Teen-ager apprehended

SANFORD — Seminole County deputies apprehended a teen-age boy who escaped from Seminole County Juvenile Court yesterday afternoon. Antonio White, 16, was in court for a hearing on a previous charge of escape from the Juvenile Detention Center in Sanford.

According to Sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough, when Juvenile Court Judge Gene Stephenson announced that he intended to remand White into custody, the boy bolted out through a side door in the courtroom.

The escape reportedly took place on White's 16th birthday. His mother was said to be in the courtroom at the time of the escape.

Sheriff's deputies and Sanford police, assisted by the sheriff's Alert-1 helicopter began a search, and located White in about 30 minutes, reportedly hiding in a wooded area off Francis Street near Sanford.

White was taken into custody and returned to the court, where Judge Stephenson immediately ordered White taken to the Juvenile Detention Center.

McDonough said in Florida, escape from a juvenile detention facility is a third degree felony, which has a maximum penalty of five years in prison.

A new detention hearing was scheduled for 1 this afternoon.

On trial, 10 years after murder

By JEFF HUNT

SANFORD — Ten years ago, on Feb. 28, Thomas Edward Jilek picked up his last fare for the Tropical Cab Co. here in Sanford. According to the Seminole County Sheriff's Office, the trainee who was only on his tenth day of work, was driving two men from Orlando to Lake Monroe at about 1 p.m. when he was shot five times in the back of head and neck and then robbed. Jilek's cab careened off of Church Street in Sanford and alammed into a tree. The two men then fled on foot said police and were never found. The only witness to come forward said that he saw the cab crash but did not hear any shots fired. The trail then grew cold as no more witnesses came forward and no weapon was ever found, said police. Now the State Attorney's Office is trying Donald Bruce Carter, 30, 1815 Palms Way, Geneva, on first degree murder in that case. If convicted, Carter faces the electric chair. □See Murder, Page 8A

The little boy sat at his window and heard the sweet pa-rum-pum-pum, pa-rum-pum-pum drawing nearer and nearer. "A parade for my birthday," he exclaimed. "And each birthday thereafter it would be the same. Drum corps, marching bands. Why, even the great bandmaster and composer John Philip Sousa came to Germantown, Pa., one year. "Just for me ... just for me." Dick Shaw used to tell himself. Six and a half decades later, Shaw somehow remains that same little boy with a sweet pa-rum-pum-pum pounding in his heart. His is a parade that really has just begun. "I guess I was seven or eight years old when I found out the Nov. 11 (Armistice Day) parade each year wasn't really just for me," Shaw now says, giving his handsome, silver mustache a tender tweak. "Yet no matter what has happened or will happen, I'll always picture myself as a little ragamuffin, tagging along on my fifth birthday with John Phillip Sousa. Whistling marching songs." And Dick Shaw smiles, puckers his lips and blows through his teeth. The tune he whistles is pure and delightful. "It's a Grand Old Flag." Let us listen. □See Shaw, Page 8A

Cut it out Proposed code tougher on high grass, weeds, junk

SANFORD — If a proposed ordinance is approved, property owners in the city will be required to better maintain the exterior of their property. The ordinance specifically deals with owners, and not residents.

The proposed City of Sanford Lot Mowing Ordinance is to be presented for discussion at Monday's city commission workshop meeting. "We've been considering such a new ordinance for quite some time," said City Manager Bill Simmons. "We have had a number of complaints that property is being impacted by unkempt areas adjacent to some homes or areas, and this new ordinance will give us more teeth with which to operate."

Simmons said the present code already gives authority for the city to cite people for failing to mow or maintain their property. "We have been doing that right along," Simmons said, "but some new wording and more power in this proposed change would be more beneficial to the people of the city."

As an example, he cited the efforts to make the U.S. Highway 17-92 corridor look better. "This will help us better accomplish this," he said.

According to the words of the new proposed ordinance, it is being enacted, "...in the interest of the health, safety and welfare of the citizens." It will, "...ensure that the owners of property be held accountable for any public nuisance existing on their property or in the adjacent right-of-way." The ordinance would pertain to both developed and undeveloped lots.

Areas of concern include weeds, underbrush, debris, junk, rubbish, trash, and hazardous trees. □See Code, Page 8A

Politico: It's the principle of the ring

By VICKI BOBBINS

SANFORD — Seminole County Commissioner Daryl McLain is embroiled in settling a five year-old legal battle over a diamond ring.

McLain, who is seeking reelection to the District 5 seat he has held for four years, has been disputing the contention of the ex-wife of his late second cousin and former business partner that a diamond ring McLain acquired at Roy Nixon's death bed should be returned to the estate.

According to the commissioner, Nixon gave him the ring as a memento. Nixon's ex-wife, Ruby Mae Musser disputes that, saying it was Nixon's intention that McLain only hold the ring.

"I was with him in the emergency room as physicians were working to save his life," McLain said. "As they dragged him away a physician handed me the ring and said 'your uncle insisted that you have this.' That's all there is to it."

McLain called his second cousin "Uncle Roy."

Nixon died in November 1990 and left his estate to Musser. Early the next year, Musser's attorney's began the process of trying to get the disputed ring back from McLain.

Two years later, McLain agreed in court to pay $500 to the estate in exchange for the ring. That payment has not yet been made.

McLain said that on as many as a dozen occasions Nixon told him that there was "no way" he wanted the ring he had worn for over 30 years to go to his ex-wife.

The commissioner noted that the issue of the ring is now a matter of principle.

"I would not drag out a matter over $500 for five years if it were

Terrorism? Accident? Speculation swirls

By TED ANTHONY

EAST MORICHES, N.Y. — From the sea off Long Island came bodies, twisted metal and excruciating bits of lives interrupted — a poetry book, a wedding invitation, photographs floating in the brine.

From around the world came sympathy and suspicion, and demands for quick answers to what caused a TWA jumbo jet to explode just after takeoff.

As 400 rescuers reluctantly abandoned already long odds of finding survivors in a jumbled mass of metal, fuel and seawater at the edge of the land, talk kept returning Thursday to one word: terrorism.

"There's very ample reason why the FBI is treating this as a potential crime scene." Gov. George Pataki told a shoreline news conference near the crash site. He didn't elaborate.

Paris-bound TWA Flight 800 exploded in a fireball Wednesday night about 14,000 feet above the Atlantic. All 212 passengers and 18 crew members aboard the Boeing 747 were killed in the nation's second deadliest air disaster.

The Coast Guard continued to search for bodies early today; at least 125 — some of them charred or mutilated — had already been recovered.

Suffolk County Medical Examiner Charles Wetli said some victims showed evidence of drowning, which means they could have been alive when they hit the water. But the same victims were probably unconscious, or near death from the blast, he said.

Most victims died instantly from the "massive blunt force" of the explosion, Wetli said. "Death literally occurred in a heartbeat."

Also today, the search for evidence beneath the water's surface was to begin. Divers with sonar equipment will try to locate the plane's flight data recorders, which are equipped to emit a sonic beacon after exposure to salt water, Pataki said.

A joint terrorism task force of the FBI and New York Police Department was investigating, but officials insisted that implied nothing about the crash's cause.

"We're not ready to say what this is at this point," said James Kalstrom, assistant FBI director in New York. The task force will work alongside the National Transportation Safety Board, which routinely investigates airplane accidents. □See Crash, Page 8A

Computers for education

TALLAHASSEE — The Legislature is donating more than 1,000 surplus computers to schools in need of educational technology.

"This is a common sense investment of one valuable resource — surplus technology — to enhance another valuable resource — our students," Education Commissioner Frank Brogan said Thursday.

Senate President Jim Scott, R-Port Lauderdale, House Speaker Peter Rudy Wallace, D-St. Petersburg, and Brogan held a news conference to announce that the 386- and 286-model computers will be available to schools that ask for them.

Schools must apply by July 29 — describing how they intend to use the computers and how they will help students — to ensure they can be delivered and installed before fall classes start, Brogan said.

The computers became surplus when the Legislature recently upgraded equipment in lawmakers' district offices. The systems, which include hard drive, keyboard, monitor and mouse, have been cleaned and repaired.

Two software companies, Computer Curriculum Corp. and Skills Bank, have agreed with the Department of Education to provide instructional software at a discount to schools that get the computers.

Two other companies — IBM and Ameridata — have agreed to donate operating system upgrades.

Judge allows more to sue

MIAMI — A judge is allowing others to join a lawsuit filed by a man who claims a Chinese herb taken as an energy booster caused his stroke two years ago.

Metro-Dade Police Sgt. Charles Nanney says he took the herb before a workout. The herb, Ma Huang, contains ephedrine, which also is found in sinus and diet medications.

Nanney sued General Nutrition Corp., of Pittsburgh, claiming that the company distributed the herb through a franchise store in Miami.

U.S. District Judge James Kehoe approved requests by Miami attorney Ervin Gonzales to let other Ma Huang users join the lawsuit and to require warnings to the public about the supplement's side effects.

General Nutrition denies it sold the supplement. It says it was made available independently by the store's operators.

Nanney also sued the supplement's manufacturer, Ultimate Nutrition Products of Plainville, Conn.

Candidate proposes drug law

INVERNESS — Citrus County Sheriff Charlie Dean, in announcing his campaign for the state Senate, proposed a new law he says would declare "civil war" on drug dealers.

Dean's idea would let people hurt by drug dealers sue them for damages.

"I've spent my life fighting drug dealers and other criminals to make them pay for their crimes," Dean, who is running as a Democrat in District 11, said Thursday. "I want to make sure average citizens can fight drug dealers and make them pay again."

Dean, a sheriff for 16 years, said his proposal would force drug dealers into civil court to pay damages and forfeit property when a lawsuit is brought by families who lose a loved one to death, injury or addiction; employees who lose a valued worker; people whose neighborhoods are ravaged by the drugs; children hurt by drug use while in their mother's womb; and any person injured by the action of a drug dealer.

The current senator, Democrat Karen Johnson of Inverness, said she will not seek reelection. Johnson, who is running for school superintendent in Citrus, said she supports Dean.

Bodies of mom, son identified

DRASCO, Ark. — Two bodies found days ago in a ravine near here have been identified as a Florida woman and her son, and a Florida man is being sought on two counts of murder, Arkansas officials said.

Arkansas State Police on Thursday identified the bodies as Kathy Howard, 46, and Miles Patrick Howard, 12, both of Jacksonville, Fla.

