

Balloon Lands In Northern India

Mighty Himalayas Stop 'Jules Verne'—For Now

By United Press International

Two American adventurers trying to float around the world in a giant balloon landed in northern India today in what their spokesman said was probably apprehension over whether they could clear the mighty Himalayas.

Jim Mitchell, press officer for Maxie Anderson of Albuquerque, N.M., and Donald Ida of Boulder, Colo., said Bedford, Mass., the balloon Jules Verne landed without incident 100 miles northwest of New Delhi, India.

Mitchell said the Americans had about two more hours of daylight and "would have kept going if they had thought they could have cleared the Himalayas."

"They apparently thought they couldn't cross those mountains," Mitchell said.

Mitchell said the U.S. Embassy in New Delhi also confirmed that the Americans had landed.

He said the balloon was perhaps 150 miles from the foothills of the Himalayas when it came down in what he called an ordinary landing.

Weather Services Corp. in Bedford, Mass., a short time earlier said it had an unconfirmed report the balloon Jules Verne was down 100 miles northwest of New Delhi.

Spokeswoman Dee Schelling said the report originated with "people who are tracking the balloon. She said they had no other information at this time."

The pilot, Maxie Anderson and his co-pilot, Donald Ida, said they were in "excellent spirits," reported Bob Rice, a meteorologist from a weather station in Bedford, Mass., who spoke to them by radio.

The balloon passed over a corner of southern Iran Friday, but there were no incidents, despite the Islamic regime's refusal to grant overflight clearance.

The balloon also maintained a steady altitude of 22,000 feet throughout the day as it rode into Pakistani airspace, easing fears it had sprung a leak, said Rice.

The balloon began to sink Thursday a few hours after it lifted off from Luxor, Egypt, falling to 18,000 feet, but Anderson told Rice in a 10-minute radio conversation he believes the descent was caused by the cooling of the helium gas in the balloon after it left the warm Egyptian desert floor.

Air temperature outside the balloon, named after the author of "Around the World in 80 Days," was minus 22 degrees. The silver balloon, with a red, white and blue gondola was moving at about 70 mph, Rice said.

The reported speeds were far less than the 150 mph the two men had hoped to achieve in their bid to go around the world in eight to 10 days, shaving at least 70 days off the fictional record set by the unflappable Phileas Fogg, the hero of Verne's novel.

The private Weather Services Corp. of Bedford, which was tracking the course of the balloon by radar and radio, said the Jules Verne passed into Pakistan airspace about 4 p.m. EST Friday after crossing the Gulf of Oman.

Tax Cut Delayed; Price Easing Seen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan has decided to cut taxes effective this July, instead of retroactive to last month — a move that may disappoint taxpayers but will give him more budget-slasher flexibility.

Meanwhile, oil costs are helping escalate producer prices, but the government says some relief for manufacturers, as well as consumers, may arrive by summer.

Administrative sources said Friday Reagan will submit his proposed tax cut to Congress Wednesday along with plans for federal spending reductions totaling $50 billion.

Under the Kemp-Roth plan embraced by Reagan, personal income taxes would be reduced by 10 percent for each of the next three years. He hopes this will perk up the economy by boosting Americans' purchasing power.

Reagan had considered making the tax cut retroactive to Jan. 1, but sources said he decided on July 1 to curb an immediate drain on revenues.

At his press conference last month, Reagan said the effective date "isn't as important as getting for individuals the principle of a 10 percent cut for each of three years in place and the business council passing the franchise on a preliminary basis prior to advertising."

"I'd like to make sure we go through the full-blown process," Fox said.

"Seminole Cablevision was given short shrift. We should advertise the full amount of time."

Representatives of both cablevision companies appeared before the council several weeks ago seeking a franchise. Prior to the appearance, by representatives of both companies, Harry Jacobs, attorney for Storer discussed with Massey the changes his firm would like in the city's original ordinance.

Seminole was seeking a non-exclusive franchise. Storer was seeking an exclusive franchise. Seminole said it could provide service within a few months.

Storer said it would be nearly a year before it could provide the service.

"Let's get a good shot at both," Fox said.

Councilman Dick Fess said he also has questions about granting Storer the franchise. "I wonder if we approached it in the right way — our attorney working with Storer's attorney writing the franchise," he said.

Fess said if a proposal is to be received from Storer, one should also be received from Seminole. "It appears we are in bed with one company," he said. "It appears we are tailoring a proposal for one company."

Massey said the city could advertise and if Seminole wanted to make a better proposal it could. — DONNA ESTES

Cable TV Franchise Still Open

Seminole Cablevision is to be given another shot at gaining a franchise in Lake Mary.

The Lake Mary City Council Thursday night instructed City Attorney Gary Massey to advertise a proposed cablevision franchise with Sanlando-Storer Cablevision prior to the board's considering it for adoption.

Councilman Ray Fox called for the advertising which is not required by state law, but which is the practice usually followed by the city prior to preliminary passage of an ordinance.

State law requires advertisement prior to final adoption.

In response to a question from Councilman Vic Olivera on the schedule for construction on the system, Massey said the process could be speeded up by the

The president met much of Friday with economic advisers and Cabinet members and decided, with little debate, on the July date recommended by Budget Director David Stockman.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan has urged tax cuts for business — in the form of faster write-off for depreciation — be made retroactive to January in order to increase incentive for investment in new plants and equipment.

But a source with the Internal Revenue Service said Reagan apparently has decided to make the cut in business taxes effective July 1 also.

It was learned Reagan rejected the recommendations of his economic advisers to reduce the tax rate from 70 percent to 50 percent on unearned income, such as interest and dividends.

Asked about his decisions as he was heading for his helicopter Friday, Reagan told reporters, "I'll tell you Wednesday."

White House press secretary Jim Brady said Reagan agreed on a foreign aid figure of $6.9 billion, less than the $8.1 billion proposed by the Carter administration but about $1 billion more than Stockman had recommended.

...But Who Will Fight The Fire?

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

If the Seminole County courthouse should catch afire who will battle the blaze?

At this point the Sanford Fire Department would. But the decision has been all but officially made that the time is not far off when the Seminole County Fire Department will take over that responsibility.

And Sanford Mayor Lee P. Moore is not at all distressed about the possibility of change.

"They (the county commission) will not abide by our building code, so why should we care about who fights their cotton picking fire?" Mayor Moore asked Friday.

"I'm not certain of the details. When (City Manager W.E. "Pete") Knowles gets back, it will be checked into to see what can be done to alleviate the situation," Moore said.

County Commissioner Robert G. "Bud" Feather earlier this week asked his commission colleagues if it might not be better for the county's fire department to assume fire protection responsibility for county buildings.

The commissioners authorized David Holary, county administrative services director, to install a fire alarm system from all county-owned buildings to the closest county fire department unit.

Feather said County Administrator Roger Neiswender will be talking in the next few days with the various cities in which county buildings are located about which fire department will be in control in case of fire and which will provide the backup.

"In the next few weeks we will have to resolve who is going to be the captain and who the mate," he said. "I would rather that the county firefighters be in charge during the fighting of a fire in county buildings."

Feather said as liaison commissioner to the county's department of public safety, he discussed the matter with the department director Gary Kaiser.

"Gary feels his department can do a better job on county buildings than others because we have the plans to the buildings, have more actual insight into the structures and the expertise to do the fire plan of the buildings," Feather said.

Feather said during some false alarms in the courthouse the Sanford Fire Department has arrived on the scene not fully prepared, believing it was a false alarm.

"I was astounded that there aren't plans for combating fires in the courthouse and came to the realization that the county taxpayers are 100 percent self-insured," Feather said.

Sanford Assistant City Manager Steve Harriett said as far as the city is concerned it is providing good service to the county.

A Valentine, Only...

CHICAGO (UPI) — Dr. Alberto Silva says his heart is broken. And, he says, only $75,000 can put the pieces back together.

The love-struck physician filed suit Friday in Cook County Circuit Court against a registered nurse he said had promised to marry him on Valentine's Day.

But the lady changed her mind. Silva says the suit seeks damages to offset large sums of money spent on treatment of "chest pains, consistent with angina, probably related to a broken heart."

Silva said he filed the suit, charging Janis Hansen with breach of contract, "because I love her. It's like a Valentine's Day card only with an expensive lawyer's fee."

Silva said he didn't think the suit would anger his ex-fiancee.

She'll Do Commercial For Cause

NEW YORK (UPI) — Valerie Harper has never done a television commercial — but she will, if the price is right. Her price isn't a big paycheck. It's a blow struck by the sponsor in her personal war against hunger — food, perhaps, from the Jolly Green Giant people, trucks in which to carry it from Ford or Chrysler, medicine from Parke-Davis, tools, clothing, soap or seed.

