HEAP loans on hold

SANFORD — The City of Sanford's Community Development Department will not be accepting applications for the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (HEAP) for the next 90 days.

Summer funds have run out, and more will not be immediately available.

Applications will be accepted however, beginning October 11. They will be taken at Sanford City Hall, on the first floor, beginning at 8:30 a.m.

In filling out the applications, clients will need to provide proof of income, social security numbers of everyone in the household, and a copy of the electric bill.

For further information on the HEAP program, contact Larry Cherry or Jose Rivera, at 330-5663.

Keeping women healthy

SANFORD — A free seminar for women and their health needs, sponsored by the Women's Evangelical Fellowship of Sanford, will be held tomorrow at 4 p.m. at the Shower Down of Blessings, 201 E. Elm Ave., Sanford.

Topics include high blood pressure, stress, menopause, eating disorders, physical fitness and more. Guest speaker is Sandra Allen, a Titusville registered nurse.

For more information, call 323-6506.

Commissioner burglarized

SANFORD — Crime struck home to city commissioner Lon Howell this week. Wednesday, Howell reported to police Wednesday a storage shed at his South Park Avenue home was burglarized of more than $1,100 in power tools and a weed trimmer. The burglary occurred sometime between midnight Sunday and midnight Monday, Howell reported.

National recognition

SANFORD — Seminole County's solid waste program was recognized nationally recently by the Solid Waste Association of North America at their annual convention in San Antonio, Texas. The county's Solid Waste Division was one of only two in the state to be recognized for its transfer program. The other county was Palm Beach County. The SWANA Collection Excellence Program was created to recognize successful garbage collection and transfer operations.

Small-time lawbreakers keep coming back

Be it Sanford or New York City, annoyance crimes such as prostitution, small-time drug dealing, noise pollution and public drunkenness touch every citizen. In Part 1 of our two part series, we look at the problem from the police point of view. Sunday, we follow up on the consequences for some men arrested in Sanford reverse prostitution stings.

SANFORD — Problems with street crimes affect everyone.

Cities small and large are all faced with the ever-increasing number of persons involved in prostitution, drug sales, and other illegal activities.

In Sanford, police have been conducting sting operations. In New York City, police are out on a one-to-one basis, seeking individual lawbreakers.

Sanford's Police Chief Ralph Russell introduced reverse sting operations in the city. For drugs and prostitution, they are being conducted on a relatively regular basis.

"I can't say that we are eliminating these crimes," Russell said, "but I hope we are discouraging some of these activities which take place in our streets and neighborhoods."

"The main problem we have," Russell said, "is in the court system. The way it is now, we can arrest a person only to have him or her back out on the streets, doing the same thing, within a day or so."

Russell is disappointed that the "three-strikes-you're out" concept never has been enacted. "I know of some people who we arrest eight or 10 times in a short period," he said, "yet it doesn't seem to matter how many times they

Zoo animals make great teachers!

By VICKI BOGNER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — What can an elephant teach a third grader about literature? What can a monkey teach him about math?

Quite a bit, say representatives of the Central Florida Zoo and the Seminole County schools.

Thursday, a gaggle of third graders from Altamonte Elementary School talked about weighty matters, took a world tour, discussed great literature and found out that animals have class.

The debut of the zoo's Curric-ZOO-ium, underwritten by a grant from General Mills, was a success.

Even Supt. Paul Hagerty and Ken Fowle, General Mills Restaurants' director of Investment Analysis, found out that animals make fine teachers as they measured monkey chow and used math skills to determine the proper amounts of food the zoo needed to purchase to feed the hungry herds.

"The grant will allow every third grader in the county to experience the zoo through the integrated curric-zoo-ium," Andrea Farmer, public relations manager for the zoo, said.

The program incorporates math, science, geography and language arts.

"The program shows them a lot of practical uses for the skills they are learning in the classroom," Farmer said. "They might not know why they need to learn about measurements, but when they see that the person who feeds the animals has to know how much chow to give each one, they see a use for it."

Farmer said the students who take part in the field trip will have the chance to walk around the facility and plot the location of the animals' indigenous territories.

"It's a great way to learn geography and see some beautiful wild life as well," she added.

Pretty safe bet struggle to get on ballot will go to high court

By J. MARK SANFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Promoters of riverboat gambling in Seminole County and throughout the state say they may take their struggle to get on the Nov. 8 ballot to federal court.

Law Oliver, attorney for Florida Riverboat Corp., said Thursday a decision could come as early as today to ask a federal court judge to give elections supervisors more time to complete ballot counting in time for the general election.

"The Constitution clearly gives the citizens the right to petition their government," Oliver said this morning. "But in Florida, there's no guidance. Here we have the right, but we have to guess. It's like saying you have the right to vote, but you have to guess when to show up at the polls."

Tuesday, Leon County Circuit Judge L. Ralph Smith

ruled against a request by Safe Bet for Florida. Florida Riverboat's petition initiative, for a two-week extension to the Tuesday deadline for supervisors to count ballots. Following nearly four hours of argument between lawyers for Safe Bet and the Leon County Supervisor of Elections Office and Secretary of State Jim Smith, Judge Smith ruled instantly, say witnesses to the proceedings.

"We're just so upset with the decision in Leon County," said Oliver Thursday. "We think it would be a waste of time to (appeal) to state court. I don't think we'd get a fair shake. The federal courts have a clear record on constitutional issues involving voting rights."

By the 5 p.m. deadline Tuesday, county supervisors had submitted 368,539 verified voter's signatures to Jim Smith's Division of Elections, according to an unofficial count. If the number holds, it is 60,889 less than the 429,428 required to land a spot on the ballot.

SANFORD — A man who pleaded no contest to growing marijuana on the roof of a local Chinese restaurant has been placed on probation and ordered to pay court costs and fines.

Po-Yu Chen, 21, was ordered to pay nearly $500 in fines and court costs and placed on one year probation. Chen was arrested Jan. 10 and charged with cultivating marijuana on the roof of Wok Express. Drug screening was ordered for Chen. The court will order early termination of probation after six months if all provisions of the probation are met.

Efforts renewed to keep cons behind bars

By NICK PFEIFAU

LAKE MARY — A local petition drive was renewed Wednesday night to keep prisoners in jail longer.

Approximately 40 persons attended the meeting of STOP, Stop Turning Out Prisoners, at the Lake Mary police station. Plans were formulated toward launching a new drive to have a STOP petition placed on the statewide ballot.

Throughout the early part of this year, there were concentrated efforts across Florida to have the measure placed on this November's ballot, seeking a constitutional amendment. The Florida Supreme Court said no last month.

Man wants to drop death row appeals

STARKE — Frank Valdes, a death row inmate who was married in January after a four-year fight, has written to a judge saying he wants to drop all his appeals of his death sentence.

In a July 7 letter to Circuit Judge Walter Colbath in West Palm Beach, Valdes wanted "to waive all present and future rights to appeal my conviction and sentence."

Valdes' wife, Wanda Eads, said Thursday she plans to continue to fight for her husband's life.

"Frank has lost his mind," she said. "I understand he doesn't want to live (on death row) forever, but I truly love him."

"I intend to fight for him to the very end, even though he tries to push me away," she said.

Valdes was sentenced to death in 1980 for his role in the shooting death of corrections officer Fred Griffin.

The inmate, who married Eads in January and filed for divorce in May, also wants to "refuse any and all outside intervention in my behalf."

Dolphins released

SUGARLOAF KEY — In a victory for animal-rights activists, three dolphins at a private club have been released in a sanctuary in the Florida Keys.

Bogie, Bacall and Molly were released into the Sugarloaf dolphin sanctuary on Wednesday evening, said Russ Rector, director of dolphin Freedom Foundation.

The dolphins came from the Ocean Reef Club, a private yacht and housing development in Key Largo.

Transferring the dolphins proved difficult because Molly resisted efforts to be loaded onto a refrigerated truck, said Rector, director of the dolphin Freedom Foundation.

"She finally scooted up on that stretcher," Rector said. "No problem," she said. "Put me on that truck." She didn't want to be left behind.

In early 1970s, the federal government made it illegal to capture dolphins without a federal permit. The Ocean Reef Club already had two dolphins so they were exempt from the act.

Teacher: JFK scenario was good lesson

KISSIMMEE — A state panel will decide whether a high school teacher used good judgment in a re-enactment of the assassination of John F. Kennedy where a student fired a rifle.

A lawyer for the state Education Department tried to prove at an administrative hearing that veteran teacher John Blumberg put Osceola High School students at risk during the exercise two years ago.

Blumberg told a hearing officer Wednesday that he now realizes he made a mistake. Charges were not filed in the Nov. 1992 incident. Blumberg was reprimanded and suspended for five days at the time.

Making his first public comment since the incident, Blumberg said he knew it was a mistake when he learned that state law prohibits firearms in school.

"Prior to that, it was one of the best teaching lessons I've ever done," he said.

Former students described Blumberg, 41, as a hands-on instructor who makes history come alive.

Blumberg's lawyer, Joe Egan, portrayed the re-enactment as innovative teaching and said his client is being punished because of publicity.

Ceremony planned to mark bombing site

DEFUNIAK SPRINGS — Four people killed in an accidental bombing over a Florida Panhandle farm during World War II will be remembered for the first time in a ceremony Saturday that will include an Air Force color guard.

All three living survivors, who were children when several fragmentation bombs destroyed James Cosson Sr.'s farm outside Defuniak Springs, will be present for the 50th anniversary memorial ceremony.

"I think it should have been done a long time ago," said David Cosson. The 62-year-old Clermont man lost one leg in the bombing, and the other leg was paralyzed.

A plane from nearby Eglin Air Force Base accidentally dropped the bombs while on a night weapons testing mission on Aug. 11, 1944. The Army Air Corps at the time blamed the accident on a bomb release mechanism that jammed over a bombing range and unjammed as the plane flew over the family farm.

David Cosson was the most seriously injured of the five survivors.

His father, Alfred Cosson; his uncle, James Cosson Sr.; and two of James Cosson Sr.'s children, James Jr., 14, and Winnie, 12, were killed.