Julius Wayne Wade, 55, of Jacksonville, Fla., has been charged in Cleburne County in the couple's death, state police Lt. Mike Davidson in Jonesboro said in a news release Thursday.

Authorities were looking for Wade. Davidson said Ms. Howard was Wade's girlfriend.

Hikers found the decomposed bodies July 12 in a ravine in a wooded area. Each apparently had been shot in the head with a small-caliber gun.

"We still aren't sure why they were in Arkansas, but we know that Wade has some Arkansas connections that we aren't at liberty to talk about yet," Davidson said. "We've had a state police sergeant and a deputy sheriff in Florida for the last two days looking for Wade, but we haven't found him yet."

Call to Tampa station recalls threats

By LISA MOLEWA
Associated Press Writer

TAMPA — A man called a TV station hours after a jumbo jet exploded near New York, claimed he was a member of a Jihad group and said the crash "is the first of many things to come if you Americans don't stop bothering us."

But White House officials said they doubt the credibility of the Tampa call and others claiming responsibility for the explosion that killed all 230 people aboard TWA Flight 800.

But the call Thursday morning evoked thoughts of an investigation and bomb threat that closed the main University of South Florida campus during final exams after a professor surfaced as leader of the Palestinian terrorist group Islamic Jihad.

"Why would somebody call Tampa to talk about a flight going from JFK to Paris? What we're looking at here is someone looking for attention because of all the media attention surrounding the events here of the past few months," said Tom Bady, a USF visiting professor of international studies who specializes in terrorism.

In October, a former USF part-time professor, Ramadan Abdullah Shallah, surfaced as the new leader of the Palestinian terrorist group Islamic Jihad, just months after leaving on sabbatical.

Affidavits unsealed in an unrelated investigation later indicated that federal agents believe an Islamic think-tank once connected with the school was a front to bring terrorists into the country.

In the spring, the university's Tampa campus pushed up its final exams when an previously unknown group that claimed ties to Middle East terrorist groups threatened to bomb a building and kill a professor. In a one-page typewritten letter, the group demanded that "the biased, racist, liberal American press" apologize to Shallah.

The campus was quiet the day of the threat.

Tampa FBI spokesman Brian Kenel said there is "absolutely no indication at this point" that the caller Thursday is linked to that bomb threat. He said he could not discuss other details of the call or investigation.

"All we can do is confirm that we are looking into (the call)," he said.

A WTSP news producer received the call at 2:45 a.m. Thursday, vice president Mike Cavender said.

"If you have a tape recorder, start recording now," Cavender quoted the man saying. He then identified himself as a member of a Jihad group, Cavender said.

"Tonight's incident in New York is the first of many things to come, if you Americans don't stop bothering us," the caller reportedly said before hanging up. The call lasted about 15 seconds, Cavender said.

The station did not record the call and has no caller identification system to help trace it, Cavender said. They received no further contact from the man.

Lean Cuisine pies recalled

WASHINGTON — The Nestle Frozen Food Co. is recalling about 21,000 packages of a Lean Cuisine turkey and vegetable pie because the labels neglect to say that the product has eggs, to which some people are allergic, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

The recall covers all packages of "Lean Cuisine Turkey & Country Vegetable Pie" with the code 6159NH P-695 on the side. The product, made in Solon, Ohio, was sent to stores in 18 states.

Customers with egg allergies should return the product to the store where it was bought.

The company has provided a toll-free number to answer customer questions about the recall: 1-800-225-1180. People also may call a USDA hotline at 1-800-535-4555.

Chiles kicks off new effort to raise awareness for kids

By PAT LEWIS
Associated Press Writer

TAMPA — Gov. Lawton Chiles urged those devoted to the cause of children to join his new yearlong campaign for preventive care for youngsters from birth to age 5.

Florida wouldn't worry so much about school dropouts, juvenile delinquents, welfare spending and overcrowded jails, if children were mentally and physically prepared, well fed and supported by their parents, he said.

"Imagine the kind of state we would have," Chiles said Thursday announcing a statewide campaign called "Help Them Thrive, Birth to Five." That's considered the critical period of growth and development for youngsters.

"We would not have to be funding these kinds of things we are funding now and could pour the resources back in."

Chiles said children's issues are the focus of the rest of his term which ends in 2 1/2 years.

"You are already soldiers in our cause, I want you to be soldiers, evangelicals. We know the program will work," the governor told about 300 civic leaders, child care workers and volunteers.

During his presentation at a YMCA in Tampa, Chiles told about three dozen 3 and 4 year olds about rascally Brer Rabbit outsmarting Brer Fox in the fairy tale Uncle Remus, the story of a former slave and beloved servant of a southern family.

The children attend the YMCA child development center. It's open daily from 6:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. for children ages six weeks to 5 years to provide care, teaching and activity for youngsters of working parents.

A study by the Florida Developmental Disabilities Council identified spacing pregnancies, prenatal care, immunization and parenting as major factors in producing healthy children.

Former neighbor arrested in Panhandle church arson

MARIANNA — Racial epithets were scrawled on the walls of the former home of a man charged with setting fire to a tiny black church in the Florida Panhandle, state investigators said.

John David Knowlton, 57, who once lived next to the church in a residential area of Marianna, was arrested Thursday on a second-degree arson charge and lodged in the Jackson County Jail, said Maj. John Dennis of the Jackson County Sheriff's Office.

Dennis said a court appearance would be scheduled today for Knowlton, who complained to police three years ago about noise at the Evangelist Temple Church of God in Christ next door to the home he rented.

The fire at the church last month did $300 worth of damage to a pew before burning itself out. None of the 20 church members was in the 1,500-square-foot building at the time.

Racial slurs including the word "nigger" were found scrawled on a wall in Knowlton's former residence next door to the church, said investigators with the state Fire Marshal's Office.

"The arrest serves notice that we will not tolerate the burning of churches," state Treasurer and Fire Marshal Bill Nelson said in a news release.

The Fire Marshal's Office and Florida Department of Law Enforcement had offered a $5,000 reward for information leading to an arrest in the church fire.

It hadn't been determined Thursday if a confidential informant who worked with investigators would collect the reward, said Don Pride, a spokesman for Nelson.

Knowlton, a lawn-mower and small-engine repairman, rented the house for about eight years before moving to Greenwood, 20 miles north of Marianna, last month, according to an affidavit by John Hatcher, an investigator in the Fire Marshal's Office.

Hatcher said Knowlton complained to police in October 1983 that the church "played music and beat drums" until late at night, but Pastor Delano Reed agreed to muffle the drums and no charges were filed.

When questioned, Knowlton admitted being at the church June 11 but denied having anything to do with the fire, which occurred later that day, the affidavit said.

A resident of the 1000 block of W. Fifth Street reported that on July 13 someone got into her house through a window and stole a television set and VCR worth $750.

A woman in the 600 block of E. 10th Street reported that on July 10 her grandson fought with someone breaking into her home. The suspect escaped and the man was treated at a hospital for minor injuries.

A resident of the 1000 block of Roseberry Lane reported that she lent her car to a friend that never returned it.

A man reported that he let a friend drive his car and when it was returned, two wedding bands had been stolen.

A resident of the 100 block of Exeter reported that someone stole his wallet from his car while it was parked in a parking in the 3000 block of Orlando Avenue on July 13.

A Sanford man reported someone stole a car stereo from his unlocked car while it was parked at his home in the 100 block of 19th Street.

Police reported finding a stolen 1981 brown Oldsmobile at the corner of W. 10th Street and Osander on July 13.

Police also reported finding a 1983 Buick at W. Seventh Street and Jessamine.

The manager of Just For Feet reported that on July 12 someone called and reported that there was a bomb in the store. Everyone was evacuated but no bomb was found.

Police reported that someone called the Sanford Police Department and said that there was a bomb in the Barn. Everyone was evacuated but no bomb was found.

Forensic team investigates graves

By ROBIN ESTYAN
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON — Many have been shot. Hundreds of others slashed or hacked to death. All were buried in makeshift graves by killers who probably assumed they would never be held accountable.

They didn't count on Dr. Robert H. Kirchner sifting through the remains. He is part of a team that in the past 10 years has become the chief investigator of killings in countries such as Bosnia, Rwanda and Guatemala.

Kirchner, who returned from Bosnia on Monday and headed to El Salvador Wednesday, said digging up bodies isn't the terrifying part.

"It's more trying to contemplate what goes through someone's mind that allows them to do this kind of thing," he said.

Since its founding in 1986, the Boston-based Physicians for Human Rights has conducted forensic investigations of mass killings.

Like detectives working a crime scene, volunteer teams organized by PHR comb the sites, trying to discover how the victims died and, if possible, match names to bodies. They then turn over the evidence to other investigators, hoping it will lead to the prosecution of those responsible.

The work led to indictments in killings in Argentina, Rwanda and Honduras, said PHR, which raises the money for the projects from private donors and government grants.

Earlier this year in Rwanda, a team uncovered 400 bodies — about 200 of them children — in a grave that measured only about 100 feet wide by 20 feet deep. Most of them died from machete wounds.

It was the largest mass grave ever exhumed for evidence purposes, PHR officials said.

A team of PHR scientists from the United States, Guatemala, Chile and Denmark is now in Ceraska, Bosnia-Herzegovina, conducting autopsies on some 60 bodies pulled from a mass grave near Srebrenica. Many of the victims had their hands tied behind their backs and were shot at close range.

Investigators from the International War Crimes Tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands, are seeking evidence against war crimes suspects, including Bosnian Serb political leader Radovan Karadzic and Gen. Ratko Mladic.

Without the exhumations, bringing war criminals to justice would be far more difficult, said Graham Blewitt, the tribunal's deputy prosecutor.

"This sort of evidence provides substantial corroboration of what the witnesses said occurred," he said.

Identifying victims and finding the graves are the most difficult parts of the investigations, Kirchner said. Witnesses may not remember the exact location of the graves.

Long steel rods help scientists detect soft spots and bones in the ground. Sometimes they sniff the poles to pick up the scent of decaying flesh. Mounds in the earth or a change in the vegetation provide other clues.

In a slow, laborious process, scientists remove the bodies from the grave using trowels, paintbrushes and small picks. The archaeologists also search for artifacts, including shell casings and clothing.

