Downtown labor pool sues city

By MARIA OREM
Herald Staff Writer

A day labor agency, the recent subject of controversy among downtown merchants, is suing the city of Sanford over its occupational license eligibility.

In its action, Pacesetter Personnel Service Inc. is trying to force the city to transfer its existing occupational license from its previous location on 1018 French Avenue to its current location on 112 South Park Avenue.

The agency, which moved into the downtown area in July, had many merchants there upset because of the clientele it catered to. Several neighboring business owners had said that patrons of the agency tended to be transients and homeless. Virgil Hurley, owner of Glass Addicts located next to the day labor agency, had complained about transients sleeping and

Sanford cops nab robbery suspects

Two men have been arrested in connection with the armed robbery of a Sanford convenience store Tuesday. Taken into custody were Tyrann Odham, 19, and Lamont Alexander Ephesian, 21, both of 1505 W. 25th Street.

Two men said to be armed with what proved to be a shotgun, robbed the clerk of money from the safe and cash register, and reportedly disconnected the telephone lines so help could not be summoned.

As the two left the scene of the robbery, they were reportedly spotted by a passing Sanford Police Officer J.R. Diaz, but he was unaware at the time, that a robbery had occurred. The officer said he was checking on the safety of the Lil Champ clerk, at the store at 1119 W. 25th street when he saw two persons exit and walk around the side of the structure.

When he entered the store, the officer said he was told by the female clerk that the robbery had just occurred.

A radio report was immediately set out, giving a description of the two persons, one of whom reportedly had a firearm covered with a small towel.

Law enforcement units from the city as well as Seminole County responding included a K-9 unit.

Host family still needed
Manuel Jenke is a 17-year-old German student that is eager to share his life with an American family for the school year. He lists his family and friends as the most important things in his life. Like most young men his age, he is very interested in sports. He is a member of the soccer and basketball teams and also enjoys playing ice hockey and skiing.

Manuel has an interest in art and unusual buildings and thinks that perhaps he would like to become an architect like his mother. He loves order and is very punctual, two things that all families can never have enough of today. His parents say that his greatest character qualities are honesty and ambition and also that they are sure he will integrate soon and that no problems will emerge.

If you are willing to open your home to Manuel and share in a very rewarding experience, please call International Cultural Exchange Services area representative, Pam Glassburn at (407) 330-4104.

Parks, wet and dry

By NICK PFENFAUF
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Lake Mary Parks and Recreation Director John Holland is a busy man these days, but it should be expected, as the city has an outstanding array of major parks as well as neighborhood parks.

"About the only problem we've had recently," Holland said, "is that this past weekend, someone, probably youngsters, realigned the fountain in the Central Park pond" (just south of the City Hall). "As a result, the water was spewing out in other than its planned direction."

He said the fountain, installed last November, is still running as it is not affecting any other area of the park. "We have to have it moved back to its original area in the very near future," he said.

Holland is happy about Liberty Park. The park was forced to be closed much of the early part of this year due to high water which at times not only prevented residents from using the westerly playground area, but even extended to the point where the entrance roadway was completely under water.

"Liberty Park is high and dry once again," he said, "and all the amenities are in top notch condition." He added that recent rainfall has not produced any return of the flooding.

Holland is most pleased about plans for the city's major sports complex off Rantoul Lane. "Right now we're on the verge of starting our new parks maintenance facility," he said. "Plans have been submitted for approval, and as soon as that is done, the project will be sent out for bid. As soon as that is done, construction will begin."

The city had earlier determined that the maintenance facilities used by the parks and recreation department had outgrown smaller quarters, and rather than seeking to enlarge existing buildings and space, the city approved having a new

"We've been going door to door within the city limits, asking if people want us to install one of these," said Chief Duane Mehl. "If they're not home, we leave a door hanger." Mehl said recently, firefighters responded to a kitchen fire at a residence on Second Street and were able to prevent serious damage. "The fire was detected because of a fire alarm which we found was one of those we had given and installed," Mehl said, "so we know this give-away program is really working in helping detect fires."

UPS is back, but thousands of employees aren't going to work

From staff reports

UPS says it has now resumed full operations. Yet thousands of employees were not called back following a strike by approximately 18,000 Teamsters on Aug. 4. UPS says they haven't been laid off, they just haven't been called back to work.

UPS said it picked up approximately 16.2 million packages Wednesday.

"We have much to do to restore our operations and rebuild our customer relationships," said chairman and CEO Jim Kelly, "but we are elated to have our employees back on the job, and the early feedback suggests our customers really missed us."

UPS Vice Chairman John Alden added, "We have a lot of customers who have just been stockpiling packages. So at first, we expect very, very heavy volume. But everybody's pitching in and we have our systems geared up."

Unfortunately, a number of customers reportedly suffered from the loss of UPS service so much that they have cancelled their use of the delivery service. As a result, in various parts of the nation UPS was forced to lay off a number of employees because of a lack of what was expected to be a complete return of service.