James Cosson Sr.'s other children, Thomas, 54, of Defuniak Springs, and Frank, 59, of Zephyrhills, were wounded and plan to attend the ceremony.

Death row appeals High court overturns, upholds sentences

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida Supreme Court has overturned the death sentence of a small-time Jacksonville drug dealer and reduced that of a 20-year-old man convicted of killing his ex-girlfriend.

The court upheld two other death sentences Thursday.

Justices voted 4-2 to overturn Robert Lacy Parker's sentence and unanimously granted Patrick Eaty life in prison.

Parker, 39, was one of four people convicted in the February 1982 murders of Nancy Sheppard, Richard Padgett and Jody Dalton.

Prosecutors said Parker ordered the killings because Padgett had not paid for drugs he had ordered. Parker was sentenced to Florida's electric chair for Sheppard's murder, despite a jury recommendation of life in prison.

In January 1991, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled 5-4 that the Florida Supreme Court had failed to provide "individualized treatment" when it reviewed Parker's sentence.

In an unsigned opinion, the state court took a second look to see if there was any reasonable basis in the record for the jury to recommend life.

The court found several reasons, including the fact that Parker was drunk and using drugs at the time of the killings.

Consequently, the judge was wrong to disregard the jury recommendation, the justices ruled Thursday, with justices Leander Shaw, Gerald Kogan, Major Harding and retired Justice Parker Lee McDonald making up the majority.

Justice Ben Overton and Chief Justice Stephen Grimes dissented.

"I find that the facts in this case so clearly and convincingly support a sentence of death that virtually no reasonable person could differ as to that conclusion," Overton wrote in a dissenting opinion supported by Grimes.

"If the death penalty is to mean anything at all, it should apply to these types of drug-controlled killings," Overton said.

The justices chastised another lower court judge for disregarding without sufficient reason the jury's recommendation that Eaty be sentenced to life in prison.

Eaty was convicted of hacking, stabbing and fatally beating his 15-year-old ex-girlfriend after learning she was pregnant.

The body of Lauren Ramsey, a Pensacola High School sophomore, was found December 1991 on the Gulf Islands National Seashore on Santa Rosa Island.

A jury recommended life for Eaty, University of West Florida freshman with liking for weapons. Eaty won academic honors at Pensacola High School.

"The record in this case reveals a number of factors that support the jury's recommendation, including Eaty's age of 18 at the time of the murder, his lack of a criminal history, his potential for rehabilitation, and the possibility that he acted in an emotional rage," the justices wrote.

Also Thursday, the court rejected appeals by Lancelot Armstrong and Henry Garcia. Armstrong, 31, is condemned for the fatal shooting of Jack Greeney III, a Broward County sheriff's deputy. The officer was killed during a botched holdup of a fast-food restaurant near Fort Lauderdale in February 1990.

Garcia, 45, is condemned for the fatal stabbings of two elderly Dade County sisters in January 1983. Ninety-year-old Julia Ballentine was raped and then stabbed 28 times. Mabel Avery, 86, was stabbed 15 times.

Future student

Tiffany Walter, 1, takes a drink as she surveys the scene at the Academy of Health Careers at Seminole High School last night. Tiffany and her grandmother Mercedes Pizzano were among those who attended the Academy's beginning of the year barbecue that was held for the students in the program and their families. Tiffany will be in the class of 2012.

Ship runs aground

By CATHERINE WILSON
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — Officials were unable to determine why a research ship ran aground in a protected marine sanctuary off the Florida Keys and spilled about 200 gallons of diesel fuel.

The 170-foot ship remained stuck this morning and attempts to free it were to be made later in the day, said Officer Robert Beatson of the Florida Marine Patrol.

Also, it was difficult to tell if the Columbus Iselin was leaking fuel early today, he said.

However, the last flyover by the U.S. Coast Guard Thursday afternoon indicated that leakage from the ship had stopped, said Alyson Simmons, spokeswoman for the National Marine Sanctuary. The ship ran aground late Wednesday.

The ship was working on federally sponsored research as part of an ocean pollution project to help develop models for oil-spill management, said the trip's sponsor, the University of Miami.

Youngest defendant enters plea bargain

By ADAM YEMANS

MONTICELLO — A 14-year-old boy who police say crouched in the back seat of a car while two friends fatally shot a British tourist last fall has agreed to testify against other defendants in the murder case.

Cedrick Green, who faced a first-degree murder charge, pleaded no contest Thursday to one count of accessory after the fact, a third-degree felony.

As part of the plea, Green will be treated as a juvenile and could be sentenced to community control. Green has been free since November, when Circuit Judge F.E. Steinmeyer ruled there wasn't enough evidence to hold him.

The youth's attorney, Greg Cummings, told Steinmeyer the plea agreement was in the best interest of his client, who was 13 last September when Gary Colley was shot and killed during a botched robbery attempt at an interstate 10 rest stop near Monticello.

"Unless the earth falls out from under this young man at this point in time, his performance in the past 10 months warrants that," Cummings told the judge.

The killing focused international attention on Monticello, a small town about 25 miles east of Tallahassee, and dealt a blow to the state's tourism business. It spurred state officials to increase security at highway rest stops and take on the third reform in four years of the state's juvenile justice system.

Colley was the ninth foreign visitor killed in Florida in a year's time. His companion, Margaret Jagger, was wounded. During the hearing Thursday, Green's mother, Dorothy Spear, stood with the teen-ager before Steinmeyer.

Green responded "yes" when the judge asked whether the youth understood the plea agreement. Steinmeyer approved the plea and praised Green's behavior since his release.

"They tell me that you're really on the right track," Steinmeyer said. "I feel like you've got yourself going in the right direction. I want you to know how pleased I am."

The judge will sentence Green on Sept. 16.

Exxon Valdez jury awards millions

By ROSANNE PASANO
Associated Press Writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Alaska fisheries suffered little lasting damage from the Exxon Valdez oil spill, a jury decided, awarding 10,000 fishermen $286.8 million in compensatory damages — less than a third of what they sought.

Thursday's verdict against Exxon Corp. and tanker captain Joseph Hazelwood was to repay the commercial fishermen for lost profits resulting from environmental damage in Prince William Sound, Cook Inlet and Kodiak Island.

The fishermen said the nation's worst oil spill cost them $995 million. Exxon estimated losses at $113 million.

The federal jury deliberated for 23 days. Next it must decide on punitive damages — which are meant to punish and deter wrongdoing — for the fishermen and about 4,000 Alaska Natives, cannery workers and property owners.

Brian O'Neill, a lawyer for the plaintiffs, said he would seek $15 billion.

"Now we're going to kick some Exxon butt," he said. Exxon plans to argue that punitive damages are unnecessary because it already has paid billions in penalties and cleanup costs.

During the compensatory damages phase, experts testified for the plaintiffs that fish prices remain depressed because of a perception — especially among Japanese consumers — that Alaska salmon has been tainted by the spill.

Exxon challenged that conclusion, and rejected as too speculative a state study that said commercial salmon runs will be poor this year and next.

The jurors agreed unanimously that the accident harmed fishing, and awarded most of the damages for losses in 1989, the year of the spill. But they rejected most of the fishermen's other claims, awarding them nothing for 1990 and 1991, $29.3 million for 1992 and 1993, and nothing for projected losses in 1994 and 1995.

That left Richard McGahan, a fisherman in Nikiaki, severely disappointed.

"We're talking about the livelihoods of thousands of fishermen. I'm sick to my stomach," McGahan said. Tears welled in his eyes as he recalled 40 years of fishing in Cook Inlet.

Exxon lawyer Patrick Lynch said the compensatory award was a relief, although "some of the numbers seem a little high." O'Neill said he wished the award was higher, but praised the jury for carefully examining highly technical evidence from scientists, market analysts and other experts.

"You're looking at a substantial hunk of money to move to fishermen," he said.

A decision on how the 10,000 fishermen will share the money must wait until the close of the trial's punitive damages phase, set to start Aug. 22.

The award could be reduced by up to $130 million to reflect money Exxon has already paid to some fishermen in a claims program set up in 1989.

The Exxon Valdez ran aground on a charted reef in Prince William Sound in 1989, spilling 11 million gallons of oil into the pristine waters. Some 1,500 miles of coastline were contaminated and fishing seasons were disrupted as far as 650 miles away.

The jury earlier found Exxon and Hazelwood acted recklessly to cause the spill. Plaintiffs had argued that Hazelwood was drunk and that Exxon knew he had a drinking problem, yet still put him in charge of a tanker.

In July, while the jury was deliberating the fishermen's claims, Exxon agreed to pay $20 million in compensatory damages to 3,500 Alaska natives, who claimed the spill damaged their hunting and fishing grounds.

The oil giant also is defending itself in state court, where in six Alaska Native groups and six coastal towns are seeking roughly $100 million.

Cub rescued from wildfires on Smokey Bear's 50th anniversary

By TOM GARDNER
Associated Press Writer

TAHOE CITY, Calif. — A bear cub spotted amid a wildfire on Smokey Bear's 50th anniversary is recuperating after its four paws were badly burned in a futile search through the embers for something to eat.

The 18-month-old Nevada black bear was first seen on Tuesday, 50 years after the Forest Service launched its famous campaign against forest fires. The bear was foraging along the California-Nevada border 12 miles west of Reno, where a 7,310-acre fire burned three houses and ravaged the bear's habitat.

"This bear is not unlike the people who lost their homes. They're looking for their dining room table and it was looking for its dining room table," Guy Pence, Carson district ranger for the Toyabe National Forest, said Thursday.

Wildlife officials, firefighters and Sierra Pacific Power Co. workers managed to get a rope around the 49-pound female on Wednesday, then threw a blanket over the cub's head. It wasn't easy.

"It put up a pretty good struggle," Pence said. "They are extremely strong. Their forearms are very muscular. But it couldn't run or go very fast."

The bear was taken to Sierra Pet Clinic in Truckee, Calif., where its paws were treated and wrapped in mitten-like bandages.

Keepers are mostly feeding the bear what it would find in the wild — branches, berries, clover and an occasional apple.

One non-native treat is a couple of bananas a day. The cub loves them and they are easy to lace with antibiotics that will help it recover.

