Boaters found

SANFORD — The three alligator hunters who had been reported missing on Lake Jesup Thursday morning were found at 11 a.m. yesterday by another person in an airboat.

According to the Seminole County sheriff's department, Jay Leonhirth, Keith Oglesby and Carl Smith were on the lake in an airboat scouting out locations prior to the start of today's gator hunt.

At about 11 p.m. Wednesday, their boat became swamped with about three feet of water and the engine would not start, leaving the trio stranded in the middle of the lake. They did not have a cellular telephone and had no way to call for help. When they did not return at the appointed time, they were reported missing by their wives.

None of the men were injured in their ordeal. It is not known if they still plan to partake in the gator hunt today.

SANFORD — On Dec. 7, 1941, John L. Sauls, Sr. was parked in front of Landy's Drug Store in downtown Sanford, when the curb-hop came out and said that the Japanese had bombed Pearl Harbor. (The curb-hop subsequently joined the Army Air Corps and retired many years later as General Bill Branam of the U.S. Air Force).

The next day, President Franklin D. Roosevelt announced to the world via radio that a

Sanford puts city employee tuition reimbursement changes on hold

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Plans to improve the educational benefits for Sanford city employees were placed on hold when several members of the city commission Monday night objected to an advanced payment suggestion.

At the present time, the city pays up to $150 per college course to its employees. The money is paid only after the course has been successfully completed.

City Personnel Director Tim McCauley had proposed a change. He suggested increasing the amount to $75 per credit hour, which, for a 3-hour course, would total $225. He also proposed paying the employees at the time they enrolled in the course. If the course was not completed or the employee left the city's staff, the money would have to be repaid.

McCauley told the commission he believed it would be better for the employees to help them pay for the classes at sign-up time, when it may be difficult to obtain needed tuition money.

McCauley said he had discussed the matter with several department heads and had reached the opinion that if the money could be paid up-front, it would encourage more employees to take advantage of the offer. "And with improved education we get better employees," he said.

During work session discussion Monday afternoon, Mayor Bettye Smith, along with commissioners Whitey Eckstein and Kerry Lyons expressed concern over paying the money at the beginning of the course.

"I'm concerned that the city won't get a pay-back if an employee leaves or doesn't complete the course," Eckstein said. He also suggested McCauley and City Manager Bill Simmons consider establishing a cap on the amount which could be paid to an employee in a one-year time period.

Simmons explained that there had been a cap in the amount in the past, but it had been taken out of the guidelines.

Simmons said last year, a total of 53 employees used the tuition offers, costing the city $7,800. He estimated that it would cost approximately $11,700 if the same number would participate under the new plan.

Regarding when the change might become effective, Simmons proposed that it start with courses See Tuition, Page 5A

When Seminole County sheriff's deputies arrived on the scene they determined that she was dead, having suffered serious trauma to her head.

After determining her condition, deputies summoned the Altamonte Springs Police since the body was actually found within city limits.

'I know my rights!' Do you?

By NICHOLAS CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Lots of folks who have found themselves in confrontations with a landlord or the police or a particularly obnoxious neighbor have at some point sputtered, "I know my rights."

But do we? Why can Hamilton College in Clinton, N.Y., ban students from forming single-sex fraternities and sororities but the State University of New York at Buffalo cannot? Don't students everywhere have a right to associate with whom they please?

How could Shannon Faulkner get a federal judge to order The Citadel to admit her as a cadet but could have no chance of success getting into most other males-only colleges? And how can a perfect stranger walk up and punch you in the nose, without violating your constitutional rights?

"Americans don't understand that many 'rights' are really liberties — freedom from governmental interference," says Richard Seeburger, a University of Pittsburgh law professor. "They only work against the government."

So unless that rude stranger whose fist met your nose is a police officer, a disgruntled postal employee or someone else on official government business — people "acting under color of state law" — no constitutional violation occurred.

Such attackers, however, surely can be arrested and prosecuted — and even sued for civil damages.

Local, state and federal lawmakers are not shy about bestowing additional rights.

The "right" to safety is protected by making an unprovoked punch a violation of at least one law, and probably lots more.

And American "common law" is a source of legal rights even older than the Constitution.

Hamilton College cannot violate students' constitutionally protected associational rights because it's a private school, not run by the state as are SUNY Buffalo and The Citadel.

Ms. Faulkner's demand for equal protection under the 14th Amendment could succeed only against public schools because they are agencies of the government.

They and their employees can be found to violate someone's constitutional rights, while private schools — and private citizens — generally cannot.

But private schools that accept federal money likely will find all kinds of statutory strings attached, such as anti-discrimination laws that mirror the Constitution's insistence on equal treatment.

Rep. Robert Livingston, the Louisiana Republican who chairs the House Appropriations Committee, recently wrote to the presidents of Hamilton and three other private colleges to complain about their bans on single-sex fraternities and sororities.

Livingston, a former prosecutor, knows that only a state-run school can be found to violate a student's constitutional rights. "Your colleagues at the public schools are absolutely banned from the type of discrimination that you are practicing," he said.

"As the beneficiary of significant federal funding, one would think you would be sensitive to the bedrock principles of freedom of association and the liberal arts tradition," Livingston said.

Asked if Livingston planned to press legislation to force the issue, spokesman Quin Hillyer said: "I don't know if this will go any further."

The Constitution's first 10 amendments, collectively called the Bill of Rights, were intended as checks on the power of Congress. The 14th Amendment's promise of due process and equal protection later was interpreted to extend many of those limits to state and local governments as well.

"The state-action doctrine is easy for most purposes," says University of Minnesota law professor Susannah Sherry. "But it can get complicated in some circumstances."

For example, the Supreme Court ruled in a 1948 case that the Constitution does not prohibit private citizens from agreeing to keep blacks and other minorities out of their neighborhoods by refusing to sell or rent to them. But it said the 14th Amendment prohibits state courts from enforcing those restrictive covenants.

Such enforcement would amount to "state action" denying equal protection, the justices concluded.

For the record, there's only one circumstance in which a private citizen not acting as a government agent can violate someone's constitutional right — by enslavement.

The 13th Amendment banning involuntary servitude has no state-action requirement written into it.

Get out and vote

It's city election time in Oviedo. Balloting will take place Tuesday, and in addition to two seats on the City Council, there are a number of referendum items bringing about changes in the city charter.

As such, this is important, not only to the city, but every individual who is a resident or does business in the city.

What can be said to urge people to get out and vote? The "Get out and vote" suggestion is brought up by organizations, government bodies and the press every time there is an election. Yet, time after time, there will be people who find just about every excuse known to man to avoid casting their ballots.

