would expect to get vodka from Russia," Milton says. "and he just laughed and said they only brought brandy." It hasn't been the easiest life, but Milton's love of music would let him do no different. "When I played back-up for Ray Price, he invited me to go on the road with him," Milton says. He went but later returned to Nashville, while Price went on to have a mega-hit with "For the Good Times." "Ray made millions and I made $150," Milton says. While with Ray, though, Mill played for Lyndon Johnson at a barbecue, and he played the violin for Franklin D. Roosevelt, once, at Camp Shelby during World War II.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
July 26, 1992

A number of significant opportunities could be in the offing in the year ahead. Don't waste time developing them, because they're not apt to hang around too long.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A failure to select companions today who are as equally enthusiastic about the same things you are could put restrictions on your initiative. Leo, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Leo's Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In order to perform effectively today, you must be systematic. If you don't operate in an organized manner, you're likely to have little to show for your efforts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be sociable today, but also be selective regarding the group with whom you involve yourself. A bad choice could put you in the company of people who'll make you feel unwelcome.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Situations where you utilize your logic and charm can be carried off successfully today, but developments where your ego governs your actions could experience some setbacks.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Friends who are in accord with your views will be treated amicably today. However, you might come down quite hard on those who disagree with you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A collective endeavor you're presently involved in might not yield the blessings you had anticipated. Its disadvantages could outweigh its benefits.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you have problems with others when dealing on a one-to-one basis today, realize that the fault might not be entirely theirs. Let your honesty, not your vanity, make the evaluations.

BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Bishop Butler said in a sermon: "Things and actions are what they are, and the consequences of them will be what they will be: why then should we desire to be deceived?" If only he had been born 250 years later and become a bridge player, he would have changed the end to "... desire to deceive?" And answered his own question with "Because it is fun."

There is nothing defenders like more than to deceive declarer into going down in a contract. Villy Dam from Denmark gave today's deal as an example. It was part of an article that appeared in Bridge Magazine, an English publication.

West led the heart ace followed by the heart king, announcing a doubleton. Declarer won West's club switch with dummy's ace and led the spade five: jack, king, four.

Now it looks too easy for South. He continues with the spade queen (or 10) and claims shortly thereafter. But stop for a moment and consider matters from South's perspective. It seems that East began with the A-J doubleton of spades and West with the 9-7-4. If so, when South continues with a top spade, East will win with the ace and lead a heart, promoting the spade nine as the setting trick.

Backing his judgment, South led a low spade from his hand at trick five. Imagine his chagrin and embarrassment when East won it with the nine!

Perhaps South should have been suspicious, since East probably would have gone in immediately with the spade ace from the A-J doubleton. But the defenders gave declarer just enough rope and he hanged himself.

Readers are invited to send card-play questions to Phillip Alder, in care of this newspaper. They can be answered only through the column.

Missing doctor leaves family with a 2nd unsolved mystery

By Bill Kason
Associated Press Writer

CENTURY — When Dr. Thomas Stewart flew off in his single-engine plane seven months ago, never to be seen again, he left his family with a second unsolved disappearance.

Stewart's first wife Jimmie Breckenridge, who is the mother of three of his eight children, vanished during the mid-1980s.

"The oldest daughter said ... 'Well, I have two parents and I don't know if either one of them is alive,'" recalled his present wife, Barbara Stewart, 63.

After her divorce, Ms. Breckenridge came every summer to this Panhandle town on the Alabama-Florida border near Paducah, Ky., to visit her three daughters.

"One summer she just didn't come and they never heard from her again," Mrs. Stewart said.

The girls, now grown, and their mother's oldest sister have been unable to find the missing woman through the Red Cross, Salvation Army and other agencies, said the youngest of the sisters, Claudia Avery, 41.

Records that could have helped in the search are missing or destroyed, she said in a telephone interview.

Ms. Avery, now living in a Georgia town she didn't want identified, said her mother's feelings may have been hurt because the girls rejected her plans to have them spend summers with her.

Ms. Avery recalled writing about her mother's disappearance in a letter to her father shortly before he vanished, telling him there must have been a reason she was unable to let the family know what happened to her.

Her father, a general practitioner in this small town for 40 years, disappeared Jan. 8.

Stewart, 67, apparently drove his old truck to the airport in nearby Altmore, Ala., early in the morning before anyone else had gotten there, climbed into his Cessna and took off.

No one saw him or knew where he was going.

The Air Force, Civil Air Patrol and one of Stewart's sons searched from the air but found no wreckage. No signals were picked up from an emergency beacon that was supposed to activate if the plane crashed.

Family members theorized he may have gone off to start a new life somewhere or was the victim of foul play. They hired a private investigator, but neither he nor police turned up any evidence to support either of those possibilities.

"We poked and hunted and searched and looked and ran into dead ends everywhere," Mrs. Stewart said. "It's just like he flew out of there that morning and the sky swallowed him."

The couple had marital problems and no longer were living together, but Mrs. Stewart said she didn't think that had anything to do with his disappearance. Ms. Avery is not sure.

