Cooks Lowers Heat, Risks Poisoning

DEAR DR. LAMB — My mother-in-law cooks with her oven on low-heat at 140 degrees. She cooks everything all day this way. I think this may be breeding bacteria. She says that no one has ever gotten sick yet although they seem to get a 100 of headaches. I refuse to eat the poultry or pork at their house. Am I wrong? If she put the oven up to 400 at the end, would this kill the bacteria? If it starts out at 400 and then puts it down to 140, is that OK? She cooks everything twice or even three times this way. Besides that, it's terrible, is this dangerous?

DEAR READER — It sounds to me like you're describing a variation of the slow bake technique. I would agree that the temperature that you're describing is too low because it means that whatever is being cooked will never have an internal temperature above 140 degrees. That's too low for adequate cooking of some forms of meat.

Many cooks who advocate the slow cooking method suggest that you start out initially with the oven temperature at a high level, perhaps 350 or even 400 as you suggest, for about 30 minutes and then cut back. In that way, the bacteria which may be on the surface of the meat or poultry is killed. Pork should be cooked until it's not pink. Lots of poultry is covered with salmonella which can cause food poisoning. We usually don't see too much of this because our food is adequately cooked.

To give you more information about cooking to prevent food poisoning, I am sending you The Health Letter number 54, Food Poisoning: Infectious Origin. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1151, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

If the meat is cooked at a higher level, as you suggested, at first, then cooked slowly thereafter there will be no bacteria problem. However, the usual way to do this is to set the oven at least at the level that you want for the internal temperature of the meat. Thus if you want the internal temperature of a roast to be 170, the oven temperature for the slow roast should be 170, or if you prefer a little above. The idea is if the oven is set at exactly 170, the meat will not get any hotter than that.

I hope your mother-in-law won't hate me for agreeing with you about this but one of the main purposes of cooking is to eliminate bacteria that could otherwise be harmful if they weren't destroyed by the process.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would like to know if it is possible for my 20-year-old son to have a tattoo removed from his chest. If so, what would the procedure involve?

DEAR READER — Yes, sometimes a tattoo can be removed. Your son should see a dermatologist about this. There are different techniques employed but one is to use a saline preparation that literally induces a scab over the area, which sloughs off, taking with it some of the pigmentation. The proper choice of a technique depends on the size of the tattoo and location, so your son will need professional advice about this. How successful removal may be depends a lot on the nature of the tattoo itself.

HOROSCOPE

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

For Friday, May 30, 1968

YOUR BIRTHDAY
May 30, 1968
If you exercise patience, cooperation and unity, this coming year can prove to be extremely fortunate. Material gains and opportunities you'd never expect to receive could come to you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
— It's extremely easy to take from generous pals, but you must be willing to give in return. If you are not, they could think your concern is only for yourself. Find out more of what lies ahead, figure in your future.

CANCER (June 21-July 21)
— Your disposition remains bright and cheery today as long as no one infringes upon your rights or gets in your way. If they do, smiles could become frowns.

LEO (July 22-Aug. 22)
— Materially, things could be mized up today. What you don't seek comes easily, but gambling or spending beyond your limit could burst your bubble.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
— Friends will have the pleasure of experiencing your sunny attitude today. However, your family may not get the same privileged treatment. Be nice at home, too.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
— Unfortunately, you may choose to dwell on the negatives today. Conditions

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Leonard Starr

He sat East and held the first trick with the King of spades. He continued with the Queen. West led the second trick. Had he merely continued with the third spade, declarer would make his three notrump in spite of losing the finesse in the red suit.

However, the doctor reasoned that West could not have an entry for his spades and that there could be no reason to set that suit up. So he shifted to a club and while South was "in" to take the diamond finesse, he still needed to try the heart finesse. And by that time the doctor had set up a club trick against the unfortunate declarer.

The I.R.S. allowed him only 3,323 pounds for 1500 of spades and the club leads would let declarer romp home if he had held the queen of both black suits instead of the spade ace.

You can't beat the I.R.S. anywhere. The credit left him a pound short. This amounted to six pounds with interest and penalties and the doctor was still in trouble. (OVERSEAS PAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

LONGWOOD COMMISSIONER SHAKEN BY ROBBERY, ASSAULT

By JANE CASSELL BERRY
Herald Staff Writer

Daytona Beach Police Detectives are still looking for the man who robbed a Longwood City Commissioner, John Hepp, at gunpoint Monday afternoon, struck him on the head with the weapon and drove off in Hepp's van, leaving him in the woods wearing nothing but a pair of socks.

Hepp still has a headache as the result of the blow, which left a large lump on his head. As an owner of two convenience stores in Daytona Beach, he and his wife, Judy, share a continuing headache with trying desperately to stop passing motorists for help. "This was the worst part of the whole experience," Hepp said. Finally he was spotted by a State Department of Transportation employee, who stopped, gave him a pair of pants and radioed for the police.

Hepp refused medical treatment and after his van was recovered drove himself home. He experienced dizziness and headaches as a result of the attack.

"It's over now and I just want to forget it," Hepp said Thursday. But for Mrs. Hepp forgetting is not that easy, knowing how close her husband came to getting killed. "Thank God, he's all right," she said.

Judy Hepp is still upset over a cartoon making a joke of the incident, which she said ran in a Daytona Beach paper. "I spoke to the managing editor and told him how I felt about it. It's not a joke, but a serious crime and it was upsetting to have the paper make light of it," said Mrs. Hepp. "It's a shame folks trying to make a honest living have to put up with these crimes. I don't think it's worth it. I want to throw my hands up in disgust."

For the Hepps this was the latest and most violent of several robberies and burglaries they have experienced since they were always one jump ahead of us, so it was cheaper to hire someone to keep the store open all night even if business didn't warrant it," she said.

