You can flatten small balls of cookie dough by pressing them with a floured fork in two directions to make a crisscross pattern. Pour boiling water over slices of beef liver and let stand for about five minutes; flavor is improved this way.

A Doctor in the Family

By ELIZABETH SHERBET

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

ALAN spent an hour in his bathroom, looking at the situation which had been done, which was ridiculous. Then he went in to see Mrs. Blake, and stood thoughtfully outside her door. She lay quietly upon the white pillow, without a word, or any response to his voice. He must talk to the doctor about his wife. Some decision must immediately be made. When he finished with his rounds, he was just about eight.

Suddenly he turned his car around on the main drive, and from the hill to Margaret's little white cottage. Lamplight streamed from the windows. He touched the doorbell and Jim came to answer.

"Mrs. Blake's in," he screamed.

"What you bring . . . ?" No guest, he looked off.

Alan put his arm around the girl's shoulder, and went with her into the small, bright living room where Margaret was busy with a ribbon she was trying to "do" her hair.

"What's all right?" he laughed. "I don't bring anybody anything. I'm a doctor in the family."

"The twins are stopping out," Margaret announced.

"What do you mean? On a school night?"

"There's no school tomorrow. Some sort of school meeting. I'm sure that the party is late for the school."

"We're not going," Margaret said. "The school is for the boys. We're supposed to be there."

"I'm going to be late then."

"It's Alan's boss that's late," Margaret said.

Alan made a hurried face at him.

"Alan, what's that? What is it?"

"It's Mrs. Blake's Valentine party," explained Margaret. "She wanted everyone that this party was one of the high spots of Alan's year. She's coming with the boys and the school. Alan was to come to Alan, then Jim would stop next door to Alan."

"What time?" Alan asked.

"Eight o'clock," said Margaret. "If the school had already been considerably delayed, that I feel—"

"I know, I know, Alan is handsomely compensated, and a pain as much as going on this party," Alan said.

"Alan, what's that?" Alan asked.

"Alan, what's that?" Alan asked.

"Alan, what's that?" Alan asked.

Lucy Chaney!" she cried desperately. "She can't state, or play ping-pong."

"She must have something!" Alan said.

"The sure does," agreed Jim heartily, and Margaret and Alan looked at him, started.

"Jim must have a carriage!" said Alan derisively.

Alan's eyebrows went up; he was impressed.

"A tiny one of button mums," Margaret explained. "Rather sweet."

"Cost fifty cents," announced Jim.

"Fifty?" said his sister. "I'd spit in a guy's eye if he sent me a fifty-cent carriage!"

The older ones were referred to the doorbell. Alan rose to answer, and followed young Alan Mayne into the room. Miss Little Mae's great-nephew was dressed, as was Jim, in blue flannel and white collar; he came bearing a square white box.

"Good evening, Mrs. Giddens," he said. "Here, Ann—"

She shrieked covered with a comprehensive blush, he thrust the box toward Ann; she took it to her mother, and together they opened it, to disclose a truly magnificent carriage. A cluster of violets, surrounded by a circle of tiny pink roses, that all bordered by lace, with a downy fluff ribbon canopy.

Alan gaped with eyed pleasure; she asked the confetti and whirled about the room in dizzy delight; she wagged it under her brother's nose. "Isn't it beautiful?" she cried.

It was Jim's turn to be jealous—his sister. "A.W." he cried. "I'll bet it's the carriage his sister had for last night. She had one just like that. A second-hand carriage!"

Alan stood stricken, and so did poor Ann. Margaret hastened to their rescue. Ignoring her own, she picked up Ann's coat. "I'll carry it for you to the party, dear," she said gaily. "It's the kind you can carry. Lucy may have carried this last night; she had the carriage, didn't she? I'd be very flattered to have her carriage!"

It did the trick. Ann and her frilled escort went happily out to the car, but Alan's hand detained Jim for a minute. "Look here, Alan," he said sternly. "Real guys don't go around carrying women."

"Alan made fun of my carriage?" "We men are tough and can take a little hurt. The point is, no guy would be dumb to over-estimate a girl's value. Sometimes we hurt 'em without meaning to, but to do it deliberately, that's out, boy! Understand?"

"I guess so," said Jim solemnly.

"Well, get along to your party, then—and have a good time!"

