'Crime doesn't pay'

Winn Dixie robber sentenced; issues warning

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A Sanford man sentenced to 15 years in prison for his part in the May robbery of a local supermarket warned young people this morning to steer clear of crime. It doesn't pay.

Johnny Lee Knight, 20, was sentenced to prison after pleading guilty to armed burglary, armed robbery, shooting in a building, kidnapping and attempted first degree murder in the robbery of the Winn-Dixie, at Hwy. 17-92 and Lake Mary Boulevard May 14.

"We need to tell young kids crime doesn't pay," Knight said this morning from the John E. Polk Correctional Facility. "They shouldn't have to find out the hard way, like I did."

Knight said he was pleased with the sentence he received for what he did.

Knight was on probation for loitering and prowling but that was his only record prior to the Winn-Dixie incident. Knight pleaded guilty as charged in July and asked for the mercy of the court.

After serving his prison sentence, Knight said he hopes to set his life straight, move to the country and raise a family.

SANFORD — Steve Alford likes to call himself the "Fireworks Guy," but for a little while Wednesday night, he was one of the "Gator Guys."

Alford, who has organized Sanford's People's Fireworks and Fourth of July celebration for the last few years, was one of the 400 or so Floridians granted licenses to take to the darkened lakes, rivers and swamps to hunt alligators for a day.

Alford was given permission to kill a gator (or more, if he could get them) in Lake Hell n' Blazes in Osceola County.

So, accompanied by two friends, including one who had hunted alligators in the past, he spent

By VICKI DeBORMIER

SANFORD — When a youngster fails to graduate from a Seminole County high school, who is looking to see where he goes from there?

Some educators feel that there is no follow up on these students and, as a result, too many young people are falling through the cracks and not getting an education.

"When a student leaves high school and they check the little box that says they plan to go on to the adult high school or vocational school, they are no longer our responsibility," school board member Larry Strickler said. "And that isn't right."

At Strickler's urging, the school board and the board of trustees from Seminole Community College

Eagles move, so expressway protective wall won't be built

By J. MARK BARFIELD

SANFORD — Seminole County Expressway builders will not have to build a wall designed to protect an eagle's nest south of Lake Jesup near Clifton Springs because the nest has been damaged by lightning and abandoned.

The state is seeking a waiver from federal construction guidelines for the nest during eagle nesting season, which begins in October and extends to mid-May.

In May, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service gave the Office of Florida's Turnpike permission to eliminate a vertical wall along an expressway ramp embankment south of Lake Jesup at the entrance to State Road 434. The 150-foot-long wall was required by the federal agency because a tree with an active eagle's nest was located at the foot of the ramp.

The eagles took up nest-keeping at the tree late in the expressway design phase and the Seminole County Expressway Authority was forced to shift the alignment of the $200 million roadway to

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Tampa Bay beaches clean for holiday

St. Petersburg — Beaches which were oil soaked by a shipping accident last month that dumped more than 328,000 gallons of oil into Tampa Bay are clean and ready for the Labor Day weekend, officials said.

More than 14 miles of sand from Pass-a-Grille to North Redington Beach in Pinellas County has been scraped clean of the oil that bere stained with oil from the Aug. 10 shipping accident that dumped more than 328,000 gallons of oil into Tampa Bay.

Offe Island is expected to get final approval today. In addition, three patches of oil have been found underwater off the beach and will be removed next week, said Coast Guard Capt. Richard Harbert, who has coordinated cleanup efforts.

Harbert said beachgoers should remain vigilant for the occasional tar ball in the sand or water, but added they would be "few and far between."

The work isn't all complete either. More than 6 miles of seawalls and docks along waterways still are stained with oil from the Aug. 10 shipping accident that dumped more than 328,000 gallons of oil into Tampa Bay.

Officials say Boca Ciega Bay, John's Pass and Blind Pass are the new priorities and cleaning those may take as long as another month.

The massive cleanup effort, that at one time included more than 1,000 workers, has cost $34 million.