Until the mid-1980s, prosecutors looking for evidence of human rights abuses were forced to rely almost entirely on witness and victim testimony. That changed in 1984, when Kirchner and a group of several other scientists exhumed graves in Argentina following the overthrow of the military junta.

Five former junta leaders were later convicted, based in part on the forensic evidence.

"It's one thing for somebody to provide testimony of victims evidence."

Even if no one is prosecuted, the evidence establishes a historical record, said Clyde Snow, an Oklahoma-based anthropologist and consultant to PHR who investigated killings in Argentina and El Salvador.

Congress to complete welfare overhaul

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Congress, with the mixed blessings of the White House, is moving to end six decades of guaranteed federal aid for the poor and require welfare recipients to go to work.

The House, one step ahead of the Senate, voted 256-170 Thursday to approve a welfare overhaul plan that would combine current federal welfare programs into a single block grant to states, put time limits on benefits and deny assistance to legal aliens. Republicans said it would save nearly $60 billion over six years.

The Senate started work on its own version Thursday and planned to complete its bill early next week. Republican leaders hoped to have a final bill on the president's desk before Congress leaves for its August recess.

"This is the beginning of the end to the lengthy debate about the current welfare system," said Senate Finance Committee Chairman William Roth, R-Del.

President Clinton, who took office promising radical reform of the welfare system, has vetoed two previous GOP bills, saying they were too harsh on the poor or were attached to other unacceptable legislation.

This time, Clinton has been more positive about the legislation, but the administration did not rule out another veto, saying it is still unhappy about provisions that bar aid to legal immigrants and could limit food stamp benefits for some. "It still is very short of what we need in order to be satisfied," White House spokesman Mike McCurry said. "In recent weeks he's made an awful lot of noise about his renewed commitment to welfare reform," said House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas. "We will get him the bill. I believe by the first week in August."

GOP presidential hopeful Bob Dole said it was his party that was responsible for moving the legislation. "Thanks to Republican leadership, today America took a giant step toward restoring self-respect and self-reliance to the millions of Americans trapped in our broken welfare system," he said in a statement.

A major obstacle to ultimate passage was removed Thursday when the Senate, like the House before it, separated welfare from GOP plans to revamp Medicaid.

"We hope that removing this 'poison pill' from welfare reform is a breakthrough that shows that the Republican leadership seriously wants to pass bipartisan welfare reform this year," the administration said in a statement.

Under the GOP bill, able-bodied parents would have to get jobs within two years of enrolling in welfare programs and there would be a five-year lifetime limit for benefits. States could give hardship exemptions in 20 percent of those cases.

A person still could receive benefits, probably at a reduced level, if he or she was in a job training program or working only part-time. The states would determine such rules.

No federal funds could be used to provide additional benefits to mothers who have more children while on welfare and states would have the option to deny benefits to unwed mothers under 18.

The main Democratic objection was to language that would ban states from using block grant funds for noncash assistance to children whose families have reached the five-year time limit. "In my book, this is Draconian. We shouldn't cut and run on our poor kids," said Sen. Jim Exon of Nebraska, ranking Democrat on the Budget Committee.

Senate Republicans defeated, 53-46, a Democratic alternative that would have entitled poor children to benefits even if their parents hit the welfare time limit.

In the House, lawmakers defeated, 258-168, a bipartisan measure supported by the White House that would have limited savings to $53 billion, by eliminating the option of food stamp block grants and providing more protections for children.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., sent House Republicans a letter strongly discouraging them from voting for the bipartisan substitute. "It is critical that Republicans maintain the upper hand on this issue," he said.

Republicans stressed that they had added $4 billion to boost child care funding and given states the flexibility to ensure that no children would suffer if their parents lost benefits.

But Sen. Patrick Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., said that cutting off aid to children when their parents lose benefits "invites the kind of calamity that we may have to experience to come to our senses."

The House approved an amendment that would limit lifetime food stamp eligibility to three months for single, able-bodied people ages 18 to 50 who have no dependents and who fail to work at least 20 hours a week. The vote was 239-184.

Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman said the amendment would hurt people who lose their jobs and need temporary aid while they seek new employment.

The Senate also accepted an amendment by Sen. John Ashcroft, R-Mo., that would require states to deny benefits to welfare recipients who fail random drug tests.

Spend that money wisely

Hurrah! Property values are going up and the money is becoming available to make the long-anticipated development of the Lake Monroe waterfront.

Though we have been waiting literally decades for the time and money to be right for the projects, we should be sure the decisions made make the best use of the money when we make changes on the waterfront.

Because the dollars are finally available to make the first dreams realities, there is no reason to rush out and gobble up the first idea that is thrown the way of the Community Redevelopment Association Board and the Waterfront Master Plan Steering Committee.

We should be sure not to behave like the lottery winner who, pleased with his newfound wealth, goes out and spends every last penny on the shiny trinkets and flimsy gadgets that catch his eye.

The needs of the community as a whole (and not just the whims of a powerful few) should be the primary consideration when considering the plans which have been presented.

Past meetings have produced ideas from the ridiculous to the sublime; from a park with no recreational facilities to a paved and landscaped walkway along Seminole Boulevard; from nude dancing establishments to a quaint Victorian shopping district.

Those who make the final decision should do so based on careful planning and study not on fly-by-night schemes sold by those outside the community who think they might know what is best for our community.

The Sanford waterfront is an essential element of this community. It is a resource to be cherished, not a bauble to be exploited.

We hope the plans are carefully laid and executed.

We know that if they are, the Sanford waterfront will serve the community well and help bring Sanford the recognition she so richly deserves.

It has taken so very long to get this far, we hope the plans are not poorly executed because the money is finally in hand.

Health benefits for gays

I still believe that recognition of common-law gay (same-sex) marriages by Walt Disney Corporation undermines the institution of marriage.

No employer is required by law to provide a health care benefit to any employee. I defy anyone, including Martha Wells, to prove such a law exists. The premium paid by an employer for employee health care is a fringe benefit, plain and simple.

No one, including myself, objects to the health benefits received by payroll employees of any business, including Walt Disney Corporation. The payroll employee can be male, female, heterosexual, lesbian or homosexual and no one will object. Extend this health care benefit to spouses (husbands and wives) and children of licensed married employees and no one will object. Try to cover partners of domestic relationships of any kind (common-law marriages) and there will be objections by a lot of people, including employers. How in the world do you distinguish between couples just sharing expenses and couples in a long-term relationship?

The risky expenditure of funds to give a health care fringe benefit to anyone other than payroll employees and their families (spouses and children of legally married employees) tends to undermine the institution of marriage and traditional family values.

McCaffrey's words are un-military

Washington--The business suit and civilian trappings fool no one. Barry R. McCaffrey, the latest of the so-called "drug czars," is still General McCaffrey. His bearing, the snap-to deference of his aides, his clipped language--all combine in a way that almost makes an old draftee want to shout the "tenHUT" warning that top brass is on the scene.

But manner aside, the words over a brown-bag lunch in McCaffrey's office, are decidedly un-military. No key targets, no grand strategies, no talk of final victories.

He won't even use the familiar "war on drugs" terminology. "That kind of language suggests you're going to go out and defeat an enemy and then be able to go on to other problems," he says. "This is like cancer. You've got to think in terms of five-year survival rates, and you've got to deal with the pain as well as with the other costs."

Is this his way of warning an anxious America not to expect much improvement in the fight against illicit drugs?

Not at all, says McCaffrey. It's merely a reminder that the solutions do not lie principally along such warlike lines as crop eradication or interdiction or apprehension. "I am absolutely certain that if we get involved in a systemic way--and stay at it over time--we will see an almost immediate and steady improvement in the manifestation of abuse of drugs in America. There's no question that will happen."

The solutions do not lie principally along such warlike lines as crop eradication.

If it does happen, he is convinced, it will be because we do for drug abuse what we did for cigarette smoking: make it socially unacceptable and thereby reduce it primarily to a health problem.

"I guess about the worst kind of argument you can get into is whether you think we ought to be spending more money on prisons and law enforcement than on drug treatment. The answer is 'no,' of course, but it's also an irrelevant response, because if you want to stop putting so many people in jail, the answer isn't to decrease the prison budget and put it in treatment. It's to start doing drug education and prevention as your first priority while you continue to do law enforcement. What you'll find is that over the space of a few years you'll have fewer youngsters ending up in prison. What I'm saying is, if you don't like crime, you ought to love drug education and treatment programs aimed at those in the criminal justice system."

But aren't most of those in the criminal justice system there primarily because of efforts to prevent drug use? Couldn't we solve a lot of the problem, perhaps including a good chunk of the associated violent crime, by the simple expedient of legalizing drugs?

Says McCaffrey: "I would offer as a hypothesis that the reason drugs are wrong and dangerous is not that they're illegal but that they're destructive of a person's physical, emotional and moral strength, and also of their families. That central assertion also applies to alcohol. Nicotine may be more of a health problem, but these other drugs are dangerous because they pull you apart physically and emotionally."

The laws against fornication

Boston--I suppose you could say that Amanda Smieck got off easy.

After all, when Agnes Taylor gave birth out of wedlock she got 12 lashes "in the Public View of the People." All Amanda got was a suspended sentence and a $10 fine.

Of course Agnes lived in 17th century Maryland and Amanda in 20th century Idaho. But under the rule of Gem County prosecutor Douglas Varie, it's getting harder to tell the difference.

This rural county has dusted off a 1921 law making sex out of wedlock a crime. They have begun using it as a weapon in the war against teenage pregnancy.

Amanda was seven months along when a note was brought to her high school classroom in Emmett asking her to go down to the city police station and talk to a detective. At the time, she says, "I thought someone had gotten into trouble."

This was the phrase we once used to describe girls who got pregnant. But of course Amanda had no idea that she, like a half-dozen other unwed teenage parents-to-be including her boyfriend, would be found guilty of "fornication."

Now, however, the resurrection of Idaho Code 19-8603 has become a signal of where we are headed in a desperate attempt to do something, anything, about teenage pregnancy. Back where we started from.

When the laws against fornication were established, sex outside of marriage was considered a crime against the community morals. The only difference is that today it's being used to prosecute a crime against the community coffers.

Would Amanda and the other teens have been arrested just for "fornicating"? Of course not. A full 76 percent of females have sex while they are teenagers. The average American today starts having sex eight years before marriage.

