

GERMANS ARE CAUGHT IN A FATAL TRIANGLE ATTACKED ON ALL SIDES

British, French, Americans, Italians Rushing In

The Germans desperately counter-attacked all around the semi-circle of the Marne salient today. They met strong resistance. There were a few fluctuations in the line, but the allies held well, responding vigorously to every attempt of the enemy to advance.

French troops were thrown in by the allies to meet the enemy blow. On both wings of the salient the artillery duels were of violent character, as the Germans had concentrated most of their guns on their flanks.

Franco-American troops this morning advanced their line north of the river Marne more steadily. The Germans continued their northward movement to the northward.

The French and Americans also made gains on other parts of the 55 miles of battle front. The Germans viciously resisted in a number of cases.

The entente allied forces in the territory to the north of Chateau Thierry are paying less attention to running down machine gun nests and are advancing their whole line, small detachments being left to clean up the enemy machine gun crews.

London, July 25.—The Pall Mall Gazette says that rumors are current that British troops have made a great advance in the direction of Fismes, about midway between Rheims and Soissons. It is also reported that French forces have advanced on another part of the Aisne-Marne salient, and that the armies of the German crown prince have been placed in a position out of which extrication seems to be impossible.

Big developments are impending on the Aisne-Marne-Rheims battle front, according to indications today. Although official reports are lacking, unofficial reports make it appear that not only are the allies rapidly continuing the process of ousting the Germans from their Marne salient, but that movement may be in process of execution by means of which it is hoped to trap a goodly section of the German crown prince's army. Driving in on the west, the French are now reported to have reached a point within three miles of the important railroad junction town of Fere-on-Tardenois, where there eight roads over which the German supplies and troops converge.

On the eastern side of the salient, according to unconfirmed reports which have reached London, British troops have driven in a great distance towards Fismes, the real German base for the district south of the Aisne. This town, 11 miles from the last reported position of the British southwest of Rheims, lies about mid-way from the top of the pocket, in which something like half a million Germans are massed.

Easily and westerly movements are tending to converge to close the pocket. Speed seems to be the watchword of the allies all along the line, as attested by orders on the American front to ignore machine gun nests and press on, leaving detachments to deal with the German gunners.

On the battlefield north of the Marne, it becomes increasingly apparent that the German retirement is well under way. This withdrawal is apparently being conducted in an orderly if not a deliberate manner, being covered by such rear guard actions as that reported at Treloup and Chassins. A study of the map of the region where the struggle is going on shows that along the line from Jaulgommis, northwest to Oulchy le Chateau, just north of the Ourcq, or even farther, the allies have pressed ahead during the past two days.

The new postoffice is getting in shape and the fixtures are being unpacked and placed. The new office will be ready for occupancy by the first of August.

Assistant Food Director. Orlando, July 24.—Col. J. N. Bradshaw, who for several years has been acting as one of the chief clerks in the office of State Food Administrator Braxton Beachum, has received an appointment from headquarters in Washington by which he becomes assistant state food administrator for the city division of the food administrator's office. This is a well-deserved promotion for Col. Bradshaw who has been untiring in his efforts to systematize the work of his office and who has for several weeks been giving his entire attention to the sugar sales section. His most earnest efforts will now be given to his particular section of the work and his endeavor will be to give all local food officials the most complete information, thus enabling them to carry forward their work intelligently and satisfactorily.

SOLDIERS SHOULD TRAIN NOW

Selects Might Train With County Guards

Representative Frank L. Woodruff of this city advanced the idea some time ago that if the boys that are to be drafted were given some preliminary training here before they left they might be kept at home longer and their training would be of inestimable value to them when they were finally sent to the training camps.

That the idea is good and has been put in practice or will be put in practice in other cities is apparent from the following extract from the Miami Metropolis:

"Further plans for the instructing of Dade county draftees in the arts of war and the provisions of the government for the welfare of the soldiers and their dependents were laid at the second meeting yesterday afternoon of the Dade county board of instruction. This board was appointed by the local draft board in accordance with others sent out from the national army headquarters.

A committee on military training and advice was appointed, composed of Major W. P. Smith, Capt. J. T. Sanders, M. D. Price, Capt. J. F. Jaudon and Capt. P. L. Ryan. Major Smith said today that he was preparing to designate drill sergeants from the home guard, which organization he is also head, to drill both the colored and the white draftees. White draftees are welcome to join the home guard and there get the rudiments of military maneuvers, Mr. Smith said, even though it should be only a week before they are to be called."

All the men who had training in the Seminole Courts and afterward went to the army camps have written back home that their preliminary training here proved a great boon to them and while no steps have been taken here to make this imperative, those who expect to join should do some training if possible before they join the army.

It might be possible that the government will recognize this fact ere long and will take steps to have the officers of the various county guard organizations to give the drafted men some training, making the officers a part of the reserve force of the American army.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Wheeler will move to Jacksonville where Mr. Wheeler will take a position as draughtsman with the Shipping Board. Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Charles will take the Wheeler home at Elder Springs and reside there as Mr. Charles has charge of the springs and the water rights.

CLASS TWO NOT CALLED FOR ARMY

Crowder Thinks Class One Will Suffice

Washington, D. C. July 25.—With the calls for increasingly large numbers of draft registrants to fill up training camps vacated by regulars, National Guard units and the first quotas of the National army, there is much speculation throughout the country as to how soon Class II men will be called for service.

There need be no immediate anxiety on the part of these men or their relatives. No call affecting Class II men will be made this year. No call for the fighting men will be made upon Class II men in 1919, in all probability.

In fact, it is the hope of Provost Marshall General Crowder that he will never have to go outside Class I for combatant units, and there is no present indication that he will have to do so.

Draft officials believe we will be able to raise and maintain an army of five million men without going into deferred classes for fighting troops. The figure five million they believe is conservative. Here is how they figure it:

The registration under the original draft law made available in Class I approximately three million men. Of these, 1,595,708 had been ordered to camp prior to July 1, 1918. Calls through July and August will make the number of selective service men in camp by Sept. 1 more than two million men.

Registrants of men who became 21 between June 5, 1917 and June 5, 1918, added another 313 hundred thousand men to Class I, so that on the 1st of September, we will still have somewhat more than 1,500,000 qualified men in Class I who will not have been called to camp.

Before these men are called to service it is expected Congress will amend the draft law to provide for the registration of men between the ages of 18 and 21 and between 31 and 45.

Just how many men this extension of the draft would bring into Class I is uncertain, but it is expected that the number would equal those between 21 and 31. At least three million Class I men would be added, it is reasonably certain. Although the percentage of deferred classifications among men from 31 to 45 would be greater than the present average, because of family dependancy and industrial grounds, the percentage of those from 18 to 21 would be higher than the average because these men would in few cases have established family ties.

This extension of the draft, then, would provide a total Class I of more than 6,000,000 men—probably nearer 7,000,000.

And until Class I is exhausted no calls will be made upon deferred classes for any fighting troops.

When Class I in any district is exhausted, no more calls will be made until that district for combatant troops so long as there is a Class I man available in any district anywhere in the country:

For certain non-combatant units, where men of special training or skill are required, and such men are not to be found among Class I registrants, then—and only then—are the deferred classes called upon. The number of these specialists taken from deferred classes has been very small.

There is to be a thorough re-combing of the deferred classes, and some persons who were granted classifications in Classes 2 and 3 may find themselves re-classified in Class I and called to camp. But in the main the original classification will hold.

Sunday Dr. Brownlee will preach his last sermon during the month of August as he will take a much needed vacation at his old home in Georgia and will also visit in North Carolina. Mrs. Brownlee will accompany him on the trip and they will be absent four or five weeks.

Transport Sunk. London, July 24.—The White Star liner Justicia has been sunk. The Justicia carried a crew of between 600 and 700. Eleven members of the crew are dead.