Suspect arrested for wildlife violation

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Florida wildlife officers have arrested a third suspect on charges of killing alligators and gopher tortoises and taking 200 loggerhead turtle eggs for sale.

George Clifton of New Smyrna Beach was arrested Wednesday night and charged with 18 counts of wildlife violations, said Steve Cotter of the Volusia County State Attorney's office.

Clifton is considered the principal suspect in the case, said Capt. Wayne King of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission.

Two other New Smyrna Beach men were arrested on similar charges Aug. 21. Frank Vaughn and Scott Foster are free on $25,000 bond each, Cotter said. Clifton was in the Volusia County Jail Thursday in lieu of $54,000 bail.

Fish and game inspectors seized nine dead alligators ranging from 3 feet to 8 feet, eight dead gopher tortoises that were frozen and 200 loggerhead eggs, officials said.

Loggerhead turtles are on the threatened-species list, and gopher tortoises are a species of special concern.

Cubans arrive after 5-week journey

MIAMI — Hilda Perez has no family living in the United States but says she has found one in the exile community here as part of a group of eight Cubans whose five-week journey to democracy included an unplanned trip to Mexico and an unwanted return to their homeland.

"I never dreamed when I arrived in Miami I would find the family that I've found, this great Cuban family. I will never forget this day," she said Thursday night after arriving on a private jet with the other refugees to a crowd of hundreds of Cuban exiles.

The Cubans were rescued Aug. 14 off the coast of Mexico after their boat capsized. They saw seven other refugees with them die. The survivors were then returned by helicopter to their homeland and then seeking asylum. Mexico immigration officials denied a request was made for asylum.

Mexico then requested Cuba return the group after word of their ordeal sparked days of protests here among the exile community, who began boycotting Mexican products and waged a campaign against the North American Free Trade Agreement.

The Clinton administration, making points with the conservative exile groups moved quickly to grant humanitarian visas to the eight on Wednesday.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Workers' compensation

Experts tell how to slow 'runaway train' of comp. insurance

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — Florida's workers' compensation insurance has become a burden for business, a loss for the insurance industry and hurts employees more than it helps, experts told a legislative panel here.

The state House Subcommittee on Workers' Compensation held its first of four public hearings statewide Thursday, listening to a new round of proposals for reforming a system that some business leaders said is bankrupting companies.

"Instead of providing help to the workers it was meant to serve, workers' comp has become an onerous burden to business, often preventing expansion, increased pay and benefits," said Bill Miller, president of the Home Builders Association of Mid-Florida, a trade group based in Maitland.

He said that the percentage of premiums going to injured workers has steadily declined even though insurance rates have increased.

The legislative panel met less than a week after an advisory group asked the Florida Insurance Commissioner to approve a 13.8 percent average increase in policy rates for 1994.

-Bill Miller

Ever increasing health care costs, legal fees, fraud and abuse have fueled the rate increases, said Roy Wood, director of consumer affairs for the National Council on Compensation Insurance, the advisory group, based in Tallahassee.

The rising cost of covering claims has erased any profit from workers' compensation business for the insurance companies and funds, Wood said.

"Workers' comp is like any other product," he told the panel. "You can't deliver a product if you can't cover the costs of providing it."

Those in the legal profession said a managed health care system similar to a health maintenance organization should be set up for its workers' comp claims.

"An attorney is not qualified to determine what medical care an injured employee should be receiving," said Jim McConaughay, a Tallahassee lawyer who represents insurance companies and employers.

A managed health care system, in which a doctors' group directs treatment, would reduce lawyer involvement in workers' comp claims, he said.

It may also be time for the state to take steps to "regulate or moderate attorney fees" in workers' comp cases, he said. But McConaughay said he opposed a bill earlier this year that set strict limits on legal fees.

Tampa on edge with burn trial, shooting incident

By Associated Press

TAMPA — Tampa police and civic leaders are bracing for the worst in the wake of a fatal shooting by police and in anticipation of a verdict in the Christopher Wilson burn case.

"It's not an exaggeration to say things are tense," John Dunn, spokesman for Tampa Mayor Sandy Freedman said.