What does it take to get people to the polls? Over the years there have been solutions proposed, (but never enacted). One suggestion was to pay people to vote through offering a tax deduction. Some have even proposed withholding government support, (i.e. food stamps, social security, etc.) to anyone who did not vote. Most people are thankful none of that ever took place.

But the threats and promises didn't work. As a result, after people are elected and begin to serve their terms, members of the general public begin to complain that they are not doing their jobs, or should not have been elected. Often, the people who complain are those who did not vote, or wouldn't consider seeking the office themselves.

Polls in Oviedo will be open the standard hours on Tuesday, Sept. 2, from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. The issues to be decided are important. The selection of people to represent the city on the City Council is important.

The citizens' future of the City of Oviedo are extremely important.

What Oviedo people do Tuesday, naturally, is their own choice. The election involves their future, but whether they want to play a part in it is up to them.

Our advise however, as in every election, is ... "Get out and vote!"

LETTER

Crime

The 1995 Legislature responded to the outcry of the citizens of Florida concerning spiraling crime statistics in our state by considering public safety as its top priority this past session. We were successful in passing significant legislation that mandates longer sentences for career criminals, requires inmates to serve 85 percent of their sentence, increases prison capacity and strengthens sentencing guidelines.

We could not look at the issue of crime in Florida without paying close attention to the increasing problems within our juvenile justice system. As many of you know, last year, massive reform of our juvenile justice system took place by establishing the Department of Juvenile Justice (DJJ). The DJJ was created to improve the effectiveness of the juvenile justice system and its ability to respond to juvenile crime. This year, we took it another step further by passing the Juvenile Justice Act of 1995, which I sponsored.

Under the Act that takes effect on October 1, harsher punishment for those juveniles who do not obey the law will be imposed. For example, third-time juvenile auto thieves will be placed into boot camps, students will be expelled for bringing firearms to school, and driver's licenses will be revoked from minors who draw graffiti on public or private property. Juveniles will be getting a strong message that crime does not pay and crime isn't kids play!

In order to break the cycle of kids getting into trouble over and over again, we had to consider what could be done to prevent the temptation of crime in the first place. The Legislature took a long, hard look at this problem and established some well-founded preventative measures as part of the Act. We recognized that education certainly plays a major role in the goal of making our children responsible, self-assured and successful citizens. School districts will be required to notify the local case staffing committee for children in need of services when a student becomes habitually truant. Perhaps by doing so, we can identify a problem that can be corrected early on — before it gets out of hand. Also, school districts have been given the authority to establish alternative site schools for students who are disruptive, establish second chance schools as an alternative to expulsion, and receive student at risk funding for teen-age parent programs.

An important part of this new law is the creation of a Juvenile Assignment Center for temporary placement of committed juveniles or those awaiting a permanent commitment program, while at the assignment center, juveniles can be assessed as to the proper type of treatment and the appropriate commitment facility. In addition, the Act authorizes juvenile sexual offender commitment programs and treatment services for these particular offenders.

Want to run for president? Do it now!

Suppose you wanted to be president. Was there ever a better time to try? Only one key piece is missing, but when it falls into place we may well see presidential candidates swarming at us like fire ants.

The public opinion surveys reveal agitated voters fed up with the two major parties, dissatisfied with President Clinton, and unmoved by any announced Republican, including front-runner Bob Dole. For the first time, a plurality of voters describe themselves as independents. Confidence in government has declined. The strength of the parties has diminished. The 1992 Perot candidacy proved that independents can score heavily.

In the coming weeks, as the threat of the government running out of money is highlighted, we will witness the so-called "train wreck" scenario emerge in Washington.

Fulsome fulminators will use the budget and debt situation to scare voters and each other. Voter agitation may turn to voter regurgitation.

The one rule in this speculation is that a serious presidential candidate must have a chance to win a plurality of the popular vote in the 1996 presidential election. In a straight two-party race one candidate must get 50.1 percent of the vote, a difficult threshold without the organized help of a national party. Probably only the two major parties can easily dream such dreams:

1. Clinton-Gore
2. Dole-Wilson (Gov. Pete Wilson of California is pro-choice in a party where that position can hurt in the primaries but help in a general election.)
- Now, a third-party candidate need only think, "If the vote splits fairly evenly I can win with only 33.4 percent of the vote." What ticket might do that?
3. Perot-Boren. Perot was running close to 40 percent in some 1992 polls before he dropped out, and is now running in the mid-20s. Former Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., is now the president of the University of

When it falls into place we may well see presidential candidates swarming at us like fire ants.

Oklahoma and gave the keynote speech at the Perot extravaganza in Dallas in early August.

The task gets easier. The next ticket in the race would be serious if it can credibly claim 25.1 percent:

4. Powell-Bradley ("The General and the Jock"). General Colin Powell is already running above 25 percent in three-way polls with Clinton and Dole. Former basketball star Bradley seems to have cut ideological ties with his Democratic Party, and would like to be president.

