

MEAN WILSON TO SWEEP COUNTRY

Democratic Gains in Vermont and Maine Impressive.

OTHER PARTIES' PLIGHT

Third Termers to Poll Their Entire Strength From the Rapidly Thinning Republican Ranks.

That the result of the state elections in Vermont and Maine mean a tremendous Democratic victory in November, is freely admitted by all except the bitterest partisans. Political experts have done some analyzing, and some claim to have reached novel conclusions. But these facts stand out:

On Monday, September 9, 1912, the Republican and Third Term parties combined elected William T. Haines governor of Maine, over Frederick W. Plaisted, the present Democratic incumbent, by 2,023 plurality. In 1908, a presidential year, a Republican was elected governor by 7,653 plurality. In 1904, the plurality was 26,800, and in 1900 it was 24,132. In other words, in 13 years the Democrats have cut down the Republican plurality in state elections by 51,109.

In this period the Democratic vote has increased from 39,000 to 68,000 whereas the Republican vote has decreased from 74,000 to 71,000. The Democratic vote of this year exceeds that of September, 1908, by 1,000, but the Republican vote is about 2,000 less than that party cast four years ago.

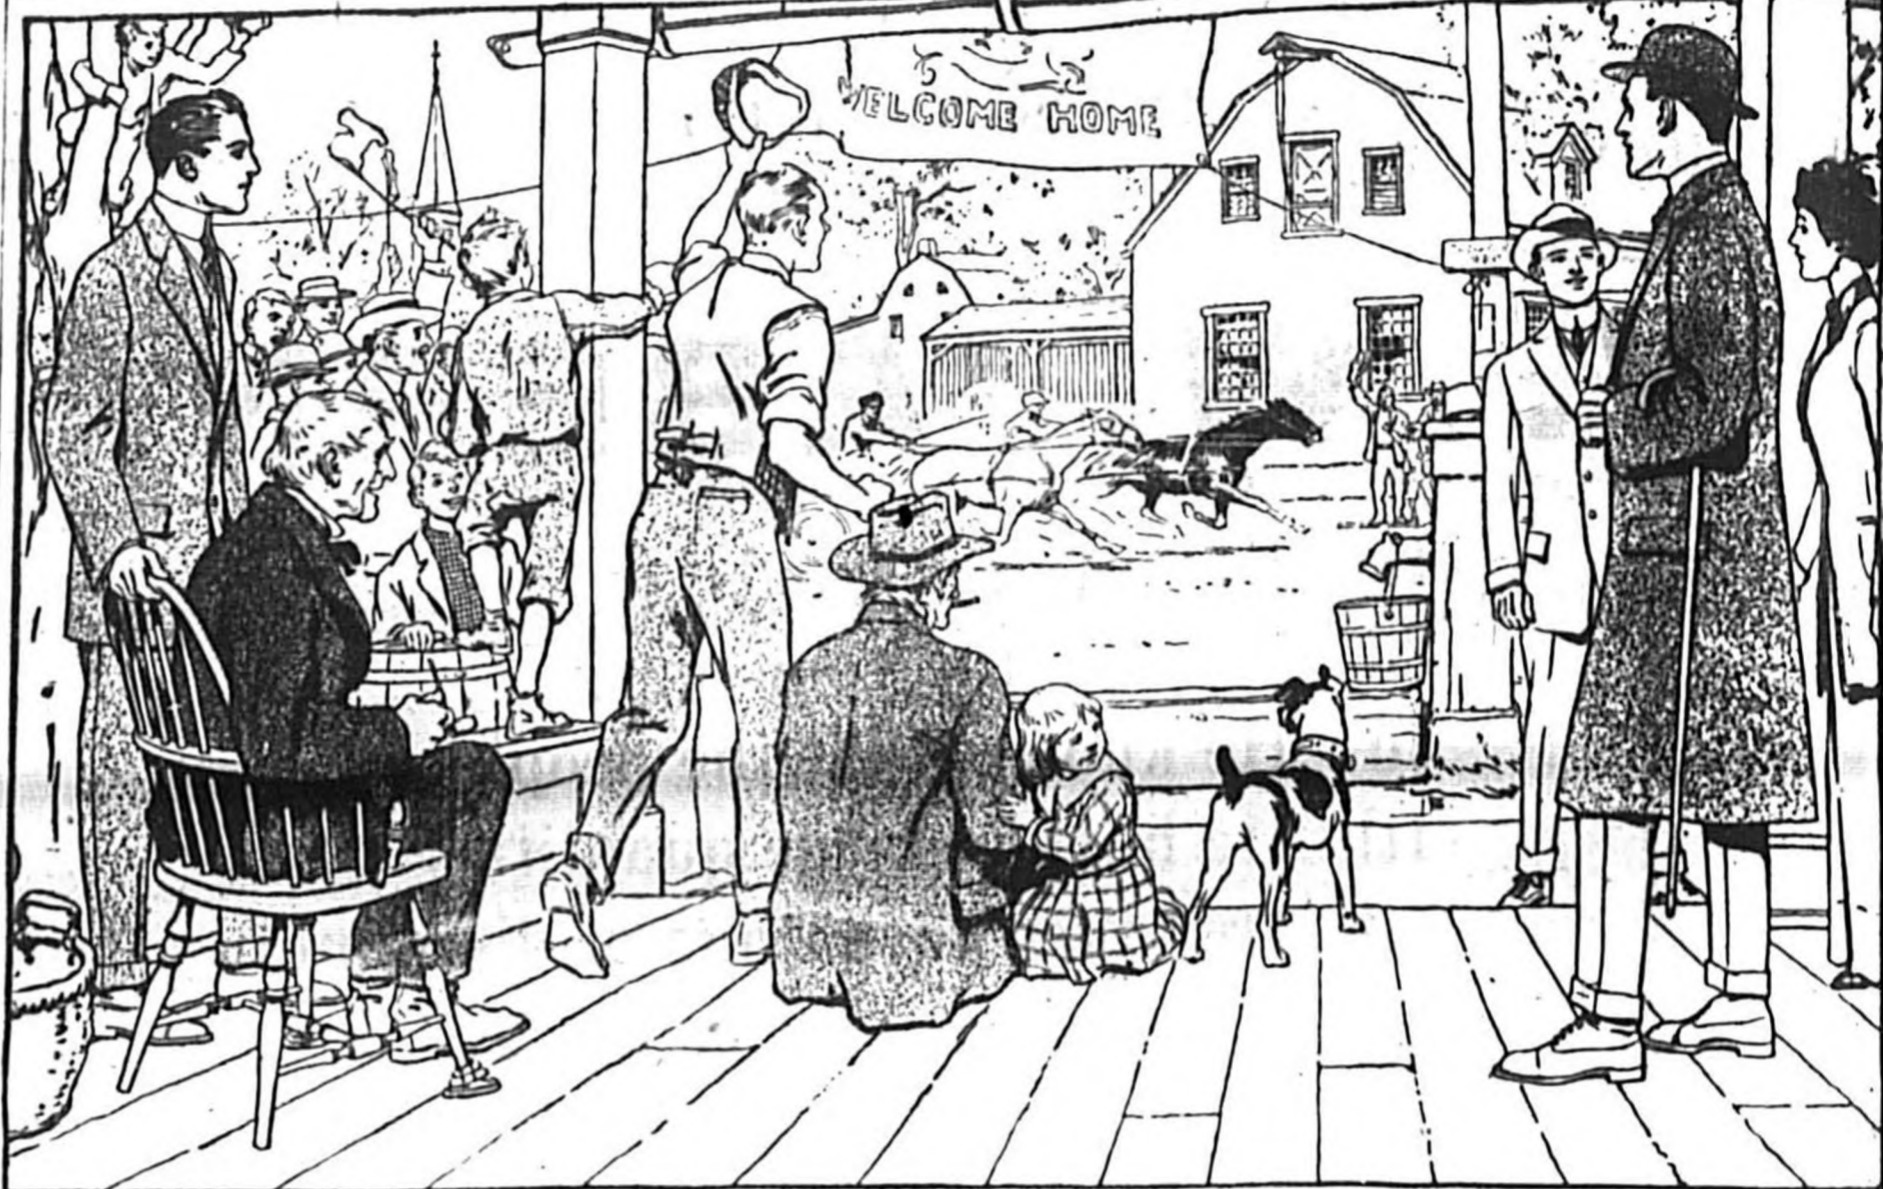

The split in the Republican ranks, following the election of William T. Haines, is pronounced. If the division in Maine in November is as it was in the recent Vermont election, six-tenths of the Republican vote will go for Taft, three-tenths for Roosevelt, and one-tenth for the Democrats. It is significant that the latter party has to date suffered no losses, as compared with the vote in previous years, from the Third Term movement. On the contrary it has gained. The result in Maine may be expected to be something like this: Wilson, 74,000, Taft, 42,800, Roosevelt, 21,300.

The returns from the recent Vermont election show, in round figures, that the joint Republican and third party vote was eight per cent short of the Republican vote four years ago, while the Democratic vote in that state shows a gain of twenty five per cent over that of 1908. It is of special interest to speculate what will happen next November throughout the nation if the Republican and Democratic vote for the national tickets happen to be affected as the gubernatorial vote this month in Vermont has been affected. The New York Evening Post has done some interesting figuring along this line and as a net result it is shown that, under the contingencies mentioned, President Taft would carry only two states in November, Rhode Island and Vermont, all the others going for Gov. Wilson. The conclusions reached by the Post follow:

To compute this result we should have to deduct 8 per cent from the vote cast for Taft four years ago and apportion the remaining vote in the ratio of 62 to 33 between Taft and Roosevelt, and we should have to add 25 per cent to Bryan's vote in 1908, and give the demittion total to Woodrow Wilson. In other words, give Taft 57 per cent and Roosevelt 35 per cent of Taft's vote four years ago, and give Wilson 125 per cent of Bryan's vote four years ago.

The result in round numbers would be as follows, so far as regards Taft and Wilson.