An Irish Port, Monday, July 24.—The giant White Star liner Justicia has been torpedoed and sunk. It is believed no loss of life occurred. She was formerly the Dutch steamer Statendam, which was taken over by the British government on the stocks at Belfast when she was nearing completion. She was a vessel of 32,234 tons gross. The sinking occurred Saturday morning.

New York, July 24.—The Justicia, reported off the coast of Ireland, was returning to an American port after delivering a large contingent of American troops, it was learned here.

The Justicia had a troop carrying space of between 7,000 and 8,000 men. Her crew numbered 500.

ALL RAILROAD SHOPMEN GET AN INCREASE

68 Cents Per Hour With Advance For Others

Washington, July 24.—Wages of railroad shopmen were increased to 68 cents an hour today by Director General McAdoo, with the proportional advances for assistants and miscellaneous classes in mechanical departments. The new rates which are retroactive to last January 1, are from 5 to 13 cents an hour higher than wages paid these men in most shops, under the general wage advance allowed two months ago by the director general but are somewhat less than the labor organizations sought.

Beginning August 1, eight hours will be recognized as a standard working day and overtime for Sundays and holiday work will be paid at the rate of one and one-half times the usual rate. Back pay will be given the men as soon as it can be calculated.

The advances apply to about 600,000 men, and apply flatly to all sections of the country despite local differences prevailing heretofore. The addition to the aggregate annual pay-roll is estimated as nearly $100,000,000. The advance is the first extensive modification of the new wage scale, and was made on recommendation of the commission of railroads wages and working conditions, following representation of shop crafts that high wages paid machinists and other mechanical workers in shipyards resulting in discrimination against railroad shop employees.

The new scale of wages was announced as follows:

"Machinists, boiler-makers, blacksmiths, sheet metal workers, moulders and first-class electrical workers, 68 cents per hour.

"Car men and second-class electrical workers, 58 cents per hour.

"Helpers, 45 cents per hour. "Foreman paid on hourly basis 5 cents per hour more than respective crafts.

"Foreman paid on monthly basis, increase $40 per month, minimum $155 and maximum $250. "New rates are retroactive to January 1, 1918.

"Beginning August 1, 1918, eight hour day, with time and one-half for overtime, Sunday work and seven specified holidays."

The full text of the new order which deals in detail with methods of calculating specific increases will be issued within the next week. The former wage increase order provided for percentage advances with a minimum of 55 cents an hour for shopmen.

Is Probably First Bale In The State This Year

Seminole County has the first bale of cotton in this part of Florida at last if not in the entire state. Last night L. A. Brumley turned out a bale of fine cotton containing 500 pounds from the farm of L. P. Hagan. This is something when you consider that Mr. Brumley is chairman of the county commissioners and is the first man in this section to raise cotton and erect a gin and that Mr. Hagan is also a member of the board of county commissioners and is the first man to pick cotton this season and has the first bale. It shows that our county commissioners are alive to the possibilities of their county and are good farmers and citizens.

Aside from this the first bale of cotton ginned in this part of the state coming from Seminole County means that Seminole will be the banner cotton county in all of South Florida, because the land is here and the men who know how to raise cotton are here. Thanks to Mr. Brumley this county has ample facilities for the ginning and baling of all the cotton that can be raised here.

Mr. Hagan who bears the distinction of raising the first bale of the season has 140 acres of fine cotton on his farm near Markham. He raised some last year but not so much of it. He is a shining example of a man who found out that he could raise staples while he was waiting for the price of turpentine to advance and while his men and teams were idle he gave them something to do and he now has many acres of cotton and corn and hay and will never again buy feed for his stock. He has found out that other things beside turpentine pays in Florida and he has joined the list of staple raising farmers for Seminole the men who have saved the day.

There is about 2000 acres of cotton in the County much of it almost ready to pick.

Movie Managers Are Placed In Embarrassing Position.

Upon several occasions last winter Manager Lane of the Lyric Theatre had a hard time explaining to his patrons that the pictures advertised had failed to come.

Some of them believed him and some of them thought he was camouflaging but Manager Lane was put out greatly by the failure of the pictures and had no redress. In the past two weeks Manager Herndon of the Star has suffered the same inconvenience. He failed to get the Last Raid of the Zeppelins because some wooden headed theatre employee in Georgia failed to ship the picture here as per orders. The patrons were sore and left the theater and the Star suffered. Wednesday night the Star advertised My Own United States extensively and a big crowd was on hand to see it. The shipping clerk of the film company in Atlanta sent the wrong picture and even this would have been all right if a picture had been sent could have been used but he sent the Battalion of Death that had been seen here and again Manager Herndon just escaped the angry mob with his life and he will never be able to explain just how it happened. He spent his money on advertising that was thrown away because the people came in and were disappointed. There should be some redress from the haughty film trust that tells the local manager just where to head in on the service and then fails to ship and thus causes the local managers no end of confusion and loss of patronage and prestige.

Mrs. W. R. Gardner of Rome Georgia was in the city several days of this week the guest of Mrs. Minarik. Mrs. Gardner is a former resident of the city where the family resided for many years and her friends were glad to see her again.

AMUSEMENT

"My Own United States" with Arnold Daly at the Star Theatre Wednesday, July 24th

The big outstanding event of a patriotic week was the Red Cross benefit performance given by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson at the Knickerbocker Theatre when "My Own United States" was presented before official Washington and a capacity audience that cheered the production to the echo. The occasion was a benefit of the Interstate Commerce Commission Red Cross Auxiliary, a branch of the big central body which has as members the wives of cabinet officers, senators and other officials.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson occupied a special box—and became so enthused over the patriotic character of the production that she not only applauded but at the conclusion of the showing exclaimed "This is indeed the most wonderful picture I have seen."

In boxes arranged on each side of the White House box were Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the Vice President; Mrs. Josephus Daniels, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Albert Burleson, wife of the Postmaster General; Mrs. Chamg Clark, wife of the Speaker of the House; Mrs. Ollie James, wife of the senator from Kentucky, together with several leaders in social and official life in the American capital.

The screen showing of "My Own United States" was preceded by the recited of "A Man Without A Country," accompanied by "My Country 'Tis of Thee." Then came a patriotic overture, and when the picture was scarcely half a reel passed the cheering and applause began. This was continued throughout the presentation and served as a remarkable tribute to the skill of the producer.

"My Own United States" is completing a big week's run at the Casino Theatre, another of the Crandall Theatres and has made a remarkable impression. It is described as the most intensely patriotic production that has been seen here and the effect upon the audience was that of intensifying their love of country and to leave each spectator prouder than ever of being an American.

America Fills the Need.

For years it has been the custom for American manufacturers to obtain each season a large number of Paris garments and readapt them to the needs of American women. Paris has always taken the lead in suggesting possible styles. But the war has brought American designs to the fore, although it has by no means served to discourage Paris artists. Now many garments wholly American are being shown, and the fact has been clearly proved this country need never in future play second fiddle. The fact that fabrics and trimmings are scarce and that wool, especially, must be conserved has probably worked to the advantage of American designers and would-be designers. For simplicity has been the rule.

Ineffectual Camouflage.

Pearl White, the movie star, said at a tea:

"If a girl is nice, you can easily tell it, and if she isn't nice, no matter what camouflage she uses, you can tell it still more easily."

"I met an actress the other day who claimed to be very nice indeed—Vassar graduate, planter's daughter, unfortunate speculations, and all that sort of thing."

"Well, this girl and I got into a taxicab to hurry to a rehearsal, and as she settled back in her seat she absently said:

"When you ride in a taxi, dear, it's a good wrinkle to breathe on the windows if you don't want to be seen."

Odd Cure for Deafness.

