Women Embraced In County Politics?

Herald Staff Writer

Fifty-eight years ago today, the 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution was ratified and women were granted the right to vote. That's why today has been proclaimed National Women's Day. The County of Seminole had been a unit of go vermment only seven years when the women's suffrage amendment pessed. Today, the majority of voters in Seminole — 27,650 to 23,804 - are women. But a woman has not yet broken the all male hold on the county commission. And only two women in those 56 years have been elected to the school board.

elected to the bench. Many women, meanwhile, have been elected to municipal office in Seminole County over the years. Only in the cities of Sanford and Oviedo have women been denied elected service in city hall. Are women merely tolerated in local politics in Seminole today, or admitted as full

Irked School Clerk Union Reps Threaten SEA Exit

By LEONARD KRANSDORF Herald Staff Writer

Dissatisfied with the representation they are getting from the Seminole Education Association (SEA), eight members of the county clerical union including a former president want to end affiliation

Friday, members of the Seminole Educational Clerical Association (SECA) began hand-delivering letters to all of the county's cierical personnel stating their dissatisfaction. Moce letters will be delivered and mailed Monday.

Within the next two weeks a meeting will be called to very on the issue, according to Faye Wilhelm, former president of SECA. The dissatisfaction surfaced last week when, unhappy with progress SEA Executive Director Gene Grooms, who serves as SECA spokesman, was making, several SECA members asked for a meeting with school board negotiator Ernest Cowley. Cowley agreed, and within an hour, the members had regotiated a contract which called for a 4.5 per cent raise.

Since that time, Grooms has filed an unfair labor practice charge against the school board saying that the meeting was not scheduled and that the members who negotiated were not representing the members of SECA. The approximate 150-member SECA has been affiliated with SEA since 1975. "We went with SEA because we were inexperienced and thought that associating with SEA would help us," Mrs. Wilhelm a Milwee school clerk, said Saturday.

The letter being distributed to the personnel states: "The following year we affiliated with SEA and leaned more and more on Mr. Grooms to do our thinking for us as well as our talking. We now find ourselves in the very position we sought to avoid — the position of being required to put aside our own needs and coordinate our bargaining process with other groups (who are represented by Mr. Grooms). Each year we go to the bergaining table with ridiculously high demands and are met with ridiculously low counter offers. After months of baseling over things that are of no practical value to our group, we finally come to a middle ground agreement which could have been reached somer had we gone to the table in a reasonable manner in the first place. Also, each year we are told that we must prolong the bargaining process because early astilement on our part would weaken the chances of the other groups getting what they went.

SECA has deteriorated to the point that it presently consists of nothing but hargeining. If we permit it, even our hargeining sensions will be used for the good of other groups rather than for

We feel that it is time for this group to get back to thinking for curvature, to hagin hargaining in a reasonable manner for the masks of the people of our group, and to resume running our association up a majority rule basis.

Let this letter he selies that we do belond to challenge the SEA affiliation, and that in the near fedore a meeting will be held for the purpose of voting on this large."

Mrs. Witholm also said the last received many phone calls from people that have said, "if we stay with SEA another year they will drop their membership." She added that many people believe that "we feel we will be more successful if we negotiate for ourselves. We are a low-key group and really don't need all this clout."

She said the letters are also being distributed now because SEA is currently involved in a membership drive "and many people are sitting on the fence as to whether they should join or not and we want to show them there is another alternative."

Replied Greens Saturday: "It just shows the lack of understanding of those people of what it takes for any bargaining to Combes be successful in this county."

'Checkbook Politics' Rapped

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) - Robert Shevin is calling on fellow gubernatorial candidates Bob Graham and Jack Eckerd to reveal who is financing what he terms their practice of "checkbook politics." Shevin attacked Graham, a fellow Democrat, and Eckerd, a Republican, for pumping large sums of their personal fortunes into their campaigns without saying how they obtained the cash. He said they were violating the spirit of Florida's "who gave it, who got it law."