Unlike the cub rescued in 1990 that became a symbol for the Smokey Bear campaign, this bear is technically not an orphan since it's old enough to forage for itself, Pence said.

While the other bear spent the rest of its life at the National Zoo in Washington, D.C., this cub will return to the woods once it recovers. And unlike Smokey, this cub will not be named.

"Then, it takes on a personality," Pence said. "Our goal is to release it to its natural habitat and trying to limit any contact."

Simpson recovering from surgery

By MICHAEL FLEMMAN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson is recovering in his jail cell after doctors removed swollen lymph nodes from under his armpit to determine if he has cancer.

Dr. Robert Huisenga said Simpson, who also has been suffering from drenching night sweats the past few weeks, will be closely monitored at the Men's Central Jail, where he is being held without bail.

"This includes regular nursing checks ... and proper hygiene including a clean cell and fresh linen," Huisenga said in a statement Thursday.

Simpson, 47, is charged with murdering his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson, 35, and her friend Ronald Goldman, 25. Trial is set for Sept. 19. Prosecutors have not yet decided whether to seek the death penalty.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito was to decide today whether to grant the media access to crime scene photographs and transcripts of secret conferences during the preliminary hearing.

Two reporters, from the Los Angeles Times and USA Today, gave sworn affidavits Thursday stating they couldn't fully understand testimony at Simpson's preliminary hearing because they were barred from viewing crime scene photos.

Simpson isn't due back in court until a status hearing Wednesday.

Simpson was shuttled before dawn Thursday from his jail cell to Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, known as the "hospital to the stars" because it is popular among celebrities.

Huisenga performed a lymph node biopsy on Simpson's right armpit.

"He had an uncomplicated recovery," Huisenga said.

Swollen lymph nodes in the armpit, neck or groin can indicate the presence of viral or bacterial infection, or more serious diseases such as AIDS, cancer or Hodgkin's disease.

Earlier tests on Simpson ruled out AIDS or other infectious causes. Simpson has a family history of cancer, Huisenga said.

Also Thursday — The California Department of Consumer Affairs sent letters to Simpson's investigators telling them to stop working unless they have California licenses or can prove exceptions to the license requirement, a source told the AP.

A lawyer for the detectives said they have not violated the law and will comply with state regulations.

Shapiro said he planned to appeal to the president of Fox Broadcasting Co. to delay the Sept. 13 broadcast of its TV movie "The O.J. Simpson Story" until after the trial.

Handout is a good move

We've heard this before. Ignorance of the law is no excuse. People often get arrested or fined because they did (or did not) do something.

In Sanford, waiting for a city crew to clean up brush or trees near your street isn't the thing to do. It could result in a fine.

It's the homeowner or business owner who are responsible for this maintenance, not the city. And everyone should be informed of this.

The City of Sanford is hoping to overcome any problems caused by the lack of knowledge, by issuing an information handout regarding responsibility for right-of-way area maintenance.

We see this as an excellent move, and hope it will not only be expanded locally, but copied by other municipalities.

In addition to handing this out whenever there is a specific area suffering from a lack of proper maintenance, we hope the information would become available to everyone. It could be mailed out to residents, and/or obtainable at the Chamber of Commerce building or from real estate agents.

People may or may not want to accept the responsibility of maintaining trees next to an alley, or shrubs next to the curb in front of their property. But by being informed of who has that responsibility, and like it or not, at least they will know.

How much better it is when a government body informs residents of requirements, restrictions, and other needs. It avoids people storming city hall demanding action, or continuous complaints of, "why doesn't the city do something?"

We can't leave it all up to the city however. People must take it upon themselves to find this information.

This handout regarding tree and shrubbery maintenance near city right-of-way is a good example of how to prevent this type of problem.

ELLEN GOODMAN

Creaky old weapon in the arsenal

BOSTON — I am driving down the Maine highway, dutifully subjecting myself to another dose of radio from the right. On this station, G. Gordon Liddy has begun to enlighten me on what he calls — what they all call — Hillary's Health Plan.

Liddy, the man who made his name during Watergate and made his fame holding his hand over a burning candle, has this to say: "Hillary's plan was adopted by her husband, President Clinton, because he HAS NO CHOICE!!!!"

There is a small pregnant pause in the vitriol. It's broken by two little words uttered at a subliminal voice level. "Pussy-whipped." Liddy growls.

And in case any listener missed that, he adds, "She is President. He is Bubba."

Now, Fellow Travelers, I am no longer surprised at anything that is said about Hillary Clinton. She has become the misogynists' pincushion, the right-wing target of choice. She has bumped Ted Kennedy from the top of their hate lists. Every woman politician owes her big-time for diverting the anger, letting the rest of them off the hook.

But "pussy-whipped"? Excuse me?

Let you or I think this phrase is limited to the macho right, within days I heard it from the macho left. Or, to be exact, I read it in an Esquire piece about Madonna by Norman Mailer.

It appears that Mailer finds Madonna nearly as fascinating as Mailer. Indeed, the writer was struck by the performer's intelligence, something manifest by the number of times she agreed with him: "Exactly ... I agree ... right ... Right."

But at one point, the seven-syllable author pauses to explain to the reader why he did not want to be photographed by Esquire with the thirtysomething performer on his lap. Because of his wife.

"What we are witnessing," he writes ironically, "is the action of the female mind upon male flesh, otherwise known as the cumulative effect of being pussy-whipped over the course of 20 years of marriage by a strong, beautiful, redheaded wife." Pussy-whipped? Norman, did you check that with the strong, beautiful, redheaded wife?

And in case any listener missed that, he adds, 'She is President. He is Bubba.'

I shouldn't be surprised that this vulgar phrase has re-emerged out of the linguistic primal ooze. All sorts of ugly language is being recycled by people claiming to be crusaders against "political correctness." The cruder the better.

This particular whip has had a long and glorious history of use in the verbal battle of the sexes. Liddy and Mailer are old enough to remember earlier skirmishes.

The curious thing is that this is a weapon wielded by men against men — or at least against men who don't keep their women in line. Men who don't shore up their place in the pecking order must be relegated to the hen-pecked order.

These days when a woman is dominated by a man we may eventually call her battered or abused. But we don't call her (how shall I say this in a family newspaper?) tomcat-whipped. It is certain that no woman has lost her femininity by losing an argument with her husband.

This idea of the bossy, henpecking, battle-axe wielding dominatrix is as stale as a James Thurber cartoon and as old as the image of mother. Almost as old as Liddy and Mailer.

U.S. cozies up to a world-class killer

SURABAYA, Indonesia — While American warplanes are gearing up to restore democracy in Haiti, American warships here are embracing one of the world's most brutal dictators.

Anxious for warm U.S.-Indonesia relations and investment money, the Surabaya base here has an agreement to allow U.S. warships to use repair facilities — which the U.S. Navy did just last month during joint U.S.-Indonesia naval exercises. It might seem harmless and friendly, but only to the uninformed.

The Indonesian military, headed since 1985 by President Suharto, has topped up a pogrom-like body count, Suharto, with hundreds of thousands of deaths to his name, is responsible for a hundred times as many killings as Saddam Hussein — putting him in line behind Pol Pot (more than 2 million), Hitler (more than 6 million) and Stalin (more than 20 million) for the number of non-combatants killed in this century.

American allies in this region have long been frustrated by the lack of attention paid to the backwater brutality of Suharto's government, while smaller-scale killings in places like Iraq, Yugoslavia and Haiti have received a far greater response from the United States.

Less than 30 years ago, in 1965, the canals in this city ran red with the blood of thousands of alleged Communists who were butchered by the military in the wake of a failed coup. Suharto used the fabled coup as an excuse to slaughter hundreds of thousands of nominally left-leaning peasants and wealthy ethnic Chinese.

But old history is not what will complicate President Clinton's appearance here in mid-November. It's Suharto's continued 20-year military occupation of East Timor and the murder of as many as 200,000 East Timorese that will challenge Clinton's commitment to human rights.

Clinton has been an integral supporter of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation Forum. In Seattle last year, he hosted the first-ever "leader level" meeting of APEC. This year, with Indonesia chairing APEC, Clinton and the other 14 leaders are planning to sit down for a second session.

American diplomatic sources say all the details have yet to be worked out, but claim there is no room for human rights in the APEC context. If a bilateral meeting between Clinton and Suharto occurs — as is likely — then the issue of the continued East Timor occupation "might" be raised, officials say.

"Might" is not good enough for groups like Amnesty International, which have cataloged a wide range of human rights abuses in Indonesia, including torture of political prisoners and widespread imprisonment without trial. Not the least of the concerns is the East Timor issue. Portugal abandoned its former colony on the eastern end of Timor island in 1975. But rather than tolerate an independent nation in the middle of its 17,000-plus island archipelago, Indonesia invaded that same year.

By murder and starvation, as many as one-fifth of the almost 800,000 East Timorese died. Suharto officially admits that only 5,000 have been killed in the fighting in the last 20 years, and that another 25,000 died of hunger. But in 1977, Indonesia's own foreign minister admitted that as many as 80,000 might already have been killed by that time, just two years into the occupation. A comparison between the Portuguese census figures in 1974 and Indonesian census figures since that time shows a pogrom must have occurred.

It might seem harmless and friendly, but only to the uninformed.

GUEST COLUMNIST

And just where does the first wife fit in?

The one story that hasn't been done in the O.J. Simpson debacle — incredibly, since it seems every pebble has been turned over in examining minutiae — is the first wife story. And it is probably the key interview in discovering what went wrong with this picture.

I'm looking at the big picture. Sure, O.J. may or may not be guilty of the slayings of his ex-wife Nicole and her friend Ronald Goldman, but in a way that's moot. They're dead. They can't be brought back. But something in this story might be elucidated to help someone, somewhere, head off a similar fate for himself, for I'm not sure that this can simply be labeled an example of chronic wife-battering. Or, if it truly can, perhaps we can learn something from the dynamic at the bottom of this tragedy — if we're willing to look at it.

My guess is that corruption lies at the bottom of this American tragedy — moral corruption. As in the classic novel of that name by Theodore Dreiser, the players made bad choices for themselves motivated by selfishness.