Any such donation to the starving millions in Somalia, on the Horn of Africa, will get the former "Rhoda" into the pitchman's circle on behalf of any producer's product, just as long as the sponsor is willing to make one firm affirmation in her commercial.

"I would want him to say, 'Hunger is an obsolete disease and I know it can be conquered,'" Miss Harper said Tuesday. "I've never done a commercial because I always thought they wouldn't be good for my career, but I'd do commercials for this. I certainly would."

"We've had famine around so long it's like gravity and taxes. We feel it's inevitable, but it's not. We must change our minds and our hearts and our attitudes ... by 1997, hunger will be over."

Friends of the former Rhoda Morgenstern would never recognize her now. Greyhound slender and eyes blazing with mission, she came to New York with Tony Cacciotti — manager, partner in TAL Productions, and No. 1 man in her life — to campaign for a "grassroots" uprising against starvation which she said kills 28 people a minute, worldwide, "and 21 of those are under 5."

No missionary ever preached the gospel with more zeal than she and Cacciotti pack into their appeal for help. Together, they are spiritual arsonists, setting fire to the conscience and building blazing under apathy wherever they go. In their view, the American people — not just the American government — should be in the trenches for the fight.

"The end of hunger resides in each one of us," Miss Harper said. "When the Somalis are starving in body, we, the human family, are starving in spirit."

Miss Harper's passion for the Somalis was ignited when she and Cacciotti went to Africa to film a documentary on the drought and war-caused famine that grips the nation. They have been pushing the film and carrying their appeal to talk shows and interviews ever since.

"The people are so beautiful, so dignified," said Cacciotti. "They were dying, but they were not begging ... the film is just devastating. I hope to get it on the college circuit and have it syndicated where it can be shown to theater audiences."

He also is in the process of signing up celebrities — Muhammad Ali, Stevie Wonder, Dom Deluise and Vidal Sassoon among them — to do public service commercials aimed at raising consciousness of the problem as well as money.

KAZARIAN BEATS THE PRICE!

By STACI BIENVENU

"IF YOU'RE UNDER 25; if you own a van or a pick-up, or if you just need immediate Auto-Insurance coverage — you need to call me. Yes, according to Ralph Kazarian, "You may be paying too much for your Auto Insurance..."

Mr. Kazarian is fully aware that we, as drivers, are tired of reading deceptive ads about how we can beat the high cost of our auto insurance, but there is something definite that sets him apart — specialization. He's an unusual man in his line of business, for he is willing to give hard-luck YOUNG DRIVERS a more-than-fair deal on their auto insurance.

"I feel that young people, in many cases, are unjustifiably charged high rates, and I know that many may be short on cash. That's why monthly payments are our specialty. Furthermore, there are a large number of drivers under 25 that are paying high rates due simply to their age; others are penalized because of their personal tastes in automobiles. Finally, customers who need minimum insurance coverage are turned away repeatedly. To overcome these situations is my whole reason for being in business."

Yes, this all sounds quite promising, but just how can Ralph Kazarian afford to offer a truly better price to you and me?

"I've shopped for years to find companies who offer the best possible rates for my particular customers. As a result, I broker business with 25 to 30 Auto, Truck, Motorcycle, Motor Club, Mobile Home and Motor Home companies that target their effort to my particular customers. This allows me to give my customers the insurance they need at the price they want to pay."

And Mr. Kazarian has proved himself to be quite successful in his approach. After 15 years in the business, he's established himself as an institution within the auto insurance industry in Florida. To prove his ambition and determination, he's opened nine offices in the last two years in the Central Florida area and has just recently remodeled his new Sanford office, which is located between Burger King and Flagship Bank on Orlando Avenue (323-2454).

So...if you're really interested in finding out how to get the insurance you need...at the price you want to pay — stop by one of Ralph Kazarian's auto insurance agencies.—ADV.

WORLD IN BRIEF

45 Dead, 127 Injured In Dublin Disco Fire

DUBLIN, Ireland (UPI) — A flash fire that roared through a packed Dublin discotheque during the finals of a dance competition early today triggered a stampede that killed 45 youngsters — trampled and burned to death — many within yards of the exits, officials said.

Another 127 were injured as up to 1,000 youngsters rushed screaming for the door to escape flames that spread rapidly through the hall from the Stardust Club. The cause of the fire was not immediately known. At dawn, dozens of parents frantically searched for their missing children. "Where is my Rosalyn?" yelled a woman who had to be restrained by police.

When the fire broke out, the Stardust was filled to capacity with youngsters lured by the finals of a disco dance competition and an advertisement in Friday's newspapers billing the club as "Dublin's most popular disco."

"There was a rush to get out, but many were trapped in the stampede," said Maureen Ashe, 21, a secretary who was in the club when the blaze broke out shortly after 2 a.m., 9 p.m. EST Friday. "Everyone was screaming," she said.

Walesa Set For Talks

WARSAW (UPI) — Lech Walesa, the leader of the Independent Solidarity union, arrived in Warsaw today for a meeting to discuss labor peace with the new government's special labor relations commission head, Deputy Prime Minister Mieczyslaw Rakowski.

Rakowski, who asked for the meeting with Walesa, warned Friday the government may not be able to fulfill completely all the promises it made last year to end the crippling summer strikes that gave birth to solidarity.

"It is not a question of pulling out of the agreements, but we must be realistic... the economic situation in Poland is worsening further, putting a question mark on fulfilling the economic points of the agreement," he said.

Cubans Seize Embassy

QUITO, Ecuador (UPI) — Armed Cubans who seized Ecuador's embassy in Havana have vowed to kill the Ecuadorian ambassador if he is held hostage if security forces try to overthrow them, the official Cuban Prensa Latina news agency said.

The 31 Cubans, some of them reportedly former soldiers armed with grenades, submachine guns and knives, overpowered the embassy's Cuban guard Friday and pushed him into the building, taking Ecuador's Ambassador to Cuba Jorge Perez Concha, two other Ecuadorian diplomats and a Cuban embassy official.

There were no reported injuries in the takeover by the Cubans, who are seeking passage out of Cuba.

Charities May Fight To Keep Them

Energy Official Defends Giving Away Funds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Energy Department official Paul Bloom charged today the agency was "grossly deceptive" in saying that he gave $4 million in government funds to four leading charities.

Bloom paroled out the money — paid by Standard Oil of Indiana (Amoco) in connection with alleged price-gouging — as one of his final acts as special counsel for the agency in the final hours of the Carter administration.

The Energy Department said Thursday Bloom's action was unauthorized, against policy and extremely disturbing, and a spokesman implied the funds were "taxpayer money."

"It is grossly deceptive to call these funds public money," Bloom said in a telephone call to United Press International today. "They (Energy officials) have no right to disseminate misinformation."

"The funds were never in a Treasury account, never appropriated by Congress — it was not taxpayer monies," he said.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Energy Department official Paul Bloom charged today the agency was "grossly deceptive" in saying that he gave $4 million in government funds to four leading charities.

Bloom paroled out the money — paid by Standard Oil of Indiana (Amoco) in connection with alleged price-gouging — as one of his final acts as special counsel for the agency in the final hours of the Carter administration.

The Energy Department said Thursday Bloom's action was unauthorized, against policy and extremely disturbing, and a spokesman implied the funds were "taxpayer money."

"It is grossly deceptive to call these funds public money," Bloom said in a telephone call to United Press International today. "They (Energy officials) have no right to disseminate misinformation."

"The funds were never in a Treasury account, never appropriated by Congress — it was not taxpayer monies," he said.

Another 127 were injured as up to 1,000 youngsters rushed screaming for the door to escape flames that spread rapidly through the hall from the Stardust Club. The cause of the fire was not immediately known. At dawn, dozens of parents frantically searched for their missing children.

"Where is my Rosalyn?" yelled a woman who had to be restrained by police.

When the fire broke out, the Stardust was filled to capacity with youngsters lured by the finals of a disco dance competition and an advertisement in Friday's newspapers billing the club as "Dublin's most popular disco."

"There was a rush to get out, but many were trapped in the stampede," said Maureen Ashe, 21, a secretary who was in the club when the blaze broke out shortly after 2 a.m., 9 p.m. EST Friday. "Everyone was screaming," she said.

Cubans Seize Embassy

QUITO, Ecuador (UPI) — Armed Cubans who seized Ecuador's embassy in Havana have vowed to kill the Ecuadorian ambassador if he is held hostage if security forces try to overthrow them, the official Cuban Prensa Latina news agency said.