UPS says it is not calling it a "layoff", though it admits several thousand employees have not been called back to work due to what UPS officials called "the nature of their jobs and the distribution process." They said Wednesday's work was mostly picking up packages with few having been loaded on package cars or the need for the full compliment of drivers who handle deliveries.

Alden said he anticipates the employment levels will rise as the package volume stabilizes and even out. "Then, by next week," he said, "we may be able to ascertain whether volume has stabilized at, near or below pre-strike levels."

Now, to draw back old customers and lure new ones, a major advertising campaign is under way based on the concept, "We're back."

Alden added that in order to draw former customers back, personal contact would also be made to one and all of the over one million customers by the end of this week.

Editorial/Opinion

A little bit county, a lot about schools

Have you noticed just how fast the fly over (bridge) from Oviedo Crossings to Hwy. 426 is progressing? Wouldn't it be nice if DOT or the County could build roads that fast? It will be done about a year quicker than if the government built it using your inexhaustible supply of tax dollars.

Grant Maloy got a little pointed at the Association of Building Contractors Bar-B-Que this past week at the Maitland Shrine Temple. He was following a long line of incumbents in the elected official cattle call, officials who the ABC had supported in the last election. They were all thanking the ABC for its support during the last election. When Maloy got his 15 seconds at the microphone he told the audience, "You didn't support me in the last election--but I won anyway. The Bar-B-Que's great though, so thanks for inviting me!"

The School Board recently spent $479,000,000 of your tax dollars in less than an hour. That's how long it took for the Board to approve the budget. There were no questions asked--no explanations given. In a forthcoming column, I will be comparing the budget processes used by the County and the School Board. I think you will find it interesting to see the difference in who decides how your tax dollars are spent and the process used to get to final decisions about the future of the two governments.

There is a good possibility that Zero-Based budgeting will be the law for schools after next year's Legislative Session. It might even be required for School Systems. There are County Commissioners who want to push for projections as well as budgets in the County. What this means is that there will be accountability throughout the year instead of just at the end of the budget year if it passes. Watch staff scream in anguish if this comes about. We'll look at all of these methods in a two or three part column soon.

Next week we'll look at the numbers of students in the school system for the last few years and what's happening with growth in Seminole County. Last year, the School System lost 922 students from the first day to the last day of school. So much for overcrowding, huh? Not quite. Elementary school population increased by 811 during the same period. We'll look at last year and what's happening so far this year.

Coming soon will be a 14 part series on Elementary Schools in the County. We'll visit each school twice. We'll look at what they do better than anyone else. (We visited each one them once already just to get the lay of the land, so to speak. I want you to know that I've been teaching in some form at the latter grade I was a 13 year old Opa/Oma teacher at the YMCA. Now I'm a School Board member. What you need to know is how interested I have been with what I have seen so far in your schools. New Principals like Neil Parker at Hamilton, Susan Tanner at Midway, to name but two, have taken over. There will be no continued history of low scores at these schools--Neil and Susan will not allow it to happen. David Scott at Oviedo has got to be by the best kept secret in elementary education. His 1-3-5th grade test scores are better than most southern county schools.

By the time you get to make your decision in April for Controlled Choice, you can have a taste of the schools. I promise--you'll be impressed.

Superintendent Paul Nagery was a presenter at the last class of World Class Schools. He is a Chamber/COAR/NSA member who brings business people together to help improve our schools. At the three day school, I showed last month, there wasn't a business speaker, but instead, it was about establishing alliances within the business community towards partnerships with schools. (We showed and train 1000 individuals in 1000 days, there are 450 slots left to be filled and business persons to be enlightened and convinced towards schools. See back to Paul Nagery.)

Dispensing the Equal Rites Awards

BOSTON--Every year, I commemorate Aug. 26, the anniversary of the passage of women's suffrage, by paying homage to my foremothers. I gather together a prestigious one-woman jury to dispense the Equal Rites Awards. This is a highly competitive set of honors awarded only to those who have done their best to do the very worst for women.

This year the good news is that scientists discovered that we are not direct genetic descendants of Neanderthals. The bad news is that so many Neanderthal act-alikes continue to cavort in our midst. But enough of this ranting. The envelopes please.

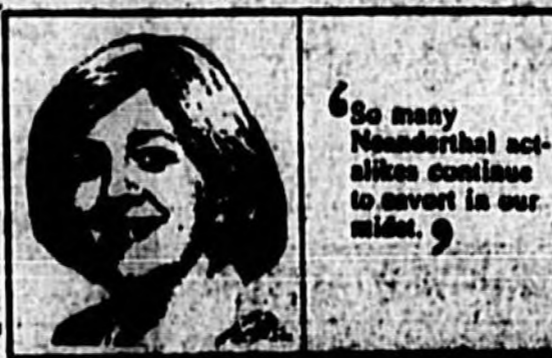

First and foremost, our annual Battle of the Sexes Prize goes to the military itself. With so much friendly fire over sexual harassment, we had trouble picking one target even at the Aberdeen Proving Ground. So we hereby issue tattered '60s T-shirts to the entire Pentagon: "Make Love Not War" -- or at least learn the difference.

