Lake Mary special meeting

LAKE MARY — The Lake Mary City Commission will hold a special called meeting tonight to discuss Public Improvement Refunding Bonds.

If refinancing plans for two bond issues are approved, Finance Director Randy Knight predicted the city could save as much as $228,000 during the lifetime of the bonds.

"Based on the market as of last Friday," he said, "if we get the bonds refinanced to give the city a lower interest rate, we could be reducing our cost on interest alone by slightly over $13,000 a year."

The bonds were approved in 1987 for construction of Lake Mary's new city hall, and 1991 bonds, to finance the building of the sports complex and Lake Mary Boulevard project.

"What we are seeking," Knight said, "is approval by the commission to go forward in awarding these bonds at a lower interest rate."

Also slated for discussion tonight is the schedule the city will be following regarding the 1994 fiscal year budget. Preparations by individual department heads have been progressing, and it is expected that commission workshops and hearings will be formalized.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. tonight, in the commission chambers of Lake Mary City Hall, 100 W. Lake Mary Blvd.

No big winner

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida Lotto jackpot jumped to an estimated $16 million Sunday when Lottery Department officials checked their computers and found no big winner for the $7 million game that ended Saturday.

The numbers drawn were 10-14-16-26-29-35. Since none of the tickets sold for last week's game had all six of the numbers, the jackpot rolled over into this week's game.

Five of the numbers appear on 192 tickets, making them worth $1,568 each. There are 10,826 four-of-six tickets, worth $66.50 each, and 200,927 three-of-six winners worth $5 each.

Making a getaway

WEST PALM BEACH — When robbing a bank, don't go Greyhound.

That's what Robert Lee Swanson did Friday, police said, and his getaway was anything but clean.

Swanson, named in an outstanding federal escape warrant held by U.S. marshals in San Diego, got off a bus from Fort Lauderdale and walked two blocks to a First Union Bank, where he announced a robbery but showed no weapon, said police Sgt. John English. He was given an undisclosed amount of cash.

Swanson, 38, left the bank and started back toward the Greyhound station.

"He was going to catch a bus out of town, but he hadn't made up his mind where his next stop would be," English said.

School vandalized

4 juveniles to be charged for severe damage

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — The Lake Mary Elementary School was severely vandalized late Saturday. Police believe four juveniles were involved.

According to Police Chief Richard Beary, four youngsters have already been located and questioned. They include two nine year old boys and two girls, ages 7 and 13.

Police believe the 7 and nine year olds were students at the school, but did not immediately reveal the school attended by the 13 year old girl.

"We have met with each of the four and their parents," Beary said, "and have completed most of the preliminary investigation and paperwork."

Yesterday, Beary believed there might have been a fifth juvenile involved in the vandalism, but this morning he said additional information has now revealed that only the four are suspected of doing the damage to the school. Beary could not identify any of the youngsters by name. "We will be filing papers with the state attorney's office, possibly before the end of today, or at least within the next day or two," he said. "Their investigators will determine what charges will be filed, and whether the juvenile names can be made public."

"From what I saw at the scene," Beary added, "this isn't just a minor case of children vandalizing a school, it's to the point of a serious criminal mischief situation."

According to investigators, the vandals attacked a number of rooms, plugging up sinks, turning on water and flooding rooms. They also discharged fire extinguishers and sprayed paint on walls and over carpeting.

Twenty-two windows were broken, and damage was reported in at least eight classrooms.

Beary said the school work crews were cleaning up the damage on Sunday, and there was a possibility that additional damage may be reported.

"We expect to have all of our investigation of this concluded in a day or so," Beary said, "then we'll have to see what the state attorney will decide in the case."

Lake Mary Elementary School is located at the southwest corner of the intersection of Lake Mary Blvd. and Country Club Road, immediately across from the Lake Mary City Hall.

Publisher, golf pro team up in unique program for kids: Say yes to golf, no to drugs

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Ray Cuzzone believes so strongly in the message that Don Freda is trying to pass on to the young people of today that, he said, he gave up a lucrative career as a teaching golf pro to help him.

"We have got to get out there and get kids to say 'no way' to drugs," he said. "This is my way of getting the word out."

Freda, a publisher who worked for many years as the publisher for the RIF (Reading Is Fundamental) program sponsored by the Smithsonian Institution, has produced a number of books for children which promote good health and clean living.

"Kids don't like to read. Don't let anyone tell you they do," he said.

"So I trick them into reading by using sports subjects."

The book that he is most proud of and the one which brought he and Cuzzone together is "Just Say No Way To Drugs."

Unfinished building faces condemnation

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A two story building, at the northwest corner of Airport Boulevard and Country Club Road, may be set for condemnation tonight. The unfinished building at 1800 W. Airport Blvd. has never been completed or utilized.

The Sanford City Commission has scheduled discussion on the condemnation during a workshop meeting this afternoon.

Following a series of complaints about vagrants around the structure and the lack of maintenance, the possibility of condemnation was discussed by the commission during its Feb. 8 meeting.

At that time, the commission approved a 3-month extension of condemnation period, during which time an alternate plan for use of the facility was to be submitted by the Johnny Walker of Leesburg, one of the many owners of the structure.

Walker sent his proposal to the city on April 6, suggesting an affordable senior citizen housing development for the property.

The plan however, would require numerous conditions regarding financial backing to buy out all 18 owners, obtaining federal loan approvals, and obtaining dimensional variances from the city.

At that time, Jay Marder, director of planning and development for the city, wrote to Walker informing him that a proposed use for multiple family development at the building is not in keeping with the city's comprehensive plan.

Marder suggested Walker submit an improved plan. "Unless a bonafide plan is submitted and substantial progress towards effecting such plan is provided," he said, "staff will recommend that the city commission authorize condemnation to proceed."

Mayor: 'I think we should hold the line on spending'

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — When the 1994 city budget is finalized, Mayor Paul Lovestrand thinks city taxpayers should see a tax reduction and is beginning to say so, even before next year's proposals are unveiled.

A statement at last week's city commission meeting by administrator James McFellin concerning the possible need for additional revenues to fund the new budget, put Lovestrand on his guard. The comment was made during a brief discussion about a change in the telecommunications tax.

"I think we should hold the line on spending," Lovestrand said. He noted that although city department heads make budget requests, it is up to the city administrator to present the city budget for commission approval. "It's the city administrator's budget and he can't blame the department heads."

If the administrator's comment about the need for additional revenue to fund the budget was an indication of more taxes, Lovestrand said the idea should be

"nipped in the bud."

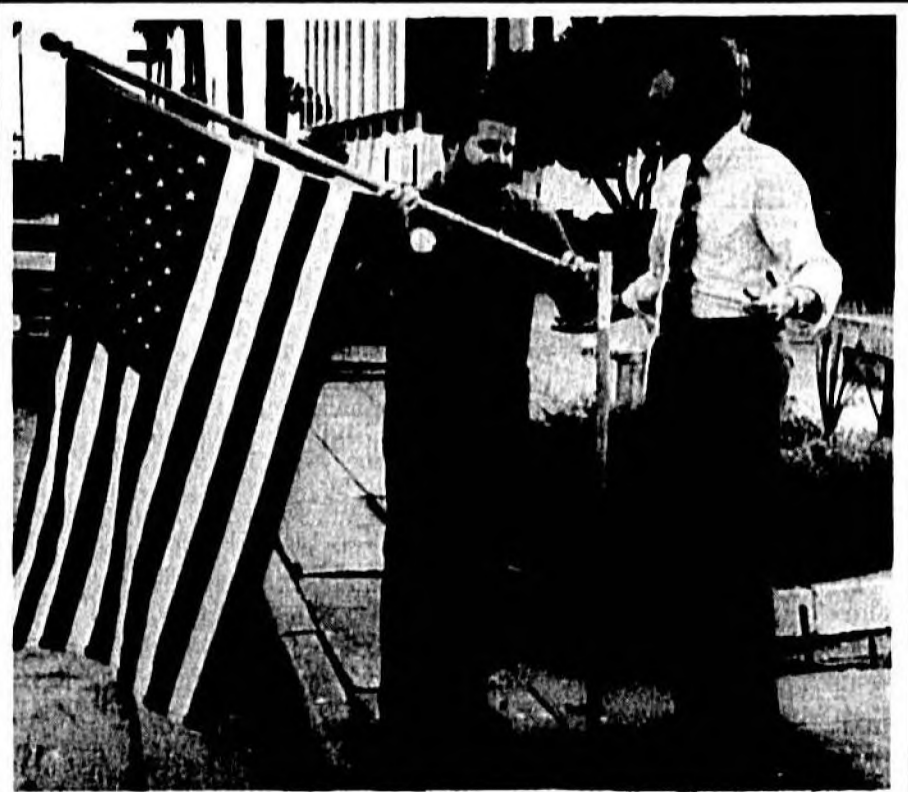

McFellin said he presents a proposed city budget to the commissioners and emphasizes, "It is not my budget." He adds that the proposed budget must be balanced. If personnel cuts had not been made last year, McFellin added, the city would have had to come up with additional revenue last year to support this year's budget.

The commissioners are scheduled to discuss the change in the telecommunications tax at a work session prior to their June 21 meeting. A 10 percent utility tax on local calls produced over $244,000 for the city last year. Under the new proposal, the tax would drop to 7 percent but both local and intrastate calls would be taxed. Although, slightly less revenue would be collected with the second telecommunications option, money from long distance carriers would more than offset the loss.

Longwood finance director Dan McNutt said in a written memo that Altamonte Springs, Maitland and Winter Park switched from Option A to B in the past few years and "as a result, are realizing a significant

10-year-old charged with sexual assault

BROOKSVILLE — A 10-year-old boy is suspected by police of sexually assaulting two younger boys after being left alone with them for less than 30 minutes.

The 10-year-old said he sodomized both boys, ages 3 and 5, a news release from the Brooksville Police Department said Sunday. He is charged with two counts of capital sexual battery and was taken to a juvenile detention center in Ocala, police officials said.

Police arrested the 22-year-old mother of the two younger children and was being held in the Hernando County Jail late Sunday on a $6,000 bond. She is charged with two counts of child abuse and neglect for leaving the children alone with the suspect, police said.

The assault took place Friday in the mother's apartment. Two other children, ages 6 and 9, witnessed the assault, according to Brooksville police.

The state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services took the 3-year-old and the 5-year-old into protective custody, police said.

Man critical after gunfight over $3.60

DELRAY BEACH — A Lake Worth man was critically wounded during a gunfight on Interstate 95 that followed a barroom argument over $3.60.

John Poggi, 30, was shot in the chest after he and his roommate Mark Lurtz, 29, left a lounge. Delray Beach police said.

Lurtz, who was not hurt, told police the suspect and his friend argued in the bar. The man owed $3.60 to their female friend who works at the bar, and Poggi fought with the man over the money, the report says.

Lurtz tried to get away, but the two men followed and started shooting as Lurtz drove onto the northbound ramp of I-95. They continued shooting when both cars were on the interstate, the report says.

A Florida Highway Patrol officer was on the side of I-95 when the two cars passed him. The officer said he tried to catch them, but could not.