The 31 Cubans, some of them reportedly former soldiers armed with grenades, submachine guns and knives, overpowered the embassy's Cuban guard Friday and pushed him into the building, taking Ecuador's Ambassador to Cuba Jorge Perez Concha, two other Ecuadorian diplomats and a Cuban embassy official.

There were no reported injuries in the takeover by the Cubans, who are seeking passage out of Cuba.

NATION IN BRIEF

Chemical Leak Suspected In Louisville Sewer Blasts

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — A toxic chemical leak at a soybean processing plant is suspected of causing a loud series of sewer explosions which ripped more than 100 million worth of craters in Louisville streets.

Residents of the city's historic Old Louisville neighborhood were urged to boil their water today as a precaution stemming from Friday's explosions, which ruptured underground utility, water and phone lines. The explosions left a 15-block-square area pockmarked: huge holes up to 30 feet deep like bomb craters, black-long sections of roads caved-in over collapsed 10-foot-diameter sewer lines and some building facades smashed.

Despite the broad pattern of destruction, only four injuries were reported, none serious and all related to car accidents along debris-laden streets. Residents gaped in awe at the huge holes in the ground while engineers tried to determine if further collapses were possible.

Another Child's Body Found

ATLANTA (UPI) — Police investigating the city's string of child slayings cut down shrubs and gathered evidence from the spot where the latest victim's body was found and an investigator said "the results look better than in the other cases."

The discovery Friday of the body of Patrick Baltazar, 11, who had been missing since Feb. 6, brought to the number of black children slain in the Atlanta area over the past 19 months.

Two are still missing, and investigators believe skeletal remains found by FBI agents Friday in southwest Atlanta will turn out to be one of those.

Baltazar's body was found by a maintenance worker picking up trash around the parking lot at Corporate Square, an office park in north Atlanta.

Ford Shows Sales Upturn

DETROIT (UPI) — The U.S. auto industry remained locked in recession in early February with sales off 7.8 percent from last year's weak levels, but Ford Motor Co. said it detected a long-awaited upturn.

Ford, offering cash sales incentives of about $300 on many cars to dealers, turned in a relatively strong performance in the Feb. 1-10 selling period and led the Big Three with a 26 percent improvement over the same period in 1980.

Industry reports Friday showed overall sales of U.S.-built cars rose 136,054, a worse performance than the industry recorded in the depths of the 1975 recession and down 7.8 percent from 1979.

Quake Shakes Northwest

SEATTLE (UPI) — A sizable earthquake centered near Mount St. Helens rolled through much of the Northwest Friday, shaking buildings in Seattle and Portland and touching off a rash of phone calls from thousands of people who thought the unpredictable volcano might be erupting.

University of Washington scientists said the earthquake measured 5.5 on the Richter scale and put its center about 12 miles north of the volcano near Elk Lake, an area that has been seismically active ever since the catastrophic eruption May 18.

Realtors Want To Help Humane Society Find Home

The Seminole County Board of Realtors has taken on the project of helping the Seminole County Humane Society find a permanent home.

The society which is located at the Sanford Airport, has been notified that it must move later this year because the property it is using is needed for a new airport freight terminal.

Since the society is a non-profit organization, it does not have the funds to purchase land for a new location, said Geraldine Garrett of the Board of Realtors.

According to Society President, Joanne Prager, the organization would like to have about 10 acres of land centrally located, preferably in the Longwood area.

In charge of the project of acquiring the land are Homer Sewell, public relations chairman for the realtors, and Cosmo Mantovani, its board of directors liaison.

Sewell and Mantovani said anyone wishing to donate the needed land should contact them or the society.

Meningitis In Palatka

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Officials of Shands Teaching Hospital said an 11-year-old Palatka boy, who Wednesday was diagnosed as having a bacterial form of meningitis, was in fair and stable condition Friday.

Ricky Guess, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Guess, was moved from the hospital's pediatric intensive care ward Friday morning to the regular pediatric ward.

As a precaution, 12 members of the Guess family, neighbors and playmates were given a preventative medicine called Rifampin.

Although there has been a rash of meningitis cases reported in south Florida recently, this is the first such case in northeast Florida in at least the past six months, doctors said. The disease, which attacks the brain, can be fatal.

Lawmaker On 'Longshot' Crusade

Wants Governor To Tell Death Sentence Commutation Rationale

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Rep. Jim Watt wants to force Florida's governor to tell his reasons for recommending commutation of a death sentence, but says it's a "longshot" crusade that may clash with the constitution.

Watt, a Republican from West Palm Beach, says the governors of 14 other states — either voluntarily or by law — provide this information and he feels Floridians have a right to know too.

But Gov. Bob Graham has flatly refused to discuss what prompted him to ask the Executive Clemency Board to reduce the sentences of convicted killers to life in prison.

Graham feels that having to make his reasons public would detract from the independence of his decision.

Although Graham cannot commute a death sentence without the votes of three of the other six board Executive Clemency Board members, he doesn't even tell them what sets these killers apart from those he decides should die.

Sharing his reasons might detract from the governor's decision, which Graham feels should be arrived at independently.

On Tuning Up Auto Industry

President Reagan, reflecting an altogether fitting sense of urgency, wasted no time in appointing a cabinet task force to analyze the ailing auto industry and recommend what might be done to resuscitate the Big Three, or at least the Big Two assuming that Chrysler can already be counted among the walking dead.

Help for an industry upon which one American job in seven depends cannot come too soon. As noted, Chrysler is almost certainly beyond salvation. Ford's financial condition is deteriorating rapidly and last year the number two automaker lost about $1.5 billion.

So, the task force will have no trouble getting Mr. Reagan's, or the nation's, attention when it releases its diagnosis and proposed cure sometime next month.

Valuable as the task force's work may be, it's apparent that President Reagan and at least some of his chief advisors already understand how and why the industry took sick and what it will take to restore it to health.

The President cited some of the contributing ills in his economic address to the nation the other evening: a critical shortage of investment capital needed for plant modernization and retooling, record high interest rates for both the industry and would-be car buyers, and stifling government regulations.

To the above, Mr. Reagan might well have added government controls that held gasoline prices at artificially low levels and thus subsidized the American public's demand for big, gas-guzzling autos during the mid and late 1970s when Detroit, should have been switching to the production of more fuel-efficient models.

As it is, the industry must somehow generate roughly 170 billion by 1985 to finance the retooling essential to building whole new model lines of smaller automobiles. Moreover, it must raise this staggering sum at a time when the cost of borrowing is almost prohibitive and profits are either marginal or nonexistent.

Obviously, much depends on the Reagan administration's success in healing an economy that is nearly as sick as the auto industry. Curbing government spending would free capital for private investment, much of it in the auto industry. Reduced inflation and lower interest rates would spur new car sales, currently at a 20 year low.

But all of this will take time, and Detroit needs help now. Thus, the task force and the President will want to find ways to provide some immediate relief. Liberalized tax depreciation schedules for plant and equipment would help. So would an end to excessive government regulations that hinder productivity and add hundreds of dollars to the price of each new car.

Beyond these immediate measures, and the hoped-for general improvement in the nation's economy, the Reagan administration ought to consider a longer-range plan to disentangle the auto industry from the federal agencies that have nearly ruined it during the last decade.

There being no future in either protectionist barriers against imports or in government subsidies, a healthy American automobile industry must be one that can compete here and abroad. Regaining this competitive edge won't be possible until Washington gets out of the business of dictating design and marketing decisions that ought to be made in Detroit.

JULIAN BOND Who Is Killing Children?

ATLANTA (NEA)—Almost every conversation here turns to the 17 black children kidnapped and presumed killed in little more than a year.

Fifteen of them are known to be dead. Three are classified as "missing." Some of the children were strangled. Some were stabbed. Some were suffocated.

Some vanished in daylight near their homes. Some were strangled, midnight vagabonds, truant.

Atlanta's black population is edgy. The board meeting of a conservative civil-rights group degenerates into cries of "arrest someone — anyone."

Cocktail-party chit-chat focuses on imagined clues and pet theories. Television stalks astute parents where their children are.

The City Council and the mayor impose earlier and earlier curfews on those 15 year old or younger. Parents of violators are threatened with fines and imprisonment.

Former policemen, who are conducting their own investigation in competition with current policemen, announce that they have discovered the killer's address. The killer must have heard the news along with everyone else.

A psychic promoting her new book whistles through town. "Tough cops" from other cities are ballyhooed as they visit the scene of the crime. Later they sink quietly away.