"I tend to think, like many of the others in the family think, that the stresses in my Dad's life had all of a sudden come together, confronting him, and that he just started over somewhere else," she said.

She thinks her father, who liked to keep busy doing physical work like chopping firewood and fixing things around the house, would be happy with a simple life, perhaps pumping gasoline at a service station.

The day before he disappeared, Stewart had flown to his hometown of Tuscaloosa, Ala., to see one of his sons, Allen. During their visit, he mentioned he was tired and needed a long rest.

Mrs. Stewart contends his age and personality work against the new-life theory.

"Tom has always been a very, very responsible person," she said. "I can't conceive of it."

If he did start again, he had to do it from scratch because he apparently took nothing of value with him, family members said.

Some townspeople, who counted Stewart as a friend and community leader as well as doctor, have speculated he may be resting on a beach in the Caribbean.

Florida is a Paradise for fish

Associated Press

GAINESVILLE — Fish fare better in Florida than mammals because man is less of a threat to them, two researchers say.

Although no species of fish has become extinct in Florida in modern times, four subspecies of mammals have vanished in the past 15 years, said Stephen Humphrey, curator of ecology at the Florida Museum of Natural History on the University of Florida campus.

Effects of the clash of man with mammals and fish in Florida are detailed in new books by Humphrey and Carter Gilbert, a UF zoology professor and fish expert.

Mammals, some of which are limited to a small geographic area, risk extinction as their habitats are bulldozed for new homes and office parks, Gilbert said.

Except for a few places in the Panhandle, fish in Florida aren't confined to restricted ranges, he said.

"Generally, fish in Florida are less threatened than fish in nearby states, largely because the few species that have limited ranges are not severely impacted by environmental threats," Gilbert said.

Few dams have been built or streams rechanneled in Florida, and the state lacks most types of heavy industry likely to pollute rivers and kill fish, he said.

But the opposite is true for mammals. As habitat is destroyed, many species and subspecies have moved from "threatened" to "endangered" classifications, while others that were once common have become threatened, Humphrey said.

Once widespread in Florida in the 60s, the black bear and fox squirrel have sharply declined in population with the disappearance of 80 percent of the state's longleaf pine forests, he said.

And six of the seven subspecies of coastal beach mice in Florida are either extinct, endangered or threatened, he said.

Most beach closings in Tampa Bay's area

Associated Press

Nearly all of Florida's 200 pollution-related beach closings last year were in the Tampa Bay area, a statistic that may have to do more with diligent monitoring than dirty water.

"An area shouldn't be penalized for monitoring," said Sarah Chasels, attorney for the Washington-based Natural Resources Defense Council that reported the figures Thursday.

Most of the 2,008 beach closings nationwide last year, mainly because of raw or partly treated sewage in the water.

Summer travel tips during pregnancy

Now that summer is here, many pregnant women are wondering whether they should alter their travel plans. Most healthy pregnant women can travel safely — and should go ahead and enjoy their last vacation for a while unencumbered by diapers and jars of baby food, according to Cathy Morrison, community services director for the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation in Orlando.

However, the foundation recommends that pregnant women discuss their summer vacation plans with their health care providers. A pregnant woman may want to time her travel and activities for her own comfort and the well-being of her unborn baby. These are some of the issues to consider.

• Is there a "best time" during pregnancy to take a vacation?

For most pregnant women, the safest and most comfortable time to travel is during the second trimester, from the fourth through the sixth month of pregnancy. During these months, morning sickness eases and energy levels are up. These are also the months that a pregnant woman is least apt to encounter pregnancy-related problems away from home.

A pregnant woman may want to postpone long trips during the first trimester when risk of miscarriage is greatest, and during the last trimester to avoid delivering in a hospital far from her health care provider should early labor occur.

Travel may be unwise at any time for a pregnant woman with a history of miscarriage, premature delivery, or if she is expecting twins. Pregnancy-related complications, such as high blood pressure or vaginal bleeding are other reasons to postpone travel. If a pregnant woman is planning an extended trip, she should ask her doctor for referrals to physicians in the area she is visiting — just in case problems arise.

• Is air travel safe during pregnancy?

Air travel is safe for most pregnant women and their unborn babies. However, pregnant women should be sure to complete their travels before the last month of pregnancy. Domestic airlines prohibit women from flying after the 36th week of pregnancy, and most foreign airlines have a cutoff of 35 weeks gestation — to avoid the unpleasant possibility of giving birth en route. When cruising at high altitudes, commercial jetliners maintain cabin pressure equivalent to that of 5,000 to 8,000 feet above sea level. This reduced air pressure, which causes a slight reduction in the amount of oxygen in the blood, poses no problems for most healthy pregnant women.

However, a pregnant woman who is slightly anemic may occasionally experience temporary symptoms such as drowsiness and impaired coordination. Even some non-anemic pregnant women experience slight changes in breathing and heart-rate patterns. Reduced cabin pressures can be harmful if a pregnant woman is seriously anemic or has sickle cell anemia. In such cases, use of supplemental oxygen may be necessary if the woman must travel.