Why did O.J., a black football hero and then actor, feel it was important to marry Nicole Brown, a pretty, but apparently naive California blonde? It was only yesterday that I heard this subject being broached for the first time on a TV news magazine when an observer called her a "trophy" wife. We know that term from business where it is in vogue in some circles to trade in the older model wife for one who is younger and presumably more beautiful and ambitious. Though Nicole was probably first wife Marguerite's junior by a good decade, the issue that here made her a trophy is that she was white.

The corruption that lies at the bottom of this is that the love is passive rather than active, the object of desire chosen more for how she can enhance the self-esteem of the lover rather than what he can do to improve her life although there is no doubt that O.J. had a lot to offer. But I, as a white woman, am always more impressed by black men who marry black women, as if to say, "there's something all right with being black." Also, they know their place.

Before you get all up in arms about this (statement), let me explain. I'm not saying that blacks and whites shouldn't marry, but that anyone making such a decision should have a great deal of confidence in it, else the lack of confidence will chafe. I learned this very important principle from the father of my treasured daughter. He was so handsome, possibly something of a trophy for me, perhaps the seed of destruction at the core of our relationship, that I once asked him why he didn't court glamour, perhaps hanging out in hotels hoping to hook up with rock stars or movie starlets. "Because," he told me, "I know my place."

And it must be very galling for black women to have it suggested to them, by word or deed, that it is somehow superior to be white. In the overall notion of loyalty to one's, please pardon the choice of term, roots, I would think it would be appreciated that one promotes his or her own culture. I've heard black men complain about their black women, saying they complain too much. But I don't think there is anyone who has more of a right, a place, if you will, to be a conscience for them, except themselves. It probably sounds as if I am trying to keep people in their place. But it is said we will all one day look alike from enough intermarriage.

But the real problem at the base of the Nicole-O.J. relationship goes beyond race — corruption in vows. From what I understand, O.J. was still married to Marguerite when he first took up with Nicole. If that is true, it was wrong.

News reports say that O.J. and Marguerite's marriage was already faltering when Nicole entered the picture, but that's one of those pronouncements of simultaneity that can go either way. I would guess — it may have faltered because of Nicole. No matter how unstable the first marriage may have been at the time of Nicole's advent, it would still have been better to allow it to die its own death by natural means without the assist of an affair, as any breaching of the marriage vows could be called even if the initial couple was separated. In short, going outside the marriage bounds is usually wrong — in fact, there's usually no good reason for divorce.

A lot of people don't understand that these days, however. There's a lot of convenience built into our ethical decisions, and nowhere more so than in Los Angeles. I visited there 10 years ago and was shocked to discover the amount of bisexuality among teenagers — it was the in thing to do. But ultimately, absolute principles never fail us. As little as I can admire or envy a corporate couple fitting the "trophy" wife description, since I can only imagine that life at home would be hell, I can't feel comfortable even thinking about a relationship built on the expediency of jettisoning one wife simply because a seemingly more attractive one came along. As we know too well in Florida from the construction industry, anything built on rickety foundations will ultimately come crashing down. I can only think that that must have been the case with O.J. and Nicole Simpson's shaky relationship.

Before ending, I would like to speak briefly to Nicole's role in all of this — for I am not trying to blame O.J. alone; I think they were both to blame.

SEMINOLE OPINION

Although I found it nauseating that he would write off the now infamous 1989 wife-beating incident as a case of his taking the blame, as if they both were at fault — because he didn't seem to have the humility and, at the same time, bravura to shoulder the blame himself without protest — in fact, they probably were both at fault. Although this is almost as delicate a subject to mention as race, in almost every picture I've seen of Nicole either during or after her marriage, she is wearing clothes that show off her décolletage. Believe me, I do not believe that a woman's outfit is an excuse for assault and battery in any way, shape or form. But did Nicole's naivete extend 'till the end of her life? Could she not know the kind of man she was dealing with, and how her comportment could disturb him and, yes, provoke him?

And, finally, I read the other day that, after counseling (which I usually don't think tends to be a very healthy choice anyway), Nicole decided she wanted O.J. back and he told her, "I'm doing fine without you." Later, he changed his mind, too. A friend says they had a co-dependent relationship — mutually obsessive in a way in which indecision incites aggression. It's hard to say where the seeds of violence were planted except to say that they smacked of drug use, never very good for making cool-headed decisions, and that there's no excuse for them in the end; everyone loses.

I would like to know how first wife Marguerite fits into all of this, and what she thinks of all of this. But perhaps for the first time she is saying to herself what every divorced wife would like to be able to say at some point someday, that she is better off without the man who divorced her.

Oliver said he suspects the number is incorrect. Their polling of elections supervisors suggests much higher number, he said. Oliver would not disclose their count, saying all their public information requests haven't been answered.

Safe Bet attorneys argued Leon County elections supervisor Sancho held up the count, blocking their chances to move to a Florida Supreme Court review and on to the ballot.

Oliver said he believes Safe Bet complied with the Florida Constitution and state laws governing name-gathering by submitting the last batch of signatures to Sancho two weeks before the Tuesday deadline.

The state requires elections supervisors to verify petition signatures and submit their number to the Division of Election up to 90 days before the election. But the law does not require supervisors to count all of the signatures they receive by that date, which fell at 5 p.m. Tuesday. Supervisors are only required to count them "promptly."

Sancho, Leon County supervisor, said he was offended by the Safe Bet lawsuit and briefly considered a reverse suit to recover defense expenses. Sancho said Safe Bet attorneys told Judge Smith he was responsible for their question not passing the signature requirement.

Sancho said Safe Bet submitted 23,127 petitions to his office for verification, but did not submit the first names until May 25. At that time, they were the 18th group to request signature certifications, Sancho said.

Petitioners were counted on a first in, first out basis, said Sancho. Of the 9,948 Safe Bet signatures that were reviewed, about 52 percent could be certified, said Sancho. At that rate, Sancho said checking the remaining 13,179 ballots wouldn't have landed Safe Bet on the ballot.

"We explained to them it was beyond our ability to count all of them," said Sancho.

Negotiators face decisive day in talks with North Koreans

By CLARE HULLIS Associated Press Writer

GENEVA — U.S. negotiators are facing decisive talks today as they bid to prevent North Korea from extracting plutonium for nuclear bombs from thousands of spent nuclear fuel rods.

But they don't expect to reach a settlement immediately in their larger goal of convincing North Korea to open its nuclear program to international inspection, chief U.S. negotiator Robert L. Gallucci said Thursday. Instead, he said, the two sides are concentrating on narrowing their differences.

A final agreement would include North Korean guarantees its atomic program in exchange for more modern nuclear technology, financial aid and some form of diplomatic links.

U.S. and North Korean technical experts spent Thursday grappling with the most urgent problem: how to treat 8,000 spent fuel rods corroding in a murky pond at an experimental reactor near North Korea's capital, Pyongyang.

North Korea says it needs to begin reprocessing them by the end of the month before they start to give off harmful radiation. Western experts say reprocessing would leave North Korea with enough plutonium for five nuclear bombs.

Gallucci, an assistant secretary of state in charge of Korea policy, planned to meet Kang Sok Ju, a North Korean vice foreign minister, today to finalize a deal.

The most likely scenario is that North Korea will allow in technical experts to treat the water chemically and preserve the life of the rods by up to one year.

But their ultimate fate may be more difficult to settle. The United States wants to send them to another country, such as China, for reprocessing so Pyongyang cannot secretly extract plutonium. North Korea has offered to encase them in concrete instead.

North Korea is demanding help in switching its nuclear power program away from Soviet-style graphite-moderated reactors, which produce more plutonium than the modern "light water" reactors developed in the West.

violate the law, they usually get is a slap on the wrist."

"Much of this however," he said, "depends on the number of officers which can become involved in street crimes. We have many other crimes to cover, and it's unfortunate we can't devote as much time as I'd like to on this."

In New York City, a police crackdown on so-called quality-of-life offenders is geared to fulfill Mayor Rudolph Giuliani's vision of a new civility in a city known for its good manners. During last fall's election campaign, Giuliani made an issue out of ridding the city of "squeegee people" — the often aggressive panhandlers who windshields of cars stuck in traffic.

Now Giuliani wants police to get graffiti artists, prostitutes, drunks, winos, reckless bicyclists, loiterers, noise polluters, sidewalk book salesmen who block pedestrians, homeless people who take up residence in parks, and small-time drug dealers and pushers.

Sanford's Chief Russell has recently expanded the sting operations to include the sale of alcohol to minors. "We did this recently," he said, "and made a number of arrests. Store clerks must learn that they have to check IDs to be certain the purchaser isn't a minor."

Russell said if police continue receiving complaints about this practice, the crackdown on such sales to minors may be conducted on a continuing basis.

Russell is also working on people seen drinking alcoholic beverages in public. "This is being conducted by all of our officers," he said. "They have been told to constantly be aware of people standing around, and check to be certain they aren't violating the open container law or drinking in public."

New York City police officer James Patterson, who patrols Greenwich Village, gave an example of what he faces on an almost-regular basis.

Patterson reported seeing a skinny, 26-year old Harlem man calling himself "J. Rock" with a twist-off top bottle and a label reading "soft, luscious red wine."

He observed, "Surely the man, needing a good time, thought no cop would bother interfering. Not in a city that averages 2,000 murders a year."

Rock was wrong. As he walked up the avenue, Patterson snatched the wine bottle away in mid-swig and slam-dunked it into a wastebasket.

"You don't drink in front of me," Patterson bellowed. Rock slunk off, muttering, "Damn."

New York City has recently raised taxes, primarily in order to increase its law enforcement. With a recent hiring spree, the department is expected to have 32,000 officers by the end of this year.

"Some of the taxpayers may not be happy," said New York police Capt. Stephen Kennedy of the 6th Precinct, "but the people who live here are thanking us."

Just as with taxation however, there are other problems and complaints.

A New York civil rights lawyer, Ron Kuby, who offers free legal advice to people arrested on the streets has accused the mayor of wanting to satisfy well-off voters, "who are offended by the sight of poor people."

"What makes us angry," Russell commented, "is that we are arresting the same people time after time. We make repeated arrests of the same subjects. Until that can be resolved by the courts, combatting this type of street crime will never be easy."