As for peacetime conflicts a Milwaukee jury of civilians wins this year's Double Standard Bearer Prize. These folks awarded Jerome Mackenzie $26 million, after deciding he was unjustly fired from Miller for repeating an off-color joke from "Seinfeld." They made it official: A man falsely accused of harassment gets more than any woman actually harassed. We sent the jurors a George Costanza tape: "Yadda, yadda, yadda."

While we are on the subject, our Blind Justice Award goes for the second time to Judge Thomas J. Bollinger of Maryland. In 1993 he sympathized with a rapist. This year he erased the criminal conviction of a wife-beater, saying the man was merely in "the throes of domestic tranquility." Bollinger has recused himself from further abuse cases, but we offer him a new bench. For retirement.

We would also like to bench Wil Cordero. The Red Sox outfielder allegedly used his wife for batting practice. This entitles him to the very crowded hall of infame for Superstars in Sexism.

But on to other playing fields. The prize for Cybermisogyny--new technology, old ideology--goes to Arkansas' Marlon Walton. He was so enraged after his wife stopped his cyberspace affair that he assaulted her. We offer Marlon a new e-mail address: behindbars.edu.

If this news makes you want to run away from it all, don't do it in Redneck. This misbegotten company wins our Fashion Misstatement Award for naming their new women's running shoes "Neolithic." It turns out that incus is the name for an evil spirit that has sexual intercourse with women while they are sleeping. To Redneck us and chasteness and a lack of anything.

Speaking of myths, our annual Super Man & Boyz Prize goes to those wonderful role models at Senate, the makers of in-line skating gear. They put a slogan on their laundry tags that reads: "Destroy All Girls." We ship them a full complement of snakes, eggs, and puppy dog tails attached to get bulls.

As for the Domestic Disturbance Award, this August archaic what is known as a divorcing man, today it goes to the female authors of "The Rules," that rant that on how to catch the man of your dreams--the man's dreams by acting like your grandmother.

Is Linda Rice a Rules Girl? Let's just say she's the winner of this year's Blind by Your Man Prize. In 1959 Burton Fugson blind dated things to blind her with his, Fugson, there later when he got out of jail, she reported him. This year she won 20 years in prison for blind dating charges he deserved. We would send her a doormat but frankly that seems redundant.

If Burton Fugson is not your kind of guy, what about Mrs. Rice? The winner of our Knight in Shining Armor Award is the blind man who conned one woman, then his wife, Patsy Kelly. Then she told the police that he had no time for a job to support his family. We recommend a doormat for the blind man, female con artist.

urrying in the alley way and accusing people while waiting for Facetter to open. Hurley on Thursday said he was accosted by five patrons of the "Pub" while he was loading packages into his car. In addition, several business owners have attributed incidents of transients loitering in parks and harassing residents to the labor agency.

About one month ago, Hurley had circulated a petition and a letter to merchants criticizing real estate agent Helen Stairs for leasing the building to the labor agency. Stairs, who serves on several waterfront and historical committees, had been accused of not following the city's vision for the downtown historic district. Stairs sued Hurley for defamation over the petition and the case in still pending.

Regarding the occupational license, Stairs said Friday that she had asked the owner of Facetter about the license and he said he had approached the city prior to leasing the building and the city indicated that he needed to transfer his current license.

"As far as I knew it was a permitted use," she said. "This is a national company and it's up to the owner to find out about licensing."

According to city officials, Facetter should not be operating without the proper occupational license.

City Manager Bill Simmons said the agency had applied for a license transfer, however he doesn't believe the labor service meets the requirements as set forth by the city, particularly regarding use.

Simmons said the previous facility on French Avenue was zoned for commercial retail use. The site at Park Avenue, he said, is designated for special commercial use. He said the current occupational license was for commercial retail and that's not what the agency is doing.

"That's a change of use," he said. "They are not commercial retail. They are a professional office."

In addition, Simmons said the agency needs to meet certain off street parking requirements. He said he thinks the agency has tried to lease parking spaces from the owner of the First Union Bank building and there may be a leasing document, but he could not comment for sure.

Simmons said he didn't know if the agency has been operating.

"But if they are, it's a potential code violation," he said.

"It's an unfortunate situation when people want to do business and can't, but we have a responsibility to enforce the codes that were adopted by this city."

Facetter management declined comment.

Teen charged with sexual battery

According to sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough, Sheriff's investigators arrested Jones at approximately 6:20 Wednesday afternoon at the District 6 Service Center in Casselberry. He said Jones is accused of sexual battery of a 17-year-old girl early Wednesday morning on the basketball court at English Estates Elementary School in Fern Park. He explained that it is a first degree felony in Florida if a suspect threatens to use force to coerce a sexual battery victim. The maximum penalty upon conviction is 30 years in prison.