While radiation from cosmic rays does increase at cruising altitudes of five to eight miles above the earth, amounts of exposure from a transcontinental flight are extremely low and need not be a source of concern for the occasional traveler. A pregnant woman can take several precautions to help ensure a comfortable flight:

□ To help prevent swelling of the legs and blood clots, an occasional complication of pregnancy, due in part to hormonal changes, avoid sitting in a cramped position for extended periods. Request an aisle seat, and spend about 15 minutes each hour walking around the cabin when airline personnel indicate it is safe to do so.

□ Prior to flying, avoid foods that produce intestinal gas. Expansion of intestinal gas in flight can be particularly uncomfortable during pregnancy.

□ Because low humidity in the aircraft can cause loss of body water, pregnant women should drink plenty of fluids such as water or fruit juice.

□ How can a pregnant woman make her journey by car safe and comfortable?

As with airplane travel, long hours of sitting can leave the expectant women with a back ache, swollen ankles and feet, and at increased risk of blood clots. She can help avoid problems by stopping and walking around at least every two hours. It's best to plan a leisurely trip without too many hours of driving in one day.

SCC receives boost from hospital

SANFORD — HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital, in conjunction with the Hospital Corporation of America Foundation, presented an $11,000 check to Seminole Community College for use in its Physical Therapy Assistant program.

The money will go towards purchasing needed equipment to assist the college with the purchase of modalities and equipment to ensure practical hands on learning experience. Current methods of teaching include discussion only.

Items needed to attain this goal are as follows: cold pack unit, $1,200; electrical stimulation equipment, AC units 2-3, $2,100 and DC units 2-3, $2,100; functional electrical stimulators 2-3, $2,000 and transcutaneous electrical nerve stimulators 4-6, $3,600.

World AIDS epidemic

Experts plan probe of possible new virus

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands — The world's top AIDS officials said Thursday that scientists would immediately investigate whether a new virus is causing AIDS.

The World Health Organization and U.S. health agencies responded after a series of reports over the past week suggesting that a previously unrecognized virus may be causing an AIDS-like illness in people who do not have HIV, the AIDS virus.

As yet, though, no one knows whether the virus — if it exists — is truly new, catching or is causing the illness.

"We need to launch a worldwide follow-up on these reports without delay," said Dr. Michael Merson, one of many experts who gathered here for the eighth International Conference on AIDS. "We need to use the best experts the world has to get to the bottom of this."

Merson, chief of the WHO's Global AIDS Program, said the follow-up meeting will be held within a few weeks. "This problem will be very, very actively pursued by the best experts in the field," said Dr. Anthony Fauci, head of AIDS research at the U.S. National Institutes of Health.

The reports of a new virus took the experts by surprise. Reaction ranged from broad skepticism to acknowledgement that another virus might indeed be involved in some people whose immune systems collapse.

The uproar began last weekend on the eve of the week-long meeting when Newsweek magazine reported several cases of a disease that looked like acquired immune deficiency syndrome, but with no sign of HIV.

On Tuesday, Dr. James Curran, head of AIDS work at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control,

A decade of AIDS

Prior to the middle of 1985 there were never more than 5,000 AIDS cases diagnosed during any six-month period. However, from January 1985 on there have been over 15,000 cases diagnosed in each six-month period.

at first played down the report. He said his agency knew of six such cases but did not believe they were important enough to bring to public attention.

As he spoke, however, several doctors rose from the audience to say they had seen similar illnesses in people without the AIDS virus. Before the day was over, Curran appealed to doctors to report all such cases to the CDC.

On Wednesday, the U.S. journal Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences released a pending article by Dr. Sudhir Gupta of the University of California, Irvine. It announced the discovery of an apparently new virus in a woman suffering from the AIDS-like condition.

Gupta said he also had found the virus in the woman's healthy daughter, as well as in seven other people.

At a hastily called post-midnight news conference, several researchers said they had doubts about the work. But at a larger briefing Thursday, the world's top AIDS experts said they took the reports seriously and pledged to find out as soon as possible what the virus does. "There should be healthy skepticism," said Fauci.

New compound effective against HIV strains

DETROIT — Upjohn Co. said that its scientists have synthesized a compound that kills mutant strains of HIV and is more effective than current drugs in blocking growth of the AIDS-causing virus.

In-vitro testing of the compound was done on human cells, and clinical tests on healthy humans to check for side effects will begin in September.

Tests on HIV-positive patients would follow in conjunction with an accelerated review by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. Upjohn spokeswoman Nancy Laasen said.

Neither Laasen nor FDA spokeswoman Faye Peterson could say how long it would take for the compound to reach AIDS patients in general.

Under the speeded-up review process, the FDA cleared the drug ddi in six months instead of the usual two to three years, Peterson said.

Upjohn's compound, called BHAP-E, was studied in collaboration with researchers at the UCLA Medical School and the University of Nebraska Medical Center.

HERNIA REPAIR. It's simpler now.

Hernia repair used to be considered major surgery, but no longer.

Today, it can be as simple as a one-day "walk-in, walk-out" procedure. Prompt and cost effective.

For a new or recurrent hernia, we use a mesh technique that speeds recovery, lessens pain and reduces recurrences.