Consumer prices up 0.3 percent for second month

By JAMES M. RUBIN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Consumer prices rose 0.3 percent in July — the same as in June — primarily because higher gasoline costs pushed energy prices into their steepest climb in 10 months, the government said today.

The Labor Department said its Consumer Price Index increased for the sixth straight month, but for the year is up just 2.7 percent at an annual rate. That equals the moderate 2.7 percent advance for all of 1993.

On Thursday, the department reported that its Producer Price Index, measuring inflation pressures before they reach the consumer, surged 0.5 percent last month. The July wholesale price gain was due almost entirely to sharply higher costs for gasoline, oil and coffee.

While inflation has remained subdued this year, analysts anticipate the Federal Reserve — worried about possible future inflation — will raise short-term interest rates next week for the fifth time this year.

Today's overall consumer price rise was in line with economists' predictions, and the core rate excluding volatile energy and food costs was even a little better than projected.

The underlying consumer inflation rate rose 0.2 percent in July, less than the 0.3 percent increase in each of the preceding two months. Most analysts had predicted a 0.3 percent rise in July for the core figure.

Energy costs in July rose 1.8 percent, the steepest climb since they rose 1.9 percent last October. The Labor Department said almost all of the increase was due to a 3.8 percent jump in motor fuels.

Food prices increased 0.5 percent last month, as declines for meats and dairy products partially offset rising costs of fresh fruits and vegetables and coffee.

The cost of beef and veal fell 1.2 percent, the best showing since they dropped 1.5 percent two years ago.

Coffee prices, which soared nearly 43 percent at the wholesale level, rose a record 22.4 percent for consumers.

Car finance costs increased 1.8 percent, on top of a 3.4 percent jump in June.

Analysts discounted most of the increases in advance of today's report.

"Seasonal factors will add to inflationary pressures" in July, said Donald Ratajczak of Georgia State University's Economic Forecasting Center in Atlanta.

"They are less significant in August, however."

Still, there seemed to be a consensus among analysts that the Federal Reserve will boost short-term interest rates for the fifth time this year when the central bank's policy-setting Federal Open Market Committee meets Tuesday.

"The Federal Reserve is not looking at current inflation. It's worried about the future," said economist David Wyss of DRI-McGraw Hill, a forecasting service in Lexington, Mass.

Since February, the Fed has boosted the target rate that banks charge each other for overnight loans four times, taking it from 3 percent to 4.25 percent. Analysts expect another increase of either a quarter or half percentage point next week.

While inflation has been restrained, the Federal Reserve is worried that rising commodity prices and employment gains could signal shortages down the road that could cause more rapid inflation.

Inflation has been mild for more than three years, the best stretch in three decades. As measured by the Consumer Price Index, the cost of living was up 2.7 percent last year, following rises of 2.9 percent in 1992 and 3.1 percent in 1991.

Jail

Lake Mary police Capt. Sam Belfiore said the drive now will be to obtain 43,000 signatures statewide, which will ask the Supreme Court to revisit the matter. If this new drive is successful, and a total of 430,000 signatures can be obtained to call for another public referendum, Belfiore said there is a chance the STOP measure could appear on the 1996 general election ballot.

The STOP drive is aimed at forcing prisoners to spend at least 85 percent of their jail sentences behind bars.

"Right now we are using the names on petitions obtained this year to form a data base," Belfiore said. "From that point, instead of having petition drives at certain spots, we will be conducting a massive mailout and try to get everyone involved."

He said a group of attorneys is presently working on the wording of what was originally proposed. The Supreme Court's decision to reject the proposal was based on what they considered unclear wording.

At Wednesday night's meeting, Sen. Gary Siegel was guest speaker. He discussed various anti-crime bills and juvenile crime bills passed by the legislature this year. He also reported on the legislature's approval for additional prison beds.

"We had an excellent turnout at the meeting," Belfiore said. "Sheriff Don Ealinger and Undersheriff Steve Harriett were there, along with several other law enforcement officers, State Attorney Norman Wolfinger, and the Chairman of the Orange County STOP group. We were pleased that so many people are becoming concerned over this problem."

Gary Jennings is president of the Seminole County STOP Chapter, considered as one of the most active in the state of Florida.

Washington summer: Bugs, tourists, foul air

By HARRY P. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — All of the talk on Capitol Hill was about delaying debate on the year's most crucial legislation so bean counters could figure what the various health plans would cost.

It had nothing to do, of course, with the fact that it's August and this is Washington, where the only things that thrive in the summer are mosquitoes, foul air and tourists.

People who live and work in Washington, who beg, borrow and campaign to be in Washington, who think they've arrived when they're in Washington — these people don't want to be in Washington. In August.

But this year they've got to. Take the fellow who lives at 1800 Pennsylvania Avenue, who's got his own 747 waiting to take him anywhere in the world. He wants to take his family to Martha's Vineyard, where they had such a great time last year eating custom-made mango ice cream and hobnobbing with the rich and famous.

No dice. Bill Clinton promised to stick around until Congress leaves town.

Listen to Vice President Al Gore grumble. "When the cameras are turned off and the microphones are turned off, you'll find people in the Congress, in the executive branch, in the private sector, working this issue all talking to their families saying, 'We don't know what's going to happen in August.' But we're committed to staying here to get this done."

Oh, the human tragedy! "It's been difficult to plan my wedding," says Laura Nichols, press aide to Rep. Richard Gephardt whose health bill is in the forefront of debate. "When you are working 12, 14, 16 hours a day it's tough getting a caterer." The nuptials will take place in August, she says bravely.

Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala had planned to plunge into the wilderness as is her August custom. Not in 1994 while there's lobbying to be done for health reform.

The State Department's Mike Kozak wanted to take a week off to celebrate his 20th wedding anniversary but it was interrupted at both ends of the week because he was needed to work on problems in Haiti. No surprise. The same thing happened on his 15th anniversary, except the concern was Panama.

Warren Christopher, the secretary of state, just got back from a routine five-day trip to the Middle East, and he's still planning to take his vacation the last two weeks in August. That business about the beat-laid plans...

This time last year he was soaking up the rays in Santa Barbara when word came that Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres urgently wanted a meeting. Peres flew to California and revealed details of the secret negotiations Israel had held with PLO in Norway.

Christopher had his high command stagger vacations. Be comforted by the fact there's one undersecretary of state in Washington at all times.

Washington's summer exodus has a rich history. The British considered Washington so unpleasant in August they burned the place in 1814. Richard Nixon found the town so hot, he resigned in August.

From the time George picked the place, the government has fled the swamp for friendlier climes. Except it's not called a swamp anymore, as The Washington Post's Donnie Radcliffe pointed out recently. Now it's wetlands.

But a swamp by any other name is still a swamp. In August.

Crime bill aftermath

Opponents smelled great society, resurrected

By MIKE FEINLBERG
An AP News Analysis

WASHINGTON — Democrats portrayed it as a detention-plus-prevention, take-it-or-leave-it, now-or-never, the people-demand-it crime bill. But that was before they lost.

Now it is morning-after, wound-licking, cooler-heads time. For four years, Congress has struggled to address the issue Americans say most concerns them. Neither Democrats nor Republicans can relish going to the voters in 88 days to explain why they can't address that issue.

For President Clinton politically, Thursday's 225-210 House vote blocking floor consideration of the $33.2 billion crime measure was a stinging loss. From his viewpoint, the timing is terrible, exposing him as vulnerable at the very moment his health care bill, on which he stakes his reputation, is before Congress and health care's constituency seems to be losing interest.

House GOP Whip Newt Gingrich of Georgia said he hoped the crime vote would be a lesson to Clinton on "where the American people are and where the Congress is," and that it would lead to more bipartisanship on health reform.

There was no reply from the Democrats who now must either try a more palatable approach to the crime bill — by dumping the ban on many assault-style weapons, perhaps — or try to win more votes.

House Speaker Thomas Foley met into the night Thursday with stunned White House strategists and said he hoped for another attempt to legislate on crime next week. Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., a key player, said passing a crime bill this year was still a possibility "if the American people really voice their concerns."

In trouble and aware of it, the crime bill's supporters pulled emotional strings. They called up images of the dead, the raped and the frightened — a mother of four killed on her front porch, two girls named Amanda and Megan shot dead, two women in their mid-80s sexually assaulted at gunpoint. People locked in their homes, afraid of the streets.

But among the passengers on this $33.2 billion omnibus legislation were some easy targets, and opponents had their way with them.

Money for midnight basketball games was in this bill; money for self-esteem counseling; money for arts and crafts; money, exclaimed the opponents, for dancing lessons. Dancing lessons for street thugs? It is the Great Society reinvented, moaned Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla. "We need to put the swiftness and certainty of punishment back into the system," he said, and what the Democrats offered was midnight basketball.

"This bill barely mentions victims, but it lavishes billions on criminals," said Republican Porter Goss, another Floridian.

Rep. Bill Hefner, D-N.C., defensively: "This is not a perfect bill. If we wait for a perfect bill, it will never come before this House. You would think the only thing in this bill is night basketball."

Rep. Thomas Foglietta, D-Pa.: When Phoenix spent 80 cents per child on night basketball, the youth crime rate dropped 50 percent.

House GOP leader Bob Michael said "the unholy trinity of pork, posturing and partisanship" was evident in the bill and in the way Democrats were trying to ram it through.

But what killed it was another trinity: lawmakers from rural areas where gun possession is a rite of passage; Republicans, enraged at Democratic procedural tactics; and 10 black representatives.

If the dissenting black lawmakers had voted the other way, the procedural vote would have gone the other way and the bill would have been awaiting Senate action.

The black members were unhappy about the bill's creation of more than 50 offenses punishable by the death penalty, which falls disproportionately on black defendants.

And they were outraged that, in framing a compromise with the Senate, House leaders had dropped a provision permitting the use of statistics to prove the existence of racial discrimination in capital cases.

The bill may have contained billions for crime prevention — too many billions for coddling, in the Republican view — but the death sentence provisions were too punitive to stomach in the view of the black legislators.

Clinton has gotten accustomed to winning these cliff-hangers after a dramatic day of telephone work. The White House had taken to calling them "Clinton landlides."

