County, Cities Brewing Gas Tax Handout Formula

Though there's still no agreement between Seminole County officials and those in the county's seven cities about distribution of possible gas tax revenues, county and city staff officials have begun work on a distribution formula anyway.

County staff and auditors met with staff from the cities today in the first of a series of meetings to set ground rules for a distribution plan.

County commissioners have proposed implementing a 4-cent gasoline tax to be used to finance road construction and other transportation improvements in the county.

But city officials did not agree to the 3-cents-for-the-county, 1-cent-for-the-cities distribution formula proposed by the county so county commissioners are now considering passing the tax without the cities' input and going with a distribution package established by the state.

The state plan calls for the cities and county to count their total expenditures for transportation during the past five years. Each governing body would receive its share of the tax based upon its percentage of the total countywide expenditures.

The cities have submitted rough estimates of their expenditures but County Administrator T. Duncan Rose sees potential problems unless there is a common method for calculating expenditures.

He said the financial staffs from the county and cities are going to have to make a lot of judgements about the law and about accounting methods in totaling the expenditures.

"For example, how much of the Altamonte Springs garage is used for transportation? How much of the public works manager's salary comes from transportation? Should costs of data processing used to support fleet management be included?" he said.

Rose said today's meeting was intended to come to common ground on what will be included in the calculations. If necessary, Rose said, a second meeting will be held Friday.

County commissioners have scheduled a July 26 public hearing to decide whether to levy a gas tax. Three commissioners support a gas tax but they need a fourth vote to pass either a 3- or 4-cent tax. Commissioners Sandra Glenn, Barbara Christensen and Robert Sturm have endorsed the tax plan. Commissioner Robert G. "Bud" Feather is opposed to the tax and Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff plans to make his decision at the public hearing. Only three votes are needed to pass either a 1- or 2-cent gas tax. Each penny of gas tax would produce about $850,000 a year for the county.

Rose said county officials want to encourage the city officials to begin their calculations now, even though they won't know for certain whether the tax will be implemented until the public hearing.

If a tax is approved, the county has until July 30 to notify the state. Rose wants the figures from the cities to be compiled by Aug. 15 so the information can be sent to the state by the end of August. If approved, the gas tax would go into effect Sept. 1.

Tax Drop

$9.2 Million Budget Packs Less Pinch For Sanford Wallets

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

The Sanford City Commission, after three intensive workshops, has given its tentative approval to a $9,225,334 budget for city operation in fiscal 1983-84, beginning Oct. 1.

The budget calls for a tax rate of $4.07 per $1,000 assessed value, down 30 cents from the current year's $4.37.

Although the proposed $9.2 million budget is up from the $8.5 million called for in 1982-83, the city expects to generate the extra revenues from fees and additional property added to the tax rolls in the past year.

The commission instructed City Manager W.E. "Pete" Knowles to incorporate minor changes made by the commissioners during the workshops in Knowles' recommended budget for the new year.

And Knowles lauded several department heads for their work substantiating each requested allocation while preparing budgets. He noted Assistant City Manager Steve Harriett's work, especially in his role as acting utility director, in honing the budgets of those departments. He added that the fire department budget as submitted to him was in good shape and that Jim Jernigan, parks and recreation director, recognizing upcoming problems with Proposition 1 had not included major capital improvement projects.

Early in the trio of sessions, Knowles stressed to the commissioners that the passage in the November, 1984 of a constitutional amendment, dubbed "Proposition 1," limiting the ability of city, county and state government to raise fees and taxes is practically a certainty. Thus, he said the city should not allocate funds for major projects this year which the city probably won't be able to fund after the limitation goes into effect in the 1985 fiscal year.

The proposed constitutional amendment, Knowles has said, requires city, county and state government to operate with the same revenues it had in 1980.

At the concluding session in the series Friday, both Commissioners David Farr and Milton Smith pushed for the addition to the police department budget of more than $2,000 for a second copying machine.

Farr said the current copier in the police department produces an average of 6,000 copies per month, making it inconvenient for some of the department to use it when necessary.

Knowles pointed out, however, that 6,000 copies is not too many for one machine and that the problem can be worked out by scheduling it properly.

Knowles also noted that the one copying machine at the police department is owned by the department's police benevolent organization and fees at the rate of $3 charged to the public for copies from that machine go into the police benevolent association fund.

"That could not be done by a city-owned copier," Knowles said, since copies made at public expense can only be sold at a price reflecting actual cost.

The budget document itself is more than an inch thick, weighs about three pounds and contains 235 pages.

Among the items gone over thoroughly by the Commission was a proposed 3.5 percent cost of living raise for the city's 276 employees in the new year. While Farr wanted the proposed increase either eliminated or skewed in some fashion to grant the lower salaried employees more money, his colleagues did not agree and the raise remained as recommended.

The Commission is expected to set a public hearing for 7 p.m., Sept. 12 on the proposed budget at its July 25 meeting.

Thrill Of Victory

Mobile Home Law To Get Scrutiny

State Sen. Richard Langley, R-Clermont, has been appointed by Senate president, Curtis Peterson, D-Lakeland, to serve on the newly created Mobile Home Study Commission.

Langley, a member of the Seminole County legislative delegation, was one of the prime sponsors of mobile home legislation passed by the 1983 session of the Florida Legislature. The creation of the study commission is one of the provisions of that law.

Under the new law, mobile home owners may form an incorporated association for the purpose of purchasing their mobile home park. The articles of incorporation must provide the association with certain powers, such as the power to acquire and operate a mobile home park, Langley said.

The right to purchase a mobile home park under certain conditions is granted to the association when the park owner offers to sell the park. In addition, if the park owner receives a bona fide offer to purchase that the park owner intends to consider or make a counter offer to, he has an obligation to notify the tenants of the park, Langley said.

The tenants must be told of the offer and the terms and conditions upon which the park owner would sell the park. The park owner, however, is under no obligation to sell the park to the association.

The Mobile Home Study Commission will be composed of two members of the Senate, two members of the House of Representatives, the attorney general or his designee, and four members appointed by the governor, two of whom will represent the mobile home park owners or the manufactured housing industry and two of whom will be owners of mobile homes located on rented land.

The Commission will consider rent increases, the displacement of park residents by force of sale, zoning, and advertising and leasing of mobile home lots of space.

Dems Tend Business; GOP To Picnic

A Casselberry official and an employee of the Seminole County school system have been elected to state Democratic Party office.

Elected state Democratic committeeman was Charles Glackcock, mayor of Casselberry. Mrs. Cuy Westerfield of Oviedo was elected state Democratic committeewoman. The terms of office for both will expire in March, 1984 when the local committee will have new elections.

The two are replacing Troy Piland of Winter Springs and Mrs. Dolores Vickers of Altamonte Springs, who resigned recently because of the press of private business.

The elections were held at a meeting of the Seminole County Democratic Executive Committee Thursday night.

Meanwhile, the Seminole County Young Republican Club is planning a family picnic day Sunday at Camp Heronwood, off Red Bug Road.

The picnic will be held from 12:30 to 5 p.m. and admission is $5 per couple or $3 per single. Families are encouraged to bring their children.

Cold salads and hot dogs will be served. Events of the day will include water sports, volleyball and a dunking machine.

Local politicians will be available for dunking, said Patti Brantley, Young Republicans vice president.

McCollum Aide To Meet Public

A representative from U.S. Rep. Bill McCollum's Winter Park office will meet with persons who need congressional assistance or have questions about matters relating to the federal government from 9:30 a.m. to 11 a.m., Wednesday, in the county commission chambers of the Seminole County courthouse.

Those interested in talking with the Altamonte Springs Republican's staff representative may go to the courthouse at the appointed time. No previous appointment is necessary.

Odor, Noise Plague Iron Bridge Area

Michael Beha
Herald Staff Writer

Jeanne Heidelmeier can tell by the smell when she's close to home. That's because she lives near the Iron Bridge Regional Sewage Treatment Plant near Oviedo.

"I'm working out of the area now," said Mrs. Heidelmeier, a photographer who travels throughout Central Florida. "But I know when I get close to home, I smell it. The air is different."

The odor that tells Mrs. Heidelmeier she's home smells like burnt chicken feathers and it comes from sludge dryers at the sewage plant.

Orlando officials who supervise the plant's operation have acknowledged odor and noise problems at the plant. In May, they installed caps on conditioning ponds to eliminate odors coming from them. They also promised to do something to stop the smells coming from the dryers and to stop the noise problems which kept some neighbors from sleeping.

Mrs. Heidelmeier and James and Adrienne Jones say the caps have eliminated the sickening smell that used to come from the conditioning ponds. But the other problems persist.

"The sludge drying odor has continued to be a nuisance. It's as bad now as it ever was," Jones said. "They promised us that both problems would be solved by Memorial Day. They have not kept their word on that part."

'They have not kept their word...'

Officials in Orlando's Public Works Department were unavailable for comment because they were in meetings with the contractor who built the sludge dryer to find out what the contractor planned to do to correct the odor problem.

One option the contractor has is to do nothing, which could lead to a lawsuit by Orlando and could delay a solution to the odor problem even further.

Orlando Public Works Director Bob Haven told Seminole County commissioners earlier this year that if no satisfactory solution could be found to the odor problem the dryer would be closed down and sludge would be trucked from the plant.

Bids on trucking the sludge out of the plant will be opened Tuesday.

Mrs. Jones said the noise problem has not been dealt with either. She said the plant emits a constant high-pitched whine which makes it hard to sleep.

Foul smells, neighbors charge, are still emanating from the Iron Bridge Regional Sewage Treatment Plant near Oviedo.

Haven promised commissioners that the sources of the noise would be enclosed within a shed of some sort. Jones said any effort to eliminate the noise has been unsuccessful.

"I'm still quite upset," he said. "The bottom line is they've not kept their word."

The plant was completed in February of 1982 but all the areas using the plant weren't connected to the plant until early this year. The plant's neighbors have complained about the noise and odors virtually since the plant was opened.

Orlando officials have asked the county to approve plan which would allow the plant to process 4 million more gallons of sewage per day while discharging the same amount of nutrients into the Little Econlockhatchee River.

Seminole County commissioners have stipulated that the noise and odor problems be dealt with before the 24 million gallon per day plant is permitted to expand. Consideration of the plan has been delayed until December to allow Orlando officials time to correct the problems.

In the meantime, residents are learning to live with the smell and the noise.

Mrs. Heidelmeier is resigned that everything which could be done has been done to eliminate the problems.

"I think they're doing everything they can. It was a mistake in the first place," she said.

"It's impossible to turn back the clock and say I wish it wasn't there — but I wish it wasn't there."

But odors have been reduced, plant officials say, by these caps which were placed atop the conditioning ponds at the plant.

U.S. Lawmakers Studying Covert War In Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Four American congressmen traveled to Nicaragua to investigate "the secret war" against the Central American government as the House gears up for a vote on cutting U.S. aid to anti-Sandinista rebels.

The congressmen plan to return to Washington in time for next week's congressional hearings on Central America, including a closed session Tuesday to hear classified information on leftist insurgent movements in Central America.

The Reagan administration, accusing Nicaragua's Sandinista leaders of arming leftist rebellions in the region, last year authorized covert funding of rebels trying to topple the Nicaraguan government. The House is scheduled to vote next week on whether to continue that aid.

Kissinger To Head Panel?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Relying on the tactic he used to defuse fights on Social Security reform and the MX missile, President Reagan hopes a bipartisan commission — headed by Henry Kissinger — will extinguish the firestorm that has engulfed his policy on Central America.

Administration officials said Reagan planned to use a speech today to the International Longshoremen's Association in Florida to signal his intention to name a blue-ribbon panel to recommend solutions on how best to overcome the underlying economic and social problems that have fostered political instability in the region.

The Washington Post reported that former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger will be named by Reagan to head the commission.

WEATHER

NATIONAL REPORT: Thunderstorms packing up to 100 mph winds battered buildings, destroyed power lines and swept away cars from the Plains to Pennsylvania, and a heat wave from the Mississippi to the East Coast steamed into its fifth day today. Seven deaths were blamed on the storms and the heat. Tornadoes in North Dakota and Michigan caused minor damage Sunday. Baseball-size hail pounded eastern Wyoming, winds gusting to near 90 mph damaged buildings and tore down power lines in Nebraska, and 100 mph winds struck Tennessee near the Nashville airport. Three people died and three were injured when an ambulance crashed into a car on a Pennsylvania highway coated with water by Sunday's storms. A 64-year-old woman died of a heart attack and eight people were injured when a storm swept the Michigan International Speedway, delaying the start of the Michigan 500 Indy-car race. High winds blew a wood sun canopy off the roof of the main grandstand. In New York City, where temperatures reached 94 degrees, an 87-year-old Queens man died when "excessive heat and humidity" aggravated a heart condition. His wife, also 87, was hospitalized suffering severe dehydration. On Saturday, a boy returning from a church picnic in Milwaukee was swept away in a flash flood in a city creek, and a young woman in Oregon died in a head-on car crash during a heavy downpour. The National Weather Service said there was little hope of relief from the heat wave in the eastern United States today. In Nebraska, winds gusting to near 90 mph Sunday night in the panhandle and the western part of the state, accompanied by rain that fell in sheets. At Mullen, a Hooker County sheriff's dispatcher reported "the power is out, trees are down and some sheds were blown away." High winds knocked off house roofs and blew out windows in the Ogallala, Roscoe and Brule areas. Near Valentine, Neb., heavy rains pushed the Niobrara River near flood stage. Trees damaged up a creek flowing into the Niobrara at a campground. When the natural dam burst, several cars were swept away. Thunderstorm winds blew out windows in north central Wisconsin in Clark County and unroofed a building at Franklin, Ind., south of Indianapolis. Storms left thousands of western Pennsylvania residents without power and turned out the lights for 13,500 utility customers in Virginia suburbs of Washington, D.C. Authorities said lightning struck a number of homes, but no injuries were reported.

Mondale Leads In Congressional Backing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Vice President Walter Mondale leads all Democratic presidential candidates in the race for endorsements from members of Congress, but remains far short of a

Walter Mondale
...doing better than all his five rivals combined majority, a United Press International survey shows.

One year before the Democratic National Convention, most Capitol Hill politicians are still uncommitted to any Democratic presidential candidate.

But with the support or endorsement of 61 of the 321 congressional Democrats, Mondale is doing better than all his five rivals combined, the UPI survey revealed. The challenge will be for him to hold the support.

The endorsements have special importance, because under new party rules House and Senate Democrats will choose 188 of their number as delegates to the party's national convention — all free to vote their conscience.

That will be one of largest blocs of delegates to be chosen to attend the convention.

More important, these will be no ordinary delegates. As Richard Moe, the man in charge of Mondale's year-old, extensive congressional canvassing effort, put it:

"These members will have enormous influence and prestige at the convention, beyond their mere votes. All have influence and standing in their districts and with their state delegations."

Mondale considers that so important that he campaigned extensively for Democrats, then had Moe — who served as the former vice president's chief of staff — assemble a staff of 20 former

White House and Capitol Hill employees to seek congressional support.

No one disputes the importance of the endorsements, but there is a catch. House members, concerned about their own re-elections in 1984, could turn fickle if they change their minds about which candidate would have the longest coattails to ride.

Backers of Sen. John Glenn of Ohio are counting on him to be perceived at the convention as having a better chance than Mondale to beat President Reagan.

"In a brokered convention, the importance of having a winning ticket in a general election will be an influential factor," said Michael Colopy, who heads Glenn's congressional operation.

In addition to the 80 members publicly supporting Mondale, it is clear that another five or more members privately support him. Some allies of Mondale place his total support as high as 70 or 80.

By contrast, Glenn has only 19 members either pledged or strongly leaning to him. One source close to the Glenn campaign says that another three dozen members lean to Glenn and some of those will endorse him before the year is out.

Other candidates have made less extensive campaigns to win congressional support.

"Our efforts are going into New Hampshire and Iowa, where the early delegate selections will take place," said Greg Walker, a staff member at Florida Gov. Reubin Askew's headquarters in Miami.

All of Askew's 11 congressional supporters are from Florida, and some members there regard him as no more than a favorite son.

The staff of Sen. Alan Cranston is also concentrating on Iowa and New Hampshire. Cranston has 13 endorsements, all but one from his home state of California. But Mondale, leaning on Cranston in his home turf, has taken the endorsements of 10 of California's 28 House Democrats.

Other candidates also rely heavily or entirely on support from their home state delegations: Sen. Gary Hart's five endorsements include his three fellow Colorado Democrats and Sen. Ernest Hollings' three endorsements are from his home state of South Carolina.

Mondale's endorsements are primarily from members in the large, industrial northern states that he campaigned for in 1980 and 1982, with little support from the South, where a significant number of the early primaries will be held.

According to one of Mondale's few southern supporters, Rep. Rick Boucher, D-Va., "Glenn is probably in the lead among Democratic policymakers in the state."

Reagan Campaign Aide Reveals Names In Pilfered Papers Case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI has talked to two GOP campaign backers named by a Reagan camp volunteer as the sources of the 1980 memo he said described a Carter staff meeting to prepare for the presidential debate, sources say.

The sources also said the volunteer, Wayne Valls, has turned over the two names to a House subcommittee, headed by Rep. Donald Albosta, D-Mich., that is conducting its own investigation into how the Carter papers ended up in the Reagan campaign.

In the meantime, Albosta's post office and civil service subcommittee hoped to come to final terms with the White House today on an agreement that would provide the panel with access to Reagan's campaign files stored in a California library.

The sources said Sunday the FBI has interviewed both men — John Lenczowski, now a National Security Council staff member, and Robert Leahy, a Washington public relations executive.

According to officials familiar with the congressional probe, Valls' disclosures did little to identify possible Carter administration officials who may have leaked inside information.

Lenczowski, Leahy and Valls could not be reached for comment. But The Washington Post quoted Leahy as saying he occasionally provided Lenczowski with information and ideas to be passed along to the Reagan campaign but as denying he provided the substance of the memo Valls forwarded to top Reagan campaign officials.

Sources told UPI that copies of two memos Leahy wrote to Lenczowski have been made available to the House panel and the FBI.

Valls has told investigators that he received from Lenczowski a one-page, 10 point memo entitled "Proposed Carter Tactics for Debate and Campaign Advertising" and that he did not know its author.

Before passing the document to senior campaign officials David Gerger, now White House director of communications, and James Baker, now White House chief of staff, Valls attached a cover memo dated October 21, 1980.

It said, "These notes are based on a Carter debate staff brainstorming session — middle level types — nothing spectacular, but interesting — from a source intimately connected to a Carter debate staff member. Reliable. I gave a copy to Jim Baker."

Valls has said he told authorities the source of the memo and declined further comment.

Poland Getting Tough New Law

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Secret legislation being prepared to replace martial law will give Poland's Communist regime the most powerful legal arsenal it has ever possessed to crush political dissent.

Parliamentary sources who made an advance text of the bill available Sunday said it would be passed this week as a prelude to government declarations ending more than 19 months of military rule.

The proposed new law, a collection of amendments to the penal code and regulations on the operation of industrial plants and schools, effectively will rule out any legal opposition activities in Poland, including the revival of the Solidarity union, in the near future.

The legislation was listed on parliament's agenda last week as a series of temporary regulations "concerning the socio-economic crisis." It was believed the bill's provisions would remain in effect at least through 1985, however.

The new law specifically provides for up to three years imprisonment for anyone "active in an organization which was disbanded or outlawed and which still operates illegally" — a clear reference to Solidarity and other banned groups.

Altamonte Springs Pilot Unhurt In Plane Crash

The pilot of a small private plane escaped injury Sunday when his plane flipped over after making a forced landing in a cow pasture near Chulouta.

Darrell James Leidigh, 53, of 225 Robin St., Altamonte Springs, said he was preparing to land his Piper Cub at the Seminole Flying Ranch at about 11 a.m. and had throttled down to lose altitude.