Would Amanda have been arrested if she had chosen to have an abortion? Surely not. Though that choice isn't easy in a state that had nine abortion providers at last count.

Would she have been prosecuted if she had money to pay for her own medical care? Unlikely. According to newspaper reports, Amanda and most of the others were arrested after they applied for state assistance.

If "fornication" were a crime applied evenhandedly, the Gem County Courthouse would be a very busy place in a rather empty town. But this story is less about sex than about money.

I have no doubt that 16-year old girls like Amanda are too young to be mothers. Too young for themselves. Too young for their babies. But the latest rash of public policies being randomly tested seem less concerned with their immaturity than with their poverty.

This was the phrase we once used to describe girls who got pregnant.

Consider the statutory rape laws also being dusted off in places from Montana to California. How many of them are truly focused on coercion, the exploitation of young girls by older men? And how many on welfare costs? Indeed in Gem County, this prosecutorial hotbed, there are over-18 boyfriends being charged as "sex offenders" with under-18 girlfriends. Will they, under "Megan's Law," have to register wherever they move and be kept out of their child's schoolyard?

Kristin Lukar, who has written about politics of teenage pregnancy in "Dubious Conceptions," offers up another historic warning about "the symbolic use of these archaic laws to demonize and punish the poor."

"We've done dreadful things to young women because they seemed to be a threat," she says. What's toxic about teenage pregnancy is that it combines a threat to the public purse with a threat to morality. That's the same lethal combination that earlier this century, sent sexually active poor girls to "reform schools." And had welfare mothers sterilized.

Today we talk about teenage mothers in wildly conflicted ways. We talk about them as "children having children" and as calculating females who make reproductive decisions based on AFDC policy. We talk about them as a cause of poverty and forget how often they're the result.

Will we now reactivate the laws against fornication that exist in 17 states and the District of Columbia to make them all criminals as well?

Amanda Smieck and her infant baby, Tyler, are living at home now with her single mother, Jody, a woman who brings home about $700 a month, earning an extra 40 cents an hour on the night shift. Amanda's boyfriend, who has been in and out of foster care, is living in a Boise shelter.

But Gem County has done one thing for Tyler's parents: It's given them each a rap sheet.

Get well, Newsmen

Anyone who has been around Sanford for an appreciable time must have seen the Florida license plate which reads "NEWSMAN."

It belongs to a newsmen named Gary Taylor.

NEWSMAN isn't Taylor's vanity plate. It's his pride plate.

Ever since Taylor, 44 graduated from Sanford Seminole High School, he has been a proud newsmen. First as a teenage sports editor for the Sanford Herald, and for the past 23 years a reporter for the Orlando Sentinel.

If you don't love Gary Taylor, you simply don't love. Gary is a big and gentle man with a very huge appetite for life. He has thousands of friends and many an enemy. He is an especially loving husband and father.

Today, WE all are pulling and praying for Gary Taylor. Monday on Park Avenue in the city he loves and has lived all 44 years of his life, after being struck broadside on the driver's side door, Gary needed to be cut from his vehicle and transported by ambulance to Orlando Regional Medical Center. He remained until Thursday in the Intensive Care Unit after surgery to remove his spleen and repair several broken ribs.

Bonnie Taylor, Gary's wife of 10 1/2 years, prays deeply that Gary can once again cradle their 13-month old son, Charles Samuel Xavier Taylor.

"Gary's the most magnificent daddy I've ever seen," Bonnie said. "He feeds, bathes and changes Charlie's diapers. Because I work part-time, Gary is with Charlie for long stretches and he loves every second of it. We had to wait three years to adopt Charlie. But the wait has been worth it."

"I just wish Gary was holding Charlie now ... but they won't let us bring him to the hospital yet. Not just yet."

To be sure, Newsmen Gary Taylor has a lot to talk about with Charlie. About baseball, railroads, presidents, kittens and newspapers. Few men have the varied interests Gary has, which explains why he almost always has a smile on his face. Here's a man who has never been bored.

And talk about loyalty. Baseball star Tim Lincecum knows better than anyone how loyal a true friend Gary is. Ever since he helped coach Raines as a Little Leaguer, Gary has stayed in close touch. He even handles fan mail for Raines.

Gary's Sanford home has a Tim Raines Hall of Fame with bats, hats, balls, uniforms and picture cards.

Gary's obsession for baseball cards, especially ones of Raines, put him in a ticklish situation five or six years ago.

Seems Gary was intent on getting some cards that were issued in ice cream packages, and decided to visit one of those 24-hour supermarkets one night to make a purchase. The cards were appealing as was the ice cream.

As Gary stood at the checkout area with his ice cream and cards, a couple of armed robbers made a hit on the place. Gary survived the holdup with his cards, ice cream and a good news story scoop.

Get well soon, friendly Newsmen.

Something old, something new, something in chrome

By CHARLES J. HANLEY

ATLANTA — Something old and endangered. Something new and encroaching. Lots of red, white and blue.

When the world tunes in tonight, the stadium spectacular that opens history's biggest Olympics will offer a grand tradition on its way out, some spartan commercialism on its way in and a messy, brassy celebration of America and of global brotherhood.

The inaugural ceremony, starting at 8:30 p.m. EDT, is scheduled to last almost four hours. And that's the problem with tradition.

Almost half that time will be taken up with the "Parade of Nations," the customary professional of athletes and officials at Atlanta's Olympic Stadium — this time more than 10,000 from 197 nations, from Afghanistan to Zimbabwe.

The numbers have become so unwieldy, the parade so time-consuming, the stadium infield so jam-packed with delegations that planners are looking for a way out.

"This may be the last time that athletes march into the stadium," said Don Mischer, the Hollywood producer who is staging tonight's ceremony.

Organizers of the 2000 Olympics in Sydney, Australia, are considering simply opening the ceremony with the athletes seated in the stands, Mischer told reporters Thursday.

And today may be the first time the world gets to see a gleaming display of a sponsor's products in the midst of musical tributes to Olympic ideals.

A fleet of 30 chrome-plated

Silverado pickup trucks — each with a bright blue "CHEVROLET" painted on the tailgate — will roar onto the field as platforms for spotlights illuminating hundreds of cheerleaders and dancers who perform a show-stopping prime-time number. "Atlanta's Welcome to the World."

The trucks sometimes face inward toward the field, sometimes circle in convoy around the stadium track.

not a matter of principle," he said. "It's simply this: she's wrong and I'm right."

McLain said he has refused to pay the $500 until the financial dealings of the estate are cleared.

"It has come to my attention that the assets of the estate are not being handled properly," he said, noting that the debts (mostly doctor and hospital bills) accrued by the estate vastly outweigh the assets.

"I don't want to see assets going into the estate while claimants remain unpaid," he said.

McLain said there have been several "irregularities" in the way the estate has been handled and he plans to discuss with his attorney the possibility of having the state attorney's office look into the matter.

"It's a nasty situation," McLain said. "But it's a matter of principle. If I was embarrassed about it, I would have settled it quietly five years ago and be done with it, but I don't want people to go unpaid."

Musser and her attorney Lawrence Borne could not be reached for comment.

Murder

The sheriff's office says Carter was one of the passengers in the cab and that it was him who pulled the trigger to the .25 automatic pistol that killed Jilek. Ed McDonough, public information officer for the sheriff's department, said that the charges came about because, when deputies followed up on the case, old witnesses finally agreed to come forward to say that they saw the six foot, 300 pound defendant leaving the scene of the murder. They had been scared to testify before that.

"He had made threats that if they ever said anything, he would get them," McDonough said.

The trial is now in its third day and expected to wrap up on Wednesday of next week. That is if nothing else interferes with the case. Yesterday the trial was postponed because jail officials had not given Carter his medication to combat anxiety, and the attorneys were afraid that he would have an attack.

Before the postponement, Judge O.H. Eaton Jr. heard from several witnesses, one of whom said that Carter referred to killing the cab driver and sold him a .25 automatic, just like the one police have identified as the weapon that killed Jilek.

"I'll do you like I did that cab driver," Carter allegedly said while wrestling around with a friend in the front yard of Russel Mitchell's home in 1986. In addition, Carter allegedly told Mitchell that the gun was trouble when he tried to get the gun back.

Deputy Gregory Sica, of the sheriff's department, also testified that during an interview with Carter in 1993, the defendant said that he did not think that he killed Jilek but that he could have been high on prescription drugs and not have remembered it. Doctors had Carter on lithium and another psychoactive drug at the time for a mental disorder.

Carter was arrested on July 25, 1994 as he was serving time in the state prison in Zephyrhills and has been held ever since in the John E. Polk Correctional Facility because of delays requested by the defense. The prosecution only has 180 days to get prepared for court.

Jilek who was 44 at the time of the murder, had just moved from Tampa after moving there from Chicago.

Shaw

The auditorium in Seminole County is filled with hospital patients, most of them elderly. Many are unable to walk. Some are without sight. Still, there's a certain excitement and joy. They are about to hear a concert by a man known as The Whistler, Dick Shaw.

Whistler Shaw is wearing a fine straw hat, a brilliant red bow tie and a red-and-white striped jacket.

His audience begins to applaud before he even begins a medley of songs from "The Music Man." Shaw notices that one man, in a pod-type wheelchair, is painfully scrunched up and seemingly unable to lift his head.

So Shaw immediately decides to whistle into the heart of this man ... to somehow entertain him, to somehow make him smile.

And as if magic, the man responds. Not only does he lift his head, but he claps his hands and sings along with Shaw's music.

"What a feeling, what a joyful feeling," Shaw says.

"I'm very, very fortunate and grateful to possess such a power to bring joy to others ... and to myself."

In his darkest hours, as a teenager during the Depression, as a Gunner's Mate on the Normandy Beach Landings, and as a recent heart attack victim, Shaw whistled a happy song.

"My family and I endured tough times," Shaw says. "We went through some long, hard years. I was on a troop ship in the Second World War and wondered if I'd ever come home again. And my heart attack took my breath away so that I couldn't whistle as well or as often as I liked; but I worked and whistled myself back again."

"The truth is that it's hard for me to imagine a better way to forget your worries and be not afraid ... Whistlers are almost always pretty happy about themselves despite their problems."

Now and then, Shaw says, he has heard a complaint.

"I remember years ago when I worked in an engraving plant and I'd be whistling away all the time. I had a few co-workers who asked if I could do anything but whistle. I'd start to stop off key. They would say, 'go ahead and whistle.'"