The president won his deficit-cutting budget bill, with its gasoline tax, and points to it as a cause for the current prosperity. He won on the Brady bill, requiring a waiting period and background check for purchasers of handguns, and he won by two votes in the House in May on the ban of the sale and manufacture of bullet-spraying assault-style weapons.

But he couldn't pull it off the crime bill vote — 58 Democrats broke party ranks.

Changes demanded on Mitchell health bill; debate postponed

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A growing bloc of Senate moderates is demanding changes in Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell's health bill even as House leaders are forced to postpone their action on reform a week or more.

President Clinton called a Cabinet meeting today before dispatching 10 Cabinet chiefs and 11 other top officials to lobby senators for the health bill. It came a day after a stinging House defeat for his other major domestic initiative, a $33.2 billion anti-crime bill.

The president demanded Thursday evening that Congress keep working on crime and said, "Health care's not going to take a vacation either. I think they ought to stay and deal with both of them."

After two days of mostly partisan rhetoric, Mitchell, D-Maine, said he would call the first votes today on amendments to his 1,448-page plan, despite Republican objections that they needed more time to study its provisions.

House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., after hours of talks with Mitchell, White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta and others, said the House debate on health must wait for the crime bill to be finished and for answers from the Congressional Budget Office on the costs of rival health bills.

Aides said they expected at least a week's delay, and Foley would not rule out the possibility of putting action off until September. "I can't give you an answer," he said. "I'd like to do it as soon as possible."

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., denied that the defeat of the crime bill boded ill for passage of health reform. "The timing on health care depends on getting answers from CBO. It has nothing to do with crime," he said.

But even before the setback on crime, Gephardt and his lieutenants were facing what Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., acknowledged to be a "struggle to round up the votes."

Fourteen "mainstream" senators from both parties met for several hours Thursday and planned to sit down again today to try to develop a package of major amendments to Mitchell's plan.

Their nucleus was the "rump" group that pushed its own bill through the Senate Finance Committee, including Sens. John Breaux, D-La., John Chafee, R-R.I., and Kent Conrad, D-N.D.

"This is the only bipartisan effort going on in the Senate," Conrad said. "We need simplification and streamlining. There's just too much stuff in this bill — too many boards and commissions" and too much demanded of the states.

Other Democrats also were raising questions about Mitchell's overhaul of the health system, which aims to get health insurance for 95 percent of Americans by the turn of the century. Today only 85 percent are covered.

"People do not want government making their health care choices for them. Washington should not run that system," Sen. Herb Kohl, D-Wis., said in a floor speech.

Mitchell's call for a 25 percent tax on health plans with costs that grow faster than average also was evoking sharp skepticism.

"It is too much like price controls," said Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo. But he also faulted a rival Republican plan by Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole for doing too little to restrain the growth of medical costs.

Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., even as he declared support for the Mitchell bill, said the tax on health plans had to be altered.

In the House, Democrats backing Gephardt's universal coverage bill handed out falling grades to the stripped-down, bipartisan health bill put forward by 10 moderate-to-conservative Democrats and Republicans.

They complained it would leave as many as 30 million Americans without insurance and cut Medicare without giving the elderly drug benefits or anything else in return. As for holding down costs, the bipartisan plan is "all gums and no teeth," charged Rep. Sander Levin, D-Mich.

The bipartisan bill offered by Reps. J. Roy Rowland, D-Ga., Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., Michael Bilirakis, R-Fla., and others seeks to expand coverage through insurance reforms, subsidies for the poorest, an expansion of community health centers and tax changes. Cooper said it was the best Congress can do this year.

The third day of Senate debate was filled with sniping and dueling charts attacking the Democratic bill as bureaucratic and Dole's as doing too little.

Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., a foe of the Mitchell plan, pleaded with his colleagues to "stop bickering like children on the school ground." "We're on the wrong path," said Boren. "We ought to stop this train right now and get off."

It wouldn't be Woodstock without a little chaos

By DAVID GERMAN
Associated Press Writer

SAUGERTIES, N.Y. — It wouldn't be Woodstock without a little chaos.

Nearly everything ran behind schedule on the eve of Woodstock '94, from getting vending stands up and running to shuttling fans to the Hudson River Valley farm in time for opening acts this morning. Some ticketholders were anything but laid back about it.

"It's pretty disorganized when you think they've been planning this for how many months?" said Lisa Britt of Pinchurst, N.C., who waited in Coxsackie for a shuttle bus to take her to the concert in Saugerties, 20 miles south.

Joe Palmasani of Endicott, N.Y., had been camped out in Coxsackie since Tuesday to be on one of the first buses. "You got one guy here saying, 'I'm in charge of the bus.' Another guy saying, 'I'm in charge of the keys to the bus.' Another guy over here whose whole job is to guard the orange traffic cones," he said. "But nobody seems to be in charge of the whole thing."

Buses were supposed to begin delivering some of the 170,000 ticketholders from sites around the region by noon Thursday.

But the buses were delayed more than six hours because construction was still going on at the concert site and wristbands to identify ticketholders had not yet arrived, said concert spokeswoman Ilene Marder.

That irked fans eager to stake out camping space on the 850-acre farm where the concert is being held.

"It's starting to feel like the weekend I've been hoping for isn't going to happen because of all these delays," said Dimitri Treantaflos of New York City.

Promoters boasted they would have a quarter-million hot dogs, 4.5 miles of submarine sandwiches and mounds of other food available by noon Thursday, but food stalls remained closed until special Woodstock scrip arrived early Thursday evening. The token coins must be used for all purchases.

For all the disorder, other fans said it would be worthwhile once the music started. Headliners like Joe Cocker, Melissa Etheridge, Aerosmith, Bob Dylan and Peter Gabriel were to perform Saturday or Sunday. "I can live with all these inconveniences," said Jeff Strause of Boston. "There's going to be a lot of good music."

One thing that did work well was the sound system. Recorded music blasted loud and clear through the monster speaker towers during test runs.

Promoters hoped to avoid the chaos of the original Woodstock in 1969, when half a million people showed up at Max Yasgur's muddy farm in Bethel, 55 miles southwest of Saugerties. They tore down fences and got in for free.

This concert site is surrounded by miles of wire fence. Entrances and nearby highways are being patrolled by 550 state troopers, and 900 security guards are keeping order inside.

Still, some things never change. An 18-year-old New York City woman said she and several friends climbed a fence about 2 a.m. Thursday. She showed the scratches on the back of her legs to prove it.

"A lot of people are getting in," said the woman, who would not give her name. "There's going to be loopholes everywhere."

B

LOCALLY

O-Cubs rock in eighth

ORLANDO — Brooks Kieschnick scored an RBI single to post Orlando's last run in the eighth, which led the Cubs to a 5-0 victory over the Chattanooga Lookouts on Thursday. Orlando sent 10 men to the plate in the bottom of the eighth and scored all of its runs.

No-Tap at Bowl America

SANFORD — Bowl America-Sanford will conduct its weekly No-Tap Tournament this evening beginning at 9:30 p.m.

Strikes are awarded when a bowler knocks down nine or 10 pins. Play is handicapped as follows: bowlers with averages under 140 begin each game with strikes in the first three frames; 140-159, strikes in the first two frames; 160-179, a strike in the first frame; 180 and over, no handicap strikes.

All players bowl three games of qualifying, the top 50 percent bowling a fourth game to decide the cash winners (hopefully down to six places), including the top three bowlers who will compete in a TV-style roll-off for the top money.

The entry fee is $15. Two strikepots also will be awarded during the course of the evening. For more information, call 322-7542.

Seminole Softball registration

FIVE POINTS — The Seminole Softball Club will be registering players for its fall season from this Saturday through Sunday, Aug. 21.

Players may register at SSC complex on State Road 419 (between U.S. 17-92 and State Road 434) during the following times: Saturday, Aug. 13 and 20 — 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.; Sunday, Aug. 14 and 21 — 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.; Monday, Aug. 15, through Friday, Aug. 19 — 6 to 8 p.m.

Age divisions are Falcons (15 through 18), Eagles (13-14), Hawks (11-12), Starlings (10 and Under), and Sparrows (6, 7, and 8). Girls who are 14 and are freshmen in high school may opt to play in the Falcon division.

Falcons and Eagles will play fastpitch while the Starlings and Hawks will play slowpitch. The Sparrows play T-ball and coach-pitch.

Registration fees are: Falcons — $65; Eagles — $50; Hawks, Starlings — $40; Sparrows — $35.

For additional information, call 321-4985 during registration hours or contact Herman Cruz (385-9238) or Randy Harbour (332-8585). Scholarships are available.

Longwood fall registration

LONGWOOD — Longwood Babe Ruth Baseball is registering for the fall season.

Open registration will be held Saturday, Aug. 13, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Candyland Park.

Every player must try-out except T-ball. The league age for the players will be determined by the age of your child on August 1, 1995.

Leagues will be offered in the following divisions (with ages and fee in parenthesis): Pee-Wee (5-6, $35); Rookie (7-8, $40); Minor (9-10, $55); Major (11-12, $60); Babe Ruth (13-18, $85); Girls Softball (9-15, TBA).

The registration fee includes uniform jersey, stirrup socks, hat, supplemental liability and accident insurance, and administration costs.

Tryouts will be on August 20th as follows: Rookies and Prep, 9-11 a.m.; Minor and Babe Ruth, 12-1 p.m.; Major, 1-3 p.m.; and on August 21st: Rookies and Prep, 12-1 p.m.; Minor and Babe Ruth, 1-2 p.m.; Major, 2-3 p.m.

Oviedo boys volleyball

OVIDEO — Coach Terry Rzepkwocki has called the first practice of the 1994 season for the Oviedo High School boys' volleyball team for 8:30 p.m. Monday, Aug. 15.

Physicals and completed release forms are required to participate.

Cardinals, Marlins wrap up

MIAMI — The bats the St. Louis Cardinals packed up Thursday night were hot.

Tom Pagnozzi hit a home run for the third consecutive game and three teammates also homered, giving St. Louis a rain-shortened 8-6 victory over the Florida Marlins in the final game for both teams prior to the strike deadline.