Government officials met with community leaders behind closed doors Wednesday for three hours regarding the investigation of slain robbery suspect Edward Lee James.

Unsigned fliers being distributed through the community say James was shot 17 times by police Sunday while handcuffed and refer to the Tampa police as "blood-thirsty pigs."

Police said that James was killed after a shootout in which a police officer was wounded.

Meanwhile, much of the Tampa area was in the case against two white laborers of burning Wilson in Tampa last January has been on a rift between prosecutors that saw one quit in tears.

Hillsborough County's state attorney sent a message from the trial in West Palm Beach to stay calm for Christopher Wilson's sake.

"We don't want anybody to hurt Christopher Wilson any more by violating the law ...." said State Attorney Harry Lee Coe III. "He has suffered enough."

Testimony of burn victim begins today

By JAMES MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer

WEST PALM BEACH — Prosecutors beset by a lack of physical evidence and the walkout of their top litigator in a torching trial are putting the pressure on Christopher Wilson to save the case.

The black New York City man who says white attackers doused him with gasoline and set him afire was to take the stand today at the end of a weeklong state case that is relying heavily on the power of emotion.

Wilson's testimony is crucial since the state has no physical evidence linking defendants Mark Kohut and Charles Rourke to the New Year's Day crime.

But defense attorneys contend his lone identification, which came nearly two months after the attack, was made from an unduly suggestive photo pack. And they have noted discrepancies between Wilson's version of events and that of the other key witness, 18-year-old Jeffrey Pellett, who struck a plea deal to testify against his friends.

Cost of semiprivate nursing home room rates up 12.5 percent

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The median daily cost of a semiprivate nursing home has grown to $90, up 12.5 percent in an 18-month period ending this spring.

Floridians spent $471 million on nursing home from September 1991 through February, according to Lisa Hutcheson, spokeswoman for the state Agency for Health Care Administration.

The government, through Medicaid and Medicare, paid nearly $1.38 billion in the same period.

With the annual cost of nursing home care averaging $33,000, it usually takes less than a year for the average resident to exhaust personal savings.

Medicare, a federally funded program, pays for four months of skilled nursing care. Then Medicaid, the joint federal-state health care program for welfare recipients, takes over.

Medicaid paid more than $1 billion and Medicare $339 million in the study period, Hutcheson said Thursday.

Information about charges and services at each of Florida's 534 nursing homes is contained in regional guidebooks published by the state and regional health councils.

Services range from laundry care to room phones and TVs to various kinds of therapies.

The books also list how each nursing home was rated when it was licensed, from superior to standard to conditional.

The lowest charges were in the Panhandle, where median room rates ranged from $78 to $80 daily. The highest were in South Florida, where the median was $105 daily.

Using cost alone to pick a nursing home would be a mistake, cautioned agency director Doug Cook.

"In addition to using these guides to comparison shop, consumers need to make a personal visit to the facility and ask questions," he said. "We also encourage families to look into less costly care alternatives, such as adult congregate living facilities and adult foster homes."

"Long-term care insurance is also an option worth considering, before the need for care arises," Cook said.

The brochures can be obtained by calling 1-800-342-0828.

Questions about pepper spray

First death after police use while subduing suspect

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. — The first death officially linked to the use of pepper spray by police has raised questions about a weapon that is fast replacing the nightstick as a means of subduing unruly suspects.

North Carolina's medical examiner concluded this week that the fiery spray triggered bronchial spasms severe enough to kill Angelo Robinson, a 24-year-old who was arrested July 11 during a disturbance at a restaurant in Concord. The death provoked rioting in the mostly black community.

Concord police stopped using the spray immediately. The Durham police force also suspended its use. North Carolina's attorney general issued two pages of guidelines on the care of suspects who have been sprayed. Manufacturers were deluged with calls.

And the American Civil Liberties Union suggested there may have been other deaths around the country.

"As with stun guns and other laudable attempts to try to find less severe uses of force, sometimes the technology gets oversold," said John Crew, director of the Police Practices Project with the ACLU in San Francisco.