There have been recorded many cases of deafness and speechlessness being cured by accidental means, such as a sudden noise or an unexpected visitor, or a startling question, and in one case at least a midnight fall out of bed. But one of the strangest cases belongs to a former war, where a soldier lay for fifteen months under the influence of cataplexy. Finally, in despair, the doctors ordered the bagpipes to be played near the patient's bed. That did the work.

Uncle Eben.

"De man dat talks too much," said Uncle Eben, "an' de man dat don't talk at all both keeps you guessin' on what dey's thinkin' about."

Economy and Character.

Gladstone said: "Economy is near to the keystone to character and success. A boy that is taught to save his money will rarely be a bad man or a failure; the man who saves will rise in his trade or profession steadily; this is inevitable."

"OUTWITTING THE HUN"

By
LIEUTENANT PAT O'BRIEN

Copyright, 1918, by Pat O'Brien

As I slowed up a little, trying to make up my mind what was best to do, I was overtaken by a group of Belgian women who were shuffling along the road, and I decided to mingle with them and see if I couldn't convey the impression that I was one of their party.

As we approached the arc light, the figures of those three soldiers with their spiked helmets loomed before like a regiment. I felt as if I were walking right into the jaws of death. Rather than go through what was in store for me, I felt that I would infinitely prefer to be fighting again in the air with those four desperate Huns who had been the cause of my present plight—then, at least, I would have a chance to fight back, but now I had to risk my life and take what was coming to me without a chance to strike a blow in my own defense.

I shall never forget my feelings as we came within the shaft of light projected by that great arc light nor the faces of those three guards as we passed by them. I didn't look directly at them, but out of the corner of my eye I never missed a detail. I held a handkerchief up to my face as we passed them and endeavored to imitate the slouching gait of the Belgians as well as I could, and apparently it worked. We walked right by those guards and they paid absolutely no attention to us.

If ever a fellow felt like going down on his knees and praying I did at that moment, but it wouldn't have done to show my elation or gratitude in that conspicuous way.

It was then well after 11 o'clock and I knew it would be unsafe for me to attempt to find a lodging place in the city, and the only thing for me to do was to locate the man whose name the Belgian had given me. He had given me a good description of the street and had directed me how to get there, and I followed his instructions closely.

After walking the streets for about half an hour, I came upon one of the landmarks my friend had described to me and ten minutes afterwards I was knocking at the door of the man who was to make it possible for me to reach Holland—and liberty! At least, that was what I hoped.

REPORT TODAY

By KITTY PARSONS.

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The strains of the Mendelssohn wedding march pealed out majestically as the bride and bridegroom came slowly down the aisle.

Eleanor had always declared that she would not race out of the church, the way some couples did, and she smiled happily at the many friends who were so eagerly watching the bridal procession.

"You were beautiful, my dear, perfectly beautiful!" declared one of the guests at the reception, a little later. "And the bridegroom in his uniform is quite the handsomest thing I have ever seen. I don't wonder you married him. Has he a long leave?"

"A whole week," returned Eleanor, "and we've planned such a wonderful trip!"

The happiness of the newly married couple seemed to be shared by everyone else, and the entire bridal party sat down to the wedding breakfast amid much laughter and merriment. The best man was just proposing a toast to the bride and groom when someone handed the captain a telegram.

"Bad news, dear?" asked Eleanor apprehensively.

"The worst possible. They want me to report at headquarters today. Something important has come up, I suppose."

"Oh, Allen, how cruel! Right in the middle of our wedding, too! You'll have to hurry, too," she added, rising to the occasion like a true soldier's wife. "There's a train that leaves at one-thirty and it's after one o'clock now. Come on and I'll drive you to the station."

"You are the most wonderful girl in the world," Allen told her for the thousandth time on the way to the station.

"It won't be for long, darling—it just can't be," she choked, as for a moment she clung to him helplessly.

But it was not until the last guest had gone that Eleanor threw herself on her bed and sobbed bitterly. It had been so sudden and unexpected, and they planned everything so carefully. Her trunk had gone and Allen had paid for their rooms at the little mountain inn, where they were going. Suddenly Eleanor sat up on her bed, with an inspiration.

"I'll go just the same," she declared. "Just to see what it is like. Everything's ready and I can come back tomorrow if I want to. It may be queer to go off on a wedding trip alone, but it's a lot nicer than staying here and having all the neighbors condole with me. I'll do it!"

In a few moments Eleanor appeared before her mother, dressed for her journey, and the astounded lady looked at her in amazement. But Mrs. Osgood was a sensible woman and not easily disturbed, so she made little objection to her daughter's plans.

"If any word comes from Allen before I get back, please wire at once, mother dear. I'll be a good girl, so don't worry. Good-by."

On the thirty-mile train ride Eleanor allowed herself little time for thought, but knitted frantically all the way. The inn was some distance from the station, and the drive in the crisp winter air was delightful. There were few guests, and the kindly little old lady who kept the house did not bother her with useless questions, but took her to a cheerful sitting room where a great wood fire lay blazing on the hearth.

"Drink this tea, my dear, and rest yourself a bit. It's five now, so you'll not want dinner till seven. If you want anything, ring."

"I don't wonder he loved it here," thought Eleanor, and her eyes filled with sudden tears.

After a while her tired lids drooped and she fell asleep.

It was almost seven o'clock when Eleanor was awakened by a sound in the room.

"It must be Mrs. Green, to tell me supper is ready," she considered drowsily, and sat up on the couch. Then her eyes almost popped out of her head, for sitting in a big chair by the fire was her husband.

"Allen!" she cried, "am I dreaming again?"

"Not a bit of it!" he assured her, taking her in his arms. "It was all a mistake—the telegram was supposed to read: 'Report at headquarters in a week from today.' Stupid, but it might have been worse. I telephoned you at once and your mother told me

LESSONS FOR THE Home Embroiderer

Specially prepared for this Newspaper by Pictorial Review.

Useful and Pretty New Embroidery Designs.

Now that the days are shorter and the evenings longer, more time may be given to embroidery and knitting. Among the useful and pretty new embroideries are exquisite night-gowns made of nainsook, batiste, strong soaps can be used successfully. Wash the embroideries carefully in the soapy water, squeezing, never rubbing. Rubbing roughens and destroys the smooth quality of silk. Another point to be observed is that of rinsing in clear water of exactly the same temperature as that used for washing. To plunge silk embroidery into either very hot or very cold water is equally destructive.

Iron while quite damp. Place the work face down on a soft surface covered with a clean, white cloth and test the iron to see that it is not hot enough to scorch. An extremely hot iron will change the color of some shades of silk, so it is best to press with a cloth over the material until fairly dry, then finish with a warm iron.

All this does not mean that silk embroideries are difficult to launder. It simply means that there is a wrong and a right way, and disaster follows the wrong way.

The scarf is worked in eyelets and raised satin stitch and is suitable for many purposes. It is nice for the bureau—sideboard, side table or buffet. In making eyelets as close together as they are on this scarf, one should be careful to preserve the shape. Carry running-stitches round the outline, then clip the eyelet through the centre. Clip one side two or three times and then roll back on the wrong side with the needle. Be careful in making the turn to keep the stitches even and well over the run-in line. Now clip the linen for the other side of the eyelet. It is disastrous to clip too much at one time. It is better to clip the linen as you work and insure a much better eyelet.

Small eyelets are more readily done than large ones and the method is just the same. It is only a matter of care and practise to make the large ones.

No. 11544—Scarf for Side-Board.

milanese silks, etc., worked in delicate colors. The embroidery design pictured is for a nightie with round neck, and is executed in the faintest tones of blue for the lines, green being used for the leaves and pink for the blossoms. The sleeve-caps are combined with the body of the gown, which is in the fashionable slip-over style.

If silk is used for the embroidery, be sure to select a good washable make. One must always bear in mind that while embroidery silk does wash very nicely, directions for washing silk must be followed.