"We used to leave the cash register drawer open so the burglars could see there was no money in it, but one night a clerk left it locked. They just stole the $1,200 cash register. When it was found later by the police in the woods, it was ruined," she said.

"My husband used to deposit the store receipts at night, but he began seeing suspicious looking cars parked near the shop, so he began making deposits at various times during the day," she added.

"I was born and raised in New York City and when we came down here I didn't think things would become like this," said Mrs. Hepp. "This is a terrible way to live."

It was out of fear that their children might become the victims of some criminal plot that made the Hepps decide to move to Seminole County instead of living in Daytona, which would be more convenient to their businesses.

Speer, 10 Others File Suit To Stop Downtown Plans

A hearing on an injunction to stop the Seminole County Circuit Court to declare the city improvement plan illegal and temporarily restrain the city from beginning work on the $227,049 project, designed to beautify downtown Sanford.

G. Algren Spear, joined by 10 other tenants and owners of buildings on Magnolia Avenue and First Street, filed suit Thursday afternoon, asking the court to declare the plan illegal and temporarily restrain the city from beginning work on the $227,049 project, designed to beautify downtown Sanford.

The project, approved by the Sanford City Commission on May 12, calls for turning Magnolia Avenue into a pedestrian mall and the placement of planters and trees along Magnolia and First Street.

Speer and other plaintiffs in the suit, claim the improvements would prevent trucks from making deliveries to some stores along First, eliminate parking and create hazardous traffic conditions.

It also calls the appropriation of funds for the project "illegal," saying the funds were not budgeted properly, despite the unanimous vote by the commissioners to implement the plan.

The commission, which had originally planned to begin construction in early June, voted Tuesday to delay the plan until a full trial is held, an estimated delay of 60 to 120 days.

The commissioners directed City Attorney Vernon Mize to demand a declaration of judgment from the Circuit Court, if the city failed to file his promised suit.

The suit was joined by George and Thomas Speer, owners and occupiers of 111 to 115 Magnolia Ave.; Dr. Harry Woodruff, Dr. Ralph Woodruff, Walter L. Stoumenier, Mary Kanner and Virginia Miller, tenants and owners of 107 E. First; Spier's sister-in-law Daisy Spier; Eleanor Russell, owner of 117 Magnolia; and Manuel Jacobson, owner of the Circuit Court, if Speer failed to file his promised suit.

Economic Indicators Abysmal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Index of Leading Economic Indicators, a barometer of future economic trends, plunged 4.8 percent in April — its largest drop ever — the government reported today.

The previous one-month record was registered during the nation's last recession when the index declined 3 percent in September 1974.

In an unusual development, all 10 components of the index fell last month, with layoffs contributing the most to the overall decline, the Commerce Department said.

The report was preliminary in nature and the April figure may probably be revised next month. But the size of the drop was so great, it is likely that even with the revision, April will remain the worst month on record.

The government has been keeping the index since 1948 and April's performance was far and away the largest drop ever.