Leidigh said when he tried to give the plane more throttle the engine failed to respond and he was forced to land about 1 1/4 miles from the landing strip in a cow pasture about two miles south of State Road 419 near Lockwood Road.

After touching down, the plane traveled about 90 feet on the ground, struck a small stand of palm trees and travelled about 65 feet further before turning upside down in 1 1/2 feet of water in a swampy area.

Damage to the plane appeared to be minor, according to a Seminole County deputy sheriff's report.

CAR STOLEN

A 1964 white Chevrolet Corvair, valued at $1,250, was taken from the parking lot of the Sanford Auto Auction on W. First Street between 1:30 and 9 a.m. Saturday.

The thief backed the auto into a fence to get around another car parked in front of the stolen vehicle, according to a Seminole County sheriff's department report.

Russell E. Coulette, 60, of Auburndale, the owner of the stolen car, said the thief may have "hot wired" his auto to start it.

A second car, parked on a roadway near the Sanford Auto Auction, was burglarized and damaged to the tune of $650 between 5 p.m. Friday and 11:15 a.m. Saturday.

Deputies said that a $150 stereo radio was stolen from a 1976 Monte Carlo owned by Thomas Carter, 708 Shepard Court, Winter Springs.

The thief also broke two side windows in order to enter the car and did $100 damage to the driver's door.

Kathy M. Henry, 16, of 708 Wynn Drive, Sunland, said she was sleeping in the family room of her home when she was awakened at about 1 a.m. Saturday by the sound of a car. She looked out a window and saw a small light blue car driving away with possibly two occupants.

As he approached the building, Leonard said he heard glass breaking and saw a man run from the building toward a wooded area.

Leonard said he yelled, "Police! Freeze!" but the man continued to run and the officer fired one shot from his service revolver.

Winter Springs police officers with a K-9 unit joined the chase and a suspect found in the wooded area was arrested.

Donald Lorenzo Thomas of 311 Salina Dr., Orlando, was charged with burglary and resisting arrest without violence. He was booked into Seminole County jail in lieu of $5,000 bond.

WORLD IN BRIEF

2 Lebanese Fatally Shot; Stories Clash

United Press International

Israeli troops opened fire on a car southeast of Beirut, killing two Lebanese civilians, but authorities in Israel and Lebanon today gave contradictory versions of the incident.

An army spokesman in Tel Aviv said Israeli soldiers opened fire Sunday after gunmen tried to crash through the roadblock near Ein Ainoub, less than 2 miles southwest of Souk Al Gharb or roughly 10 miles southeast of Beirut in the Shouf Mountains.

Israeli authorities said two unidentified men inside the car were killed. Two of the seven Israeli soldiers were seriously wounded when the gunmen returned the fire but the other five Israelis were only slightly hurt, an army spokesman said.

A Lebanese police report, however, said the two people, including an elderly invalid, were killed after an ambush near the village not during an exchange of fire with Israeli soldiers.

Pentecostals To Leave

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet authorities granted a family of 15 Siberian Pentecostals permission to emigrate, ending a saga that included a five-year stay for seven of them in the U.S. Embassy basement.

Diplomatic sources said Sunday the Chmykhalov family had arrived in Moscow and might be en route to the West as early as today, 22 days after another family of Siberian Pentecostals left the Soviet Union.

In June 1978, Maria Chmykhalov and her son Timofei joined five members of the Vashchenko family — all of them from the Siberian city of Chernogorsk — and pushed past Soviet guards at the U.S. Embassy to seek American help in leaving their homeland.

They were quickly dubbed "the Siberian Seven" by Western media and took up residence in a basement room in the embassy compound, little realizing their stay would last almost five years.

The Chmykhalovs are devout Pentecostal Christians whose religion conflicts with officially atheist Soviet laws, particularly in the areas of military service and education.

Mideast Signals Crossed

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel and Jordan denied that Hubert Humphrey III of Minnesota, the son of the late vice president, carried a message from King Hussein hinting that direct peace talks between the two countries are possible.

Humphrey, the Democratic attorney general of Minnesota, said Sunday that Begin received Hussein's message, which indicated a revolt within the Palestine Liberation Organization could prompt Hussein to join the Middle East peace process.

Finally, Jordan late Sunday said reports of a peace talk message conveyed by Humphrey were "mere nonsense and have no basis whatsoever."

FLORIDA IN BRIEF

Homesick Cuban Family Hijacks Jet To Havana

TAMPA (UPI) — Three members of a Cuban family who hijacked a Miami-to-Tampa Delta jetliner with 108 people aboard to Havana apparently were homesick and unhappy with life in the United States.

Once on the ground at Havana Sunday, the three men were joined by two women, a young man in his late teens or early 20s, and a weeping girl clutching a life-sized baby doll.

One of the hijackers held a small knife to the throat of a stewardess while another sprayed fire around the rear of the plane by directing an aerosol hair spray across a flame as a make-shift torch.

No one was injured in what was the third hijacking this month and the seventh this year involving planes either heading to or from southern Florida.

It was the second plane commandeered in 10 days since U.S. and Cuban officials warned that sky pirates could face up to 50 years in Cuban jails.

New Study Claims

Planned Coal-Fired Utility Plants Could Increase Florida's Acid Rain Pollution

By United Press International

The first study to positively link acid rain with sulfur dioxide emissions warns that a string of new coal-burning utility plants planned for Florida could trigger a rise in the state's contaminated rainfall.

The study, prepared by the National Academy of Sciences' National Research Council, admits there is not enough known about acid rain to determine whether a cutback in sulfur dioxide would decrease the amount in specific areas.

But it says the only known way to significantly reduce acid rain pollution would be to cut back sulfur dioxide emissions from all power plants and industries east of the Mississippi River, where the problem is the most severe.

The eight scientists who prepared the report said that, for the first time, they found a direct correlation between the amount of sulfur dioxide emitted into the atmosphere and the amount of acid rain produced.

In Florida, the issue now is becoming more controversial as the number of coal-burning plants increases.

There are 18 coal-fired plants in operation now, but nine others are in the works — either having won approval by state officials or already under construction.

In addition, three others are being planned but have not yet been approved, and six other oil-powered facilities will be converted to coal by 1993.

In the Northeastern United States, where coal-burning plants are common, acid rain has been blamed for the deaths of hundreds of lakes.

Rainfall in Florida has become more acidic during the last 10 years but the phenomenon has not been considered a serious problem in the state — partially

'We don't have the same problem as in the Northeast, but every one-point drop in pH means a 10 times increase in acidity.'—Eric Allen, University of Florida environmental scientist because coal was not a major fuel.

Acid rain occurs when pollutants in the air combine to create sulfuric and nitric acid in the atmosphere and then fall to the ground in raindrops.

This Much Ado About Nothing?

The "Much Ado About Nothing" tag that President Reagan earlier put on the briefing-paper affair has become "A Midsummer Night's Dream" for the media, enlivening an otherwise dull season in Washington.

Not to push the Shakespeare-play analogy too far, the growing furor is well on the way to becoming "The Tempest" of 1983.

Revelations that Reagan campaign staff members used briefing papers from the Carter White House for background during the 1980 presidential debates began with an anecdotal reference in a book on the Reagan Presidency by Time White House correspondent Laurence Barret.

This obscure historical footnote was sufficient to whip Washington correspondents and columnists into a sort of fever, not unlike sharks frenzied by a suggestion of blood. During a recent prime-time television press conference, reporters brushed aside important economic and international issues and besieged the president with question after question about who took the Carter briefing materials.

Genuinely surprised at the outcry, Mr. Reagan has taken his stand firmly on two basic points: He knew nothing of any surreptitious use of Carter papers, and he has asked the Department of Justice, including the FBI, to get to the bottom of it. He is not deviating from his position, which we think is a correct one. It would be wrong for him to yield to pressure or expediency and dismiss implicated White House staff members or take any other definitive action until the Justice Department's investigation is completed.

Meanwhile, congressional committees and investigators are in full cry along with the Washington press corps and new revelations daily escalate the episode. The most serious development for the administration, as columnist William Safire points out, has been the charge by White House Chief of Staff James Baker that William Casey, director of the CIA, accepted and transmitted the purloined Carter papers. Casey denies knowledge of any such thing.

But Daniel Jones, a Reagan campaign volunteer, now tells the press he sent memoranda from an insider in the Carter White House to top Reagan officials, including Casey and Edwin Meese, presidential counselor.

And there is another significant memorandum implicating Jim Baker without benefit of William Casey. Among the papers turned over by the president to the Justice Department was a memo to David Gergen, director of White House communications, from Wayne Valls, a former Reagan campaign aide. It read:

"These notes are based on a Carter debate staff brainstorming session — middle-level types — nothing spectacular, but interesting — from a source intimately connected to a Carter debate staff member. Reliable. I gave a copy to Jim Baker."

To be sure, other such revelations will be forthcoming until this latest touch of national dyspepsia runs its course. When that happens, some important White House heads may roll, but, as of now, it appears unlikely that anyone will go to jail. This is no Watergate; as far as we know, no one broke into the White House. The papers appear to have come from Carter defectors for what consideration we are yet to learn. The briefing paper scandal is messy and it has to be an embarrassment to Reagan and his administration. Worse than that, it tends to erode the moral authority that has been one of the president's chief strengths.

The sooner, therefore, things are brought to a head and resolved, the better.

VIEWPOINT Industry Policy Needed

By E.G. Jefferson
Chairman

E.I. du Pont de Nemours and Co.

(Editor's Note: This is the second in a series stressing the importance of an American industrial policy. It is an excerpt by an address delivered to a recent international petro-chemical conference, distributed by the USIC Writers Group.)

The belief that our core industries are inevitably destined to decline strikes me as a case of running away from our problems rather than facing up to them.

While there is no universally accepted definition of a core industry, let's look at four commonly understood to belong in that category: steel, autos, machinery and the complex of man-made fibers, textiles and apparel.

These four industries alone account directly for about 36 percent of U.S. manufacturing production and about 41 percent of manufacturing employment — more than eight million jobs. If we imported most of the products of just these four industries, the impact on our balance of payments would be disastrous. Moreover, all of these industries are important to national security, and we should have learned from recent experiences with oil supplies that we cannot afford the strategic risk of being over-dependent on foreign sources.

We should also recognize the importance of core industries to expanding sectors of our economy. For example, feedstocks derived from petroleum are essential to production of industrial organic chemicals that serve as major ingredients for many sophisticated products, including pharmaceuticals, crop protection chemicals, and advanced engineering plastics and fibers.

While service industries are growing, they cannot survive with an eroding industrial base. Without strong agriculture and manufacturing industries, who will use the services?

We need to establish a durable industrial policy — bipartisan in development and support and consistent in application. I am not talking about national industrial planning. I do not mean an industrial policy in which government is empowered to choose between winners and losers in the marketplace; that kind of industrial policy would not be effective. But healthy skepticism about government's ability to pick winners and losers should not lead us to believe government has no role in strengthening the nation's industrial base. Let me then suggest what I believe should be some principle elements of an industrial policy for the U.S.

The realities of international competition demand that we encourage research and development and engineering work pointed towards better manufacturing methods and better and more advanced products of the highest possible quality.

Debategate Hounds Shun Vesco 'Fix'

WASHINGTON — The bloodhounds of the press are in hot pursuit of the mole who slipped Jimmy Carter's political secrets to the opposition during the 1980 presidential election campaign.

Let us suppose that President Reagan should become personally implicated in the scandal, that criminal charges should be laid before a grand jury, that an accused accomplice should be rewarded with a presidential appointment, that he should fail two lie-detector tests and that the president's personal attorney should counsel a witness against being "too open with the FBI." How the bloodhounds would bay!

Then let's say that incriminating documents should be withheld from the grand jury, that jurors should accuse the prosecutors of protecting White House witnesses and that the grand jury foreman should charge the Justice Department with "duplicitous," "manipulation" and "cover-up" to protect the Reagan administration. What a howl reporters would raise!

Finally, let's say that the grand jury should want to bring indictments but that the Justice Department should refuse to prosecute. Does anyone doubt that the news hounds would holler to high heaven?

This startling scenario is not wild imagination; such events have already occurred. But the president who became

Because a Casselberry car dealer cared, many animals have been adopted from Seminole County Animal Control which might otherwise have been destroyed.

Jim Dever, general manager of Clark Chrysler-Plymouth, paid for shots and other fees associated with adoption of animals from the animal control compound at the county's Five Points complex during April.

According to animal control officer Robert McIntosh, 196 dogs and cats were adopted out of the compound during April at a cost of $5,997.

Additionally, McIntosh said, Dever donated a stainless steel cat cage which can hold nine animals. The cage cost $2,173.

"Through the efforts of Mr. Dever, animals that would normally have been destroyed were adopted and given good homes and through the donation of the stainless steel cages, Animal Control has an increased area for holding other animals to be adopted," McIntosh said. "Our thanks and gratitude go out to Mr. Dever for the help and love he has shown for the animals at the shelter."

Seminole County's public schools got a pat on the back recently from the parents of two Idyllwild Elementary School students.

Mr and Mrs. W.M. Messer III, of 131 Alden Drive, Sanford, wrote former Idyllwild principal Norma Ragdale to tell her that after having serious doubts about public schools when their children began school two years ago their fears have been dispelled.

"We wanted you to know that we couldn't be more pleased with the teachers that our children have had or with the educational programs at Idyllwild. It is very evident to us that the staff at Idyllwild is very concerned with maintaining the highest educational standards," the Messers said.

JEFFREY HART Purloined Carter Papers

Nothing is trivial once it has been cranked up into a media plus political event, and in my judgment President Reagan will have to deal with the current flap over Carter's debate-briefing book and other materials as severely as Dwight Eisenhower dealt with Sherman Adams.

I will discuss this in my next column, but just to keep things in ethical perspective I would like to recall some conveniently forgotten history.

The following comes from my recent book on the 1950s, and the short section is entitled "You can steal the Presidency":

"Robert Finch sat next to the pool at the Newporter Inn in Newport Beach, California, his gin and tonic on the table beside him. Finch, an ex-marine, had been close to Richard Nixon for years. He was now Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. Along with Len Hall, he had been co-manager of the losing 1960 presidential campaign against Kennedy. The two-headed structure was a horror, he reflected. Finch was tanned, physically powerful, Californian. Women were walking around in bikinis, and in those see-through plastic knee-pants that required colorful underwear. Nixon was down the beach at San Clemente, surviving some crisis in the Middle East.

"Without Illinois and Texas," Finch said, "Kennedy would have been down the tubes. He needed Missouri, too, which was very close, but we didn't think he stole that."

"Stole?"

"Well, you can read all about it in Earl Mazo. Kennedy carried Illinois by less than 9,000 votes, out of a total of nearly 5 million. Mayor Daley's vacant lot and tombstone votes, plus the votes of the mafia-dominated wards, made the difference. Nixon really WON Illinois. After the voting, they threw the machines in the river.

"The Lyndon Johnson crowd was in total control of the Texas voting. They had control at every level, from county clerk up to the state Board of Canvassers, which had the final say. Ballot-box stuffing was commonplace. Some precincts reported more votes for Kennedy-Johnson than they had total population. In one district, 86 people voted. Kennedy-Johnson got 148 votes, Nixon-Lodge 24.

"Earl Mazo, who was national political correspondent for the New York Herald Tribune, went to Texas, and he was appalled by the extent of the ballot fraud. Paper ballots — half the vote in Texas in 1960 — were thrown out in huge numbers on technicalities. There were always more technical violations in Nixon districts. Mazo did some simple arithmetic. It indicated that 100,000 Kennedy-Johnson votes simply did not exist. But they carried the state by 46,000 votes, and that was the ball game."

ROBERT WALTERS

A Toothless Oversight

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The imposing array of federal investigative and law enforcement agencies supposedly protecting the integrity of the Navy's budget ought to pose a formidable barrier to fraud, waste and abuse.

There's the Defense Department Inspector General, Defense Criminal Investigative Service, Defense Audit Service, Defense Contract Audit Agency, Naval Audit Service, Naval Investigative Service and two separate Navy commands responsible for contract oversight and administration.

If a major violation of the Navy's procurement policies is suspected, both the Justice Department and the FBI can be called upon to conduct a full-scale criminal probe of the case.

Notwithstanding that awesome lineup, the Navy frequently has been bilked by its contractors and victimized by the use of inferior materials, defective equipment, bad workmanship and fraudulent schemes perpetrated by those who supply the service with everything from paper clips to super-ships.

The ineptitude of those ostensibly guarding the Navy's budget was most recently illustrated by a series of events involving the shipyard which during the past decade has provided more ships to the Navy than any other contractor, the Ingalls Shipbuilding Division of Litton Industries.

Back in 1977, a federal grand jury issued a criminal indictment against the Pascagoula, Miss., shipyard, alleging that it defrauded the federal government out of $37 million in connection with Navy submarine contracts.

For years, however, the Justice Department made no effort whatever to prosecute the case. Earlier this year, a federal judge dismissed the suit and criticized the department for its "conscious, intentional... (and) deliberate" delay.

When an employee fired at Ingalls alleged the shipyard systematically mischarged work performed under Navy contracts, the Naval Investigative Service prepared a two-page summary of those charges — and asked Ingalls to conduct an investigation.

"Not surprisingly, the company gave itself a clean bill of health," said the staff of the permanent investigations subcommittee of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

The Defense Contract Audit Agency maintains a full-time audit staff at Ingalls and has prepared more than 1,300 audit reports on the shipyard's practices during the past decade.

But when one of those audits revealed that 58 percent of all labor costs in one shipyard section had been improperly charged to the Navy, DCAA took no follow-up action.

No fewer than 30 DCAA reports in recent years have cited problems associated with unauthorized allocation of employee time, and some of those reports have projected losses to the government ranging from $300,000 to $3 million.

The typical remedial action proposed by DCAA, however, was that Ingalls should "re-emphasize the importance of accurate time keeping."

A Senate subcommittee, chaired by Sen. William V. Roth, R-Dele., began investigating reports that the fraudulent allocation of workers' time at Ingalls was both systematic and pervasive. DCAA came to the shipyard's defense and insisted there was no serious problem.

The lack of aggressive investigation and enforcement is hardly limited to Ingalls. Although DCAA annually conducts about 60,000 audits relating to Defense Department contracts, only 0.06 percent of those inspections result in referrals to investigative agencies.

When the criminal investigators do get a case, it's usually not a very important one. A recent study conducted by the General Accounting Office found that 62 percent of all fraud cases handled by Defense Department criminal probes involved alleged losses of $500 or less while only 4 percent involved claimed losses of $5,000 or more.

Roth says he is committed to taking "a real hard look at how the Navy contracts and supervises shipbuilding at private facilities throughout the country."

That effort ought to be expanded to include the entire Defense Department.

appointment with his boyhood buddy, Richard Harden, who was a trusted Carter aide. The two friends also had dinner together that evening. Both later admitted that Lee told Harden about Vesco's multi-million dollar offer.

The next day, at precisely 4:47 p.m., President Carter telephoned President Oduber in Costa Rica. This was an unlikely person for a president to be calling only 20 days after taking office. Carter told the FBI, according to a Justice Department memo, that he placed the call to congratulate Oduber for receiving "a conservation award."

Vesco later confessed that Oduber told him Carter had spoken, as pre-arranged, about the Vesco case.

A week later — on Feb. 15, to be precise — Harden dropped by the Oval Office for a meeting with the president. The White House later admitted that Harden spoke to Carter about Vesco's offer to pay millions of dollars for a political fix. Recounts a Justice Department memo: "The president then proceeded to write a note to the Attorney General stating, 'Please see Spencer Lee from Albany when he requests an appointment.' The handwritten note was initialed J.C."

Lee never sought the appointment. It was unnecessary. Someone else arranged for the extradition proceedings against Vesco to be dropped. Former

New York Times reporter Charles Kaiser says he was told that Carter himself made the decision to stop the extradition attempt.

This information assertedly came from Robert Fiske, a former U.S. attorney in New York City, who in an interview hedged on the question of Carter's personal involvement. All Fiske would confirm was that the ultimate decision to stop the extradition proceedings was made by the White House.