"At Mrs. Blake's? You crazy?"

But he dashed out of the house, and Alan closed the door behind him.

(To Be Continued)

"Whatever would I do without you?" she asked.

"Well, I take on a bit of extra authority with the twins," he agreed. "They don't have a dad, and I don't have a son."

Margaret looked at him thoughtfully, then she said, "Well, you're certainly a rock of stability for us all, dear. How did the trip go?"

"Oravely, he talked of the trip. He already knew his prime purpose in going. He spoke of the people he had met, the good work he'd done."

"I had a letter from Alan while you were gone," she told in her turn.

Alan took out his pipe. "Good! What did he have to say?"

Margaret laughed. "He had a message—a comment, rather—about you."

"Oh?"

"He said that to be a doctor in the Army, on active duty, a man should be a hundred years old to have acquired all the experience required, but no more than ten to have adequate strength and energy. And Alan's comment was that he guessed you could have filled the bill."

"He meant it for a compliment."

"What else did he say?"

"Nothing, of course, about where he was or what he was doing. He had a whole paragraph over the arrival of some WAC's at the Base. Said he took back everything he'd ever said or thought against girls in the Army that night. I'll see if I can quote it. I can't begin to describe the charm those American women have for me. What do you think of that, Alan?"

Alan smiled through the smoke from his pipe. "What am I supposed to think? The kid was glad to see someone from home."

"Not just somebody, Alan. It was girls—and I don't think he was writing to any kid. Do you suppose he's grown up that much. Alan, that's just the boy who went away from here 18—18 a man, now?"

"What else do you want him to be?" asked Alan comfortably.

"He's turned twenty-one."

"I'm, I know . . . I worry about him. I'm sure. I'm sure. I'm sure."

"Oh, come on, Alan."

She sat thoughtful in the corner of the couch, gazing into the fire. Alan smiled at her. He wanted to have some talk to Margaret about Fred Blake, and about his wish. From, yet his tongue could not seem to shape the words.

"Alan," Margaret said softly, and he glanced at her.

She looked and stared her small hands. "I want to tell you," she began again. "If you think I should go on wearing my ring, the engagement ring he gave me, now that I'm in love with another man?"

Thomson Looks Ready

By ED WILES

The Associated Press

It's been a long time coming, but Bobby Thomson finally looks ready to deliver the payoff for the Milwaukee Braves in that ill-fated deal they arranged to get him from the New York Giants in 1934.

The Swatting Scot was the man the Braves figured they needed for the pennant, and so they packaged pitchers Johnny Antonelli and Don Liddle, catcher Ebbs St. Clair, infielder Billy Klaus and about $300,000 and sent them to the Polo Grounds for Bobby and catcher Sam Calderone.

You know what happened. Thomson broke an ankle in spring training, hit only two home runs and the Braves finished third. The Giants won the flag—with Antonelli winning 21 games.

Let season, Thomson hit 13 homers while playing on a part-time basis and the Braves finished second to Brooklyn.

Now Thomson has eight home runs so far this season and the Milwaukee lead the National League by a game. Bobby slammed four homers, had six hits in nine trips and drove in seven runs as the Braves split a double-header with the Chicago Cubs yesterday.

All told, the two clubs combined for 15 home runs among the record 50 which were blasted in the 18 game Memorial Day card.

For all the records and Thomson's great day, however, most of the excitement was set off by Mickey, Mantle's "nearmiss." The Oklahoma strong boy, jolting his 19th and 20th homers of the season as the New York Yankees swept Washington, smacked one against the facade on the third tier in right field that missed by 18 inches of being the first fair ball ever hit out of mammoth Yankee Stadium.

Pastrano Wins Split Decision Over Spieser

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Wills Pastrano's finally got Chuck Spieser out of his hair, but the swift New Orleans heavyweight's future plans have little pattern.

Pastrano, borrowing a page from the baseball manual, hit to all fields last night. He displayed a newly acquired style of infighting in winning a nationally televised round split decision over the former Olympic team member from Detroit.

At 172, Spieser spotted Pastrano 104 pounds.

The meeting was the third between the two and the record now shows two triumphs for Pastrano and one draw.

Pastrano opened bad cuts under Spieser's eyes and showed a marked superiority in the boxing department. But the officials couldn't agree on the decision.