The spray — a cayenne pepper extract in an oil base so that it sticks — attacks the eyes and respiratory passages, causing a sensation that John Schneider, who trains police in Durham in its use, likened to bobbing for french fries in hot oil.

"It doesn't shut your breathing off," said Schneider, who took a blast himself so he'd know what it feels like, "but it does make breathing labored. It takes the wind out of you. You just want to sit and concentrate on taking air in and out."

"Whatever your problems were in this world before you were sprayed," he said, "you won't think about them for the next 30 or 40 minutes."

In Robinson's case, a chronic lung condition and a mildly enlarged heart probably made a serious reaction more likely, the autopsy report said.

A Maryland chemist developed the spray 20 years ago when his wife, summoned to testify about a holdup she witnessed, wanted protection against thugs who had threatened her life.

The FBI decided to switch to pepper spray in 1989, and by the next year, more than 1,000 police agencies had switched from Mace — tear gas in an aerosol canister — to pepper spray. It is now used by more than 2,000 police departments across the country and is manufactured by more than two dozen companies.

A distributor of one brand — First Strike — insisted that it's safe when used properly. "You watch your suspect. You don't spray them and forget about them," said Howard Perry, president of Advanced Defense Technologies in Mint Hill.

But the ACLU's Crew said the Robinson case confirms worries the ACLU has had for months.

"We have heard of six to seven deaths nationwide, three of which are in California, in which pepper spray has been used," he said. "As with other non-lethal types of force, it's not always clear what has caused the death."

"It's very important, especially in light of the autopsy in North Carolina, that people proceed very cautiously," he said.

Police in Spokane, Wash., agreed to pay medical bills of a woman overcome by pepper spray in her car after a policeman in his cruiser unsealed a can at an intersection July 30. The cloud of spray that escaped from the patrol car ahead of her wafted through her open car window. She was treated at a hospital.

But many departments report using it without problems and are reserving judgment on whether to change their policies.

Police in Beaverton, Ore., reported in 1991 that they had used the spray about 100 times without a legal claim being filed against the city.

Lt. Jim Watson of the Missouri State Highway Patrol said the patrol has been using pepper spray for about two years and there have been no reports of deaths or serious injuries.

Schneider said the Durham police suspended use of the spray as a precaution only. He said he still thinks it's an effective police tool.

"In days gone by, if somebody was combative and was a threat to your health or well-being, a month later they might still have the stitches or lacerations from your nightstick," he said.

Teen gets 3 years for ice cream

By The Associated Press

THOMASTON, Ga. — After 10 days behind bars, 17-year-old Dehundra Caldwell is back in class while a judge reconsiders his three-year prison sentence for breaking into a school and stealing a box of ice cream bars.

Caldwell, who earns A's, B's and C's and had no criminal record before he pleaded guilty to burglary, was freed from the Upson County Jail on $15,000 bail Wednesday in a deal struck by the prosecutor, the defense and the judge.

At a hearing Oct. 15, Superior Court Judge Andrew Whalen will decide if the sentence was too harsh.

The NAACP and an organization of black lawyers are investigating the case. Caldwell is black, the judge white.

"I'm still devastated over what has happened," said his mother, Teresa Caldwell. "I don't feel like he was represented fairly. If he had been a white child, I don't think it would have turned out like this."

In the meantime, the teen-ager attended the first day of class Thursday at Upson-Lee High School in Thomaston, about 65 miles south of Atlanta.

Caldwell said he pleaded guilty because he thought he would be held responsible for being with his 15-year-old brother and a 16-year-old friend, who walked into a school after him through an open door in July. The other boys admitted taking the ice cream. The offense was burglary, even though the door was open.

On Aug. 23, Whalen handed Caldwell three years in prison — a normal sentence in the judicial circuit, which has a reputation for tough punishment.

Attorney: Boy in Jackson case wants day in court

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — The 13-year-old who accused Michael Jackson of molesting him has been devastated by his relationship with the superstar and wants to tell his story in court, the boy's lawyer says.