Civic Group Hosts Candidates

State and county political candidates of both parties have been invited to speak at a Candidate's Night sponsored by the Seminole League of Civic Associations at 7:30 p.m., Monday, at First Federal of Orlando, SR 436 and Palm Springs Road, Altamonte Springs.

Paula Hawkins, candidate for the GOP nomination as lieutenant governor with Jack Eckerd, said she's preparing a "household energy-saving handbook" to help Florida householders save on electric bills.

Graham: 50,000 New Jobs

Sen. Robert Graham, vying for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, has called for a change in attitude on what he says "is the vital new business of attracting at least 50,000 new jobs to the state."

No 'Glory' In Sight

Time is running out for the 95th Congress, which has distinguished itself primarily by its fascination with dismantling programs advanced by President Carter.

True, the president has had some success in coaxing foreign policy issues to approval, but his victories on domestic initiatives have been few.

The exchange of fire between the president and the Democratic leadership in both House and Senate has reduced to chaos the administration proposals on energy, tax cuts, welfare reform and hospital cost ceilings.

The difficulties the Democratic president is having with a predominantly Democratic Congress are due in part to the lack of White House political clout indicated by the popularity polls.

Conversely, however, the polls reflect what is perceived by the respondents as a deficiency in White House leadership in the president's relations with Congress.

The public, which is saddled with the burden of higher prices due to the decline of the dollar and ontinuing inflation, is not necessarily concerned with who's at fault. The public simply wants to see

It is true that the issues inherited by the president defy easy answers.

But the president has offended congressional leaders upon whom he depends. The recent firing — and subsequent rehiring — of a personal friend of House Speaker Tip O'Neill chilled interbranch relations

The Carter propensity for going public with his proposals before presenting them to Congress ncreases the strain.

Still, as noted by a White House adviser quoted in U.S. News and World Report, "There's plenty of blame to go around... Congress hasn't covered itself with glory, either."

The exhibition of congressional independence

too often ignores the public interest With a scant two months left before adjournment — and a return to the campaign trail — Congress gives little indication of turning things

Without some heretofore undemonstrated teamwork, the next Congress will face the old familiar problems — plus others still undefined, such as a new SALT treaty.

WASHINGTON - Tip O'Neill's penchant for dictating White House patronage appointments is starting to embarrass not only President Carter but also the House Speaker's Democratic colleagues in the Senate. Carter still has egg on his face from the flap that erupted when he fired O'Neill protege Robert T. Rx For Rationing

Americans have long taken for granted a level of medical care that is the envy of the world. This may now change. Congress is currently considering a proposal which will move the American health core system toward the kind of patchwork of regulation and rationing which has bedeviled the health systems of many other countries. This proposal, known as the Hospital

Cost Containment Act, is aimed at controlling the "towering inferno" (as HEW Secretary Joseph Califano has recently put it) of rising health care costs. Title I of the proposal is aimed at placing a cap on the revenues brought in by general care hospitals, either through their voluntary commitment to restrict utilization of hospital services, or through a federally mandated revenue limitation

Title II, which has been the subject of far less debate and scrutiny, would create a permanent lid on capital expenditures in

This lid, in fact, is the very stuff of rationing. It would reduce by more than half the dollars which are devoted each year to the building of new health care acilities, the remodeling and renovation of aged facilities, and the acquisition of new or replacement equipment for reasonable in amount.

Congress several years ago committed itself to the concept of local planning, and created a network of HSAs which were supposed to be the meeting ground for consumers and health care providers. Here priorities would be hammered out, resources assessed and gaps in the health care system filled. Under the planning legislation, hospitals can only make capital expenditures which can be shown to be responsive to local needs and

How would life differ under a capital expenditure lid? While the annual total of capital devoted to the health care system has been estimated variously at from $6-8 billion, the Administration proposal has been to limit such expenditures to $25 billion per year. This latter is a number which those who were responsible candidly admit was plucked from thin air without any attempt to estimate future

Cost control must be achieved, but it must be done in a sane manner, one which allows the public, through local planning igencies, as well as the providers, the dministrators, the physicians, the nurses and others in the field to have the necessary resources.