The cars exited I-95, and Lurtz took Poggi to Bethesda Memorial Hospital in Boynton Beach. The officer followed them and watched the suspects' car turn. No arrests were made as of Sunday.

Two killed, four injured in van accident

NEW SMYRNA BEACH — Two people were killed and four others seriously injured when their van overturned on Interstate 95 near New Smyrna Beach, the Florida Highway Patrol said.

The victims, all from Kentucky, included a 4-year-old boy and three teen-agers.

The driver of the van, Judy Ratliff, apparently fell asleep about 5:50 a.m. Sunday while driving north on I-95, FHP said.

The van veered onto the shoulder of the interstate, then swerved back into the traffic lanes before flipping over, troopers said. The five passengers in the van were thrown from the vehicle.

Jessica Hurley, 13, of Richmond, Ky., and Cindy Meade, 35, of Lick Creek, Ky., were killed.

Ratliff, 32, of Richmond, Ky.; Gregory Ratliff, 4, of Richmond, Ky.; Billy Meade, 15, of Lick Creek, Ky., and Jeddiah Meade, 13, of Lick Creek, Ky., were taken to Halifax Hospital in Daytona Beach with serious injuries.

Suspected grave comes up empty

DEFUNIAK SPRINGS — No body was found when police dug up what they thought was the grave of a missing store clerk, says a Florida Department of Law Enforcement investigator.

A dog trained to sniff out human remains led investigators to the site in a wooded area near here late Thursday and a slow, archaeological-type excavation was conducted Friday and Saturday.

Authorities thought they had found the burial site of Donna Callahan, 29, who disappeared from the convenience store where she worked near Gulf Breeze, about 75 miles southwest of here, nearly four years ago. The woman, who had a 2-year-old daughter and was pregnant, left behind her purse, car and keys.

FDLE Agent Larry Smith on Friday also had named William Alex Wells, 25, of DeFuniak Springs, as a suspect, but he declined to say how Wells was connected to the case or why authorities were looking for a body about a mile from his home.

Pilot killed in plane crash

NICEVILLE — Witnesses say a small plane crashed, killing the pilot and narrowly missing a couple homes, when the advertising banner it was pulling became entangled in trees.

The crash happened Saturday when the 1969 Cessna 150-J flew low over Ruckel Airport in a common procedure to pick up the banner.

No one on the ground was hurt and no passengers were aboard the plane.

Generations reverse

Poll says Southerners feel children influenced more by TV, peers

By Associated Press

ATLANTA — Adults who grew up in the South remember the big influences on them, parents and religion. But a new poll says adults believe those influences have been reversed in only one generation.

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution poll, which questioned adults about their childhoods and their opinions of today's children, says adults believe their children are influenced more by television and peers and less by family than they were.

The poll said 38 percent of Southerners believe that family has a great deal of influence on today's youngsters, while 88 percent said the family greatly influenced them as children.

Only 10 percent of those polled said the mass media had a great deal of influence on them when they were growing up, but 63 percent said the media greatly influence children today.

The poll, which appeared in the newspaper Sunday, was based on telephone interviews with 1,084 adults in Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Florida, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia between Feb. 1 and March 21.

It was conducted by the Center for the Study of the American South at the University of North Carolina and has a 3 percent margin of error.

"Parents have lost the authority," said Lynn Simonoff, a Richmond, Va., mother of two teen-agers. "I think kids snub authority these days." Joanna Hall, a hairdresser from Raleigh, N.C., and the mother of six grown children, said children don't care as much about family and religion as she did.

"It's more or less where religion is not as important to families as it was at one time, and humanism has crept into our society," she said. "If it feels good to you, you do it, and it doesn't matter if it hurts Mama's feelings."

In the South, nearly half of all children grow up in two-parent, two-worker families. One in four grows up in two-parent, one-worker homes, about as many as live in single-parent homes.

"To the extent that children find themselves in situations where they're not governed by the family, like day-care centers or other caregivers outside the family, they are being influenced by others," said child psychologist and author Lawrence Bitter.

"However, I do think that the family is the primary source of instilling values and standards in children," he said.

Many parents overestimate the influence television and music have on their children, said child psychologist Robert R. Butterworth.

"The parents have to blame somebody," he said. "Maybe it's a way of relieving their guilt because they're working so much."

The youngest people polled did not think they were influenced that much by TV, music and peers. Only 18 percent of those between 18-29 said media had a great deal of influence.

Camp for HIV-infected refugees shuts down

By TRACY FIELDS, Associated Press Writer

QUANTANAMO BAY NAVAL BASE, Cuba — The dusty, razor-wire-encircled compound that held HIV-infected Haitians in limbo here for nearly two years is closing.

Twenty-seven people boarded a military aircraft and left for Miami at sunrise this morning. Eight flights are scheduled to take the 113 remaining at the camp to the United States.

Bob Burtus said he was surprised to learn three days ago that he would be leaving the compound he had languished for 20 months and seven days.

"That ain't no camp. That's a jail," Burtus said. He plans to join his wife and infant son in New York. The first thing he plans to do is get a job.

"I'm looking for a better life. That's why I left Haiti. I couldn't live my life," he said. New York federal Judge Sterling Johnson Jr. ruled June 8 that the camp should be closed and the Haitians, who fled their homeland after President Jean-Bertrand Aristide was overthrown in a 1991 military coup, allowed into the United States. The judge described the compound as "nothing more than an HIV prison camp."

The refugees, some of whom are children, have been held here despite their valid claims for political asylum because the United States does not accept HIV-infected immigrants.

Twelve-year-old James Dieudonne was happy to be leaving a place where he said he had nothing to do for 14 months.

The first thing he wants to do in the United States, he said through an interpreter, is "learn to play basketball."

Way Back When

Pictured here is the Losing Quick Service Transfer Storage Company located at 307 Pine Ave. back in the 1920s and exactly where it is today. The business was founded by A.J. Losing. Its original purpose was to haul produce to market for truck farmers in this area. During the "off seasons" Losing expanded the business to moving and storage. But it didn't stop there. Losing's vehicles came to be used as the county's first school buses and later as a public transportation system. A couple of summers Losing's buses transported Sanford's baseball teams when it played other cities in the old Florida State League. From left to right is Fay Losing (who provided the picture), Homer Clause, A.J. and Mattie Losing, Ralph Losing and a pair of drivers who could not be identified. The photo includes a van used as a school bus and to transport church groups to special meetings and outings. Some professional baseball teams that trained in Sanford during the spring were transported to "out-of-town" exhibition games throughout the state. The vehicles were quite versatile. They could be easily converted in just a matter of minutes for different purposes. The company's warehouse at Third and Pine streets was built by A.J.'s son, Frank, a building contractor. Although now owned by others, the company still operates under its original name.

Geologist says Keys sewage waste killing coral reefs

CORAL GABLES — A geologist said sewage waste water is seeping through the porous rock beneath the Florida Keys and contributing to the demise of the coral reefs.

Geologist Gene Shinn presented his findings last week to a conference of some of the world's most respected reef experts, and he provided perhaps the strongest evidence to date of why the once-rich coral reefs of the Florida Keys are dying.

The conference of some 125 experts was the first attempt to assess the health and the future of the world's reefs — home to some of the world's most important seafood stocks and a popular vacation destination for millions of people who want to view the exotic animal species that inhabit them.

Problem-officer registry addressed

By Associated Press

Citing an infamous case in which a hitch-hiker was beaten to death while in police custody, Florida law-enforcement officials are trying to set up a national "bad cop" registry.

One of the two West Palm Beach policemen involved in the brutal death of hitchhiker Robert Jewett had had a drug problem while serving as a police officer in Tennessee. But that information was never forwarded to Florida officials who certify the Sunshine State's police officers.

The Chattanooga Police Department agreed to keep Stephen Rollins' drug file secret in exchange for his agreeing not to seek police work close by. And Rollins said nothing about the problem when he applied to the West Palm Beach force and was later certified by the state.

Making other police departments aware of a problem officer's past should be standard, says James Moore, commissioner of the Florida Department of Law Enforcement, which issues the certifications.

"If an officer has a problem in Oregon and applies in Florida, he certainly isn't going to put that Oregon job on the application." Moore noted in an interview with the Palm Beach Post. "We want to put the burden on the states and establish a clear referral for everyone who is a police officer in America."

«We want to put the burden on the states and establish a clear referral for everyone who is a police officer in America.»

He is leading an effort to get a bill through Congress that would create the national registry. The U.S. attorney general would run the problem-police registry. It would cover the 600,000 law enforcement officers working at 21,000 police agencies nationwide.

States would supply information on every certified officer: name, date of birth, fingerprints, where they work and, if appropriate, why they left. If an officer is decertified, the state would notify the registry.

"We've been talking about this a long time, but we took the national exposure from the Rollins case as our window of opportunity," said Moore.

Rollins and partner Glenn Thurlow stopped Jewett for hitchhiking the night of Nov. 24, 1990. Jewett died after suffering a punctured lung, a broken neck, nine broken ribs and crushed testicles in a struggle with the officers.

A grand jury cleared Rollins and Thurlow of criminal wrongdoing, but the West Palm Beach Police Department conducted an internal affairs investigation of the death struggle with Jewett and fired both officers for violating several department policies.

Thurlow contested his firing and got his job back in arbitration. Rollins did not dispute his firing, lost his police certification in April and quietly left the state.

West Palm Beach police did not learn until after the firings that Rollins had entered a 30-day, $7,000 drug treatment center after resigning from the Chattanooga force. West Palm Beach police knew only that Rollins, who worked on their narcotics squad, had refused to take a drug test there.

State curtails payment to jurors

By Associated Press

TAMPA — Jurors who have been getting paid by their employers plus the $10 from the courts will end on July 1.

Jurors have been paid the extra money plus mileage for more than a decade, but those who continue to get paid by their employers while serving on the jury won't be paid by taxpayers — at least not for the first three days.

Those who are unemployed or who don't get paid while on jury duty will earn $15 a day for the first three days of service. All jurors who serve more than three days will be paid $30 a day.

The Florida Legislature's goal when it changed the law was to be more fair in compensating jurors as well as being cost-effective to taxpayers.

The Legislature worked for several years to increase com-penation to jurors, but there was never enough money, said Lisa Rosenthal, a court operations consultant in Tallahassee.

The new law targets two groups that incur the most hardship while serving jury duty: those who do not get paid by their employers while they are jurors and those who serve during lengthy trials.

The program's not foolproof — self-employed people who continue to pay themselves are not entitled to compensation those first three days. Those jurors will be asked to work on the honor system and not accept the $15 others will receive, officials said.

People who earn commissions will get the $15 rate for the first three days of jury service.

The new law reduces the amount of time jurors must serve from one week to one day or the completion of a trial. The average trial length in Florida is less than 2 days.

Minority business program criticized

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — White males skilled at manipulating the system benefit more often than women or minority business owners from the state's Minority Business Enterprise program, critics say.

Trade fairs to inform businesses about the program give an insight into how it is used, office and computer supply owner Deanne Audie told the Tallahassee Democrat for a story Sunday.