These facts were laid before the Justice Department, which was controlled, of course, by the White House. Lee failed two lie-detector tests. Harden refused to take a test; his testimony was described in Justice Department documents as "perjurious." Incriminating documents and testimony were withheld from the grand jury. The president's personal attorney, Charles Kirbo, was picked up on tape advising a witness, "I think it's a mistake to be too open with the FBI."

Members of the grand jury claim that the prosecutors seemed to be protecting White House witnesses. One juror said the chief prosecutor "tried to lead the jury by the nose." The foreman, Ralph Ulmer, tried to resign, charging that "cover-up activities are being orchestrated within the Department of Justice under the concept that the administration must be protected at all costs."

Nationals Secure Place At State

Graham 6-Hits Ormond Beach

By Chris Fister
Herald Sports Writer

LEESBURG — The biggest difference between this year and last year for the Sanford Little Major National League All-Stars is the pitching staff. Last year, manager Sylvester "Slick" Franklin, Jr. relied on the arms of Willie "Sugar Tex" McCloud and Leonard Lucas throughout tournament play. Two good starters got the Nationals to the state tourney a year ago and, this year, Sanford is looking at the state title with a trio of outstanding hurlers.

McCloud and Mike Merthle are considered the top two pitchers for the Nationals, but, after Saturday morning's district championship game, left-hander Tim Graham proved he can be just as effective as the other two.

Graham scattered six hits and pitched his way out of a few tight situations to lead the Nationals to a 9-5 victory over Ormond Beach in the Florida Little Major League District 4 finals. The district title advances the Nationals to the state tournament for the second straight year. This year, the state tourney will be held in West Palm Beach on Monday, July 25, through Thursday, July 28. Sanford will play St. Petersburg Fossil Park at 11 a.m. on Monday.

"We got to the point where we would look at him (Graham) for one more batter before we took him out," Franklin said. "But he always got that one batter."

Graham allowed only three hits through five innings, but Ormond Beach scored two runs on three hits in the bottom of the sixth, before Graham struck out Russell Sapsford to end the game. Graham struck out 11 in the game and walked seven.

Ormond Beach got on the board first with a run in the bottom of the first inning. Jeff Grodi reached on a fielder's choice and scored on a wild pitch.

Sanford National took the lead for good with five runs on only one hit in the top of the second. McCloud, George Gordon and Graham drew consecutive walks and Mike Merthle lifted a pop up, in foul territory, to the third baseman, John Williams. Williams, however, dropped the ball and Merthle wound up drawing a walk to force in McCloud with Sanford's first run. Anthony Merthle then reached on a fielder's choice as Gordon was thrown out at home. Harry Chibberton followed by bouncing a grounder to third, but Ormond's catcher dropped the throw home, allowing Graham to score. Denny Clayton then stepped up and looped a double over the right fielder's head to chase home both Mike Merthle and Anthony Merthle. Jeff Blake followed with a sacrifice fly to center, driving in Chibberton for a 5-1 Sanford lead.

The Nationals came back with a pair of runs in the top of the third to take a 7-1 lead. McCloud led off by blasting a home run over the left field fence, his seventh homer in seven tournament games. Gordon then drew a walk, advanced to second on a wild pitch, a scored on a two-out double to right by Chibberton.

Sanford tacked on another run in the top of the fourth as Blake singled with one out, went to second on an error, advanced to third on a wild pitch, and scored on McCloud's two-out double to left.

Ormond Beach cut Sanford's lead to four runs, 7-3, with two runs in the bottom of the fourth. Thomas Ledden reached on an error to lead off and, with one out, William Glenn doubled to right to put runners on second and third. One out later, Williams drew a walk to load the bases and Graham walked both Jacob Story and Grodi to force in the two Ormond Beach runs.

Sanford added another run in the bottom of the fifth to take a 9-3 lead. With one out, Chibberton drew a walk, went to second on a wild pitch, and scored when Clayton drilled a shot over the center fielder's head for his second double of the game.

The first two hitters for Ormond Beach in the bottom of the sixth, Glenn and Richard Maloney, ripped back-to-back singles and Williams drew a walk to load the bases with no outs. Graham then struck out Story and got Grodi to pop to the catcher. Jeff Guenther came up with a two-out, two-run single to keep Ormond's hopes alive as the Sanford lead was shaved to four runs, 9-5. Graham wasn't fazed, though, and he came back to strike out Sapsford and start the Nationals packing for West Palm Beach.

"We played a heck of a two tournaments," Franklin said. "If we continue to play well and keep our heads, we could do well in the state tournament."

Blake, a 12-year-old catcher, was chosen Most Valuable Player for the district tournament after McCloud took MVP honors in the Sub-District. The Nationals will practice all this week in preparation for the state tournament and they will leave for West Palm Beach on Sunday.

TOURNAMENT TIDBITS — The Sanford Nationals are still hoping one of their top players, Dwight Brinson, will be back for the state tournament. Brinson, a shortstop and power hitter, went on vacation to visit his father in New York and missed the district. He would also be another quality pitcher Franklin could count on.

Franklin Pleased With Draw For Next Monday's Opener

In recent years, Sanford Little Major League and Junior Major League teams that have gone to state tournaments have drawn opening round games against either Key West or West Palm Beach.

And, in each case, the team that Sanford faced and lost to in the opening round went on to win the tournament. Last year, in Tallahassee, the Sanford Nationals dropped a close 2-0 game to Key West in the opening round and Key West went on to win the state title.

So, it's no wonder that a wide grin came across the face of Sanford Nationals' manager Sylvester "Slick" Franklin, Jr. Saturday when he saw the draw for this year's Florida Little Major League state tournament at West Palm Beach.

The Nationals, making their second straight trip to the state tourney after winning the District 4

Tournament Saturday at Leesburg, have drawn St. Petersburg Fossil Park as their first-round opponent. That game is scheduled for 11 a.m. Monday, July 25.

In the 9 a.m. opening game, host Okeechobee West (West Palm Beach area winner) plays Pensacola. Panama City Fred Bishop League plays Key West at 1 p.m., while the Jacksonville area winner tangles with the Tallahassee area winner at 3 p.m.

Losers of the first two games come back to play at 6 p.m., while the losers of the third and fourth games play at 8 p.m. Losers of the two night games are eliminated from the tournament.

Winners bracket games are scheduled for 9 and 11 a.m. Tuesday, July 26, with losers bracket games at 6 and 8. The finals of the winners bracket will be at 9 a.m. Wednesday, July 27, with losers

Oviedo, Americans Ousted; Nationals Alive

EUSTIS — The home "fields" advantage played an important role here Saturday night for the host Eustis Senior League All Stars in the Little League District 14, Division II Tournament against Oviedo's senior stars.

At the Eustis complex, there are two fields that the senior league plays on. One is the regular Senior League field with the normal distances and the other is the Big League field with much further distances for senior league players. Up until Saturday night, Eustis had played all its games on the Senior League field. The game against Oviedo, however, was moved to the Big League field because, as tournament officials put it, "The other field was tore up."

For the Eustis team, it was the best thing that could have happened. On Thursday night, Altamonte's Mike Pinckes hit a seventh-inning home run to left center (on the Senior League field) to hand Eustis a 4-2 loss and send them into the loser's bracket. On Friday night, Oviedo's Terry Gammons clubbed a homer to center field (on the Senior League field) to boost Oviedo over Matland and set up the Eustis-Oviedo matchup with the winner going to the finals.

On the Big League field, however, neither Pinckes' or Gammons' homers would have cleared the fence as it is 340 feet to left center and about 380 to straight away center.

Right away, in Saturday's game, the move of fields paid off for Eustis. Oviedo's lead off man, Dave Wood, belted a shot to left center that wound up being a long out. The ball would have been a homer on the other field. In the second inning, Mark Hofmann drilled a two-out shot that hit the fence in left center and only went for a double. Hoffman's shot would have been well out of the other park. Oviedo hit a few more during the game that turned out to be only long outs as Eustis claimed a 5-0 victory and advanced to tonight's finals against Altamonte.

Tonight's game starts at 7:30 in Eustis, the field has not yet been determined. Eustis must defeat Altamonte twice to win the district. A second and deciding game, if necessary, will be played Tuesday night at 7:30 in Eustis.

In Little League Major District 14 action, the Altamonte Nationals stayed alive with a 4-2 victory over Pine Hills in Division I Saturday in Ocoee while, in Eustis, a five-run fourth inning rally carried Eustis to a 6-3 victory over the Altamonte Americans in Division II. It was the second loss for the Americans and ousted them from the tournament.

The Nationals will be back in action tonight at 7:30 at Winter Garden in the loser's bracket final against Ocoee.

Altamonte National struck early with a pair of runs in the first inning. Mike McNamee lined a single and scored on a RBI double off the bat of Chris Radcliff. Radcliff came around to score when Jerrey Thurston reached on an error. The Nationals added single runs in both the fourth and fifth innings. In the fourth, Brian Parent stroked a double and scored on Todd Luke's single. In the fifth, Radcliff belted a double and came across on Pat DeLuca's RBI single.

Luke pitched the first four innings to pick up the victory for Altamonte while Shane Lunsford pitched the final two. The Altamonte Americans had taken a 1-0 lead in the first inning against Eustis and held on to it behind the strong pitching arm of Alex Birlie. Eustis came up with five runs in the bottom of the fourth and added a run in the fifth to take a 6-1 lead into the top of the sixth.

The Americans came back with a pair of runs in the sixth and had the bases loaded with the go-ahead run at the plate before bowing out. Tony Ganci led off the sixth for Altamonte with a solo home run to right center to cut Eustis' lead to 6-2. John Esterby then reached on an error and Chad Cochran drilled a line drive that was snared by Eustis' shortstop. The shortstop threw wildly trying to double off the runner at first and Esterby went to second. Esterby then took third on a wild pitch and Todd Christensen, whose foul pop up to third was dropped, wound up drawing a walk. With two outs in the inning, Danny Hendricks ripped a single up the middle to drive in Esterby and Kevin Watson drew a walk to load the bases. Shane Stuflet was up next and he popped out to the first baseman to end the game.

In other action tonight, the Altamonte Junior League All-Stars take on either Oviedo or Mt. Dora at 7:30 in Eustis. Altamonte remains the only unbeaten team in the tourney and Oviedo or Mt. Dora must beat Altamonte twice to win the tournament.

...Happy Mustang

The Seminole Pony Baseball Organization will send two teams to future tournaments after Sunday's District.

Manager Jim Lucas and his National League "A" Bronco All-Stars swept three opponents to earn a spot in the July 28 State Tournament at Miami. Bobby Moose, Mike Davis, Craig Smith, Chris Norton, Erik Wofford and James Joyce were the standouts for the Broncos.

On the Mustang level, Manager Ed Suggs' Hardee's All-Stars swept three foes to capture a place in the Mustang World Series at Tampa, which begins Friday. Suggs' club received excellent pitching from Jamie Mocny, Pat Newell, Robbie Koehn and Chuck Lamb as it held the opposition to just three hits.

Watson Wins British Open

BIRKDALE, England (UPI) — The only thing Tom Watson dropped after the turn Sunday was the British Open Golf Championship trophy.

"I don't think I've denied it," Watson said after being returned the trophy he won last year at Troon, in west Scotland.

But he certainly gave some of the world's top golfers a baahing over the back nine of the 6,988-yard Royal Birkdale course.

With the wind getting up and creating difficulties, the 33-year-old from Mission Hills, Kansas kept his precise game intact to birdie the 11th and 13th holes of his final round, and clinched his fifth British Open with a 20-foot birdie putt at the 16th.

That put him 1-under par for the day after two bogeys in an outward 36, and 9-under for the tournament. It gave him a one stroke advantage over fellow Americans Andy Bean and Hale Irwin that he held.

Watson's tournament score was a 9-under-par 276, one better than Irwin and Bean, two better than Australian Graham Marsh, and three ahead of Lee Trevino.

Watson knew he was in good shape after his birdie on the 16th.

"I knew what I had to do. The 16th was a good birdie opportunity, the 17th was a good opportunity, and 18 was a tough par. When the putt went in at 16 I thought: 'I've got it as long as I don't make any mistakes,'" he said.

"At 16 I made a 20-foot putt for birdie. That was my best putt of the tournament. At the 18th, I was 213 yards from the green and I played the best 2-iron of my life to leave an 18-foot putt."

"It made up for the bad back nine at Oakmont," he added, in reference to his blowing the U.S. Open down the home stretch earlier this year.

'We Want The Bodies'

Court Petition Seeks Crash-Landed 'ETs'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — By filing a "Writ of Habeas Corpus Extraterrestrial," a UFO group hopes to force the government to disclose information about more than a dozen "ETs" reportedly found in downed spaceships.

"We want the bodies," said Larry Bryant, who heads the Washington, D.C.-based group Citizens Against UFO Secrecy (CAUS).

The unusual court petition, filed in U.S. district court, contends the government is "maintaining secret custody over one or more occupants of crash-landed UFOs of apparent extraterrestrial origin."

"But we'll take whatever information we can get, including whether the bodies are dead or alive," he said Thursday.

The Air Force, which officially closed the book on UFOs in 1969 when it discontinued Project Blue Book, and the Justice Department have been given 60 days to officially respond to CAUS' petition.

Bryant, 45, said his group hopes the petition, which was filed last week against the secretary of the Air Force and U.S. attorney general, will help remove the veil of secrecy surrounding UFO incidents.

"What our petition aims to do, simply, is to perform a 'citizen's arrest' — to make the government account, formally and fully, for their capture and detention of one or more UFO crewmen that have had the misfortune of falling into U.S. military hands," said Bryant, a writer from Alexandria, Va.

The petition includes a photocopy of a recently declassified government memorandum of March 22, 1950, that says: "An investigator for the Air Force stated that three so-called flying saucers had been recovered in New Mexico."

"Each one was occupied by three bodies of human shape but only three feet tall, dressed in metallic cloth of very fine texture. Each body was banded in a manner similar to the blackout suits used by speed flyers and test pilots."

Bryant said UFO groups also believe bodies were recovered in 1947 in Roswell and Socorro, N.M., and may have been found in other areas.

"I'd say in all we're talking about more than a dozen bodies," he said.

...three so-called flying saucers had been recovered in Mexico. Each one was occupied by three bodies of human shape but only three feet tall, dressed in metallic cloth of very fine texture.

The memorandum is addressed to "Director, FBI," from "Guy Hotell, SAC," Washington. But Capt. Johnny Whitaker, an Air Force spokesman, said nobody seems to know who Hotell is.

"We've been trying to determine that if that's the SAC — the Strategic Air Command. If so, it's not in Washington. It may be an acronym for something else," Bryant said.

"I'd hate to intercept the legal process. We are taking this very seriously."

The Justice Department declined comment on the petition until it has time to review it.

Researchers Link Meals With Fainting In Elderly

BOSTON (UPI) — Sudden bouts of dizziness that cause many elderly people to fall down may be caused by drastic drops in blood pressure that occur after meals, researchers say.

Sudden weakness and light-headedness causes many elderly people to collapse, resulting in broken bones and head injuries. Because it previously could not be explained or treated, many old people live in constant fear of falling down, said researchers from Hebrew Rehabilitation Center for Aged in Boston.

A preliminary study, published in the New England Journal of Medicine, found the blood pressure of very elderly people would drop after they ate a meal.

"This phenomenon itself may not cause a fall or a faint, but when added to other common events, such as standing up, going to the bathroom, and taking blood pressure medication, it could explain the problem," Dr. Lewis A. Lipsitz said in a telephone interview.

He said the sudden drop could be caused by increased blood flow to the gut to digest food.

"Syncope (fainting) is a prevalent and potentially dangerous phenomenon in the elderly that remains unexplained in over 50 percent of cases, despite expensive, highly technologic medical evaluations," said Lipsitz.

He and three other researchers measured blood pressure in 20 patients aged 75 to 98 with and without a history of fainting. Systolic blood pressure, normally between 140 and 180 in those patients, dropped an average of 25 millimeters in the patients within 30 minutes after eating dinner, he said.

The levels remained low for an hour after the meal.

Young people measured no change in blood pressure and the elderly patients who had not eaten had no drop in blood pressure, they said.

The patients studied had multiple illnesses and the drop in blood pressure may be disease-related rather than age-related. "Nevertheless, they were representative of a large segment of the elderly population" that may suffer from the syndrome, he said.

The findings "should stimulate an active search for this phenomenon in the clinical evaluation of elderly patients with falls, dizziness and syncope," he said.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY

JULY 19, 1983

Some of the lucky career breaks which you felt have been denied you are likely to be showered upon you this coming year. They'll be worth the wait.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

You could be rather fortunate in career situations today, provided you look out for the interests of others, as well as for your own. Order now: The NEW Matchmaker wheel and booklet reveals romantic compatibilities for all signs, tells how to get along with others, finds rising signs, hidden qualities, plus more. Mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Send an additional $1 for your Cancer Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead. Be sure to give your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

Your enthusiasm will rapidly wane today if you spend too much time analyzing your every move. Don't let indecisiveness smother your verve.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

Your real blessings today will come from things which are not of material nature. Don't rely upon worldly goods to make you happy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)

You have the ability today to turn around negative situations to your advantage, but there's a chance you might not persist long enough to do so.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)

Conditions look promising for you now where your financial interests are concerned. Don't be sluggish about bringing what's due you into being.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)

Projects you personally control should turn out to be lucky for you today. You might not do so well, however, in ventures managed by others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Persons who make big promises to you today are apt to be the ones who do the least. Your best supporter will be someone quietly working behind the scenes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)

A hope can be realized today, but it will be primarily through your efforts and not those of others. Don't even bring them into the picture.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)

Important objectives are reachable today, provided you don't let down when you encounter resistance. Challenge should stiffen your resolve, not dilute it.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

Make your intentions clear today. If persons misinterpret your motives, they may work against you instead of with you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

A joint venture in which you're involved has good possibilities, but it may also have potential problems. Be optimistic, but also be cautious.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

Ways can be found at this time to enhance your material security, but you must not depend upon your luck alone to put you in the black.

Drug Duo Works On Asthma, Hay Fever

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have bronchial asthma and hay fever. I found that I breathe better at night if I take a bronchodilator right before going to bed. However, this sometimes made it difficult to fall asleep.

One night I also took an antihistamine because I was having problems with my hay fever. I found I also fell asleep very easily that night.

Since that time I have continued to take both and find the bronchodilator no longer keeps me awake. I feel fine and would like to continue this regimen. But I was wondering whether antihistamines cause a dependence? I have been doing this for about a year and notice no ill effects.

DEAR READER — That is not a bad combination. Many of the commonly used bronchodilators contain adrenaline or similar medications that induce excitement. Remember that adrenaline is the "fight or flight" hormone. So it is not surprising that using such medications at bedtime causes sleep problems.

Antihistamines are also sedatives and are sometimes prescribed for sleep. I think they make a pretty good sleeping pill for occasional use. They are not addictive or habit forming.

Most doctors do not prescribe antihistamines for asthma. They usually don't do any good. However, antihistamines are commonly used for hay fever, which you say you have. This suggests you may have an allergic form of asthma which may mean you would benefit from antihistamines even though most asthmatics would not.

It is interesting that cromolyn sodium is useful in preventing asthmatic attacks in patients who have an allergic factor, but is less likely to be helpful in other asthmatics. It is not used to treat an attack but to prevent one.

you get an unnecessarily bad score you may well be giving an undeserved top score to an opponent who is in contention.

Jim: "South had had a bad game. It was the last hand of the evening, and he was in a hurry to get home. East took his ace of hearts and returned the deuce. South took his king, spread his hand and claimed five odd with four spades, one heart, two diamonds and four clubs. The opponents conceded the claim, and South went home."

Oswald: "Most of the time 11 tricks would be all that were there. This time there were 12. All South had to do was run off his winners in the black suits, carefully discarding a heart from one hand and a diamond from the other. An automatic squeeze would develop against West, who had been dealt five cards in each red suit."