Referee Frank Kercheval tabbed Spieser the winner 6 rounds to 5 with the crowd of 9,000 howling in disapproval. But Judge Eddie Kid Wolfe had Wills winning, 8-1 with 1 even and Judge Fats Giaruso had Pastrano ahead 7-1-3. The AP tally had Pastrano far in front 8-2.

Pastrano said he had a two-week cruise with the Naval Reserve aboard of him and then—well, he just doesn't know.

"I'll take on whoever they want me to fight," he said, "but I don't think there's anything definite."

Texas Tourney Gets Underway Today

DALLAS (AP)—Texas' best golf tournament both in money and quality—the $70,000 Texas International Open—started today with Sam Snead in the familiar role of favorite but with a score of others strongly backed.

It's the second half of Dallas' $100,000 golf show. Don January, the Abilene, Tex., freshman to pro ranks, won the first one, the $30,000 Dallas Centennial Open, last weekend.

January is in this tournament too but isn't among the favorites. He plays in the opening round today with Gene Littler, Singing Mills, Calif., and Freddie Haas, New Orleans.

Snead, who fired a 3-under-par 67 over the 6,218-yard Preston Hollow Country Club course yesterday but still complained about his putting, hits his first tee shot for keeps this afternoon, being in a breeze with Wally Ulrich, Rochester, Minn., and Dick Mayer, St. Petersburg, Fla.

FIREMAN ON THE JOB

RAND, W. Va. (AP)—Volunteer fireman Charles Butler was right there when the alarms sounded. Good thing too, for it was his house on fire.

"Charlie was a little excited at first," Chief George Hunt said, "but he soon calmed down and took his post."

Flaherty Wins 500-Mile Race

By DALE BURGESS

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—If any race driver still thought green was a bad luck color an ancient superstition in the trade, they could get a sound argument today from George Francis Patrick (Pat) Flaherty, who won the 49th 500-mile race at Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Flaherty, a red-haired, 36-year-old racing veteran, roared unscathed yesterday around a track littered with all and debris from seven bad wrecks and innumerable spins and slides.

Two drivers, two pit crew members and two spectators were hurt as cars splattered against the concrete retaining walls and banged into one another.

Tony Bettenhausen of Tinley Park, Ill., suffered a fractured collar bone and Jimmy Daywalk of Indianapolis suffered a burned arm when their cars crashed into the walls in separate accidents. They were reported in good condition at a hospital.

Flaherty, who runs a bar when he isn't racing, didn't put a scratch on the big green shamrock painted on the front of his helmet.

He started on the pole as the fastest qualifier in speedway history and he beat veteran Sam Hanks of Burbank, Calif., to the finish line in the closest windup since Wilbur Shap nipped Ralph Hapburn by 2.15 seconds in 1937.

Flaherty took the 41-year-old Hanks by 26.46 seconds, or about a third of the 24-mile track.

The racing during competition was the fastest ever but due to an hour and 11 minutes of slowdowns for wrecks the final average was 128.49 miles an hour compared with Bill Vukovich's 1934 record of 130.84.

TRAFFIC TROUBLE

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP)—While Richard E. Arms, city-county planner was attending a meeting on how to move traffic by state toll roads, his car was tagged for obstructing traffic.

Police Officer James F. Vesely called a wrecker to tow away Arms' car, and Arms paid Traffic Sgt. Charles E. Berro a $5 fine.

SMITHS GET TOGETHER
SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)—Gerry Smith, a legal secretary, had four people in her waiting room. All four were named Smith and all were unrelated.

DALLAS, (AP)—H. N. Red Smith chief of the Texas office of the U.S. Soil Conservation Service, has spent a lifetime fighting dust storms—and eaten a lot of dust doing it.

For those who have never seen a dust storm strike, he has about as good a description as you could want.

"I was driving along around Eden, Texas, the other day," he says. "It was as pretty and sunshiny a day as you would want to see.

"All at once what looked like a cloud bank cut off the sun. It was late afternoon and the sun wasn't very high. I was driving west. Then I saw it coming. It was rolling and boiling along the ground.

"Then I was in it, and within 100 yards, it changed from a bright, clear day to where I could not see 50 yards any direction."