Dogs and helicopters are used in weekend searches. One group distributes whistles in schools. Another advertises a telephone number that the killer can call for psychological help.

As it is, the industry must somehow generate roughly 170 billion by 1985 to finance the retooling essential to building whole new model lines of smaller automobiles. JEFFREY HART The SST Revisited

Last summer, as I walked along a beach on the south shore of Long Island, I saw a breathtaking sight. A supersonic transport plane had taken off from Kennedy Airport, and was heading for Europe at a rapidly accelerating pace.

At the time, I wondered why this dire effects had not been brought to pass by the numerous supersonic military planes that are flying around all the time — but skepticism of that kind got nowhere. If you were for the environment and against cancer, you had to be against the SST.

Now, however, the whole "scientific" assault upon the SST has exploded into a first-class scientific scandal. The scientific arguments advanced against the SST turn out to have been completely false, and the good faith of the scientists advancing them has been called in question.

A recent meeting in Toronto of the American Association for the Advancement of Science reviewed the whole 10-year-old controversy.

According to a paper delivered by Dr. Hugh Ellsaesser of the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, evidence that ran counter to the scare claims was suppressed.

DICK WEST Ripe Old Age

WASHINGTON (UPI) — I just got back from seeing my doctor and I feel guilty. The doc said I had a good shot at living to a ripe old age.

It's getting so every time I have my blood pressure checked the doctor opens lower on the London money market. If the longevity prognosis is favorable, the stock market loses six points.

All this yammering about the economic impact of superannuation is enough to make a person nodding on the brink of dosage feel downhearted unparitoid. But thus far nobody has come up with what I regard as a suitable alternative.

I must say the president, for all of his warnings about economic "calamity," isn't setting a very good example. On his 70th birthday last week, he looked fit enough to breeze through two terms without even breathing hard.

This display of durability is bound to play hob with life expectancy tables. It gives folks the idea that if they can hang on long enough, they too might get elected president.

When my Social Security card was first issued, there were 11 workers paying retirement taxes for every one old enough to collect benefits. Now the ratio is about 3 to 1.

With my luck, by the time I become eligible for monthly checks, the three kids who are supposed to be supporting me will be out on strike, or have gotten themselves fired, or something.

Obviously, it isn't the national interest for so many of us to last so long. And the opposite body, again after the 1981 session of the Legislature.

At least three bills have been pre-filed to state that five-member group around. State Rep. Bobby Brantley, R-Lenoir, with support from two colleagues has filed a bill to provide a five-member elective public service commission and calling for repeal of the law which required appointment by the governor.

At the same time another bill has been filed to provide for nonpartisan election of the PSC for four-year terms. It also calls for public hearings to be held within 30 days after a request has been filed and would require a decision to be made by the board within 45 days of the filing of a hearing request.

The third bill provides for merit retention of public service commissioners in the same manner as currently in operation for appellate judges. It would require commissioners to qualify for office with the Division of Elections and would require their names to be listed on the ballot. If the voters would decide not to retain a commissioner, a nominating council would recommend persons to fill the post by appointment of the governor.

The method of naming public service commissioners was changed from elective to appointive in 1978. The change was recommended by then-Gov. Reubin Askew.

Ever since the change a movement has been making to bring back the original way. Brantley, while he was conducting his first election campaign in 1978 was involved as well in a petition drive to place the issue on the ballot. The petition drive came within a hair of being successful.

A capacity crowd is expected to attend the 1981 Lincoln Day Dinner sponsored by the Seminole County Republican Executive Committee at 8 p.m. Friday at Lord Chumley's Pub, Altamonte Springs.

By WILLIAM C. GREEN Special To The Herald The Soviet Union has the largest and most comprehensive civil defense program in the world today. Its paid and volunteer workers number in the millions, and every factory, every school, every youth group, and every sports club has its own civil defense plan worked out. Civil defense activities touch the life of nearly every citizen. By contrast, in the United States civil defense is a weak and ineffectual program. How can this discrepancy be explained?

In the 1960's the fledgling American civil defense program came under considerable fire. Its opponents used two mutually exclusive arguments. The first was that civil defense measures would not be of any value in the event of a nuclear war — that no significant percentage of the population could be saved. The second argument was that a civil defense program was destabilizing in that it weakened the Soviet Union's ability to inflict assured destruction on the United States.

But more potent than these contradictory arguments were the totally erroneous impressions of civil defense that were planted in the minds of the American public.

One of these was equating civil defense with the construction of home fallout shelters. Another was that the nuclear arsenals of both countries were so large and delivery time so short that no one could be notified in time to be saved. A third was that the aftermath of a nuclear war would find the world a radioactive wilderness incapable of

Parties & Politics

Florida's Public Service Commission may become an elective, rather than an appointive body, again after the 1981 session of the Legislature.

At least three bills have been pre-filed to state that five-member group around. State Rep. Bobby Brantley, R-Lenoir, with support from two colleagues has filed a bill to provide a five-member elective public service commission and calling for repeal of the law which required appointment by the governor.

At the same time another bill has been filed to provide for nonpartisan election of the PSC for four-year terms. It also calls for public hearings to be held within 30 days after a request has been filed and would require a decision to be made by the board within 45 days of the filing of a hearing request.

The third bill provides for merit retention of public service commissioners in the same manner as currently in operation for appellate judges. It would require commissioners to qualify for office with the Division of Elections and would require their names to be listed on the ballot. If the voters would decide not to retain a commissioner, a nominating council would recommend persons to fill the post by appointment of the governor.

The method of naming public service commissioners was changed from elective to appointive in 1978. The change was recommended by then-Gov. Reubin Askew.

Ever since the change a movement has been making to bring back the original way. Brantley, while he was conducting his first election campaign in 1978 was involved as well in a petition drive to place the issue on the ballot. The petition drive came within a hair of being successful.

Kirchhoff Thanked For Expanded Bus Service

Congratulations are in order for the Seminole County Commission and, in particular Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff, for pushing OSOT into expanding bus service from Seminole Community College (S.C.C.) to Casselberry.

'Ask Mrs. Telson'

With your permission, I would like to ask Mrs. Telson a question or two. Why does Mrs. Telson object so strenuously to tuition tax credits? Is it because she does not want an alternative to the NEAs plan to change the educational system in this county?

No Progress

Our new administration has just taken office and is trying to clean up the mess of the previous administration and to slow down the inflation; but after pleading with business and the people, they are not co-operating.

The Southern Bell and Florida Power are asking for a large increase and this goes on and on and on. The large companies can afford to have lobbyists in Washington for their benefit and to pressure the politicians for an increase. They know that they have a chance to get it because they helped to elect those politicians and now hold a wand over their head.

serve the needs of a majority of metro area residents. This comprehensive system includes, as an interim goal, interconnecting buses and trains running every 30 minutes; running within three blocks of people's homes, businesses and other destination points; running at hours convenient to people which includes evening and weekend service that is reasonably priced.

Support Helpful

Wish to thank you and the staff of the Champagne Ball sponsored by Seminole Mutual Check Association and the efforts to help make this occasion a success.

The articles and pictures over the last several weeks have been effectively prepared and presented.

To those of you who can't but want to use public transit, we urge you to contact your county commissioner and express your need for them to run more buses where you want to go at more convenient hours. The Commissioners will respond when they hear from enough of you.

Cruiser Boise Reunion

The seventh reunion of the crew members of the Light Cruiser USS BOISE CL 47 of World War II fame will be held at the Conrad Hilton Hotel, 720 South Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60605 from Sept. 23 to Sept. 27, 1981.

'Soviet's Defense System Is The Best'

The Soviet Union has the largest and most comprehensive civil defense program in the world today. Its paid and volunteer workers number in the millions, and every factory, every school, every youth group, and every sports club has its own civil defense plan worked out. Civil defense activities touch the life of nearly every citizen. By contrast, in the United States civil defense is a weak and ineffectual program. How can this discrepancy be explained?

In the 1960's the fledgling American civil defense program came under considerable fire. Its opponents used two mutually exclusive arguments. The first was that civil defense measures would not be of any value in the event of a nuclear war — that no significant percentage of the population could be saved. The second argument was that a civil defense program was destabilizing in that it weakened the Soviet Union's ability to inflict assured destruction on the United States.

But more potent than these contradictory arguments were the totally erroneous impressions of civil defense that were planted in the minds of the American public.