"He wants the truth to come out. He is ready. He is willing. He is able to testify," Gloria Allred said Thursday.

The teen-ager's allegations that Jackson sexually abused him during a four-month relationship are under police investigation. The singer has denied any wrongdoing and has not been charged.

"My client is devastated," said Allred, who dismissed accusations that the molestation allegations grew out of an extortion attempt by the boy's father.

"Many people love and trust Michael Jackson. Our client loved him and trusted him as well," the lawyer said. "Unfortunately that trust has been destroyed."

And she demanded to know, "Why is Michael Jackson, an adult, repeatedly sleeping in the same bed with a young boy?" The boy contended Jackson often shared a bed with him, according to court documents.

Jackson's lawyer, Howard Weitzman, and private investigator, Anthony Pellicano, didn't return calls seeking comment.

Also Thursday, Daily Variety reported that Jackson decided not to finish a song and video for the upcoming movie "Ardams Family Values," a sequel to last year's "The Ardams Family."

Jackson's manager, Sandy Gallin, told Paramount that Jackson would not be able to complete the video, the trade publication said.

Jackson was to perform Saturday and Monday in Taiwan, before going on to Japan, Russia and other points.

His press agents and doctor have insisted that recent cancellations of concerts in Singapore and Bangkok stemmed from dehydration and migraines and had nothing to do with the sexual abuse allegations.

Buckle kids up and save lives

Motor vehicle crashes are the number one cause of death and crippling of young children in the United States. All 50 states have laws to protect young passengers with child safety seats.

A tragic situation occurred Tuesday night in the Midway area near Sanford. The Florida Highway Patrol reported a seven-month-old child was completely thrown out of a vehicle involved in a collision with a van. Troopers said no child restraint had been used.

Unfortunately, such injuries and deaths occur much too often.

The Florida Department of Transportation says in a serious collision, a person could be thrown as far as 50 yards from a vehicle, the length of half a football field. Of crash victims who are ejected, the DOT says, four out of five die.

One of the most common excuses given for not using child restraints is that the trip was a short one. Another is that hooking the straps is time-consuming.

Yet police say most deaths occur within 25 miles from home, and four out of five crashes are at relatively low speeds.

Parents go to great extremes to protect their children. They provide them with healthy food, clean surroundings, and love. Yet when it comes to attaching a child restraint in a vehicle, that concern appears nonexistent.

Years ago, there were no such requirements. A child was often held, but never fastened to a relatively solid object such as a car seat.

It is mind boggling to think of the lives which were lost in this way. Many may know of a family member, neighbor or friend who suffered such a loss.

In Florida, if a child under six isn't buckled up in a child restraint device, the driver of a vehicle could be fined $150, and receive three points on the driver's record.

Buckle up your child at all times. This should not be a question of getting arrested for a violation. Fasten your own seat belt and insist others do likewise. It is a matter of life and death, and should be treated as such.

Notch victims

Notch Victims, as well as their relatives, friends and neighbors, should arise and strike a blow for the benefit of all Social Security recipients, born from 1917 through 1928. Over 12 million of us share in the inequity of benefits imposed upon us by an imprudent Congress, in 1977.

Several of our representatives in Congress and the state Legislature have supported our efforts to "Correct the Notch." However, one outstanding state legislator has taken a very "active" part to enhance our endeavors.

State Representative Paul Hawkes has been a champion of Notch Victims in the state of Florida, from the first day he was asked for help. In 1992, he introduced and was responsible for the passage of a resolution asking Congress to "Correct the Notch." Unfortunately it failed in the Senate and no action was taken. Undaunted, in 1993 with the help of Senator Karen Johnson, he succeeded in getting the resolution passed in both houses of the state Legislature.

Now he is offering each and everyone, concerned with the plight of Notch Victims, an opportunity to have their voices heard by the leaders of the Congressional ways and Means Committee.

This is an unusual and timely occasion to enhance the congressional attempt to rectify their mistake and "Correct the Notch." One hundred and one (101) representatives and 14 senators are co-sponsors of Legislation (H.R. 1883 and S. 173) that would end this injustice.