Jones was being held without bond at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Robbery

A short time later, a report was received that one person matching a description of one of the robbers, had been apprehended at 25th Street and Macostin. The suspect was identified as Ephesian. The other person was said to be seen running from a wooded area near Willow Avenue.

There was no immediate word on the total amount of money taken during the robbery. A police search however, reportedly found Ephesian in possession of $23 and Odham with $203. Charges placed against the suspects were armed robbery and resisting an officer without violence.

Officers converged at that area, and the second suspect, identified as Odham, was eventually saved from the wooded area after he was attacked by the K-9 dog. Odham was said to have been bitten on both legs during the attempt to apprehend him. He was treated for the bites at Columbia Medical Center prior to being taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility for booking.

A search of the wooded area from which Odham was taken, uncovered a jacket, shirt and a shotgun, matching the description given by the store clerk.

Activities to help unemployed find jobs

Special to the Herald

ORLANDO - The number of unemployed citizens in the Orlando Metropolitan Area has increased to 29,843 over the past three years, according to the Department of Labor and the needs and problems of the unemployed is the focus of the fourth annual "HELP: The Unemployed Week", Sept. 1 through Sept. 7.

Sponsored by Christian HELP, a no-fee employment agency based in Longwood, the week offers seven free events to boost morale and provide helpful information to job seekers. These events include a Labor Day picnic, a job fair, an employment seminar, a job attack class, health screenings, legal advice, and a bicycle giveaway.

"Our mission at Christian HELP is to assist unemployed citizens and their families who want to help themselves," said Dick Wilson, president of the agency. "We help provide them with the necessary tools to find jobs, and give support along the way."

That support, throughout the year, comes in the way of free food, clothing, services, and even bicycles to the families during times of transition. "HELP: The Unemployed Week" is the agency's, once a year, "public focus" on the ongoing needs and problems of the unemployed.

Hospital Health Fair will create a fun and resourceful day for job-seekers and their families.

Wilson says the key to this week is the community support involved. Central Florida businesses like Pepsi Cola, Florida Hospital, Marriott Hotels, Darden Restaurants, Norrell Services, G. A. Repple & Company, Universal Studios, Sun-Trust and Tamar Inns are examples of community conscious companies supporting HELP Week.

Those interested in sponsorship and volunteer opportunities should contact Christian HELP at 834-4022. Donations are also being accepted.

Warren family to perform

Palmetto Avenue Baptist Church, 2626 Palmetto Ave., will hold a "Round-up Sunday" on Sept. 14. The community is invited to attend and enjoy a day of Country Gospel Music with the Warren Family performing. A dinner on the grounds will follow the morning service. Bus transportation is provided for anyone that is in need of it. Service times are 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. For more information call the church office at 323-1583.

Profile: Director of Religious Education at All Souls

By CARTER GILMARTIN
Herald Correspondent

With a Master of Arts degree in Theology and Ministry from Loyola University in New Orleans, Jan Schomp is academically prepared to be the director of religious education at All Souls Catholic Church in Sanford. Having completed a three year spiritual directors program and as a member of Spiritual Directors International, she is spiritually prepared to serve this parish as its senior pastoral minister.

But it is when she responds to questions about the Orlando Diocese' recent decision to require fingerprinting of parish volunteers that she reveals a more subtle reason she was such a good choice for this position -- her positive mind set.

"Our Diocese is presently taking a proactive stand and requiring anyone who has contact with children or the elderly to be fingerprinted and have a background check. I fully support this because for me it is a way to safeguard our precious children and elderly. Our people have responded beautifully, even knowing that although they may have been fingerprinted elsewhere it must be done for the diocese because fingerprinting and background checks are NEVER SHARED. An individual's confidentiality must be honored."

The fingerprinting has been donated and is free to parishioners. Florida Department of Law Enforcement background checks cost $15, but according to Schomp, "Father Trout has announced from the pulpit that the parish will pick up the cost for anyone who cannot pay or doesn't want to."

She embraces newcomers at All Souls with a smile, outstretched hand, sometimes a hug. For those she already knows, it is always a hug.

Four years ago, to many, she was a newcomer. Schomp was hired as DRE by Father Richard Trout, who remains the pastor at All Souls. After the departure of a much loved and respected part time DRE, he concluded a fast growing All Souls needed a full time person in the job.

All Souls offers religious instruction to over 350 children on Sunday mornings, a full time job indeed. The formal name for this program is Catechism of Christian Doctrine (CCD). Some people simply call it Sunday School. Schomp says it is similar to Sunday School in the mainline Protestant churches in that, "They, like us, are simply interested in sharing the love of God and the wonderful story of Jesus Christ with the children and with one another."

About 40 volunteers teach the children of the parish in parenting classes, Bible Studies, two full-day presentations on various Catholic teachings such as sacraments, Catholic moral teaching and so on."