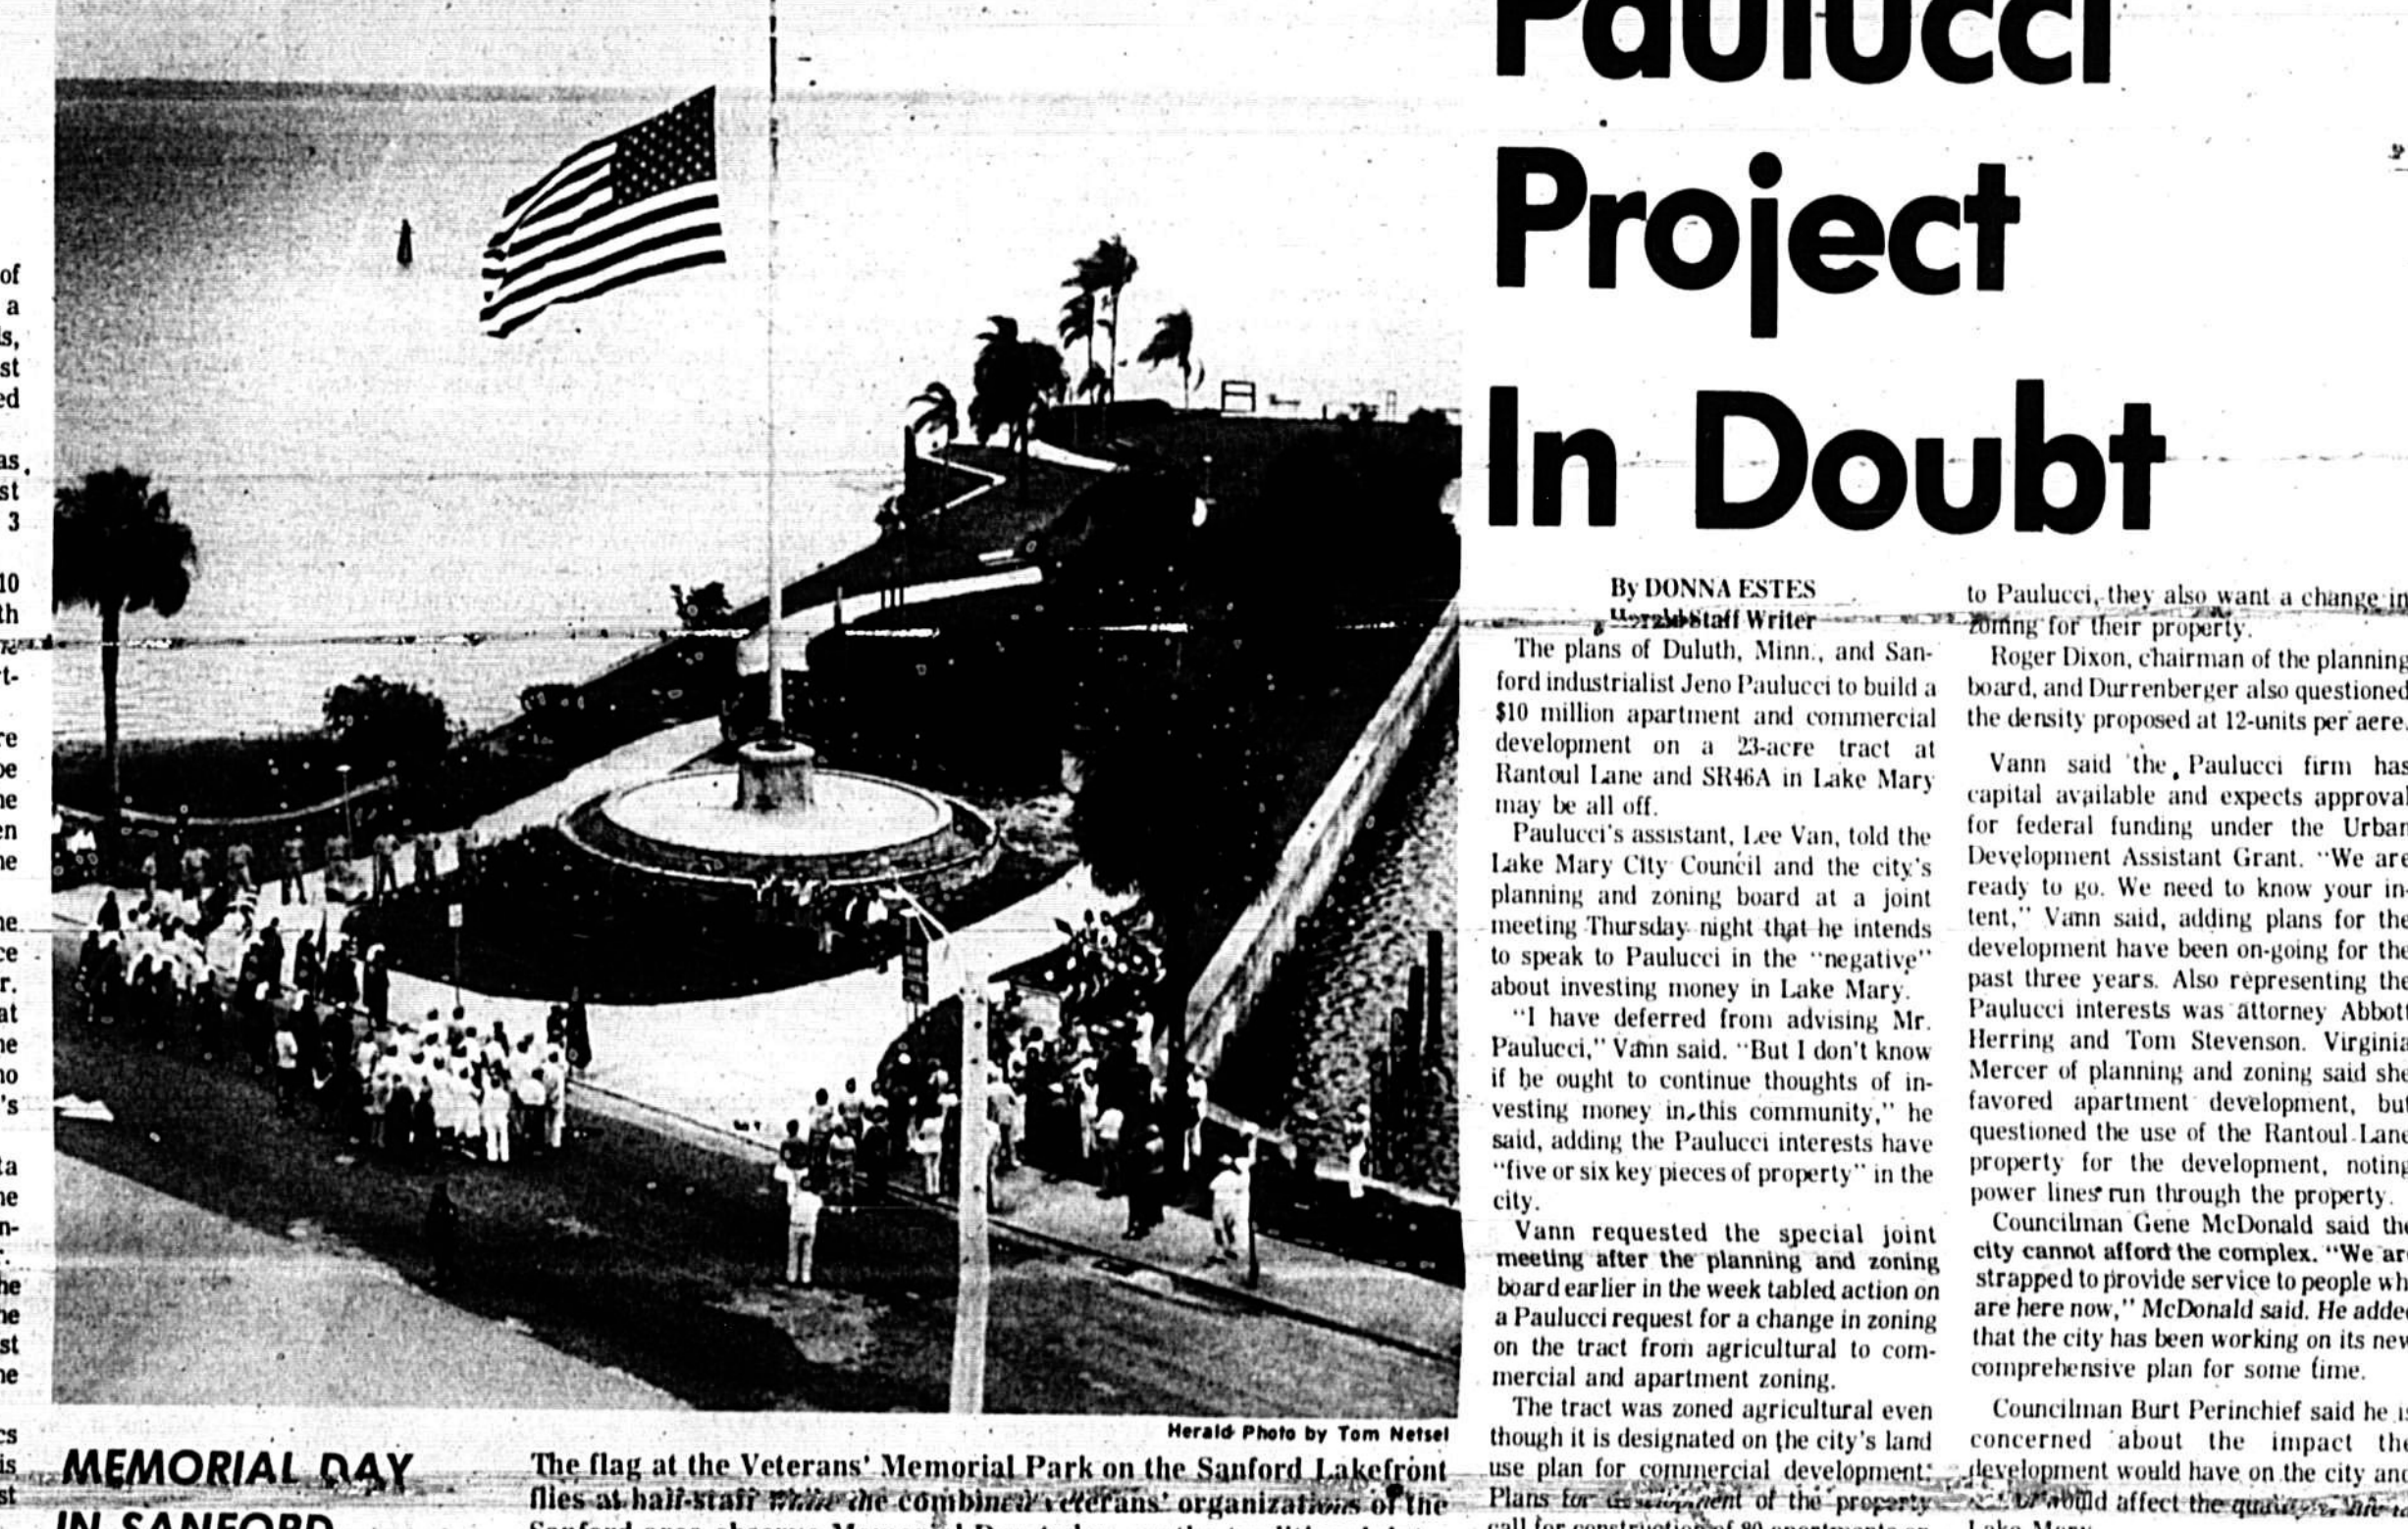

Government economists caution that the index should not be used to gauge the depth of a recession and provides no clues as to how long the nation's economic downturn will last.

The department said new data revealed that the March decline the indicator was actually 3.1 percent instead of the 2.6 percent reported earlier.

With the exception of January, the index has been dropping steadily for the past seven months, marking the longest string of poor performances since the severe recession five years ago.

The index is a hodgepodge of statistics that suggests where the economy is headed. It is now at its lowest point since April 1976.

While layoffs contributed the most to the drop, declines were also registered in the average workweek, vendor performance, the change in total liquid assets, stock prices, building permits and the change in sensitive raw materials.

Police Lack Suspect In Jordan Shooting

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (UPI) — The FBI today pressed its hunt for conspirators believed responsible for an assassination attempt on civil rights leader Vernon Jordan, but investigators admitted they had few leads and no suspects.

The 44-year-old director of the National Urban League was off the critical list today, but doctors at Parkview Memorial Hospital — where he was recuperating — under heavy guard — termed his condition "serious."

He said agents interviewed Martha Coleman — a Fort Wayne Urban League volunteer who took Jordan home for a midnight snack after the speech and drove him back to his motel.

Webster said the FBI had been in contact with people who saw parts of the shooting episode but "no one who saw the attempt and the Rev. Jesse Jackson, head of Chicago-based Operation PUSH, told reporters he believes there is a "hit list" of persons who take a strong stand on civil rights.