The Bull Moose ran things with a big stick at Washington for seven and a half years and didn't by act or word smite the bosses he now rails against or promote the causes he now "embodies." Being "a practical man," he asks a third, etc., term.

Wonder if Emerson was gazing upon a Moose calf when, several decades ago, he wrote: "I am the owner of the sphere. Of the seven stars and the solar year."

President Taft congratulates the Republicans of Maine on what Chairman Hillis describes as "an old-fashioned victory." Another such and Vermont and Rhode Island would go Democratic in November.

The card-stacking at Armageddon goes merrily on. Eight Taft electors in Missouri announce that if elected they will vote for the Third Term candidate.

Those who know and feel for Chairman Hillis say he really isn't to blame for the Republican presidential candidate's announcement that he "is out of politics."

A Western Third Termer regrets that Roosevelt will not have time before election day to say half he means. He'll have plenty of time following it.

The Maddocks-Field Players

It will no doubt be pleasant news to many theatre goers of this city to learn that this popular company of players will return for a three nights engagement at the Imperial Theatre. Word reaches us that they have been playing to capacity business everywhere and that the company is even better than it was last spring. A few changes have been suited to her pleasing personality. Miss LaRue comes from the best Stock Company in the western states, where she has been permanently engaged for the past three years.

Most all of the old favorites are still with the company, including Norman R. Field, Mary Daniel, Oscar Boes, Dixie Burleigh, Frank L. Maddocks and Happy Jack Kearney.

This organization has gained the name of Society Entertainers during the past five months and stand in a class by themselves. Their reputation has been made by giving the amusement loving people received by the patrons here, as they are not strangers by any means and left a good impression on the people who attended their excellent performances last spring. They open a three nights engagement at the Imperial Theatre Oct. 17th, presenting an entire new set of plays and specialties.

The Georgia Railroad Commissioners have issued an order effective October 25, with regard to the movement of fruits and vegetables by express, that will be of considerable benefit to the shippers and receivers of those commodities in this state. Under the rule now in force, the rate on a shipment moving over two or more lines of railroads by express is made by adding the local rates of the two or more lines and deducting ten per cent. Under the new rule, the rate on a shipment moving over two lines and deducting of road will be the sum of the locals on each line, less twenty per cent, and on a shipment over three line of road or more, the rate will be the sum of the locals of each line, less thirty per cent.

The ruins of the old Centro Asturiano building in Tampa will be replaced in the next six months with a handsome new club house, to cost between $80,000 and $90,000. The new structure will be 180x85 feet, three stories high, with basement, and roof garden in addition. The walls will be of buff brick, terra cotta, lime stone and marble. A marble staircase will lead from the first to the second floor. The second floor will be furnished in marble wainscoting.

FLORIDA IS THE LEADER

In General Farming Statistics Florida Leads the South

It has often been claimed that Florida leads in the value of crops per acre. This has not seemed quite clear to those who have been led to believe that our soil is inferior to that of other localities, but doubt on this score should be dispelled by the following comparisons made from the figures of last year's crops.

In the matter of Irish potatoes, Florida easily led with a production of 6,042 pounds per acre against 5,650 for the state of Virginia.

The tobacco crop shows Florida land producing 879 pounds per acre and the nearest competitor is South Carolina with a production of 850 pounds.

Taking up wheat, Florida is second producing 822 pounds to the acre as compared to Maryland, which has 960 pounds to her credit. But taking the states as geographically southern states, Maryland would be eliminated and consequently Florida would be the honor state in this cereal.

Not only in the matter of soil productivity does Florida excel, but when the value per acre is taken into consideration, the state does not fall behind. Irish potatoes are shown to be valued in Florida at $98.68 per acre against $70.78 for South Carolina, which is the nearest competitor. Taking the production of the tubers as rated so many bushels to the acre, Florida figures show 100.7 bushels and is only topped by Virginia, and that only by two hundredths of a bushel per acre. When the value per acre is considered, Virginia is rated at only $65.20, against the $98.68 of Florida. This is the point that is in Florida's favor, she produces quality beside prolific crops.

Comparing the tobacco figures, Florida is again in the lead, the value per acre being $137.70 and is followed by Georgia with $116.74. Kentucky produced 98,482,301 pounds of tobacco, or 848 pounds to the acre, while Florida produced 3,505,801 pounds, 879 pounds to the acre, valued at $257.20 and there again we have quality. Kentucky is practically all under cultivation, and the surface of Florida is merely scratched as yet.

Florida has but 8,509 acres devoted to the raising of Irish potatoes, producing 806,297 bushels. Mississippi and South Carolina having practically the same acreage, yet Florida excelled them by a large margin in the matter of bushels per acre and also acre value. Georgia had over three thousand more acres than Florida, yet did not exceed the total yield here except by a very few bushels, and comparing again, Georgia's crop was worth only $57.62 per acre, as compared to $98.68 for Florida.

Wheat, as shown by the figures, was Florida's poorest showing, she having but ten acres devoted to this grain, but that same ten acres demonstrated that but one other state, and that Maryland was able to exceed the value per acre. Maryland's acre value was $16.74 while Florida's was $13.20. And summing up the matter we can feel assured that no state will excel Florida when this state has been under general cultivation as long as some of the older settled states in the geographical south. "No eggs for three weeks" is the battle cry of about 40,000 boycotters in Cleveland and northern Ohio who entered upon a campaigning of abstention, in the hope of lowering the price. Saturday strictly fresh eggs were quoted at forty-three cents a dozen. Thirty cents a dozen is the limit the boycotters have set, and they say they won't buy unless the price scales to that point. The Thirty-cent Egg Club, which for two years has wielded an effective boycott against sky prices, has 20,000 members and at least that many more sympathizers who will join in abstaining.

NEW COMMERCIAL CLUB

Held an Important Meeting Last Friday Night

NEW COMMITTEES NAMED

Matters of Great Importance to the City Will Be Taken Up at Once

The Commercial Club is getting down to business and each meeting sees a greater number of new members and more enthusiasm manifested. The meeting last Friday night was one of the best yet and President Lake handled the meeting with his customary vigor and dispatch. After the minutes were read and minor business disposed of, the election of a treasurer was taken up and after a very spirited but short campaign, Frank Miller being in the lead, was declared the winner without any more voting. In Mr. Miller the club has a very efficient officer and his election gave satisfaction to every member present.

A communication from M. M. Smith, agent the club, the new hotel and the business aspect generally was read and listened to with earnest attention, giving as it did a clear and concise description of the city and our resources and good advice upon a number of subjects looking toward a greater Sanford. The letter concluded by tendering the tract of land owned by the Sanford Hotel Co. north of Commercial street, to the man who offered to erect a suitable hotel, the same to be ready for the season of 1913. At the conclusion of the reading of the letter a rising vote of thanks was given to Mr. Smith for his generous offer of the Hotel Co. and his kind words for the welfare of Sanford.

J. N. Whitner, in spite of his protests was unanimously as second vice president of the club.

In acknowledging thanks Mr. Whitner spoke about his work in behalf of the city recently to get our Congressmen and Senators to give Sanford a sub station for a weather observatory and the club will take up the matter at once and our city will fly the signals from the High School building if possible.

Regarding the tourist hotel project the question of backbreaking the tax rates for the hotel property was taken up and discussed, and a committee was appointed by President Lake to investigate the project, consult the city engineer, get his maps and figures and find the approximate cost of the great work that will mean so much to our city in the near future.

Several members were called upon for remarks and the spirit of progress was rampant at all times, each individual member seeming to feel that a new era has dawned for our bustling city and this season will be the best in the history of Sanford.

The question of advertising was discussed at length, as the committee on advertising wanted to know the opinion of the members on the manner of advertising and the amount that should be done and at the conclusion of the discussion the president rendered that the advertising would be left entirely in the hands of the committee, and they would report at an early date to the finance committee, who are expected to furnish the sinews of war in this respect. A beautiful booklet, descriptive of Sanford as a winter resort will be issued at an early date and distributed largely through the individual efforts of the members of the club and will also be distributed at Jacksonville.

The advertising committee have several good ideas to give to the club and the enthusiastic business men of Sanford do not purpose to tighten the purse strings this winter, as they realize that a systematic advertising campaign will get results and our new tourist hotel will be a big drawing card next season.

It seems to be the consensus of opinion among the business men of Sanford that the city proper has been neglected in the past in the advertising campaigns and that now that the tourist hotel is assured and a country club, good roads and other good things for the tourist are already accomplished facts or contemplated for an early date that the question of the agricultural pursuits should be displaced by a strenuous campaign for the city proper.

Fogg Thinks Beacham's Plan Will Build the Road

The statement made by Mr. R. Beacham of Orlando in your issue of 8th inst., in regard to the proposed traction railroad from Sanford through Altamonte Springs, Winter Park and on to the headwaters of the Kissimmee river, reads all right and it seems as though Mr. J. J. Brophy's love letter was going to bring results. So mote it be. When such a live wire as Mr. Beacham puts his shoulder to the big wheel the small wheels are sure to turn. He certainly has diagnosed the enterprise in a business like manner, and being a financial expert, and also being a progressive in every sense of the word, his scheme cannot fail to produce the long looked for results.

It is a trite saying that opportunity knocks at every man's door in a life time and it has surely knocked at Orlando's portals with a vigorous thump, and it has awakened Mr. Beacham, who is responding to the call. It now remains to be seen whether it touched the other live wires in the city beautiful. I believe it did and that they will respond to the call for this is a good thing which we all want, so it and take the advantage of it as they have done in building the City Beautiful and prosperity will be doubly assured. There should be no delay in financing and starting the ball rolling for it will gain strength rapidly, and the first car can roll between Sanford and Orlando in ninety days from the beginning of the work, and it will be a dividend paying investment at once, and to make it more interesting it will be a home industry, and the immense profits accruing from it will remain in the state, in fact, the country, through which the road is operated. Much can be gotten in favor of the enterprise, and a word to the wise should be sufficient. N. H. FOGG, Altamonte Springs, Oct. 11, 1912.