In recent years, Shaw's whistling has not only delighted audiences and earned him trophies at the National Whistler's Convention in Louisburg, N.C., but brightened the lives of hundreds of senior citizens, hospital patients, and civic groups throughout Central Florida.

Shaw gives his time abundantly and is in constant demand. His repertoire ranges from Eine Kleine Nachtmusik to the Phantom of the Opera.

Shaw's reward comes in the smiles on faces both young and old. Sometimes he gets $50 for an appearance, sometimes a hat is passed and his take is $25. Usually, he whistles for free. "If a group has the money and wants to pay me a little something, fine," he says. "If they don't, that's fine, also. The pleasure for me hasn't anything to do with money."

On a rainy, gray Tuesday at his home in Apopka, Shaw is toying with a G-gauge model train, and (of course) whistling.

He is amused also by a conversation about angels.

"Blow, Gabriel, blow," he unashamedly whistles. Do the angels whistle in heaven, Shaw is asked.

"Can't imagine they don't," he replies. "They're in heaven, aren't they?"

Regarding grass, a limit of 12 inches in height from the ground would be considered the maximum allowed. For underbrush, weeds and/or wild growth, the limit is 18 inches.

The ordinance also states, "It shall be the owner's responsibility to remove any debris, tires, rubbish, junk, trash, cans, tires, paper, furniture, building material or appliances which have been dumped or placed on his or her property, regardless of whether the owner was responsible for dumping or placing those items on the property."

The ordinance states that such overgrowth may constitute a menace to life, property and public health, possibly creating a fire hazard or providing a nest and breeding ground for sandflies, mosquitos, rats, mice, snakes, and other types of pests and vermin.

The document says violators will be considered guilty of a misdemeanor and punished according to law.

A representative of the city finding violations, will file reports, which will result in a notice sent to the property owner if he or she can be located, or posted on the property. Following notification of a violation, a specific time will be set during which the property must be brought into suitable condition, or the property owner or his agent appears at a hearing before the city commission.

If the commission determines that it is a valid violation and the property is not improved, the city will take it upon itself to clean up the property, after which the cost of such cleaning will be charged against the property owner with a specific number of days in which to make reimbursements.

If the cost has not been reimbursed as required, the city would have the authority to place a lien against the property. A second violation will include a $100 fine, with a third incident penalized by a $200 fine.

The proposed ordinance is scheduled for discussion during the work session meeting of the Sanford City Commission, Monday, July 22, beginning at 5 p.m., in the city manager's conference room of Sanford City Hall.

Simmons said if agreement is reached on the ordinance without significant changes, the commission could decide to have it brought up for a vote at the regular meeting, although it is not presently listed on the agenda.

The regular meeting of the city commission will begin at 7 p.m. in the commission chambers.

Crash

There was some speculation that a surface-to-air missile, perhaps fired from a boat off the coast of Long Island, could have brought the plane down. But some officials sought to dispel that possibility.

"There's no American official with half a brain who ought to be speculating on anything of that nature," said White House spokesman Mike McCurry. "There's no concrete information that would lead any of us in the United States government to draw that kind of conclusion."

Asked about reports that radar detected a blip merging with the jet shortly before the explosion, something that could indicate a missile hit, a federal law enforcement official said that radar records were being reviewed. "But there still could be other explanations for the blip; it's not necessarily an object," the official said.

President Clinton warned of a rush to judgment. "I'm determined that we will find out what happened," he said, "but I want to urge all the American people not to jump to unwarranted conclusions about the tragedy."

The crash turned East Moriches, an eastern Long Island fishing town, into a jungle of emergency vehicles and TV trailers. The Coast Guard station, one of the nation's smallest, became a makeshift morgue and staging area for rescue and salvage efforts.

The Coast Guard Cutter Juniper spent Thursday trolling waters slick with burned oil. Unlike its companions, it found no bodies, only pieces of the plane and passengers' personal effects, which were pulled aboard. Among them: a waterlogged copy of the Norton Anthology of Modern Poetry, a captain's cap, a photo of a bride and groom.

The true evidence of destruction sat on the Juniper's decks: the jet's twisted tail, a plane sink and burned seats, broken bits of paneling and chunks of the 747's wall. A 30-foot section of wing also was salvaged, the NTSB said.

Trauma centers were set up at Paris' Charles de Gaulle Airport, where the plane would have arrived, and at Rome's Leonardo da Vinci Airport, the planned final destination of some passengers.

The Red Cross counseled passengers' families at New York's Kennedy Airport and rescuers at the crash site.

"They have to know they're not expected to get over this right away," said Christine Wood, a Red Cross worker.

Coming on the eve of the Olympics, the crash cast a pall on athletes, organizers and tourists in Atlanta, where security measures were already tightened in advance of the Games, which begin tonight.

Appleton, Wis., high school teacher Irene Renee, who had fumed while she waited in Chicago on Wednesday afternoon because her plane to New York was delayed, missed connections to the ill-fated flight.

"Thank God for bad weather!" she said Thursday, recalling how she finally got to Kennedy Airport four hours behind schedule, too late to make the plane for Paris.

"Maybe it just wasn't my time," said Mrs. Renee, 51. She held up her ticket for the doomed flight and said she was getting on another TWA plane to Paris.

The crash was the second major airline disaster in slightly more than two months, following the May 11 Florida Everglades crash of a ValuJet DC-9 that killed all 110 people aboard.

The deadliest air disaster in U.S. history came in 1979, when a DC-10 crashed on takeoff at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport, killing 273.

Associated Press reporters Judie Glave, Larry Neumeister, Pat Milton, Richard Pyle, Tim Sullivan and Katherine Roth contributed to this report.

FDA begins public debate on abortion drug

By LAURAN HERRGARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Eight years after the world's first abortion drug was introduced in France, scientific experts are considering whether the U.S. government should let American women choose RU-486 over surgical abortion.

Abortion providers who want the Food and Drug Administration to approve RU-486 say the drug has been used by 200,000 European women with only rare complications.

Abortion foes argue that RU-486 could make women bleed to death or that it could fail to work, leaving them to bear malformed children.

Outside scientists were to hear the conflicting stories today and make a recommendation to the FDA. The FDA isn't bound by the experts' advice but usually follows it — and has promised a quick decision, meaning Americans could know by year's end if RU-486 will be available at U.S. abortion clinics.

"Many women will be very glad there is a medical option for terminating pregnancy," said Dr. Susan Allen of Advances in Health Technology, a Washington-based firm that plans to distribute RU-486 and train doctors to use it.

Countered Dr. Donna Harrison, an obstetrician working with the National Right to Life Committee: "Our nation is being misled" about RU-486's risks.

Almost all of the nation's 1.3 million abortions are surgical, although doctors last year began publicizing the fact that a drug already on the market to treat cancer — methotrexate — can be used to induce abortion.

However, RU-486 would be the nation's only FDA-approved abortion drug. While anti-abortion protests blocked its sale here until now, the Clinton administration brokered a deal in 1994 giving U.S. patent rights to the nonprofit Population Council to seek FDA approval.

Abortion opponents cried foul and say the FDA now is pushing RU-486 to market for political reasons. FDA officials insist RU-486 is undergoing as much scrutiny as any other drug. This week it removed three scientists from the advisory panel after abortion opponents charged they were biased in favor of the drug.

French trials of 2,480 women show RU-486 is 95.5 percent effective at inducing an abortion; the remainder of the women needed surgery to complete the procedure.

The most serious complication was heavy bleeding. In extra safety testing of 2,100 Americans, four needed blood transfusions.

An RU-486 abortion isn't as simple as popping a pill. The process can be painful, causing heavy bleeding and nausea, and it can be used only through the seventh week of pregnancy, well before many women ever visit an abortion clinic.

RU-486 blocks development of progesterone, a natural hormone essential for maintaining pregnancy. A doctor administers the pill mifepristone. Two days later, the woman returns to take another pill, a hormone that causes contractions to expel the embryo, something that may not happen until the woman leaves the abortion clinic. In such cases, she is supposed to return for a third visit to make sure the abortion is complete.

Critics argue that women may bleed to death, saying while that hasn't actually happened, 1 percent of those who have tried the drug so far have needed blood transfusions. But women are 10 times more likely to need a transfusion after normal labor than after RU-486, countered Planned Parenthood's Dr. Lynn Borgatta.

Anti-abortionists also say that when RU-486 fails, women may not finish the job surgically. Harrison said hundreds of malformed children could be born as a result.

Of 200,000 Europeans who have taken RU-486, only 25 children were born, said the Population Council's Dr. Wayne Bardin. One died and others had such defects as extra fingers, he said.

"Once you sign up to take this drug, you should not change your mind," Bardin stressed, saying women will be required to sign statements explaining such risks before they get RU-486.

Greenspan signals willingness to raise rates, but not immediately

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan is signaling his willingness to raise short-term interest rates if necessary, but probably not too soon and not too much, economists conclude.

Greenspan told the Senate Banking Committee Thursday he's confident the central bank will boost rates "should the weight of incoming evidence persuasively suggest an oncoming intensification of inflation pressures."

But, as usual, he carefully avoided explicitly revealing the Fed's next move. And his run-down of the economic evidence in hand didn't suggest a need to immediately tighten rates.

His message soothed Wall Street, where stock prices have gyrated wildly all week. The Dow Jones average of industrial stocks, which had tumbled 181 points on Monday, rose 87 points Thursday, improving on a 9-point gain Tuesday and an 18-point advance Wednesday.

"He's not making any promises they won't tighten but he's hoping they won't have to," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch.

On the one hand, Greenspan said the forces keeping a lid on inflation — global competition, workplace insecurity — are "transitory, not permanent." And "there are early indications that ... favorable inflation developments, especially with regard to labor markets, may be drawing to a close."

On the other hand, he said he expects "economic activity to settle back toward a more sustainable pace in the months ahead." As evidence, he cited an increase in market-set long-term interest rates, an export-dampening increase in the value of the dollar and the exhaustion of pent-up demand from businesses and consumers for big-ticket durable goods.

However, he conceded, the expected slowdown "really hasn't happened yet" and, if the Fed is correct, it "has to become evident in the period immediately ahead."