In Washington, FBI Director William Webster said agents found evidence Jordan was the target of a conspiracy and the shooting was the work of "a parent more than one person in a premeditated act."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Japan To Expel American For Freeing 300 Dolphins

TOKYO (UPI)—An American environmentalist was sentenced to six months in jail today for freeing 300 dolphins destined to be slaughtered by Japanese fishermen, then was ordered deported because his visa had expired.

Dexter Cate, 36, of Hilo, Hawaii, was convicted of damaging fishing nets on a 600-mile south-west of Tokyo, to free the trapped dolphins Feb. 29.

Immediately after the court decision, Cate was taken to an immigration office for deportation procedures. Officials said he would be expelled as soon as necessary paperwork was completed.

Fishermen on the island call the sea mammals "gangsters of the sea" and have methodically killed more than 2,000 dolphins this year because they eat fish stocks.

County Teachers Ask 20% Pay Increase

By DIANE PETRYK Herald Staff Writer Teacher salaries should be increased 20 percent, the Seminole Education Association (SEA) told negotiators for the Seminole County School Board at this year's first contract bargaining session Thursday.

The SEA's salary proposal also calls for a 5 percent salary increase for each year of teaching experience.

The SEA and the school board negotiating team will meet again June 12. The two sides will continue to meet, according to SEA Interim Executive Director Bill Moore, until an agreement is reached or one side declares an impasse has been reached.

The SEA and the school board negotiators spent the two hours of their first meeting arguing about what parts of the contract would be included in the negotiations, Crowley said.