The Maddocks-Field Players

Arrangements have been made with the above company of players to play a three nights engagement at the Imperial beginning Thursday, Oct. 17th and every one can be assured of a first class entertainment at popular prices.

This company, it will be remembered have played this city on two other occasions, each time scoring a big hit with the people and playing to large crowds. The cast remains the same, including Norman R. Field, Mary Daniel, Frank L. Maddocks and Happy Jack Kearney. The repertoire of plays has been changed entirely, as well as the specialties and the management promises a rare treat to the patrons in the way of good clean amusement and high class productions.

Among the plays they are presenting this time are, "A True Kentuckian," "The Lawyer Detective" and "Montana." The prices will be 25, 35 and 50 cents.

Book Circle Meets

Mrs. A. P. Connelly was the charming hostess of the Book Circle Thursday afternoon. The guests were entertained with a very cleverly arranged book contest. The largest number of correct answers was given by Mrs. F. L. Miller, who won the unique prize of a box of candy arranged as an attractive book with the suggestive title, "A Great Temptation." Mrs. Miller very kindly shared her candy with her competitors. After the conclusion of the contest delicious sherbet and cake were served. The members of the circle present were: Mrs. J. W. Dickens, Mrs. May Dickens, Mrs. D. L. Thrasher, Mrs. Samuel Pullerton, Mrs. Robert Newman, Mrs. M. H. Bowler, Mrs. B. W. Herndon, Mrs. D. A. Caldwell, Mrs. H. A. Ward, Mrs. N. J. Perkins, Mrs. F. J. Gonzales, Mrs. F. L. Miller were special guests invited by Mrs. Connelly to enjoy the afternoon with the circle.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was shot and slightly wounded last night as he was leaving the Gilpatrick hotel in Milwaukee for the auditorium to make a speech. The wound was superficial and the Colonel went on to the hall and began his speech after he had seen his assailant arrested and taken to the police station. Henry F. Coehms seized the man and held him until the police came up. A mob surged around the prisoner, who apparently is mentally upset on the subject of Roosevelt's running for another term as President. The man, who is of small stature, admitted firing the shot and said that "any man looking for a third term ought to be shot."

In notes found in the man's pockets at the police station, were statements that the assailant had been visited in a dream by the spirit of William McKinley, who had said, indicating Colonel Roosevelt, "This is my murderer, avenge my death." Colonel Roosevelt's life was probably saved by a manuscript of the speech he delivered tonight. The bullet struck the manuscript which retarded its force as it gassed through the flesh. His assailant was prevented from firing a second shot by Albert H. Martin, one of Colonel Roosevelt's two secretaries. The Colonel had just stepped into an automobile when the would be assassin slipped through the crowd in the street and fired. Martin, who was standing in the car with the Colonel, leaped out to the man's shoulders and bore him to the ground. Captain A. O. Girard of Milwaukee, who was on the front seat, jumped almost at the same time and in an instant the man was overpowered and disarmed. A wild cry of "lynch him" went up. Colonel Roosevelt spoke to the crowd and told them to spare the man, who was then taken into the hotel and held there until he was removed to the police station. In spite of the entreaties of police men, Colonel Roosevelt insisted upon declaring his address. "I will make this speech for the one or the other," he said.

Guards and prisoners fought a desperate battle Sunday at Rawlins, Wyo., inside the state penitentiary. Hundreds of penitentiary prisoners attempted to escape and guards fought desperately to restore order. Camped outside the walls was a force of citizens, heavily armed, ready to drive back the prisoners if the remaining guard were unable to hold them. Shots and occasional shots told of the desperate fight within the walls, and it was rumored that several guards and convicts were killed.

Geo. W. Perkins, chairman of the executive committee of the Progressive party, made public tonight a letter which he sent tonight to Charles D. Hilles, chairman of the Republican committee in reply to the letter Mr. Hilles read to the Clapp committee while testifying last Thursday. Mr. Perkins called attention to the fact that the charges made in Mr. Hilles letter "were made deliberately in writing and under oath" but says the sworn statement contains no proof with which to support the charges.

War in the Balkans is now only a matter of a few days. The replies of the Balkan states to the powers' note, virtually rejecting intervention, will be delivered at the various capitals tomorrow and at the same time notes practically in the shape of an ultimatum will be sent to Turkey demanding autonomy for the Macedonian provinces.

All regularly scheduled passenger trains on the Georgia railroad were opened today by the old employees. Announcement tonight is that night trains will move as though nothing had happened to stop them, and, beginning immediately after midnight, twenty-five freight trains will be moved from different points along the roads, five of them leaving Augusta and five leaving Atlanta, one right behind another.

CURBSTONE GLEANINGS

A Budget of Opinion "Just Between You and Me"

EVEN THE GATE POST NOT IN IT

A Chief Is Among Ye Taking Notes and Faith, He'll Prent 'Em— So Says Saunterer.

To the intelligent observer in Europe, and to many persons here who are not actively interested in our political situation, it may seem as though the relative claims of the Democratic organization are the only ones which are being presented to the voters of the country, or about which they are concerned.

And yet, one voter out of every eighteen—if he follows precedent and the law of the average—will cast his vote next November for a presidential candidate not on any one of those tickets. Eight hundred thousand persons "threw their votes away" in 1908, by voting for one or another of five candidates who had not the slightest chance of being elected.

This represents a larger number of voters than appeared at the polls that year in the seven southern states of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana. Surely the credentials of these men are worthy of careful consideration.

Not in twenty years, however, has there been so small a number of minor political organizations which have seen fit to enter the contest for the presidency.

Besides the candidacies of Mr. Taft, Governor Wilson and Colonel Roosevelt, there are those of Mr. Debs, the socialist, Mr. Chafin, the prohibitionist, and Mr. Reimer, representing the socialist labor group.

The people's party, the only minor party within the last fifty years which ever carried a state for its presidential nominee—is without a national ticket for the first time since 1892. In that year General Weaver polled more than a million votes and carried five western states. The populist strength has gradually diminished, however, and four years ago there were less than 10,000 votes in the party ranks.

Mr. Hearst's independent party, which had made its appearance in but one national campaign—that of 1908—has decided to remain out of the running this year.

There are good citizens who have been somewhat alarmed over the question of whether or not the country has gone crazy on good roads construction. Some professional papers have been raising the cry for a long time that various states were spending money faster than they had any right to and were falling into very reckless waste on that subject.

In reply to the pleadings of papers on the subject, Engineering and Contracting, in its current number, insists that America has not gone crazy on road construction. Figures are given from the various states and it is noted that the estimated value of surfaced roads in 1909 exceeds the same value in 1904 by less than $100,000,000, or that about $20,000,000 was spent annually on country road improvement during that period.

When it is figured down to the ultimate unit it appears to be 20 cents per capita per annum that these states are alleged to have wasted or have too rapidly expended in this work which is so highly expeditious and therefore so beneficial and therefore so greatly necessary to the welfare of the different states. At the same time as the same paper shows, the investment in all the country roads in America amounts now to only about $30 per capita and of that sum only $5.50 represents improved roads.

The investment of the United States in roads has been only one per cent a year in the form of improvement for a long period. In the same five years' period the steam railways increased their capital by four billions and a quarter, an annual increase of more than six per cent, and railway track mileage increased 45,000 miles or more than three per cent.

One needs only to contrast these figures with the public investment in good roads in order to see how much faster and further private enterprise is going to meet the demands of a growing country than public enterprise. The railway mileage is no more vital to the country than highway mileage. They are both indispensable and the difference between them is only that the highways are like capillaries in the human system, while the railways may be compared more fitly to the great arteries or veins that conduct the life fluid in large quantity in comparison with the minute vessels that still perform their indispensable function in order that life may continue.

Nobody need have any fear that there is too great an investment in road construction yet, or that there will be within the next fifty years. It is a question only of honest and intelligent investment and not of mere amount of it.

The electric railway industry, as shown by the association devoted to that business, is but twenty-six years old. Many of the men who were first in the field are still active and at the head of special branches of the business. They had an exhibit in Chicago recently in which the uses of electricity as a motive power for other purposes were shown and much knowledge about the business was attained.

It appears that with reference to trolley lines there are more than 42,000 miles of tracks with a quarter of a million employes, a capitalization of five billion and gross annual earnings to ten per cent of that amount. The carriage of ten billion passengers in a year is already noted, with a rapid increase over that number.

Several of my friends who own automobiles think that the laws are framed up against them and that the pedestrian presumes too much upon his rights as an American citizen. My friend, M. M. Smith thinks that all vehicles should carry lights even to the baby carriages. Now I herewith submit some rules that will no doubt meet with the approbation of the automobilists and others.

In order to reduce the number of fatalities due to auto speeding, the board of aldermen may be asked to restrict day pedestrians to the use of three streets only.

A revised hand book of city street laws by the authorities has been suggested and I give a summary of some interesting rules that might result in public benefit.

No person shall cross any public highway unless he be equipped with pneumatic jagers.

Only constables shall have the right to inflate the garments of foot passengers, at designated stations, and shall not charge more than fifty cents for each inflation.

Every pedestrian shall carry a siren of three auto power attached to a belt and shall blow the same when putting out from home and in crossing any street. Two long blasts shall be the putting out signal, two and then three blasts for crossing.

At night a red light shall be displayed at the left hip pocket and a forward light at the upper right hand pocket. No foot passenger shall roam about between sun and sunset unless properly lit up.

In foggy weather people shall use a Midget Lighthouse attached to the hat.

Every child at play on the street shall be fitted out with a shock eliminator and a wireless auto detector.

In order to prevent confusion of road signals, the lighting of street lamps will be suspended during the open season of autos. No place of business shall display any lights below the fifth story. All electric or other display signs shall be on kites. The other officials may rent sky spaces for advertisements.

For ten minutes once every three hours, the street crossing shall be kept clear for those who walk.

Doctors on foot, displaying red cross lights, shall have the right of way, and all autos must diminish speed to permit them to run across a street.