For the past two weeks, some financial market traders, spooked by the inflationary implications of a sharp drop in the unemployment rate to 5.3 percent in June, had been looking for a tightening move from the Fed even before its next policy-making meeting on Aug. 20.

But Greenspan's testimony dispelled those fears, according to economists, and raised the possibility the Fed may not even raise rates on Aug. 20, depending on how economic statistics look between then and now.

"I think he's talking gradualism (on interest rates). It's, 'We may need to tap the brakes a little. There's no indication we may need to jam them on,'" said economist David Wyss of DRI-McGraw Hill in Lexington, Mass.

Economist Robert Dederick of Northern Trust Co. in Chicago said if the Fed does raise rates in August, the increase probably will be limited to a quarter of a percentage point.

While soothing the market with his comments on the economy, Greenspan attempted to soothe senators with his remarks on the market.

"The reason why the most recent volatility has caught our attention is we haven't had much of that in recent years, and it is that which is unusual, not the most recent period," he said.

AROUND THE STATE

Marlins 7, Phillies 0

MIAMI — Kevin Brown pitched 5 2-3 innings of no-hit ball before settling for a three-hitter and the Florida Marlins won their fourth straight, beating the Philadelphia Phillies 7-0.

Brown (18-8), who lowered his major league-leading ERA to 1.87, lost his no-hitter on Mickey Morandini's sharp single to right.

In the first inning, Gary Sheffield's single scored Quilvio Veras, who led off with a walk and took second on a wild pitch. After Jeff Conine walked, Devon White hit a tapper to the mound, Philly's Mike Mims threw wildly to first, allowing Sheffield to score and moving Conine to third and White to second.

Greg Colbrunn's groundout scored Conine for the third run of the inning. White scored on a wild pitch by Mims to make it 4-0.

Florida added three more in the sixth to take a 7-0 lead. Conine and Colbrunn each had RBI doubles, and Terry Pendleton hit an RBI single.

Mutiny 3, Wiz 2

TAMPA — Giuseppe Galderisi scored a goal in the 56th minute to lead the Tampa Bay Mutiny to a 3-2 win over the Kansas City Wiz.

Tampa Bay (10-7) dominated the first half.

Roy Lassiter put the Mutiny on the scoreboard with a goal in the 15th minute, slamming in the rebound of an Ivan McKinley shot.

McKinley got a goal of his own in the 41st minute, off a deflected Evans Wise attempt.

Galderisi, taking advantage of the Wiz's goalie's unsuccessful dive at a Lassiter shot, intercepted the ball and hit the game winner.

Mo Johnston and Alan Prampin scored in the second half for the Wiz (10-10).

The Mutiny remains on top of the Major League Soccer Eastern Conference, while the Wiz hangs on to second place in the MLS West.

Heat sign Brown

MIAMI — P.J. Brown signed a seven-year contract worth a reported $36 million with Miami. Brown averaged 11.3 points and 6.9 rebounds with New Jersey last season.

Tim Hardaway also re-signed with the Heat, and guard Voshon Lenard will return. The team renounced rights to Rex Chapman, Walt Williams, Jeff Malone, Tyrone Corbin, Stacey King, Danny Schayes and Tony Smith.

Dolphins sign Abdul-Jabbar

DAVIE — Karim Abdul-Jabbar signed with the Miami Dolphins on Thursday after Coach Jimmy Johnson said further delays might result in the UCLA running back finding himself No. 5 on the depth chart.

Terms with the third-round pick were not announced, but a team source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Abdul-Jabbar signed a three-year contract worth $920,000.

Cornerback Dorian Brew, taken just before Abdul-Jabbar in the third round, received a three-year contract worth $930,000.

The competition at running back includes another rookie, Jerris McPhail, a fifth-round pick from East Carolina who has impressed coaches with his 4.31 seconds.

Abdul-Jabbar and McPhail will battle for the No. 1 running back job along with veterans Terry Kirby, Bernie Parmalee and Irving Spikes.

ELSEWHERE

Timberwolves ink Marbury

MINNEAPOLIS — Stephon Marbury, acquired in a draft-day trade, signed a three-year contract with the Minnesota Timberwolves.

Marbury, who averaged 18.9 points in his only season at Georgia Tech, will be paid $5.67 million by the rookie salary cap.

Marbury, drafted fourth overall, was acquired from Milwaukee for the Timberwolves' No. 5 pick — Ray Allen — and center Andrew Lang.

Post 53 comes back to win Area opener

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Editor

SANFORD — Josh Blanton helped himself with his glove and J.R. Nobles scored two runs, including the game-winner, and drove in the tying run as the Sanford Post 53-Lightning posted a come-from-behind 4-3 victory over Ft. Pierce Post 40 in the opening game of the American Legion II Eastern Area Tournament at Alumni Field in the Seminole High School Baseball Complex Thursday afternoon.

Sanford will now take on Port St. Lucie Post 318, which beat Goldenrod (Oviedo) Post 112 8-3 Thursday evening. Post 112 and Post 40 were to have played an elimination game at 10 a.m. this morning, with Post 53 playing Post 318 in the Winner's Bracket finals at 12:30 p.m. The winner of the 10 a.m. game and the loser of the 12:30 p.m. game will play at 3 p.m. this afternoon.

The championship game is set for 10 a.m. Saturday, with the "if necessary" game scheduled for 12:30 p.m. The tournament winner advances to the state tournament in DeLand.

Blanton withstood an eight-hit Post 40 attack to only give up one earned run. The righthander had at

Mudcats' long summer ends

By JEFF BERLINICKE
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — After playing nearly every night all summer long, the Lake Mary Mudcats can finally enjoy summer vacation the way it is meant to be spent.

No more wearing soiled uniforms to nearly empty ballparks to play ball in 90-plus degree heat.

More lazy nights watching the sun go down sitting by the pool chatting about high school dreams.

The fun should last all of a week and a half before the first bell rings to start the new school year.

Mudcat players saw their NABF (National Amateur Baseball Federation) summer season come to an end last night with a 5-1 loss to West Orange in the NABF District Tournament at Lyman High School. Despite several vacations taken by players at key times, the Mudcats had a strong season and the players, which will make up the core of the Lake Mary High lineup next spring, said they took a lot away from their summer of baseball.

"We found out a lot about what we can do," pitcher Matt Groninger, who picked up the loss said. "Now we know what everyone can do and we'll be ready for next year."

Groninger along with Jeff Ebbert and Greg Bradley should be key pitchers for the Rams' staff next spring. Ebbert was even more succinct in summing up the summer before his senior season.

"We'll be a contender next season," Ebbert said. "We want the states. We're gonna kick some butt."

The Mudcats kicked plenty of butt early in the NABF season, starting 6-0 and barely allowing a run. Defensive lapses affected the team as the season went on and key players such as Brad Klingler, Drew Young and Shaun St. Dennis missed time while away on vacation toward the end of the season.

The end came last night when West Orange lit up Groninger with four first inning singles to take an early 3-0 lead.

Lake Mary fought back, scoring in the third when Scott Hillinski doubled, moved to third, and scored when Ebbert beat out a double play grounder to make it 3-1.

The Mudcats only managed two hits for the remainder of the game and West Orange put it away with one run in the fourth and another run in the seventh. Hillinski flew out to left a few minutes later and the Mudcats' vacation had begun.

Magic: We lost bidding war despite better offer

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

ORLANDO — The Orlando Magic put their best offer on the table and waited ... and waited ... and waited to hear from Shaquille O'Neal and his agent.

"Like everyone else, we were hearing that we were the first option," disheartened general manager John Gabriel said Thursday after the free agent center opted for a seven-year, $120 million contract with the Los Angeles Lakers.

Orlando reportedly offered $115 million in a proposal the Magic considered superior because the contract would have been front-loaded, allowing O'Neal to earn more than $20 million in the first season.

The contract also would have included a clause giving the four-time all-star an opportunity to become a free agent again in four years.

"Our job, from a management standpoint, was to put a fair-market deal on the table. I think we did that, clearly," said Gabriel, who also expressed disappointment over the way the Magic received confirmation of O'Neal's rejection.

"We got our response via voice mail," he said. "We never got to speak in person."

The signing prompted one radio station to play "Hit The Road Shaq," and listeners flooded the airwaves with comments ranging from indignation over a newspaper poll that some feel drove O'Neal out of town to relief that he

Russell wins FPS feature

By THE HIPPS Special to the Herald

SAMSULA - Longwood's David Russell took the lead when pole-sitter Ronnie Burkett's car broke on Lap 106 and held on to win the Florida Pro Series Late Model 125 Saturday night at New Smyrna Speedway.

David Rogers finished second in the Late Model chase to benefit the Ronald McDonald House of Orlando, followed by Richard Till, Bob Underwood and Jerry Olliard.

Burkett, 28, of Sorrento, led every lap until his car broke entering Turn 1 with just 17 circuits remaining around the half-mile, high-banked oval.

"I got the repeat poles, but I didn't get the repeat wins," said Burkett, who received a $60 bonus for leading at the halfway mark and was trying to become the first repeat winner in the Florida Pro Series. "There was something wrong in the fuel system. We weren't getting any fuel to the carburetor. I'm still not sure what it is. We won't know until we tear it down tomorrow."

The loss ended the summer schedule for the Bullets, while Downtown moves into tonight's semifinals at 8 p.m. opposite the Lake Howell Bucks. The winner of that game moves into Saturday's championship contest at noon.

Tyler Carr pitched a respectable game, only giving up three runs, none earned, on five hits, but he was forced to constantly pitch out of trouble as his defense committed nine errors.

Offensively, the Bullets did get seven hits, but three of them came in the sixth inning when T.G. Lee scored its only run. Base running also hurt the hosts, as it had one player picked off first base, another thrown out stealing and third thrown out trying to stretch a single into a double.

Downtown broke on top in the third inning with the help of Bullets fielding. With one out, Adam Miller reached on an error and advanced to third when Mike Hackett also reached on an error and went to second on a throw to third. Todd Ewanko then plated both runners with a sharp single to left.

Downtown added its other run in the top of the sixth inning as Chris Kurtz doubled into the left field corner and moved to third on a sacrifice bunt. Kurtz then scored the insurance run on a passed ball.

The Bullets looked like they might have something going when Kevin Naas singled into right-center field leading off the Burkett's misfortune opened the door for Russell, who became the first repeat winner of the year in the 16-event Florida Pro Series. He also won at New Smyrna Speedway back on May 18.