Thieves Rob Sanford Man At Gunpoint

By DAVID M. RAZLER Herald Staff Writer Two armed men who robbed a Sanford man at gunpoint early this morning, tried to rob him again a few minutes later, after the thieves lost the wallet, deputies say.

Delbert Bush, 38, of 106 Lake Minnie Drive, Sanford, was walking along Airport Boulevard between State Road 66A and the railroad tracks, just after midnight, when three men pulled off the road in the 1980 Buick, deputies report.

Two of the men, one carrying a sawed-off shotgun, the other, a pistol, jumped from the car and ordered Bush to lie down and hand over his watch and wallet.

Bush told deputies he complied with the thieves' demands, also giving them two pocket knives and a pocket notebook.

The thieves jumped back into the car and drove off. Bush continued along Airport Boulevard looking for a phone, deputies say. But before he found one, the robbers were back, pulling off the road and demanding everything Bush had.

He told them he had nothing left, deputies say, reporting the thieves specifically demanded Bush give them his wallet, then searched him and the area with a flashlight again before driving off.

Bush made it to a convenience store and called deputies, who say they were able to find his wallet intact, at the point where it was stolen.

Bush, owner of the B and D Sawmill on Upland Road, said he was walking to the mill at the time of the robbery.

Honoring The Whole

The tendency of patriots in memorializing those who sacrificed all for the cause is to remember the men who fell in combat.

Many—all too many—do and are heralded in the press, medaled by their superiors, remembered by their comrades.

But not all brave men die on the actual field of battle. Many more succumb in other, much more routine aspects of the grim job that is a soldier's—by just being there.

When this occurs in the flames of a helicopter collision in the Iranian desert, it is also heralded and the shock may actually be more intense than that resulting from battle.

Little heralded, however, and for that reason perhaps even more painful are the tragic mistakes. Almost unbearable are the tales of the errors in field gun loads, the miscalculations in bomb drops. Bitter is it must be to the parent who receives a posthumous medal for a fallen son, how much more bitter it must be to the family of a young man killed in a training accident.

These men also gave for the cause. They, too, are casualties of war.

The best of our poor tribes cannot recreate the actual sacrifice countless thousands have made in the history of this nation. Yet once a year we try to remember those who have given their lives, everywhere and in whatever way, in the hope of a better one for others.

To honor the part is impossible without honoring the whole. And the mission never completed in Iran, the jeep crash at Da Nang, the engine malfunction over Phost, the misfire at Missionary Ridge are all a part of the price of maintaining a free society.

In the final account, there can be no differentiation in the honor accorded those who paid it.

Worth Reading

Former President Richard M. Nixon's new book "The Real War" is full of intelligent insights into American foreign policy. It is an important textbook in a presidential election season.

The chapter on "Presidential Power" is particularly important. Mr. Nixon lays down rules as to what a President must do in contests in the international arena. He says: "He must never give our adversaries something they want unless he gets from them something we want. We must preserve secrecy when necessary and recognize that gathering intelligence and conducting covert activities are justified as much to prevent war as to wage it."

In the chapter "No Substitute For Victory" Mr. Nixon offers advice as to how to deal with Soviet leaders in negotiations. He points out that "the Soviet leaders are taught to be conspirators virtually from birth."

He counsels: "Above all, never tell them what you will not do; they may think you might do more than you can or will... The West is affected by world public opinion; the Soviets are affected only by their interests... Ruling out American use of force provokes the use of force against us. 'Sincerity' is an idealistic Western concept that means nothing to the Soviet leaders."

If Mr. Nixon's guidelines had been understood and followed by President Carter, we would not be in the current mess involving Iran. Mr. Carter made a tragic fumble when he ruled out the use of American force at the time of the embassy seizure.

If readers get that message from the book, they will have gained essential truth.

The Orange County State Attorney's office is investigating the disappearance of John Andrew Kirkpatrick, who, working under the name of Jack W. Curtis, has for the past year operated the Central Florida Chamber of Commerce...

Since last summer, Kirkpatrick had been soliciting members in his new chamber, designed to unify businessmen throughout central Florida into one organization.

The new chamber never held a meeting, although Kirkpatrick was hiring people on an almost daily basis and sending them home to phone businessmen, asking them to buy $50 memberships.

No one knows how many businessmen joined Kirkpatrick's chamber. One time he said he had 300 members, on another occasion, 60.

Kirkpatrick once published a flyer listing 10 members, the only partial membership list known to exist.

LOS ANGELES (NEA) — Polls here show that the June 3 primary race between President Carter and Sen. Edward Kennedy may end up extremely close.

In close races, politicians begin looking desperately for bloc votes. California has no larger voting bloc than its Hispanic Americans, so both Democratic candidates are going all out to woo them.

There are almost 1 million Hispanics registered to vote in the state out of a total registration of a little more than 10 million. Since most of them are Democrats, their influence on the Democratic Party and its primary is even greater.

What Kennedy has going for him first and foremost is his name. It is almost impossible to overstate the importance of the Kennedy family in Hispanic politics.

Like the Kennedys, most Hispanics are Roman Catholics. They considered John Kennedy, the only Roman Catholic president, to be one of their own.

However many members Kirkpatrick had, they seem to be without an organization now. One week after Kirkpatrick canceled a meeting...

Some members have received announcements saying the corporation will soon be disbanded, and a lawyer will soon be named to handle the dissolution.

Kirkpatrick also sold off his office furniture, according to his answering service, which has quit handling his calls, but still has a list of more than 100 wanting to get in touch with him.

Kirkpatrick began soliciting in Allamonte Springs in June 1979, but was stopped when he tried to cash check made out to the "Central Florida Chamber" in his personal account, according to police.

Police investigated him, and found the man calling himself "Curtis" was, in fact, Kirkpatrick, a man who headed guilty to the sale of thousands of amphetamine tablets in 1961 and was found guilty of shoplifting in 1971.