One of these was equating civil defense with the construction of home fallout shelters. Another was that the nuclear arsenals of both countries were so large and delivery time so short that no one could be notified in time to be saved. A third was that the aftermath of a nuclear war would find the world a radioactive wilderness incapable of supporting human life. The upshot was that the population, through apathy, refused to provide the support that is essential to any civil defense program, so that it slowly died. (The Vietnam War also affected public trust in the government, and diverted defense funding as well.)

Medications Carry Risks And Benefits For Seniors

Consider these statistics about you and your doctor: —The average visit to a doctor takes 13 minutes. —During about half of those visits, the doctor writes a prescription. —Older people consume nearly 25 percent of all prescribed medications.

How much do you tell your doctor during those brief visits? What do you know about the prescription drugs that you are taking? And how do you keep track of your various medications?

The National Institute on Drug Abuse is worried about those questions. So, it has published a booklet called "Using Your Medicine Wisely: A Guide for the Elderly."

Medications carry risks as well as benefits. Many drugs are powerful substances. The consequences of not using them correctly can be serious.

But, as the booklet notes, these risks can be avoided. First you must learn how to prepare for a visit to your doctor. Make a list of the information that you want to tell him or her as well as the questions that you want answered.

The booklet recommends asking these questions concerning medications: What exactly is the medication? What is it for? When and how should I take it? Should I take it before, with, after or between meals? Can I take it at bedtime? How long should I continue taking it? Will I ex-

Growing Older

When you leave your doctor, you probably head to the drug store with your prescription. "Using Your Medicine Wisely" notes that your pharmacist can help you in a number of ways.

He or she can explain the differences between prescription and non-prescription drugs, show you how to open child-proof caps, even help you save money on medications. For example, the pharmacist might be able to suggest a generic drug that costs less but is just as effective as the name brand that your doctor prescribed.

Next you need to establish a system to assure that you will take your medications on time and in the quantities prescribed. "Using Your Medicine Wisely" provides a chart on which you can list the drugs that you take.

In the back of the booklet is a removable insert labeled "Passport to Good Health Care."

Please write "Using Your Medicine Wisely: A Guide for the Elderly" to: National Clearing House for Drug Abuse Information, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, Md. 20857. Be sure to request the booklet by name.

'Mini Main Street U.S.A.,' a project made by Miniature World members, will highlight the forthcoming show. There will be a variety of shops and stores, a gazebo and town musicians. To get an idea of the small scale, note coins in below photo.

Marion Eggers, chairman of the Fourth Annual Miniature Show, demonstrates a well-appointed "mini great room."

Miniatures: Second Most Popular Hobby

The whirl and world of miniatures has swept the country by storm during the past few years.

Men, women and children from all walks of life have become miniaturists. There is something fascinating about mini things, for mini people, in mini houses.

And in Central Florida, the miniature craze has turned into an annual event.

According to Marion Eggers, Miniature World of Central Florida is sponsoring its Fourth Annual Miniature Show at the Howard Johnson Florida Center, Interstate Highway 4 and Kirkman Road, Feb. 20, 21 and 22.

From 6 to 9 p.m. on Feb. 20 will be a special showing limited to 300 guests, Mrs. Eggers said. Tickets are $5 and the proceeds will be donated to the "Meals On Wheels" community service program.

Tickets for the Saturday and Sunday showings from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. will be $2 for adults, $1.50 for children, and $1 for senior citizens.

The highlight of the show each year is the large display of miniature furniture, houses and accessories made by the members.

This year, 187 members built display boxes in the monthly workshop sessions which will be assembled to create "Mini Main Street U.S.A."

Main Street will feature shops from the drugstore to the candy shop next to the needwork boutique across from the garage.

Town musicians will be ready in the gazebo in the park to strike up the band for the people watching the circus pass by.

Across the aisle from Main Street will be dollhouses of all sizes furnished in every period from Victorian to modern.

Miniature World of Central Florida

United States including children, teenagers, senior citizens and often, entire families from kids to Grandma.

A monthly newsletter is published which carries items of interest, patterns for new minis, a "how-to" column and notices of future workshops and shows in other communities.

The miniaturist can recreate a beloved playground, the family home, the local grocery or meat market or even the church in which you were married.

For those who dream on a grander level, there are castles of all sizes. The very smallness and flexibility of the hobby, make it an excellent choice for people with limited space in an apartment, noble home or small house, Mrs. Eggers said.

Miniatures are now the second most popular hobby in the nation, surpassed only by stamp collecting, she added.

Members meet once a month to share ideas and participate in workshops. The club has 375 members from all over the

Identifying The Needs Of Youth

By TOM NETSEL
Herald Staff Writer

Do you work with young people? Do you counsel them? Do you provide care for toddlers and infants? Does your organization help teens find work? Do you coach children in sports or shelter them in storms? Do you or your organization do anything with young people in Seminole County?

If so, the Seminole Youth Planning Council, Inc. wants to hear from you.

Judy Klingman, executive director of SYPC and the Seminole Youth Service System, and her two assistants are compiling a publication listing all services for youth in Seminole County.

They have been contacting government agencies, schools, churches, day care centers, public and private volunteer programs, and any other individual or group who offer any form of youth service in such fields as education, recreation, foster care, job training or welfare.

In the past two years the SYSS has compiled a list of more than 300 organizations offering 2,200 programs and services to the youth of Seminole County.

Churches have many programs for the youth in their areas, but of more than 150 churches contacted, only 85 have responded with information about the services they offer.

Once the publication is completed and printed, Mrs. Klingman said it will be distributed to each of the organizations listed and additional copies made available to area schools and libraries where young people themselves can study them.

Financed by a federal grant, the $34,457 for this fiscal year covers only 60 percent of the SYSS budget, Mrs. Klingman said. As a result, one staff member had to be released in January. Christopher Holden, planner, and Freya Mroczkowski, administrative secretary, have had their work load increased but there is still a "crucial need for someone to gather data," Mrs. Klingman said. Volunteers are being sought to help with this and for general office work.

"People should be made aware of existing services," Mrs. Klingman said. "We hope agencies which do provide services to youth will contact us. We feel certain that there are agencies which do provide services to youth that we're not aware of."

In 1976 the Florida Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Task Force of the Governor's Commission on Criminal Justice. Standards and Goals recommended that a Youth Service System be established in every Florida county by 1980. "We were ahead by starting in 1978," Mrs. Klingman said.

With a board of directors chaired by Judge Dominick Salvi, which consists of 25 citizens interested in the youth of Seminole County the key purpose of the organization is to identify the needs of youth.

Young people themselves are encouraged to sit on the board and help with their programs. Young people can better reach other young people, Mrs. Klingman feels, and by acting as a liaison through their schools, youth board members can help with projects and offer valuable feedback to the board.

To help identify youth needs in other areas the SYSS has released two profiles on juvenile delinquency in Seminole County, plus a profile on dependent children. They sponsor Youth Week in Seminole County which annually brings together more than 30 agencies and hundreds of young people. The SYSS publishes the monthly newsletter, YOUTHLINE, which is distributed to more than 500 agencies and interested individuals, to help maintain communication among each other.

With a service such as this, immediate gains are hard to recognize in a community, but the planning done now will help ease or solve problems in the future. "You can't measure what we do today," Mrs. Klingman said. "Five years from now, probably, it's an indirect service and we feel what we're doing is essential to improve the quality of life for our youth."

The SYSS offices are in the Welaka building in Sanford and they can be reached at 322-9146.

Hanky-Panky Ignored By Many Wives

DEAR ABBY: I find it hard to believe that my mail is running 3 to 1 against informing a friend that her husband is having an affair. Why would anyone want to live in a dream world? Just because they aren't aware doesn't mean it's not going on.

I would want to know if my husband were having an affair. Something in our relationship would have to be terribly wrong if he went looking elsewhere for love and comfort. He should be coming home to me. If I am not made aware of the problem, how can I deal with it? Not knowing is no help at all.

DEAR REALISTIC: Your letter makes a lot of sense, but read on for another view, which also makes sense;

DEAR ABBY: I'm glad you advised against telling a friend that her husband is having an affair. Why? Because if an affair is really going on, unless the wife is a complete idiot, she doesn't have to be told! All the signs are there for her to read. Suddenly he has a lot of extra "work" to do. He starts coming home very late and very tired. Often he isn't where he says he'll be.

A wife who has had a good marriage can tell from the way her husband looks at her (or doesn't look at her). By the way who touches her (or doesn't touch her). His arduous looks ("Sorry, dear, I have a lot on my mind these days.")

If a woman pretends she doesn't "know" when her husband is having an affair, she just doesn't want to know, which is also her right, right?

"KNEW" IN BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
DEAR KNEW: Right!