"I just have to say 'thanks' to my crew because they've been preparing this car perfect every time," Russell said. "They're the ones who made us win."

"The track was slick all night long. We were trying to move our tires until the end because we didn't know what would happen in the end. It's unfortunate that Burkett broke. He was running pretty fast. I wanted to run with him in the end, but that's the way it ends up."

Barbara Pierce won the Sportman Special 30-Lapper, followed by Ted Head and Bobby Gonzales.

Gary Tiffany led the Limited Late Models, followed by Sanford's Hank Baker and Chad Allman.

Michael Williams won the Modified feature, followed by Barry Willoughby, Danny Bancroft and Dave Savicki.

sixth inning and went to third when Randy Jonda hit a shot into the exact same spot. But Jonda was called out at second on a highly debatable call trying to stretch the hit into a double.

Trevor Dixon then plated Naas on a ground out and Carr singled. Duatin Owen then hit a blast to deep center field, but the Downtown centerfielder ran the ball down just short of the warning track at the 390-foot sign.

Curtis Craft was the winning pitcher, scattering seven hits and allowing just the one earned run. The lanky southpaw struck out six and walked only one.

Carr finished with six strikeouts and three walks.

Providing the offense for the Bullets were Todd Radcliff (2-for-3), Naas (1-for-2, run), Lance Odor (1-for-2), Jonda, Carr and Jose Torres (all 1-for-3) and Dixon (RBI).

least one runner on base in every inning and also walked three batters.

But he helped himself mightily with his glove as he had seven assists and one put out. The put out came in the first inning as he dived to catch an attempted bunt and threw out the runner at first base for a double play. He later snagged a drive back up the middle and threw to first to end the inning with the bases loaded.

Blanton also got a big assist from his defensive mates in the fifth inning that kept Sanford ahead at that time. With one out and runners on second and third, Tim Maypole lifted a fly to right field that looked like a sure sacrifice fly. But Post 53 rightfielder Ralph Dietzman made a beautiful throw to Chad Huffman, who whirled and threw to catcher Anthony DiFonzo to nail the runner and retire the side.

Sanford took a 2-0 lead in the bottom of the first inning. With one out, Ned Raines singled, stole second and went to third as Nobles reached on an error. After Nobles stole second, Joby Gorman ripped a single to center to plate the runners.

Anfernee Hardaway led the team to an 18-5 start last fall when O'Neal missed the first six weeks of the season because of a broken thumb. Horace Grant, Nick Anderson and Dennis Scott helped picked up the slack, while Jon Koncak did a good job of filling in at center.

But Koncak is not capable of playing starter's minutes over an 82-game season. And, anybody brought in as O'Neal's replacement probably will have to accept the NBA's minimum salary of $280,000 unless Gabriel trades one of the team's other starters.

"He's virtually irreplaceable. Because of the cap ramifications, you cannot go spend the dollars that we were once going to offer him. ... So it will set us back quite a bit," the general manager said.

Orlando's performance without O'Neal early last season sparked debate over whether the Magic might be better off

The score stayed 2-0 until Ft. Pierce got a run in the fourth inning. With one out, Tim Crownover reached on a two-base error, went to third on a single by Clint Cantrell and scored on a grounder by Steve Poole.

Post 40 took the lead in the sixth inning as Justin Payne singled and Cantrell walked with one out. After a strike out, Matt Page reached on infield single to load the bases. Ryan Strickland walked to plate the tying run and pinch-runner Albert Ware scored the go-ahead run as Ben Koepen reached on an error.

But the hosts were not to be denied. Paulo Silva reached on an error to open the sixth inning and was sacrificed to second by Ned Raines. Nobles then singled to left to score Silva and took second on the throw to the plate. After a strike out for the second out of the inning, Bill Johnson singled into the hole between third and short to score Nobles with the ultimate winning run.

Doting the damage for Post 53 were Nobles (single, two runs, RBI), Gorman (single, two RBI), Johnson (single, RBI), Raines (single, run), DiFonzo (single) and Silva (run).

without him. Coach Brian Hill doesn't buy the argument.

"I don't think what we did without Shaquille has any bearing on what next year will be like," Hill said. "For anybody to expect we're going to win as much without Shaquille as we did with him is totally unrealistic."

Hill also is not among the growing number of people who have questioned O'Neal's commitment to winning because of the amount of time he's spent pursuing a career in movies and music the past four summers.

"I think he desperately wants to win an NBA championship because he knows that ultimately his place in history will be defined by whether he is able to lead his team to championships or not, not by how many points he scores or how many rebounds he gets," the coach said. "I think he's always felt that way."

How to buy a child's wardrobe

Good fitting and stylish clothes are just as important for children as for adults. They like to look like their friends and be comfortable in their clothes. Unless some sort of plan is made and followed, keeping children adequately clothed can be a financial disaster. An allotment for each child should be made in your budget.

It is not economical to purchase an excessive amount of clothing for children in a rapid growth period. However, if your time is limited for clothing care, and if finances will permit, see that each child has enough clothes to get him or her through the week, plus at least one extra outfit, without laundry having to be done. Underwear and socks should be included in this planning. Buying garments which are seasonless will make it possible for a child to wear jeans in the early fall and summer with tops and short sleeve shirts and in the winter with sweaters and long sleeved shirts. Jeans, which they will outgrow before next year, can be cut off and worn as shorts in the summer.

The question of whether or not to buy quality in children's clothes has to be considered every time you purchase clothes for your youngsters. Most of us want to give our children 'the best'. However, in some cases this is not the wisest use of our resources. Young children grow so fast that it is not economical to spend a large amount of money on clothing that is worn only on special occasions.

When you are buying clothes that will be worn often, good quality is important. School clothes come under this category. These garments will receive hard wear and tear. Coats and jackets are included in this category since they are usually worn more than one season.

Quality is not as important for garments that will only be worn a few times. Be sure to look carefully at the construction of the garments. If you have other younger children in the family, who can wear the clothing later, then it may be economical to buy quality garments.

You alone can decide the quality of the garments you purchase for your children. What 'fits' best in your budget—that is the key!

Awards honor hospital employees

Columbia Medical Center's Sanford recently honored its associated for five, 10, 15, 20 and 25 years of service at a dinner when recipients received an award package that included a lapel pin and gift for their years of service. Recipients honored for 25 years of service and their directors are (from left): Lisa Exum, director of pharmacy; Susan Byrd, pharmacy technician, 25-year recipient; Doug Bills, president and CEO; Betty Revel, certified nursing assistant, 25-year recipient; and Barbara Farr, vice president of patient care services.

Insurance abuse irks this intern

DEAR ABBY: I recently started to work at a pharmacy as an intern, and I go home every night frustrated to tears by what I see in a day's work.

There are medical claims, hundreds of them daily. Many are for preventable sicknesses that could be cured by over-the-counter drugs. Some people abuse the emergency rooms just to get prescriptions necessary for Medicaid. An example is cough syrup. Once again, the system pays a couple of hundred dollars for a child with a common cold whose parents wouldn't spring the $3.99 it would cost for a bottle of cough syrup.

Abby, some people are so uneducated they don't know how to take the medicine. (Have you ever known anyone to eat a suppository?)

I got a call the other day from a girl who asked me whether or not she's pregnant when there are two blue lines on the stick. (She's 12 years old and didn't know how to read a package insert to take the pregnancy test!)

Wait — there's more. The abuse of the system isn't happening only in health care and pharmacy; we had a job available that women applied for via the unemployment office just to get their papers signed so they could keep drawing welfare or unemployment benefits. Some people have even tried to use food stamps to pay for narcotics!

I am so disgusted — maybe I'll move to Canada.
ANGELA IN SAVANNAH

DEAR ANGELA: Please don't move to Canada. We need people like you in the U.S.A.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a soldier currently deployed to Bosnia for Operation Joint Endeavor. I just received an "Any Soldier" box from American Legion Post 1876 in Virginia. I am touched by the goodness of so many of my fellow American citizens who still go out of their way to do a good deed, especially when they do it for strangers. Their mail means so much to those of us who are away from our families and loved ones.

We received shipments of books from the Red Cross, Soldier of Fortune magazine, publishers' warehouses and also from private citizens. All of the special packages, letters, pictures and good will are inspiring during one of the most difficult times in our lives.

With a little faith and luck — and a lot of patience — I will return to my 7-month-old daughter and my "Mr. Mom" nondeployed soldier husband.

I want to thank all who participated in this mail campaign for their generosity and kindness in remembering the military forces behind the mission. I will be leaving here in September, but many of my co-workers will be here for more than a year. I ask that your readers continue to remember them.

1ST LT. EMILY C. FELVUS, LUKAVAC, BOSNIA

P.S. We read you daily in The Stars and Stripes.

DEAR ABBY: There is so much hate and violence in this world, but it can be reduced if we all work together. It would be helpful if we had more examples of kindness after which to pattern our behavior.

A friend of mine performed one of those examples of kindness when she took my 84-year-old mother, who has Alzheimer's disease, fishing. It made Mother laugh and enjoy the outdoors. I have a full-time caretaker for Mom, but my friend gave my mother a special treat.

I think it would be nice if you ask your readers to write to you about kind things done for them and publish a series of these acts of kindness. Goodness knows there is media coverage about plenty of bad things, so if you offset those with good news, it would be very inspiring. Please think about it.

JUANITA BAKER, VERO BEACH, FLA.

DEAR JUANITA: You have done me a kindness with your compassionate suggestion. Readers, please let me hear from you.

DEAR ABBY: I have heard (and known) about showers for the bride for a long time, but never have I heard about any shower to benefit the groom. Just recently I was surprised to receive an invitation to a "tool" shower for my grandson who is engaged and will soon receive his degree in construction management.

I thought this was a great idea. Surely this is an idea that should be more popular. It would benefit all future grooms.

J.H.S. IN TEXAS

DEAR J.H.S.: While bridal showers and showers for the couple are more common, showers for the groom are not unheard of. I'm sure many brides would cheer if the common (and frequently offensive to them) stag party were replaced by a more practical shower for the groom.

For everything you need to know about wedding planning, order "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $2.99 ($3.99 in Canada) to Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

Why are you so easily fooled?

Dear Mary: I am so mad I can hardly write this. It seems like the guys I've gone out with this past year have been 'comparing notes', if you know what I mean.