"Curtis" denied being Kirkpatrick until last month, when he was confronted with positive proof of his dual identity obtained from public police files.

While it is believed members of the short-lived "Central Florida Chamber of Commerce" will never see the money they are owed, Kirkpatrick's actions have served to threaten two We Care workers, a volunteer and an employee who aided the man they knew as "Curtis" out of "trust and friendship."

The two We Care people agreed to sign the Central Florida Chamber of Commerce charter, certified by the Florida Department of State on Dec. 31, 1979.

One signed on as vice president, the other as secretary-treasurer.

Kirkpatrick told the pair they would not have anything to do with the company and would only serve as officers until he held elections for officers from the membership.

But the elections, like other "planned" chamber activities, never took place, and the pair may be left holding the bag for Kirkpatrick's debts.

State Attorney investigators believe it will be a while before the extent of the debts, and the full story behind the Central Florida Chamber of Commerce are known.

Espalier Used As Decorative Accent In Landscapes

An ancient horticultural art is finding new popularity in landscaping all over Florida and it's called espaliering.

Simply put, espalier is the practice of controlling a plant's growth so that it stands along a flat surface. Usually a free-standing wall or the side of a building.

It's especially effective in confined areas of the landscape, where you don't have room for spreading trees and large shrubs.

Espalier is used as a decorative accent in modern landscapes, and it's often referred to as "Living Sculpture."

TOM DAVIS Horticulturist

The English refined the practice and began using espalier as cold protection. They discovered that espaliered fruit trees tolerated cold temperatures better than fruit trees grown in the open.

Espaliers are especially effective along bank walls where you need a special interest plant to relieve monotony. And, as landscape space becomes smaller for single family homes, and more people choose to live in apartments or mobile homes, espaliered plants will have considerable appeal.

There is one point of caution. Don't use too many espaliered plants around your home. As attractive as they are, one is about all landscape designs need.

There is no end to the espalier patterns you might choose. The range from a very formal checkerboard design to informal patterns following the natural growth spread of the plants. Just remember that the simpler the design the easier your espalier will be to maintain.

If you've seen elaborate espalier designs you may think it's difficult to train the plant. Actually, it's fairly easy.

Begin with a young tree or shrub that has several well balanced limbs of the main trunk. In many nurseries you can buy young, pruned plants on supports which have already been established for certain growth patterns.

Set the plant in the soil six to eight inches from the wall. Fasten the desired branches to the wall using any of a variety of anchoring devices available at nursery and garden centers. Prune away branches that don't fit the espaliered design you have in mind.

One established, your espalier tree or shrub will need only a few hours of maintenance each season. The main jobs are pruning away stray branches that grow straight out from the wall, and listening to new shoots.

You can use a variety of plants for an espalier. Citrus, ligustrum, confederate jasmine, podocarpus, holly, pyracantha, and ligustrum do well throughout Florida.

An espalier plant is just as easy to establish and maintain as any other landscape plant. With just a little bit of work it will contribute beauty and distinction to your landscape throughout the year.

Lake Howell Chalks Up Pair Of Wins

Silver Hawks Shine In Spring Jamboree

By JOE DESANTIS
Herald Sports Editor
It's only spring, but Sammy Wier's Lake Howell Silver Hawks served notice they'll be tough to contend with at the Seminole County Prep Football Jamboree Thursday night.

Lake Howell's quarterback Greg Fry rolls left against the Apopka Blue Darters in Thursday night's jamboree action. Fry scored on the play helping the Patriots roll to a 14-0 win over Apopka. They dropped the second quarter 7-0 to the Fighting Seminoles.

Fighting Seminole quarterback Clarence Sipio dances away from an on-rushing Lake Brantley lineman as fullback Wayne Pace looks on. Sipio and the Seminoles split Thursday night, dropping a 12-0 decision to Lake Howell but coming back for a 7-0 win over Lake Brantley.

WIN AT BRIDGE. North's two-cub opening was forcing in the ACOL system. They were playing Chicago. Respond was positive so after asking for Aces North bid seven diamonds. The game was rubber bridge and he wanted to score his bid. West made an invidious double. He was 99 percent sure to set diamonds. It is not to be able to bid seven notrump. When I got back to Collins he rescued to seven hearts. North let it in even after East doubled. He knew that Collins had a reputation for being able to pull rabbits out of a hat and John obliged. East had to really go out of his way to give John his chance. East did take full advantage of East's naivete. East started out by ruffing the first diamond. John overruffed, led a spade to dummy and played another high diamond. East ruffed again. John overruffed, went back to dummy and played another diamond. East ruffed with the 10. John overruffed, played his ace of trumps to drop the king and queen and made the ridiculous grand slam contract.

Dizziness Problem Difficult To Treat. DEAR DR. LAMB - I would appreciate your advice on what can be done to relieve dizziness. I've been dizzy for two years. It occurs when I lie down and turn over too quickly and when I get up. I've had tests but the doctor doesn't seem to think it's anything to be alarmed about - just a slight inner ear problem. I've taken some medications but they haven't helped. So I've decided I probably will have to learn to live with the problem.

DEAR READER - Yes, it's a difficult problem to diagnose and can be difficult to treat, depending on what causes it. The first question is deciding what you mean by dizziness. Some people use the word dizziness to mean faintness. That's usually related to circulatory disorders. The condition which you may be complaining of is called vertigo. You have the illusion of movement; you either feel your body is moving when it's not, or that your environment is moving when it's not. That false sense of motion differentiates true vertigo from the large number of cases of just dizziness.

Once a dance found only in the mountains of the South, clogging is now enjoyed in many states across the country.

They Tap Fun Form Of Dancing

To look at them they might be mistaken for a group of square dancers. Many of the men wear jeans, western shirts and have colorful bandannas tied around their necks, while the women are decked out in brightly colored skirts trimmed with ruffles and lace worn over numerous frilly petticoats.