Lake Mary, Oviedo Hear 'No Way' To Tax Vote Plans

Neither Lake Mary nor Oviedo can have binding votes on tax increases for road improvements on their Sept. 6 city election ballots as they had planned and collect any resulting revenues in the 1983-84 fiscal year, said Seminole County's chief assistant property appraiser Terry Goembel.

"There is no way it can be done," Goembel said. "Tax notices are going out Aug. 24 and everything that is going on the tax bills has to be on the notice," he said, noting the tax roll will be run the end of September to give County Tax Collector G. Troy Ray Jr. time to send out tax bills.

"A September referendum is just too late. And we can't run the tax roll for the entire county until every city is ready," he said.

Oviedo city officials got the word last week and decided to forget the special $2 per $1,000 assessed valuation tax proposed for the ballot strictly for road improvements. City Clerk Nancy Cox said the city council decided against the issue being on the ballot this year, after the problem with the property appraiser's time schedule surfaced.

The Oviedo City Council is slated to have its final budget meeting on July 25 when a budget and tax rate for the new year will be set and a public hearing scheduled.

In Lake Mary, City Commissioner Ray Fox, who proposed the ballot question seeking the voters' views on a $1.50 per $1,000 assessed valuation tax for road improvements, wasn't really disappointed with the Goembel ruling.

"We may have to make it a straw vote," he said. "The main thing I wanted was a feel for what the people wanted to do, rather than raising taxes to start with."

"I would assume the city commission will discuss this Thursday night," Fox said. "That is my guess."

City Clerk and Acting City Manager Connie Major noted that it is possible for the Commission to leave the matter on the ballot as planned and to begin collecting the tax in the 1984-85 fiscal year.

A regular meeting of the Lake Mary City Commission is scheduled for 7:30 p.m., Thursday at city hall, 158 N. Country Club Road.

Lake Mary High

Students Clamor For Admission

By Michael Beha
Herald Staff Writer

Lake Mary High School is a little like a new restaurant, a hit movie or a big Broadway show — everyone wants to get in.

Since the school opened in 1981 it has been the most popular destination of students wanting to transfer from their assigned high schools. Although the school district keeps no detailed records on the number of students who transfer from one school to another to take special classes, according to Administrative Assistant Ralph Ray, Lake Mary had far and away the most transfers last year.

And Lake Mary was by far the most popular school among students seeking transfers for curriculum this year. Forty-nine transfers were approved to Lake Mary High School, 40 for the ROTC program. Lyman High School will receive nine curriculum transfers for the coming year, Lake Brantley High School will get two students through transfers and one student will be transferring to Lake Howell.

An additional 89 students, many of them ninth graders to be from Seminole High School's attendance zone, tried to transfer to Lake Mary but their requests were denied.

School Superintendent Robert Hughes attributes the high number of transfer requests at Lake Mary to the school's newness. He said interest in transferring "has declined somewhat from last year."

"It's like opening a new house. Everyone wants to come over. The same thing happened the first couple of years after Lake Brantley and Lake Howell High schools opened," he said.

Lake Mary Principal Don Reynolds and Seminole High School Principal Wayne Epps agreed with Hughes that the biggest reason for the transfers has been the newness of the school.

"I think it's because we're the new kids on the block. After we're three or four years old I think it will work itself out."

Reynolds added that the design concept of the school, a two story fully air-conditioned facility with wings built around a central hub, contribute to the attraction.

Hughes, Reynolds and Epps downplay the presence of fewer black students at Lake Mary as a reason for transfers but other school officials, who asked to remain unidentified, said race is definitely an "unspoken reason" for transfers.

About 700 of the 2,000 students who attended Seminole and Crooms high schools in the 1982-83 school year are black. At Lake Mary, there were only 212 blacks among the school's 1,500 students in 1982-83. About 90 of the 212 blacks at Lake Mary are involved in the emotionally and mentally handicapped program and are not part of the general school population.

Epps said he's had no requests for transfers from students already attending Seminole.

"They're applying before they get here. But you have to understand these are decisions made by the parents not by the kids. Once they get here I've not had any who wanted to leave."

Reynolds agreed that many transfer requests are from ninth graders. A former principal at Seminole, he said the school "just doesn't have any racial problems."

Hughes said the Crooms High School is a major cause of transfers. Some parents in Seminole's attendance zone sought to have their children transferred to Lake Mary before they enter the ninth grade at Crooms.

"People had some concern about Crooms," he said. Part of that concern was a feeling that students at Crooms received fewer opportunities because it housed only ninth grade students.

"A lot of that had to do with wanting to go to a four-year school, Epps said.

Crooms was made into a ninth grade center as part of a 1970 desegregation order.

But the School Board recently voted to merge the two schools on the Seminole campus and Hughes believes that "the 9-12 grade school will take care of a lot of those problems."

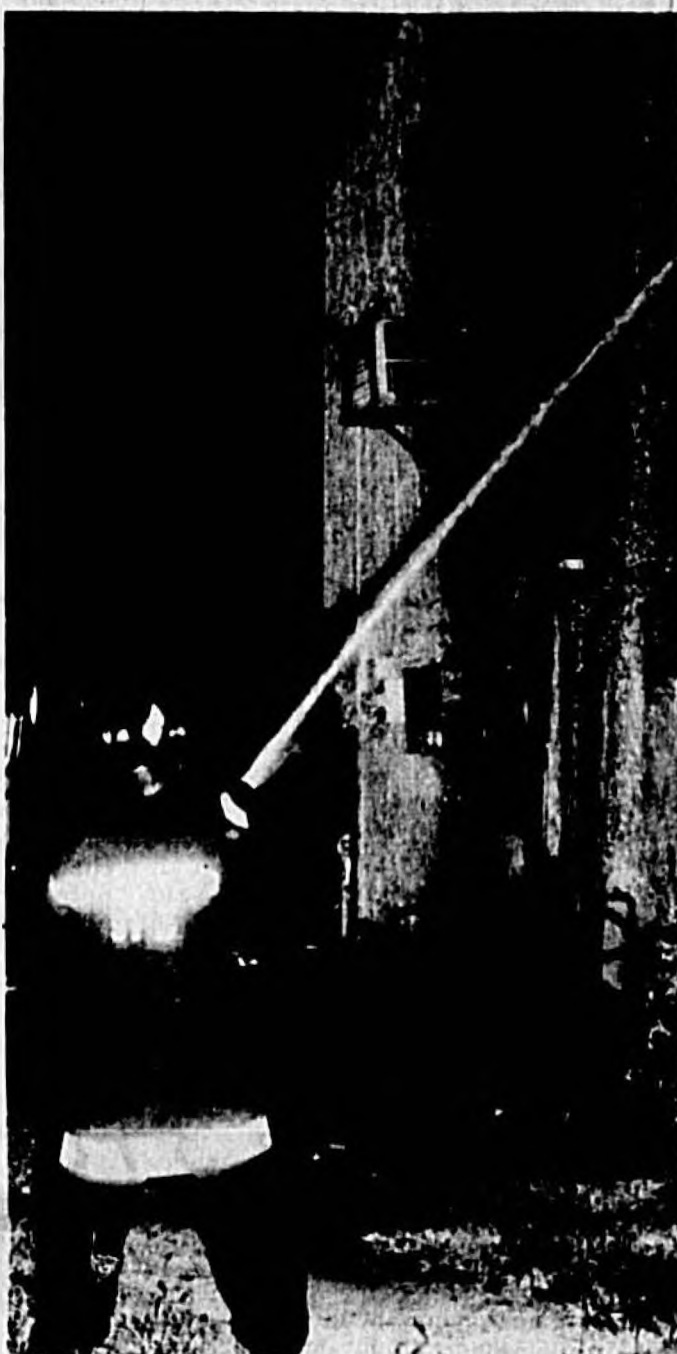

Hughes said the School Board is adopting a tougher stance toward students who want to transfer. Generally, the only reason students are permitted to change schools is to take a class not offered at their assigned school.

Lake Mary has several classes not offered at other schools. The school has music labs, ROTC and food production classes not offered at other schools in the county. Those classes have been the most popular among the transfer requests.

Forty students were allowed to transfer to Lake Mary for the 1983-84 school year to take ROTC. But not everyone has been permitted to transfer. Forty one students who wanted to take Fundamentals of Food Production at Lake Mary had their transfers denied.

Hughes told those students, many of them ninth graders that the course will be offered at their current schools if interest persists.

"One of the problems we've had is that we didn't have a standardized curriculum," Hughes said. He said the Board is now moving toward offering all courses at all schools, a move that should eliminate curriculum transfers.

Fire Damages Apartment

A Sanford fireman, left, directs water onto the blackened wall of a Sanford apartment that sustained $2,000 damage early today. Above, a fireman hoses down smoldering debris on the ground. The blaze spread from a burning trash pile. According to Assistant Fire Chief Tom Hickson the fire damaged rafters, window moldings and an electrical service unit on the outside walls of apartment B at 910 S. Park Ave. The apartment was occupied by James Garner. He was not injured.

Hickson said the fire was reported at 12:17 a.m. by a neighbor who called the fire department and reported that flames had spread to the apartment building from a pile of trash that was burning near the rear of the apartment. It is not known what ignited the trash pile, Hickson said.

He said fireman quickly extinguished the blaze. No one was injured.

Sanford's Grave Spaces Up $150

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

Grave spaces in the city of Sanford's two cemeteries — Lakeview and Evergreen — on W. 25th Street are no longer selling at bargain prices, but the price is still less than most other cemeteries in the immediate area, according to a city report.

As of last week, the new price per grave space is $350, up from the $200 which has been charged for many years.

The purpose of increasing the price is to build up the cemeteries' perpetual care trust fund to the point where the invested fund will return enough in interest each year to pay the $40,000 it costs to maintain the cemeteries.

Currently the cemeteries' trust fund totals $155,000 and the interest earned from the fund is about $15,000 a year. At the same time the city has a maintenance contract for care of the cemeteries which costs about $36,000 annually plus administrative costs. The cemeteries have been operating at a deficit for many years, requiring most of the maintenance costs to come out of the city's general fund.

The Sanford City Commission agreed to raise the fee after Jim Jernigan, the city's director of parks and recreation, completed a survey of nearby areas and found that the fee per grave space in the Sanford facilities is much less than charged by private enterprise. He said grave spaces in privately owned cemeteries range from $400 to $1,000.

Jernigan couldn't find any municipal cemeteries charging less than $200 per grave space and several were charging more. In his report to the commission, he noted that grave spaces in Winter Park's cemetery are selling for $350 while Orlando is charging $450.

Currently there are 878 unsold spaces in the two city cemeteries, but only 800 of those spaces are in groups. City Manager W.E. "Pete" Knowles said for purposes of raising the funds necessary, the city should only count on selling the 800 spaces. Earlier he suggested that all the spaces will be used up by 1992.

"Actual sales will trickle off to nothing by 1990," Knowles said.

In recommending the price increase from $200 to $350, Knowles noted that the increased price when the 800 grave spaces are sold would add to the perpetual care trust fund about $250,000 to bring the total of the fund to about $400,000. This sum should ultimately produce about $40,000 a year in interest.

Late in June, the city commission voted against ridding the city of the responsibility for the cemetery.

The new owners of Oaklawn Memorial Park at 25th Street and Rinehart Road offered to take over the ownership and operation of the two facilities. The owners expected that the city would turn over $93,250 from the perpetual care trust fund, calculated at $10 for each of the 9,325 used spaces to provide perpetual care.

The Oaklawn owners said they would provide grave spaces for the needy, purchase additional land to expand the cemeteries and build a chapel at the site, as well as provide mausoleum facilities and retain the services of the present city employed sexton.

But, Glenn McCall, a Sanford businessman and owner of Seminole Monument Co., which offered several years ago to take over ownership and management of the cemeteries, protested. McCall insisted if the city were going to divest itself of the facilities, he should have first choice.

Space Station In Orbit By '92?

ARLINGTON, VA. (UPI) — NASA will give President Reagan a proposal for the nation's next major space project, an orbiting space station, within a year and hopes have it in orbit by 1992.

NASA Administrator James Beggs said NASA hopes to get start-up money from Congress in the fiscal 1985 budget and begin construction in fiscal 1986 and have the station operating by 1992.

No exact figures have been determined yet but it is estimated such an orbiting station will cost $5 billion to $10 billion. The first year's funding for contracting and other start-up costs would be a couple hundred million," Beggs said.

"I think we will have an approved program in a really short period of time, if not the end of this year then the first half of next year," he said.

If all goes well the plan should be approved "in the next six months to a year," he said.

Beggs said a space station would be useful to industry as well as science. Although several large corporations have already sent experimental projects up with the shuttle, the most important commercial developments from space stations will be "ones we have not dreamed of," Beggs said.

NATION

IN BRIEF

Federal Court Upholds Florida Death Sentence

ATLANTA (UPI) — A federal appeals court upheld the death sentence of a Florida man Monday, saying that his beating a man to death with a fire poker warrants the death penalty.

James Adams, convicted of killing a St. Lucie County man during a robbery, had contended that death was a "grossly disproportionate" penalty for his crime. He also said his trial lawyer was ineffective because he offered no mitigating evidence during the sentencing phase of his trial — relying instead on an oral plea to the jury to spare Adams.

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Adams beat Edgar Brown to death with a fire poker. In seeking the death penalty, a south Florida prosecutor said Brown was not resisting the robbery when he was beaten.

Sex Acts 'Exploited' Kids

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., blasting two colleagues for "preying upon schoolchildren," says they ought to be expelled from the House of Representatives for having sex with two congressional pages.

Gingrich had particularly harsh words for Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., saying in a speech on the House floor Monday that Studds showed no remorse. The Georgia conservative noted that Rep. Daniel Crane, R-Ill., apologized to his family and constituents but said he ought to be expelled anyway.

"Both men abused power," Gingrich said. "In this setting, the ethics committee's proposals for reprimand are a sad joke."

A reprimand entails no loss of privileges or standing, amounting to a figurative slap on the wrist. A vote on the ethics committee recommendation for a reprimand may come Thursday.

The congressmen's affairs were revealed by the ethics committee last week after a yearlong investigation into allegations of sexual misconduct on Capitol Hill. Studds had a homosexual liaison with a 17-year-old male page in 1973 and made sexual advances toward two others. Crane had sex with a 17-year-old female page three years ago.

WEATHER

NATIONAL REPORT: Facing record high temperatures, Americans cranked up their air conditioners, triggering record power consumption in some areas, and lightning killed a man and injured three others seeking relief from the heat wave on a New York beach. Only Maine, the northern Rockies and the Washington and Oregon coasts stayed relatively cool Monday with highs in the upper 70s to lower 80s. Elsewhere the nation steamed in the upper 80s and 90s. The nation's heat wave threatened water supplies and created forest and grass fire dangers but also brought rain. "There's a lot of moisture in the eastern part of the country," said forecaster Joan Murray at the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo. "Warm, moist air rises until the moisture condenses in the cooler upper air, and falls as rain." Showers and thundershowers scattered from the Oregon coast to Florida early today brought brief relief from temperatures that soared to 103 degrees in Cross City, Fla., and a record-setting 99 at Casper, Wyo. Another record was set at Orlando when the mercury reached 97. A thunderstorm hit Jones Beach on Long Island and before lifeguards could clear the beach, lightning struck four people, killing one man and critically injuring another whose large portable radio took the blast. An elderly woman died of heat stroke, hypothermia and a heart attack in St. Louis, which endured its 10th straight day of weather in the 90s. The latest victims brought to nine the deaths caused by heat or storms since Friday. Several women standing in a line of 800 people applying for factory jobs in Connersville, Ind., fainted in the 90-plus heat. Sweltering temperatures in Florida were accompanied by raging storms with high winds, golf ball-size hail in the suburban Miami area, and tornadoes near Ft. Myers and in Citrus County south of Gainesville. The Citrus County twister tore down trees and power lines and damaged a house and a mobile home. Torrington, Wyo. officials asked residents to limit their water use to avoid their being without water later on in the summer. The heat wave parched eastern woodlands.

Graham Backs Tough Immigration Reform

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Florida Gov. Bob Graham said today that he favors passage of immigration reform legislation, even though he considers a pending House measure "imperfect."

Graham, speaking to reporters before beginning a day of meetings in the nation's capital, said immigration reform should not be put off any longer.

"The issue of immigration reform is so urgent, than unless our situation deteriorates further, we should be for the passage of this bill and hope a compromise committee can improve it," he said.

Graham has said he prefers a House immigration bill to one pending in the Senate.

The House bill would grant amnesty to aliens who have lived in the country since Jan. 1, 1982. The Senate bill requires an alien to have been in the United States since 1980 and some observers feel it has tougher employer sanctions against hiring illegal aliens.

However, under the House bill, the federal government would pick up all legalization costs, while the Senate version would be funded by a block grant, which Graham says would cause problems.

"Refugees are a federal responsibility," said the governor. Block grants "are exhausted rather rapidly."

"We don't relish the thought of the federal government bailing out of the responsibility by dumping a major part of the cost on the states," he said.

Graham also said he opposes a provision in the House bill that would provide educational assistance for elementary and secondary schools that teach refugees.

"We do not find that to be either appropriate or necessary," said Graham.

Graham said Congress should be aware that immigration is a very different issue in Florida than in the Southwest.

"People (allens) that go to Florida either can't go back to Cuba ... or they don't want to go back," he said. "In the Southwest, on the other hand, most of their people are Mexicans and if they are detected, they are willing to go back."

Graham also said he asked President Reagan to come to Florida to speak on the subject of education, but the president did not accept the invitation.

Last week, the Florida legislature passed a merit pay-master teacher program similar to those Reagan has been backing.

Graham said Florida's program is "consistent with the president's commission on educational excellence."

Conservatives Blast Kissinger

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Henry Kissinger, President Reagan's choice to head the special commission on U.S. policy toward Central America, is getting stinging criticism from both conservatives and liberals.

Saying the former secretary of state is "virtually a legend" in foreign affairs, Reagan announced Monday in a speech to the International Longshoremen's Association convention in Hollywood, Fla., that he will establish the nine-member advisory panel with Kissinger as its chief.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters Kissinger was selected to head it as someone "who has strong credibility in foreign policy," and added, "I don't think anyone can quarrel with that."

But quarrel they did. "It would be difficult to find a spokesman less trusted by conservatives and liberals alike," said Richard Viguerie, publisher of the Conservative Digest, who called a news conference following the announcement.

Kissinger "was this nation's No. 1 foreign policy official when U.S. foreign policy virtually collapsed, leading to the loss of Angola, Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia," said Viguerie, who also blamed Kissinger for the "giveaway" of the Panama Canal.

Kissinger, who served as Richard Nixon's top foreign policy adviser and stayed on as secretary of state under President Ford following Nixon's resignation in 1972, was described by one administration official as "a distinguished leader with an enormous amount of prestige and respect."

House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., said Kissinger's appointment would not help Reagan regain "credibility with the American people, with the Congress, with the Central Americans and with the international community at large."

Kissinger's appointment also was criticized by conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on Western Hemisphere Affairs.

"There may be someone across this broad land farther down on my list of preferences for such a position than Henry Kissinger, but I can't think of him," Helms told reporters.

Reagan said the panel will include representatives from business, labor, and the academic and Hispanic communities. It is to assess the best way to attack the economic, social and political problems of the region and report its recommendations by Dec. 1.

Administration officials said Reagan hopes the commission will ease the path to congressional approval of more military aid for El

Kissinger was not available for comment, but a senior administration official said he agreed to accept the unpaid job as commission chairman — his first formal appointment in the Reagan administration — in a telephone conversation with the president Sunday evening.

At Orlando Training Center

Navy Disciplines 3 For Wasteful Purchasing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Navy has fired an officer, reprimanded a civilian and will take disciplinary action against the commander of a Florida naval center found to have wasted tens of thousands of dollars in purchasing spare parts.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and the Navy served notice Monday about the "corrective action" Pentagon officials pledged to take in the case, but not without confusion.