"You see these white men walking around grinning and winking at each other," Audie said. The program's goal was to give historically disadvantaged businesses owned by blacks, Hispanics and women a fairer chance to compete with large, wealthy, white-owned businesses.

"People have manipulated the law and the system, especially white males, to take their wives into the business," Al Lawson, chairman of the Legislative Black Caucus, told the newspaper. "It's really just a sham."

Former Florida A&M head football coach Rudy Hubbard said white-owned businesses elbowed him out of the state's office-supply market six years ago.

Rudy Hubbard Office Supply was giving 20-percent discounts on office supplies in 1986-87, he said. But he said owners of established suppliers easily beat his prices and competed for the state's minority purchasing allotments by putting the companies in their wives' names.

The state's goal for fiscal 1991-92 was for agencies to spend $123.5 million with minority businesses. It met 48 percent, spending $59 million with companies owned by women, blacks, Hispanics, American Indians or Asians. The Department of Management Services, which oversees the program, compiles statistics on how much each agency spends with certified minority businesses.

"The figures that they're giving us aren't worth the paper they're written on," said Rep. Art Simon, D-Miami, who heads a House subcommittee investigating the program.

The panel produced a bill creating a 27-member commission to recommend changes in the Minority Business Enterprise program to the 1994 Legislature.

Audie, owner of Deanne's Office and Computer Supply in Tallahassee, said she is registered as a "minority" business owner and a "disadvantaged" operator.

The Department of Transportation requires its vendors to do a certain amount of business with disadvantaged companies — those run by a woman or minority owner and having a net worth of less than $1 million.

"Anybody with a lawyer and an accountant can become an MBE and a DBE," Audie said. "The accountant gets your net worth under a million, and the lawyer gets you in, if you're denied (MBE status) by the state."

Audie said she did so because one of her top private-sector customers was under Department of Transportation pressure to do more business with DBEs.

Of 313,000 state vendors on Department of Management Services lists, 1,907 are minority business enterprises. Of those, women own 900, blacks 481, Hispanics 457, Asians 68 and American Indians 21.

DMS Secretary Bill Lindner said he wants to work with the Florida Commission on Human Relations to find out which businesses aren't really run by women or minority owners.

"We want to be in the helping hand instead of the handout business," Lindner said. "I don't think minority businesses are looking for a handout, just a fair start."

Caring cops: Big guns and bigger hearts

Two off-duty projects involving local law enforcement officers came to prominence recently. While they are current, they are only a small example of service beyond their job.

Seminole County sheriff's deputies and sheriff's secretary Sandy Cannon, took a six year old Chicago girl and family members into their hearts this past week. The little girl had been badly scarred and injured in a series of horrifying events that have taken place thus far in her brief lifetime.

The deputies gave the girl a whirlwind tour of Central Florida and the Orlando area attractions.

Deputies as well as Sanford police officers also announced the start of this year's Police Athletic League summertime activities.

The PAL will be offering many activities for youths age 10 and older, beginning June 21. Police and deputies will be spending many hours working with the youngsters.

Other projects are also conducted during the year by these men and women. Some are widely reported such as K-9 exhibits or safety training in schools. Other undertakings are done with little or no recognition.

A job in law enforcement often places a person in serious physical danger. It can also be emotionally disturbing. It would be easy to come home from work and try to stay away from society.

Yet these people find spare time during which they continue to be involved with those who need a friend or support.

Some officers receive commendation from time to time for solving a crime or capturing a criminal. We believe they should also receive appreciation for their off-time involvement.

We owe a great deal to our crime fighters. They may carry a big gun, but many possess a big heart as well.

On energy tax

While much of the current tax debate in Washington is dominated by major energy lobbies, such as oil and natural gas, federal lawmakers are learning more about the importance of propane gas to the national energy picture.

Here in Florida, clean-burning propane gas is used extensively to heat homes and run farm equipment in rural areas, and we have been very concerned with the energy tax bill. Federal lawmakers know very little about this fuel, and we have been waging an all-out effort to make them understand what propane gas is and why it is important to our economy and our customers.

We are opposed to a tax on energy; however, if a tax is to be implemented, we want to ensure it is fair to people who rely on propane gas. We recently won one fight to make sure propane users weren't taxed more than those who use natural gas, but more needs to be done to ensure fair treatment.

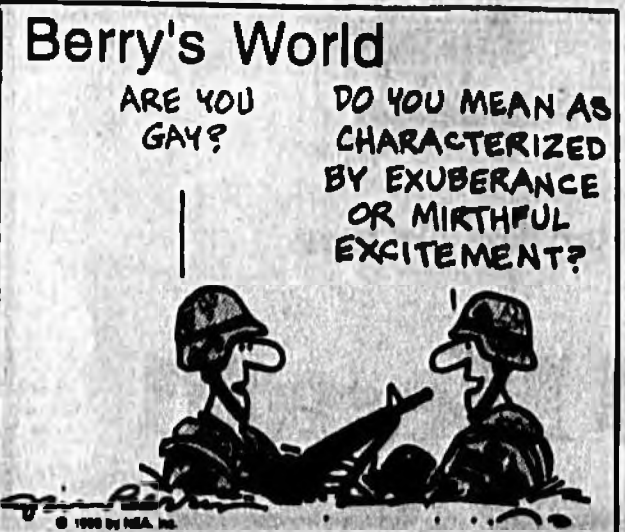

For example, the industry is now fighting to have the collection point for propane gas be the same as that for natural gas — at the point of final sale. This will keep the product price as low as possible to the consumer. The industry is also fighting for fairer tax policies for propane gas used as an alternative motor fuel.

Propane gas is one of the most diverse energy products with more than a hundred applications. Under a relatively low amount of pressure propane gas turns to liquid, efficiently storing more BTUs in a smaller space. It is this property that makes propane gas burn clean like natural gas.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, there are 369,710 households in Florida using propane gas.

The President's energy bill passed the House recently, and is now pending in the Senate. We have tried to impress upon our two U.S. senators, Senator Connie Mack and Senator Bob Graham, when the bill comes up, I urge them to remember the state's many propane gas consumers.

Does Clinton have any principles?

In the winter of 1992, I began to research presidential candidate Bill Clinton's 12-year record as governor of Arkansas. I talked to a reporter in Little Rock who had covered Clinton all those years — and before. I had a lot of respect for this reporter because I'd read his work on racism and the inner dynamics of politics.

"It may take you a while," he told me, "to believe what I'm about to tell you. There is no Bill Clinton. That is, he has no principles that he will stick to when the going gets rough. His great passion is to be popular. I suppose you could call that a principle. If so, that's the only one he has. But," the reporter emphasized, "he is a great campaigner. Once he gets into office, that's another story."

I wrote a series of articles on Clinton as governor of Arkansas. I noted that again and again he backed down on promises when keeping them might lose him larger public support or significant private support. He talked a good environmental game, for instance, but allowed an industry that gave him a lot of campaign funds to pollute the waters. He spoke in a forked tongue on abortion, leading both pro-choicers and pro-lifers to believe he was their champion.

There was more. He wasn't called "Slick Willie" for idle reasons. And now, as president, Clinton continues to bear out that Little Rock journalist's description of him.

For instance, during the campaign and since, Clinton would take on the fervor and language of a populist — promising an end to "government by special interests" and instead he would ensure "government in the national interest."

Yet, in May, without any dissent from the president, his chairman of the Democratic Party, David Wilhelm, said sternly that there is nothing wrong with giving big contributors to the party special access to high administration officials. Ellen Miller, executive director of the Center for Responsive Politics, told The New York Times:

There is no Bill Clinton. That is, he has no principles that he will stick to when the going gets rough.

"What better example could we have to question the president's sincerity on the whole issue of campaign-finance reform than if they continue to encourage the most blatant form of influence peddling, which is buying access?"

From the very start of his presidency, Clinton has swiveled out of once "principled" positions. He gave the Haitians hope, but then told the political refugees among them that they had to stay home. He raised the hopes of Bosnia, and then shredded them as he accepted a multinational "plan" that will continue the killing and raping by the Serbs with their superior forces. The Serbs are not the only war criminals in this long-term nightmare, but they have committed by far the great number of war crimes.

New York Sen. Pat Moynihan — who is a Democrat — has said that this Democratic administration has become an accomplice in genocide.

As slippery as Clinton the environmentalist was as governor of Arkansas, so he is as president. When Secretary of the Interior Bruce Babbitt, by far the best appointment in this administration, moved to really do something to preserve environmental interests in the West, Clinton backed down because of pressure from mining and other commercial interests.

Human rights policy wobbly

When it comes to foreign policy, nothing is easy anymore, primarily because there are so few givens. That makes it all the more important for the administration to adopt central precepts and, having done so, go beyond rhetorical flourishes and stick to them on the tough issues as well as the easy ones. Thus far, it has not found the task congenial or easy, most noticeably when it comes to human rights.

Not many years ago, the kind of inconsistency that has marked the Clinton approach might have been shrugged off as par for the course. It went with the Cold War territory. Particularly under recent Republican presidents, human rights was a matter to be soft-pedaled in dealing with those who claimed to be our friends and used as a selective club against communist — and only communist — regimes.

Now, the Iron Curtain is shredded and "world communism" is an anachronistic phrase. It was only two years ago that President Bush and Yeltsin declared the Cold War over, but it feels more like a century. American aid may soon be pouring into Russia. The arms race has been called off and defense spending is being sharply reduced.

Despite — or because of — this vast change, familiar arguments against "imposing our values" on other nations are used even more selectively than before. Principle is not merely ignored; it is deemed irrelevant. All that has changed is that utterly contradictory choices are now made without using the communist litmus test.

For instance, just last week the president who campaigned in 1992 against his predecessor's policy of appeasing the aging totalitarianism who rule China decided that he had been wrong. When Bill Clinton extended most-favored nation trade status to China for another year, he did so behind a smoke screen of various conditions, but the result was warmed-over Bush. Doing business with an economically resurgent China was deemed too important to be endangered by principle. Human rights violations are regrettable, the "new Democrat" echoed the old Republicans, but grown-ups have to face facts.

What are those facts? On the negative side, that China continues to use slave labor (forbidden by an earlier U.S.-China agreement). That it holds thousands of political prisoners whose only offense was to speak out against China's rulers and petition for redress of grievances. That it is the world's largest remaining totalitarian system.

But what apparently mattered in the end was that China is the United States' second largest trading partner in Asia and that American companies have some $6 billion invested on the Chinese mainland. And, to be fair, conditions are changing. Marxism-Leninism is a dead letter economically in China, and its wildly booming market economy is profoundly altering life for millions of Chinese. It's far from being a democracy, but it's a long way from the ant heap society that Mao envisioned.

When President Clinton offered China a carrot instead of a stick, he told human rights advocates not to worry. He will revisit the decision in a year. "I want to make it clear to them that there has to be some progress on human rights and the use of prison labor," the president said in the Rose Garden town meeting. In the meantime, Chinese goods entering the United States will continue to pay the same tariffs paid by our friends and allies, which is what most-favored nation trade status means.