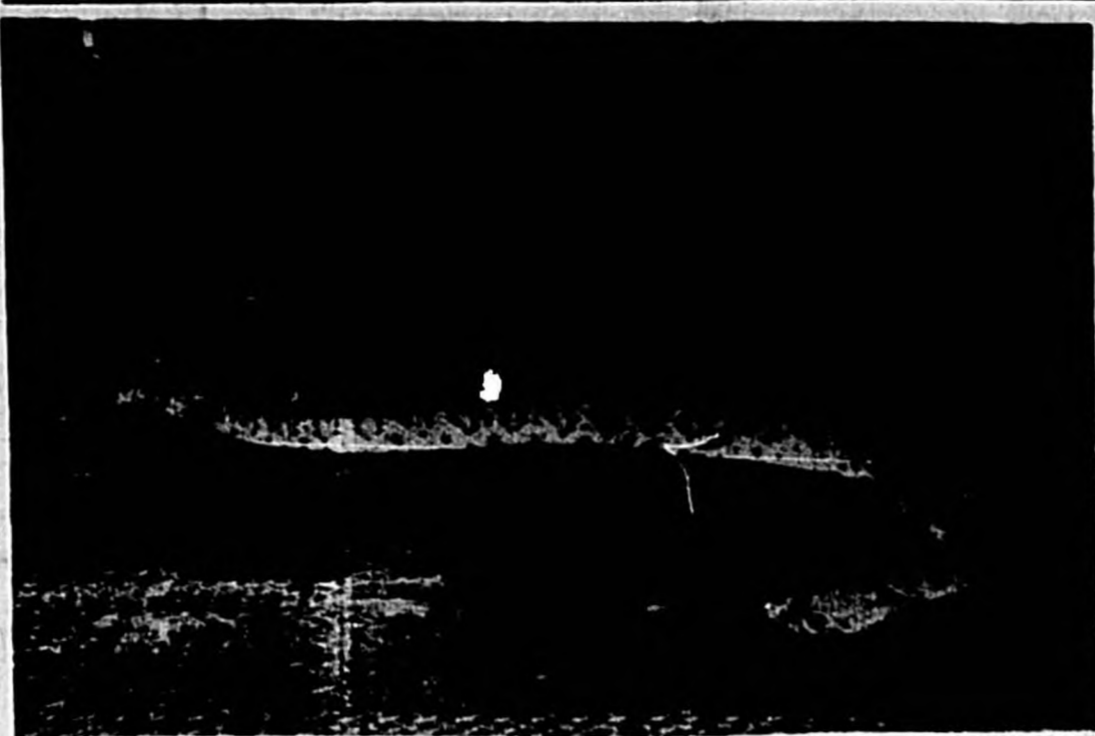

This year, dust storms like the one Red Smith describes have dropped visibility to zero in many places in the Great Plains. Drivers turn on their headlights at noon. Travelers creep off the highway and sit there, riding out the storm. Winds sweep the flat, unbroken fields and ranges. And when they do, they pick up the soil, suck it into the air, and with a little bit of land here and a little bit there, build it into a duster. The dust doesn't stop in the area, from which it comes. It heads east and southeast.

When the folk in Dallas and Kansas City and Shreveport, and occasionally as far to the east as ships in the north Atlantic, start choking on the thick, dirty soil swirling around them, the question arises: "Does this mean another Dust Bowl?"

To many people, the over-dramatized Dust Bowl refers to a great area of the West in which the land was destroyed by drought and wind.

Actually, the real dust bowl of the "dirty 30s" was a very small area of severe wind erosion. It was composed of 5 complete counties and portions of 11 others in a relatively small area where Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, Colorado and Kansas bunch together. A dozen or so Associated Press reporters, digging deeply into the facts, find this is the situation today:

1. The southern Great Plains are so vast that soil and drought conditions in one section may not occur in others.
2. Speaking, the drought is very serious now, particularly in eastern Colorado, eastern New Mexico and parts of Texas, and where there is drought, there is actual or potential wind erosion in varying degrees.
3. There is no true dust bowl now and none is expected as long as farmers have the money to fight back.
4. Many farmers, squeezed between drought and falling crop prices, have been forced out of business, but the land hasn't been abandoned—it's been taken over by other farmers.