Weinberger misspoke at a news conference, saying the "naval commander in charge" of the Naval Training Equipment Center in Orlando had been fired. Not so — he meant an officer at the center with the rank of commander, the Navy said.

Three hours after Weinberger met with reporters, the Navy said it will also discipline the former commander of the center, Capt. John McHugh. He was routinely reassigned to the Naval Materiel Command in Washington, D.C., in March. The form of discipline was not revealed.

Weinberger also said a civilian employee at the center had been reprimanded — the "maximum appropriate penalty that can be imposed" — for the same "errors in judgment" made by the officer, a commander. Neither the commander nor the civilian were identified.

He said he would not hesitate to call in the Justice Department to investigate alleged fraudulent pricing practices by defense contractors.

McHugh apparently knew nothing of the disciplinary action being considered against him because when told in a telephone interview that Weinberger apparently had referred to him, he replied, "I wasn't relieved of my command. I don't know who he's talking about."

The present commander of the facility has not been relieved of his command, the Navy said.

The issue involves charges by Pentagon auditors that the center bought $80,284 worth of parts for an F-16 fighter-bomber simulator from the Sperry Corp. of New York City that could have been purchased for $3,638 through the Navy's own supply system.

McHugh said a shortage of 240 personnel at the center forced the Navy to concentrate on the more expensive parts purchases and that it had saved $4.8 million in buying spares for the new F-16 Hornet.

Weinberger said contractors could be disqualified from seeking defense contracts and asserted that the Pentagon will try to recover some of the money spent on spare parts.

Sanford Man, 26, Jailed In Burglary-Rape Case

SUSPECT NABBED

A 22-year-old Sanford man was arrested early Saturday after a Sanford patrolman allegedly spotted someone trying to break into a Sanford office building.

Officer C.J. Coyne said he saw a man standing on a walkway outside a rear door on the second floor of the Starke Building, 1101 Sanford Ave., at about 12:48 a.m.

Coyne said that when the man spotted him he threw a pair of pliers to the ground. Coyne said he found what appeared to be pliers imprints around the door lock and window casings. He also found a flashlight with a pair of stockings on it, he said.

David Edward Myers, of 2450 Byrd St., was arrested and charged with attempted burglary and possession of burglary tools. He was being held in the Seminole County jail today under $1,000 bond.

CHURCH BURGLARIZED

A thief broke into the Geneva Baptist Church between 8:30 p.m. Sunday and 5 a.m. Monday and stole $20 in cash and keys to the church and portable buildings.

The doors to four classrooms were pried open and the money was taken from the rooms. The thief also entered the main church building, cut a hole in the door to the pastor's office and took the keys from the office, according to a Seminole County sheriff's report.

SEXUAL BATTERY

A 28-year-old Texas man was arrested Monday and charged with committing sexual battery against a 9-year-old Sanford girl.

Carl Gene Huddleston of Milano, Tex., was arrested at Sanford Avenue and 12th Street by Sanford police officers after the girl's stepmother told police she had observed the man performing oral sex on the girl.

Huddleston is being held in the Seminole County jail without bond.

STOLEN CAR

A Sanford man was arrested and charged with grand theft near W. 3rd Street and Mulberry Avenue at 11:36 p.m. Thursday when a Sanford police officer stopped him and discovered that the car he was driving was a stolen vehicle.

Barry T. Washington, 22, of 301 E. 5th St., who was driving a 1983 2-door beige Alfa Romeo car, was also charged with military desertion. He was booked into the Seminole County jail in lieu of $10,000 bond.

MAN TAKES GUN

A 40-year-old man said another man stole a pistol from his car after a second man had struck him in the face at Sunland near Sanford early Sunday.

John D. Totman, 40, of Apopka, told Seminole County deputies the incident began when he picked up a young female hitchhiker at about 2 a.m. and dropped her off on Bamboo Drive in Sunland.

Totman said that when he stopped his car a young man approached his vehicle and hit him in the face while Totman sat in the car. Totman said he pointed his .22-caliber pistol at the man and he withdrew.

Totman said he returned the pistol to its holster between the seats of the car, and a second young man opened the passenger door, grabbed the pistol and fled.

No arrests have been made in the case, according to deputies.

DOGNAPPING

Someone stole a 3-year-old female Irish Setter, valued at $400, from the backyard of a Sanford woman's home between 6:30 a.m. and 4:15 p.m. Monday.

Belinda Grant, 32, of 1118 Magnolia Ave., said her pet's name is Brandy.

TOOL THEFT

A thief stole a tool box containing tools valued at $200 from a camper parked in a parking lot at 5301 Pennsylvania Ave., Altamonte Springs, between 3 a.m. and 5:24 p.m. Saturday.

Ronald Lynn Link, 36, of 1247 Hunt St., Longwood, is the owner of the stolen property, according to a Seminole County deputy's report.

BABY SEATS

Two baby car seats and a double baby stroller, with a total value of $195, were stolen from a 1982 Mercury parked near a Sanford residence between 11 p.m. Wednesday and 11 a.m. Thursday.

The owner of the stolen property is Bob Hoekstra, 33, of 801 S. Park Ave.

DUI DISPOSITIONS

The following persons, arrested for driving under the influence in Seminole County in June, have had their drivers' licenses suspended for six months and have been ordered by the court to pay a $250 fine, to pay $10 to the Crimes Commission Trust Fund, attend Counter Attack school and contribute 50 hours work to community service:

Jack Jay Kraftchick, 173 Sorrento Circle, Winter Park.
David A. Yost, 8148 Rolling Log, Goldenrod.
John S. Clark, 2500 Howell Branch Road, Casselberry.
Una Kelly Day, 627 Spring Oaks Blvd., Altamonte Springs.

Andrew Young And His Vision

"It's not a hostile, alien world that's trying to overthrow American values. It's a world we had a part in making and a world that is asking for U.S. help and assistance."

That unthreatening vision of the Third World is the view of Andrew Young, mayor of Atlanta and former U.N. ambassador under President Carter. Young was one of several distinguished Americans who recently received awards from the American Academy of Achievement.

His vision of the Third World has survived bitter disappointment. The human rights policy of the Carter administration, of which Young was an articulate exponent, suffered chilling reverses after the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and the taking of U.S. hostages in Iran. During the Reagan administration, the American people have come to feel increasingly threatened by the Third World and increasingly hostile to anti-American regimes and revolutionary forces.

When Young looks at the Third World, he sees leaders, many of whom were educated in U.S. universities and missionary schools, struggling to develop their countries.

"I don't know of a single successful Third World leader educated in Russia. ...Robert Mugabe (president of Zimbabwe) was educated by the Jesuits in mission schools. ...Agostinho Neto (late president of Angola) was a doctor, a poet, educated in Protestant missionary schools. ...Our critics see us as not living up to what we say is the American dream."

By dealing with Third World leaders as people with shared values, not as threatening ideological symbols, Young believes that U.S. policy can "gain the support and understanding of the Third World to counter Soviet policy."

This means negotiating with regional powers to resolve disputes, Young says. "The Panama Canal Treaty is better for U.S. security than all the military aid and covert operations in Central America."

It also means economic development. "The Soviets think the pie is fixed in size and must be redivided. But we in America believe that the pie is expanding. If capitalism is going to work, it must extend into the Third World."

Young advocates "a mechanism to do for the inner cities and the developing world what we did in the '50s with Europe and Japan. We created banks for financing their reconstruction and redevelopment. We've got to do that not only for Mexico but also for Youngstown, Ohio."

Spoken like a mayor-ambassador, Andrew Young defies the divisions of race and nationality. He extends the civil rights struggle of the American black to the human rights struggle of all people.

Politics is about fear and hate and greed in the short term. But Andrew Young is about compassion and cooperation and brotherhood.

Andrew Young has survived in the world of politics. His values must survive in foreign policy.

WHOOOPS...

WHOOOPS is not whoop, a cry of delight, rhyming with soup. It is an interjection of dismay, rhyming with oops.

WHOOOPS is what people call WPPSS, the Washington Public Power Supply System, the government agency which has issued more municipal bonds than any other in America and now faces bankruptcy and default on the bonds.

What has happened might have been predicted. It has happened in both of two great river valleys of the country where the federal government got into the electric business in a big way.

In the Pacific Northwest, the federal Bonneville Power Administration encouraged a consortium of public utilities to build five nuclear power generating stations to supplement the cheap water power produced by BPA at a series of federal dams on the Columbia River system. Only one of the five plants is still under construction, the others having been cancelled or deferred. The debt is $8.2 billion. Either the ratepayers of the region or the holders of the bonds or the taxpayers are going to have to pick up the enormous tab.

In the Tennessee Valley, the federal Tennessee Valley Authority has gone the same way. It started generating water power, moved into coal-fired generating plants and then into nuclear, planning 16 reactors, of which 10 have now been dropped or deferred. Electric rates have soared and TVA, once hailed as the savior of the valley, now is called the most hated institution in Tennessee.

What went wrong? As we see it, what can happen too easily to any government agency, especially those that engage in enterprises in the commercial sector. In a word, empire-building.

BERRY'S WORLD

"Didja hear me, chief? I said we just got a hold of the campaign and briefing books of the six Democratic candidates for president."

By Donna Estes

State Sen. Richard Langley has put his heart and considerable strength as a legislator into representing Seminole County which is now part of his district.

And he didn't take kindly, during the special session, to remarks reportedly made in jest by a colleague. Sen. Harry Johnston, D-West Palm Beach.

Despite the fact that he said before he went to Tallahassee for the special session that he would vote against the budget package and stood with that commitment, he was able to include funding for proposed improvements of East Road, major entranceway to Seminole Community College, in the budget bill.

He received a good deal of flack from colleagues because of pushing through that item. And reportedly Johnston said something to the effect that East Road would be a quarter-million dollar mediocre road to a mediocre college and the cost would come out of the salaries of the poor, underpaid teachers of the state.

Aides of the governor assured that none of the items in the bill would be line vetoed.

That is unless Graham's staff did not have authority to make the promise.

Langley is said to have made an eloquent speech against the proposed increases in taxes in the budget bill on the floor of the Senate and his colleagues listened.

As he was concluding his speech, Langley asked a show of hands of those senators who fully understood what was contained in the bill which was so hastily put together. Not a single member raised his hand. The bill passed the Senate, however, with only 10 senators opposing.

Among those opponents was not only the Clairmont Republican, but also Sen. John Vogt, D-Cocoa Beach, and Toni Jennings, R-Orlando, all three Seminole's state senators.

Meanwhile, all four of Seminole's House members, Bobby Brantley, Carl Selph, Art Grindle and Tom Drage, voted against. The vote was a lot closer in the House where 113 of the 120 members were present. A total of 52 representatives voted against. If five representatives had voted different the bill would have failed there.

Brantley notes that the day before the session, a total of 59 were opposed. The opposition was considered a conservative coalition. Brantley said seven bailed out of opposing before the vote was taken. He said a lot of arm-twisting went on.

Brantley said the section of the bill labeled with a misnomer "foreign corporations' taxes," doesn't actually tax foreign corporations. It taxes American corporations which have headquarters in Florida, but also operate in foreign countries.

He noted that the Nestles Corp., considered as American as hot dogs and apple pie, and one of the biggest citrus owners in the state, is a Swiss corporation and will not pay one cent of that tax increase.

But American citrus companies, many of which depend on foreign markets to sell as much as 90 percent of their products, will be taxed on those sales.

Brantley said while legislators were being told that the bill would raise $95 million annually in taxes, the state's Department of Revenue was saying that the state will realize $300 million from that source and other estimates go as high as $500 million.

"I think what we are going to see is that the entire special session was a ploy by the governor to raise surplus dollars for the treasury so when he begins gearing up for a U.S. Senate race, he can give substantial tax relief and that's wrong," Brantley said.

"I hope this really improves education," Brantley said.

WASHINGTON WORLD

At last: Bush Gets To Vote

By Steve Gerstel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President George Bush, after being shut out for two and a half years, has finally cast his first vote.

The great moment came last week when Bush, in his role as president of the Senate, broke a 49-49 tie and gave the administration a victory in efforts to go ahead with production of new nerve gas bombs and artillery shells.

The vote underscored once again how little the Founding Fathers found for the vice president to do, except hang around in case something befalls the chief executive of the nation.

The Constitution is explicit: "The vice president of the United States shall be president of the Senate, but shall have no vote, unless they be equally divided."

And for a long time — probably until the presidency of Dwight Eisenhower — vice president did little more than that.

Which led John Nance Garner, FDR's first vice president, to comment that the post was not "worth a bucket of warm spit."

Of course, Garner, then the speaker, knew all that when he accepted FDR's invitation to the ticket.

As another Texan, Lyndon Johnson, knew it when he became John Kennedy's vice presidential candidate in 1960.

Starting with Richard Nixon, vice presidents became much more active and Bush has carried on the latter-day tradition.

Although still very much an invisible agent in the administration — in contrast to the White House troika or the top Cabinet members — Bush has quietly carried the message for President Reagan, here and abroad.

But this is no thanks to the Constitution. Whatever Bush does for Reagan is up to Reagan.

Although Bush spends almost all his time away from Capitol Hill, he has been summoned, sometimes urgently, to the Senate by Republican leaders on the chance of a tie vote.

Until last week, those trips proved washouts, the Senate deciding the issue without his help.

Last week's vote was a rarity but it did show how handy it is to have a vice president.

The question of nerve gas production — one of the most controversial issues in the military bills for several years — last year went against the Pentagon in the Senate.

In effect, Bush provided the vote the administration needed.

It can, however, be argued that the two missing senators, Goldwater of Arizona and Murkowski of Alaska, both pro-administration, could have been found or the vote postponed until they surfaced.

John Adams, the first vice president, still holds the record for votes cast, 29, with John Calhoun, a close second with 28.

At the bottom are 10 vice presidents, including Gerald Ford and Nelson Rockefeller, who never had a chance.

The 'Cut-Off' Formula

NEW YORK (NEA) — The concept of a so-called "symmetrical cut-off" in military aid to Central American nations is receiving serious consideration on Capitol Hill these days. It may provide the strongest political justification yet for President Reagan's policies in that troubled area of the globe.

The concept is essentially simple. At the moment, the "marxist" Sandinista regime in Nicaragua is providing a broad array of political, military and logistical support to the communist-supported guerrillas now trying to overthrow the duly elected government of El Salvador. As a means of counter-pressure, the United States is providing more or less similar aid to the "contras" — anti-Sandinista forces conducting guerrilla-style operations against the government of Nicaragua.

Various senior Democrats in the House of Representatives have been after President Reagan to cut off aid to the "contras," arguing that the United States has no business taking sides in what they see as essentially a Nicaraguan civil war. Mr. Reagan has implied that he would have no objection to ending our assistance if only the Sandinista regime would simultaneously abandon its aid to what, but for communist meddling, would be merely an internal Salvadoran dispute.

The almost architectural symmetry of this situation is what has prompted a new idea: Why not offer to end U.S. aid to the "contras" in Nicaragua if and when the Nicaraguan government certifies to the U.S. Congress that it, in turn, has ended all assistance to the Salvadoran rebels?

Let it be added hastily that nobody proposes to take seriously any mere assertion that the Sandinista regime might make. Like any other Marxist government, Nicaragua's would cheerfully lie itself blue in the face to achieve an objective as useful as ending American aid to the Nicaraguan "contras." But U.S. intelligence resources in Central America are formidable — "We can hear a toilet flush in Managua," as one American official put it, rather indelicately — and a Sandinista lie, duly exposed, would powerfully reinforce congressional determination to keep the heat on Nicaragua. That would be useful, because at the moment it badly needs reinforcing.

Such a "symmetrical cut-off" proposal would, in fact, force Moscow and its Latin American cat's-paws to make a highly unpalatable choice. Either they would have to stop supplying and just generally encouraging the Salvadoran guerrillas through neighboring Nicaragua — a deprivation that would soon bring to an end the whole communist drive to topple the Salvadoran government — or they could continue their aid to the Salvadoran rebels and inevitably strengthen Mr. Reagan's hand in seeking further help from Congress for the Nicaraguan "contras."

House Democrats are reluctant to reject the "symmetrical cut-off" proposal out of hand, because it is manifestly equitable and also because it effectively underscores President Reagan's basic strategy in Central America: to bring pressure on Nicaragua, not with a view to toppling the Sandinista regime, but simply to prevent that regime from spreading its Marxist infection northward to other Central American nations.

Contemplating this new proposal, and more broadly the on-going debate within Congress, and between Congress and the White House, over our Central American policy, one cannot resist the conclusion that what this country really needs, and is probably working its way toward, is some updated reformulation of the Monroe Doctrine.

The original doctrine, propounded by President Monroe in 1823 when the colonial possessions of the European powers were declaring their independence, warned Europe's nations that efforts to extend their power in the Western Hemisphere would not be tolerated by the United States. In 1960, when Moscow's ally Fidel Castro seized control of Cuba, the Monroe Doctrine was ceremonially repudiated by American liberals, many of whom privately rejoiced at this trimming of U.S. claws.

But the Reagan administration is clearly trying to contain the communist contagion, which has now leaped from island Cuba to Nicaragua on the mainland, and the "symmetrical cut-off" concept may be an important first step in formulating a new U.S. policy designed to do exactly that.

Reagan: Fire The Jokers

I wonder whether President Reagan realizes the trouble he is now in over the sudden scandal of the purloined Carter briefing book. Of course this sort of thing is done all the time in elections great and small, but this one is out in the open now and it is not going to go away. There will be congressional investigations, grand juries, the FBI, investigative reporting, and all the rest of it. In one unimportant sense, the offense was commonplace and inconsequential — Reagan could not possibly have lost a debate with Jimmy Carter — but in the only sense that really matters, it is major. Americans do not like to see their presidential elections fooled around with.

Reagan ought to reflect that it was not the trivial Watergate burglary that proved lethal to the Nixon presidency, but the illegal and publicly unraveling attempt to cover up those who were involved.

Indeed, it was Nixon's own soft-heartedness that did him in. Yes, believe it or not, Nixon's soft-heartedness. Throughout his long political career, Nixon always had extreme difficulty in firing people. He worried about their reputations, their families. Thus, instead of cleaning house immediately, and firing Mitchell, Haldeman, or whoever was involved at the command level, Nixon tried to brush it all under the rug, deny what could be denied until the next revelation struck, equivocate until he had painted himself into a corner. He forgot that the presidency is more important than any individual, certainly more important than some appointee, however exalted for the time being.

Take, on the other hand, Dwight Eisenhower. As soon as his chief of staff, Sherman Adams, was touched by even a minor impropriety, accepting small gifts from a Boston operator named Bernard Goldfine, Adams was gone.

Eisenhower, after all, had made the minor scandals of the Truman administration a major campaign theme in 1952. He could hardly tolerate the same sort of thing on his own staff. And Eisenhower was an instinctive commander. He knew power can be a fragile thing, that it can easily be undermined and that once undermined it can be irrevocable. He acted ruthlessly in the Adams case to safeguard the White House.

President Reagan now must choose between the Nixon approach and the Eisenhower approach.

Reagan almost certainly should have fired budget director David Stockman after Stockman blurted out a lot of doubts about the administration's economic program to liberal reporter William Greider. Known leakers have also survived in the Reagan White House.

It may be in the case of the Carter papers that Reagan will have to fire former campaign manager William Casey, now head of the CIA. He might have to fire chief of staff James Baker, or one of his long-time intimates from California days.

Synfuels Board Has Oil, Gas Ties

WASHINGTON — A curious ritual is performed at most board meetings of the publicly funded U.S. Synfuels Corp.

The corporation's ethics officer, Owen Malone, rises and assures certain board members that their substantial stock holdings in oil and gas companies do not represent a "sufficient conflict of interest" to prevent their deliberations on subsidies to those same companies.

The taxpayers, who will be backing the loan and price guarantees Synfuels does out, may well have a different opinion. All seven members of the board owned oil company stock at the time of their appointments in 1981, according to the financial disclosures they were required to make. Stock transactions since then have not been made public.