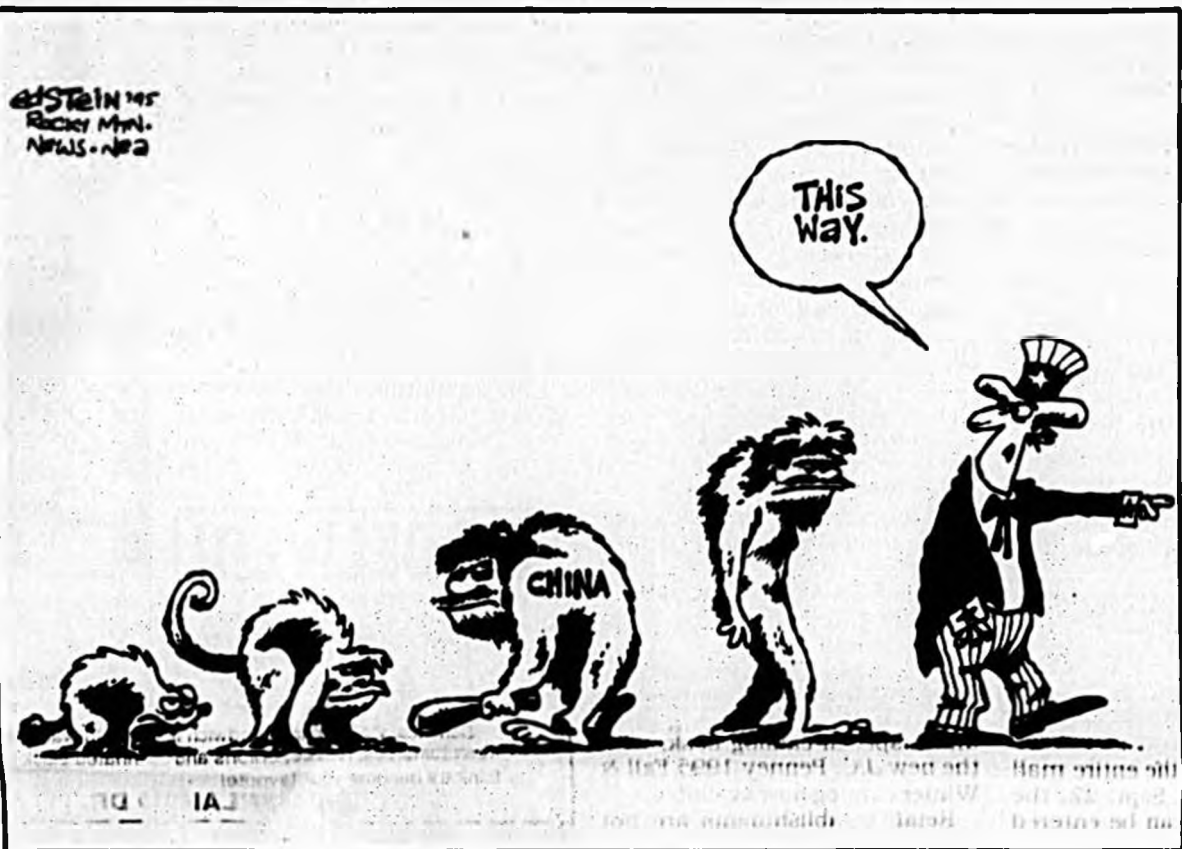

It gets even easier. The next ticket need only claim a shot at a 20.1 percent vote to gain credibility:

5. Jackson-Nader. Jesse Jackson and Ralph Nader each have constituencies on the left and high visibility. Jackson ran for president twice, knows how it's done, and can get public attention without a huge campaign war chest.

A sixth team gains credibility with a projected 16.7 percent plurality:

6. Buchanan-Keyes. Conservatives Pat Buchanan and Alan Keyes are both making waves.

Do you want to be president? Now's your time. In a seven-candidate race you can win a plurality with 14.3 percent of the vote.

Pay for courage or cowardice

PHILADELPHIA — At the recent convention of the National Association of Black Journalists here, African American reporters, editors and other media professionals packed a session on Generation X athletes — at which scheduled superstar panelists Deion Sanders, Barry Bonds and Jerry Stackhouse failed to appear.

Journalists also jam-packed a nationally televised speech in which O.J. Simpson defense attorney Johnnie Cochran instructed black journalists — whose objectivity and professionalism already are regarded with suspicion by white employers — to become "advocates" of black causes in their reporting. A few awed female attendees had to be shooed away from the dais.

Comparatively few attended a gathering honoring a man whose efforts to improve millions of black people's lives might warrant some lionization.

Randall Robinson — whose arrest with two others at the South African Embassy helped spark apartheid's dismantlement and whose 27-day hunger strike shamed President Clinton into helping restore democracy to Haiti — was presented NABJ's Community Service Award. Those who attended heard the TransAfrica chief take aim at what may be his most controversial target: the corrupt military government of Nigeria.

Asked why he constantly has fought for those whose misery occurs so far from home, Robinson paused.

"I did it," he said, "because I am a South African. I am a Haitian. And I am a Nigerian."

It's easy to acknowledge our spiritual link to those who happen to be born in harm's way. But for African American activists such as Robinson, there may be real risk in challenging a black nation whose oppression is perpetrated by other blacks, as is Nigeria's.

As he testified before a subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last month, much of the news out of Africa is good. If the Angolan peace holds, he said, all of southern Africa will be at peace for the first time in 34 years. Uganda — once a human rights and economic embarrassment — has reduced inflation from 250 percent to less than 5 percent.

Sadly, the news in Nigeria — Africa's most populous and, arguably, most politically significant country — could hardly be worse. One of every five non-Arab Africans lives in Nigeria — under an absolute military dictatorship in which elected officials routinely are stripped of their offices, labor unions are dissolved and hundreds of dissidents are killed, according to human rights organizations. Nearly half of Nigeria's 65,000 inmates never got a trial.

By calling attention to Nigeria's problems — including rapacious generals who've plundered the nation to the point that, despite oil exports valued at $210 billion over the last 25 years, its average per capita income is an abysmal $250 — Robinson finds himself in the unaccustomed position of reinforcing racist stereotypes.

Frankly, it's simpler to attack corrupt, vicious whites. As a product of the "faceless, permanently scarring" segregation that permeated life in his home town of Richmond, Va., Robinson, 54, admitted to NABJ members "it was easy to identify with black South Africans, and to vigorously oppose America's supporting apartheid, an even more systematically vicious system."

But when people's lives are at stake, what's easy shouldn't matter a damn. When brutalizers are black, African Americans "must find the will to oppose the oppression as tenaciously as we do white victimization," he said in an interview. "Victimization is victimization, whether in China, Bosnia, Oklahoma City or Nigeria."

The generals who've ransacked Nigeria "expect not to be attacked by people of African descent," Robinson said. "They take advantage of their reluctance."

Not to mention Americans' ignorance of foreign policy. Most of us don't understand that unless Nigeria resolves its problems, all of Africa will falter. Because the United States now exports more goods to South Africa than to all of Eastern Europe and even Russia, American jobs are at stake. More than 20 African nations moved toward democracy in the last three years; adding Nigeria "could put it over the top," Robinson said.

In the meantime, Robinson, who's pressing for an oil embargo and the freezing of Nigerian assets in the United States, won't let Nigerian officials get away with playing "the race card" — although similar cards are played everywhere with gender and ethnicity.

Still, the real issue — even in a culture that increasingly equates celebrity with heroism — remains doing what's right, whatever the cost. "You can't live in America as a black without paying some kind of price," he said. "You either pay for your courage or your cowardice. To me, it seems much easier to pay upfront for courage — and to live with oneself."

It's easy to acknowledge our spiritual link to those who happen to be born in harm's way.

Drawing card to downtown

Let me tell you about Armada, Mich. Back in the late 1940s, there was a time when the downtown business community appeared ready to die. But it refused to do so.

It was unincorporated at that time, but served as the major shopping area for farmers in a six to eight mile radius. As such, it had been relatively successful, but to a point.

Other cities were growing rapidly and adding more stores. Even people who lived near Armada stopped shopping in their home town and drove elsewhere.

Then, the merchants who were left came up with a tremendous promotional idea. They banded together (merchants did that back in those days), and each forked over five dollars per week. The money, which amounted to only about $50 per week, was used to hire a man who owned a movie projector and slide projector.