RATTLESNAKE five-feet eight-inches long, killed recently in the Floral Heights Section by Florida Power and Light Company Meterman Jim Buckler. (Staff Photo)

1. The wheat crop—and much of this land is planted to wheat—is badly hit or abandoned this year on many farms—up to 90 per cent loss in some cases.

"I don't think it's anything like the Dust Bowl yet, but it's in good shape to get that way. Doubt if we have much more moisture now than then."

The present difficulty is that the drought—extending back to 1930—has in some instances prevented farmers from raising cover crops.

What rain fell came at the wrong time and was distributed in a spotty manner. Some wheat that did sprout failed to get enough follow-up rain to gain strength and size.

The best cure for wind erosion is a cover crop. These also are cash crops such as wheat and grain sorghums, which provide excellent soil protection if properly managed.

Next to cover crops, the use of earth cloids probably is the most important soil conservation practice. Cloids are too big to blow.

Farmers, with their big machines, dig them to the surface and hope that a small, insecticidal shower will not break them down. But a little arithmetic tells why farmers don't want to turn loose of this very fertile land. Their stakes make pikers of Las Vegas gamblers.

This land grows as much as 80 bushels of wheat to the acre when the weather is right, and 30 bushels in many places is considered only a moderately good harvest. A man on a 1,000-acre farm—not unusually large for this section—making 30 bushels to the acre will have 30,000 bushels which, sold at $2 a bushel, grosses $60,000.

True, some people are being forced off the land. Paul Swisher, Colorado agricultural commissioner, says his state has lost 5,000 farm units since the present drought began in 1930.

In these cases, the land really isn't abandoned. Other operators absorb the holdings. Average

Of the people who remain, Swisher says:

"I've never seen such a bunch of rugged people... they have more spirit and tenacity than any group I've ever seen. The way they take it day after day is almost unbelievable.

"This area (Eastern Colorado) is a high risk area, but when the country blooms, it is a paradise and can make money fast."

Swisher believes the only way to ship the soil erosion problem permanently is to turn fields into grass. But families with small acreage can't afford to—a grass economy wouldn't support them in dryland areas. And they, like the largescale farmers, always see that big crop and the money rolling in next year, or the next, or the next—if it rains in the right place at the right time.

Dr. George Constantly On Move

NASSAU, Bahamas, (AP)—Try to imagine one doctor serving all of New England—the combined areas of Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

He is Dr. Steven George, 56, mild-spoken, British physician and surgeon who took his medical degrees at Glasgow University in Scotland.

And he's constantly on the move among hundreds of islands scattered over 70,000 square miles of ocean. He is the only doctor for many of the 40,000 people who live on these islands, some of them tiny spots of land that are little more than big sandbars.

They are the outer islands of the Bahamas chain—British-owned sandy islets that begin a scant 50 miles off the coast of Florida.

Dr. George travels by plane, small and freight boat, he hitchhikes on millionaire yachts headed his way; and he sometimes sails in Bahamas native sloops, small sailing vessels straight out of another century that carry tiny cargoes of vegetables, fish and maybe a goat or two. Often he must wade ashore at his destination.

Dr. George was brought to the Bahamas by a group of Nassau business leaders who formed an organization they called community welfare. There are a few scattered, resident physicians here and there in this island chain—very few. But the majority of the people cannot reach a doctor.

It was for them that community welfare brought Doctor George to the Bahamas.

With the limited funds at their command they brought a traveling clinic and dispensary—two packing cases—in being.

Dr. George carries his portable "hospital" with him from one island to another. He'll plan a week's visit to one of the major groups, avoiding the few areas where there might be resident medical service. In a typical seven-day period spent touring the Abaco group—a primitive outpost of civilization only 100 miles from the U. S. mainland of Florida—he treated 412 patients and emptied his dispensary case of medicines.

Typical of his stops was Grand Cay, a tiny community of thatched huts, fishing nets, and graceful palm trees. Here willing hands helped set up his clinic in a little church.

Pop-eyed youngsters and bashful elders—some of whom had never seen a real doctor in all their lives—looked on in interest and awe as the doctor opened his examining cases.

It was 4:30 in the afternoon, with the warm tropical sun beginning to dip toward the sea, when he was ready.