However murky the rationalizations, reasonable people can differ in relative good faith about the policy itself. But if it's good enough for China, which is large and getting stronger all the while, why isn't it good enough for Cuba, which is weak and getting weaker? As with China for decades, official U.S. policy vis-a-vis Cuba has been one of isolation and boycott. But the Russians have all but abandoned Havana and Cuba as a toothless tiger in the hemisphere. Not even Fidel Castro can live forever, and now might be exactly the right time to re-establish formal ties with Cuba, the better to influence developments there as communism inevitably collapses. Besides, Cuba falls naturally within the U.S. sphere of influence and is a potentially rich market for U.S. goods.

Those arguments, as least as strong as those in favor of remaining open to and with China, have no impact. The obvious reason is that the Cuban refugee population in South Florida voted for Mr. Clinton and he wants to keep them in his camp.

The underlying problem, however, is that this is an administration in search of a policy. What else can be said about a White House that simultaneously betrays Haitian refugees and speaks up vigorously for rights long trampled in East Timor? What is on display is a series of ad hoc decisions posing as enlightened pragmatism and coming off as confused.

When it comes to foreign policy, nothing is easy anymore, primarily because there are so few givens.

Computers are bewildering

Not too long ago, I decided I needed an updated communications program for my personal computer and, having become somewhat bored with poking myself in the eye with a sharp stick, I walked into a computer store.

The salesmen were fairly friendly until I told them I wasn't there to buy a new computer, but to see if I could upgrade my old one.

"Uh, when you say OLD," one salesman asked me, "do you mean OLD as in the one you presently own vs. a brand new one? Or do you mean OLD as in more than 2 years old?"

"I mean OLD as in about 9 years of age," I answered, and watched the color drain from his face. The other salesman said something about hearing the smoke alarm in the back room and left. The first guy followed me out to my car like a prisoner to the gallows.

When I swung my beloved Sanyo MBC-555 off the back seat and into his line of vision, he lurched forward and caught himself on the fender. I thought for a moment he was going to throw up.

"Uh, ma'am, what you've got there is what we call a ... well, uh ... I don't know what else to do but to come right out and tell you: It's an antique. It has the memory of an electric pencil sharpener. Not only do we not carry any communications software for a unit that small, they haven't even made any in five years. The best thing I could do to help you upgrade your communications is to turn you on to a good carrier pigeon."

He convinced me to come take a look around the computer showroom, and I followed him back into the store. He started pointing to units and saying words like "mega-K-Ram-bytes," which I had no idea the meaning of. However, I wasn't completely lost. I'd heard some of the men in the office using similar words, in the same tones they used to use to talk about their cars:

"Yeah, I told the wife it was about time we traded up. They got a great deal on a 486 gadzillion bytes with automatic potato peeler at Harry's Hacker Heaven. Why, I can't afford NOT to buy it."

"Only 486 gadzillion? No wonder they've got it so cheap. In a couple months, it'll be a jalopy! What you need is a unit like I just picked up, a RoboPuter Skadillion. Really, Jerry, you need to pay more attention to the trade magazines and go to the computer shows."

In the showroom, the salesman was reciting a litany of the fantastic software I would be able to use if I upgraded to the tune of about $5,000. I told him I didn't think I needed a program that worked logarithms in four languages and printed them out in a four-color separation wall poster.

"I'm a writer," I explained. "Unlike having a degree in computers, all a writing degree enables one to do is compete with other fame-seeking crazies for 15 minutes of the attention of some magazine editor with the personality of Charles Manson."

"To say I'm not making enough off my writing to invest in $5,000 worth of computer equipment is like saying Queen Elizabeth isn't exactly popping her buttons over her offspring these days."

"Besides, before I got my computer I was using a Sears electric portable typewriter that kept inching itself off the desk each time I hit 'return.' Compared to what I was used to, my little Sanyo seems like the control panel on the Starship Enterprise."

He looked at me with the expression usually reserved for a senile old uncle you catch frying his trousers on the range, and then he turned away.

The best thing I could do to help you upgrade is to turn you on to a good carrier pigeon.

DER proposing uniform state water restrictions

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — The Florida Department of Environmental Regulation is proposing uniform statewide water restrictions, eliminating the hodgepodge of lawn watering and car washing restrictions throughout the state.

If the proposal is implemented, Florida's water districts probably would allocate water usage for a public or private utility based on the population it serves; it would then be up to the utility to encourage its customers to conserve water through various programs.

"With 80 percent of our population along the coast, and only 20 percent of the (water) supply along the coast, the most effective way of finding a new source, if you will, is conservation," said B.J. Jarvis, Southwest Florida Water Management District's water-shortage coordinator.

Florida has never had specific statewide limits on an individual's water use. But with recent drought, a fast-growing population and a limited supply of fresh water, pressure is growing for more explicit statewide conservation measures.

"It's extremely attractive to think we can manage water like a checkbook," said Robert Christianson, DER assistant director of district planning. "I don't think at this point we can measure that accurately."

Other state agencies and the governor's office are working on a range of related proposals, from mandating water-efficient appliances in new homes and businesses to requiring that less-thirsty plants be used for landscaping.

Two of the state's five water-management regions already have a 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. ban on lawn sprinklers and irrigation systems.

One of those two, the St. Johns River Water

Management District, has also imposed a temporary, 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. ban in parts of Orange, Lake and Seminole counties to offset a recent drop in the Wekiva River. The extended ban took effect Saturday.

The proposed statewide ban on daytime use of sprinklers is viewed by DER and water-district officials as a relatively painless way to educate Floridians about the fragile nature of the state's supply of fresh water, threatened as it is by growth, saltwater contamination and pollution.

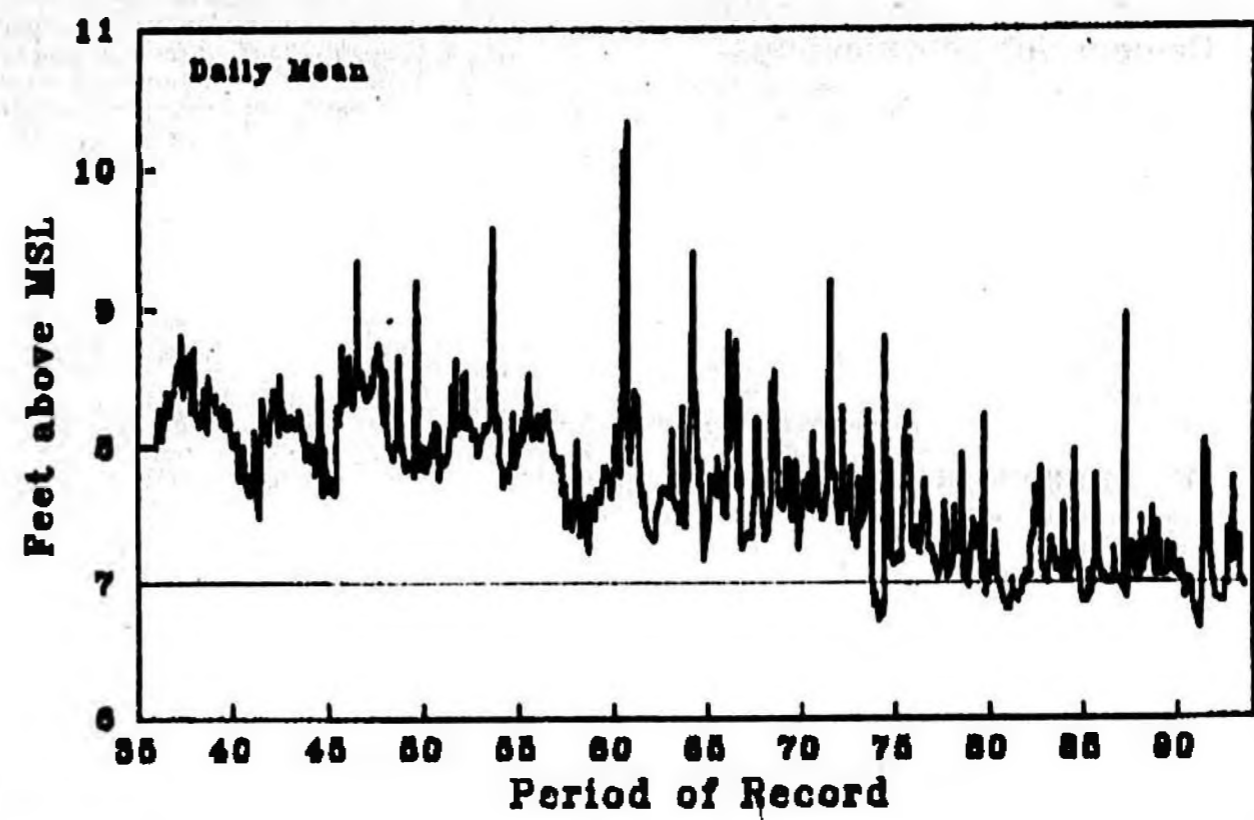

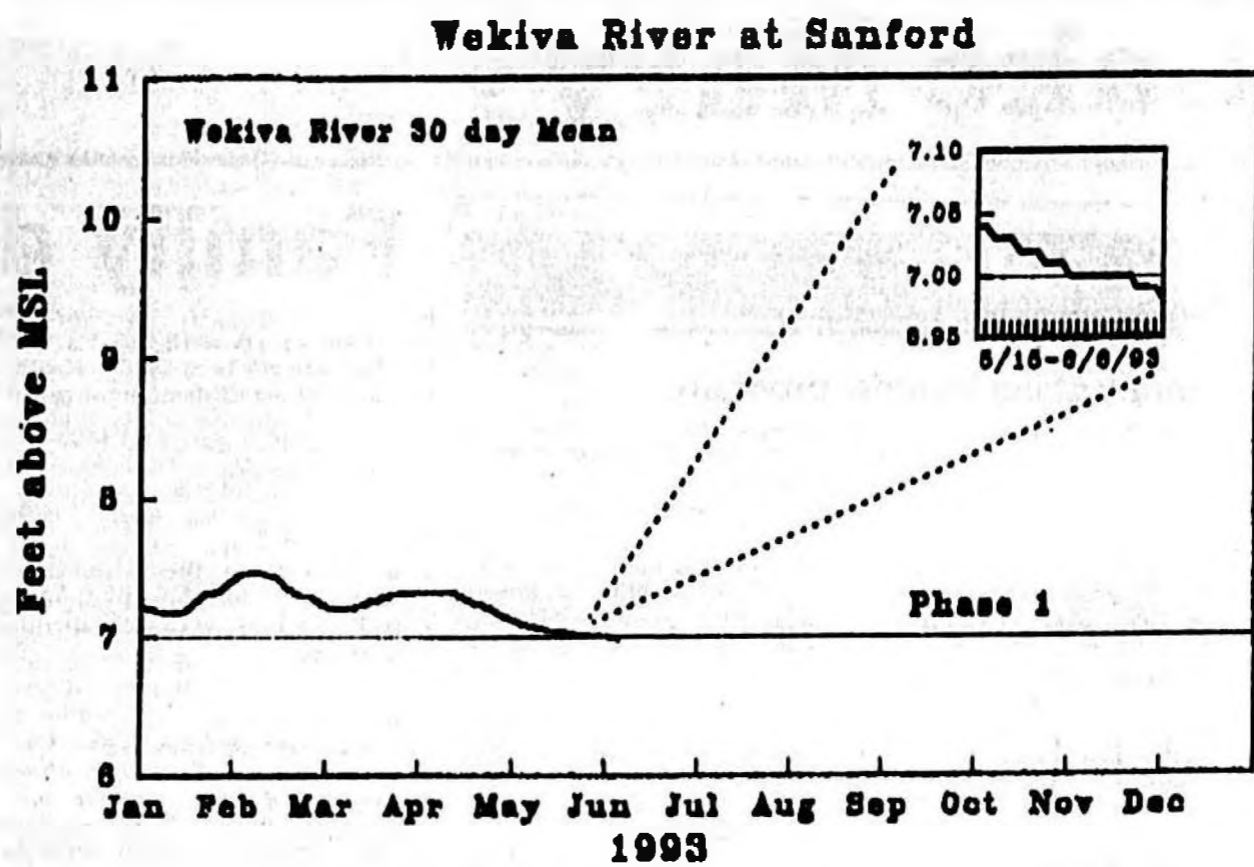

Even water-management districts in the Panhandle, where shortages aren't much of a concern, may not oppose the DER measure.