My associates John Dillon and Corky Johnson examined Synfuels documents and the disclosure forms filed with the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee. They turned up several items that look like conflicts — quick like conflicts — but are not considered conflicts by the ethics officer. For example:

— Two projects under consideration at a February 1983 board meeting were the White Rocks Oil Sands project in Utah and the Cathedral Bluffs project in Colorado. Board member Robert Monks owns stock in Wheelabrator-Frye, a participant in White Rocks. Member John Carter owns stock in Occidental Oil, a Cathedral Bluffs partner. Yet Malone granted them his routine absolution from conflict of interest.

— The stock portfolio of Monks and his wife reads like a roster of Big Oil. Their holdings include shares of Exxon, Gulf, Texaco, Union Oil, Atlantic Richfield, Conoco and Standard Oil of Indiana. They also hold stock in Houston Natural Gas and the Fluor Corp., an energy construction firm. The companies in which Monks owns stock are involved in at least nine projects that are potential recipients of Synfuels money.

— At the time of his appointment, Carter owed more than $250,000 to Ashland Oil, a partner in a Breckinridge, Ky., energy project. Ashland has since backed out of the venture. Carter also owns stock in Exxon, whose partner TOSCO was involved in one Synfuels project and is still involved in another.

— Board member Milton Mason's engineering firm, Sullivan and Mason, formed a company called Syn-Tech to work on synthetic fuels ventures. When Mason joined Synfuels, his former firm sold its holdings in Syn-Tech to another company. The purchaser still owned stock in Sullivan and Mason, but has since sold it, according to a Synfuels official.

— Ethics officer Malone did warn of potential conflicts when Monks and board member Victor Thompson were appointed. Like Monks, Thompson owns stock in at least three companies with subsidy applications before the corporation.

Correction: I reported earlier that eight Synfuels executives make more than Cabinet officers. In fact, only four are paid more than the $80,100 Cabinet-level salary. And though their general counsel Ed Cox was offered $76,000 a year, he voluntarily rolled it back to $67,200. And Kathryn Schroeder, wife of Synfuels President Victor Schroeder, makes $32,000 as secretary to Board Chairman Ed Noble, not $45,000. She was Noble's secretary before he joined Synfuels and before she married Schroeder.

Spy Toil Haunts U.S. Embassy In Moscow

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Pyotr Vashchenko and his family are back in the news. In 1978, they were part of a group that took refuge at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow; they said they suffered religious persecution in Russia, and they vowed not to leave the embassy until they could leave the Soviet Union.

They stayed in a basement room in the embassy for nearly five years. They left earlier this year when the Kremlin agreed to let one of the group emigrate. They flew from Moscow to the West in June, bound for the promised land of Israel, and for all intents and purposes their long struggle is over.

The fascinations of the ordeal linger, however.

One fascination in particular.

It's never been widely reported, but while the Vashchenkos were in sanctuary they were periodically abused by some employees of the American embassy. The employees were Russian citizens, hired by the United States, and they harassed and even threatened Vashchenko and his family.

The U.S. government has never officially admitted the harassment. But Foreign Service people who were there agree that the abuse was sometimes flagrant. The diplomats say the Russian workers were spies for the Soviet police, and they tried to get the Vashchenkos to give up and go home.

Soviet spies in the U.S. Embassy? The Vashchenko case may have brought it to light, but the situation has existed for many years. Officials at the State Department say that host country nationals are traditionally hired to work in American legations, including the one in Moscow.

One official, Irene Piechowicz, says the reason for the hiring is "simple economics." She says the host nationals work in menial jobs, cleaning and maintenance, for example, and thus it is cheaper to pay a local

At the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, about 10 percent of the employees are Soviet nationals. It's an accepted fact that those Russians are spying for their government.

maid, or a local driver, than it is to send Americans to fill the posts.

So the embassy in Moscow presently employs a couple of dozen Russian citizens, and they account for about 10 percent of the 200 member staff. The State Department insists the Soviet workers are kept in check; they are watched closely and never allowed above the first floor of the embassy.

Still, no one denies the risks involved. There is no doubt that most, if not all, of the Russian employees are experienced spies. Morris Rothenberg, a retired diplomat once posted in Moscow, says Americans sent to that embassy are warned from the start to beware of the folks who sweep the floors.

Whatever their rank, the Soviet employees keep their eyes and ears open. And they undoubtedly do more than that. Informed Foreign Service officers say the spies have pilfered papers, on occasion, and may have helped plant electronic eavesdropping devices in American offices and parlors.

Also, the Russians write voluminous reports to their superiors. Rothenberg had a maid, for instance, who, he says, wrote a weekly report of his activities.

Interestingly, Rothenberg says his relationship with the maid was perfectly candid: "I knew she was spying, and she knew I knew. We both accepted it. We got along very well. I remember that from time to time she even tried to help me; she warned me to look out for some less affable embassy spies."

The maid helped in other ways, as well. And, in fact, Rothenberg says the Russian employees all have their value. He says they know the customs and the peculiarities of Moscow, they know how to cut red tape and bureaucratic intransigence, and that is beneficial to American interests.

Despite the snooping then, and the kind of thing that happened to the Vashchenko family, the State Department says the Russian employees are more of an asset in Moscow than they are a threat. So, officials say the United States has no plans to change its longstanding policies on embassy employment.

By the way, Soviet authorities do not have any plans to change their hiring practices either. They have never employed any Americans at their embassy in Washington. That may seem a bit unfair under the circumstances, but it's good news for anyone who may seek sanctuary in their basement.

FLORIDA IN BRIEF

Commissioners Guilty In Vote Rigging Bribe Case

TAMPA (UPI) — Suspended Hillsborough County Commissioners Fred Anderson and Joe Kolvas face up to 40 years in prison and $20,000 in fines following their conviction on charges of conspiracy and extortion.

A federal jury found the two guilty Monday of scheming to collect a $75,000 bribe to rig a rezoning vote and accepting $5,000 each, and convicted Tampa attorney Michael Sierra for conspiracy.

Sierra faces 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

U.S. District Judge George C. Carr scheduled sentencing for Sept. 1, and allowed the three to remain free on bond.

The seven men and five women deliberated about 13 hours over a three-day period before finding the three guilty on the first day of the seventh week of the trial.

Anderson and Kolvas told reporters later they were innocent and the convictions will be appealed. Sierra had no comment as he brushed past reporters.

Suspended Commissioner Jerry Bowmer, who pleaded guilty to conspiracy and extortion, was the government's chief witness. His sentencing was delayed until after the trial of the others.

Bowmer was arrested Jan. 31 when he accepted $15,000 in marked money. He implicated the others in the scheme and agreed to assist FBI agents obtain evidence.

Another Jet Hijacked

MIAMI (UPI) — A "clean-cut" Latin bank employee who claimed to have a bomb hijacked an Eastern Airlines jet to Havana today and was immediately seized by 30 machine-gun toting Cuban soldiers. It was the second skyjacking to Cuba in less than 48 hours.

The hijacker, tentatively identified by the FBI as J.C. Montero, a computer operator for Chase Manhattan Bank in New York City, commandeered the wide-bodied L-1011 carrying 221 passengers and 11 crewmembers on a flight from New York to Miami, officials said.

No one was injured, and the plane returned to Miami at 4:48 a.m. after a 41-minute flight from Havana.

When the plane landed in Cuba, the hijacker was dragged into a waiting police car by about 30 militiamen outfitted in brown uniforms and armed with machine guns. He was searched and handcuffed. The briefcase he was carrying was seized but it was not known if it contained a bomb.

Killers Granted Stays

TAMPA (UPI) — Two half-brothers scheduled to be executed today for murder were granted stays of execution by a federal judge Monday, less than 16 hours before they were to die in the electric chair.

William Riley Jent, 32, and Ernest Miller, 27, turned to U.S. District Judge George C. Carr for a stay after being denied one by the Florida Supreme Court three hours earlier.

Miller and Jent were sentenced to die for beating, raping and burning to death a Pasco County woman four years ago.

The Florida Supreme Court unanimously rejected claims the trial court erred by refusing to hold an evidentiary hearing on allegations of prosecutorial misconduct, or that the men were given ineffective representation by their trial attorneys.

Hardee's Gallops Into World Series — Broncos Earn State Berth

When you don't get much competition — it's time to move on to bigger and better things.

Which is exactly what manager Jim Lucas' National League A Bronco All-Stars and manager Ed Suggs' Hardee's Mustang All-Stars are going to do with their powerhouse teams. The Broncos, who won the district tournament with three straight wins this past weekend, will play in the Bronco State Tournament at Miami, beginning July 28. The Mustangs, who also swept three in a row over the weekend, begin World Series Tournament action Friday at Tampa.

"I think this team can be better than the one three years ago (which finished second in the Bronco World Series)," said Lucas Monday morning. "The only thing that can hold this team back is the coaching. If we do our job, we'll do real well."

Lucas points to power as being the main difference between the two. The Broncos confirmed his faith with an awesome long-ball display Saturday and Sunday, after Friday's game were rained out.

Bobby Moose cracked two round-trippers while James Joyce, Mike Davis and winning pitcher Craig Smith each slammed one as the Broncos whipped out Gainesville, 17-2, on Saturday. Joyce was the defensive standout, gunning down two baserunners while stealing. The National League B All-Stars had nipped Gainesville, 6-5, earlier Saturday to earn the right to play the A team again.

Robbie Koehn

Jamie Moeny

Erik Wofford

Bobby Moose

Sunday's loss, though, was just as lopsided as the B team, made up predominantly of 11-year-olds, couldn't match their 12-year-old counterparts' power.

Erik Wofford hammered a third-inning, grand-slam home to highlight a seven-run outburst and the Broncos never looked back in a 13-3 victory over manager Bob Mauro's club.

Chris Hudson and Davis also ripped homers to back the strong hurling of winning pitcher Chris Norton.

The Mustangs, nonetheless, were just as devastating. On Saturday, Hardee's scored eight times each in the third and fourth innings to post an 18-0 victory over the National League Mustang B All-Stars. Winning pitcher Jamie Moeny went the first two innings while Pat Newell mopped up at they combined for a no-hitter.

Robbie Koehn was the hitting hero with a perfect 4-for-4 day which included four runs batted in. Lane Barrow, who singled, also accounted for four RBI. Jeff Livernols and Bryan Cole had two RBI apiece with a double. National B shortstop T.J. Calapa turned in three good plays defensively.

The Broncos also came back Sunday to put a 14-3 whipping on the National League B. Koehn was the winning pitcher as he, Newell and Lamb allowed just three hits.

Lamb and Livernols each doubled home two runs while Charlie Suggs, Travis Lloyd and Ricky Eckstein each had RBI doubles. Daryl Turnage and Casey Kelly drove home one run apiece with a single.

"The boys really looked sharp," said Suggs. "Our hitting was super, and our pitching was great, too. Our only problem is getting enough innings for our pitchers. We've got 11. We only allowed three hits in three games."

Seminole will join two teams from Tampa and another from Miami or Mexico in the World Series. Seminole's first game will be Friday night. — SAM COOK

Altamonte's Off Night

Eustis, Westgate 1-Hit Seniors — Force Final Game

By Chris Fister
Herald Sports Writer

EUSTIS — Altamonte pitcher Neil Harris pitched well enough to win here Monday night. Unfortunately for Altamonte, so did Eustis' Dave Westgate. Westgate allowed only an infield single to Tim Smith and the big righthander didn't allow any Altamonte baserunners to reach third as Eustis stayed alive in the District 14, Division II Senior League Tournament with a narrow 1-0 victory over Altamonte.

"If you don't score, you don't win," said Altamonte manager Clayton Garrison. "It was the best game I've ever seen Westgate pitch. Now we have to get ourselves together and come back and win tomorrow."

Eustis' victory forces a second game between the two rivals for the tournament crown. Altamonte and Eustis will square off tonight at 7:30 in Eustis. Kenny Chapdelaine will be on the mound for Altamonte while Eustis will go with Jay Carter.

Both Harris and Westgate were in control of the opposing hitters. Harris allowed only three hits in the game, and had a one-hitter going until Eustis scored its run on two hits in the bottom of the sixth. Westgate worked his way out of a slight jam in the first inning and was never in trouble again until the top of the seventh.

In the top of the first for Altamonte, T.J. Scaletta drew a walk to lead off and, with two outs, Kevin Bass walked to put runners on first and second. Westgate got out of the inning when he got Mark Coffey to ground out to second.

Eustis could have had a rally in the bottom of the first, but Altamonte's defense wouldn't let it happen. The leadoff man, Danny Sperry, reached on an error. But, he was promptly picked off first by Harris for the first out. Mark Hill then drew a walk, but he was out when Robbie Terrell hit into a fielder's choice. Terrell then tried to steal second, but he was nailed on a fine throw by Bass.

Carter and Harris breezed through the next couple of innings as neither team got anything going offensively until Eustis threatened in the bottom of the fourth. With one out, Terrell drew a walk and Carter reached on an Altamonte error to put runners on first and second. Harris then struck out Jeff Watson and got Jay Watson to hit into a force play to end the inning.

Altamonte got a couple of runners on in the fifth, but came away empty. With one out, Smith beat out an infield single and, one out later, Scaletta hit a ball to second base. Eustis' shortstop bobbled the throw at second and both runners were safe. Andy Dunn then flew out to center to end the inning with still no score in the game.

Altamonte stranded another runner on second in the top of the sixth and Eustis came back in the bottom of the frame with the only run of the game. Sperry drilled a double to left to lead off the inning and he went to third when the home plate umpire called a balk on Harris. Hill then bounced a grounder to second, but, with the Altamonte infield playing back, the second baseman had no chance to get the runner going home and Eustis took a 1-0 lead. With one out, Terrell reached on an infield single and stole both, second and third as Eustis tried to push home an insurance run. Harris didn't allow it, though, as he caught Carter looking at a third strike and fanned Jeff Watson for the third time in the game to end the inning.

Altamonte had its chances again in the top of the seventh but again came up empty. Smith walked to lead off and, one out later, Scaletta walked to put runners on first and second. With Dunn at the plate, both runners broke. Dunn squared to bunt but missed and Eustis' catcher, Chad Tiernan, threw out pinch runner Chapdelaine at third for the second out. Dunn then hit one toward the whole between short and third but shortstop, Jeff Watson, made a nice backhanded stop and threw out Dunn by a step to end the game.

Wes Weger strains to reach first base as West Oak Ridge's Nelson Samuels grasped the ball. Weger and the Altamonte Nationals won this earlier tournament game, but they were ousted Monday night by Ocoee.

Ocoee's 4-Run Outburst Ousts Nationals

District Baseball

WINTER GARDEN — Ocoee erupted for four runs in the fourth inning to overcome the Altamonte Nationals, 5-3, en route to the District 14, Division I Little League Major All-Star Tournament championship Monday. Ocoee will host the District 14 final Thursday.

Altamonte righthander Wes Weger allowed just five hits and held a 3-1 lead entering the fourth inning when Ocoee broke loose. Aaron Casteel, a nemesis for manager Wayne Weger's Astros in the Top Team Tournament, came back to haunt them again, blanking Altamonte after the third inning to pick up the win.

The Nationals jumped ahead 1-0 in the first against starter Ricky Graham when Todd Luke doubled down the third-base line, stole third and scored on Chris Radcliff's sharp single to left. Ocoee evened matters in the bottom of the frame, but Altamonte pulled ahead in the third. Radcliff, a sweet-swing 11-year-old, and Luke again did the damage. Luke reached on a bad-hop single to the shortstop and Radcliff hammered a shot over the right-field fence for a two-run homer and a 3-1 lead. "It was an unbelievable blast," said scorekeeper Doug Heiser.

After Ocoee's fourth-inning outburst, the Nationals loaded the bases in the fifth, but couldn't score. Radcliff whiffed his third hit and Weger followed with a single. Catcher Jerrey Thurston struck out, but Laurie Leiffer was hit with a pitch to load the bases. Jeff Conklin rapped a grounder to shortstop and Radcliff was forced at the plate. With two out and Shane Lunsford at the plate, Weger attempted to score on a short passed ball, but was caught in a rundown (2-5-2) and tagged out.

Altamonte shortstop Mike McNamee turned in the defensive gem of the night in the fourth inning when he flagged down a hot smash, held the runners at second and third, and threw out the batter.

Cory Prom (left) turned in a standout relief job Monday night during the Altamonte Juniors' 2-1 setback to Oviedo. Prom came on for starter Matt Messina and pitched out of a fourth-inning jam. The 13-year-old lefthander struck out eight of the 14 batters he faced. While Prom took care of the mound duties, right fielder Matt Lange was the offensive and defensive hero. Lang rapped three singles, stole three bases and also threw out a runner at first base on a one-hopper to right field. Tonight, Greg Ebbert (right) will try to duplicate Prom's mound performance as Altamonte and Oviedo get together for the District 14, Division 2 champion at Howe Field in DeLand at 7:30. Ebbert, also a lefty, was 12-0 during the regular season.

Veres, Oviedo Subdue Lifeless, Stale Juniors, 2-1

DELAND — For a team which hasn't played in eight days — Altamonte's Junior League All-Stars came out...and played like a team which hasn't played in eight days.

Whether they were flat, lifeless or stale, manager Frank Messina's 13-year-olds just didn't have it Monday night against Oviedo. But Oviedo's Ron Veres had it. The crafty righthander silenced the hard-hitting Altamonte club on just six singles as Oviedo pulled out a 2-1 victory in District 14 Division 2 Little League Junior All-Star Tournament action at Howe Field.

The layout — Altamonte won its first two games of the tournament on the weekend of July 9-10 then had to wait out the loser's bracket final — didn't help, but Messina wasn't making excuses.

"We practiced, and practiced, and practiced," said Messina after the loss which forces a winner-take-all game tonight at 7:30 at Howe Field. "But the bats just weren't there."

Messina hopes the bats come alive tonight when he sends his ace, lefthander Greg Ebbert (12-0 regular season), against the scrappy Oviedoans.

Altamonte had handled the Oviedo club and Veres handily during the first meeting, 7-1, as Anthony "Grade A" Laszale fashioned a four-hitter and his teammates pounded out 10 hits. But Laszale suffered a broken wrist on his pitching hand and has been relegated to the first-base coaching box for the rest of the tournament.

Pitching, though, wasn't Altamonte's problem Monday. Matt Messina started with three scoreless frames, helped considerably by catcher Randy Green's diving tag on a bang-bang out when Derrick Mays tried to steal home in the third.

Veres was also tough during the first three, having trouble only in the third when the first of three singles by Matt Lange, a base hit by Chris Brock and a walk to Green loaded the bases. Messina, however, popped to the mound to end the threat.

Oviedo got to Messina in the fourth. Johnathan Boston rapped a one-hopper to right field, but Lange, who also stole three bases on the night, gunned him down at first for one out. Willie Galney then powered a shot deep into the left-field corner for a double. Charles Warner singled and Galney stopped at third. Veres helped himself with a base hit to drive in Galney and sent Warner to third. Messina then uncorked a wild pitch to score Warner for a 2-0 lead.

After Messina walked Micah Kinnaird, manager Messina pulled him in favor of Cory Prom. The stylish lefthander was nothing short of spectacular. After walking Ricky Hampton, he whiffed Karl Wright and Mays to snuff out the rally.

Prom faced 14 hitters and struck out eight of them, including four in a row during one stretch.

Veres, flashing a nice curve ball which earned him five strikeouts, was in control, too. Altamonte missed a golden opportunity when Lange singled to lead off the fifth. He was running with the pitch and stole second. When the ball eluded the catcher, he chugged into third. He made it easily, but overran the base and was tagged out. Veres set down the next two hitters.

In the sixth, Messina walked, but was forced at second by Eric Martinez who stole second and went to third when twin brother Ernest grounded out to third. Veres, though, struck out Zac Maddox to end the threat.