Chauffeurs must carry street charts, showing where children are shoaling and should use care in navigating them.

Licenses to run a horse may be secured at city hall. The horse subway may be used for this form of carriage.

Foot citizens using the streets for more than a few minutes daily must carry a license badge and number conspicuously displayed fore and aft.

All collisions between citizens and autos shall be promptly reported by chauffeurs, and the citizens shall be detained in the hospital or jail until the officials can determine his fitness to carry a pedestrian license.

Hodges, candidate for Governor, Hon. Edward Gunby, candidate for Congress at Large and Hon. M. G. Gibbons, candidate for Attorney General will address the people.

Another Motorcyclist Killed

While speeding on his motorcycle at a rate of fifty miles an hour on Atlantic Boulevard, Jacksonville, Sunday afternoon, Frank J. Troncion, a barber and amateur motorcycle racer, crashed into an automobile driven by Thomas Palmer the force of the compact throwing him through the windshield, causing almost instant death. Troncion had been spending the day at Pablo Beach and was en route to the city. The accident occurred as he turned a corner just ahead of the car, evidently failing to see it. The automobile was filled with ladies, but none were injured.

WILLINGLY RISKED HIS LIFE

English Hospital Surgeon, Knowing Danger, Put His Patient's Interests Before All.

An act of unselfish devotion by Mr. E. T. Mullally, house surgeon of Guy's hospital, London, England, was disclosed at the Shoreditch county court during the hearing of a case recently, which was adjourned some time ago owing to his inability to attend. It was explained that for a month he was hovering between life and death. The details of his fight for the life of a child were furnished by a doctor at Guy's hospital. "There are times," he said, "when life or death is a matter of minutes or even seconds. A child was brought into the hospital suffering from diphtheria in its worst stages. Mr. Mullally, who was the senior surgeon present, saw the child, and understood at once that an immediate operation was imperative, and that even a few minutes' delay might be fatal. Diphtheria in this stage is terribly catching, and in the case of an operation such as Mr. Mullally was to perform, the chances were a hundred to one on his catching the disease unless he took the usual precautions. It was, however, a matter of minutes. Possibly there would have been time for him to fetch his mask, which covers the whole face, and is a sure protection against infection, and to take the other general precautions in such cases. He knew that by doing so—by waiting a few minutes—he was risking the chances of the operation proving successful, and so he decided to operate at once, well realizing that he was almost bound to suffer. He saved the child's life, but he caught the disease, and it was touch-and-go with him during a whole month."

CURED THE CHINESE EMPEROR

Jesuits in Celestial Empire First Gave Quinine to Most Distinguished Patient.

The one great specific for malaria is acknowledged to be quinine, or the extract of Peruvian bark, but it is more than two hundred years since this medicine was introduced into China by the Christian missionaries. The ruling emperor in 1693 was Kanghi, and he suffered from a fever that none of the native physicians could cure. He remembered that the Jesuit missionaries, Fathers Gerbillon and Bouret, had extolled a remedy they called chin-yo (divine remedy), and he decided to try it. The Chinese physicians opposed it, but the emperor took it secretly and was relieved. Having another attack later he proclaimed that every one with a remedy for the fever should come to the palace, as well as those who were suffering. The Jesuits came among the others, bringing the quinine with them. It was tried on several of the patients and they felt improved at once. The grandees of the court were surprised and the emperor decided to try it himself. He found that it affected a permanent cure, and in gratitude the emperor presented a house to the Jesuits and sent his acknowledgment to the king of France for the valuable service rendered by his subjects.

Get Habit of Quiet Speaking.

The easiest of bad habits to acquire is that of speaking loudly. Language has become so complex that not only is it necessary to say the right thing, but it must be said in the right way. A phrase may be said in jest or in earnest; a rebuke may be kindly or stern; an order may be willingly or unwillingly received according to the tone in which it has been said. Many a faithful workman is unjustly accused of unwillingness and disloyalty because of the churlish manner in which orders are received; many a master is regarded as unfeeling by his employes because his actions are forgotten and only the sting of his sharp manner remembered.

The Task at Hand.

The late Clara Barton, head of the American Red Cross, was a Christian in perhaps the best sense—the practical and unselfish sense. Miss Barton, in an interview in New York about the tenement house laws, once said to a reporter: "I'd neglect church, I'd neglect religion to get our vile and unwholesome slums all swept away." She paused, then added: "We ought not to consider the mansions awaiting us on the other side of Jordan, you know, while there's an unsolved housing problem so near home."—Washington Star.

It Depends.

"How long has your husband's suit for damages been going on?" "Let me see? I think it is eleven years." "Eleven years! Does it take that long to get a lawsuit settled?" "Yes, when you can find a lawyer who is willing to fight on for what he can get out of it at the end."

ADVICE TO THE GROWER

Sanford Must Establish and Maintain F. O. B. Market

To The Herald: The Sanford Herald is always interesting. But the one of Oct. 4th, which has just reached me is particularly so, because of the evidences of the fruits of your constant preaching to the growers and farmers of the delta. "Get together! Get together!"

The successful launching of the Florida Gardens is a big thing, 3,600 acres, almost six miles square. When it is all brought under cultivation, just to plow it once would require a man to turn a furrow longer than from Sanford to New York City, and then from New York City to Los Angeles, Cal. To have this vast enterprise under centralized management, as it will be, and its products handled by a reliable and competent house like Chase & Co., must go far towards putting the business upon a sound, remunerative f. o. b. basis, which is the only way in which the grower can safely do business. All the growers of the delta must heartily wish the Florida Gardens success.

The other article is the letter of Mr. Hughes of the Florida Vegetable Growers' Association, sounding the call "Get together" for f. o. b. sales. If the rest of the growers do this, our business is safe, if we do not get together for f. o. b. sales, we shall miss our chance and most of us will fail. It is impossible for a few to sell regularly and profitably f. o. b. if many with just as good produce campaign. The commission man and jobber will not put his money into vegetables in Sanford, when he can have them with absolutely no risk or expense in his own town, and under such conditions as a dishonest commission merchant if there is one, would desire in order to defraud the farmer with little chance of detection and less of punishment.

We must bring the market for our produce to Sanford. Then we can hope to succeed, and the most capable may really get rich. We who grow must set the price below which we will not sell. The excess is worth something for fertilizer. Let us use it for that, rather than to send it to the north to glut the market and make the whole shipment a loss. We would do better to sell half our crop at a fair profit, than all of it for cost. Many is the grower who last year did not break as good as even, though the consumer was paying well for what he got.

Let me give a few interesting facts. On a certain day we had some hamper of lettuce in the New York market. This lettuce was small, running about five dozen to a hamper, but good. It was sold for 75 cents in New York, about 5 cents a hamper less than freight and commissions. On the afternoon of the same day, I stopped at a typical corner grocery of the better sort, at which we often bought produce. I saw there a hamper of lettuce running 72 heads to a hamper, a trifle smaller than ours. I asked Mr. Finke whether he objected to telling me what he paid for his hamper of lettuce. "Not a bit," said he, and showed me the bill. He paid $3.00 for it. He bought it of a party who went to the platform and bought it, for I know not how much, mine a little better sold for 75 cents. This middle man did nothing to justify his increment, except to haul it about five miles in an automobile truck to his ware rooms and sold it again. I said again to Mr. Finke: "And what are you selling this lettuce for?" Most of it for 12 cents a head, some I may have to let go at 10 cents." The producer got a debit of 8 cents a hamper, for lettuce a little bigger than that for which the ultimate consumer paid about $8.00.

Another case may interest the growers. We shipped cucumbers. I did not see them packed, but I have a careful man. The cucumbers from some I saw later of our own and others were about the average. We received for the crop an average of $1.12 a hamper. Freight and commissions were just 95 cents a hamper, leaving just 17 cents a hamper to pay for hampers, picking, growing, hauling and interest on an investment of about $500 per acre. It was while we were selling at these prices and in the height of the Florida cucumber season, that I went into a popular dealer in Montclair and seeing some nice average cucumbers asked their price. Mr. Liebe replied, "Ten cents each or three for a quarter." The people are paying enough, but the grower is not getting it and he never will get more than the most meagre returns until he refuses to sell it without a voice in setting the price. The growers must get together, as you so constantly and wisely preached. They must get together for f. o. b. sales, and only f. o. b. sales. The commission merchants all buying here for cash will do a business more satisfactory to themselves, as there will be no undercutting by those who sacrifice another's property with no risk to themselves. Two years ago this month I was in California, and took the opportunity to meet the officers of the California Vegetable Exchange and of the California Vegetable Union. You know what California has gained through co-operation. One of the officers of the Union told me that during the three years previous to the organization of the Union, the growers of California celery had received an average of five cents per dozen stalks, and for the five years of the Union an average of nineteen cents a dozen stalks. There were fractions to both these figures, but I discard them. Such was the value of getting together in the association! The grower realized almost four times what he realized as an independent shipper.

Let us get together! Not a few of us, but all of us, for f. o. b. sales. "United we stand. Divided we fall!"

Success to the Florida Gardens! Success to the Association! Success to the capable commission house which has the grace and grit to buy Florida vegetables in Sanford, and above all success to the Sanford growers, who do the work, who grow the produce, and in whose prosperity Sanford will prosper.

Criticism on County Roads

The writer has been riding over the public highway between Winter Park and Sanford during the past week, twice each day, and the thought is constantly in his mind that there is something dead up the branch somewhere. It seems to me that a body of men as level headed and blessed with as much common sense as is our board of county commissioners would use better judgment in building roads than they have.

Any ordinary lay member knows that when you flatten sand it packs, and when you heap it in a pile it does not pack, but is on the other hand always soft. If the board would order their road superintendent to haul out all the steel scrapes they have and a few more from the middle of Lake Jessup, and then use split log drags, they would do the best work they have done in a long while.

This morning, on my way up to Sanford, I was surprised to find a steel scrape again being used on the road, and this after a very light rain during the night, and the roads in the best shape possible for the log drags. I even saw one dragged over the road at the proper time, could be better than the steel scrape. It is perhaps all right to use the scrape in opening the ditches on either side of the road, but when that is done, if the sand was thrown on the outside and shallow drains made leading from the road in the low places, we would have much better roads and very much would be saved in expenses.