"Act Now! He Who Heals is Lost!" Write to State Representative Paul Hawkes, 7655 West Gulf to Lake Hwy, #13; Crystal River, Florida 34429; or call 1-904-795-7797 and ask for his Notch Victim Card Petition.

Huskies coach leaves the pack

"Where your treasure is," Martin Luther King Jr. was fond of quoting, "there will your heart be also."

Which treasure would you choose: an estimated $440,000 in income or integrity?

Integrity can't buy clothes, groceries or pay the rent. But Don James still chose to preserve it when he resigned as University of Washington football coach to protest the heavy-handed Pacific 10 Conference punishment of the Huskies program. The university was hit with harsh sanctions — a two-year ban on postseason competition, two-year probation, reduction of football scholarships and loss of television revenue — after it was found guilty of violating Pac-10 rules.

Specifically cited were the use of entertainment money above allowable amounts by coaches and recruits, alleged overpayment for jobs by "boosters" (a respectable euphemism for athletic teams' fanatical supporters) and a $50,000 loan to the team's quarterback.

James was appalled — and justifiably so — at the excessive punishment by the bishopric of university presidents, athletic directors and faculty members. "I can no longer coach in a conference that treats its members, its coaches and their players so unfairly," he wrote in his letter of resignation.

The offending parties should be punished — i.e., fired — but not the entire collegiate infrastructure. Boosters who break ethical rules should be prohibited from any contact with players and banned from games or related collegiate functions.

A football player found guilty of abusing NCAA regulations ought to be banned from pro football for two years.

But to penalize the entire university for a "lack of institutional control" because of a series of unrelated acts unknown to all of the supervisory personnel egregiously abuses the constitutional guarantee of due process.

After the Watergate scandal, Richard Nixon — not the entire U.S. government — had to resign.

In crimes involving murder and conspiracy, prosecutors will give cooperating witnesses exculpatory breaks to the point of giving them a new identity. Why couldn't Pac-10 exercise a similar flexibility, especially when University of Washington officials had fully co-operated with the Pac-10 investigation?

The University of Washington wasn't punished for its sins. It was convicted for its successes — 13 bowl games in 14 years and three straight Rose Bowl games.

When I was a kid, the New York Yankees were so outrageously superior, there were periodic calls to "break up the Yankees."

Starting with Stanford's sanctimonious football coach, Bill Walsh, who denounced Washington as an outlaw school, the Pac conference figured this was a good way to "break up" the Huskies. Cut em off at their superlative knees with excessive penalties. If you can't beat Washington on the field, then penalize them into impotence, right Walsh?

Which treasure would you choose: an estimated $440,000 in income or integrity?

Lines blur between academia, industry

WASHINGTON — The worlds of free enterprise and federally funded education are in collision. But Peter Taboraky probably never thought it would help land him in jail.

Taboraky was an undergraduate research assistant at the University of South Florida in 1987 when he discovered a new wastewater treatment process. Six years later, Taboraky was sentenced to 3 1/2 years in a state prison for refusing to turn over the patent to the University of South Florida.

University officials have claimed that Taboraky was told when he was hired that all research conducted on the premises would be proprietary to Florida Progress Corp., a holding company for the state's major electric utility. Taboraky has maintained that the research was conducted on his own time, and therefore it belongs to him.

Most research collaborations don't end up with the full force of a state legal system crashing down on an undergraduate, yet the Taboraky case illustrates an emerging truth in medical research: The drive for funding is turning universities large and small into venture capitalists. Scientists who once worked for the sake of knowledge now see stock options and corporate advisory positions as one of the perks of academic research.

With federal research dollars shrinking each year, and the demand for new research on the rise, the already blurry line between enterprise and academia is calling out for government refereeing.

Collaborations between academia and industry can be mutually profitable by leading to commercial applications for new discoveries. But many scientists believe that universities are going too far in promoting and protecting the relationships they have with private interests, sometimes to the detriment of consumers.