"We don't have the problems of other districts, but it's common sense that we need to conserve," said Jerry Scarborough, director of the Suwannee River Water Management District.

To set such a cap, the districts and DER would have to calculate just how much water is available statewide for divvying up on a per-capita basis — a difficult task — and then defend that calculation against the ensuing public outcry.

The Southwest Florida Water Management District, struggling with some of the most severe water shortages in the state, already has a daily limit — 150 gallons a person — in some parts of the region and is considering reducing that even further, to 110 gallons a head.

The DER's plan will be discussed this week by water-district officials from throughout the state. By midsummer the proposals will be formally announced and presented at public workshops. "We're getting to the point where the rubber really meets the road," said Barton Bibler, DER's water-management administrator. "Our target date is for the end of the year."

Rainfall a foot above average for past year

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Despite a growing drought that stretches back to March, rainfall at Sanford is still more than a foot above average for the past 12 months.

Tuesday, the St. Johns River Water Management District imposed localized water-use restrictions in the Wekiva River Basin west of Interstate 4 in response to declining river water levels. The district governing board adopted the minimum flow requirements last August to assure the river and surrounding wetlands are not significantly affected by dry times.

Outside irrigation will be prohibited daily between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. until the restrictions are relaxed.

Although rainfall was below normal throughout much of the 19-county district last month, in Sanford, it was actually a bit above normal. A total of 3.88 inches of rain was recorded in the Sanford area last month, 0.39 inches above normal. But for the past three months, rainfall in Sanford is more than a half inch below normal.

For the past six-month period, rainfall recorded in Sanford was 0.88 inches above normal. For the past 12 months, it was nearly 17 inches above normal.

The district imposed restrictions in the Wekiva River Basin because of dropping levels in the river at State Road 46. According to the minimum flows and levels rule passed last year, the restrictions should be imposed when the river reaches seven feet above sea level. The river level dropped below seven feet June 8.

Cliff Neubauer, the district scientist who created the levels, said the Wekiva River is fed by springs and rainfall, both directly and through the groundwater seeping into it.

The recent drought, which came at the end of Florida's "dry season," probably contributed to the lowered river level, said Neubauer.

"What we think we'll see is the rains to come back and we'll be able to take the restrictions off in two or three months," said Neubauer.

Celebration of Ride's historic space ride

By NARCIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — Ten years ago this week, after 22 years and 57 men, America sent a woman into space.

Jane Fonda, Gloria Steinem and congresswomen gathered at Kennedy Space Center on June 18, 1983, to witness, and celebrate, the end of America's most vaunted brotherhood. Many wore T-shirts that said: "Ride, Sally Ride."

Eighteen women have followed Ride into space. A 19th died trying.

"It is a historic moment. It is a historic date," said Eileen Collins, an Air Force pilot who was flying C-141s overseas that day.

Collins was so impressed that before the year was out, she had filled out an astronaut application. She is now awaiting her assignment to be NASA's first female shuttle pilot.

Collins undoubtedly will have Ride's blessing and probably her sympathy, too.

Ride didn't like the attention heaped on her in 1983, and she doesn't like it a decade later. She now is a physics professor and director of the California Space Institute. She rarely grants interviews. Her secretary said Ride would not talk to reporters on the occasion of this anniversary.

Ride, now 42, was bombarded with questions before her much-publicized flight with four men aboard Challenger, 20 years after Russian cosmonaut Valentina Tereshkova became the first woman in space.

As of May 17, Marder said he had not received any acceptable plan from Walker.

Also last month, the city received a plea from W.A. Cagle, owner of rental property on the opposite side of Airport Boulevard, requesting the city demolish the structure. He submitted a request to City Manager Bill Simmons saying, "The condition of this property has a detrimental effect on the value of our property and makes it impossible for us to obtain quality tenants who will properly maintain our property."

In a similar letter to Mayor Bettye Smith, he wrote, "It is obvious to me that certain influential investors, shielded in anonymity by a limited partnership and trust, have pressured City Hall to ignore this eyesore."

In both letters, he has called attention to numerous problems with the structure including code violations, missing roof panels, rusted structural members and rusted stairways.

While Cagle is urging the city to begin condemnation proceedings, he said he would be agreeable if the building would be repaired and put into use.

The commission has scheduled discussion on the condemnation during the workshop meeting this afternoon beginning at 4 p.m. in the City Manager's Conference Room.

At the present time, the matter is not listed in the regular meeting agenda, but could be brought forward at the will of the commission.

illustrated, but straightforward approach to the dangers of drug use. Dark dragons and broken dreams peer out from the pages of the book.

One page comes right to the point. One of the biggest dangers of doing drugs is "you could die."

Cuzzone said that the book is one of the "best vehicles" he has ever seen for getting the message out to children about avoiding drugs.

While serving as the teaching pro at Deer Creek Country Club in Clairmont last year, Cuzzone met Freda and they said they knew instantly that they were a perfect match of ideologies.

Cuzzone had been doing trick shot shows along the eastern seaboard for a few years to attract students.

In the shows, he hits the ball sitting down; he hits it off an egg without breaking the egg; he hits it backward and hits it blindfolded.

He shows the audience the "best" way to hit a water shot.

"He tells them that it's all in the attitude," Freda said, admiringly. "He says most people take their worst ball and look out over the water. He takes his best ball and turns his back on the water...and makes the shot every time."

The two agreed those shows could draw attention to the anti-drug message.

He left the country club and moved to Sanford to live next door to his new partner.

"I'm fully committed to this program," he said.

After a month of careful planning, the first show has been arranged at the Country Club at Heathrow on Saturday, June 26 at 11 a.m.

There will be no charge for the show, but all who attend will hear the anti-drug message and receive gifts, including Freda's book.

The Seminole County Sheriff's Office has committed to helping them, Freda and Cuzzone said.

"They will be at all our shows handing out the books," they explained.

Freda added that 1,000 books will be put aside for each show. Sheriff's deputies will take those that are not distributed at the show and bring them to the local elementary schools.

"That is the group we really have to work on," Cuzzone said. "We have to get them young."

ance adopted appointing the present members of the committee as a formal body.

The committee has been the guiding group in establishing suggested plans for the development of Sanford's lakefront along Lake Monroe. Nineteen people have been recommended for the committee to provide representation from a cross-section of organizations.

The names of governmental leaders and representatives of various organizations include: Bettye Smith, Daryl McLain, Larry Strickler, Kay Bartholomew, Jack Wert, Connie Williams, John LeRoy, Gary Briggs, Chuck Volk and Laura Strachia.

Also included are Andrea Farmer, Preston Perrone, Helen Stairs, Jerry Mills, Neil Fritz, Jami Meeks, Tony VanDerworp, Bill Simmons and Jay Marder.

All names recommended are presently serving on the steering committee. In addition, Sanford Director of Planning and Development Jay Marder, is also recommending the committee include two other representatives, from Friends of the St. Johns River, and Central Florida Community Hospital.

Marder expects the official formation of the committee to be approved.

Wednesday afternoon, the committee will hold its sixth meeting on the Lake Monroe Waterfront Master Plan, at the City Manager's conference room at City Hall.

Marder plans to present a prototype of the signs the committee has been working on, as part of identification of the waterfront area. He was to have met with members of the Sanford Historic Downtown Waterfront Association with a sample of the proposed sign today, but the showing was postponed until Wednesday's committee meeting.

Also planned for Wednesday's meeting is a report on the scenic/historic route identification plan, and update reports on various other projects being examined by the steering committee.

The Steering Committee meeting will begin at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The City Commission discussion of the committee will be held during the workshop session of the commission beginning at 4 p.m. today.

increase in revenue."

Commissioner Steve Miller voiced some opposition to the change, noting that even though it appeared to be a decrease, the switch in options is really a tax increase and might not be good for Longwood residents. Further discussion is expected on the matter.

During last year's budget-making process, the city cut 18 employees from the city staff. McFellin said those and other changes "saved the city $800,000."

"I would like to see that figure substantiated," Lovestrand said, "but the city commission action of directing him to cut positions has eliminated several jobs. If this is a true savings, we can reduce taxes about 1 1/2 mills. If there is no tax savings, the $800,000 is only cost avoidance."

McFellin said, "I have never claimed I alone saved the city $800,000."

Sources of revenue to fund the city budget are needed, however. McFellin said the city's ad valorem taxes (property taxes) don't even cover the cost of operating the police and fire departments, so the cost of funding government has to come from some other sources.

Although more money may be needed for parks and recreation, the building department and fire department, the mayor said increases could be offset in other areas. He suggests holding the line on employee salaries, cutting personnel in the police department, clerk's office and some other area.

Family day features Indian folklore

The third annual Family Festival was held at the Heathrow Racquet Club on Sunday.

This year's festivities included Indian dances representing tribes from across the country, presented by the Great Plains Indian dancers. The last dance featured was the Friendship Dance and all the children as well as adults were welcomed to participate.

Pony rides, Indian tribal face painting with an explanation of colors, game booths, petting zoo, craft tent and coyote tales around the teepee. Coyote tales were told by K.D. Edwards, age 70, from the Comanche tribe in Oklahoma.

Twelve members of the Edwards family have been living in Kissimmee for the past four years. This extended family presents entertainment and folklore. The dance group, Great Plains Dancers, are part of the Edwards family.