In the city park, near the middle of town, two large electric poles were put in place, and a movie screen was mounted. The man contacted a motion picture distributor, and was able to rent a movie per week. Usually a Tom Mix or Gene Autry western, or one of the adventure movies about World War II.

Every Thursday night, as soon as it was dark, people would gather at the park. They came from 10 to 15 miles away. Even though movie houses in those days offered a double-feature, cartoon and newreel for 25 cents per person, this was a FREE MOVIE, and it drew the crowds.

People brought blankets to sit on. They brought snacks and beverages. They had a good time watching the movie and meeting with neighbors.

Before each movie and during two planned 30 minute breaks, (while the reels were re-wound), slides were flashed on the screen: "Eat at the Armada Diner," "Don't forget to get your supplies at Jones Hardware," "Buy your windows and doors from Armada Wood Products," and "Get your groceries from Gene's General Store."

All the stores stayed open until a half hour after the movie ended, usually around 9 p.m., and they were packed with customers.

Armada from this point on, began growing and prospering once again. More merchants moved into town offering more services. People came to know the merchants personally, and began doing all their shopping in Armada regardless of the day.

The movies continued well into the mid-'50s, before time marched further onward and there was no longer a need for them.

The point here is that the merchants worked together. They created a reason for people to come into the downtown area and do their shopping.

If we want people (customers, shoppers) in the downtown area, there must be some draw-card. They won't go merely to shop. There must be something to go beyond that point.

"Build It and They Will Come." is not the answer. There must be something in addition to that.

 ment, the woman has not been identified at this time.
 "An autopsy will be performed this afternoon and that should give us a lot more information," Farber said.
 The woman is described as "probably Hispanic," in her 30s. She was about 5-foot 6-inches tall and about 130 pounds.
 She had shoulder length dark, curly hair that was held back with a white banana clip.
 She was wearing white canvas shoes, blue shorts and a white t-shirt with an abstract design of hearts and flowers printed on it.
 Farber said she had a two-inch scar, probably a burn, on her right ankle.
 On her left ring finger, she wore a gold band with a leaf design and two pearls. Police are not sure if it was a wedding band.
 Farber said the investigation into the woman's death is continuing.
 "We're not ruling out anything," he said. "We don't know if it was a homicide, an automobile accident or what. We're looking at all the getting underway after the beginning of the next fiscal year, which would be October 1.

 Commissioner Bob Thomas spoke in favor of McCauley's proposal for advance payment.
 "We all know that once courses are completed, our people will either remain or go on. If they leave, we will get our money back. If they remain, we'll have better employees. I think this idea is well worth our consideration."
 Mayor Smith and Eckstein however, both questioned if the education of the city's employees should be a function of local government.
 I think this whole thing should be evaluated," Eckstein said. "It might become too expensive for us. I'm just suspicious about it."
 Lyons suggested the city might consider paying 50 percent of the money up-front, and the remainder upon completion.
 Commissioner Lon Howell said he liked that idea, but commented, "If our people want to better themselves, this would be a good opportunity. But I don't think we should limit the amount."
 After extensive work session discussion, it was decided that the matter would be postponed for any action until Simmons could investigate the possibility of placing a cap on the amount, and making other changes.

 vestigative Unit (SIU) set up surveillance, and subsequently located and stopped the vehicle on SR-46 near Upsala Road.
 Whitmire said Williams did not give officers consent to search his vehicle, so a K-9 drug-sniffing dog was called. As a result, officers said they found 50 grams of crack cocaine.
 Whitmire said in the street-language, the crack cocaine was a "cookie," the name given to crack which is actually cooked in preparation. "This was one very large cookie," Whitmire said. "Worth about $5,000 on the street."
 Earl Jack Williams, 21, of 1011 Oleander, Sanford, was arrested on a charge of trafficking in cocaine.
 A passenger in Williams' car, identified as Wilbert Williams, 40, of 3750 Jessup Avenue, Sanford, was also charged with trafficking in cocaine. Whitmire said it was not determined if the two men were related.

 bombing the day before. He pronounced it as "a day of infamy." He also declared war on Germany.
 John Sauls volunteered, and was inducted into the U.S. Navy on May 22, 1942 at Jacksonville. Basic training was in Norfolk, Va., with his pay at $21 per month.
 He attended aerial gunnery school in Jacksonville, and eventually served as gunnery instructor at the Naval Air Station (NAS) in Pensacola. Later, he received training in Turret School in Detroit.
 In July, 1944, he was transferred to Hutchinson, Kansas, where a unit was being formed to go to an unknown destination in the Pacific Theater of War.
 Moving on to San Diego, he was taught invasion tactics, and in February, 1945, John and his group boarded troop ships in San Francisco.
 John's ship was equipped at Pearl Harbor, moved on to Eniwetok in the Marshall Islands, then to Ulithe, the largest man-made harbor in the Pacific. It eventually arrived at Zamboanga in the Philippines.
 Approximately 2,700 ships gathered in the South China Sea on March 25, 1945, and on March 31, the ships arrived at Okinawa in the Ryukyu Islands, and the invasion started the next day, Easter Sunday, April 1.
 John hit the beach with the U.S. Marines at what was called "Yellow 8" on the invasion map. They went in and secured the air field at Yontan on the South China Sea side.
 Within a week, they were operating from Yontan, with John as gunnery and turret possibilities."

 Her body was found on Keller Road, near County Road 414, between Maitland Boulevard and McNorton. The area was near the Altamonte Springs water treatment facility which is located close to the Seminole-Orange county line.
 Farber said there were no skid marks on the road to indicate an automobile mishap, but they are looking at the details before making a final determination.
 Farber said he did not know why the woman might have been on that deserted stretch of road. He said he did not believe she was a prostitute working in that area as the location was too far removed from the roadway to be traveled much.
 He said that once the woman is identified, the rest of the investigation might be easier to complete.
 "We'll see what the autopsy shows this afternoon and then go from there," he said.
 If anyone has information that might assist police in their investigation, they should call the Altamonte Springs Police Department at 830-3826.
 repairman on aircraft. He also flew on the PB4Y2 (Privateer) aircraft whenever needed.
 During the days, they bombed over China and Japan, including Tokyo. Nights were spent in fox holes because of the regular Japanese bombings.
 One day, some Navy planes landed on the (U.S.) strip and the pilots said, "We dropped something on Japan today." The guys on the flight line responded, "We drop something on Japan every day." The flyers answered, "Not like this. The flames are shooting up 10,000 feet."
 John's group had already been informed that they were slated to be on the first wave to invade Japan. British Prime Minister Winston Churchill had estimated one million Americans would die in that first push.
 They (Japanese) were not going to lie down and quit. The whole populace was going to kill every American they could. Japanese scientists were in a race with Americans to develop the atomic bomb. It has been to the benefit of the whole world that we got it first.
 Hiroshima was bombed August 6, 1945. Nagasaki was bombed August 9. (The Nagasaki plane landed at Yontan for fuel, it being the closest air field to Japan).
 After the atomic bombing, the Japanese immediately changed course and began negotiating to save face. The allies' battle cry throughout the whole war however, had been, "Unconditional surrender."
 John Sauls was at Yontan, Okinawa on VJ Day, September 2, 1945. He was honorably discharged at Camp Parks, Shumaker, in Livermore California in November, 1945.