Make a strong suds of warm water, not hot, and a reliable soap, no you had come here, so I took the next train after you—are you glad to see me?"

"Glad? Why, I can't believe my eyes or ears, it's so simply wonderful. I don't honestly believe I ever appreciated you before. But I do now, and I'm too happy for words."

Allen kissed her tenderly and they sat down and talked as if they had not seen each other for years. At last Mrs. Greene actually did come to announce dinner.

"Could you eat anything?" asked Allen.

"Could I! I'm simply starved. It may not be romantic, but I am."

"So am I," admitted the bridegroom.

"Then we'll make this the wedding breakfast that we both missed today. Come on, Captain Searles." And taking him by the hand, the bride pulled him willingly towards the dining room, where they did full credit to the inn's cookery.

MOUNTAIN LOOKOUT POSTS OF ITALIANS

High on the sides of the mountains where they are battling the Austrian and Germans above the clouds in the land of eternal snows, the Italian troops have built these unusual shelters stuck out of sight and reach of the Teuton gunners. Ladders of wood lead up the cliffs from the valley to the shelters on the very top. The huts themselves are built on stilts wherever the ledges of rock permit sufficient space for the foundations. The ones shown here are used by a lookout post.

Mrs. L. E. Woods, who has been visiting her daughter here for the past several weeks returned to her home in Mascotte, Tuesday.

Mrs. A. Newcome, who has been visiting relatives in New Jersey for some two-months, returned home last week. She was accompanied by friend Mr. Newell Bateman, who was in very poor health, and who hoped to be benefited by this climate but the trip was too hard for one in his condition. He grew worse and passed away Monday night. If he had any relatives they could not be found. He was buried in Ethel cemetery Tuesday afternoon. Word from Flozelle Sills, who left

Geneva

Mrs. R. I. Gresham is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Chilson of Sanford. Mrs. Samuel McBride of Oviedo spent last Thursday in Geneva visiting her sister Mrs. Aubrey Moran.

Mrs. G. R. Nicholson is home again after a short stay with her daughter, Mrs. Tillia of Sanford. Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Huddleston are visiting their daughter Mrs. Yerkes in Jacksonville.

V. T. Peters spent the week end with his family at Daytona Beach.

Those from Geneva attending the Efficiency Campaign at the Methodist Church in Oviedo last Friday, were Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Daniels, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Phillips, Mrs. Adams, Mrs. Moran and Miss Helen Moran.

The many friends of Mrs. V. T.

Peters sympathize with her in the loss of her father, Mr. J. A. Worthy who died last Friday in Americus, Ga. Mr. Worthy at one time lived in Geneva, and had a host of friends here who mourn his loss.

Geneva had a treat in the form of a musicale by Mrs. Lucille Aspinyall Tackach of Sanford last Friday evening, also a patriotic dance by Mildred Holly. Those attending consider themselves fortunate.

Camping at Lake Harney is the order of the day.

Prof. Evans Here

On his way home from a big Epworth League meeting at Lake Junaluska, North Carolina, Prof. Garfield Evans of Southern College, who is also State President of the Epworth League of Florida, stopped over between trains Monday afternoon and made an excellent talk upon the subject "The Place of Youth in the World's Work to the members of the Sanford Epworth League and to quite a number of young Leaguers of Enterprise, who, chaperoned by the Orlando District secretary, Miss Geneva Cason, came over especially to meet and hear Prof. Evans.

The young folks of the local League had decorated the auditorium of the church with cut flowers. Before the address a short devotional service was held, concluded by Mr. Spurling, Mrs. Weima Grasse sang a solo very sweetly.

After the address, cards were handed to each one present, which divided the crowd into members of "families" of nine each. The boys class-room up stairs of the Intermediate of the S. S. had been converted into a "parlor" and on the table in the center of the room was a punch bowl full of delectable punch from which each "family" was served in turn, with a drink and delicious cake by Miss Julia Laing, Beulah Spurling and Cora Lee Tillis.

The visiting Leaguers voted the Sanford young folks, quite charming hosts.

Do You Want To Sell.

Useful things which you no longer use have a greater money value nowadays than ever before.

Furniture and furnishings of the home, side-tracked for newer things; office furniture and fixtures, replaced and more in actual use; wearables, books, pictures, musical instruments art objects; used automobiles, still serviceable—these things have a cash value which you may readily realize through advertising them "for sale" through the classified department of the Herald.

If it is not defensible to hoard food or fuel in these war times neither is it patriotic to store away or to relegate to the junk heap unused but useful articles which may be urgently needed by many people who would find it hard to purchase them at first hand. Don't permit any useful article you own to be a slacker. If you cannot use it, sell it to somebody who can and invest the money you realize from its sale in war securities. Use the Want Column. Three cents per line. Minimum 25 cents.

Should Be A Prayer.

Dear Mr. Editor:

The extract from the St. Augustine Record, published in last issue of the Sanford Herald, is timely and we would do well to heed the same admonition of responding to the signal for honoring our flag.

It seems strange that there should be so little regard paid to it sometimes; though there may be some excuse. The autos find it difficult when running to hear the whistle.

I see in St. Augustine they have two whistles blowing and the angels beside. Can't we follow their example. But the loveliest thought is not the salute the flag, as inspiring as that may be, but the remembrance of our boys in prayer—that God may bless them body and soul. How cheering to our young heroes would be the thought that a wave of prayer at noon or evening was rolling over our great country for their safety and deliverance!

It is as little as we can do to halt to heed the call to silence and remembrance while they are giving their lives to the service of humanity and freedom. Contributor.

Is Lightest Wood.

Sitka spruce, which takes from 70 to 80 years to mature, is light, compact, neatly odorless, light yellow and has scarcely distinguishable sap-wood. It has long been used for ship-building, masts, spars and by musical instrument makers for sounding boards. Douglas fir or spruce, great forests of which are found on the coast, is also a favorite wood, but is somewhat heavier than the Sitka spruce.

THESE TWO MEN REFIT THE ARMY

Lively Work of Major Fawcett and Captain Thrall at Camp Blank.

SPRUCED UP FOR OVERSEAS

Hungry and Ill-Clad Soldiers Well Fed and Made Spick-and-Span for the Voyage to Battle Front in France.

Washington.—Major George W. Fawcett is the camp quartermaster at an American embarkation camp. It is his first business to see that troops going overseas find comfortable, healthful temporary quarters, and have plenty of food. The camp is more than a rest resort for travelers. When it was established less than a year ago incoming troops were warned that they must not rely on getting any of their overseas outfit here. This is so completely changed under Major Fawcett's administration that there is nothing an organization can possibly need which this camp will not supply nearly as fast as the men can be marched to the warehouses to take the supplies away.

Major Fawcett has a ten-foot square office in an unpalated shack. He sits at a little desk with two clerks, one behind him and the other at his side. A telephone receiver is strapped over his head all the time. The officers requiring supplies for the present and future, who come into this camp make mistakes, big and little, but not one of them has ever got anything worse than an amused or an astonished grin from the camp quartermaster. "It is easier and quicker to give a man what you know he wants," the major says, "than to waste your time, his, and the government's, by quarrelling with him because he has not put his needs in proper shape."

Makes It Easy for Them.

Army regulations require particular printed formulas for requisitions, prepared with scrupulous attention to small details. Major Fawcett has taught his men to accept any scribbled memorandum on the back of an envelope or a bit of wrapping paper, tell the applicant for supplies to come back in half an hour, and then, when he returns, hand to him a perfectly arranged form of requisition, stating all his needs with military exactness, and at the same time directing him to a storehouse where his supply is already waiting.

The interior traffic of the camp has increased until 100 big motortrucks are tearing through the streets from dawn until dark, and half of them work far into the night. The more the camp speeds up the more troops Major Fawcett invites the war department to send through the camp. The ideal of seeing to it that no man crosses the seas for service with clothing and equipment which is not new, or as good as new, has just about been reached. Troops are detrained from the interior in dusty, faded clothing, patched and pulled out of shape, and go onto their ships in an incredibly short time dressed up like a show window display.