I stopped as I passed the man using the road scrape, and asked him why he did not use a drag instead of a scrape. "I don't know," he said, "I was going to see the county commissioners and he said 'see Bradshaw is the man.' Well, if Mr. Bradshaw is the man in my judgment he is displaying poor judgment in using a scrape instead of the cheap log drag.

Roads in this country where the land is so porous should have only a slight crown, for they are much better when they are reasonably flat.

I know that every one has a remedy for the patient, and the larger the number and if followed our roads will be in much better condition than they are today, for they are now nothing but a sand bed. CITIZEN.

Dickson on the St. Johns

Mr. H. H. Dickson returned home Saturday afternoon, after having spent a few days with his family at Pablo Beach, where they have been visiting for some time. Mr. Dickson left his family in Jacksonville where they will remain for a few days. He returned by way of the St. Johns river to Sanford, where he was met by auto and driven to Orlando.

In speaking of the river trip, Mr. Dickson said: "In my more than twenty-five years' residence in Florida, I have never travelled on the St. Johns, so I decided that I would return by that route. It is certainly one delightful trip and the most beautiful scenery. The distance is 196 miles, and I found the entire trip one of interest. Considerable work is now being done by dredges, in cutting off the little points that jut into the river at narrow places, in order to straighten and broaden the channel. This work is straightening the course of the stream, and is quite a marked improvement and advantage in passenger and freight traffic. This stream is Florida's greatest natural asset, and the money is being expended for a good purpose." Reporter-Star.

The advance guard of an Indiana colony that is to move to Miami has arrived in the Magic City. The representative is said to be well pleased with the climate, soil and general conditions.

CHERRY TIME.

The cherry pie has been, is and always will be, the sine qua non of excellence. The luscious, juicy fruit stands second to none for delicious eating. To really know and enjoy full beauty of the fruit one must ride under and pick the fruit from the beautiful trees in southern Idaho, where the meaty fruit grows so large and abundantly. The old trees are as large as an ordinary shade tree and carry tons of cherries.

Spiced cherries are a delicacy which adds to any table. The proportions are the same as those used for cur-rants, seven pounds of fruit to five pounds of sugar, three tablespoonfuls each of cinnamon and cloves tied in a bag and cooked in a pint of vinegar took all together an hour and a half very slowly.

If you fail to get cherries to can, don't miss buying a few boxes of the large, dark western cherries for cherry olives. It is a most appetizing relish for meats.

Pit the cherries and just cover with vinegar, and let stand over night, drain off the vinegar and add an equal weight of the cherries in sugar. Stir until dissolved, and set away in a covered jar for winter use. The vinegar may with the addition of sugar make a good drink for a hot weather drink.

A method of canning which is very successful is that of putting the pitted fruit into a large bowl, add an equal bulk of sugar, measure for measure, stir, and keep in the ice chest for twenty-four hours, then place in sterilized cans, seal tight and place on the cold cellar floor or keep in the back part of the ice chest if there is room. The secret of keeping fruit this way is having the temperature unvaryingly cold. Cherries canned in this way are fresh fruit and if thoroughly mixed with the sugar keep without fermentation. Strawberries, currants and raspberries. In fact all fruits that can be crushed and saturated with sugar keep equally well.

A cherry pie made from such fruit cannot be told from the freshly picked fruit.

Creosote to Kill Dandelions.

John Lang, superintendent of City Park, who has been fighting the pest for many years, recommends creosote again this year for killing dandelions on private lawns. It should be squibbed from a small oil can, about eight or ten drops into the top of the plant if a small one, but if a large dandelion the head should be trimmed off and the creosote injected into the crown of the root. It should be applied only when the grass is dry, and care should be taken to keep it off the grass, though of course this cannot be entirely avoided. If the grass should be burned slightly the spot will grow over inside of a season. The creosote follows the root of the dandelion clear to its base and burns it so badly that it can never come up again. Denver Municipal Facts.

Summer Stops the Swing.

If you exert a pound of pressure against a man in a swing you'll start him moving slowly "to and fro." If you continue to exert a pound of pressure against him every time the swing makes a trip you'll soon have him going so high that he almost turns the whole circle. If you stop pushing the momentum will die out and the swing comes to rest at "dead center."

Winning trade follows the same natural laws.

Advertisements are the force behind the swing of public favor. Each new advertisement increases the momentum. Finally the accumulated force of these numerous impulses swings indifference to the buying point.

If you stop advertising you lose momentum.

The moral of which is: Don't stop the business swing in summer. Keep adding the pounds of advertising pressure.

People Known by Their Homes.

Experienced travelers are elated when they come across well planned and well cared for homes tastefully planted. They instinctively feel a desire to know the occupants, feeling sure they will find within people of intelligence, education, nobleness, generosity and affability. All know then, that the cultivation of plants and flowers is indicative of high ideals and character, even though he has never thought closely along these lines. It has truly been said that "the exterior of a home is an index to the character of the inhabitants." How will you be judged?

WILSON ON THE TARIFF

We stand in the presence of an awakened nation. Plainly it is a new age. There are two great things to do. One is to set up the rule of justice and right in such matters as the tariff, the regulation of trusts and the prevention of monopoly. The business of government is to separate special and particular interests of wide communities. The mutual task this year is to get our government in such shape that we can use it for our own purpose, not against anybody in particular, but for everybody in general. We want to establish a real partnership between all the people and the Federal government instead of between special interests and the Federal government. We must effect a great re-adjustment and get the forces of the whole people once more into play.

The tariff question, as dealt with in our time, has not been business. It has been politics. The tariff has been a system of favors. Tariff schedules have been determined in committee rooms and conferences. The tariff becomes a matter of legitimate business only when the understanding it represents is between the leaders of congress and the whole people of the United States, instead of between the leaders of congress and small groups of manufacturers demanding special recognition and consideration. That is the heart of the whole affair. It is at bottom a question of good faith and morals.

Our conviction as Democrats is that the only legitimate object of tariff duties is to raise revenue for the support of the government. We denounce the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act as the most conspicuous example ever afforded of the special favors of monopolistic advantages which the leaders of the Republican party have so often shown themselves willing to extend to those to whom they look for campaign contributions. The changes which we make should be made only at such a rate and in such a way as will least interfere with the normal and healthful course of commerce and manufacture. There should be an immediate revision downward. It should begin with the schedules most obviously used to kill competition and raise prices in the United States, and should be extended to every item which affords opportunity for monopoly and special advantage, until special favors shall have been absolutely withdrawn and our laws of taxation transformed from a system of governmental patronage into a system of just and reasonable charges which shall fall where they will create the least burden.

The Republican party doesn't propose to change any of the essential conditions which mark our present difficulties. Mr. Roosevelt proposes in his platform not to abolish monopoly but to take it under the legal protection of the government and to regulate it, to take the very men into partnership who have been making it impossible to carry out these great programmes by which all of us wish to help the people. We don't want to disturb the industry of the country, but to destroy the control over the industry of other people which these men have established and which make it impossible that we should give ourselves a free field of service.

OPPORTUNITY IS PASSING

A corporation capitalized at two million dollars has been organized to grow truck on Orange county land. The company has purchased three thousand six hundred acres of land which will be devoted to truck raising. It is claimed that the enterprise is backed by ample capital to carry on the work and that the cultivation of this farm will be under the direction of one man.

We cannot become enthused over such enterprises and hope that DeSoto county will never fall into the hands of one like this. The truth is, California history is repeating itself in Florida. Years ago these big corporations gobbled up the choice lands of California and the lands advanced in price from $50 to $1,000 per acre. Now it is impossible for a poor man to gain a foothold on California soil. The result is, California has no middle class in her rural population. Dagoes, coolies, greasers and "poor white trash" till her soil, while the landlord spends the proceeds, less the meagre wage paid the workers, at the famous resorts of the country. The county and state derive but a small share of benefits from the resources of the land. Is it any wonder that the political condition of California is bordering on socialism and anarchy?

Give us a land of home owners, who receive a just portion of the products of their toil and our people will remain patriots and Florida will be able to work out her own salvation and glorious destiny with no fear and trembling. Give us a citizenship that sleeps on its own soil and under its own vine and fig tree, and storms of political discontent may come and go, but our own fair state will go on in prosperity and peace forever.

The home is the hope of the nation. Buy a home in Florida while yet you may. Improve it and freeze to it. Ardia Enterprise.

We would like to inform Bro. Carter that there are several acres of land here not yet taken by the Florida Gardens Co. and we can take his order for a ten acre tract at any time. The poor man can always buy a farm in Florida.

DON'T KNOW THEIR CHILD

The other day a prominent citizen of Sanford was in The Herald office and in the course of a conversation mentioned the fact that he had just seen a most wonderful type setting machine in a neighboring city. This machine punched holes in a sheet of paper which was put in another machine and came out type. We told him that we had a similar machine and had it for six months and that we were one of the first offices in the south to be so equipped. He was greatly surprised at this piece of information and greatly crestfallen over the fact that he kept up so little with his home paper.

This is along the line of talk that we have been handing out for some time. Our home people little realize that The Herald has such a complete plant and are doing something aside from exuding hot air. We have been enriching the coffers of the home people by some $150 per week, which is taken as a matter of course, and neither our efforts to build a greater city through publicity or through a weekly payroll seem to affect the average citizen or arouse a stimulus within his bosom enough to have him look over the plant and come in to inquire about our health.

Half of the people of Sanford seem hardly aware of the fact that they have in their midst one of the finest and most complete small offices in the south. As to The Herald and the influence it exerts on the community we are too modest to expatiate upon it at length. We publish the paper as a matter of course and do not expect either praise or riches from the same, but we do take pride in the fact that as a factory proposition and a business factor The Herald is some office and none of our people need go away from home to see a printing office.

Come in and get acquainted with your own family.