He follows kids as they follow their parents' footsteps

By MIKE FENSLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Kids have clear — and rational — ideas about what they want to do when they grow up, a researcher says, and these days they are more likely to want to follow Mom's footsteps than Dad's.

Psychologist Ashton Trice has reached that conclusion after five years of asking 1,200 children a year that old familiar question: "What do you want to do when you grow up?"

The interviews have been conducted in kindergarten and grades two, four and six in Washington, D.C., Boston, New Orleans and in north-central Virginia, and Trice has gathered enough data to reach some tentative conclusions.

He has learned that about 50 percent of children want to follow a parent's example. These days, now that so many mothers work in diverse jobs, kids are more likely to choose their mothers as models instead of their fathers.

The chief reason, Trice said in an interview, is that children often are more familiar with their mothers' work.

When a snow emergency or a child-care crisis forces a parent to take a child to work, the mother most often does. Even if the father does, he is likely to turn the child over to the care of a female colleague, so the kid doesn't learn much about Dad's work.

Trice knows whereof he speaks about following a parent's example. He studied music and for a while taught music. Then he taught English. Then he got a doctorate in psychology and, 10 years ago, when his father retired from teaching psychology at Mary Baldwin College in Staunton, Va., Trice took over his father's classroom.

He intends to publish a scholarly report on his findings and a guide for parents about the importance of talking to kids about work.

He hasn't been interviewing how many accurately predict their futures, but a study in the 1920s of gifted children found that 50 percent of them wound up doing what they said, at ages 8, 9 or 10, they wanted to do.

Some of Trice's other conclusions:

—Boys still make sex-stereotyped job choices, but girls are far less likely to do so these days. Girls' top choices are lawyer, teacher, doctor, veterinarian and nurse. Young boys are likely to want to be firemen or policemen; older boys tend to want to be professional athletes.

—Children are surprisingly sensible in specifying a career. "Even as second-graders, a lot of kids say they don't want to be truck drivers because they have to work such long hours and are away from their families so much," Trice said. On the other hand, he said, in an area of rural Virginia where truck driving was among the best-paying jobs, "the kids all wanted to be truck drivers."

—By second grade, virtually every child has a career choice. But by sixth grade, 12 percent are no longer so sure. Boys are more likely to be uncertain than girls. Children are most likely to be uncertain in families disrupted by divorce or unemployment.

—In poor families, boys are more likely than girls to lower their sights. These boys "limit their job choices early and severely" while the girls aim for the professions.

—Boys pay more attention than girls to what a job pays.

—Adults don't talk seriously to children about work choices. Only a handful of children say a teacher suggested they might be good at something.

As might be expected, some quirkiness shows up as well.

"Almost all the kids who want to be lawyers are the children of divorce," Trice said. "The boys say they want to be a lawyer because they've heard their fathers say they've paid them all their money. And the girls have heard their mothers say something like, 'If it weren't for my lawyer, we'd be out on the street.'"

Diggin' school

Officials broke ground on an as-yet-unnamed elementary school in Winter Springs this morning. Board members Larry Strickler, Jeanne Morris, Sandy Robinson and Nancy Warren joined Supt. Paul Hagerly in turning over the first shovels of dirt at the site of the school which will open in July 1996. The 112,000 square foot school will cost $7.5 million to build and will house 788 students.

Why save now for the future?

Seriously now, there are a lot of good reasons why you should save money. For one thing, it's the only way you can efficiently manage your money and budget your expenses. You may already have a savings plan or you may just stick your dollars in a shoe-box at home. (That's a bad way to treat hard-earned cash.) But chances are, there are a lot of things you may not know about this important aspect of money control.

First, you should understand the difference between saving and investing. Saving is setting aside money for use — in a commercial bank, savings and loan or credit union. You get some return on your money, but you're mainly looking for absolute safety and easy withdrawal. There's not much point in saving for a rainy day if you can't get your money out when it's most needed.

Investing, on the other hand, means putting money to work to earn more money. There's always come risk involved when you invest.

Savings give you status. When your income is low and prices are high, you are likely to neglect saving. The family should realize the importance of saving regularly. Regular and planned savings require an appreciation of the value of saving. It requires constant sacrifice and self-denial now with the expectation of greater satisfaction in the future.

How much of your income goes into savings will vary with your income, goals, responsibilities, needs, habits, interests and family size. Americans save about four percent of their annual income. Set up a habit of saving money on a definite percentage basis. Five to ten percent of your take-home pay is a good beginning.

Saving for a purpose. People usually save with a purpose in mind. It might be for a short-term goal such as a vacation, a car, a refrigerator or a VCR. Money put aside today is used tomorrow for specific goods, services or pleasures. This kind of saving is necessary for healthy financial security.

At some period in the life of a family, emergencies make demands on the money income; sudden illness of a member of the family or damage done to the house by a storm. To meet emergency needs, try to reserve at least three months' income.

Saving can be fun if you look forward to some greater future pleasures. A regular plan for saving shows good money management. Are you willing to make a plan that will help you reach a desirable and a pleasant long-term goal? It could be a college education for the children, a mortgage-free home or even financial security after retirement.

Investments for financial security. When we speak of investing, we usually think of securities. A security investment usually refers to stocks, bonds, notes or mortgages. There are also investments made in real property and other assets — the traditional net worth items.

The next investment category is durables, such as furniture, works of art, silver and china.

The third category is family health and education and that which contributes to the cultural and social improvement of the community.

A family usually should not make investments in securities, such as stocks and bonds (except government saving bonds), until after it has established an emergency savings fund.

Having fun at Fun-A-Rama

Ten teams competed Saturday in the YMCA's Fifth Annual Corporate Fun-A-Rama in Lake Mary. The obstacle course was fun for numerous participants of all ages. See Mary Powell's Lake Mary column Sunday in the People section for complete coverage.