Schomp herself grew up in the Catholic Church. She says, "I am what is referred to as a 'cradle Catholic.' However, I continue always to convert to and choose my faith. I do not agree with everything in the Church, but I know that is okay, and I feel empowered by my own choice to be faithful to it, to love it and to serve it with love."

It is not true that one must be Catholic to participate in activities at All Souls. "We welcome all children and adults to our parish activities," including religious education. However, Schomp notes, "A child would have to be Catholic to receive the sacraments." The fee for CCD is adjusted for "anyone who really is not able to pay, of course," she adds.

CCD meets Sunday mornings from 9-10:15 a.m. Registration is arranged through the church office from now until the end of August.

Schomp's job description has grown over the past four years, as have the programs she supervises. Is she overwhelmed? "My job is always busy, but what makes it so rewarding is the wonderful team that I work with, under the leadership of Father Trout. The people of All Souls are extraordinary in their ability to be open and caring. This parish is unusual because it has such a long and interesting history. The people of All Souls and the spirit of All Souls are nothing less than remarkable."

Where does she go from here? "My goal in ministry is always and forever to help persons and groups to be healthy, alive and loving. I believe that is what Jesus did when He walked this earth. I can only hope to try to do the same."

Orr in Concert

Sherry Orr will be in concert at Westview Baptist Church, 4100 Paola Rd., on Sun., Aug. 31 at 7 p.m. Her main goal is for people to know Jesus. She shares her personnel walk through song and testimony. The concert is free and a love offering will be taken. For more information contact the church office at 323-0523.

Gold tops Black 34-0

Special to the Herald

ORLANDO — Quarterback Daunte Culpepper of Ocala completed 15 of 20 passes for 179 yards and two touchdowns and rushed for another Thursday as the Gold, comprised of the first and second team offense and defense, defeated the Black, made up of the remainder of the squad, 34-0 in the University of Central Florida's pre-season scrimmage.

Culpepper put the Gold on the board with a five-yard run in the first quarter and then connected with receiver Todd Cleveland (Lyman) of Altamonte Springs for a 55-yard scoring play. He closed out the scoring in the first half during the two-minute drill with a five-yard toss to Kenny Clark of Ocala, capping an 11-play, 90-yard drive.