It is the consensus of opinion among those who went to the park last night to hear Frank Clark and Herbert Phillips that they made many votes for Wilson.

We sympathize with Editor Goolsby of the Wauchulla Advocate in the recent death of his mother. As he truthfully says he could pay her no higher tribute than to say that she "was mother in every sense of the word."

An announcement from J. D. Kwykendall bears the startling information that he will start an evening daily in Gainesville about October 21. Mr. Kwykendall was formerly with the Kissimmee Gazette, and is one of the best journalists in Florida and he has located in one of the best cities in Florida. The only fly in his ointment is the fact that Harry McCreary holds the fort.

ONLY ON SUNDAY

Now that the tourist travel tends toward Miami they're trying to teach tradesmen there that temporal things tend to torpify; in other words, the people seek to establish a tight town to tickle the travelers. They advocate the closing of everything except the barbershops. This leads me to infer that it is only by a close shave that many can get into the church. - Palm Beach County.

City newspapers often make fun of country newspapers for detailing the coming and going of people and other personal mention. But if that be an offence the city newspapers are even more culpable, for in their society notes and other departments they are lavish in their accounts of the doings of so-called society people. The principal difference between the city and country press is simply in the fact that the rural newspaper chronicles the movements of people who are generally known in the community, while the city press tells of people whom the great majority of its readers know only by name. In its personal mention the rural press is singularly free from class feeling and flunkysism, while there is a strong feeling that both characteristics are found in the social happenings recorded in the columns of large city dailies. - Gainesville Sun.

THE CRANK AGAIN

The cranks are abroad in the land again and the shooting of Roosevelt at Milwaukee yesterday demonstrates that the men in public life should have protection at all times in crowded thoroughfares. It is startling, yet true, that in this so called land of the free that anarchy is rampant and no man is safe after he becomes a public servant. The incident occurring as it did in Milwaukee will raise a public clamor against the Socialists who had nothing to do with the incident and are never found in the anarchist class. The crank who shot Roosevelt claims that the ghost of McKinley prompted the deed, which is about the only excuse he could frame up for his insane act. Luckily the shot is not destined to prove fatal and the whole country regardless of party affiliations will rejoice that the strenuous Teddy did not perish by the irresponsible and of a maniac.

FLORIDA LAND GOOD ENOUGH

Planting of the early strawberry crop is now under way, at a time when the farmers up north are beginning to think of banking their houses to keep out the cold. When strawberries are off the ground another crop may be put in, to be followed by another, all different. Four crops a year from the same ground—all marketed at a time when there is very little competition from other states, and worked in a genial climate tells the story of Florida's growth. It will grow faster from this time on than ever before.

It is of course unfortunate that land swindlers have taken the opportunity when there was an unprecedented demand for public lands, to work the gulleless public, but did any one ever know of any new country where these fellows were not working. California had these sharks by the thousands. They have worked their way all through the west and south. They have worked to a lesser degree in the swamps of New Jersey and the tide flats of New England. However, no country was ever permanently hurt by these swindlers and in the long run Florida will not suffer. Be careful who you buy from. Florida Grower.

CHANCE FOR GLORY

The headquarters of the Democratic National Committee has sent out a call for additional funds. The committee-man for Florida has received a letter which has been published in which the plan for raising the funds necessary is set forth. The plan in brief is to find five thousand men who will give one hundred dollars each. The Florida committee-man is asked if he will not recommend the names of five men who will give one hundred dollars each. It is broadly intimated in this letter that the five who give up the hundred each will be remembered when the Democrats come into power.

It is hair splitting to find fault with Roosevelt for taking money from Morgan with an implied promise of immunity from prosecution and Wilson taking money from individual contributors with an implied promise of patronage.

If Wilson is elected it might be interesting to take the list of contributors and check it against the list of appointees. - Kissimmee Gazette.

Silence Carriages.

Commenting on the proposal to provide silence carriages on the French state railways, the writer of the "Notes Sociales" in the Paris Gaulois says: "The right to speak to me when I am in a railway carriage is, in France, among the rights of man and every one makes use of it with an annoying persistence and want of tact. What is peculiar is that the same itching to talk to some one who is saying nothing to you does not exist on tram cars or omnibuses or the underground railway. That is because every one knows he will soon be at his destination. But with a journey of five or six hours in prospect there is not a single middle class Frenchman who in the terror of remaining three hundred minutes without speaking does not hasten to be the first to enter into conversation."

Keeping Peace at Home.

How do they do it? The couples who gain the Dunmow Fitches? Tact undoubtedly plays a part. One recalls the simple system of a Sussex couple to keep peace at home. When the wife came in a little ruffled she flung her shawl over her left shoulder, and the husband knew that silence was golden. If he came home with hat cocked forward the wife knew that something was wrong, and she likewise lay low. It's the simplest that keeps the peace at home, where you may never be at loss for a quarrel you look for.—London Chronicle

What Wellington Feared.

Sir William Allan covered a large canvas with a picture of the Battle of Waterloo, which the Duke of Wellington bought. His grace asked the painter to call at the horse guards on a certain day to receive payment. Punctually Sir William came, and the duke began to count out notes for the sum agreed upon. Knowing how valuable was his time, Allan said that he would be quite content to take the duke's check. His grace went on counting and the artist thinking he had not heard, remarked: "It would save your grace time and trouble if you would give me a check on your bankers." Either angry at being interrupted in his counting or else jocularly with a touch of the truth that is sometimes spoken in jest the duke answered: "Do you think I would allow 'outta this bankers' to know what a fool I have been?"

SOME IMPRESSIONS AND EXPERIENCES OF A TRIP TO OLD ENGLAND

After visiting Westminster Abbey the writer visited the Houses of Parliament which are within just a few steps of the Abbey and lie between it and the Thames.

The great size of the buildings may be gathered from the fact that they cover a space of eight acres, containing eleven quadrangles, and the facade that faces the river is nine hundred and forty feet in length.

Within the great mass are multitudes of rooms literally numbered by hundreds and corridors measured by miles. There is comparatively very little of the whole that the visitor may see, but there is far more than one may remember and three of the more interesting may be mentioned here.

After finding the structure on the whole so immense it is a great surprise to find that the legislative halls of the greatest nation on earth are so small that they would be appropriate for the use of some of our congressional committees at Washington.

But as in the case of the Abbey, this little hall is full of the greatest memories. What great and powerful voices have resounded here in defense of, or in protest against, this or that measure.

Not far from the House of Lords is the equally famous House of Commons. After the magnificence of the other hall the room in which the Commons carry on their work seems severely plain and business like.

and opposite them are those of the opposition.

One other interesting part of the edifice is that part known as Westminster Hall. Next to the Tower and the Abbey it is the most historic edifice in London. It was built in 1097, and its magnificent oak ceiling has been described as one of the "finest feats in carpentry in existence."

There are many other parts of the building almost equal to these in interest, but these three serve as an example of what is in store for the visitor to this historic spot.

Thus far the writer has attempted to describe of all the multitude of London's sights only three or four of the more important. But let no one of his readers imagine that these were all, for during the two weeks of his stay in London he was so constantly on the go that at the end of that time he was foot sore and worn out physically from so constant a round of sight-seeing.

There is more to London than the sights of the town. There is a peculiar atmosphere about the great, crowded, busy old city that one can find nowhere else. The feverish hurry, and the bustle of New York are indeed lacking but there is yet the great, ponderous city with its thousands of miles of streets and its millions of inhabitants.

The police system of London is worthy of a passing mention. It seems to the writer that he has never seen such an array of giants as the policemen of London. New York's are large, but London's are larger.

Not far from the House of Lords is the equally famous House of Commons. After the magnificence of the other hall the room in which the Commons carry on their work seems severely plain and business like.

direction are many indeed. There are not many points in which the writer will admit English superiority but it must be admitted that the London police system is away ahead of anything on this side.

A Sunday in London is a day to make a lasting impression upon the traveller. All the shopkeepers put over their windows great iron or wooden shutters to lessen the danger of thieves, and to shut out the view of the public, so that the streets no longer look like streets but look more like walled passage ways.

Perpetual Motion Again Jacksonville has developed a sensation in the claim just published by Jordan E. Storms, a local machinist, that he has solved the problem of perpetual motion, and is after the reward of $12,000,000 offered for it by France.

He refuses even to have his invention patented at present for fear its secret might be disclosed, as it is so simple that a boy could discover it almost at a glance, and not until he has an iron-clad contract with the French government will the world know what the secret is.

Storms has worked at the puzzle for twenty-five years, is perfectly sincere and is not hughouse. If his invention works it will revolutionize mechanics by supplanting stationary engines in producing power for manufacturing, mining, generating electricity, etc.

I accomplished the invention by the law of gravitation, and that not as a toy, but a mechanism capable of developing unlimited horse power, depending upon its size, and I want it distinctly understood that this is no dream.

An Oklawaha River Whale While fishing in the Oklawaha near Gore's landing Saturday, a party consisting of Messrs. Frank Anthony, Charles Flippin and Ernest Colby, caught the biggest fish that has been hooked in those waters for years.

The young men caught a boatful of smaller fish from 12 pounds down. The big fish was so strong and fierce that if it hadn't been for the good stout Maroon Harward tackle he might have escaped.

A 12 pound fish is a common occurrence in Sanford. Geo. A. DeCottes and James H. Overman never take a fish home that weighs less than 12 pounds.

Threatened by Storm Washington, Oct. 14. Unsettled, and rainy weather throughout the gulf and south Atlantic states during the first part of the coming week is predicted by the weather bureau as a result of a tropical storm now entering the Gulf of Mexico from the Caribbean Sea.

Seasonal temperature will prevail throughout the country until after the passage of this disturbance when a change to considerably lower temperatures is probably over much of the country.

DON'T BE CREATURE OF HABIT

It is Better to Make Some Blunders Than to Oscillate Always in a Groove.

It is a good plan to break one's habits occasionally, to see that it can still be done. To follow even the best of habits too closely tends to ossify existence. It makes one stiff. It narrows his tastes.