Once the dancers get on the floor one has but to listen to the rhythm made by their feet to realize they are not square dancing, but clogging. With 50 tap-shoes dancers enthusiastically beating out a rhythm to a snappy fiddle tune, it is easy to see why this form of dancing is catching on in states all over the country.

Clogging is thought to have originated in Europe with a religion that did not believe in dancing or music, according to Jacky Layne, a clogging instructor for a Central Florida group called the Pacesetters.

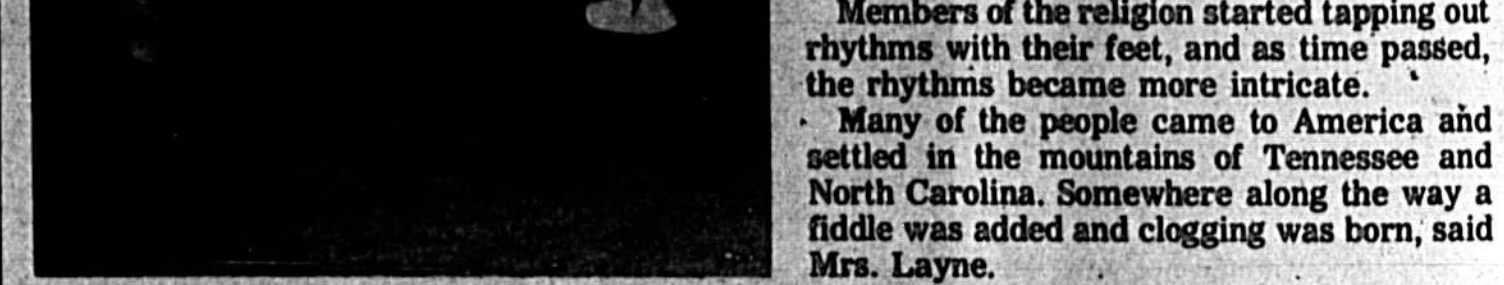

Members of the religion started tapping out rhythms with their feet, and as time passed, the rhythms became more intricate.

Many of the people came to America and settled in the mountains of Tennessee and North Carolina. Somewhere along the way a fiddle was added and clogging was born, said Mrs. Layne.

Clogging can be done with ordinary shoes but taps are usually added to produce a louder, snappier sound. Tap dancing itself grew out of clogging, said Mrs. Layne.

One unusual aspect to clogging is that a partner is not always required. There are line dances in which individuals may perform in addition to dances for couples and square dance patterns.

The Pacesetters have about 120 dancers and meet each Wednesday and Thursday evening at the Maitland Civic Center. The Kick 'Em Up Kids is a group of 30 clogging youngsters at Woodlands Elementary School in Longwood and another group may soon be forming in the Sanford-Geneva area. Anyone interested should call 349-5342.

The fast-moving rhythms of clogging are combinations of eight basic steps.

Magazine Is A Classic

Why, with publications falling like flies (e.g. Look, New Times, The National Observer), would someone want to start up a magazine devoted exclusively to classical music in America?

For Katie Couric, editor of the soon-to-be Virtuoso, it's partly to give "the ultimate fan" (as she refers to herself) a chance to inform, educate and pay a compliment.

"I don't mean to fall into jingoism," she says, "but there are a lot of first-rate American musicians. There's such mystery that surrounds the person who can get up on stage and do it — whether it be dance, theater or music."

We want to get musicians to write as many first-person accounts for the magazine as possible.

"Virtuoso is written for people who care, not about what an artist's living room looks like, but what goes on backstage, how a performer earns a reputation, program planning."

Ms. Couric, who was society editor of her local Illinois newspaper at the age of 18, expects that the subscription list will include concert-goers, conservatory teachers, students and professional musicians. Referring to the paucity of classical records and radio stations outside of metropolitan areas, she added, "We want to get to where the music-lovers are."

Theme Dictated 'Darlings' Rating

DEAR DICK: In the new movie, "Little Darlings," the rating is R. Why? There isn't any really bad profanity or nudity. JACK CARLSON, Portage, Mich.
Movies can be given R ratings—as in the case of "Little Darlings"—because of the overall theme of the film. This film deals with a couple of teenage girls (Tatum O'Neal and Kristy McNichol) having a contest at a summer camp to see which one can lose her virginity first. That's hardly proper subject matter for little kids, is it?
DEAR DICK: Could you please tell me where we could write to see why all of the TV shows have to have such loud music. We can't hear what the actors and actresses are saying. Why do they need music way out in the desert or in the mountains? REBA M. GUSTAFSON, Battle Ground, Wash.

Ask Dick Kleiner
By DICK KLEINER

In the first place, I think you exaggerate somewhat—the music is never so loud over at my house so I can't think what the actors are saying. (Maybe, on second thought, it should be.) Actually, music is intended to create a mood, and moods can be just as necessary in desert or mountain scenes as anywhere else. If you have to write to get it off your chest, write to the heads of the three networks.
DEAR DICK: Could you settle an argument for me? Did Chad Everett ever play the part of Dr. Welby's assistant? I think it was always played by James Brolin. Which doctor did Chad Everett play on TV? TERRY DORR, Joplin, Mo.
You're right. Brolin was the only assistant Robert Young, who played Marcus Welby, ever had. Everett was an entirely different doctor; his name, on "Medical Center," was Dr. Joe Gannon.