Family-free vacation at beach this woman's idea of heaven

DEAR ABBY: I am a happily married woman, married 15 years and have two children. I have a dream. I want very much to go on a vacation with no husband, no children — just me alone! I want a week of doing whatever I want to do, with no pressure from anyone, without worrying if everyone else is happy and content. I would dearly love freedom from all home responsibilities — to sleep when I like and not have to explain why. A place at the beach would be my idea of heaven.

My husband thinks my "dream" of a one-week vacation all alone is "unnatural." He thinks a happily married woman who has this kind of dream is crazy.

Well, do I see a psychiatrist, or go to the beach?

NEEDS A BREAK
DEAR NEEDS: Assuming your children will be properly looked after, I see nothing unnatural about your dream. And surely, there is nothing "wrong" with anyone (male or female) who wants freedom from all responsibility for a week.

Go to the beach, and if your husband thinks you're crazy, send him to a psychiatrist.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Needs a Break," whose husband couldn't understand why his wife wanted a little vacation away from her family, prompted me to write.

ADVICE

My parents, both retired, live 420 miles from us. When our youngest child was out of diapers, my husband volunteered to look after our three children for a weekend so I could visit my parents and "get away from it all."

What a marvelous time I had sleeping late, visiting old friends, shopping and going out to dinner. My parents spoiled me rotten. Best of all, I didn't have to answer to "Mommy" all weekend.

I returned home completely refreshed with a wonderful new attitude toward my husband and children. My sweet husband has been doing this for seven years now. (We call it "Mom's R&R.")

It gives me a little vacation away from my routine at home, my parents love pampering me, and my husband and kids admit they enjoy getting rid of me for a few days.

After seeing that letter in your column, Abby, I just had to send in my support.

CINDY IN HUNTINGTON

It feels like it's my destiny to fight about clothes my whole life. How can I make my daughter at least compromise on extremely cold or extremely hot days?

DRESS WARS MOM

DEAR DRESS WARS: I wonder if you are doing exactly what made you so mad at your mom — trying to impose your will on your child's tastes. There was a time when kids did things because a parent "said so," but today's kids arrive on the planet with strong opinions and usually even stronger wills. The bottom line is this — it's just plain good sense to avoid a fight that isn't really terribly important and that everybody will lose.

Instead of laying out her clothes, try giving her choices of a couple of different outfits. If she insists on wearing an outfit that is completely inappropriate to the situation or weather conditions, explain to her the probable consequences of her decision, then grit your teeth and get out of the way to let her experience the consequence for herself.

It seems that life has an uncanny way of teaching us the very thing our mothers always told us, but we didn't want to hear.

Clothes cause 'wars' in 2 generations

DEAR MARY: This is not a big deal but it certainly has caused some problems in my life. From the time I was a little girl my mother always insisted that I wear pretty, frilly dresses to school and church. I come from an upper middle class family so she could buy pretty much what she wanted.

FAMILY COUNSELOR

MARY BALK

I remember my first day in kindergarten she made me wear a ridiculous-looking thing with ABCs on it. I hated that dress and I hated her for trying to make me into what she wanted me to be instead of who I am — definitely not a "frilly" person. In fact, even today as a grown woman I would wear T-shirts and jeans seven days a week if I could get by with it.

Now, along comes my 5-year-old daughter and her tastes are just like my mom's. There is no such thing as too much lace or too many frills in her eyes. She gets mad if I even suggest that she wear shorts to day care. At this point, I'd settle for a compromise but we get into a fight every time I lay out shorts or slacks, regardless of the weather.

Baptists gather in new sanctuary

SANFORD — First Baptist Church of Sanford, 519 Park Ave., recently held its "God With Us" program to welcome the community to enjoy the newly built sanctuary.

Choirs from First Baptist-Sanlando, Central Baptist-Sanford, and First Baptist joined in musical arrangements led by Tom Hartley of Integrity Music. The audience was encouraged to participate in the service.

Minister of Youth, Sidney Brock and Minister of Music, Jim Carnell began the program with opening remarks. Many songs topped off the "glorious celebration." Promotional Secretary, Joan Caerto, commented, "It was lovely. God we truly with us.

All who attended were truly inspired."

The event included soloists, two testimonies and a beautiful display of religious banners being paraded down the aisles.

Sharing moments with a minister

WINTER PARK — Have you ever noticed in the last generation a change in the way most religious groups are presenting their messages to the media? Many churches have adopted a new style of public image utilizing puppet shows, clown acts, comic books and soap operas to teach subtle lessons.

The reason for the new soft sell is the fear that traditional methods of preaching will turn off the unbelieving public. The solution, religious publicists say, is to avoid "pulpit pounding" and use attention getting techniques that do not offend them.

The non-offending gospel has spread rapidly. Tens of millions of homes subscribe to Cable TV systems that broadcast such soap operas as "Another Life" — a religious soap opera that began in the early 1980's.

On the radio, the new approach continued as Catholic priests produced a coast to coast program called "Sound and Sense." The program aired contemporary songs and drew subtle lessons from the lyrics.

I can sympathize with the desire to get out the message of Christ to the person who would not otherwise darken the door of the church building. Those of us who have a faith have struggled with how to share it.

Our concern is that we not come on too strong at first. Thus, it is helpful to look at the example of the Lord in this regard. Jesus was flexible in His teaching methods, able to relate such a simple matter as a drink of water from a well to salvation as He talked with the Samaritan woman, and also able to ask the most searing questions to make the Pharisees deal with their hypocrisy.

The Apostle Paul was also able to adapt to different audiences, beginning his sermons at different points depending on whether the audience was Jewish or Gentile. No matter where he began he always led them to Christ. He might have started off slowly, but he always aimed to the goal of the truth in Christ and revealed to his audience whatever they needed to do to get right with the Lord.

What will convince one person will not necessarily convince another. Some have to be touched in the heart through the example of kindness while others are ready and willing to be bluntly confronted with the truth of their spiritual condition.

So, the question remains: Is it wise and scriptural to use soap operas instead of sermons? The answer is that in a private setting, away from the worship, one must use his own judgement of how to present the truth to another.

For example, in a Bible study, you must decide where to begin. This is a matter of personal conviction and the willingness to start where people are in their religious journey.

But, in the worship service, I must do what is pleasing to the Lord and compare what people today do in the name of religion with the pattern of work of the apostles in the first century church.

On the Day of Pentecost, Peter with the eleven, preached a message so direct that the hearers were cut to the heart. They were truly sorry for their sins and they were baptized to wash them away.

Paul, on the other hand, constantly faced persecution for his powerful preaching. He was successful in planting churches wherever he went. One cannot imagine him using entertainment as a substitute for Biblical preaching.