Recently a brother and sister were found in an eastern state who had lived on the same farm for sixty years, and during that time had not been ten miles from home. For thirty years the woman had not been to town, five miles away, and for 15 years, although well and strong, she had not been so far from the house as the branch in their bottom field.

PAYING FOR HIS IMPATIENCE

Next Time It is Likely That Patrick Devlin Will Wait for the Jury's Decision.

If Patrick Devlin of Lawrence, Mass., were not such an impatient man he would be free today. Instead he is locked up at the state farm, Bridgewater, for an indefinite period. Patrick was on trial at Salem before a jury, charged with drunkenness.

Finally he arose and said: "Your honor, I would like to change my plea from not guilty to guilty." The change was noted by the clerk. Suddenly the door opened and the jury trooped back into court.

Patrick was crestfallen. Having changed his plea, he had to take his medicine. Although the jury said that he was not drunk, Patrick said that he was drunk, and so the court decided that he ought to know better than the jury.

Mysterious Cave Dwellers.

The sentiment that accompanies the common desire for the preservation of historical relics of the American Indians, who are fast passing away or being merged into the civilization of a new century, is now being manifested in reference to the preservation of the home of the cliff-dwelling Indians, whose history is as mysterious and unrecorded as that of the lost tribes of Israel.

Nawab Sultan Jahan Begam.

Ho, ye women suffragists! Did you ever hear of Bhopal, Bhopal in the land of the Hindus?

Bhopal is a native province of India, ruled by its own princely family. It is one of the most flourishing and most enlightened of all the native states. Time was when its inhabitants, who were warlike, had little time for anything but fighting the Marathas and other fierce tribes by whom they were surrounded.

Then came old Nawab Elkander Begam—a woman ruler—and everything was changed. The arts of war made way for the arts of peace. She was succeeded on the throne by a daughter and she in turn by the woman whose emphonic name heads this editorial.

The influence of these three women rulers has been beyond estimate. Bhopal has been at peace. Her people have developed their industries and their arts. They have flourished and poverty has been decreased.

Hurray for Jahan Begam! Long may she reign!—Albany Times-Union.

PEOPLE LEAVING CALIFORNIA

Over Two Thousand Expect to Leave Golden State for Florida

J. H. Sadler of Oakland, one of Orange county's prominent citizens was in the city last Saturday and called at the Herald office. Mr. Sadler has been down the East Coast and stated that he met a gentleman on the train en route from California who stated to him that over 2,000 families expected to leave California this season for Florida. That the exodus from the Golden State to the Land of Flowers was so great that the western railroads are becoming alarmed and their representatives are in Florida looking up our resources and endeavoring to locate the lodestone that is depopulating California in favor of Florida.

In speaking about California the people that have resided there seem to be of the opinion that California is not a poor man's country, has none of the great advantages offered by Florida and were it not for the glowing advertisements put forth by the western roads they would not be able to get half the travel westward that they are now receiving.

All of which brings us back to the Commercial Club and advertising on a large scale. If Florida is the best state in the Union for the poor man and the rich man and all of us think so and can prove the assertion, then we should certainly get busy and let more people know about the beauties of Sanford, not only as a place in which money can be made but as a place where the rich man can take his ease and pleasure, and next season Sanford will be the rich man's playground, where he can have every pleasure, all the hunting and fishing, golf, automobiling over twenty-five miles of brick roads and quarters at one of the finest small hotels in the south.

Genuine Wild Oats

Yes, they are genuine and not of the ethical variety, to the sowing of which many young men are supposed to be addicted. The crop of wild oats in this quarter of the state is the largest and finest that we have seen in many years. Great fields of them can be seen from the Coast Line cars between Tampa and Punta Gorda. In many places along the right of way between Winston and Dover these oats are thick and luxuriant enough to be harvested with a scythe. It is only where they have been fenced in and the land protected from fire that they can be seen. They are a fine forage for cattle, and it is a pity that they are going to waste.

Many years ago, in the good old days before the war, before the pernicious practice of burning off the woods was begun, wild oats grew so thick and luxuriantly all over South Florida that two men on horseback riding fifty feet apart through them could not see each other. Then the cattle were fat and their meat was tender and juicy. If we could restore the conditions of those good old days when the insipid, dry, tasteless, tough and villainous beef which we are now compelled to eat would disappear and we would be a lot happier. Punta Gorda Herald.

Fancy Work Circle

The members of the Fancy Work Circle were the guests of Mrs. T. S. Davis Thursday afternoon. Their pretty fancy work and social conversation was enjoyed by the ladies, as was also the dainty salad sandwiches and ice tea served by the hostess. Mrs. Davis' guests were Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. H. H. Hill, Mrs. Woodruff, Mrs. Garner, Mrs. Hines, Mrs. H. H. Chappell, Mrs. W. W. Abernathy and Mrs. J. D. Davison.

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS

Mrs. N. H. Fogg is visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. M. Tracey, and family in Jacksonville.

Mrs. Franklin F. Davis has returned from a summer visit with her relatives and friends in the New England states and is again settled for the winter in her beautiful home. School has commenced with Miss May as teacher.

The proprietors of the Altamonte Hotel, Messrs. Geo. E. Bates and son, are expected to arrive this week with a force of help, who will rush the improvements to be made for an early opening of the popular tourist resort. The winter residents will return and open their cottages much earlier this season than usual.

Mrs. Obed Foss will return this week accompanied by her niece, Miss Small and her brother and family.

Dr. Randall and wife will arrive before the presidential election, as he is a voter in this precinct.

The citrus fruit crop is larger than usual this season and the fruit is brighter and more desirable sizes. Much of the crop is pledged to the Citrus Fruit Exchange, for the growers believe in the protection of organization. The large nursery, owned by Mr. Charles D. Haines of New York city, will commence shipping ferns this week. Great results are expected from the enterprise.

WHY DR. WILEY IS FOR WILSON

He Says Taft and T. R. Are Soldiers of Fraud.

ENEMIES OF PURE FOOD LAW

Famous Chemist Believes the Health of the Nation Demands Election of the Democratic Ticket.

By HARVEY W. WILEY, (Former Chief Chemist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture)

My appeal is chiefly to those who, like myself, have been lifelong Republicans. I believe that no kind of an administration is going to ruin the country. I have a high personal regard for each one of the candidates for president and vice-president on all the tickets. All the political platforms are mainly sound and all promise of good in behalf of the whole people. My choice is not based on a platform. It was determined by my impressions of the real attitude of the candidates respecting the public welfare. We are creatures of heredity and environment. In our attitude towards great public questions we are almost altogether creatures of environment.

What two men are by environment least likely to be swayed by special interests and most likely to be guided by devotion to public welfare? Two of the candidates have already been tried in the presidential chair and we know by experience what may be expected if either of them resume his former seat on March 4, 1913. Mr. Roosevelt by reason of his attitude towards the food and drug act abandoned the consumers of the country to the rapacity of a few mercenary manufacturers. Under authority of congress I had carried on extensive experiments with my so-called poison squad and found that certain substances, viz. benzole compounds, sulphurous compounds and sulphate of copper (blue stone), were injurious to health.

The law conferred upon me, as chief of the bureau of chemistry, the duty of acting as a grand jury and determining whether foods and drugs were adulterated or misbranded. Instead of appealing from my decisions to the courts as the law requires, the users of these poisons appealed to President Roosevelt. He not only listened to them, but he abrogated the plain provisions of the law, appointed a board not contemplated by the law, and directed that these predatory interests might continue their attacks on the health of the people until this board, unknown to the law, should decide otherwise.

Can we safely trust the campaign for public health to Mr. Roosevelt? I cannot believe that to be the proper course. Mr. Taft inherited this exceedingly bad condition of affairs from his predecessor and has not only continued this illegal board under whose patronage adulterators are still poisoning the people, but he did worse. In the matter of the adulteration of distilled beverages in which Roosevelt upheld the legally constituted authorities, Mr. Taft reversed that policy and threw the mighty weight of the executive office to the support of the worst lot of adulterators that ever disgraced a country.

Mr. Wilson and Mr. Marshall by their strenuous efforts in behalf of the food laws of their respective states, have given a positive promise to end such a threatening state of affairs. They will support to the utmost the officials under the law who are trying to protect the public health and will make short shrift of those who have brought about these present unbearable conditions.

Wilson and Marshall by their education and environment are free from bias in favor of predatory interests and are inspired by true patriotic zeal in behalf of public welfare.

I support the Democratic nominees in full knowledge that many of the prominent Democrats in congress have been in full sympathy with the paralysis of the food law in behalf of the unholy dollar. But when the Democratic president and vice-president lend the aid of their powerful sympathy in behalf of the public health those of their own party not in sympathy with them will be robbed of their power for evil. If Roosevelt or Taft be chosen the soldiers of fraud and adulteration will be impregnable entrenched for another four years and benzoates sulphites and adulterated alcoholic beverages will have a new lease of life.

I believe also that President Wilson will renovate the department of agriculture, seeking as it has been for the past twelve years with scandals and favoritism. He will see to it that the bureau of animal industry will protect the public health instead of the efforts of the packers to sell diseased meats under the deceptive phrase "U. S. Inspected and Passed." Under President Wilson no more Pinchols will be kicked out of the service, no more unspeakable McAbies will exercise dictatorial powers. There will be no more cotton leaks and jungle atrocities, no more Everglade swindles, Buccaneersing, boatsting and buncombe will give place to sane efforts for the promotion of real agriculture and the public health.

Under Wilson the department of agriculture will be restored to speaking terms with the State Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations, and the State officials will no longer be regarded as inferior beings, living only on the largesse of a Washington cabal. I ask all who want honesty and faithful service in the Department of Agriculture, the promotion of public health, and executives who have grown to manhood and lived in an environment favorable to that which makes for the public welfare, to vote for Wilson and Marshall.

Never Repeat an Unkind Thing. Never repeat unkind things. But if you hear something kind and pleasant and sweet, then make it your business to repeat it. It may sound superior to say you do not care whether people like you or not, you must speak your mind. That isn't superiority. It is supreme selfishness and sourliness.