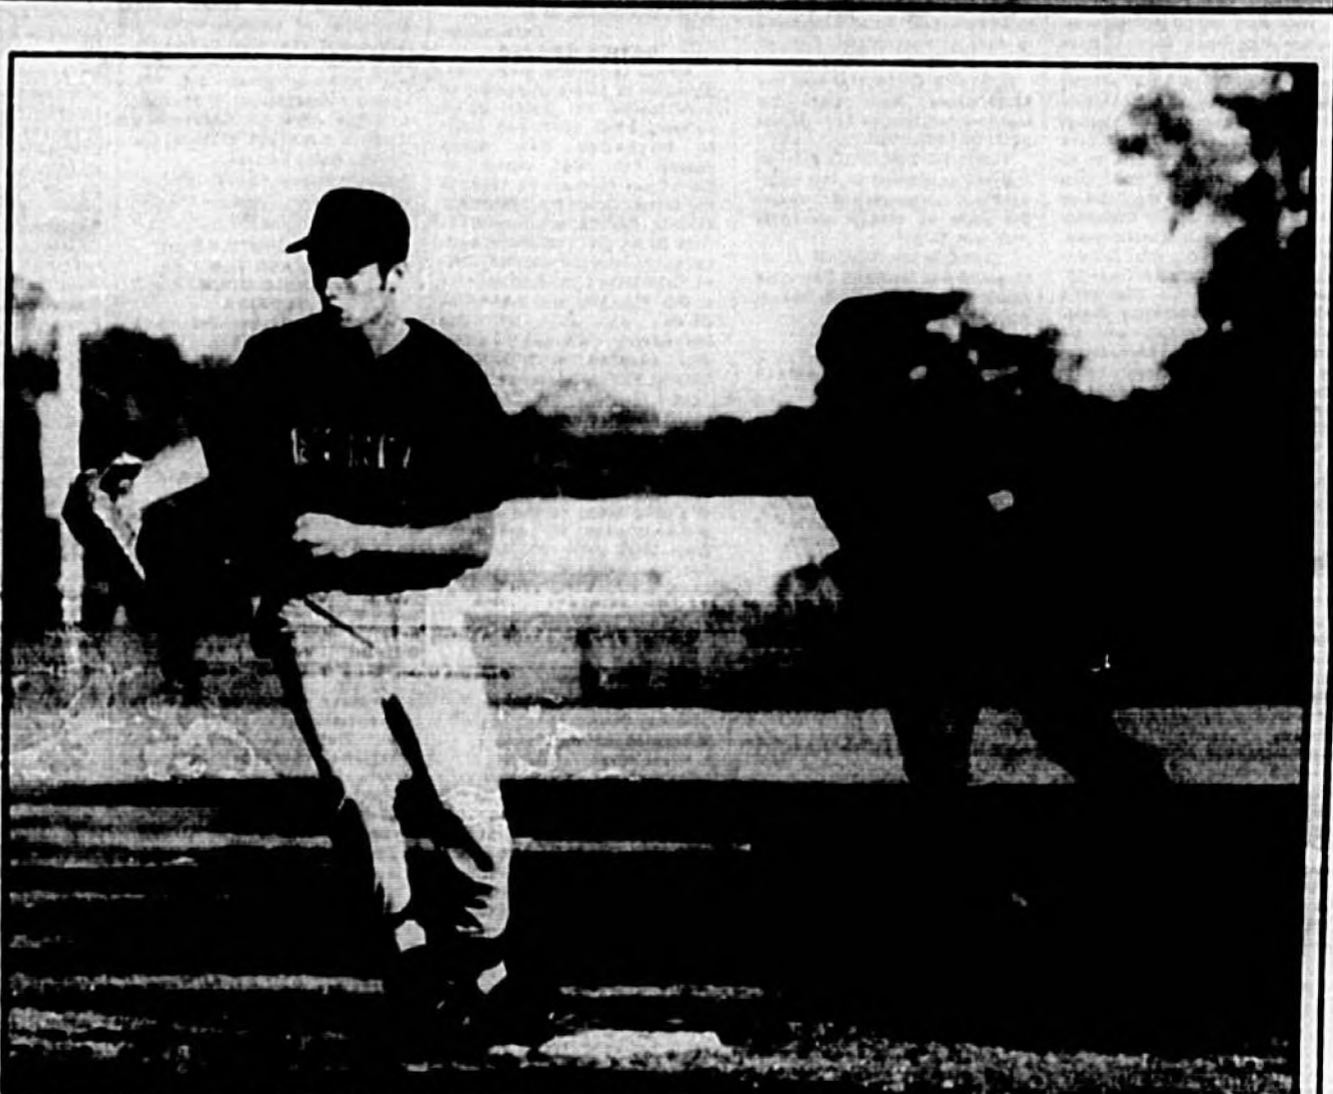

"This scrimmage was a little better than Saturday's but it wasn't good enough," UCF coach Gene McDowell said. "We're still light years away from being ready to play Ole Miss. We won 34-0 against our scouts. That's not what I would call real good. We're not ready yet, but we do have nine more days."

In the second half Jason Thorpe of Lakeland directed the Gold offense. Thorpe hit receiver Mark Nonsant with a short pass over the middle and he turned it into a 65-yard touchdown to make the score 28-0. Thorpe capped the rout with a 68-yard bomb to receiver Charles Lee in the fourth quarter.

Defensively for the Gold, Orlando's Jamel McWhorter registered two sacks, while Sanford's Emory Green tallied 1.5.

UCF will open the season at Mississippi August 30.

Miss child's events guilt-free

It may be a ball game, a recital, or a special happening at your child's daycare. Sometimes, no matter how you plan, you just can't make it.

Parents naturally hope to witness their child's memorable events. But even the most organized and dedicated parent encounters emergencies, illness, or a meeting that makes it possible to attend a planned event. To add to a parent's guilt, the child may cry, throw a tantrum, or worse, say he understands, while tears are streaming down his cheeks.

What to do? First, parents can keep in mind that there will be other events, other occasions when he or she can be there. Second, parents can simply tell the child how much they wished they could be there, and follow up with one of more of the following suggestions:

CONSUMER FOCUS

- Find a support person to be there for your child. A grandparent, neighbor, or another parent whom the child likes can serve as a suitable substitute.

- Have someone take pictures; or film the event if you have a camcorder. You and your child can then re-watch the event together and your child can give you a play-by-play of what happened.

- If your child read a poem, played an instrument, sang a song, or danced, ask for a private performance at home. Make a special night or afternoon out of it by adding a dinner for two. This may make for a more treasured memory than the actual event.

- Let your child borrow something special, such as a favorite piece of jewelry, a tie, or scarf. This will help her feel close to you and show how important you think she is.

- Take time to phone or talk to your child at the first opportunity. As for details, congratulate her, let her know how much you wished you could have been there and how much you thought of her.

What Really Counts

All parents wish they could experience the important events in their children's lives. Unfortunately, this isn't always possible.

What counts is that you ease the disappointments as much as possible and enjoy the experiences you can share together.

These are the moments that will be remembered and treasured, and will help your child realize you were always there for him or her, even when you couldn't be.

Grandparents await adoption

Survivor speaks out on 'silent killer'

DEAR ABBY: Because your column reaches millions of women every day, I am writing to you about a deadly disease that gets little attention, and as a one-year survivor, I have found women know little about it. It is the disease that killed comedian Gilda Radner, Cassandra Harris (actress Pierce Brosnan's wife), actress Carolyn Jones, Joan Hackett, Sandy Dennis, Jessica Tandy, singer/songwriter Laura Nyro, and the mother of Olympic skater Oksana Baiul (at age 38) — ovarian cancer.