Altamonte pushed across its only run in the seventh. With one out, Prom slapped a base hit to left and stole second. Lange grounded out to second as Prom took third. Brock laced a single up the middle to score Prom and cut the lead to 2-1.

Waiting for Brock to steal, Green fell behind on the count 0-2. He then lifted a pop fly into short left. The shortstop and the left fielder collided on the play, but the shortstop came away with the ball and the victory for Oviedo.

The winner of tonight's game takes one loss into the District 14 championship against the Division 1 winner on Thursday at Eustis.

Phils Can Corrales, Still Lose To Astros; Fisk Puts Sox In 1st

United Press International
Some jobs just aren't secure no matter what your position is. In television, for instance, it's ratings that count, and for baseball managers, it's often performance — not results — that can spur a change.

Yogi Berra found that out in 1964 when he was let go after managing the New York Yankees to a pennant, and on Monday, Pat Corrales of the first-place Philadelphia Phillies was summarily dismissed.

Paul Owens, the Phillies' general manager who took on the added field responsibility for the rest of this season, then had his 1983 debut spoiled by an 8-2 defeat at the hands of the streaking Houston Astros, who belted out 17 hits.

"Everything they hit seemed to find a hole," Owens said. "They certainly spoiled my managing debut. All we could do was try to play catch-up."

Although the Phillies are just one-half game out of first after Monday night's loss, their record is just 43-43 in the weak NL East, so team president Bill Giles decided to bring in Owens for his second tour of managerial duty in Philadelphia. Owens last managed in 1972, one month after taking over as general manager in June of that year.

"Paul said, 'I want to do it. I've been in this organization for 28 years and I feel I can win with this team,'" related Giles. Owens, who said morale wasn't a problem, added he would try to get everyone thinking together more as a team.

"We're hitting well. We have four .300 hitters and our cleanup man has 50 RBI. Right now we are an outstanding team. We definitely are contenders."

Houston made things easy for winner Joe Niekro, who scattered seven hits to pick up his eighth victory in 15 decisions.

In the only other NL game, Atlanta topped the New York Mets 7-4.

In the American League, it was Milwaukee 4, Texas 3 and Milwaukee 5, Texas 4; the New York Yankees 4, Minnesota 2; the Chicago White Sox 5, Cleveland 3; Toronto 8, Kansas City 2; Boston 7, California 2; Baltimore 9, Seattle 4; and Detroit 4, Oakland 2.

Braves 7, Mets 4

At Atlanta, Jerry Royster tripled in two runs and scored on a wild pitch to highlight a four-run fifth inning, that rallied the Braves, who trailed 4-0 at one time. Royster also doubled in Mike Jorgensen with the Braves' seventh run. New York took a 1-0 lead in the first off starter Craig McMurry on a run-scoring single by George Foster and made it 4-0 in the second on a two-run single by Mookie Wilson and Foster's RBI single.

A.L./N.L. Baseball

Reliever Rick Camp, the second of four Atlanta pitchers, hurled 3 1-3 innings, striking out two and allowing just one hit, to even his record at 7-7. Steve Bedrosian pitched the ninth for his 15th save.

White Sox 5, Indians 3

Chicago catcher Carlton Fisk has a burning desire to be first — even if it takes batting second to do it.

Fisk drove in four runs with a two-run homer and a single Monday night to lead the White Sox into the top spot in the AL West with a 5-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

"It wasn't until I was batting second that I started to play well," said Fisk, who was inserted into the No. 2 slot May 22.

Fisk, hitting .350 with 35 RBI since batting behind leadoff batter Rudy Law, belted a 2-1 pitch deep into the left-field stands for his 15th homer following a walk to Law in the third. He chased Juan Elchelberger, 3-10, with a two-out, two-run single in the fourth.

The White Sox, who lead the Rangers by one game, are 30-18 since May 26, when they were in sixth place.

Chicago starter LaMarr Hoyt, 11-9, who scattered four hits over seven innings, mirrored the White Sox surge to the top.

Hoyt, who was tagged for a pair of fifth-inning runs on Ron Hassey's two-run homer, got relief help from Salome Barojas, who got the final five outs for his ninth save.

In other AL games, Milwaukee swept a double-header from Texas 4-3 and 5-4. New York topped Minnesota 4-2. Toronto dumped Kansas City 8-2. Boston defeated California 7-2. Baltimore thrashed Seattle 9-4 and Detroit stopped Oakland 4-2.

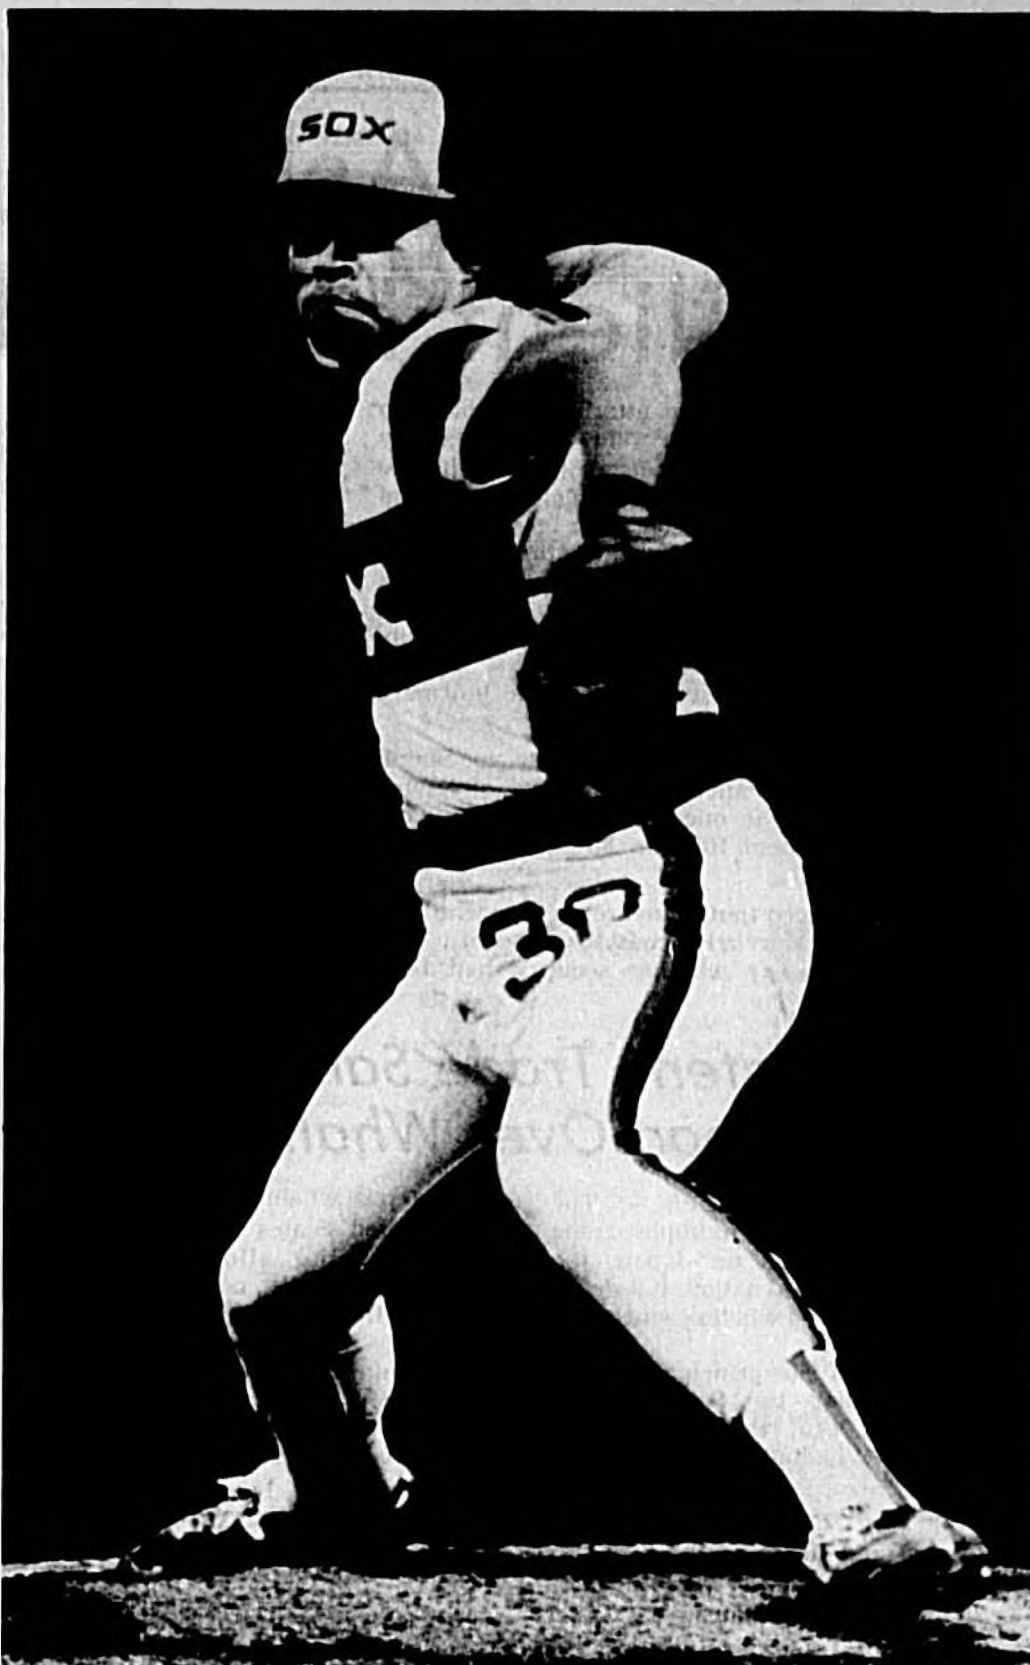

In the National League, Houston throttled Philadelphia 8-2 and Atlanta defeated New York 7-4.

Braves 7, Mets 4

At Milwaukee, Cecil Cooper's eighth-inning sacrifice fly broke a 3-3 tie and lifted Milwaukee to its eighth straight victory and a double-header sweep.

Yankees 4, Twins 2

At New York, Graig Nettles tripled in two first-inning runs and Dave Winfield

Salome Barojas nailed down the final five outs Monday night as the Chicago White Sox tripped Cleveland, 5-3, to move into first place in the A.L. West.

tripled in another in the seventh to lead the Yankees to their fourth straight victory.

Blue Jays 8, Royals 2

At Toronto, Jim Clancy, 9-6, fired a five-hitter and Buck Martinez, Cliff Johnson and Barry Bonnell drove had two RBI to lead the Blue Jays.

Red Sox 7, Angels 2

At Anaheim, Calif., Gary Allenson drove in three runs with four hits, including a two-run homer to help hand the Angels their seventh loss in eight games.

Orioles 9, Mariners 4
At Seattle, Ken Singleton collected four hits and two RBI and Jim Dwyer added three hits and two RBI to guide Baltimore to their eighth win in nine games.

Tigers 4, A's 2

At Oakland, Calif., Chet Lemon homered and Lou Whitaker, Lance Parrish and Glenn Wright drove in runs to lead Detroit.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

American Soccer Center Registers Women, Youth

The soon to be opened American Soccer Center indoor soccer facility, located across from the Seminole Pony Baseball complex on State Road 419 near Winter Springs, is holding registration for a Women's Recreational League and a Youth Development League.

The Women's Recreational League is designed for both women new to soccer (Division II) and the experienced players (Division I). The First Division makes indoor soccer available to the experienced player who wants to play at a competitive level.

Division II is designed for women new to soccer who want to have fun and learn the game. Dan Wood, a United States Soccer Federation (USSF) "A" licensed coach and the resident pro, will assist with basic instruction during the introductory eight week season.

Division I will play on Saturday afternoons while Division II will meet on Wednesday mornings or evenings. Registration fee for either league is $27.66 per player.

The Youth Development League is designed for youngsters of either sex who are learning soccer and may not desire to be placed on a team in a competitive league. Boys and girls, ages 6-14, will be accepted for one-hour sessions on Saturdays. They will be divided into groups appropriate to their age and skill levels. Wood will be the head instructor.

Each hour session will consist of instruction to improve skills and understanding of the game, followed by controlled six-a-side games lasting between 20-30 minutes.

The introductory four-week program costs $12.78 per player. Following this, there will be a 10-week season offered in the Development League.

Hannah Dealt To Raiders?

TAMPA (UPI) — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers have traded offensive tackle Charley Hannah to the Los Angeles Raiders for defensive end Dave Brown and the Raiders' fourth-round pick next year, area newspapers reported today.

The Bucs had no comment this morning, but were expected to formally announce the transaction later today.

Both The Tampa Tribune and the St. Petersburg Times reported the trade was made over the weekend and Hannah's wife told the Times the deal was completed verbally Saturday night.

Margaret Anne Hannah said from her home in Alhambra, Ala., Sunday night Hannah had left for California to join the Raiders at their training camp in Santa Rosa.

The delay in confirming the deal is blamed on a requirement that all trades be approved by the NFL office, which was closed over the weekend.

Falcons Qualify For National Tourney; Meadows, Gators Take Angelo's Crown

When is a fourth as good as a second?
When the two teams ahead of you have already qualified for the National American Softball Association 18 and Under Tournament.

Seminole's Falcons earned a spot in the National Tournament in Satellite Beach on Aug. 5, 6 and 7 by splitting four games in the Regional Tournament over the weekend at Jacksonville.

Manager Mike Averill's girls turned in a strong defensive performance in the opening game against the Jacksonville Astros to claim a 7-2 victory. "They had baserunners in just about every inning," said Averill. "But our defense came through."

Six runs in the sixth inning proved the difference as the Falcons erased a 2-1 lead. Lake Howell's Mary Johnson tripled home the tying run and Michelle Kuhlri doubled home two more to go ahead. Lake Mary's Andrea Fenning followed with a bases-loaded triple for some padding, but was later called out for missing second base and settled for a single.

Lake Howell's Barbara Helm walked one and blanked Jax after the first frame for the victory.

In game two, inability to hit with a runners on third base with less than two out hurt the Falcons. Jacksonville's Sunshiners, last year's national champs, jumped on Helm for five runs in the first two innings and held on for a 5-2 victory. Lake Mary's Kim Averill slapped two singles and drove in a run for Seminole.

The Falcons made up for their lack of punch in the third game, breaking loose for 16 runs in the fourth inning en route to a 25-6 debacle of Jacksonville Beach. The game was called after five innings due to the 15-run mercy rule.

St. Cloud's Kim King hammered two doubles and a single for four RBI. Kathy Richardson went 4-for-4 with three runs scored. Averill drove in three runs with a triple and a sacrifice fly. Eileen Thiebaut doubled and singled good for four RBI while Mona Benton walked and scored three times and drove in a run. Richardson allowed just four hits to pick up the win.

In the tournament's final game, Seminole lost a nine-inning thriller to the Jacksonville Astros. The Falcons built an 8-6 lead going into the final inning and were one out away from a win when Sharon Pewl doubled home two runs to tie the game.

Jax then slapped four straight singles in the bottom of the ninth to win it.

Lake Howell's Sandy Gillies rapped four hits and scored two runs. Johnson singled and tripled to drive home three runs while Thiebaut homered and tripled to chase home four tallies against Jax.

For the tourney, Kuhlri (8-for-13) batted .615, Averill (6-for-12) hit .500, Gillies batted (6-for-13) and King hit (6-for-14). 429. Richardson was a perfect (4-for-4) 1.000.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Cardinal Awaiting Call From Girl's Kidnappers

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The Vatican awaited a "hot line" call today from Emanuela Orlandi's captors on the eve of her execution deadline.

In a surprise move, the Vatican issued a statement Monday saying Secretary of State Cardinal Agostino Casaroli would be available to speak to the 15-year-old girl's abductors today between 10 a.m. and 11 a.m. (4 a.m. and 5 a.m. EDT).

The kidnappers demanded to speak directly to Casaroli to negotiate the release of Turkish terrorist Mehmet Ali Agca, who shot Pope John Paul II on May 13, 1981, in exchange for the Vatican messenger's daughter who disappeared from a Rome street June 22.

A tape recording, left Monday on steps leading to President Sandro Pertini's Quirinale Palace residence, contained sections in which a young woman was heard moaning in pain.

Mario Meneguzzi, Emanuela's uncle, confirmed to police that a section of the recording in which the girl cries "Please let me sleep" was the voice of his niece. Meneguzzi said, however, that he was not certain that the most dramatic section of the recording was the voice of Emanuela.

End Of Martial Law Near

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — A committee of Polish military generals apparently has voted to restore civilian rule, eliminating one of the last obstacles to lifting martial law this week.

The Military Council of National Salvation, supreme authority in Poland since Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski declared martial law Dec. 13, 1981, met Monday to hear appeals for a return to civilian rule, the official PAP news agency said.

The panel headed by Jaruzelski, the Communist Party leader and Polish premier, decided the appeals to end martial law "suit the present needs" of Poland and "took appropriate decisions," PAP said.

The action by the 21-man group of military officers that took over the government in December 1981 apparently eliminated one of the last obstacles to lifting martial law at the end of this week.

Rebels Mount Offensive

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — U.S.-backed rebels claimed to have launched a 10,000-man offensive against Nicaragua's leftist government on the eve of today's fourth anniversary of the Sandinistas' rise to power.

The U.S.-backed Nicaraguan Democratic Force is the largest of the three rebel groups trying to overthrow the Sandinistas, who took power July 19, 1979 after overthrowing dictator Anastasio Somoza.

Fears Someone May Try To Kill Him

Attorney Asks For Tighter Security For Client In Lurid Sex-Murder Case

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The attorney for the man accused of killing Vicki Morgan wants tighter security for his client because he fears someone may kill him to prevent a trial in a case involving alleged sex tapes of government officials.

Police said Monday they agreed that attorney Arthur Barrens had a point after a reporter posing as a "friend" of suspect Marvin Pancoast gained access to the man accused of beating Miss Morgan to death July 7. The reporter was asked to leave the Los Angeles County Jail, where Pancoast is held in the infirmary section on $250,000 bail.

"As you already know," Barrens wrote to Sheriff Sherman Block, "Mr. Pancoast is accused of having killed Vicki Morgan, the one-time mistress of a very close friend of President Reagan, Mr. (Alfred) Bloomingtondale."

"I am now convinced that there are persons who may very much not want Marvin Pancoast to go to trial..."

Block refused to say whether security had been increased.

Barrens would not say who might want to harm Pancoast, 33, who surrendered to police after Miss Morgan was beaten to death with a baseball bat in the condominium they had shared.

Police and Barrens said the incident with the reporter from the Herald Examiner was not directly related to the request for increased security for Pancoast. The newspaper apologized to police for the "unfortunate incident" involving its reporter.

Barrens said he mailed the letter Sunday to Block and District Attorney Robert Philibosian requesting "such steps as are necessary may be taken to prevent any form of accident or an apparent suicide."

But considering the reporter's case in entering the jail, Police Lt. Dan Cooke said "I think it's a point well taken."

The day after Pancoast was arrested, at least two reporters were allowed to interview the suspect in jail because of mistaken information.

Pancoast did not appear in court until Monday, July 11, and his arraignment was delayed until July 25, when Barrens plans to enter a plea of innocent by reason of insanity.

After Miss Morgan's death, attorney Robert K. Steinberg, triggered a controversy when he said he saw three videotapes showing Miss Morgan, Bloomingtondale and high government officials engaged in "sex parties."

He claimed the following day the tapes had been stolen from his office and was served with a subpoena ordering him to produce the tapes in court July 25.

Police officials are asking that Steinberg be charged with making a false theft report.

The mystery of the tapes deepened during the weekend when attorney Marvin Mitchelson said two sources have told him video and audio tapes that could embarrass the Reagan administration exist and a White House aide believes they exist.

Mitchelson represented Miss Morgan in her $11 million palimony suit against Bloomingtondale, the department store tycoon who died after the suit was filed.