BOY HANDLES SNAKE

Supposed to be Harmless But Proves to be Fatal to Boy

Norman Wyman, aged about thirteen, son of J. A. Wyman, while playing with a poisonous snake early on Wednesday morning, was bitten on the hand, and died on Thursday evening.

On his return before school, the boy again got the snake and exhibited it, despite a protest from the teacher.

The Herald at one time called attention to the fact that in Florida we have the small striped snake which resembles the garter snake in appearance but in reality is the American cobra and is deadly poison.

Appreciates Action of Judge Bell

Joe Favor, a negro of the Montague section, was tried before Judge Joseph Bell of Ocala, for shooting quail out of season, and was fined $100 and costs.

The recent action of Judge Bell, as recorded in the above item which appeared recently in the Times Union, has called forth many expressions of satisfaction from sportsmen, and all interested in game protection, especially the "Bob White."

The Florida Audubon Society, through the medium of the press, desires to publicly acknowledge its thanks to Judge Bell for his timely action.

It is to be hoped that the officials of other counties will follow the example of Judge Bell, and so earn the gratitude of sportsmen and all lovers of the useful Bob White.

The Lend a Hand Club

The Lend a Hand Club held its first meeting Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Henry Wight and made some enthusiastic plans for the season's work.

The Lend a Hand Club is composed of many of the representative young women of the city and was organized primarily for philanthropic purposes.

The Associated Charities received its first donation from this club and at the meeting Friday an additional sum was voted to the relief work of the association.

At the Field Day last February the girls cleared about two hundred dollars by their own work.

All money raised by this club is devoted to civic and philanthropic purposes.

A great deal has been said, first and last, about the lack of recreational facilities of the city of Sanford, so the first work of the club this winter will be the building of a public tennis court for Sanford, and it is for this purpose that the club will give a fancy dress Halloween ball October 31, at the hall, the particulars of which will be in our next issue.

Bridge Club Meets

The Every Week Bridge Club was entertained by Mrs. G. F. Smith on Thursday afternoon. Two tables of bridge were played. The highest score was made by Mrs. C. O. McLaughlin, who won the prize, a pretty little lemon plate of glass with silver deposit.

The Sanford Celery Delta as an agricultural center for the growing of winter vegetables has been advertised in the four quarters of the earth and in the midst of advertising the agricultural resources of this section the city proper has been neglected and our most valuable asset, Sanford as a winter resort, has been relegated to the rear.

The fact that Sanford will occupy the center of the stage this season has aroused interest among the business men, who feel that in the building of the city they will come in for large share of returns.

The campaign of advertising inaugurated several years ago filled the celery delta with new people, and the reputation of this section of Florida as the real vegetable section is assured.

The fact that we wish to impress upon the people of the United States and foreign countries at the present time is that Sanford offers more to the winter resident in the way of hunting, fishing, automobiling, salubrious climate, accommodations, etc., than any other section of the south, and when all of the plans of the Commercial Club have matured the proof of this assertion will be made apparent.

Our work now will be for a Greater Sanford.

The Destructive Small Boy

The other day T. J. Miller, thinking to beautify his theatre planted two very beautiful palms in front of the premises. At the time it seemed to me that it was a case of love's labor lost, for never yet has anything been allowed to grow on any of the principal streets on account of the destructive small boy.

Now it is simply a question of whether the small boy is more destructive here, or the police are more lax or that the parents of the children do not look after the small boys and keep them off the streets at night.

HIS INTERFERENCE

There Was Only One Way Out of the Engagement.

BY A. MARIA CRAWFORD.

"You've always had all the money you wanted, Theoren, and you wouldn't know how to get along without it," said Betty decidedly.

Theoren Crane looked at the girl wonderingly.

"There is only one way out of this engagement for you, just one," he repeated, "and that is to acknowledge that you don't love me. No other reason will hold with me."

Betty pondered, a tiny pucker showing in her forehead. She spoke with an effort. "You know there has always been Tom."

"Don't these roses look real? He has sent flowers every day for two years." Her retort came quickly. Her pride had been stirred.

"Do you mean to tell me that you— you of all women—would have allowed me to hold you in my arms and kiss you if you had not intended to marry me? Were you thinking of Tom then?"

The girl's defense was being swept away ruthlessly. She felt the hot blood tingle in her face.

"I don't suppose you ever made a mistake and kissed the wrong girl, did you?" she asked slowly.

"Betty! What's the matter? Your father has told you that Uncle Henry drew up his will yesterday and left his money to me provided that I don't marry a so-called society woman. He has always been a crank on the subject of marriage. Thinks that women ought to know how to cook and sew and run a house, you understand. I went to the office and begged your father not to tell you Uncle Henry has been in Australia for twenty years and he didn't know a lawyer nor anybody else in this town. Imagine how I felt when he came in to luncheon today and announced that he had been to Gustave Carter to have his will drawn up! To your father! I don't want his money. I can take care of you. Oh, Betty dear, I've been so happy. Say it's all a mistake. I don't want anything but you."

Betty swallowed hard and staring in the fire, went over to herself every word her father had said at noon. "Betty, you must give up Theoren Crane," he had urged. "The boy has a future and this old uncle of his has a dozen millions. You mustn't let maudlin sentimentality cheat the boy out of a fortune like that. The old fellow loves Theoren and wants him to marry a quiet, simple girl who is accustomed to do actual work, household work, he said. Yes, I know it's hard on you for you are more than capable and can run this big establishment, but Henry Crane demands that his niece shall not smack of the social world. You're like a beautiful orchid. Betty, don't cry, we'll go abroad for a year. Henry Crane would never believe that you could work. You must not think of yourself in this, but what this fortune will mean to him."

Acts of heroism appeared easy enough to accomplish in the creatures of men's fancies—in books—but when an actual experience came home to an average, normal girl, it seemed too difficult for mortal endurance. Betty wanted to cry out how dear he was—this man she was giving up for love of him. He was so big and strong and capable of caring for her. She would love him so that he would never regret the loss of money under the circumstances, she promised herself, and then the voice of her father, speaking in a cool way of the material things of life, smote her inner consciousness. "You mustn't let maudlin sentimentality cheat the boy out of a fortune like that," and Betty steeled her heart and determined to prove herself equal to her father's expectation and demand.

"If I ever marry, I will marry Tom. Nobody could love a woman any more than he loves me. I am going abroad in ten days, where I hope to study and travel and improve myself. I need it."

"As late as last night, you didn't need nor want anything except my love. Tell me the whole truth, Betty. Why are you talking about Tom now? Isn't it because of Uncle Henry's will? decreed that there should be only one—the one he dominated. There had been those who defied him, and they had come to grief. When he was told that young Campbell was going to try it he sent for him and said:

"A new dally on the carpet, eh?"

"Yes."

"Drop it."

"Why so?"

"Because I run this town."

"Perhaps so."

"I'll chase you out in a month!"

His threat would probably have been carried out but for a circumstance beyond the control of any boss. Miss Kitty Doland and Mr. Charles Campbell met, and it was a case of love at first sight. The new dally had been started and was struggling to live when the girl came to know Boss Kelly's program to kill it.

For the first time since she had held her place she raised her voice in protest. She was answered sneeringly and brutally. Campbell should learn what it meant to defy the boss of Gratton. If there had not already been admiration and love, the attitude of the politician would have awakened them.

Miss Doland quit her place within the hour, laughing at the threat that she and her mother should be made homeless within a week. That evening the Hon. J. Kelly, as his newspaper organ always referred to him, received three callers in a bunch. There was no need of introductions. He was known to Miss Doland, Mr. Campbell and Lawyer Stratton. The lawyer did not belong to "the gang." On the contrary, he had been hot on the trail of the boss for many months.

"What blamed nonsense is this?" gruffly asked the boss as all got seated.

Mr. Kelly, replied Miss Doland, "I am not exactly engaged to Mr. Campbell, but—"

"Tell your mother that I shall turn her out!"

"But we are going into partnership in the newspaper business."

"Humph!"

"You will do your best to kill the enterprise?"

"As dead as a door nail!"

"I wanted to be sure of it. Mr. Kelly, when the new courthouse was erected two years ago your share of the graft was $50,000. I have figures and memoranda to prove it."

"It's a lie!"

"When the land for the new park was acquired it was bought through the real estate ring, of which you are the head. The price was fixed and rushed through, and your share of the graft was over $14,000. I have proofs to go before the jury."

"Another lie!" was muttered.

"When the old jail was repaired your divvy was about $7,000."

"It wasn't seven cents!"

"On the paving done last year your ring made a clean steal of over $10,000."

"Hu!"

"Your and your friends have purchased 200 acres of land to unload on the city at three times its value as a reservoir."

"Get out of my house— all of you!" shouted the boss as he sprang up.

"Softly does it, Mr. Kelly," replied the girl. "I have other things to mention."

"You are a traitor."

"A mistake, Mr. Kelly. Mr. Stratton is here as my lawyer, and cannot take advantage of what is said unless I decide to prosecute and furnish him certain documents. Those documents will be placed in the safe of 'The Daily Star,' to be brought out and published whenever the editor thinks the time is ripe. Is it to be war or peace?"

"Is the new paper goin' to pitch into me?"

"Not for what has happened in the past—not unless you force it. I consider that I did not get that information fairly, but 'The Star' will be on the watch in the future."

"Reform!" he sneered.

"Not at all, Mr. Kelly. It's just an experiment to see how a city can be run without a boss."

And the city of Gratton has voted the experiment a success, while the "business partnership" is a paying affair, and the matrimonial enterprise promises much happiness.

Eyes Demand Repose.

Many people cannot remain unoccupied, and in their moments of leisure hasten to seize a book or a piece of embroidery. These are undoubtedly excellent means of distraction, but they are fatiguing for the eyes, upon which they impose continuous work without a break. One must know how to repose the eyes just as one considers it quite natural to rest the muscles after a fatiguing walk.