To achieve this balance, quick and easy solutions must be avoided: imposing arbitrary capital controls on hospitals. while superficially appealing, is a recipe for rationing that would do a disservice to

What is it like not to measure up to the so-called 'norm?' Ask Terry Lamond, (left) a multi-talented entertainer and recovered akoholic who said 'I don't mean to be pompous, but I'll lay a $1,000 bet with you that I like getting up better than you do... knowing what's going on in a course of a day, because of the hell of where I have been."

same common problem, and that one day at a time I got sober..." she declares. And, painful though it must be, the big-hearted lady reaches into the recesses of her mind and recalls how it all began-her early years in London and Europe and the insecurities caused by a dominant and frequently drunk mother; the husband who left her...s young insecure mother with a baby; and the musicians who introduced her to the "funny smelling cigarettes and alcohol."

She always loved music, it seems, jazz being her favorite, although her mother, an opera singer, could never understand this love of hers. "We never had jazz in our home, but through friends and the kids I went to achool with, I was exposed to it. I adored Ella Fitzgerald and Rilly Holliday. This was, of course, in the early 30s," she says.

course, in the early 30s," she says.

Then, although size had no particular ambition to get into show business, but leved to sing, she was encouraged by an uncle, who, recognizing that she was traumatized by the break-up of her marriage, felt it might help her.

"I was with this band out of Chicago—Bob Strong—for a brief time; and then I was with Buddy Rich's band, and don't sait me how it happened, because I don't even know."

It was a bewildering time for the young singer. The musicians spoke a language she didn't understand. The new "chirp" in the band didn't realise that's what girl singers were called; and the "funny smelling cigarettes" were foreign to her.

For three years she sent with Weedy Herman and Buddy Rich's band before going with Benny Goodman from about 1900 to 1951, then with Artie Shew and the Gramorcy Pivo. "They featured incredible jess artists," she says, and that's where her problem really began.
"I started doing a single and then the nightmares began happening. The people were no longer coming to see the hand with I, the girl singer, who was set of a peen with the group of municians, but they were new coming to see Terry Swepe (her name then). And it terrified me!" she

"I smoked a lot of grass...because I wanted to belong...and I didn't belong with these people. And I thought, maybe if I do what they do, I'll have a sense of belonging. Semewhere about that time, assessme responded I had stage-fright, and that I should have a And the had that drink...

"I performed reasonably well—a direager wouldn't have the difference," the receile. But the destruction had been backed in the most push of pieces—the Canadiance, the Same Souci, the Nontibes, with 13-piece bands, now found harnest working in little contail longues with three-piece bands, "which antided one at the time, because I had enough to drink and a few locks to pay my rest. And I thought that I was fine, the anys with emphasis on the thought.

But her family knew she wasn't, and she had some pretty heavy family problems. "I can't say that my family ostracized me in the true sense of the word. They stopped lending me support," she says, adding quickly that once she began to get well she had their total support. But during those years she admits, "I used to lie - say I didn't like Thanksgiving, Christmas. If the family had the traditional dinner, there would be so much tension when I came in that eventually it got to where they didn't want me around in my condition."

"Alcoholsim has a big symptom, and that a word called "denial"... What are you talking about—I don't drink too much! Why I was just a little bit drunk, so was everyone else...I don't have a drinking problem, I only drink beer...
What they're forgetting is that one 12 ounce can of beer in alcoholic content is one ounce of vodks. Three and a half ounces of Strawberry Hill equivocates once ounce of other alcohol," she informs.

"And the public today turns on that idiot bes, and it shows Jim and Joe fishing, and their fishing would not be complete unless they have that Miller High Life. And there's another commercial, 'Put a little light in your life.'
Good God Almighty! Do we have to have beer to put light in our lives? What about the God-given light?" she asks.

Then the thoughts that provoked anger are reined, and Terry admits there is a "fringe benefit" she is enjoying as a result of her problems.