His lieutenants in charge of money disbursements, subsistence, construction, transportation, and reclamation are at his door with brand-new complications every few minutes. Bewildered supply officers, who have come to the camp without the slightest idea of what is expected of them (and who would have resigned before coming had they known) appear at his door looking scared; they listen for a few minutes to the general run of his telephone conversation, forget their fears, answer his questions with a promptness and a definiteness which seem to surprise the men themselves, and go out with their heads up, smiling confidently, and accomplish changes and settlements and substitutions such as they had never dreamed of.

Work Well Divided.

The work under Major Fawcett subdivided itself naturally so that no disproportionate burden falls on any one department, with one exception. For accounting purposes it is absolutely necessary that one man should have charge of what, in quartermaster language, is called "property." He must sign every invoice and assume responsibility for it financially. This job under Major Fawcett is that of Capt. C. E. Thrall, Q. M. R. C. Captain Thrall has counted it a big night when he has had more than four hours' sleep since the war started.

Captain Thrall has never been caught rattled. He swears now and then, but laughs at himself when he swears and he never lets anybody else get rattled. Captain Thrall is a much more tired looking man than he was a year ago—but like his chief he has found that the best way to keep men moving is to meet ignorance and stupidity alike with a friendly grin and straighten them out as they go along. Major Fawcett left the regular army 17 years ago and was for many years purchasing agent for the Philippine constabulary. Captain Thrall came from the ranks of the regular army.

The Fall Army Worm.

There is a serious outbreak of the fall army worm throughout Florida, and a round Sanford these are attacking cotton, late corn, sweet potatoes, and hay-grasses.

The worms should be destroyed at once and not be allowed to increase.

They are found generally in spots in the various fields and these spots should thoroughly dusted with powdered arsenate of lead and slaked lime in twice the lead ten pounds of the mixture to the acre.

SHERM'S DOTS

THE DOTS SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE.

Dear Folks:—This letter will be mailed to you from "somewhere in France." I am writing it aboard the transport on the first day out, and maybe it will get by the censor and then maybe again it will not, but you can at least join the dots and find out what I am doing. We sailed from (deleted by censor), and the first part of the trip was rather rough. As you know, I never was a very good sailor, and one of the officers accused me of spending too much time looking for submarines. He thought that what was I was doing, as my position was something like this.

Every mouthful of that meal tasted like angel-food to me and Huylliger sat on the edge of the bed and watched me enjoying it, at the same time outlining the plans he had made for my escape.

In brief, the scheme was to conceal me in a convent until conditions were ripe for me to make my way to the border. In the meanwhile I was to be dressed in the garb of a priest, and when the time came for me to leave the city I was to pretend that I was a Spanish sailor, because I could speak a little Spanish, which I had picked up on the coast. To attempt to play the part of a Belgian would become increasingly difficult, he pointed out, and would bring inevitable disaster in the event that I was called upon to speak.

Huylliger said I would be given sufficient money to bribe the German guards at the Dutch frontier, and he assured me that everything would work out according to schedule.

"Yours is not the first case, O'Brien, we have handled successfully," he declared. "Only three weeks ago I heard from an English merchant who had escaped from a German detention camp and came to me for assistance and whom I had been able to get through the lines. His message telling me of his safe arrival in Rotterdam came to me in an indirect way, of course, but the fact that the plans we had made carried through without mishap makes me feel that we ought to be able to do as much for you."

Outlining the Plans He Had Made for My Escape.

I told Huylliger I was ready to follow his instructions and would do anything he suggested.

"I want to rejoin my squadron as soon as I possibly can," I told him, "but I realize that it will take a certain length of time for you to make the necessary arrangements, and I will be as patient as I can."

The first thing to do, Huylliger told me, was to prepare a passport. He had a blank one and it was a comparatively simple matter to fill in the spaces, using a genuine passport which Huylliger possessed as a sample of the handwriting of the passport clerk. My occupation was entered as that of a sailor. My birthplace we gave as Spain, and we put my age at thirty. As a matter of fact, at that time I could easily have passed for thirty-five, but we figured that with proper food and a decent place to sleep at night, I could soon regain my normal appearance, and the passport would have to serve me, perhaps, for several weeks to come.

Filling in the blank spaces on the passport was, as I have said, a comparatively easy matter, but that did not begin to fill the bill. Every genuine passport bore an official rubber stamp, something like an elaborate postmark, and I was at a loss to know how to get over that difficulty.

Fortunately, however, Huylliger had half of a rubber stamp which had evidently been thrown away by the Germans, and he planned to construct the other half out of the cork from a wine bottle. He was very skillful with a penknife, and although he spilt a score or more of corks before he succeeded in getting anything like the result he was after, the finished article was far better than our most sanguine expectations. Indeed, after we had pared it over here and there, and removed whatever imperfections our repeated test disclosed, we had a stamp which made an impression so closely resembling the original that without a magnifying glass, we were sure, it would have been impossible to tell that it was a counterfeit.

Huylliger procured a camera and took a photograph of me to paste on the passport in the place provided for that purpose, and we then had a passport which was entirely satisfactory to both of us and would, we hoped, prove equally so to our friends—the Huns.

It had taken two days to fix up the passport. In the meanwhile Huylliger informed me that he had changed his plans about the convent and that instead he would take me to an empty house, where I could remain in safety until he told me it was advisable for me to proceed to the frontier.

This was quite agreeable to me, as I had had misgivings as to the kind of a priest I would make and it seemed to me to be safer to remain aloof from everyone in a deserted house than to have to mingle with people or come in contact with them, even with the best of disguises.

That night I accompanied Huylliger to a fashionable section of the city, where the house in which I was to be concealed was located.

This house turned out to be a four-story structure of brick. Huylliger told me that it had been occupied by a wealthy Belgian before the war, but since 1914 it had been uninhabited save for the occasional habitation of some refugee whom Huylliger was befriending.

Huylliger had a key and let me in, but he did not enter the house with me, stating that he would visit me in the morning.

I explored the place from top to bottom as well as I could without lights. The house was elaborately furnished, but, of course, the dust lay a quarter of an inch thick everywhere. It was a large house, containing some twenty rooms. There were two rooms in the basement four on the first floor, four on the second five on the third and five on the top. In the days that were to come I was to have plenty of opportunity to familiarize myself with the contents of that house but at that time I did not know it and I was curious enough to want to know just what the house contained.

Down in the basement there was a huge pantry but it was absolutely bare, except of dust and dirt. A door which evidently led to a sub-basement attracted my attention and I thought it might be a good idea to know just where it led to in case it became necessary for me to elude searchers.

In that cellar I found a case after case of choice wine—Huylliger subsequently told me that there were 1,800 bottles of it! I was so happy at the turn my affairs had taken and in the rosy prospects which I now entertained that I was half inclined to indulge in a little celebration then and there. On second thought, however, I remembered the old warning of the folly of shouting before you are well out of the woods, and I decided that it would be just as well to postpone the festivities for a while and go to bed instead.

In such an elaborately furnished house I had naturally conjured up ideas of a wonderfully large bed with thick hair mattress, downy quilts and big soft pillows. Indeed, I debated for a while which particular bedroom I should honor with my presence that night. Judge of my disappointment, therefore, when after visiting bedroom after bedroom, I discovered that there wasn't a bed in any one of them that was in a condition to sleep in. All the mattresses had been removed and the rooms were absolutely bare of everything in the way of wool, silk or cotton fabrics. The Germans had apparently swept the house clean.

There was nothing to do, therefore, but to make myself as comfortable as I could on the floor, but as I had grown accustomed by this time to sleeping under far less comfortable conditions, I swallowed my disappointment as cheerfully as I could and lay down for the night.