"I've been doing 85 years of professional shows and years of traditional, pow-wows and ceremonies," he said. "Sure I can ride a horse and buggy, but I actually learned to drive a Model T Ford when I was five. I stood on an old wood tobacco box. I went to a government Indian school, but it was like the army and I ran off for 3½ years. I was then taken to an Indian school at age 10 in Wichita, Kansas, the Haskell Institute in Lawrence, Kansas. I graduated from high school and got a football scholarship to Oklahoma State University and from there went into the service during World War II and played football at Mississippi University

"I was born in a teepee in 1923 and learned to shoot a .22 rifle instead of a bow and arrow," he said. "Sure I can ride a horse and buggy, but I actually learned to drive a Model T Ford when I was five. I stood on an old wood tobacco box. I went to a government Indian school, but it was like the army and I ran off for 3½ years. I was then taken to an Indian school at age 10 in Wichita, Kansas, the Haskell Institute in Lawrence, Kansas. I graduated from high school and got a football scholarship to Oklahoma State University and from there went into the service during World War II and played football at Mississippi University and played professionally for the Kansas City Chiefs. After my football career, I began doing these professional and traditional shows."

The 3rd Annual Family Festival also included rides and activities for young and old.

The first dance was the "Eagle Dance" from New Mexico. It was an authentic Indian dance, not a show — "It's the Real McCoy" said K.D.

The next dance was the "Comanche Ladies Scalp Dance," and is "representative of the women taking scalps like you would a badge of honor or a medal. It was proof positive that you defended your tribe," said Edwards.

The "Buffalo Dance" was indicative of how important buffalo were. "they depended on buffalo for 80 percent of their food, clothing and many other necessities were taken from the buffalo," according to Edwards. "The horned headdress was worn not only for the dance, but worn by warriors all the time."

K.D. asked that everyone pay close attention to the "Traditional Dance" and "watch the grace and dignity of the dance and to see what the boys and girls always will be, and not what you see on TV with the wild beatings and gyrations around the fire."

K. D. Edwards tells stories of how the Indians lived.

Superintendent Hagerty logs first year in Seminole

For those who are not familiar with Seminole County school superintendent, Dr. Paul Hagerty, here is an update.

Dr. Hagerty came to Seminole County in 1992 after serving as superintendent of schools in Springfield, Mo. and Bibb County, Ga. (Macon). Prior to his superintendent positions, he held various positions in education including two terms as a school board member in Germantown, Wis.

Among the many honors Dr. Hagerty has received are: Superintendent of the Year for the State of Missouri and finalist for National Superintendent of the Year, 1990, and selected one of the country's Educators of the Year by Executive Education Magazine in 1984, 1987, 1990 and 1992.

Before entering the field of education, Dr. Hagerty was a systems engineer in private industry. He was the only candidate for Seminole County's superintendent that was the unanimous choice of all 20 members of the superintendent's selection committee.

The Hagerty family was voted Family of the Year by Georgia's 6th Congressional District and honored at the state level. Mrs. Hagerty is also very involved in the field of education. She has a master's degree in guidance and has served as a school guidance counselor.

Field Day fun

The last week of June was an exciting time for Lake Mary Elementary School children. Each grade had its Field Day including games galore, teams and classmates competing for high points, a lot of fun, spirit, laughing and sweating in the hot sun. Lots of drink were scattered around the specified areas for the big thirsts acquired. Tug-of-war was a big hit, balloon toss was fun even if you dropped the balloon and got wet. (you kind of won by cooling off), scooter and pants relays and many other original and fun events.

On to middle school

On Friday, June 4, the fifth grade at Lake Mary Elementary held its graduation celebration in the auditorium.

Mrs. Casey, school principal, made the opening welcome and then the fifth grade teachers gave a special message and awards were presented. Denise Powell gave the invocation and Star Productions Karaoke provided the entertainment. Mrs. Casey gave the closing remarks.

Donations were made by Albertson's, Lake Mary; City of Lake Mary; Contemporary Gardens, Driftwood Village Florida; Galleria Italian Restaurant, Goodings, Handy Way, Lake Mary; Hungry Howies Pizza, Jiffy Mart, Little Caesars Pizza, Lake Mary; Mr. Print, Pizza Hut, Safari Sun, 7-Eleven, Lake Mary; Sorrento's Cafe, Star Productions Karaoke and United Telephone Company to whom Lake Mary Elementary School is most appreciative.

Also, special thanks go to all of the fifth grade teachers, office staff, custodians, Mrs. Casey and Mrs. Beckner for their interest, cooperation and help. To the parents who gave their time, talent, money, ideas and help. Without parents, this celebration would not have been possible.

League elects new officers

At the recent naturalization ceremony of the League of Women Voters of Seminole County, Evelyn Bales and Arlene Tetenbaum helped newly naturalized citizens register to vote. Also, at that meeting they elected new officers, adopted the budget and adopted their program.

Some of their legislative priorities are updated here. Child care: Sunset legislation reinstating statutes governing the regulation of child care facilities was approved; funding for SWIM (Surface Water Improvement and Management) was approved. Six point two million ($6.2) was allotted along with 19 percent of the proceeds from the solid waste advanced disposal fee which will possibly result in an additional $5 million more for SWIM. After much debate and a variety of approaches, the Legislature passed a health care package, SB 1914 at the final hour of the 60th day! For further information, please call 339-9266.

Food poisoning proves fatal for Army reservist

MADISON, Wis. — An Army reservist died, possibly of a heart attack, after he and 48 others developed symptoms of food poisoning, officials said.

The soldiers, members of the Army Reserve's Company C, 397th Engineer Battalion from Chippewa Falls, became ill Saturday while on a field training exercise, said Major Tim Donovan, a spokesman for the Wisconsin Army National Guard at Fort McCoy. About 80 minutes earlier they had eaten a breakfast of boiled eggs and ham, Donovan said Sunday.

Fourteen soldiers were hospitalized, and 13 remained in the hospital Sunday. They were expected to be released today, Donovan said.

On Saturday, "people felt pretty sure it was food poisoning because it was after a few meals, but now they're checking out other possible sources such as the water supply," said Lt. Col. Peter Fox, a Fort McCoy spokesman.

There were about 9,000 military personnel at the fort at the time, including Army reservists, National Guard members from several states and active duty soldiers.

Eighty-five soldiers had been working in the field and living in tents, but the illness only involved members of the Chippewa Falls company, Donovan said.

The soldiers' symptoms included vomiting, severe diarrhea, dehydration and dizziness — all common to food poisoning.

Sgt. Herman Rust Jr., 47, died early Sunday, possibly of a heart attack, said Terry Bluml of the U.S. Army Reserve Command.

Rust was an employee of the Mason Shoe Manufacturing Co. in Chippewa Falls and had been an Army Reserve member since 1978.

His cause of death was not immediately known, Bluml said.

The base is about 50 miles east of La Crosse between Sparta and Tomah.

Casey taken for surgery today

By JEFFREY BARN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH — Gov. Robert P. Casey was taken to surgery this morning for a heart-liver transplant doctors say he needs to save his life.

The transplant, the 61-year-old governor's last hope for beating a rare genetic disease that is destroying his organs, was expected to last 12 to 18 hours, Casey was taken to the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center operating room at about 5:30 a.m. today, said his spokesman, Vince Carocci.

Casey transferred his official duties to Lt. Gov. Mark Singel until further notice, Carocci said.

The heart and liver came from a 34-year-old man from the Pittsburgh area, medical center officials said. They had no immediate information on how the man died.

Earlier, officials had estimated that the governor would wait four to six weeks for a transplant and would have to stay in the hospital during the waiting period because of his weak heart.

The governor signed a declaration transferring the powers of his office to Singel, effective at 5 a.m. today. The declaration, addressed to the state General Assembly, stated that Casey was "temporarily unable to discharge the powers and duties of the Office of Governor."

Doctors had already determined that Casey needed a liver transplant. Weekend tests showed his heart wasn't strong enough for that operation, Casey agreed to the double transplant.

"The essential testing has been completed and my doctors have informed me that my cardiac condition is much worse than I would have expected," Casey said in a statement Sunday.

The governor, a Democrat, has 1 1/2 years left in his term.

"I asked him when he wanted it (the operation) done and he said, 'How about yesterday?'" said Dr. Thomas Starzl, director of the medical center's Transplantation Institute.

Casey was diagnosed two years ago with amyloidosis, a hereditary disease that has caused his liver to produce too much protein, which builds up in major organs, causing them to fail.

Fifteen patients have undergone liver transplants for genetic amyloidosis since 1990, and all but one survived, according to a Swedish study published in the May 1 issue of the British medical journal Lancet.

The heart-liver transplant was pioneered at the Pittsburgh medical center in 1984 and has been performed on four other patients. All but one died within months.

The fourth — Stormie Jones of White Settlement, Texas — lived six years, dying in 1990 at age 13 when her body rejected the transplanted heart.

The 6-foot 2-inch governor suffered a heart attack in 1987 and underwent a quadruple bypass. His weight has dropped from 190 pounds to less than 160 pounds since then.

Dinos break box office records

LOS ANGELES — It was the "Weekend of the Dinosaur," as people packed theaters around the country to see Steven Spielberg's "Jurassic Park," which was expected to take in a record $50 million in ticket sales.

"We knew it was good, but we knew it would open big, but to break all records is unexpected," Tom Pollock, chairman of the MCA Motion Picture Group, said Sunday.

"When something becomes a phenomenon, everyone wants to become a part of it," he added. "We are very pleased."

Last year's Warner Bros. film "Batman Returns" holds the three-day record with a $47.7 million take, but Sunday's projections showed "Jurassic Park" on a course toward the $50 million mark.

"Jurassic Park's" re-appearance was clear Friday: The $18.5 million it made, which included Thursday night previews, was the biggest-ever movie opening day."

Gas prices down in time for summer

LOS ANGELES — Gasoline prices fell slightly during the past two weeks, the traditional start of the summer driving season, according to a national survey released Sunday.

The average price of gasoline, including taxes, was $1.177 per gallon, according to the Lundberg Survey of 10,000 gas stations nationwide.

That compares with the $1.178 per-gallon average in the two weeks ended May 28. While the drop was slight, oil industry analyst Tribby Lundberg, who conducts the survey, said motorists can expect prices to fall more.

Behind the decline was a slight erosion in crude oil and refinery prices brought on by supply outweighing demand. This was allowing retailers to pass price cuts to consumers, Lundberg said.

At self-serve pumps, the average price of gasoline was $1.115 for unleaded regular, $1.293 for premium unleaded and $1.165 for leaded regular.

At full-service pumps, regular unleaded was $1.394, premium unleaded was $1.850 and leaded regular was $1.442.

Marlins sweep Pirates

MIAMI — Pinch-hitter Rich Renteria's two-run triple in the seventh inning led the stunning Florida Marlins to a 5-2 victory Sunday night over the floundering Pittsburgh Pirates for their first sweep of a four-game series. The Marlins' fourth straight win and eighth in nine games gives them sole possession of fourth place in the NL East and left them 30-31. After his triple broke a 2-2 tie, Renteria scored on Chuck Carr's sacrifice fly to make a winner of Ryan Bowen (4-6). Bryan Harvey struck out the last two batters for his 19th save — tying him with three other relievers for the league lead.