First in line was a tall, elderly native who complained of a backache. Although he was 76, he developed he still worked actively as a crabfisherman, delving into the sea all through the day for the succulent crabfish which sell in the markets as rockfish lobster. Vigorous and continuing exercise kept him fit, he said, and he was suffering from lumbago.

"I'm no longer a young man," the doctor told him. "A liberal supply of alleviating medicine, with instructions, will give you relief."

More and more patients filed silently into the church. The line dwindled and finally, long after dark, the last patient filed by and Doctor George leaned back with a much needed cigarette. But even as he smoked a fishing cruiser came in from Walker's Cay, an island a dozen miles away, with nine more patients.

Finally it was ended. There had been 42 patients, some with trivial complaints, some with quite serious medical problems.

And so it was for a week—travel from one island to another, open up his clinic, treat an average of ten patients an hour, then back to boat or plane and on to another isle.

Chances are that, as you read this, the tireless doctor burdened with a workload that would stagger a younger man, is off on another island-hopping medical expedition.

Perhaps they will offer a few shillings—all the cash money they possess in a place where hard cash is truly scarce—and the doctor will courteously refuse as he always does, telling them they may send a contribution to community welfare if they wish.

Community welfare's sponsors see a continuing need for the work of the Bahamas bush doctor. They have put the program of medical aid for the out islands on a firm footing. They hope to expand it; the work of Dr. George, they feel, is vital to the health of the natives.

Kansas On Alert For Tornadoes

TOPEKA, Kan., (AP)—The gentle south breeze fades away. An abnormally humid and oppressive calm lies across the land.

Out of the southwest appears a low line of thunderheads. They rise quickly, loom like angry flood waters and soon dominate the sky. There's a wild turmoil as the clouds, bulging down instead of up, roll about each other.

Kansas knows that means tornado weather. They're especially alert these days since May and June are the months when tornadoes hit most frequently.

Kansas has more tornadoes than any other state. A total of 1,014 blew into the state from 1916 through 1955. There were a record 145 last year, including the one which leveled Little Udall, killing 82.

Nationwide in 1955 there were a record 919 compared to the previous high of 690 in 1954. They killed 120 and injured 956. Chances of getting hit by one of the funnel-shaped storms are less than for getting hurt in a car ride.

There were 8,774 killed between 1916-1954 in tornadoes throughout the country. That compares with an average annual toll of 38,300 auto accident deaths.

Tornadoes have struck in every state, in every month and at every hour.

The spinning corkscrews possess tremendous lifting strength and have been known to produce whirling masses reaching jet speeds of more than 600 miles an hour. They pack more wallop than an atom bomb.

Nobody knows for certain just how much energy is generated in the vortex of a tornado because the twister's rotary winds chew up measuring instruments.

Tornadoes have been variously described as sounding like roaring freight trains, hundreds of airplanes and even like millions of bees.

Milton Tabor of Topeka tells of a tornado he once saw: "It formed where we were enjoying a picnic and whirled furiously over our heads. We looked up in what appeared to be an enormous hollow cylinder, bright inside with lightning flashes but black as the blackest night all around. The noise was like 10 million bees plus a roar that began to grow louder."

Other island-hopping medical expeditions.

Perhaps they will offer a few shillings—all the cash money they possess in a place where hard cash is truly scarce—and the doctor will courteously refuse as he always does, telling them they may send a contribution to community welfare if they wish.

Tracking Station To Be Established In West Indies

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Capt. A. B. Metzger, deputy chief of naval research, announced Wednesday a special radio and radar tracking station will be established in the West Indies.

He said it will be set up in the eastern section for use in connection with the space satellite to be launched more than a year hence from Patrick Air Force Base in Florida.

"The purpose of this station is to obtain an initial fix on the satellite right after it has been launched," Metzger said in an address prepared for the Aviation Writers Assn.

"This will make it possible to determine whether the vehicle actually was established in an orbit, and to estimate the orbit in a preliminary and a very rough fashion."

"The United States plans to launch a small sphere, 20 inches in diameter, into an orbit around the earth at an altitude of 200 miles or more. Its lifetime might be 15 days."

Metzger said the initial information could enable scientists to "localize" the time of arrival of this sphere over any given ground location to within several hundred miles in the initial orbit.