U.S. Threatens Trade Sanctions Against Japan Over Whaling Ban

BRIGHTON, England (UPI) — The United States threatened to impose trade and fishing sanctions on Japan, the world's prime whaling nation, if it defies a ban on commercial whaling set to take effect in 2 1/2 years.

Japan is one of four principal whaling nations, including the Soviet Union, Norway and Peru, that oppose the International Whaling Commission ban on commercial whaling.

The United States already has cut Japan's fishing allocation inside America's 200-mile coastal limit by nearly one-third to 175,000 metric tons next spring.

U.S. fishing sanctions would be a serious blow since Japan's fishing harvest in American waters is worth 10 times the value of its whaling industry.

Family Pleased With Sentence In Father-Son Mercy Killing

HOUSTON (UPI) — With hugs from jurors and handshakes from prosecutors, a 26-year-old man was sentenced to three years of probation for shooting his comatose father in an attempted mercy killing.

The jurors Monday still made it clear they did not condone euthanasia and sentenced Billy Ray Clore to one year of probation more than the minimum sentence for his attempted murder conviction.

"I'm relieved," said Clore, who had testified he shot his father in the head to fulfill a promise not to let him suffer. "I'm pleased with the verdict."

The close-knit Clore family, which had supported him throughout, hugged each other and cried after the sentence was announced.

The son shot his father on March 21 after the elder Clore remained comatose for four months following kidney failure and two heart seizures. Robert Clore died 2 1/2 weeks after the shooting.

The charge against Billy Ray was reduced Friday from murder to attempted murder when prosecutors got information the shooting may not have killed him.

Lioness Club Hosts Fete For 2 District Officers

Ah, summer. Surely whoever wrote that classic song about those "lazy, hazy, crazy days of summer" must have at least visited central Florida at one time. Things slow down to a snail crawl as the summer temperatures reach upward to 90 degrees. Folks find time to get away on long vacations, many hide behind drawn curtains relishing the comfort of air conditioned homes, or sleepily find rest on a porch swing, sipping lemonade or ice tea.

While many civic-minded clubs and organizations take the summer off, many slowed down, others are still working out the "bugs" of electing new leadership. But, there is a small group of ladies called the Longwood Lioness Club, who are moving full steam ahead.

Refusing to be stopped by the summer heat, the Lioness have been planning socials and fund raisers to start off their new year.

On July 17, the Lioness will host an Installation Banquet for the new president and vice president of District 35-0. Joseph Rembaus, Governor of District 35-0, will serve as installation officer, and Longwood Lioness Lois Workman, newly appointed Regional Director at Large, has sent out invitations to area Lioness and Lion Clubs.

Karen Warner

Honored that evening will be new District President Ruth Hurd. Ruth is and active member of the Pine Hills Lioness. Ruth Barfield, member of the Pierson Lioness, will be installed as District Vice-President. The banquet will be held at Quality Inn in Longwood.

On July 31, the Lioness have planned a Picnic Social at Red Bug Park in Casselberry. District Lioness and Lion will be invited, with the goal of various club officers and members getting better acquainted. Games, food, and fellowship will be included in the day.

On August 13, 14, and 15 the Lioness will hold a booth at Flea World as a kick off into the new year's fund raisers. On sale will be various housewares, plants, and misc. items. The Lioness will accept donations from area residents for this flea market. Anyone wishing to help out the club may call Lois Workman at 699-4373. All donations are tax deductible, and it's a good way to rid closets of un-needed clutter.

Staff and faculty of Longwood Elementary School have announced a "farewell" dinner for school principal Arletta M. Coberly. Arletta, who was the school's principal for the last 13 years, and a teacher there for 8 years prior to that, has accepted a position of principal at Idylwild Elementary School in Sanford.

Invited to the farewell dinner are all past and present students, teacher staff, and parents. Tickets must be purchased in advance at a cost of $3.50. Tickets can be obtained by calling the school the weeks of August 1-5 or 8-12, between the hours of 10 a.m. thru 12 noon only. Included in the ticket price will be a fabulous buffet dinner consisting of turkey, ham, salad, potatoes, vegetables, rolls, soft drink, and coffee to name a few items. Special invitations will be sent out to area dignitaries, county school board members, and Longwood city leaders. Arletta, who is known for her unlimited dedication to the school children, will be greatly missed by the school according to a school source.

Funds For Army Gym

Dr. Thomas Hobbs, left, president of the Sanford Kiwanis Club, presents a check from the club for $1,500 to Capt. Michael Waters of The Salvation Army. The funds will be used for gym equipment at the army building, the first step toward opening the facility to the public on a regular basis, according to Waters.

Man's Child-Raising Years Are Over

DEAR ABBY: I am a 49-year-old man, divorced for 10 years. I raised four children — my youngest is finally out of the nest.

I am in love with a young lawyer who is divorced from her lawyer husband and has custody of their only child — a 7-year-old boy. If it weren't for the boy, I would marry her in a minute, but I don't want to raise another child! I have told her that.

She says she will send the boy to summer camp, to his father's, to her mother's for weekends and holidays, then to boarding school so I wouldn't have to raise him, but I think the boy deserves better than to be sent away, pushed around and boarded out.

This woman and I are perfect for each other in every way, so why is it so difficult for me to move into her lovely home, let her send the boy away, and live happily ever after?

HAVING DOUBTS
DEAR HAVING: Because having been a conscientious father, your conscience won't permit you to allow this woman to abandon her responsibilities as a mother in order to have you.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in reply to "Wet Nightie," the woman whose husband "gets upset, drinks too much and wets the bed."

I'm another man who had the same problem, but after I got help I found out the problem was not my "plumbing," but my drinking.

Dear Abby

I thought that I could not be an alcoholic because I was not old enough and not on skid row. I was 27 and a successful attorney with a large firm. I also thought I didn't have a drinking problem because I never drank before 5 p.m., although at night I'd drink until I passed out.

In my case, not only was my drinking making me a bed wetter, it was hurting my marriage in ways I wasn't even aware of. A friend got me to go to Alcoholics Anonymous. I've been sober for a year, and it's been the best year of my life. Incidentally, when I stopped drinking, the bed-wetting stopped immediately. "Wet Nightie" should introduce her husband to A.A.

DEAR DRY IN L.A.: I received a flood of letters (no pun intended) from former bed wetters saying, "As soon as I dried up, so did my bed." Let's hear it for A.A. It's the greatest!

DEAR ABBY: I was fortunate to have had my hearing for 53 years, but I now have a profound hearing loss and am enlisting your aid to gain for us deaf persons more hours of captioned TV programs.

ABC is the only network of the big three to provide consistent captioning, and I am grateful for those programs that are now available. But the choices are pathetically limited and only a few hours a week of captioned programs are available to us.

We deaf persons are as hungry for knowledge, diversion and entertainment as the hearing public. If you print my letter, it might help.

PUNTA GORDA, FLA., READER

DEAR READER: One letter (yours or mine) won't help, but the squeaky wheel gets the grease, so if organized groups of the deaf and hearing-impaired were to launch an organized, vigorous letter-writing campaign, you might get some action.

NBC and CBS, can you hear me?

DEAR ABBY: The letter about cousins — first, second, third, etc. — reminded me of a cartoon I saw years ago. It pictured a woman showing her family album to a friend. She was saying, "That's Rodney's first cousin (twice removed). Rodney threw him out of the house twice."

Chinese Tycoons 'Some Of The Best'

By Charles S. Taylor

ATLANTA (UPI) — Henry Munford was told it couldn't be done, but he did it — he got 7,000 Chinese to make a million baskets by hand in six months.

It was the largest single order on record for handmade Chinese baskets of one size. As a result, Munford's fledgling International Trading Co. is off to an apparently successful start.

"I had four basket importers who told me it couldn't be done, that I would lose out," said the 29-year-old Munford, director of operations and youngest son of Dillard Munford, president of the parent Munford Inc. conglomerate.

"The company was just starting out. I wanted to do it. I wanted to do it badly," Munford said in an interview.

So when Hanes Hosiery, Inc., of Winston-Salem, N.C., called young Munford and asked him if his company could supply a million Chinese-made baskets five inches in diameter and of a specific color and design, with a tolerance for error of not more than one-quarter inch, Munford took a deep breath and said yes.

"People don't just call you up with an order like this every day."

Making baskets is an ancient Chinese industry but turning out a million of a particular kind in six months was a unique proposition, Munford said.

"Time was the challenge — the time and the exactness that we had to have. People said it was impossible, that it would take a year to get that type of order out, that you couldn't get that uniformity out of China."

But the baskets were delivered on time, beginning last fall, with the final shipment this past spring. Munford declined to specify how much the baskets cost but said "we made a reasonable profit." Hanes used the baskets to package three pairs of women's pantyhose.

To deliver the baskets, the firm, through Munford's Hong Kong offices, contacted Chinese businessmen in the Canton area who put 2,000 fulltime factory workers on the job, producing two baskets per day. The "factories" actually were large rooms with 50-60 workers, mostly women, making the baskets by hand from a tough, pliable swamp grass. Another 5,000 workers turned out the baskets in their homes.

Munford said the communist Chinese government officials were cooperative and helped all they could to insure success of the project.

"The Chinese businessmen are some of the best in the world," said Munford. "They were very intent on getting the job done. They had a fantastic organization and they were very hard-working."

When 70 percent of the first baskets were rejected by the trading company because they failed to meet the size specifications, 5,000 molds were made and supplied to the workers, who then simply wove their baskets around the molds.

Once, when a production snag developed, Munford went to China and talked with the production managers.

"I told them how important it was to get the project finished. I said these baskets, so finely made, would be good envoys to Americans, showing what fine craftsmen the Chinese people are. I spent a lot of time talking."

"I said to myself I wouldn't like to do that again. But I would like to do it again. I'd look for any excuse to go back into China."

Printing Palace Pride Is Quality At A Low Price

The Printing Palace offers commercial print shop services at quick print prices, according to co-owner William Sauve.

The print shop, located at the Village Market Place, 3838 U.S. Highway 17-92, wants to bring its individual and small business customers the same quick efficient service that it gives to big commercial accounts.

"There are a lot of small businesses in the area that need a little bit more attention than they get from a quick printer and we give them that," Sauve said. "We can take care of their printing needs and do it all in one place with diversified but personal service."

Among the many services the company offers is assistance with layout and design, various styles and assorted colors of ink and paper. The Printing Palace even has free pickup and delivery service.

But the best feature is the price. Printing Palace prices are lower than other area firms offering comparable services.

One day service is available for many items and camera-ready copy can be printed while you wait, he said.

To provide even better service the Printing palace has added a new press, a new folder, a new darkroom and has increased staff.

Whether you need letterheads, invoices, statements, envelopes, business cards, booklets, fliers or brochures and will produce any quantity in black and white or color. They have a complete bindery service.

The shop also takes care of specialized needs such as menus, church bulletins, bar mitzvahs, funeral service programs, wedding invitations, birthday announcements, party napkins and matchbooks. Special forms are also available for dentists and doctors.

Printing Palace offers a typing service for jobs such as resumes and term papers. They also offer folding, collating, padding, stapling and binding.

Staff members, in addition to Sauve and co-proprietor Barbara Haverhill include Sheila Jammes and Amy Smith, bindery; Cindy Pickrel and Debbie Urban presspersons.

The Printing Palace is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon. For information call 321-4200 or, in the Winter Park exchange, 629-4200.

Left to right: Amy Smith, bindery person; William Sauve and Barbara Haverhill, owners; Sheila Jammes, bindery person; and Cindy Pickrel, press person.

Energy Gluttony Unlikely To Make Comeback

By Rox Liston
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — The United States is unlikely to return to the conspicuous energy consumption that ended when the OPEC oil price shocks of the 1970s radically changed the way Americans lived.

Americans have turned down their thermostats, bought smaller cars and substituted cheaper fuels for oil in an unprecedented conservation effort that has stunned OPEC and taken most economists by surprise.

Some energy specialists believe still further conservation lies ahead as the prolonged effects of the tenfold rise in OPEC prices between 1973 and 1980 work their way through the U.S. economy.

'OPEC overplayed its hand.'

Standard Oil Co. (California) expects U.S. energy demand to rise modestly this year for the first time since 1979 as the United States begins to recover from the worst recession since the Great Depression. Social is projecting a 1.4 percent annual increase in U.S. energy consumption — equivalent to about 9.7 million barrels of oil a day — through the end of this century.

But Cambridge Energy Research Associates, a private consulting firm based in Cambridge, Mass., maintains the long-awaited economic resurgence will create even greater energy savings in the American home and reduce gasoline demand in the 1980s.

"There is no evidence that Americans, without a big drop in energy prices and a substantial rise in disposable income, will go back to their old ways," Lee Schipper, staff scientist at Lawrence Berkeley Laboratories, told a recent conference on energy demand sponsored by the Cambridge consulting firm.

Renewed economic growth will spur purchases of more fuel-efficient homes, appliances and cars rather than set the stage for another national energy binge, Schipper predicted.

U.S. industrial energy use should rebound by 20 percent to 25 percent over the next few years to pre-recession levels and then flatten out, with enhanced energy efficiency offsetting only mild demand growth, Cambridge Energy Research Associates forecast.

U.S. energy consumption has shrunk 9.9 percent since peaking in 1979 when the Iranian oil disruption prompted the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to nearly triple world oil prices, according to British Petroleum Co.'s 1982 statistical review. Other fuels track oil prices.

OPEC unwittingly overplayed its hand by raising prices to levels consumers no longer would tolerate. The 13-nation cartel had acted on the widely held assumption that energy — and particularly oil — was so essential to economic growth that price had little impact on demand.

Demand for oil and other energy sources bounced back two years after the 1973-1974 Arab oil embargo, but the second OPEC price shock in 1979 unleashed aggressive conservation and a global recession that pushed the cartel to the brink of collapse.

By 1982 a precipitous slump in oil demand and the emergence of non-OPEC producers had stripped the cartel of its clout as the free world's largest oil supplier and unchallenged price setter.

In March 1983 a bitterly divided and shaken OPEC lowered its base price for the first time in history to avert an international pricing war.

In the United States, the largest energy-consuming nation, oil has lost more ground to natural gas, wood and electricity.

Since 1979 U.S. oil consumption has plummeted 19 percent and natural gas 11 percent, while coal use has risen 3.6 percent and nuclear power 12.1 percent, the BP data showed.

U.S. demand for electricity, down turned last year for the first time, the Edison Electric Institute reported.

The average American household now uses almost 20 percent less energy than a decade ago because of conservation measures, the migration to warmer climates and smaller families, Schipper said.

Most of the cutback occurred after 1979, however, when consumers were squeezed by escalating energy bills and stagnating incomes, he said.

Schipper estimated that perhaps 60 percent of the decline in the nation's residential energy demand is tied to behavioral changes and therefore is largely permanent.

Conservation has had its greatest impact on residential heating, the area over which the consumer exercises the most control.

The majority of Americans now keep their thermostats below 70 degrees in winter, a dramatic turnaround from the 85 percent that basked in temperatures of 70 degrees or higher just 10 years ago, Schipper said.

Deliveries of home-heating oil and kerosene have plunged almost 50 percent since 1973 as consumers converted to gas, put in insulation, installed wood stoves, used portable heaters, and bought new homes heated primarily by electricity or gas.

"There is no way oil can stage a comeback in the single-family home," Schipper said.

Natural gas has clung to its nearly 50 percent share of the U.S. residential fuel market since 1970 by adding new customers, but gas usage has dropped sharply on a per household basis. Oil has sunk to 13 percent from just under 25 percent in 1970, Schipper's data showed.

Wood now accounts for almost 10 percent of total residential energy use. Electricity's share has jumped to 25 percent from 15 percent in 1970 and should continue to expand with the migration to the Sun Belt, where demand for air-conditioning far outstrips minimal heating needs.

"New homes replacing older homes will drive down energy demand," Schipper said.

Nearly 20 percent of all U.S. housing has been built since the 1973 Arab oil embargo and outfitted with energy-saving appliances.

Although households have more appliances than a decade ago, a new refrigerator or dishwasher uses 31 percent less electricity on average than 10-year old models. Energy efficiency for today's average freezer has risen 42 percent from 1973 levels, a clothes washer 32 percent and a room air-conditioner 9 percent, Schipper said.

On the other hand, consumers are underinvesting in energy efficiency and appliance manufacturers have little incentive to introduce additional savings since electricity prices are not likely to rise rapidly, he said.

Nevertheless, Americans will not be exempt from the pressure of higher energy bills over the next few years.

Forecasting prices is an inexact science subject to political factors and competition among fuels.

But the consensus of private studies and the Department of Energy is that prices for electricity will advance by 1 to 2 percent annually and natural gas prices by 2 to 5 percent a year above the rate of inflation through 1990.

Oil price trends are the most difficult to predict because the United States still is dependent on OPEC and other foreign producers for nearly 20 percent of its domestic oil needs.

Is Surgery Needed For Weak Bladder?

DEAR DR. LAMB—I am a 28-year-old female. I have had two children. Both were over 9 pounds. My gynecologist told me I should have a hysterectomy to correct the problem of not being able to hold my bladder, mainly while standing.

Dr. Lamb

I had a second opinion. It was that I should not have the surgery. However, my bladder problem is becoming increasingly worse. I have to urinate every half hour or so and during sex, which has become quite painful. Should I have a third opinion? The Kegel exercises haven't helped at all.

DEAR READER—The most common cause of this problem is that the muscles and ligaments that support the bladder and urethra are stretched or torn. Childbirth is usually a factor. The cystocele, urethrocele, rectocele and fallen uterus are all part of this problem.

Yes, get another opinion but ask specifically about having your bladder problem corrected without having a hysterectomy. That may be possible. I can understand why you would not want to lose your uterus at this young age.

You will understand the relationship of the bladder, urethra, uterus and rectum in causing this problem better from reviewing the diagram in The Health Letter 14-12. Hysterectomy, Cystocele and Rectocele, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me. In care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

It is a good idea to try the Kegel exercises. They are simple and consist of pulling and tightening your pelvic muscles. One description is that you repeatedly stop and start your urine flow while urinating. That may give you the feel as to how to pull in and contract the muscles in that area. They may help some mild cases but, as you have discovered, they will not help in the more severe cases.

The basic problem is structural and that is why a structural repair is usually necessary.

DEAR DR. LAMB—You hear a lot about estrogen but very little about progesterone. I know it is the other important female hormone. But does it cause cancer, like estrogen does? Where does it come from and what does it do?

DEAR READER—The various sex hormones, male and female, are all related and are formed in several chemical steps. Progesterone actually is used to form testosterone, the male hormone, and testosterone goes on to form estrogen. So it is no wonder that men and women both have estrogen, progesterone and testosterone.

All of these hormones can be formed by the ovary, the testicle and the adrenal cortex (outer shell of the adrenal gland). The largest source of progesterone in the female is the corpus luteum, the yellow body formed in the follicle that releases the ovum. Hence it is abundant in the second part of the menstrual cycle. And it is produced by the placenta. It calms the uterus to enable and maintain pregnancy.

It does not cause cancer and it has been used successfully to control hot flashes in some women during the menopause.

Progesterone also helps to develop the breasts' ability to produce milk at the end of pregnancy.

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

East had no idea how to bid his hand. The immediate heart raise was sound, but his hand became less desirable when the bidding returned to him and he had to act over a four-spade bid. After some thought he decided that four spades was likely to make so he went to five hearts.

North continued to five spades, and now East made one of those protective doubles. He didn't know if he could beat five spades, but he certainly didn't want to have his partner go to six hearts.

West opened the king of diamonds, and East played his singleton eight. No problem there!

Then West continued with the ace, and East had a real problem. He had six clubs. Dummy had six clubs. West or South held the ace. If West held it, he might well lead it at trick three. That way he could put East in with the ace of hearts and get a club ruff, inflicting a three-trick penalty. West could not know that East held six clubs of his own and South had none.

So East made the unusual play of trumping his partner's ace! He then cashed the ace of hearts to come out with 200 points for setting five spades one trick doubled and vulnerable.