Miss Budweiser wins Bud event

MIAMI — The Miss Budweiser, driven by Chip Hanauer, overcame a slow start Sunday to win the Budweiser Regatta at Miami Marine Stadium. It was the second straight victory for the Miss Budweiser, which won the APBA Gold Cup in Detroit last weekend. For Hanauer, it was a record ninth Gold Cup victory. In the final of Sunday's race, the Miss Circus Circus, driven by Dave Villwock, led after a half lap. But on the second turn, the Miss Circus Circus went wide, allowing the Miss Budweiser to take the lead. Hanauer had clear sailing after that, winning in Miami for the second straight year.

AROUND THE NATION

Suns rebound in triple OT

CHICAGO — The Phoenix Suns, with Charles Barkley's right elbow all but tied behind his back, Sunday night reversed a 1976 triple-overtime defeat and returned to contention in the NBA Finals. The Suns, who lost that 1976 game to the Boston Celtics, battled back to hand the Chicago Bulls their first playoff loss at home this season — 129-121 in three extra periods. Barkley was hampered by a swollen elbow that was heavily bandaged and had to be drained just before gametime. But he still managed to get 24 points and 19 rebounds. The Suns gave Barkley plenty of support in the victory that left the Bulls with a 2-1 lead in the best-of-7 series. Kevin Johnson bounced back from an abysmal opening two games to score 25 points in 62 minutes.

Mudcats trim O-Cubs

ZEBULON — The Carolina Mudcats broke a 1-1 tie in the fourth inning when Bruce Schreiber singled home Steve Osk, beating the Cubs 2-1 in the Southern League Sunday. Winning pitcher Paul Miller (1-1) worked eight innings, allowed one run, gave up only three hits, walked three batters and struck out eight. Jimmy Williams (5-4) suffered the loss.

Knoxville overtakes Suns

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Ron Reems was 2-for-4 with two RBI Sunday to lead the Knoxville Smokies to victory in a 9-6 Southern League offensive shootout with the Jacksonville Suns. The Suns took an early 4-0 lead with two runs apiece in the first and second innings. The Smokies got a single run in the second, before exploding for six runs in the third.

Petty blisters Pocono

LONG POND, Pa. — Kyle Petty dominated for his first win of the season and first ever at Pocono International Raceway with a 4.9-second victory over Ken Schrader in the NASCAR Champion Spark Plug 500 on Sunday. Petty, winning his seventh career Winston Cup race, took the lead from Sterling Marlin with 16 laps to go and stretched it out. After earlier dodging a fan who had run across the track, Petty moved quickly to the front off a restart on lap 180. He grabbed the lead on turn 1 of lap 185 on the 2½-mile triangular track and his Pontiac was unchallenged thereafter.

All-American Ram Golden, Matadors third at national tournament

By TONY DeSORMIER
Herald Sports Editor

ORLANDO — College coaches will tell you that recruiting generally is a crapshoot. No matter how many times you see an athlete play or how many times you visit, you're never really sure who or what you're getting. The word "generally" needs to be stressed in this equation, because every once in a while, a coach comes upon a player that's pure gold. Or, in the case of Valencia Community College softball coach Terri Holmes, Golden. Last week, the National Junior College Athletic Association named Heather Golden, a 1990 graduate of Lake Mary High School, to its All-American team. An outfielder for VCC, Golden also was named to the NJCAA National Championship Tournament All-Tournament team. None of it surprised Holmes, the third-year coach of the Matadors who led Valencia to a third-place finish at the national tournament, the best finish in VCC softball history.

"I thought she had All-American potential," said Holmes of Golden. "She was heavily recruited coming out of high school. We just happened to get lucky. And she'll only get better and better. She's going to the University of North Florida and she'll do a good job for them." According to Lake Mary High School assistant athletic director (and former softball coach) Karen Nolan, Golden was a four-time selection to the Seminole Athletic Conference All-Conference team. An honorable mention pick as a freshman, she was named to the All-SAC first team her last three years. When she arrived at Valencia Community College, Holmes immediately put Golden in right-center field and hit her fourth in the lineup. This season, Golden hit third for the Matadors. Golden played in all 73 games for VCC this season, hitting a team-leading .505 with five doubles, two triples, and nine home runs. She finished with 74 RBI (second best on the team) and a fielding percentage of over .990. "She had a really great season," Holmes said. "Heather played an outstanding tournament for us. She was always on base and played good defense. "That's typical of her whole season. She was always getting the job done. She played in all 73 games and there were maybe five games that she didn't have at least one hit. That's quite an accomplishment." Holmes described Golden as the type of player who might not stand out if you saw her play just one game, but would catch your attention if you watched the Matadors every day for a week or more. "She was always on base, always making a great play, always throwing somebody out," Holmes said. "The only time she came out of a game in two years was when she was hurt or the game was already decided. "I don't know of any other player in Valencia Community College history who made first team All-American or anyone who put up those kind of numbers." Another Lake Mary product who played a part in the Matadors' success this season was 1991 See Golden, Page 2B

Three of top seeds upset in church play

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — The upset bug was biting Saturday. In the opening round of the Sanford Church Softball League's Spring Tournament, only one of the top four seeds was able to advance in the winner's bracket. Chase Park was the home for the majority of the upsets, as both first round games as well as a winner's bracket game found the lower seeded team picking up the victory. In the very first game of the day the 11th seeded team, the 11 team tournament, Lake Mary Grace United Methodist, knocked off the No. 8 seed, Fun Division champion Lake Mary Church of the Nativity Catholic-Disciples, 15-12. The trend continued in the second game as No. 5 seed Trinity Assembly of God from Deltona, which went 9-1 in the regular season to win the Fellowship Division, scored four runs in the fourth inning to break a 6-6 tie and went on to best No. 4 seed Sanford Church of God of Prophecy. The final upset came in the winner's bracket, as No. 6 seed Sanford First Nazarene, which had barely avoided being upset in a game earlier in the day at Pinehurst Park, used a three run, inside the park home run from Scott Wade in the seventh inning to pull away from No. 3 seed, Sanford Central Baptist. The only game played at Chase that was not an upset was still a struggle as top seeded Sanford First United Methodist, the Competitive Division champion and defending tournament champion, jumped out to a 10-1 lead, then had to hold on to defeat Grace Methodist 12-7. Things went a little more according to plan at Pinehurst Park, but the upset did not ignore the West side of town completely. Seventh-seeded Sanford Church of God scored 11 runs in the bottom of the first inning and went on to crush Antioch Missionary Baptist of Oviedo, the 10th seed, 27-7, in four innings. The second game found sixth-seeded First Nazarene took a 12-8 lead after four innings, but ninth-seeded Sanford Christian scored four runs in the top of the seventh inning to tie the contest. Nazarene was able to claim the win in the bottom of the inning on a two-out, run scoring double by David Willink. Church of God then pulled off the biggest upset of the day in the winner's bracket, coming back from a 3-1 deficit to drop second-seeded St. Stephen Catholic from Winter Springs into the loser's bracket, 11-9. The other game was not played will be played at Pinehurst, with the St. Stephen-Central Baptist winner playing Church of God of Prophecy. There will be two loser's bracket games at 11 a.m. and the winner's bracket final will be played at noon at Chase. All of the rest of the games will start on the hour at Chase with the final game set for 3 p.m. and the if necessary game at 4 p.m. Pushing Graer to victory were, with four hits — Gary Haberland; three hits — Joe Corrin (double), Curtis Towers (double); two hits — Dave Graher (double), Chris Corriveau, Andy Williams, Olaf Ramache; one hit — Dave Rimbach (triple), Gary Earl, John Gardner. The Disciples' effort was led by, with four hits — Floyd Westervelt; three hits — Jason Johnson; two hits — Mike Horbel, Karen Figueroa. See Churches, Page 2B

Will athletics play part in SCC's expansion?

SPORTS

TONY DeSORMIER

So, Seminole Community College is planning to expand its operations with the building of an additional facility in eastern Seminole County. Here's hoping the SCC administration doesn't stop there. As we head toward the 21st century (not that that has anything to do at all with the topic at hand, but it serves its purpose as a segue), Seminole Community College may want to take a close look at the role it plays within the Seminole County and how athletics fits in that role. Certainly, SCC finds itself at an athletic crossroads of sorts. In a little over a year, SCC has lost long-time men's basketball coach Bill Payne and watched as Governor Lawton Chiles signed a "gender equity in athletics" bill into law. While the two events are mutually exclusive, they have left Raider athletics in an uncomfortable state of flux. SCC graduate Bernard Merthle was hired to take over Payne. It certainly wasn't considered a stopgap measure, but where Payne had a full-time contract with teaching responsibilities, Merthle was hired only as a coach with a part-time contract. This year, of priorities, it does play a part in the public perception of the school. And there's nothing worse, perception-wise, than the appearance of being marginally committed to any activity. One way that perception can be measured (admittedly not very accurately) is how many local students choose to attend SCC. Over the last week, the Sanford Herald has run a sequence of stories concerning those 1993 graduates of county high schools who have received athletic scholarships to go to college. A look at who's going where show that five athletes are going to SCC on scholarship, nine are headed to Orlando's Valencia Community College, and 13 are going to other community colleges around the state. Along with the nine going to VCC on scholarship, four Seminole County girls soccer players also will attend Valencia, which offers the sport on a club level. Of the 13 athletes going to other community colleges around the state, two are going to play volleyball, which is no longer offered by Seminole. The five county athletes committed to SCC are softball players Tina Leman (Lake Howell) and Jennifer Forston (Lyman) and baseball players Chad Seimer (Lyman), Rob Morgan (Seminole), and Scott Ferguson (Seminole). Other local athletes who may attempt to walk on at SCC include Seminole basketball player KayKuy Mullions and baseball players Phillip King, Matt Detmer, and Tony Duncan. Without knowing exactly how many of the students signed by other community colleges around the state were recruited by SCC, it's difficult to determine just how local athletes perceive SCC. Still, that just one in five athletes picked SCC over other state community colleges offering the same sports and similar academic opportunities says something. In its 27 years, Seminole Community College has built an impressive athletic legacy that has complemented its outstanding academic/vocational/leisure programs. As SCC's administration considers expansion, it would be a mistake to ignore any area that has served to make growth viable and bordering on mandatory.

Blueberries are in season

Pick-your-own at local farms, buy them or grow them

GARDENING

TRICIA THOMAS

Blueberries are in season now and several local farms allow you to pick-your-own at reduced prices. Now's the time to harvest and put some away for use later. Blueberries freeze well and make tasty jams and jellies, of course eaten fresh in yogurt or on ice cream or cereal is here they can be best appreciated. Visit a pick-your-own or buy some at your favorite produce market. Next year, you may even want to grow your own. Blueberries can be easily grown in Central Florida and can make a nice addition to your garden along with other fruits like citrus and strawberries.

Blueberries like an acid soil pH range of 3.5 to 5.2. Most of our soils are not that acid. The first step before planting is to get your soil tested to determine your soil's pH. Soils with a pH above 6.5 will be difficult to amend and are probably not a good site for blueberries. If you're going to plant a few plants, most soils below 6.5 can be modified by using sulfur at the rate of 1 pound per 100 square feet. Incorporate the sulfur in at least three weeks before planting.