Mark Whiten, Ray Lankford and Bernard Gilkey also homered for the Cardinals.

The game was called in the top of the eighth inning following a 79-minute rain delay.

Memphis rallies by Suns

JACKSONVILLE — George Canale and Les Norman scored the winning run with back-to-back doubles in the 12th inning to lead Memphis to an 8-7 come-from-behind win over Jacksonville on Thursday.

Jacksonville's Arquimedes Pozo and Ruben Santana had four hits each.

Juice II battling for AAU 12-and-under title

From Staff Reports

BURNSVILLE, Minn. — Despite suffering their first loss of the tournament on Wednesday, the Chet Lemon Juice II remained in the hunt for the 1994 AAU/USA 12-and-Under National Baseball Championship.

The tournament, being played at LaLavon Park, continued Thursday in the second phase of round-robin play.

The Juice II, representing the Seminole County-based Chet Lemon Baseball School, swept through their pool. After opening ceremonies last Saturday, Aug. 6, the Juice II whipped Downtown Auto Cleanup Music City 17-0 and outlasted the Bloomington Panthers 7-5.

They came back on Monday, Aug. 8, to blank Ankeny First Realty 3-0 and complete pool play undefeated.

After a day off Tuesday, the Juice II returned to action Wednesday and suffered a 7-1 setback at the hands of the Chesterville Mets. But the locals bounced back to beat the Boston Braves 8-1 later in the day.

While rain has plagued the tournament, it has remained on schedule and should culminate with a national champion being crowned Saturday.

Meanwhile, the Juice II's older counterparts, the Chet Lemon Juice, were competing in the AAU/USA 14-and-Under national tournament, which is being played at sites in Burnsville and Lakeville.

Unlike the younger squad, the Juice stumbled coming out of the gate, losing to the Bloomington Legion 3-1 in their first game of the tournament on Sunday, Aug. 7. They came back later in the day to thrash Kenosha Western Kiwanis 19-2.

On Monday, Aug. 8, the Juice knocked off the Fonlana Force 7-4.

There was no report of the Juice playing Tuesday, when rain forced the suspension of five games until Wednesday morning. And the results of those five games were critical in determining which 16 teams would advance to the championship bracket.

Members of the Juice, who qualified for the national tournament by winning the Florida AAU state qualifier, are Matt Allegra, Danny Amat, Lee Bagley, Josh Bernard, Tyler Carr, Bryan Chancellor, Brian Coates, Tommy Dixon, Guy Erwin, Jeremy Frost, Kevin Hoey, Ben Knapp, Kevin Naas, Todd Radcliff, Brian Sheekey, Jose Tormos, and Nick Zachman.

Also representing Central Florida in the 14-and-Under tournament are the Orlando Stars, who split a pair of games on Monday, Aug. 8. The Stars knocked off the Bloomington A's 6-3 but fell to the Little Rock Lions 4-1.

Sears series cranks up Saturday at Speedworld

Special to the Herald

ORLANDO — It's back to the track this weekend for the Sears Craftsman Racing Series.

The next event for the series is scheduled for this Saturday, Aug. 13, at the Orlando Speedworld Dragway, located 12 miles east of Orlando on Highway 50. Racers in the Super Pro, Pro, Sportman, and Pro Cycle Eliminator will battle for prize money and points toward the 1994 track championships.

Deltona's Rick Doern leads the Sportman points standings heading into competition this week. Vic Fera of Merritt Island sits atop the Super Pro division while Orlando's Jeremy Hrabal is pacing the Pro points chase. The Pro Cycle division is headed up by Winter Haven's David Gibson.

Gates will open at 4 p.m. for the Sears Craftsman Racing Series. Time trials are scheduled to begin at 4:30 p.m. with the final eliminations slated to start at 8 p.m.

For more additional information, call either (407) 568-5522 or (407) 568-7939.

Another kind of throwing

Tommy Dixon, who helped pitch the Lyman High School baseball team into the state playoffs last spring, hopes to do the same for the Grayhound football team this fall. Last year, Dixon threw for 300 yards and two touchdowns. In the spring jamboree, Dixon hit Willie Jones with a 45-yard scoring pass.

Kent Pritchard (No. 32), a 1994 graduate of Lake Mary High School, scored a team-high 10 points for the A.C. Boys in a Sanford Recreation summer basketball league game played Thursday night at Sanford Middle School.

Double forfeit mars recreation hoop opener

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Apparently, the Sanford Recreation Summer Basketball League suffered something of a stormy start Thursday night at Sanford Middle School Gymnasium.

The A.C. Boys were leading CEI Roofing 31-23 in the second half when the game was stopped and declared a double forfeit. There was no explanation given as to what prompted the decision.

In the nightcap, Mike Williams tossed in 12 points to lead Sanford AAU to a 33-23 decision over the Runnin' Rebels.

As a result, Sanford AAU (1-0) is the only undefeated team in the league as the A.C. Boys, CEI Roofing, and Runnin' Rebels all open 0-1.

The league, for players between the ages of 16 and 18, plays on Tuesday and Thursday nights at Sanford Middle School.

Behind eight first-half points by Lake Mary High School graduate Kent Pritchard, the A.C. Boys took a 21-17 lead into halftime over CEI Roofing, which was led by Mike Smith's seven points.

The A.C. Boys opened the second half outscoring CEI Roofing 10-4 before play was halted.

Pritchard, who converted four of five free throws, finished with 10 points while Tony Davis and Tony Smith each contributed seven points for the A.C. Boys.

Mike Smith scored all four of CEI Roofing's second-half points and ended up with a game-high 11 points. Tim McCloud chipped in with four points.

Sanford AAU also opened up a four-point lead at halftime over the Runnin' Rebels, taking a 17-13 advantage into the intermission. Paced by Mike Williams, who scored six points in each half for a game-high 12 points, Sanford continued to inch away from the Rebels in the second half.

Derrick Jones added six points for Sanford AAU, which had eight players contribute points. Deon Davis and Steve Aiston each hit a three-point shot for the winners.

The Runnin' Rebels also had eight players find their way to the scoring column. They were led by Rod Brown, who connected on a pair of three-point bombs for his team-high six points. Jonathon Jones added four, all in the first half.

Free throw shooting was a challenge in the second game as the two teams combined to make 6 of 19 attempts.

Players' strike ruins playoff, record chases

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Forget the race for Roger Maris' record and perhaps the expanded playoffs, too. The baseball players are on strike.

Players walked out on one of the most exciting seasons in decades after Thursday night's games, stopping the sport for the eighth time since 1972. They went on strike rather than give up a system that has increased the average salary more than 20-fold since the free agent era began in 1976.

"It's just going to be weird not coming to the ballpark," Ken Griffey Jr. said after the Seattle Mariners routed the Oakland Athletics 8-1 in the final game before the walkout.

"Today was a normal day," Griffey said. "Tomorrow it will be strange."

No talks were held Thursday and none were scheduled for today. The strike threatens the final 52 days and 669 games of the regular season. And it creates the possibility that the World Series, which was played through two world wars, won't be taken place for the first time since 1904.

"All of us are anguishing over the season," said Milwaukee Brewers owner Bud Selig, chairman of the ruling executive council.

As the strike deadline neared, George Steinbrenner and two other owners publicly questioned parts of management's bargaining strategy and Marge Schott questioned the experience of the owners' chief negotiator. Management is demanding a salary cap and won't give up the right to impose a cap after the season, leading players to feel a strike was their only means to force an agreement.

Donald Fehr, head of the Major League Baseball Players Association, said players were "re-signed and resentful" because they believed owners forced the stoppage.

More than half the teams, including the long-suffering Cleveland Indians, were still in the race for this year's expanded playoffs.

President Clinton pleaded with the parties to settle their differences and preserve a season that's already seen a perfect game by Kenny Rogers of Texas and an unassisted triple play by John Valentin of Boston.

Matt Williams, who has 43 homers, and Griffey Jr., who hit a grand slam for his 40th on Thursday night, were still in the chase for the home run record.

IN BRIEF

Benefit street fair

An unfortunate accident has left the father of two children, John Steven (Steve) Bonner disabled for a six month period. As a gesture of goodwill, families who live on Wildwood Drive in Hidden Lakes subdivision, Sanford, have banded together and will hold a benefit street fair on Saturday, Aug. 13, from 4-8 p.m. There will be games and prizes for the kids, hot dogs and drinks, face painting, raffle drawings, a magic show, clowns, a bake sale, rummage sale and more. Donations for the event are needed and would be appreciated. All proceeds of the event are being handled by the First Church of the Nazarene for distribution to the family. No alcoholic beverages will be served at this event. For more information contact the Bonner Benefit Committee: Nancy Richway, 323-4472; Sherlann Blevins, 323-8914; Susanne Barnett, 323-4352.

Products for cool comfort Items defend against worst summer elements

This summer seems to be hotter than usual to me. Here are some tips that might help you to help keep your cool.

A sun-filled day at the beach... a country drive and roadside stops for baskets of fresh summer fruit... endless hours of hunting for antiques. Then you get in your car and shock waves of heat rush at you.

A parked car in summertime can pack quite a punch of stored-up heat even when it's been sitting in the shade. Did you know that there is an aerosol product that cools the interior temperature of a car in seconds? Introduced a few years ago, this car-cooling product contains a water-alcohol solution that sprays out of the aerosol can in minuscule liquid droplets which quickly evaporate in the heated air. As liquid evaporates, its molecules absorb heat, thus cooling the surroundings instantly. The product uses compressed nitrogen gas or a hydrocarbon gas as propellant; it does not contain chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs), which are thought to harm the ozone layer. Ask for this product at auto centers.

CONSUMER FOCUS

Planning a longer stay at the seashore? Nothing can be more refreshing. But wherever there is salt-laden air, metal can stick or corrode. Bring along an all-purpose lubricant to unstuck everything — from the doors or windows of your rented cottage to the locks on your car; even the zipper on your suitcase.

If your car is not brand-new, some of its metal parts could be weather-beaten. If your trip will find you and your car in a corrosive environment — high humidity or salty air, for example — ask your auto mechanic to clean metal parts of your car with a corrosion inhibitor. Applied in the right amount, corrosion inhibitors leave a protective film on clean metal surfaces.