DEAR ABBY: Last week I took my ladyfriend to a nice restaurant for dinner. I am 58 and she is 56.

She ordered fish, and I ordered a steak — medium. After I cut into it, I discovered that it was rare. I do not care for rare steak, so I started to call the waitress to ask her to please take it back and have it cooked a little longer.

My ladyfriend stopped me, saying if I sent it back it would show that I had no class, and she would be embarrassed.

Not wanting to embarrass her, I didn't send the steak back; I just put it aside and ate the rest of the dinner. Consequently our dinner was spoiled and a small tiff ensued.

Abby, had I sent my steak back to the kitchen to be cooked medium, would it have shown that I had no class?

NO CLASS
DEAR NO CLASS: No. The absence of class was in your choice of dinner companions. But apparently you lacked self-confidence.

Do you have to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (32 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, 122 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

...THE HOPE OF OUR COMMUNITY, OUR NATION!

The Church...

Looking DOWN at the MOUTH, lately?

There is a very sound reason for this fellow to look down at the mouth. He's a hippopotamus — and that's exactly how a hippo is supposed to look.

But what accounts for people looking down-at-the-mouth sometimes?

It's usually because they aren't satisfied with being what they are. They wish life could have given them a different break. If only circumstances hadn't conspired...

That's no reason at all for looking hippo-like. Man has resources that can overcome his discontent. He has spiritual potential that can alter his life, make him a different person, conquer every conspiracy of circumstance.

Now is an ideal time to start looking up-from-the-heart. At church you'll experience a different approach to life. The cheerfulness that can brighten life flourishes on faith.

In Military Services

Chaplain's Role Is Changing

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

LPI Religion Writer

The military chaplaincy has become more than just a Jewish office who oversees that faith's chaplains.

"The old concept of 'hatch, match and dispatch'—brist, marriage and levit or what Christians call baptism, marriage and funeral—is all over," according to Rabbi Joseph B. Messing.

Messing, the first U.S. Army Jewish chaplain to remain on active duty for 30 years, currently serves in dual roles as director of the Jewish Welfare Board's Armed Forces and Veterans Services and as director of the JWB's Commission on Jewish Chaplaincy.

She goes on to say, "Perhaps it is a bit easier for those of us whose husbands have died, since we have the happy memories of being cherished instead of the nightmare of rejection." That is certainly a big difference. Unlike divorcees, most widows have had a successful relationship with another person that was not severed because of unhappiness, but rather by death.

As the average lifespan increases, American women are becoming widows later in life. In 1900, the average age for becoming widowed was 40. Today it is nearly 60. People become divorced at a much earlier age, however. So many more divorcees have the opportunity to seriously consider remarriage and "make a fresh start."

In the other hand, once a widow has adjusted to the loss of her spouse, she is more inclined to like her new independence. In recent study, it was found that seven out of 10 widows who live alone like it. Among the advantages of widowhood they cited "freedom to do as I please," "not having a schedule" and "being my own boss." Only one out of five said she would like to remarry.

His survey included many widows of, course. But just as many young and middle-aged widows find it hard to discard the independent garb and assume a more dependent role. Remarriage, for many widows, widowers and those divorced represents a positive readjustment to the loss of a partner.

"After the Flowers Have Gone" is a book on how to cope with the problems of widowhood, and offers several warnings and suggestions to those contemplating remarriage.

The biggest mistake is to rush into another marriage because you feel alone and sometimes desperate. But for a widower with small children it is not always easy to get remarried.

"Finding a housekeeper is almost impossible," says Paul, whose wife's death left him with six children to raise. "If I find a young woman, I am suspected of an illicit affair," he says. "And older women can't stand the pressure of six children."

Second marriages may become rocky as problems with stepchildren arise.

"I think one should go slowly into remarriage when there are teen-aged children involved," says Laura, a widow who married a man with two teen-agers. "The problem aren't as large with young children because they are terribly grateful to have a mommy and daddy like a piece." They are more likely to open up to you. But older children have a loyalty to their original parents that can be almost insurmountable at times.

But the biggest problem for widows, before they deal with the problem of remarriage, is loneliness. When the voice doesn't ring, or there is no sound of a key in the door, no voice saying, "I'm home," it makes no difference whether you are a widow or a divorcee like Ann. The pain is there.

The lives of many of us are filled with fear. People are as fearful today as most any period in history.

I remember the dark days of the depression were lighted by the voice of a man who said, "My friends, the only thing we have to fear, is fear itself."

Jesus evidently knew the power of fear in the lives of men. On numerous occasions He encouraged his disciples to be of good cheer — not to be afraid. "Fear not them that kill the body," He said. Paul believed this, "For God has not given us the spirit of fear; but of power and of love and of a sound mind."

There are fears which are decidedly helpful. The fear of ignorance stimulates some of us to study. The fear of poverty stimulates us to save money during productive years. The fear of ill-health causes us to obey the laws of health.

However, we can give these too much attention. Our fear of disease may make us a hypochondriac, causing death by nerves rather than germs. Our fear of inferiority may make us an ego-maniac. Our fear of the future may make us take our own life. Fear, like so many virtues, over-emphasized, becomes a deadly enemy.

Fear dominates the American scene. We are ever fearful whether at home or away, thinking that some violence may occur.

We need to work more closely with our neighbors in our community so that we watch out for our property as well as our lives.

Do you fear the loss of health? Are you afraid the constant pain may be an internal cancer that will someday take your life? In heavens name, go to a doctor and find out the truth. It's possible to worry about our health and the worries will produce ulcers.

The more fear we have, the less faith. However, the more faith we have, the less fear. "Perfect love casts out fear." I was the way the Psalmist found the secret. "I sought the Lord and He heard me and delivered me from all my fears."

You can overcome all your fears by realizing that you are not alone for God is with you. Say to yourself often: "Be strong and of good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed, for the Lord thy God is with thee wherever thou goest." We can live with our minds free of thoughts by filling them with thoughts of goodness and courage.

Princeton campus minister the Rev. John Walsh, who was in Iran Jan. 20 when the American hostages were released, and was among the clergymen to visit them during their internment, will headline the Religious Emphasis Week at University of Central Florida.

Walsh will join members of the UCF Campus Ministry at noon, Thursday, in the engineering auditorium for a worship celebration and presentation. A reception will follow. Theme for the week will be "Violence: How do we as individuals and a Society React to It." Various speakers will address the question Monday through Friday. On Wednesday, the Rev. Michael White, a military chaplain, will speak at noon in the student lounge on "military, faith and violence." Folk entertainment is planned for Friday in the student center courtyard.

As an example of the training, Messing said he was sent to the University of Washington to study political science, specializing in Soviet-American relations in order to teach the subject within the military setting.

In the 1960s, he said, the broadening of the chaplain's duties matured even further. "He was still a deliverer of a liturgical system," Messing said, "but also of a counseling system and of an education system. He began having an impact on the total ethical climate of the service."

In many respects, the changing role of the chaplain reflects both changes in society at large as well as changes in the nature of the armed forces. Messing cited the establishment of the Family Life Center at Fort Bliss as an example.

"This center took into account all of the aspects of family crisis, including marital difficulties, sibling-parent rivalries, sibling-sibling rivalries, drugs and alcohol and other maladjustments," he said.

"This was not only a crisis center for personnel but an education and preventive center as well," he said. "We used trained chaplains in the field of political and pastoral education, drug and alcohol abuse, marital problems. It was a total service system designed not only to meet emergencies but to educate the service family."

The change from the draft to the volunteer Army has also had an impact on the chaplain's role, Messing said.

"We find today that we have a large number of married personnel," he said. "And not only that, but we also have larger numbers of single parent families, both male and female."

In addition, he said, the armed forces are increasingly operating on the basis of a 40-hour work week at some bases, raising the question of what happens to the end of the week chapel program.

"If the soldier has any means at all, he's gone for the weekend," Messing said. "Therefore, if you want to reach the single man or woman, midweek programming is a very important item."

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Last week we pointed out that when playing from equals you play the highest when following, so that the play of the queen denied the king and dummy follows low. When you are playing a temporary winner, play the lowest. Thus, if partner leads the queen and you also hold the jack, you play the 10 from Q J 10. If partner leads the king, you play the queen. (Unless dummy holds jack) Don't give declarer a chance to sneak in with that card.

When partner has led a high card to discourage him, you card your first duty is to ask him to continue or to shift as the case may be. A high card asks him to continue, a low card to shift. Count and suit preference signals may be used here, but that way lies madness and trouble unless you are a great expert playing with your special partner.