It really hurts me to find this out because I really cared for these guys and I thought they cared about me, too. I know one of them got interested in somebody else, but the other one I really liked made me think that the reason he backed off was to get his head together and see if he was ready to make a life-time commitment.

Why does a guy act like you're the only girl for him, tell you you're different from the rest, say he loves you, then turn around and stab you in the back like this? I'd like to call both of these jerks up and tell them what I think of them and their stupid, childish behavior, but I'm afraid they'll just laugh at me if I do. How can I let them know that they've really hurt me and get them to apologize to me for what they've done.

Been Used

Dear Used: Assuming you were a willing participant in the games that these guys are comparing notes about, your enemy isn't them, it's you. The reason a guy says you're the only one for him and tells you the things you want to hear is a real no-brainer, they want sex. However, the real question for you is why you're so easily fooled. Love and lust are not synonyms and it's your job to learn the difference.

If it feels like a desperate need to be intimate right now or never, have the opportunity again. It's lust. Love grows much more quietly and requires both time and nurturing. Also, the foundation for love is mutual respect, trust and admiration. If these feelings don't come before sex, I promise they will not come at all.

Next week we'll talk more about how you can tell if a guy really loves you.

CHARYSE N. WRIGHT

Charryse N. Wright has joined the United States Army under the Delayed Enlistment Program at the U.S. Army Recruiting Station, Sanford. The Delayed Enlistment Program gives young men or women the opportunity to delay enlistment into the Army for up to one year before reporting to basic military training. The enlistment gives the new soldier the option to learn a new skill, travel and become eligible to receive as much as $30,000 toward a college education. After completion of basic training, soldiers receive advanced individual training in their career specialty.

Wright, a senior at Seminole High School, will report to Fort Jackson, Columbia, S.C., for military basic training August 28. She is the granddaughter of Samuel Wright, Jr., of 110 Sterling Court, Sanford.

Holy Cross VBS sailed successfully

Members of the Holy Cross Lutheran Church in Lake Mary recently held their Vacation Bible School. The theme centered around the Vacation Bible Ship. Children participating were titled first mate and other nautical names. The "cruise" included crafts, games, Bible songs, lessons and treats. Top photo: Audrey Jones, cinema leader, entertained the youngsters and directed various activities. Bottom photo: Youth gathered to participate in numerous games during one session.

God fills the void in our lives

SANFORD — I recently attended my 20 year high school class reunion. Seminole High School class of '66. Although I was unable to attend the activities scheduled for Friday and Saturday evenings I did reach out and touch my old cronies at the Sunday picnic event. Emotions were as varied as the rainbow too.

RELIGION

It's amazing how a short trip to see old classmates can stir a mountain of feelings. Everything ranging from the insecurity you felt during those earlier years, which by the way made you wonder if you even wanted to go to the reunion in the first place, to joy in seeing your "best" buddies.

Now, as I look back I wish I could have edged in enough time to go to the other evenings. I had more self-confidence than I thought I would exhibit.

Some people, of course, hadn't changed a bit. They were as kind and sweet as in years gone by. Others, unfortunately, had not mellowed with time and still housed the bitter and hateful attitudes and sarcasm with a ballooning height.

Although we change and grow through the good and bad in our lives isn't it great to know that God is forever unchanging and true. We should strive to become closer and "more like Him" but we are all challenged daily by Satan and his tricks.

My latest feat is helping gather former classmates for a Christian school I attended in Mt. Dora for four years before my junior and senior years at Seminole High. Going from a class of 26 to close to 450 at public school was an adjustment.

It's so thoughtful of the committee from Mt. Dora to allow those of us that left either our freshman, sophomore years or before to attend the get-together. Interesting is but to say the least of the conversations that I've had with those I've located in other cities and states. Again, the memories have been bittersweet at times. Yet, as a whole the playfulness and craziness of youth has returned through the recollections we have had.

Most of us have children of our own now ranging in age from 10 months to 21 years old. We laughed as we commented that we would ring our offsprings necks if they tried some of the nonsense we attempted.

Again, through it all we remained safe and those I spoke with that left the Lord have now returned. God remained steadfast and just as the "Footprints" poem, He carried us when we needed it and walked beside us during other events in our lives.

May we forever get our strength, not from others who will let us down, but from the One who gives unwavering. Only He can fill our hearts with love, joy and peace and crowd out the insecurities and sorrow from the past. Only He can give everything we need.

Caring for God's house

SANFORD — Parked by a busy street, the pink van lacked its rear tire. A jack held the vehicle off the pavement at a crazy angle. "For Sale" read a sign in the back window. The van's owner surely did not plan this strategy. Passerby got a beautiful illustration of poor advertising at its worst.

When my wife, Jane and I first came to Sanford to speak to the Pastor Nominating Committee, I remember driving off 17-92 to Third Street. Driving up to the church on Third our first reaction was "this church is boarded up. It is not open for church business, or it is for sale just like the van."

terian for years but never remember a building repair fund until the Scotts arrived three years ago.

Churches are not in sales; they're in the giving business. But buildings influence how well congregations give away the most valuable gift human lives can receive. Your facilities are tools to build God's real house - the people.

This is a great opportunity to build up this generation into a "spiritual house" that will "offer spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Jesus Christ (I Peter 2:4-5)."

Avoid weight-loss gimmicks

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have read about many weight-loss products. As a general rule, are they safe and is weight loss in the realm of possibility? Their testimonials are so glowing.

DEAR READER: Testimonials are ALWAYS glowing. That's what makes them so unreliable. It's safer to pay attention to scientists' conclusions in valid medical studies.

I discourage the use of weight-loss products (such as liquids and pills) because they're inappropriate for chronic application, and most overweight people need a long-term program, not a quick fix. For example, studies have shown that more than 90 percent of individuals who lose weight by these commercial methods re-gain the lost pounds within a year. What many overweight persons need is a nutritious diet that they can follow indefinitely.

Having said this, I must mention that several medical centers are feverishly developing drugs that may revolutionize weight reduction. I am sure that you are aware of the exciting recent medical reports indicating that obesity may actually be under the control of certain body chemicals called neuropeptides.

Apparently, there may be a chemical imbalance — in the brain, no less — that causes a person to over-eat. Now that they have discovered a "feedback loop" between fat cells and the brain, researchers are attempting to identify ways that this loop could be modified safely and consistently.

Until these products have been developed and tested, I encourage people to lose weight the hard way: by following a well-balanced diet that they can live with.

To give you more information, I am sending you copies of my Health Reports "Calorie-Wise Cooking" and "Winning the Battle of the Bulge." Other readers who would like copies should send $2 for each report plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 3017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10154. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I exercise and weight lift four to five days a week. This makes me feel great and gives me more energy during the day. My problem is that by the time night rolls around, I'm too tired and lack the motivation to work out. A friend gave me some ephedrine tablets to try. What a boost — but they dehydrate me and my heart races. I now have mixed feelings about this supplement and fear it might result in a heart attack or stroke. Can you set the record straight?

DEAR READER: You just did. Ephedrine (which is available in several herbal remedies) is a dangerous stimulant that causes rapid pulse, high blood pressure and jitteriness. Several deaths have been reported from its use.

PETER GOTT, M.D.

harm your cardiovascular system, adversely affect your stamina and cause serious health consequences. Don't poison your system with such drugs.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What do onions contain that make us lazy and sleepy after we eat them? My physician is unable to answer this question.

DEAR READER: Understandably so, because onions do not cause laziness or sleepiness. You can eat all the onions you wish and you won't suffer any side effects — except, perhaps, indigestion and horrendously bad breath.

Many people experience a perfectly normal period of sleepiness after a big meal, but this has nothing to do with onions. So don't blame the onions on the pizza you had while out on a late date.

The humor of bridge

By Phillip Alder

Last September, I gave a deal in which 8-year-old Michael Berkowitz was defending. I wrote:

On this deal, Michael showed his innocence.

The opponents cruised into four hearts. Lisa (Michael's mother), West, led the diamond jack and the dummy was tabled. Michael started laughing.

"Why are you laughing?" asked the declarer.

"I don't have any diamonds," Michael replied, "and I have lots of trumps."

I received a letter from a reader stating: "I can't believe you would condone a violation of the rules."

I hope he was the only person with this opinion. As I explained in my reply to him, strictly laying down the letter of the law is what drives many people away from duplicate bridge. Especially with the inexperienced player, some flexibility is desirable.

Laughter is also important in bridge and life. Laughing produces endorphins, which make us feel good. I had to laugh when reading about this deal.

South's four spades was aggressive. West made a surprising pass over four spades. And North's use of Blackwood with two club losers was debatable. However, against five spades, West found the perfect lead of a low heart. Now the defense was easy: heart to the jack, diamond ruff, club to the ace, diamond ruff and cash the club king for three down.

No sweat — except it didn't work out like that. East, thinking declarer had a singleton heart ace (or king), gave count by playing the heart two at trick one!

HOROSCOPE

Your Birthday

Saturday, July 20, 1986

In the year ahead, you could be more selective than usual when establishing new friendships and alliances. It looks as if you might become involved with people who have different interests.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you have to deal with someone today who displeased you previously, try to forget what happened and start over. Nurturing an old grudge will be self-defeating. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10158. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may have difficulty with your bank account today.

Prudent management of your resources will be essential if you hope to add to your savings.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) When pursuing your objectives today, try not to be too aggressive or too laid back. Either mode could jeopardize your success.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Instead of leaning against a wall and finding fault with the way someone is trying to do something today, pitch in and help to get things running smoothly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Try to avoid taking a financial risk if it is against your better judgment today. If things don't work out properly, you'll have only yourself to blame.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) When handling people who work for you today, make a point of being fair. Do not reward one person while overlooking others who should also be acknowledged.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If your attitude is hostile today, you could create a situation that pits one listener against another and causes both to be upset with you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You might be a bit too assertive today if you do not use polite language to describe your true impulses and feelings.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Today, if you make plans with a new acquaintance, make sure to include the friend who introduced you to this person. Do not leave him or her out in the cold.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Pace yourself sensibly today in regard to your workload. The faster you go, the higher the likelihood of exasperation and error.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Your purse might be a battle ground today. Part of you will want to be extravagant and part of you will try to be prudent.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A volatile, unresolved issue might generate a nasty domestic dispute today. You can play the role of peacemaker if you listen carefully to both parties.