The deadliest of all gynecological cancers, an estimated 26,000 cases are diagnosed in the United States each year, and 13,000 die from it annually. It is also called the "silent killer" because the symptoms are vague, often ignored or misdiagnosed by both patient and physician, and thus usually not diagnosed until it is in an advanced stage. However, there are symptoms and risk factors to know about, and early detection gives the best chance for survival.

Ovarian cancer usually strikes women between the ages of 40 and 70, although I know many women in their 30s who have it. It is more prevalent in women who have had no pregnancies, have taken fertility drugs, had an early menopause, eaten a high-fat diet or frequently used talcum powder in the genital area. It is also more common in those with a history of breast cancer or ovarian problems, or a family history of ovarian, breast or colon cancer. There are three women in my Ovarian Cancer Support Group at SHARE in New York City who had breast cancer and complained of ovarian cancer symptoms and were not diagnosed until an advanced state.

ADVICE

Symptoms that may indicate ovarian cancer are: abdominal bloating, swelling or pain, urinary frequency or urgency, constipation, gastrointestinal discomfort such as gas, nausea or indigestion, menstrual abnormalities, back and leg pain and fatigue — symptoms that women and their physicians often disregard or attribute to other causes. Many complain of a feeling of "fullness."

Since these are symptoms that women may experience from time to time, they are often told by their doctors that it's "nothing." These symptoms may be due to other causes, but if they are present for more than a few weeks, insist that your doctor rule out this dread disease by performing a pelvic examination, a pelvic sonogram, a CA-125 blood test, which is a marker for ovarian cancer, and if necessary, a CAT scan. Being persistent can save your life!

Abby, if you will print my letter, and if your readers will clip this column to share with their mothers, daughters, sisters, friends and co-workers, you could save many lives. Please help me give this "silent killer" a voice.

MARSHA NEWMAN, LONG ISLAND CITY, N.Y.

DEAR MARSHA: I'm sure many women will be grateful to you for speaking out about this killer. It is important that all women know the warning signs of cancer and notify their doctors if any unusual symptoms persist for more than a week or two. That precaution can be a lifesaver.

DEAR ABBY: Your column about pets being left in hot cars reminded me of a steamy day last summer.

My car was low on gas, so I pulled into a self-serve station that had no other customers at the time. As I filled my tank with gas, an attendant came over to admonish me for not having lowered the car's windows for my dog's comfort. I tried to explain that the air conditioner had been left on, and that for the few minutes it would take to fill the tank with gas, the dog would be much more comfortable with the windows up.

Unconvinced, the attendant said, "A dog can die with the windows up, you know."

Agreeing with the message, if not the circumstances, I smiled, nodded and drove off in my still-cool car. But I was a bit bemused that the attendant showed absolutely no concern for my two children who were also in the car with my dog.

There's no easy way out of this 'terrible' marriage

Dear Mary,

I've been married for 20 years and we have two kids in college. I have known for at least 15 years that I made a terrible mistake, but I stayed with him because I wanted our kids to grow up in a home with two parents.

Now that they are getting older, I've been thinking more and more about getting out and living my own life for a few years, before I get too old to care any more.

A couple of months ago I got too old to care anymore, so I could sort things out in my mind, and he acted like I had just fallen off a ship from another planet. He thinks he's been a wonderful husband and any woman would be happy to be married to a man like him. He said that if I want a separation, I was going to have to be the one to leave; and frankly, I don't know if I really have the courage to go out and get my own place and be on my own. Then I wonder if I might be making a serious mistake. What if I decide that life "out there" isn't what I expected and want to come back. Will I have done so much damage to the marriage by leaving that we can't pick up the pieces again? I'm lying awake nights with all this stuff going around in my brain. Please help me make some sense out of it, so I can either give up the idea or just do it.

Going In Circles

Dear Circles,

What do you do when you don't know what to do? Don't make any moves yet, unless you have reason to fear bodily harm or other awful experience. From the sound of your letter, I don't think you're anywhere near ready to take all the necessary risks and bumps associated with starting a new life. I strongly urge you to find a counselor you trust, so you can talk these things out. What do you hope to gain by leaving? What will you lose by staying? What would have to change for you to be able to remain in the marriage? What are you willing to give up to make these changes happen? This is just the tip of the question list that needs to be explored before you do anything. And remember, there is no easy way out of this situation—just different kinds of hard. If you leave, it will be hard; if you stay, you may always say, "If only..."

Are some illnesses psychosomatic?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a widow of four months and developed mild asthma and high blood pressure during my husband's illness. My doctor attributed this to stress. Three months after the funeral, I planned a trip to visit my daughter, at which time I developed a mysterious pain in my rib area. A day into the trip, it disappeared. Could all these problems be stress-related?

full disclosure of the benefits and potential risks. Only then will you be in a position to make an educated choice.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffer from catarrh. Claritin is no help. Is there a nonprescription drug for this condition?