"I don't mean to be pumpous, but I'll lay a $1,000 bet with you that I like getting up better than you do...and knowing what's going on in a course of a day, because of the hell of where I've been.

"When I go out and I look up and see that sun, and those trees, I remember the day I couldn't see that sen, or those trees. They were black or grey to me, because I was so sick. The world was black. I didn't want to live in this world," she admits.

But today it's different: "I'm not ANETHERIZED. Everything I feel today is REAL, and there is no greater joy than to experience that hind of gratitude for life." "People have asked me time and time again, "How can you give like you do at Resis O'Grashy's?" (Terry recently left Resis's). Well, my God! Why not! These are people that care rease's). Well, my God! Why not! These are people that are lappy and they're out for a good time, and I can give them part of that good time as a polar functioning human being—not a peer drusten sieb," she says, admitting that it does disturb her to see young people drinking to careas. In fact, that's a subject—young people drinking—that easily provokes an descional response from the lasty who shutters at the thought of assessee bearing in the direction of alcoholies. tion of alcoholism.

On 55th Wedding Anniversary...

Harris Clan Records 'First

This week will go down in history for Catharine and Fred J. Harris Sr. of 3104 Country Club Road, Sanford, who celebrated their 55th wedding anniversary - quite an accomplishment on its own.

But this week also marks the first time that the couple have had their five children all together at the same time during this marriage. The eldest had married and scattered when the youngest was born — and getting the clan together was next to impossible until now. The couple's two sons, John W. and David Paul, live in Sanford. David Paul is a Seminole High graduate, and following a military tour, he graduated from Seminole

The dau hters, Mrs. James F. (Kit Carney), Anal Calif.; Mrs. Keith (Betty) Martin, La Canada, Calif; and Mrs. John (Tommie Ann) Hudgens, Dothan, Ala., all spent the week with their parents in Sanford.

Boiger, who met informally Sunday with the beads of three unions, said today he would not return to the bargaining table, but would honor the results of compulsory arbitration.

The postal unions last week rejected a proposed three-year contract providing a 19.5 percent wage and cost of living increase that was within administration anti-inflation guidelines. The contract would raise the average worker's salary from $15,877 to $19,200 in three years. "I could not in good conscience agree to anything more at the bargaining table now," Bolger told the annual convention of the National League of Postmasters, a rural postmasters group. Bolger said postal employees "certainly have the right to reject the contract, but they don't have the right to strike."

refusing to reopen contract bargaining, today warned unions walkout lost the Postal Service customers that never returned. The Postal Service faces increasing competition from private

"Frankly, I can think of no greater way to help those who want to repeal our monopoly on first class mail than for our employees to strike," Bolger said. A strike is the "worst possible thing" that Leaders of the largest postal unions have refused to indicate could happen to the service and its employees, he said. Federal mediator Wayne Horvitz met with both sides in the dispute today, and a spokesman for the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service said the discussions were going on without a timetable. "We are trying to find some way to resolve the situation now," pokesman John Rogers said. Three of the poster unions were represented, Rogers said, but they were not meeting face-to-face with negotiators for the Postal Service. not sitting across the table from each other," Rogers said.

The letter carriers union constitution called for a walkout at midnight tonight. President Emmet Andrews of the 280,000 member American Postal Workers Union was under pressure to set a strike for midnight Wednesday - five days after union members voted to reject a three-year contract.

James LaPenta, secretary of the bargaining coordinating committee for the three unions, called Bolger's position "irresponsible" and a reflection of his "inexperience in labor to settle a labor dispute," LaPenta told a news conference late Sunday. "There's nothing in the framework of that law that prohibits him from sitting down at the table and negotiating a settlement at this time, which would be acceptable to LaPenta is an official of the 40,000-member National Post Office Mail Handlers union, which rejected the contract but did not give its officers a mandate for setting a strike deadline. That union 1-B was expected to go along the larger unions' action.

Holger is under pressure to hold down the money package in the contract for two reasons: he says it will allow him to prevent a postal rate hike for 21/2 to 3 years; and President Carter is pushing for restraint to help hold down inflation.