The thunderclouds have an ominous appearance. The color often is described as sickly greenish black. Out of the base of this dark, thundercloud, a funnel-shaped cloud reaches toward the earth, spinning counter clockwise.

The funnel varies. Sometimes it is a sort of thin, dangling rope. Often it resembles an elephant's trunk as it weaves back and forth across its path.

Tornadoes usually move from the southwest. They average 25 to 40 miles an hour but have varied from five to 139 miles an hour. They usually occur between 3 and 7 p.m.

There is no universal protection except caves or underground excavations.

If you are in open country when a tornado is sighted move at right angles to the storm's path. If there is no time to escape lie flat in the nearest depression such as a ditch or ravine.

There'll be more scientific mechanisms than before at strategic observation posts to warn of tornadoes this year as scientists try to unlock secrets of the devastating storms.

The weather bureau's storm forecasting center at Kansas City issues warnings two to four hours in advance, spotting about 70 per cent of the twisters within 150 miles of the warning area.

Despite advanced knowledge of meteorology and new forecasting equipment, however, there is still no foolproof way to tell in advance when or where a tornado will strike.

If You Breathe Too Fast

By NERMAN H. BUNDESEN, M.D.

DO you breathe too rapidly or too deeply? Many persons actually overbreathe and get only trouble for their efforts. Overbreathing, or hyperventilation, occurs when the rate of depth of respiration is greater than that needed to satisfy the oxygen requirements of your body.

Less Oxygen
This means that your body loses a greater amount of carbon dioxide with the result that your hemoglobin clings more tightly to the bound oxygen. Thus, less oxygen is distributed to the tissues as your blood courses through your body.

In the brain, and other sensitive tissues, this lack of oxygen is apt to have immediate effects. You may develop a giddy feeling or even lose consciousness; your face may become flushed; your vision may be blurred and your hands may tingle and feel numb.

By this time you realize something is wrong. Since you usually only have no control over what is happening, you might become panicky. And this will add to your symptoms.

Hyperventilation can be caused by various things. Exertion, especially excessive running, sometimes sets up an overbreathing cycle in apparently healthy individuals. They simply can't reduce the rate and depth of breathing after it has been automatically increased by the exertion.

Exposure to cold, fear, pain or other strong emotional upsets might start hyperventilation to prepare you for flight or fight. It's a natural response to such stimulants.

Maybe you'll launch an episode of overbreathing by frequently yawning or sighing to relieve anxiety or tension. Eventually this sighing might become deep enough and frequent enough to produce hyperventilation.

Sometimes persons actually develop a habit of overbreathing upon finding themselves in an unpleasant situation.

For example, you might light a cigarette when under tension or an obese person may seek consolation in food.

QUESTION AND ANSWER
Mrs. A. Z.: I am 52 years old and have not had a menstruation period for over a year. Am I still in danger of becoming pregnant?

Answer: Usually, in women in whom menstruation has ceased for this period of time, there is no chance of becoming pregnant.

135 Boys, Girls Get Diplomas At Jr. High Graduation Today

Ministerial Assn. Sets Church Loyalty Month For October

Church Loyalty Month will be observed in October, the Seminole County Ministerial Association decided Thursday at a called meeting. Plans will be adopted at the next meeting, the first Tuesday in September, following the summer recess.

The recommendations of a committee headed by the Rev. Perry L. Stone for the establishment of a chaplaincy at Seminole Memorial Hospital on a voluntary, non-secular, week-about basis were adopted. The recommendations will now go to the hospital trustees for consideration.

When Welcome Wagon, Inc., begins operations the association will have folders printed, listing the names and addresses of the churches, and made available for distribution to new residents by both Welcome Wagon and the Florida Greeting Service, it was announced.

A letter composed by Dr. W. P. Brooks Jr. and the Rev. A. G. McInnis, commanding retiring SSB Principal Herman E. Morris was unanimously adopted by the association and signed by the officers.

In response to an inquiry from the Marion County Ministers' Association regarding the effects of dog track gambling, the pastors voted "there is nothing good about it."

Favorable interest in the Langer bill which would restrict liquor advertising was expressed. It was agreed to encourage the replacement of the blood bank when the new opportunity arises.

Girl Scouts Hold Initiation Ceremony

The Lake Mary Girl Scouts held their initiation ceremony Wednesday night at the Community Church in Lake Mary.