DEAR READER: Catarrh is an antiquated term for sinus congestion and a runny nose. It is often caused by allergies to pollen, smog and other inhaled substances. In my experience, patients with this condition can often find relief by using nonprescription Chlor-Trimeton, Allerst, Actifed or Benadryl. If these products are ineffective, prescription drugs such as Zyrtec and Hismanal may help. If these fail, consultation with an allergist is the next logical step.

DEAR READER: I suppose so, but I have become increasingly skeptical of psychosomatic (emotionally-related) diseases, which were the fad during my training in the 1960s.

For example, peptic ulcer was once considered to be the quintessential stress-induced disorder. Now we know that it isn't so: Many ulcers are caused by medication (such as aspirin and similar drugs used for pain management) and other ulcer patients suffer from a bacterial infection called H. pylori that is best treated with antibiotics.

Similarly, asthma is not — as I was taught — a stifled scream for your mother to drop dead. Experts now recognize that asthma is a complex physical ailment related to allergies or low-grade bronchial infection. Yet, I am sure some asthmatics probably experience wheezing and shortness of breath purely from stress. However, I believe that such instances are rare.

The issue concerning stress and high blood pressure has yet to be resolved, because no one knows the precise cause(s) of hypertension. Clearly, some people's blood pressures rise to unacceptably high levels (above 150/90) during periods of anxiety. But my practice is full of perfectly calm, unstressed patients who need medicine for hypertension.

I agree that your husband's terminal illness may certainly have played a role in your asthma, hypertension and chest pain — but how much of a role I cannot say.

In my view, your best approach would be to have a medical checkup every six months or so, just to make sure that your breathing and blood pressure remain normal. If, after a year or two without symptoms, your health remains good, you can cut back to having a routine exam annually.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My rheumatologist wants me to try a drug called Plaquenil to boost my immune system. I suffer from symptoms of fibromyalgia, fatigue, depression and more. No one seems to be able to pinpoint exactly what is wrong with me. Is this drug safe to experiment with for these symptoms?

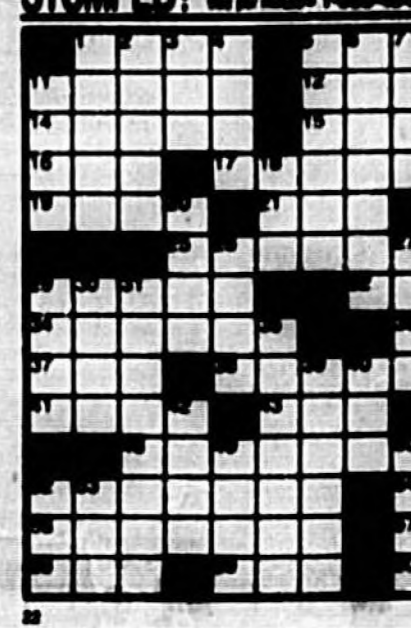

DEAR READER: Plaquenil is a drug that was originally used to treat malaria, a parasitic bloodstream infection. However, it is also an effective treatment for some forms of lupus and rheumatoid arthritis.

Evidently, your rheumatologist believes that these (or similar ailments) may be contributing to your symptoms. I'd follow his advice; such an experiment seems appropriate. Remember, however, that the drug has many side effects, including irritability, nervousness, weakness, blurred vision, hair loss, nausea, vomiting and a host of other problems. Therefore, before agreeing to take the drug, you should ask the doctor for a

A surprising error

By Phillip Alder

Joseph Joubert, a French essayist and moralist, said, "Genuinely good remarks surprise their author as well as his audience." That definitely applies to me as the author, and probably to you, the reader.

Today's deal, which occurred at the Forbe International team tournament in The Hague, features a surprising misplay by an expert. I suppose it just goes to show that anyone can take his eye off the ball.

Had they belonged in a club contract, South would have regretted his opening bid. But as it was, he reached three no-trump without giving much away.

West was unwilling to lead from any of his honors around to a big balanced hand. So, he selected the club six.

Declarer won in the dummy and immediately played a spade to his jack. After winning with the queen, West returned a club. South cashed his club tricks, took the spade ace, and crossed to dummy's spade king. When the suit didn't divide evenly, declarer tried the diamond finesse. However, it lost, leaving South with only eight tricks.

Where did declarer go wrong? Well, he started with eight top tricks. He should have taken the best shot for a third spade trick. He should have cashed the spade ace and played a spade to dummy's king, planning to lead a third round toward his jack. Here, when the queen appears on the second round, the contract is safe. South only dies when West has queen-fourth of spades and the defenders can avoid giving away a ninth trick in a red suit.

Now if I could only think of something clever to end this column, Borotto Nelson.