There is one time when you do show a doubler. You do this when your partner has led the king against a suit contract and dummy holds the high card.

Suppose partner leads the king and you hold Q J. This is one time when you should play the seven. Reserve the play of the queen to guarantee that you also hold the jack. Let's take one more example. It is a heart contract. Partner leads the king of spades. Dummy shows with 7-6-2. You hold 8-5. Which card should you play? Most of the time play the five to discourage him. You may be costing yourself a ruff if declarer holds Q-3-3. You will probably be breaking even if declarer holds something like Q-10-x or might even gain if declarer holds Q-10-x.

Finally if there is reason to suspect that declarer holds A-K-Q, you should play the ace. If declarer to duck and partner to continue.

HOROSCOPE

By BERNICE HEDE OSOL

For Sunday, February 15, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY
February 15, 1981
Although the sailing may not be all smooth, you may attain success by choosing new targets in the year ahead. Discard those which no longer have any appeal for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — You're normally pretty good about lending others a helping hand, but today you may resent being imposed upon and refuse to come to their assistance. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Someone in your social circle may try to pull off something cute and you may make the fall guy. If you're alert they won't get away with it.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — To avoid domestic grumbles today, don't bring up old issues which you and your mate couldn't agree upon. They still have sparks left in them.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — If you feel it's necessary to talk about others today try to find nice things to say, because what you say will be repeated for their ears.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Rather than being content with your lot in life today you may compare what you have to that of another, whom you think has more. Your analysis is wrong.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — You could experience a one-up relationship today than usual. Quickly find a common ground upon which to agree.

CANCER (June 21-July 21)
You have adequate ambition and drive today, but you may not accomplish all that you hope to, owing to a tendency to divide your forces. Be singleminded.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Instead of dealing with the "now," you may dwell too much on past events today and let old experiences prohibit you from attempting the new.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Do not attempt to make friends over in your image today. Try to accept them for what they are, even if they don't measure up to the standards you set.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Your goals today may not be in harmony with that which is truly best for you. It's important to know who you want what you want.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — You're extremely imaginative today. This is good, but you may dwell on negative thoughts rather than on positive ones. Reverse the order.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Don't become involved in any type of financial joint venture today with individuals whose character is questionable. The deal may be cast in the same mold.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — If you feel it's necessary to talk about others today try to find nice things to say, because what you say will be repeated for their ears.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Rather than being content with your lot in life today you may compare what you have to that of another, whom you think has more. Your analysis is wrong.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — You could experience a one-up relationship today than usual. Quickly find a common ground upon which to agree.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
February 16, 1981
This coming year may contain more than its normal amount of surprises for you. Important goals will be achieved under very unique circumstances.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Where your work or career is concerned, you may be in a bit of a lull today. After a woman's husband is stirring and, when it finally sorts itself out, it should prove beneficial for you. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Be persistent today in things which can enhance your status or add to your resources. Through ingenuity and effort, your goals will be achieved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — A potentially profitable situation could develop today, but it must be acted upon promptly or it might be withdrawn as suddenly as it appeared.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — You may not be allowed as much time as you desire to make an important decision today. Be ready to think on your feet so you won't be caught off-guard.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — There is financial opportunity around you today, but it's likely to be fleeting. Don't put off situations which could make or save you money.

CANCER (June 21-July 21) — Get out and move around a bit today and, if you have a chance, visit some of your old haunts. You could run across a friend you haven't seen lately.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Your best ideas may not be along logical lines today, but don't ignore your hunches or unusual concepts, even if they seem a bit weird to others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Make your needs known to your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — You could be in for a pleasant surprise today when you learn that someone whom you feel never thought too highly of you shows you're A-1 in his or her book.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — A potentially profitable situation could develop today, but it must be acted upon promptly or it might be withdrawn as suddenly as it appeared.

Convenience Stores Saturating Market

OCALA, Fla. (UPI) — Florida leads the nation in convenience stores, but the crowded field has resulted in a decline in net profit margin over the last three years, according to a survey released Tuesday.

The survey, conducted by the Florida Retail Grocers Association and the University of Florida's Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences, said the number of convenience stores in the Sunshine State had grown by 21.4 percent in 1978-79 to 4,046, or 11.3 percent of the nation's total.

But while the net profit margin for such stores was increasing 70 percent nationally, the margin in Florida dropped by 2.4 percent.

Seven of the 10 most saturated convenience store markets in the country are in Florida, with Lakeland leading the way as the most saturated market. Lakeland has one convenience store for every 643 households.

Other Florida cities in the top 10 among most saturated markets were Orlando, Jacksonville, Melbourne, Daytona Beach, Pensacola and Tampa.

Association spokesman Andy Williams said the study compiled last week shows the average purchase per customer in a Florida convenience store was $1.32 compared with a national average of $1.56.

"The weekly customer count in Florida per store is 4,900. The national average is 5,900. The main reason for this is because there are more convenience stores in Florida than in any other state," Williams said.

"The average weekly convenience store sales, including gasoline, is $5,100 in Florida," said Williams, "while the U.S. average is $6,500."

"Competition is certainly healthy for the industry and the consumer," said Karl Kepner, a marketing specialist with IFAS who worked on the study. "Yet, because we have so many convenience stores now, operators are being more cautious about where and when they're opening C-stores."

Bill Weaver, president of the Retail Grocers Association, agreed that increased competition lowers net profit margins, but added: "We are not saying that the convenience store industry is not a good business to enter. Fortunately, Florida is still experiencing a healthy business climate, which has offset what could be an over-growth situation in convenience stores."

"We are not discouraging new convenience store development," Weaver said. "However, those who locate in areas with marginal stores should use extreme caution."

State Ranks Tops In Study

Florida continues to offer one of the most attractive environments for manufacturing among the 48 continental states, ranking among the top five in three key categories, it was reported in a new study of manufacturing business climates by Alexander Grant & Company, Chicago-based accounting firm, in cooperation with the Conference of State Manufacturers' Associations (COSMA).

Florida spends $37.65 per capita on vocational education, remaining in second in this category behind Massachusetts' $41.70 for vocational education; has the third lowest cost for unemployment benefits, averaging $3.16 paid per covered worker per year (up from 17th in 1979); and has one of the lowest levels of unionization in the nation. Only four states have a lower level of non-agricultural labor union membership as a percentage of the total labor force than Florida's 12.5 percent.

The new survey ranks Florida in 8th place (up from 12th in 1979) in the overall cumulative ranking in the nationwide evaluation of state by state business environments for manufacturers. In the regional grouping of 13 Southern states Florida improved its rank to 6 from 9 in 1979. The Grant study, with the full title "A Study of Manufacturing Business Climates of the 48 Contiguous States of America, 1980" is an update of a similar 1979 study. Selwin Price, managing partner of the firm's Chicago office and partner in charge of the study, emphasized that the evaluation and ranking of each state's attractiveness was limited to manufacturers and did not consider the service, retail or government sectors, "nor does it include every criterion that has an impact on business location."

Floridians Declaring Bankruptcy In Record Numbers

Bankruptcy. The word itself is chilling. It means loser in the American game of life.

Despite the stigma, Floridians are declaring bankruptcy in record numbers. Statistics from the state's population centers show filings up as much as 25 percent from 1979. Most are consumers or small businessmen. Every one has a story.

Some go under because they're overextended. Others get pinched in hard economic times and still others are struck by unexpected disasters like high medical bills or unemployment. Take the case of a 31-year-old Seminole County construction worker and his wife. Together they earned $13,000. But when she quit her part-time job to stay home with the baby, the bills for the car, the furniture and credit cards piled up.

In debt for $5,000 and unable to pay their creditors, the couple filed for bankruptcy. They were allowed under Florida law to keep their small home and $1,000 worth of personal possessions. The rest was sold to pay a portion of their debt. Their slate was wiped clean.

"I would say most people come in when it's desperation city," said Susan England, an Altamonte Springs lawyer who has handled about 100 bankruptcy cases. "They are two or three months behind and the bills and their creditors are closing in."

Ms. England said it's usually personal disaster — a lost job or unexpected illness — that brings people into her office, "but there are some who are just on a program of deficit spending."

The Bankruptcy Reform Act that took effect Oct. 1, 1979 was designed to make it easier for persons in genuine financial distress to obtain relief through bankruptcy, said Walter R. Kurth, president of the National Consumer Finance Association (NCFA), an industry group for consumer lending institutions.

But Kurth pointed to abuses of the liberalized code and called the 42 percent nationwide jump in bankruptcies last year "alarmed."

Kurth blames part of the increase on the fact that lawyers' advertising in some parts of the country is encouraging consumers to take the bankruptcy route.