There were eight girls who had passed their Scout requirements. The impressive candlelight ceremony was held in the girls' gymnasium. The girls formed a heart shape and ten girls, selected previously, lighted candles one at a time.

The ten candles represented the ten Girl Scout Laws and after each candle was lighted the girls recited the law assigned to them.

Quite promptly, however, was the incident which happened to the Girl Scout who had assigned her law number six, which is "A Girl Scout is a friend to animals." Just before her turn to light the sixth candle she dropped the building and the ceremony quite unexpectedly had to be carried out.

Boat, Ski Club Is Featured In Recent Issue Of Outboard

Trophies, Awards Given Yesterday At Parochial School

Trophies and awards were presented yesterday at All Souls' Catholic Parochial School at the climax of a year long Physical Education program conducted by Jim Castano, Physical Education Director.

A complete program of athletic events and training was conducted throughout the school year which included basketball, football, touch football and a physical fitness series.

In the physical fitness program, Castano pointed out, there were events such as pushups, leg lifts, the 75-yard dash, pullups, and the standing broad jump.

Grading was done on a point basis, the physical education director explained, with a possible 50 points to be made in the combined events. He said points were awarded for first, second and third place in the five events staged in the final contests.

Boys and girls were divided into grade groups for competition. The ninth, eighth, seventh and sixth grade down competed for the trophies awarded by Castano yesterday.

The program of physical fitness also included marbles and paddle tennis competition as well as the basketball, soft ball and touch football.

Reception Honoring R. E. True Tonight

A reception, honoring R. E. True, retiring principal of the Sanford High School, will be given tonight at the Yacht Club on Seminole Blvd. by the school Parent Teachers Association.

All students, parents and friends, as well as interested persons, have been cordially invited to attend the event.

Gasoline Sales Drop

Gasoline sales during the month of April (sales reported and tax collected during May) took a seasonal drop of 13,892,106 gallons, from 129,004,826 during March (the year's high) to 115,112,720 gallons during April.

There were 838,435 gallons of gasoline sold in Seminole County during the month of May. The seven cents per gallon tax collected during the month totaled $60,090.45. $21,715.25 is returned to Seminole County.

Gasoline tax collections took a corresponding drop, from $9,030,337 during March (the year's high) to $7,902,168 during April, a decrease of $1,128,169.

However, despite the seasonal decrease, April gasoline sales and tax collections this year exceeded sales and collections for the same month last year. Sales topped last year's April report by 5,787,600 gallons and tax collections exceeded last April's collections by $403,090.

The decreases were not unexpected. A drop in business activity and a resultant drop in tax collections is always noted in April. Sales tax collections will probably also register a similar decline.

Association Adopts Resolution Laudng Retiring Principal

A resolution adopted by the Seminole County Ministerial Association at a called meeting yesterday honored Herman E. Morris, principal of Seminole High School, who is retiring at the end of this school year following 30 years of service as a teacher and principal in Seminole County.

Pointing out the long years of service as a teacher and principal, the resolution stated that Herman Morris has "through all the years, been deeply concerned with the moral and spiritual life of the students, as well as their educational opportunities."

Rotarians To See Oil Industry's 'Magic Barrel'

Members of the Sanford Rotary Club will have a "barrel" of fun and gain a "barrel" of knowledge when they witness a presentation of the oil industry's famed "Magic Barrel" at their regular weekly meeting Monday noon, at the Yacht Club.

Sam Hopkins of the Orange County Oil Industry Information Committee, will "roll" out the petroleum barrel to give a series of demonstrations of many of the hundreds of essential products in everyday use, from plastics to synthetic rubber, made possible with the aid of petrochemicals.

Petrochemicals are chemicals derived from crude oil. In recent years rapid strides have been made by the oil and chemical industries in developing this vast "new" source of compounds from petroleum.

Among the articles and demonstrations to be shown are "bent lights" in which a beam of light is carried around curves and now used widely by physicians and surgeons; many new man made fibers for clothing and household textiles; the properties of Freon-12, the miracle gas used in refrigerators and air conditioners; new paints, fertilizers, weed killers and the actual making of synthetic rubber.

Other items include a whole series of new materials for packaging: frozen foods, preservatives, plastics, detergents, electrical insulation, cosmetics and film.