In the morning Huylliger appeared and brought me some breakfast, and after I had eaten it he asked me what connections I had in France or England from whom I could obtain money.

I told him that I banked at Cox & Co., London, and that if he needed any money I would do anything I could to get it for him, although I did not know just how such things could be arranged.

"Don't worry about that, O'Brien," he replied. "We'll find a way of getting it all right. What I want to know is how far you are prepared to go to compensate me for the risks I am rendering you!"

The change in the man's attitude stunned me. I could hardly believe my ears.

"Of course I shall pay you as well as I can for what you have done, Huylliger," I replied, trying to conceal as far as possible the disappointment his demand had occasioned me, "but don't you think that this is hardly the proper time or occasion to talk of compensation? All I have on me, as you know, is a few hundred francs, and that, of course, you are welcome to, and when I get back, if I ever do, I shall not easily forget that kindness you have shown me. I am sure you need have no concern about my showing my gratitude in a substantial way."

"That's all right, O'Brien," he insisted, looking at me in a knowing sort of way; "you may take care of me afterwards, and then again you may not. I'm not satisfied to wait. I want to be taken care of now!"

"Well, what do you want me to do? How much do you expect in the way of compensation? How can I arrange to get it to you? I am willing to do anything that is reasonable."

"I want—pounds," he replied, and he named a figure that staggered me. If I had been Lord Kitchener instead of just an ordinary lieutenant in the R. F. O., he would hardly have asked a larger sum. Perhaps he thought I was.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Introductory. Pat O'Brien tells of his purpose in writing the story of his adventures.

CHAPTER II—Tells of his enlistment in the Royal Flying Corps, his training in Canada and his transfer to France for active duty.

CHAPTER III—Describes flights in which he brought down two German airplanes and his final flight in which he was brought down wounded within the German lines and was made a prisoner of war.

CHAPTER IV—Discovers that German hospital staff barbarously neglected the badly wounded and devoted their energies to restoring those who might be returned to the firing lines. Witnessed death in flight of his best chum, Lieut. Paul Rainey.

CHAPTER V—He is taken to the officers' prison camp at Courtrai. There he begins planning his escape. By great sacrifice he manages to save and hide away two daily rations of bread.

CHAPTER VI—He conceals a map of Germany and just half an hour later is put on a train bound for a prison camp in Germany. He leaps through a window while the train is traveling at a rate of 30 miles an hour.

CHAPTER VII—For nine days he crawls through Germany, hiding during the day, traveling at night, guided by the stars and subsisting on raw vegetables. He covers 75 miles before reaching Luxembourg.

CHAPTER VIII—For nine days more he struggles on in a weakened condition through Luxembourg in the direction of Belgium.

CHAPTER IX—He endures terrible hardships, swims rivers while delirious from hunger, living like a hunted animal and on the eighteenth day after jumping from the train he crosses into Belgium.

CHAPTER X—When well on his way through Belgium he is befriended one night by a Flemish peasant, who feeds him and directs him to a man in a Belgian city who will help him to get a passport.

CHAPTER XI.

The Forged Passport.

For obvious reasons, I cannot describe the man to whom I applied for the passport nor the house in which he lived. While, in view of what subsequently happened, I would not be very much concerned if he got into trouble for having dealt with me, I realize that the hardships he had endured in common with the other inhabitants of that conquered city may possibly have distorted his idea of right and justice, and I shall not deliberately bring further disaster on him by revealing his identity.

This man—we will call him Huylliger because that is as unlike his name as it is mine—was very kind to me on that memorable night when I aroused him from his sleep and in a few words of explanation told him of my plight.

He invited me inside, prepared some food for me and, putting on a dressing gown, came and sat by me while I

The Florida Swine Growers Association will meet in Marianna on October. We know of a few around here that should be there and take a prize.

Why all this fuss about Quentin Roosevelt being killed? Other boys have been killed in the war and received two-line notice in the despatches. Young Roosevelt is no more than any other young American.

The Orlando Reporter-Star deserves special notice for getting out extra editions every time some big story about the war breaks after the regular edition is out. They issued several last week and no doubt the people down there appreciate them sufficiently to purchase enough extra copies to make it worth while.

Daytona Beach will organize a Commercial Club and they are organizing in the summer time when they have plenty of time to get in good shape for the winter business. This is a good move on the part of the people of Daytona Beach and they will see big returns in their city and in their business, if they will keep up the interest in the Club at all times.

There's a good deal of unnecessary fuss and publicity it seems to us about the movements of young Catts, who went into the army as a Captain, over the protests of the men of his company, and who was later reduced to the ranks. It is now announced, with a flourish of trumpets, that he has enlisted as a private. Many a better man has done the same, and nothing was thought about it. Let us hope he will prove a good private, and for Heaven's sake, keep quiet about it.—Lakeland Telegram. Yes, keep it private about Private Catts.

PEACE TALK

Germany is talking of peace again, and like all other camouflaging that those fat heads have done, are talking of leaving Belgium to arbitration and let Germany have Russia and the Balkans and everything else. And when Germany talks of peace, look out for the pro-Germans in America getting up and yelling about what America should do.

Hear them tell about how we should be magnanimous in our victory and how we should let Germany come back into the fold and give her something. But not as long as the American newspapers are living and true Americans are at the head of this government. We want no peace now. Do you get that, you flat-headed Prussians. We are not wanting peace even though our boys are over there and may be killed today and more of them are going over every day. We would rather be killed than let the Kaiser and his bloodthirsty devils be turned loose upon the world again.

There will be no peace until the Kaiser and every German that believes in him is dead, and this goes for those Germans in America who still believe in the Kaiser and his principles. They have fooled us long enough but we have our eyes open and there will be no peace until the entente armies are thundering at the gates of Berlin and the Kaiser is squeaking at the gates of hell.

RIVER TRANSPORTATION

The day may come when river freight is handled in barges. There will be, say, four barges for DeLand four for Sanford, four for Green Cove, Palatka, etc. One barge will be loaded for DeLand, one for each other of the larger towns, while another will contain packages for the smaller docks along the river. A boat boat will leave Jacksonville for Sanford, having in tow a dozen barges. When the boat reaches Green Cove, the Green Cove barge will be dropped off, any little freight picked up for southern points, and the boat continued to its next stopping point.

When the boat reaches DeLand Landing, the DeLand barge will be dropped off, and the boat continue on to Sanford. While the boat is on its way to Sanford and return, the DeLand barge will be unloaded and loaded up again with shipments from DeLand. This would eliminate the long stops at present necessary for loading and unloading a steamer would eliminate the expensive steamer and install in its place a little tug costing only a few thousand dollars. If it were deemed wise to carry passengers, screened upper decks could be built on the Sanford barge in which passengers could make a most delightful trip.

As much of this article as applies to the St. Johns could also apply to Halifax, Hillsboro and Indian rivers.—DeLand News.

AN ALARMING SHORTAGE OF TEACHERS ALL OVER FLORIDA.

School boards all over Florida are reporting a woeful shortage of teachers and the prospects are that many schools will have to be closed because the necessary teachers cannot be secured. Perhaps Volusia county is typical of the situation generally throughout the state. The principal of the New Smyrna schools resigned his position the other day to enter the service.

DeLand News is authority for the statement that 30 teachers have resigned to go into other work which promises to be more lucrative. There appears to be no concert of action, nothing in the nature of a strike. They have simply been driven to this action by necessity. The salaries they have received as teachers have proved inadequate for their support in a decent and comfortable manner, and the salaries offered by the government and business houses have tempted them away from their chosen profession, and this, regardless of the fact that many of them have spent time and money to fit themselves for teaching.