"What the lawyers don't advertise," said one banker, "is that if you purposely damage your credit you will have a difficult time obtaining it in the future. Ten years is the legal limit for bankruptcy to remain on one's credit record and in a credit-oriented society that can be a disaster."

Some Sanford lenders say they won't ever consider the credit application of a person who has ever undergone bankruptcy. And even those that will consider an application with such a black mark on it say they view a past bankruptcy as such a major obstacle that it makes all but the most desirable customers ineligible for credit.

"When we pull a credit file and I see a bankruptcy on it, I usually turn it down automatically," said one local finance manager who asked not to be identified. "Bankruptcy indicates to me that someone can't manage their affairs. I'm not going to lend that type of person money," he said.

Of course, he added, there are extenuating circumstances to every case. If the applicant went bankrupt "several years ago and there was some good reason for it, people do have real problems that may make bankruptcy necessary, then I might consider them for a loan," he said. "But only if they haven't had any money problems since."

"It's unfortunate," another loan manager said, "that someone goes bust and finds they can't borrow a cup of sugar for the next 10 years. At the time bankruptcy may have seemed the only way out, but later on down the road found they wanted or needed credit and can't get it."

One cause of the rising number of bankruptcies seems to be lawyers telling their clients that filing Chapter 13 is not bankruptcy — which it is. Under Chapter 13, a court decides how much a debtor can pay on the dollar, often as little as five cents. Chapter 7 is total bankruptcy.

"I had a guy in here a couple of weeks ago who had just gone Chapter 13 wanting to borrow money," one manager said. "And then he couldn't understand it when I turned him down. He said his attorney told him he was just 'restructuring' his bills, not going bankrupt."

"If people would just come to us (their creditors) and work with us, we could probably work something out," he said. "If they go bankrupt, they lose, and we lose. Bankruptcy should be a last resort."

Because despite the apparent advantage of bankruptcy — namely wiping out debts — it's not an easy way out. The Worth Less?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Budget director David Stockman may know how to slash billions from the federal budget, but so far he isn't very good at accumulating funds of his own.

Newsweek magazine said Stockman's financial statement, filed in December with the Senate Government Affairs Committee, showed total assets of $2,296,29 in a checking account and between $15,000 and $50,000 in stock.

Stockman, who earned more than $70,000 a year in salary and speaking fees as a Michigan congressman, reported debts of about $16,000, all in loans.

The magazine quoted an aide as saying Stockman, 34, is "not broke, but he sure isn't worth much, is he?"

Rules Changing For Home Financing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The rules are changing for home buyers who have become accustomed to obtaining mortgage money from savings and loan associations and repaying it at fixed rates.

Housing and mortgage experts who took part in a recent two-day conference of the Federal National Mortgage Association, a Congress-chartered corporation, said this is the way it may be in the future.

Instead of being fixed over 25 or 30 years, monthly mortgage payments may rise and fall with inflation.

When a house increases in value, the mortgage lender may share that gain with the owner.

Moreover, the lender may not be the savings and loan associations that now provide roughly half of all mortgage money, but pension funds or another household.

The reason for the impending changes, participants agreed, is the deep trouble the present housing finance system is in. The system was designed in the 1930s for an era of little inflation. That allowed savings and loan associations to borrow money from depositors over short periods, lend it out in long-term mortgages at fixed rates and generally make money.

Rolin Bernard, head of the U.S. League of Savings Associations, said savings and loans now earn an average 9 percent on mortgages, while many pay an average of more than 10 percent to depositors.

"There is no way our business can live with that kind of investment," he said. The consensus was that the best remedy would be reduced inflation.

But, in case that doesn't happen soon, many participants urged — and expect — greater use of mortgages with interest rates and monthly payments that vary with inflation.

A similar proposal is the "shared appreciation mortgage." The buyer agrees that when the house is sold the lender will get a cut of the increased value. In return, the original buyer gets a lower mortgage rate.

Meanwhile, Young homebuyers unable to afford the astronomical prices of new houses are turning to an alternative — home kits, which enable the handyman to build his own at about half the price.

Pope Urges Islam Ties

KARACHI, Pakistan (UPI) — Pope John Paul II, starting a 20,500 mile tour of the Far East, celebrated a Roman Catholic mass in predominantly Moslem Pakistan today and appealed for closer ties between Christianity and Islam.

The pope's appeal came during a three-hour stopover in Karachi during which he met privately with Pakistani President Mohammed Zia-Ul-Haq and thanked the nation for sheltering refugees displaced by the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

John Paul was on his way to the Philippines on the first leg of a 12-day voyage that will take him as well to Guam in the South Pacific, three cities in Japan and Anchorage, Alaska, before flying back to Italy over the North Pole.

"I pray," the pope said, "that mutual understanding and respect between Christians and Muslims, and indeed between all religions, will continue and grow deeper, and that we will find still better ways of cooperation and collaboration for the good of all."

The population of Pakistan is about 96 percent Moslem, and John Paul assured Zia his brief visit had no political motives, but was "essentially religious."

"As the chief pastor of the Catholic church I wish to visit the members of the local Christian communities throughout the world so as to understand them and their needs better," the pope said.

The pope stopped off in Karachi en route to the Philippines, where threats on his life have prompted the tightest security in the nation's history.

Karachi, a city of 7 million, was spruced up for the pope's visit and for the some 20,000 Roman Catholic pilgrims from predominantly Moslem Pakistan who came to see the pontiff.

Star-Line Snags $2 Million Ambulance Deal With Saudi

Star-Line Enterprises, a locally-based ambulance manufacturing firm, has landed a $2 million contract to supply ambulances to a member of the Saudi Arabian royal family.

Star-Line President Earl Smith said today that about 40 custom built emergency vehicles will be shipped by boat to Saudi Arabia "within the next two weeks or so. It should take about three weeks for them to get there."

The vehicles were custom designed for Prince Saud, who is in the ambulance distributing business, Smith said.

"Each one costs about $50,000 and contains heavy duty radiators, three air conditioning units apiece, four-wheel drive for the sand, refrigerators for storing scarce drugs, and other minor options."

The deal, two years in negotiation, began innocuously enough several years ago when Smith met Stan Brock of Central Florida Zoo and "Wild Kingdom" fame. Brock then introduced him to movie producer Ivan Tors who in turn put Smith in touch with an Egyptian friend of his, Prince Saud.

"Through the Egyptian, I met the Saudi prince who, as one of his many businesses, distributes ambulances," Smith said. "It was a very circuitous route."

County Art Students' Work Featured At Region Show

By JANE CASSELLBERRY
Herald Staff Writer

The work of art students from three Seminole County high schools and three middle schools is being featured at the Central Florida Regional Scholastic Art Awards Exhibition, which opened Saturday at Robinson's in the Altamonte Mall. The show will run through Feb. 28.

Three hundred entries were chosen by the judges for regional recognition from 1,300 works selected by art teachers as the best work by their students in junior and senior high schools in Seminole, Brevard, Orange and Osceola counties.

On display are art works in a variety of media — pottery, photography, sculpture, soft sculpture, jewelry, batik, and macramé. The exhibit is open to the public without charge during store hours.

A black and white photograph by Kim Ring, 16-year-old Seminole High School student, is one of five regional nominees for the Kodak Medallion of Excellence to be awarded in national judging.

Other Gold Key winners include: Stephanie Curtis, Diana Evans, Sally Grasso, Kristin Knab, Tina Richards, Dianne Taylor and Cord Williams, all of Lake Brantley; Tony Clancy, Debbie Graham, Donna Reynolds, Tammy Strout and Patricia Sposato, all of Lakeview; and Emery Berger, Connie Davis, Rosemarie Davis and Michael M. Zajkowski, all of Lyman.

In addition to Miss Ring, Honorable Mention was given to the following: Jeff Dorcik, Jackson Heights Middle School; Patty Morris, Kent Solberg and Deborah Dale, all of Lake Brantley High School; Melvina Gano (two), and Maude Swaggerty, both of Lakeview Middle School; Michele Goumont, Tim Lancaster, Charles Lorenz, Clay Whittington (two) and Diane Plants, all of Lyman High School; Eric Nyro; Seminole Middle School; and Danielle Kosar, Teague Middle School.

The Best of Show Scholarship Award went to Michelle Roseland of Satellite High School in Brevard County, for her pencil drawing of a sleeping child, which was also nominated for a national Hallmark Honor Prize of $100.

The judges selected 90 of the pieces as blue ribbon finalists to compete in the national exhibition to be conducted by