For sensible drivers preparing for extensive road travel this season, the journey starts at the service station. Have your car checked thoroughly to ensure that it can transport you smoothly and safely to your destination. Then pack your emergency repair kit. Include products that can help make your vacation more comfortable and carefree. Now you can hit that road!

Be prepared to have fun

If there are three things that go together they are summer, boys and camping. The Boy Scout organization has had a lot to do with the tradition of summer camping in the United States, and Boy Scout Troop 34, of Sanford, experienced that tradition first hand recently at Camp LE NO CHE.

In a one week session, nineteen boys in the troop completed activities to earn 34 merit badges and started work on 21 others. Their daily schedule ran from 6 a.m. to 11 p.m.; no encouragement was needed on the part of the leaders to get these guys to retire at night. Activities included swimming, hiking, archery, shotgun and riflery, pioneering, fishing, cooking, camping, radio, computer and much more.

Troop 34 meets at the First Presbyterian Church of Sanford, which has sponsored the troop continuously for 52 years.

Alcoholism a chronic, dependent condition

DEAR MARY: Last weekend we went out to a lounge with friends. The band was good, we were having a good time, and I didn't realize how much I had drunk. To make a long story short — it was too much. I got sick, felt lousy all day Sunday, and now I'm really embarrassed and also a little scared. I remember seeing my parents come in drunk on Saturday nights when I was a kid and I promised myself I'd never act that way. Boozers rule their lives, and after last weekend, I'm afraid I'm on the same path. Is getting drunk the same thing as being an alcoholic? If it isn't, how can you tell the difference? I'm determined never to let what my parents have become happen to me, even if it means I never take another drink. SOBER NOW AND SORRY DEAR SOBER AND SORRY: Stop being so hard on yourself. Almost everyone who drinks has, at some time in their life, become drunk. But remember, nine out of 10 people who drink never become alcoholics. When you are under the influence (drunk), you suffer a temporary loss of control over your behavior, certain neurological processes, and sometimes your physiology, as you discovered last weekend. Alcoholism, however, is a chronic condition where a person is dependent on alcohol to feel normal, even though doing so interferes with some important part of his/her life such as hurting their health, family relationships, or job performance.

DRUG COUNSELOR

While occasional overindulgence is dangerous from many standpoints such as driving under the influence, loss of social judgment, and feeling lousy afterward it does not mean you are an alcoholic. One word of caution, however, if your parents are problem drinkers, statistics have proven that you are at higher risk for developing an alcohol-related problem. From that standpoint, you need to be careful about both your consumption and its consequences.

Waking up is worth crowing about

DEAR ANNY: I have been reading your column since before my son was born, so I know it's been more than 35 years. In all that time, I've been amused, surprised, offended and entertained, according to my own assessment of your handling of various subjects. Most of the time I commend the accuracy, wit, sage advice, compassion and genuine down-to-earth logic I've seen in your responses.

Regarding the subject of crowing roosters: When I was a kid, one of my greatest pleasures was being awakened at dawn by "Old Harry" — our rooster. Then we'd come down to the kitchen to find breakfast ready, and the welcoming smiles of Mamma and Dad at the table.

Today, I have an alarm clock in the shape of a rooster, which crows at the appointed alarm setting. When the alarm is shut off, it says, "Good morning!" I call that alarm clock "the new

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Harry." I am certain that amid the flurry of this workaday world, there are a horde of people who still enjoy hearing a rooster crow, as opposed to hearing the infernal bussing or sudden blaring of the radio's wake-up alarm. After experiencing life as it is, to hear "New Harry" each morning is as much a comfort as it is to wake up. I'd rather hear a rooster than another commentary on rising crime. JAMES W. BRANDEN, SAN DIEGO

DEAR JAMES BRANDEN: So would I. And since you can't smuggle dawn past a rooster, please write again and tell me where I can buy one of those clocks. Thank you!

A great king, so the legend goes, once stepped on a thorn in his garden. In a furious rage, he ordered his prime minister to cover his entire kingdom with leather. "Your majesty," replied the wise prime minister, "let me cover your feet with leather, and wherever you go, you will be protected." And so the first pair of shoes was made!

A child whose first pair of shoes appealed to our photographer has a long way to travel. His or her journey through life will not be free of thorns, and more than shoes will be needed to make that journey! The child will need to develop that spiritual fiber which will do for his or her character what the first pair of shoes did for the king's feet. We can't carpet the whole world - but we can acquire the faith and courage which will enable us to climb life's most rugged trails.

Our churches and synagogues bring such qualities to the life of mankind. They point the way to happy, wholesome living - for the grown-up with the burdens of life on his shoulders - and for the little tot in his first pair of shoes.

Keep us informed

The Sanford Herald welcomes news and announcements, classes and seminars available to the public for the Religion page.

The following suggestions are recommended to expedite publication:

All items should be typed or written legibly and include the name and a daytime phone number of a person who can be contacted to answer any questions we might have.

Church Directory Update

Sanford Herald maintains a church directory that is published each Friday on the Religion page. We are presently updating this listing.

Becoming what you believe Workshop inspires spiritual growth

By SUSAN WENNER Herald Correspondent

ORLANDO - The Stouffer Orlando Resort was host for the "Spiritual Growth Workshop." The theme for the workshop was "Becoming What You Believe."

James Moore, director for the the Spiritual Growth Workshop introduces elders from Concord Street Church of Christ and keynote speaker, Dr. Howard Norton, in the evening program.

James Moore, director of the Spiritual Growth Workshop, spoke about the weekend. "To sum up the workshop I'd have to say it was a mountaintop experience of faith and inspiration to all who attended."

Children gather after festivities to enjoy balloons and friendships.

Banquet a success

By MARY ROWELL Herald Columnist

A banquet with 110 members in attendance raised $206,000 to use in the construction of the churches first permanent facility on the land adjacent to Wilson Elementary School.

God's help a strong foundation has been laid for future ministry. With the addition of our new facilities we should be able to meet the needs of our community with dramatically increased effectiveness.

Gospel singer returns

By SUSAN WENNER Herald Correspondent

OVIEDO - B.J. Johnson Jenkins went from the small town of Geneva to another small town in Mississippi. It was during that move and the events that followed that led her to the title of Missisippi Female Vocalist of the Year with the International Gospel Music Association.

Her husband was one of the benefits of leaving the state of Florida while on tour. "I met my husband, Lane, when I was on tour in Mississippi," she said.

Diet contributes to acid reflux

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been told by my doctor that I have an excess amount of acid reflux...

DEAR READER: When the stomach contracts, the gastric contents, which are extremely acidic, are propelled into the intestine for further digestion...

This condition is often associated with hiatal hernia, a weakness of the muscular valve where the esophagus enters the stomach...

Because reflux does not depend on food in the stomach, it is not ordinarily affected by diet, although certain foods -- such as citrus and spices -- may aggravate it...

In my opinion, your symptoms could be better controlled using one of the drugs I mentioned. Ask your doctor about this.

Untreated reflux is not a hazard to health except that it may cause pre-cancerous changes in the lining of the lower esophagus. Therefore, therapy is important to avoid this preventable complication. To give you more information, I am sending you free copies of my Health Reports "Hiatal Hernia" and "Peptic Ulcers..."

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
Evelle J. Younger said, "An incompetent attorney can delay a trial for months or years..."

In bridge, success or failure often depends on the sequence of plays: the timing, as it is known. If you, say, take a finesse too early or too late, it might spell disaster...

You are in three no-trump. West leads the diamond six: four, 10, jack. How do you continue?

With seven top tricks (three spades, two hearts, one diamond -- on the lead -- and one club), you need two more tricks. So, even if the hearts are 3-3, that suit will provide only one more trick. You must go after the clubs. However, if East wins an early trick, he will push a diamond through your king. If West has led from a five-card suit, you will lose one club and four diamond tricks. You must fight to keep East off the lead.

At trick two, lead a low club. If West plays the king, let him win the trick. But let's assume he plays low. You finesse dummy's queen. When it wins, you shouldn't cash the club ace. If you do, you will go down with this layout. Instead, you should return to hand with a spade (or heart) and lead a second low club. When West puts up the king, call for a low card from the dummy.

This is a classic avoidance play. Your diamond king is safe from attack and you have all the time in the world to collect at least 10 tricks.

After the dummy appears, a competent declarer spends a few moments -- or longer -- working out her or his sequence of plays.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bode Ozel YOUR BIRTHDAY Aug. 13, 1994

Significant relationships might develop in the year ahead with those who share your career ambitions. An enlarged social life could be one of the peripheral benefits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't be rash or impulsive today in an important matter you're hoping to finalize. Positive results must take precedence over speed. Do everything with care, one step at a time. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals what signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail #2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Guard against inclinations to tip your hand prematurely in your business negotiations today. Keep your ace close to your vest and don't play them until you're sure you can overpower the table.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Try to take a breather from your worldly concerns today to enjoy some of the wonderful things life has to offer. There's a lot more to living than attempting to earn a dollar.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You might wear out your welcome very quickly today if you're dictatorial with your friends. Make it a point to be pleasant, not pushy, when involved with pals.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In order to gratify your ambitious inclinations today, you might be tempted to use methods that aren't in keeping with your highest standards. You could end up winning and losing at the same time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Abrasive individuals are likely to irritate you far more than usual today. Be careful you do not respond in kind. Avoid confrontations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Disagreements between you and your mate should be resolved in private today and not aired in front of friends. If an argument results, everyone present could be embarrassed.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Although you'll analyze situations carefully today, you might still make bad judgments owing to preconceived views. Keep an open mind.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Even if asked today, think twice before becoming involved in the problems a friend has cultivated for him/herself. This situation could be thornier than it appears.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A disagreement might develop today between you and someone you really like. Although you may not be the one who precipitates it, bite the bullet and make amends for the sake of the relationship.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Others might be willing to help you today, provided you ask them nicely instead of demanding they do so. Don't press your luck with pals.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Do a lot of comparison shopping today if you intend to purchase some big-ticket merchandise. Get out and look around to see what you can save, or you may regret it later.