Should any schools have to be closed, or even submit to a shortening of the terms it would be nothing short of a calamity. The least that we can do for the future citizens of the republic is to fit them for an understanding of its duties and responsibilities. It is said there are 75,000 illiterates in the army already, which is a serious indictment for a country which has always prided itself upon the general education of its people. The uneducated man, in the army or elsewhere, is under a serious handicap. Can we afford to put this burden upon our children? Is the difference of a few mills on the dollar in taxes to be placed against the lifelong welfare of our children? For the people have it in their power to to remedy this condition.

We have the school houses, equal in appearance and convenience to those of any state in the Union, but fine buildings alone do not make a school. Those school houses must be filled with competent, well-paid teachers before we are entitled to do any boasting.

We have said that it is in the power of the people of Florida to do this. The present constitution of the state fixes the maximum millage for the support of schools at seven mills. That was doubtless sufficient when it was fixed but the population of the state has increased largely since then, and the revenue of the schools has not kept up with the increase. More buildings and more teachers have become a necessity and the school boards are confronted with an embarrassing proposition. They are required to make seven mill* do the work of ten.

Of course they cannot do it, however willing they may be. The people can help out by voting for the Ten Mill Constitutional Amendment at the next general election in November. Pass that amendment and it will go far toward making it possible to pay the teachers living wages, instead of forcing them to submit to the beggarly wage of a day laborer or leave the profession. Pass the amendment in the interest of your children, those of your neighbors and the welfare of the country generally. It does not mean that every county must assess 10 mills for the support of the schools, but that counties in which it is necessary, may do so.—Tampa Times.

Presbyterian Church

In spite of the large number of the congregation who are absent from town, we are having interesting sessions of the Sabbath School each week. Last Sunday there were representatives present from 13 states and 2 foreign countries.

Four young men from the Presbyterian congregation left Thursday for Camp Greenleaf, Ga., for the army. There are now 29 men from this church in the army and navy service. If an equal portion of the men of the whole nation were in service there would be over 7,000,000 or more than twice the present strength.

The pastor and his wife leave early next week for North Georgia to spend the month of August. There will be no preaching service after next Sabbath until September. Sunday School and prayer meeting will be conducted as usual.

The services next Sabbath will be as follows: Sabbath School 9:45 Morning Worship 11:00 A. M. Christian Endeavor 7:00 P. M. Evening Worship 8:00 P. M. You will be welcomed at these services.

GIRLS DO GOOD WORK

American Telephone Operators Now Serving in France.

Hundred Who Were Sent Over Giving Such Efficient Service More Will Be Sent.

Washington.—To the 100 girls from America now doing service as military telephone operators in France, 150 more in training schools here may soon be added, leaving a reserve force of 400 more on file out of about 8,000 applications.

The telephone is referred to as the "nerves of the army," and the young women who have been accepted for this work have undergone tests as severe as those to which a soldier at the front is subjected.

The telephone exchanges often are only a short distance behind the trenches, and the operator must possess both courage and calmness under dangerous circumstances.

"These girls," said Capt. E. J. Weston, who recruited the unit, are going to astound the people over there by their efficiency. In Paris it takes from 40 to 60 seconds to complete one call. Our girls are equipped to handle 300 calls an hour.

Other reports that have reached the war department from France show that the American hello girl is making good rapidly in a task as difficult as it is to be found back of the front line trenches.

The first group of operators entered training school here on January 12 for instruction in advanced telephony. They received practice in the largest New York exchanges and were then tried out at military cantonments. The course included talks upon personal hygiene.

The first contingent sailed on March 2. Other groups sailed in March and April and were stationed at supply depots and debarkation bases.

In addition to speaking both French and English fluently, every one of these girls has stood a loyalty test which proved that she could be trusted with military information.

The uniform prescribed consists of a coat and skirt of navy blue serge, shirtwaist of navy blue Palm Beach cloth and straight-brimmed hat of blue felt, while the regulation orange and white cord on the left sleeve is used to designate their rank as operator, supervisor, chief operator and so on.

Asking Favors.

When you ask a favor, act as if you expected it would be granted. A request that is unreasonable ought not to be made at all, and if it is reasonable, give people the credit for being ready to help. We pay our friends a poor compliment when we ask a little favor with an air of expecting that they are going to refuse.

PREVENT HOG CHOLERA

The B. A. Thomas Hog Powder has a record of 95 per cent cures of Hog Cholera. If you feed your hogs as directed, you need never fear hog cholera or any other hog disease. And the directions are very simple, just about what you are doing, plus a few cents' worth of B. A. Thomas' hog powder in the feed twice a week.

Usually, though, Cholera gets in before we know it. Then it requires close attention to each hog—each hog must be dosed—and if you will dose them as directed, you will save better than 90 per cent. If you don't, the B. A. Thomas' medicine costs you nothing. We—not some distant manufacturer—pay your money back.

Guards State Meet.

Daytona Plans Big Time on Labor Day

Daytona, July 25. At the meeting of the executive committee of the Halifax Home Guards, held in the Casino Burgoyne on Monday evening, plans for the Home Guard meeting to be held in this city on Labor day, September 2nd, were completed and the various committees were appointed.

Every Home Guard company in the state will be invited to participate and each asked to send a delegation of at least one squad to compete in the "beat-squad-in-the-state" drill, which will be held on that day in connection with the competitive soldier squad, platoon and company drills, for which prizes will be awarded.

All visiting guards will be the guests of the Halifax Home Guards, and they will be provided for from the time of their arrival until their departure. The Halifax Guards will go into camp on the City Island on Sunday, September 1st, and erect shelter tents and a mess hall for the accommodation of the visitors. A big majority of the guards from the interior of the state are expected to arrive on Sunday, and to provide for their amusement a band concert will be held at the City Island camp on Sunday afternoon, music being furnished by either an augmented or a visiting band.

The Home Guard parade in which guards from every company in the state will take part, will be held on the morning of the 2nd, followed by the competitive drilling, a baseball game in the afternoon and a big dance in the Casino in the evening.

One of the features will be a big sea-food dinner for the guards, presided over by the members of the Red Cross chapter of Daytona.

An effort will be made to secure the attendance of at least a platoon of regulars from Camp Johnson, Jacksonville, and possibly one of the regimental bands.

A number of companies have already signified their approval and intention to participate thus assuring the success of the meeting. This is the first attempt to hold a state meeting of Home Guards since their organization in this state.

Archie B. Cameron On The Job.

Mr. Archie Cameron, recently appointed deputy tax collector to collect delinquent personal property, is right on the job. He has made a good start already, and is seeing the delinquents as fast as he can; On Tuesday he closed up one place of business on Sanford Avenue, attaching the entire contents for the taxes; and on Wednesday the proprietor was at the court house early in the morning to pay up and get authority to open up again, which he did. Mr. Cameron will adopt similar measures with other delinquents.

A Model for the New Season.

Model
Sleeve

Attractive model for a silk blouse with pointed peplum.

The blouses of the coming season will not differ materially from those of the season now passing, though they will feature many charming details. An attractive model for silk, voile or any of the fashionable fabrics of the season is shown here. The front is laid in plaits and joined to a square yoke. The attached, three-piece peplum is plaited front and back, the upper edge being gathered. A fashionable line is gained by extending the right side of the peplum in a deep one-piece sleeve and the collar is of point in front. Deep cuffs finish the organdy with dainty ruffles of lace along the edge. Medium size requires 5 yards 36-inch material, with 1/2 yard organdy for collar and 5 1/2 yards of lace.

As the front of the peplum is so wide that it must be cut from an open width of material, it will be more economical to cut also the collar, front and yoke of the blouse from the same goods, as shown in the cutting guide. All of the sections of the pattern are laid on the material so that the large "O" perforations rest on a lengthwise thread.

The rest of the fabric is now folded in half. The sleeve and cuff are placed into position, with the large "O" perforations along the lengthwise thread. The back of the blouse, the back of the peplum and the belt are so arranged that the triple "T" perforations rest along the lengthwise fold of the goods.