Seminoles Church of Christ

The key to reaching others is not finding the perfect package in which to wrap the message. Sooner or later, no matter how it is presented, the truth must be known if the messengers are to be faithful. We must never lose faith in the gospel as God's power to save the lost (Romans 1:16).

After-meal cough concerns reader

DEAR DR. GOTT: For the past six months or more, I've begun coughing immediately following a meal. My doctor checked me for congestion, ordered a chest X-ray and CT scan, but found nothing. Do you have any suggestions?

DEAR READER: You got me. Any amount of aspirin can cause stomach upset but I can't for the life of me explain why your elbow would hurt. You must be experiencing a weird idiosyncratic reaction to the drug, which is very unusual. Try using Tylenol as a substitute for aspirin. If you need something for pain. Copyright 1995 NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN. (For information on how to communicate electronically with this columnist and others, contact America Online by calling 1-800-827-8364 ext. 8317.)

DEAR DR. GOTT: When I take an aspirin, even only one, it invariably upsets my stomach and ALWAYS makes my left elbow hurt. Why?

DEAR READER: Yes, I do. In the past few months, more and more medical reports have emphasized the relation between coughing and reflux. Reflux is a strikingly common condition, marked by backwash of stomach acid into the esophagus, leading usually to heartburn and bloating. However, cough may be the only symptom, and it tends to occur after meals (when the stomach contracts) or when a person lies down.

You can test this hypothesis by taking a dose of liquid antacid (Maalox, Gelusil and others) at the conclusion of your meals. If this simple remedy prevents your cough, the problem is solved.

If not, you should have an upper GI series (X-rays of your esophagus and stomach) that may show reflux, thereby establishing the diagnosis. Medicine, such as Prilosec, which reduces the production of stomach acid, may be necessary.

A further possibility is post nasal drip. When mucus from the sinuses drains down the throat, it can cause a violent, dry cough. Your doctor should be able to see such a discharge by looking into your mouth as you say "ahh."

Show my answer to your doctor and see if he agrees. Because hiatal hernia (a weakness where the esophagus joins the stomach) is a frequent cause of reflux, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Hiatal Hernia." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Oscar Wilde enjoyed saying things that sounded outrageous. I particularly like his claim: "I choose my friends for their good looks, my acquaintances for their good characters, and my enemies for their intellects. A man cannot be too careful in the choice of his enemies."

In today's deal, you are faced with a choice of finessees. Is it a matter of guesswork or intellectual assessment?

The contract was four hearts. West guessed well to lead the spade two rather than the diamond two. ("Because my spade suit was stronger, partner.") East adopted an interesting defense. He won the first trick with the spade queen, returned the spade six to his partner's 10 and won the third round of the suit with his ace. Then came a switch to the diamond six. Should South fi-nese now or not?

South finessed the diamond queen, losing the first four tricks when West produced the king. Why was South wrong to take the diamond finesse?

Suppose the diamond finesse works - what then? Right, South draws trumps and takes the club finesse for his contract. Because the club finesse must work, declarer shouldn't risk the diamond finesse. After winning trick four with the diamond ace, South should draw trumps and play a club to dummy's jack. When that wins, he returns to hand with a trump, takes a second club finesse and discards the diamond queen on dummy's club ace.

Don't take a finesse unless you need the extra trick or its loss doesn't endanger your contract.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
September 2, 1995

Try to carefully distinguish between real opportunities and wishful thinking in the year ahead. Wise choices will be reflected in your results.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you and your mate have a major disagreement today, neither of you should expect the other to cave in. Concessions will require lots of time for deliberation. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) This is one of those days when you might spend more time and effort procrastinating than it would take to do what needs to be done.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today you must not only guard against your own extravagance, but also that of a companion who might try to entice you into doing something frivolous.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Establish your priorities today so that you can devote proper time and attention to each matter. If you don't, you won't adequately focus on any of them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Do not try to get others to take care of your responsibilities today. You should take care of them yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You have been prudent in financial matters lately, but today you may feel tempted to throw caution to the wind and spend wildly.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you encounter resistance in pursuit of your objectives today, you might start to slack off instead of pushing forward more vigorously.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You might create unnecessary problems for yourself if you're not careful today. Think before you act. Try to make life easier for yourself, not harder.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Assess your financial position realistically today, and spend accordingly. This is not a time to be extravagant or to borrow from others.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) While trying to get what you want today, you might make a bum deal that benefits another and penalizes you. Be careful!

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It could prove wise today to temper your grandiose schemes with dashes of reality. Strive to maintain a sensible, true perspective.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Commercial proposals presented to you by others today might have some serious flaws that aren't obvious at first glance. Avoid making any commitments.

WWII illustrator recalls work on Army weekly Yank

BY ERIC YEAZ
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — It was 3 a.m. and Art Weithas, a World War II illustrator and photographer, had been waiting in a foxhole to go on patrol with the troops.

In 1945, Weithas was stationed with U.S. forces at Corregidor, an island in the Philippines.

The wait seemed like hours and Weithas dozed off. When he woke up, it was silent. He slowly crawled out of the hole and looked around him. Bodies of dead Japanese soldiers covered the ground.

"I had fallen asleep through the battle," Weithas said. "I didn't contribute a hell of a lot."

Weithas may not have known how to use a gun, but armed with a pen and a camera, he contributed to the war effort by providing images of battlefields and enlisted life for thousands of soldiers stationed throughout the world.

The 84-year-old artist now laughs as he recounts stories of near death at Corregidor.

As art director for Yank, the Army weekly for enlisted men, Weithas spent time in Hawaii, Australia and the Philippines before returning back to New York, his birthplace and home.

Yank was the concept of Egbert White, an advertising executive who had been on the staff of the World War I publication, Stars and Stripes.

The magazine began in the art department of the women's magazine Mademoiselle on March 12, 1942.

A motley crew — a songwriter, an author, a cartoonist, an ad executive, and Weithas, an art director for the Elizabeth Arden account at an advertising agency — worked for 30 hours straight before coming out with a blueprint of the publication.

The blueprint, complete with a full-page pinup, was presented to Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson the next day, everything in the magazine, except for the full-page pinup, met with his approval.

"Mrs. Stimson objected," Weithas said.

But the first edition ultimately ran with the picture. As time passed, the magazine published from 21 different locations around the world, its pinups featuring Betty Grable, Esther Williams and Rita Hayworth reaching 2 million enlisted men.

Weithas said that many of the wartime illustrators would either work directly on the field, take notes and reconstruct the scene later or work from photographs of the scene. Sometimes the drawings were based on the illustrator's memory since there was no time to draw during a battle.

Yank survived for 3 1/2 years and was published for the last time on Dec. 28, 1945. It boasted a full-time staff of 350 members and more than 1,000 stringers who worked as artists and writers.