Choose a sunny location away from tree roots. The exception is pine trees. Pines are tap rooted and pose less root competition. Areas where pines already exist usually indicates an acidic site and should be well suited for blueberries. Don't plant them any closer than 20 feet from the house, lime leached from the concrete will raise the soil pH. If the soil is naturally moist and acid (pH 5.5 or below), put 1/4 cubic foot of moist peat moss in the planting hole. If the pH is above 5.5, put at least 1/2 cubic foot of peat beneath and around the roots of each plant. Probably the best blueberry for our area is the highbush variety "Sharpblue." It is self-fruitful and does not require cross-pollination to set fruit. However, fruit will be larger and will ripen earlier if cross-pollination is good.

The best time to plant blueberries is Dec. 20 through Feb. 20. Select plants that are about 2 feet tall with a well developed root system but not root bound. Loosen the root ball prior to planting and wet the soil as you plant. Mulch is needed to help lower pH and to prevent weeds. Pine bark, pine straw and oak leaves are good choices for mulch, but grass clippings should not be used. Keep mulch away from the base of plants to prevent the stem from remaining moist.

Blueberries should be pruned at planting. Choose the strongest, tallest stem and leave it unpruned. Prune off the twiggy growth at the base of the plant. When the plant flowers the first year, put on a pair of gloves and strip off all the blooms to prevent fruiting the first year. This will promote vigorous growth, especially with Sharpblue.

Blueberries respond best to frequent, light fertilization. They can be easily damaged or killed by over fertilization. It is best to keep applications on the lean side until you get the feel for your soil type and the fertilizer that you are using.

Do not put fertilizer in the planting hole. Rather, fertilize a few weeks after planting with a 16-4-8 fertilizer with minor elements (especially Magnesium) or a 16-4-8 fertilizer with minor elements (especially Magnesium) or an azalea fertilizer. Apply one ounce per plant and spread evenly over a circle 2 feet in diameter around the plant. Repeat the application in April, June and August. If the plants are heavily mulched, use a little more. The second year, increase the amount to two ounces; the third year to three ounces. After three years, use three ounces per plant in four applications. If you get fertilizer on wet blueberry leaves, wash it off.

Blueberries are shallow-rooted and will need to be watered the first few years, until established. Basically, provide about 1/2 inch of water per watering, twice a week depending on soil type, age of plant, and temperature. When watering new plantings, be sure the water penetrates into the root ball and is not allowed to run off in surrounding soil. The rainy months of summer may eliminate the need for irrigation on established plants.

Blueberries are bothered by few diseases and insects, but bees are required for pollination, so be careful with pesticides like Sevin which reduces bee populations. For more information about growing blueberries, give me a call or drop by the Agriculture Center for a free publication FC-46A "The Blueberry." Present Dad with a gift of love

DEAR READERS: This coming Sunday, June 20, is Father's Day. If you're a little short on cash, don't worry, because I have a gift suggestion that is guaranteed to make a big hit with every man who has ever fathered a child — and it doesn't cost a dime!

It doesn't matter if you're 8 years old or 80. If you're lucky enough to have a father sit down and write your dad a letter. Tell him how much he has meant to you over the years. Do not be shy about telling him how much you love him, and why. It doesn't have to be a literary masterpiece — just a few sentences will do. Of course, if you are in a sentimental mood, go ahead and express the thoughts you may have found difficult to verbalize. And when you sign the letter, be sure to add the date.

ADVICE

Long after the neckties, shirts, wallet and cologne are worn and discarded, I'll bet your Father's Day gift remains tucked away for safekeeping with his most important papers.

How do I know? Because mine was.

LOVE, ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Now that summer is here, we are once again looking forward to going to our place at Lake Okoboji. Several years ago, you had a poem in your column titled "Our Place at the Lake." It fit our situation to a T. We clipped it and had it framed and hung it on the wall of our summer cottage. Everyone who saw it thought it was wonderful.

Now we can't find it. (Someone must have stolen it.) Will you please run it again? Thanks.

ABBY FANS IN IOWA
DEAR FANS: The poem was written by Sylvia Lewis Kinney (now Bundy). And here it is: OUR PLACE AT THE LAKE

June is past, so is July, August is ended — likewise I. The patterning feet of summer and sun

Are over, complete, exhausted, done! I've fed the young as well as the old, I've cooled the warm, I've warmed the cold.

The wounded and weeping I have consoled.

The tender and touchy I have cajoled.

I have steered the scared, I have scared the bold.

I have bit my tongue till it was controlled.

I've broiled the steak, I have causeroled.

And the grocer thinks I am made of gold.

(The other bills I have pigeon-holed.)

And frankly, friends, I am ready to fold!

Next time I live I'll make the most

Of being the guest, not the host.

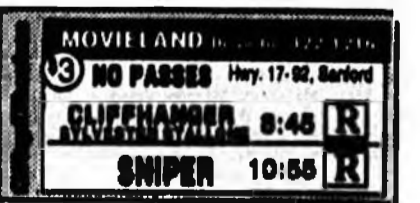

Joy used it once when Mom went to her home for tea, then she gave it to her church for their annual swap sale. Joy never did know who bought it, but she was glad to get rid of it.

Three years later, Mom, Joy and I attended a church benefit. We each paid a dollar for a chance to win the door prize. Mom won! Guess what she won — that ugly, hand-painted cake plate!

DEAR ABBY: I think I have a recycling story that takes the cake! My sister-in-law, Joy, received a hand-painted cake plate from my mother that had to be the ugliest piece of crockery in existence.

Ways to prevent post-nasal drip

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've had post-nasal drip most of my adult life. ENT specialists have checked for allergies and I have none. Medication provides only temporary relief. Can you recommend anything that would give more permanent relief?

that tend to worsen post-nasal drip.

I suggest that you ignore your post-nasal drip; sometimes the treatment for this condition is more inconvenient than the

DEAR READER: An intermittent, sometimes prolific flow of mucus from the back of the nose down the throat -- so-called post-nasal drip -- is one of mankind's most ubiquitous ailments. It is worsened by allergies (especially during the growing season when the pollen count is high) and by air pollution; post-nasal drip affects virtually every cigarette smoker.

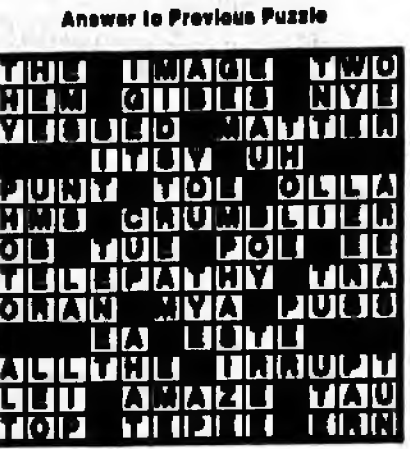

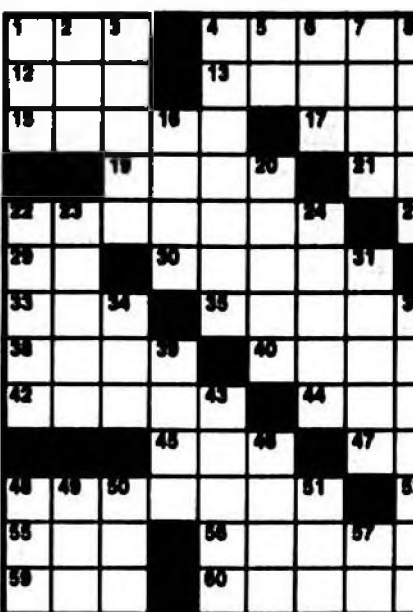

Symptoms include occasional sore throat, a tendency to clear the throat frequently and a periodic, dry hacking cough.

Post-nasal drip is harmless but annoying. Most people put up with it, using over-the-counter antihistamines (such as Actifed) at times when the condition is particularly bothersome. Other treatment includes steroid nasal sprays, prescription antihistamines (such as flrismanal and Seldane), and specific treatment for allergies (such as desensitization injections).

Patients should stop smoking, avoid passive smoke from other smokers, attempt to control house dust (by cleaning thoroughly and using humidifiers), and steer clear of flowering plants and shrubs during the pollen season. Also, animal dander can cause post-nasal drip, so house pets should be confined to special parts of the house and never allowed to sleep on the bed or in the bedroom. These are some of the preventive steps to be taken.

In some instances, allergists can be valuable resources, by testing patients to discover hidden or unsuspected allergies

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
 Graham Wallace, in "The Art of Thought," wrote, "The little girl had the making of a poet in her who, being told to be sure of her meaning before she spoke, said: 'How can I know what I think till I see what I say?'"

I have often said that you cannot find the right play — or bid — unless you think of it. Today's deal is an excellent example. It is culled from the March/April issue of Bridge Today magazine (call 216-371-5849 for subscription details). It was reported by English expert Martin Hoffman.

East won the trick and played his remaining top club. Declarer ruffed but couldn't avoid losing two heart tricks. Was South unlucky or did he misplay?

North, not having an immediate forcing diamond raise available, temporized with two clubs. After that, North-South might have reached three no-trump, but without the advantage of seeing all the cards, it isn't easy.

South's line of play was reasonable, but there is a much better one. Win the first trick with the spade ace, draw two rounds of trumps, cash the club king and play a club to dummy's ace. When the queen doesn't drop, lead dummy's spade two and discard your last club. Whatever happens now, you will lose only two tricks.

Congratulations if you spotted this beautiful loser-on-loser play.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osoi
YOUR BIRTHDAY
June 15, 1993

In the year ahead you could be quite lucky in arrangements where you use partners to a limited degree. You might set up several situations where you're the principle and they provide minor support.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Accept favors from others today as graciously as you granted them in the past. As you know from your own experience, there is joy and gratification in giving. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail 82 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your potential for achieving your objectives is very good today, because you'll be a realistic visionary. Your practical conceptions will be reachable.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You could be quite lucky today in competitive arrangements, especially if the stakes are substantial. Motivation is the thing that will give you your plus power.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your sphere of influence is quite a bit larger than you may realize at this time. Today there's a chance someone may play back an idea you originally conceived and told another.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't be reluctant to lend a helping hand to others if they request your assistance today. You're in a cycle where the good you do will be returned to you in greater measure.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today you have a way of making positive gestures to persons with whom you deal on a one-to-one basis that they will not readily forget. It will make them feel indebted to you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Try not to worry today about things that may never happen. Actually, the aspects are trending in your favor where conclusive end results are concerned. Be optimistic.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Do something fun today that permits you an opportunity to exercise both your mental and physical faculties. A social, competitive team sport would be perfect.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your chances for adding to your resources look rather good today if you have continuity of purpose and stick-to-itiveness. You must finish what you start.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Lady Luck tends to favor you today if you do that which you're capable of doing instead of depending upon others. Be self-reliant and you should be successful.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Two unrelated circumstances might develop today that could enhance your financial well-being. Don't waste time if you see or sense something profitable building up.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Involvements with friends could have political overtones today, but this shouldn't upset you. When it comes to politicizing you'll be equivalent to the best.