If preferred, the belt may be of contrasting material.

the payment to him of the amount he had mentioned and demanded that I sign it.

I waved it aside. "Huylliger," I said, "you have helped me out so far and perhaps you have the power to help me further. I appreciate what you have done for me, although now, I think, I see what your motive was, but I certainly don't intend to be blackmailed and I tell you right now that I won't stand for it." "Very well," he said, "it is just as you say, but before you make up your mind so obstinately I would advise you to think it over. I'll be back this evening."

My first impulse, after the man had left, was to get out of that house just as soon as I could. I had the passport he had prepared for me, and I figured that even without further help I could now get to the border without very much difficulty, and when I got there I would have to use my own ingenuity to get through.

It was evident, however, that Huylliger still had an idea that I might change my mind with regard to the payment he had demanded, and I decided that it would be foolish to do anything until he paid me a second visit.

At the beginning of my dealings with Huylliger I had turned over to him some pictures, papers, and other things that I had on me when I entered his house, including my identification disk, and I was rather afraid that he might refuse to return them to me.

All day long I remained in the house without a particle of food other than the breakfast Huylliger had brought to me. From the windows I could see plenty to interest me and help pass the time away, but of my experiences while in that house I shall tell in detail later on, confining my attention now to a narrative of my dealing with Huylliger.

That night he appeared as he had promised.

"Well, O'Brien," he asked, as he entered the room where I was awaiting him, "what do you say? Will you sign the order or not?"

It had occurred to me during the day that the amount demanded was so fabulous that I might have signed the order without any danger of its ever being paid, but the idea of this man, who had claimed to be befriending me, endeavoring to make capital out of my plight galled me so that I was determined not to give it to him whether I could do so in safety or not.

"No, Huylliger," I replied, "I have decided to get along as best I can without any further assistance from you. I shall see that you are reasonably paid for what you have done, but I will not accept any further assistance from you at any price, and what is more I want you to return to me at once all the photographs and other papers and belongings of mine which I turned over to you a day or two ago!"

"I'm sorry about that, O'Brien," he retorted, with a show of apparent sincerity, "but that is something I cannot do."

"If you don't give me back those papers at once," I replied hotly, "I will take steps to get them, and you'll be quick too!"

"I don't know just what you could do, O'Brien," he declared coolly, "but as a matter of fact the papers and pictures you refer to are out of the country. I could not get them back to you if I wanted to."

Something told me the man was lying. "See here, Huylliger!" I threatened, advancing towards him, putting my hand on his shoulder and looking him straight in the eye, "I want those papers and I want them here before midnight to-night. If I don't get them I shall sleep in this place just once more and then, at 8 o'clock to-morrow morning, I shall go to the German authorities, give myself up, show them the passport that you fixed for me, tell them how I got it, and explain everything."

Huylliger paled. We had no lights in the house, but we were standing near a landing at the time and the moonlight was streaming through a stained-glass window.

The Belgian turned on his heel and started to go down the stairs. "Mind you," I called after him, "I shall wait for you till the city clock strikes twelve, and if you don't show up with those papers by that time, the next time you will see me is when you confront me before the German authorities. I am a desperate man, Huylliger, and I mean every word I say."

He let himself out of the door and I sat on the top stair and wondered just what he would do. Would he try to steal a march on me and get in a first word to the authorities so that my story would be discredited when I put it to them?

Of course, my threat to give myself up to the Huns was a pure bluff. While I had no desire to lose the papers which Huylliger had and which included the map and the last resting place of my poor chum Roney, I certainly had no intention of cutting off my nose to spite my face by surrendering to the Germans. I would have been shot, as sure as fate, for after all I had been able to observe behind the German lines I would be regarded as a spy and treated as such.

At the same time I thought I detected a yellow streak in Huylliger, and I figured that he would not want to take the risk of my carrying out my threat even though he believed there was but a small chance of my doing so. If I did, he would undoubtedly share my fate, and the pictures and papers he had of mine were really of no use to him, and I have never been able to ascertain why it was he wished to retain them unless they contained something—some information about me—which accounted for his complete change of attitude towards me in the first place, and he wanted the papers as evidence to account to his superiors for his conduct towards me.

When he first told me that the plan of placing me in a convent disguised as a priest had been abandoned he explained it by saying that the cardinal had issued orders to the priests to help no more fugitives, and I have since wondered whether there was anything in my papers which had turned him against me and led him to forsake me after all he had promised to do for me.

For perhaps two hours I sat on that staircase musing about the peculiar turn in my affairs, when the front door opened and Huylliger ascended the stairs.

"I have brought you such of your belongings as I still had, O'Brien," he said softly. "The rest, as I told you, I cannot give you. They are no longer in my possession."

I looked through the little bunch he handed me. It included my identification disk, most of the papers I valued, and perhaps half of the photographs.

"I don't know what your object is in retaining the rest of my pictures, Huylliger," I replied, "but as a matter of fact, the ones that are missing were only of sentimental value to me and you are welcome to them. We'll call it a beat."

I don't know whether he understood the idiom, but he sat down on the stairs just below me and cogitated for a few moments.

"O'Brien," he started finally, "I'm sorry things have gone the way they have. I feel sorry for you and I would really like to help you. I don't suppose you will believe me, but the matter of the order which which I asked you to sign was not of my doing. However, we won't go into that. The proposition was made to you and you turned it down, and that's the end of it. At the same time, I hate to leave you to your own resources and I am going to make one more suggestion to you for your own good. I have another plan to get you into Holland and if you will go with me to another house, I will introduce you to a man who I think will be in a position to help you."

"How many millions of pounds will he want for his trouble?" I answered, sarcastically.

"You can arrange that when you see him. Will you go?"

I suspected there was something fishy about the proposition, but I felt that I could take care of myself and decided to see the thing through. I knew Huylliger would not dare to deliver me to the authorities because of the fact that I had the tell-tale passport, which would be his deathknell as well as my own.

Accordingly I said I would be quite willing to go with him whenever he was ready, and he suggested that we go the next evening.

I pointed out to him that I was entirely without food and asked him whether he could not arrange to bring or send me something to eat while I remained in the house.

"I'm sorry, O'Brien," he replied, "but I'm afraid you will have to get along as best you can. When I brought you your breakfast this morning I took a desperate chance. If I had been discovered by one of the German soldiers

HANDS, ARMS, LIMBS ASLEEP

And Was Run-Down, Weak and Nervous, Says Florida Lady. Five Bottles of Cardui Made Her Well.

Kathleen, Fla.—Mrs. Dallas Prina, of this place, says: "After the birth of my last child... I got very much run-down and weakened, so much that I could hardly do anything at all. I was so awfully nervous that I could scarcely endure the least noise. My condition was getting worse all the time... I know I must have some relief or I would soon be in the bed and in a serious condition for I felt so badly and was so nervous and weak I could hardly live. My husband asked Dr. about my taking Cardui. He said, 'It's a good medicine, and good for that trouble,' so he got me five bottles... After about the second bottle I felt greatly improved... before taking it my hands and arms would go to sleep. After taking it, however, this poor circulation disappeared. My strength came back to me and I was soon on the road to health. After the use of about five bottles, I could do all my house-work and attend to my six children besides."

You can feel safe in giving Cardui a thorough trial for your troubles. It contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs, but is composed of mild, vegetable, medicinal ingredients with no bad after-effects. Thousands of women have voluntarily written, telling of the good Cardui has done them. It should help you, too. Try it.

Tigers Fond of the Water.

Tigers are extremely fond of bathing. In a zoo, if a tub is provided, they will eagerly make use of its facilities for ablution. They are frigate swimmers, and in former days it was reckoned at Singapore that they "ate a Chinaman a night," swimming across from the mainland to get him.