The pace of Weithas' life has changed as he and his wife, Janet, spend time at their home on the Thimble Islands off Branford, Conn., during part of the summer and the remainder of the year in their New York City apartment.

Over the years Weithas has donated some of his World War II pictures to museums and the armed forces.

One ink sketch, entitled "A Scarf of a Thousand Stitches," shows an American soldier holding a Japanese scarf in his hands. The scarves were made by Japanese women and worn around the waists of soldiers to protect them from harm.

The picture, which was drawn from a photograph Weithas took in 1945, is now a part of the archives at the U.S. Army Center of Military History in Washington D.C.

"Lone Tree on Canton Island," is a watercolor finished in less than a half hour after his arrival on the island located in the Pacific, Weithas said.

The picture of an observation post, stored at the Society of Illustrators in New York City, contains simple strokes and captures the barrenness of the island.

Weithas still paints and is planning for an exhibition in New York City this fall. In his spare time he lectures at museums and works on book ideas.

After the war, Weithas received for his services the Legion of Merit, the fifth highest award given by the Army.

He collaborated with James Jones, the author of "From Here to Eternity," to produce the book "WWII," which recounts the saga of the war with illustrations and photographs. Weithas also compiled the stories of Yank correspondents in the book, "Close to Glory."

Earlier this year, Weithas, a member of the collection committee of the New Britain Museum of American Art in Connecticut, organized an exhibit of wartime art at the museum.

His 12-year-old adopted son, Kenneth, has asked him why he is always writing about the war, Weithas said.

"I say, 'Kenny, it is the only thing I know,'" he said.

The morning after the 1945 foxhole incident in Corregidor, Weithas went on patrol when an enemy soldier threw a grenade. A quick-thinking soldier pushed Weithas out of the way and killed the enemy. The grenade was a dud.

"I think if I'd been killed I would have never forgiven myself," he said.

Overhauled 'American Journal' debuts day after Labor Day

By SCOTT WILLIAMS
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — When "American Journal" opens its third season on the day after Labor Day, rubbing your eyes won't help.

Gone is the gracious, flowing "Kodak moment" opening sequence. Instead it's a nighttime blur of images projected on three-dimensional surfaces and urgent, updated theme music. New slogan: "News at the speed of life."

The new set, where anchor Nancy Glass presides from an S-shaped desk, is post-industrial brick and antiqued I-beams. Glass, whose blond hair, light complexion and pale blue eyes make her a lighting technician's nightmare, paused for reflection when asked to describe the color scheme.

"It's, uh," she paused, reflected, "rust. It's ... a loft. It's sort of lofty, rusty and darkish," she said. Praised as an interviewer, she lauds the new "split-screen editing," juxtaposing footage and interview subject.

Executive producers Sheila Sitomer and Charles Lachman — both co-executive producers of their King World sister show "Inside Edition" — insist the changes in "American Journal" are fundamental.

"These are not cosmetic changes," Lachman said. "We're responding to the marketplace (demand) for a fast-paced, hipper, younger-targeted magazine show ... that doesn't turn off our older viewers but that's designed to attract new viewers."

"What 'American Journal' was before, some people likened to the old Charles Kuralt series," Sitomer added. "It was mild-mannered, a nice show — not exactly the show people would say it's the one they've GOT to see."

When Sitomer and Lachman took over in mid-February, they picked up the pace with more stories and tighter editing, more music, added staff and more of that indefinable thing called "edge."

"We believed that the show was burdened by too soft a feel," Lachman said. "We're getting away from feature-oriented stories and more news-oriented stories that are video-driven. We like to call the show a 'pop news' program. These are the water-cooler stories that people talk about."

"Journal," which debuted in September 1993, was conceived as a bookend for King World's "Inside Edition," and in some cities — Los Angeles, Atlanta, San Diego, and Hartford, Conn. — the two air back-to-back.

Keeping the shows distinctive, fresh and competitive is a major task for both staffs. "Do you know how many O.J. Simpson stories we've done between the two shows? Four hundred, 500," Sitomer said.

Even during the April-May "O.J. burnout" phase, when DNA evidence debates threatened to narcotize even the most devoted trial-watcher, the King World shows prevailed. "We counter-programmed," Sitomer said.

The Simpson trial also figures in the changes "American Journal" has undergone.

"It's been an amazing, amazing story," Lachman said. "It's also no secret that a lot of viewers have gone to cable, and we're anxious to see our universe go back to where it was ... before the trial started."

"We've also noticed that they come back in droves when you have something new on O.J.," Sitomer added. "Despite the fact that we've got a flashy open now, and a whiz-bang set, we're still going to have to find great stories and tell them very well."

There's another change in the syndicated landscape on the horizon. Next year, the 25-year-old Prime Time Access Rule, goes away. The rule limited network affiliates in the Top 50 markets to three hours of network programming in the four prime time hours.

The rule began an era of prosperity for syndicators and shows like "Jeopardy," "Wheel of Fortune" (both King World shows), as well as the syndicated magazines.

"It's going to be a more competitive environment," Lachman acknowledged. "We just have to be better at it. And we will be."

GARAGE SALE GUIDELINES

1. Advertise what people want! Children's clothing, dishes, collectibles, tools, books and antiques are the most popular items.
2. Make it convenient to shop at your garage sale! Be sure there is adequate parking space. Post signs with directions to parking areas. Make arrangements with neighbors.
3. Make it easy to pay! Have plenty of change and a system for handing. Make sure one person is on duty at all times at a controlled location preferably with a calculator or adding machine.
4. Provide prices. Do not make every person ask. "How much is this?" Prices make for quick, friendly sales or a good place for customers to start bargaining.
5. Start an early start. Set up displays the evening before, if possible.
6. Departmentalize. Separate the inexpensive items from the more costly areas. Group furniture, clothing, toys, lawn equipment and other items with similar merchandise.
7. Specialize. Establish one area for "Under $5", another for under $1. Consider having a batch of items that are "FREE with purchase of $5". Remember the youngsters, too. Encourage this with small, low-priced items that are appropriate for this purpose.
8. Time your sale carefully! Have it at a time when most people are at home and unconcerned with special events.
9. Combine your efforts! Incorporate your sale with a neighbor for more variety and greater impact.
10. Be specific! When advertising your sale in the newspaper, list individual items. Don't simply say, "several things available." Each time you list an item, you are broadening the net of potential customers.
11. Be generous! If you have items left over, give them to a charitable organization. If you see that some items are not moving well during the sale, merit them down during the last hours. Remember, the prime reason for holding the sale is to turn your unwanted items into cash!