DEAR DICK: I read a book some years ago called "The Fountainhead," by Ann Rand. I have heard of a movie with this same title and wondered if they were one and the same. DOUG FARLEY, Dixon, Ill.
The 1949 film, "The Fountainhead," which starred Gary Cooper and Patricia Neal, was indeed based on the book, which was written by Ayn—no Ana—Rand. It is often seen on late night TV and, if you want to see it, ask your local station to program it.
DEAR DICK: Lately, Jamie Farr (Cpl. Klinger) on "M.A.S.H.," has been wearing a blue baseball cap with a red bill and a white letter T. This looks to me like the cap the Texas Rangers wear. But the Rangers weren't formed until the early '70s, at least 15 years after the Korean conflict. Has the "M.A.S.H." costume designer forgotten the setting, or am I mistaken? CARL T. CLUCK, Vancouver, Wash.

You must be an ex-Texan. They think Texas is the only place in the world that starts with a T. Actually, Farr (who comes from Toledo) is wearing a cap that used to be worn by the old Toledo Mud Hens of the American Association.
DEAR DICK: My teacher and I are having a discussion and disagree over the fact that Mikey, on the Life cereal commercials, died. We'd like you to clarify it for us. M.B. TUSING, Leesburg, Ind.
No, that was just a rumor. He's still alive and eats cereal every day.
DEAR DICK: Someone wrote in asking about whether Frank Albertson was in "The Enemy Below," and you said no. I must tell you you were mistaken. Indeed that marvelous actor, bon vivant and great fellow, Frank Albertson, was in the picture, with myself and Al Hedison (later David Hedison) and others. I played the executive officer on the ship, and it was in Honolulu, my first location. Enjoy your column. ALAN DEXTER, Fort Huachuca, Calif.
Thanks, Alan. I agree with you about Albertson's talent and class—but he does not present a great. His bio does not list him in "The Enemy Below," and the movie's cast list omits him, too.

Picasso Exhibit Staggers The Mind

By NORMAN NADEL
NEW YORK — "Pablo Picasso: a Retrospective" probably will bring more people to the Museum of Modern Art between its May 23 opening and its Sept. 16 closing than any one-man show in the entire history of art.

The statistics are staggering. On exhibition are nearly 1,000 creations representing all the media in which the Spanish artist worked, including oils, watercolors, pastels, drawings, ceramics, sculpture, costume design, collage, printmaking and more.

His diversity of styles is at least as abundant. A woman at the press preview was overheard telling her companion that she didn't like Picasso. "WHICH Picasso don't you like?" he replied.

Truly, the effect is that of looking into the imagination of not one artist, but a dozen. If you don't respond to his later "abstractions," try his early, evocative paintings of men and women. If his blue period isn't your cup of tea, consider his rose paintings which followed.

Chronologically, the show encompasses 78 of Picasso's 91 years. So far there is no count of his works, though the inventory of his own collection following his death in 1973 offers a hint of what it might be. Stored at his three estates in France were 45,000 paintings, sculptures, ceramics, drawings, sketches, etchings, engravings and cardboard constructions, along with other items which defy classification into specific mediums.

Uncounted are the Picassos in private collections, galleries, museums or those not yet tracked down.

To mount the show, MOMA had to clear three entire floors, which it did by lending its superlative permanent collection to a number of other museums. Naturally, it held onto its own Picassos, highlighted in part by "Guernica," painted in 1937 following bombing of the Spanish city by German aircraft in support of the Franco regime.

"Guernica" actually has been on extended loan to MOMA, because Picasso wouldn't allow it to go to Spain while Franco and his government existed. Now that the Generalissimo is dead, Spain wants "Guernica" and will get it soon.

But an even more important Picasso permanently at MOMA is "Les Femmes d'Alger," painted in 1908. If any single work of art launched the 20th century, signalled the birth of modernism and delineated the present from the past, this large, cubist oil of five nude hookers, with their African mask-like faces and angular, multi-planned bodies, is it.

MOMA is but one among 152 lenders to the exhibition, others including some of the major museums of the world, along with a number of individual collectors. The new Musée Picasso in Paris has provided more than 200 paintings, sculptures and drawings along with 100 prints. The artist's children and grandchildren have released another hundred works from their own collections.

While many of the Picassos are familiar, a gratifying number are new to the public. Thirty, for example, never have been exhibited or reproduced anywhere. Nearly 300 are being shown in America for the first time.

Its overwhelming abundance — in number of works and in diversity of styles, subjects, emotional and intellectual impact — constitutes both the virtue and the flaw of the Picasso show.

Ideally, one should go to it no less than 10 or 12 times, taking just a few rooms each visit. But nobody, except determined art lovers who live close enough at hand, will be able to do that.

For one thing, you can't just walk in whenever you feel like it. Tickets, each with a specified date and time of day, are being sold weeks in advance — just as was done for the Tutankhamen show at its several visits around the country.

However, once you're in MOMA, you can stay as long as you like. At the Tut show, visitors had to move through in a specified time.

The trouble with succumbing to the temptation to stay all day is that it is just too, too much to assimilate at one fell swoop. Ideally, art should be contemplated one object at a time, which means that if you allowed yourself as many as three Picassos a day you'd still need a year for this collection.

So the best course of action, if you can get to MOMA only once or twice in the next few months, is to spend all the time your mind and body will endure. Then, at your leisure, review the experience through the exhibition catalog.

Available at the Museum of Modern Art, 11 W. 53 St., New York, N.Y. 10019, it costs $19.95 paperback, or $45 clothbound, plus $2 and $2.50, respectively, for shipping. That's a lot for an art show catalog but it's a big book — 484 pages, 758 illustrations, of which over 200 are in color.

"Pablo Picasso: a Retrospective" is financed by a grant from IBM, with additional support from the Robert Wood Johnson, Jr., charitable trust and the National Endowment for the Arts. The French National Museums are collaborators, and the exhibition is the achievement of William

An early Picasso etching: "The Frugal Repast," dated 1904.

Rubin, MOMA director of paintings and sculpture, and Dominique Bozo, curator-in-charge of the new Musée Picasso in Paris.

Available to almost everyone will be the 90-minute film, "Picasso — a Painter's Diary," to be telecast on the PBS network on June 2. It was also supported by IBM.