"It's all public funds that are paying these (scientists), yet they are selling out to the private corporations," Dr. Sheldon Krinsky told our associate Jan Moller. Krinsky is a professor at Tufts University who's an expert on conflicts of interest in the medical field.

The public-private partnerships made news recently when Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., blew the whistle on a proposed collaboration between Scripps Research Institute of La Jolla, Calif., and the Sandoz Corp. of Switzerland. Under the terms of this agreement, Scripps would turn over exclusive rights of first refusal of all its research to the Sandoz Corp., in exchange for $300 million over 10 years. Wyden was outraged in part because Scripps receives about 65 percent of its funding from the National Institutes of Health, meaning taxpayers would essentially be left subsidizing research that goes to a foreign corporation.

"As a result of this agreement, Sandoz has in effect accomplished a leveraged buyout of $1 billion worth of federally supported research for just $300 million," Wyden says.

While the Sandoz case is an extreme example, Wyden and others believe it is not an isolated one. At present, both the NIH and the Food and Drug Administration are putting in place new guidelines to ensure that the public interest is served by the financial links between research and enterprise.

Clinton asserts civilian control

WASHINGTON — Two seemingly unrelated Pentagon events are actually closely tied and causing much unrest in the uniformed ranks.

On the same day that President Clinton announced the appointment of Army Gen. John M. Shalikashvili to succeed Gen. Colin Powell as chairman of the Joint Chiefs, Defense Secretary Les Aspin ordered Marine Corps Commandant Carl Mundy to withdraw his order barring married recruits after September 1995. The two events are linked because both represent the continued effort of the Clinton administration to reassert firm civilian leadership in the Pentagon.

Although not followed in the past with mathematical precision, there has been general agreement among the services that the chairmanship is rotated between the Army, Navy and Air Force. The next four-year tour, it was assumed, belonged to the Air Force. It was widely expected that Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Merrill "Tony" McPeak would be the next chairman.

However, several factors apparently came into play to deny McPeak the promotion for which he had vigorously lobbied. McPeak is said not to have impressed Aspin and the president. In recent weeks, when that fact became known, reportedly the Air Force hurriedly put forward several other candidates.

More important than personalities, Aspin was determined to draw back into the secretary's office much of the authority that had been lost to the chairman's office under Powell. That meant, he believed, reaching down into the ranks and selecting someone for chairman who, while a proven military leader, would owe his loyalty to Clinton and Aspin.

Gen. Shalikashvili fit that description perfectly. He is considered a "warrior," has had numerous operational commands, but has also served a year on the joint staff as assistant chairman.

When Aspin learned of Gen. Mundy's order banning the future recruiting of married individuals, he was reportedly shocked. While he was surprised at the substance of the order, what really shocked him was that he heard about it from press reports and that Mundy's direct civilian superior, Navy Secretary John Dalton, had not even known the ban was being considered.

The substance of the order aside — and many in the Pentagon agree that young married service personnel are a growing burden to all the uniformed services — sources report Aspin was livid that a policy decision of this magnitude would be made by any service without prior clearance from the civilian leadership.

Many on the civilian side of the Pentagon see the Mundy episode as symptomatic. It appears that the general honestly believed he was simply taking care of an internal Marine Corps housekeeping matter, and it did not occur to him that he had to clear it with his civilian superior.

The current situation of military dominance over the Pentagon's civilian leadership began in earnest during the rapid Reagan military buildup in the early 1980s. Essentially, whatever the service chiefs wanted, they got.

Reagan Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger saw his role as the chief lobbyist for the uniformed services, and the concept of strong civilian leadership during his tenure seemed to disappear.

Then came the Powell-Dick Cheney years, when the strong-willed and politically adept chairman simply dominated the personable but relatively inexperienced congressman who was President Bush's choice for secretary. Given the number of conflicts over this four-year period, including Desert Storm, the uniformed services again held sway.

This bothered Aspin greatly as he viewed it from his seat as chairman of the House Armed Services Committee. So when he accepted Clinton's invitation to become Defense secretary, he came to the Pentagon intent on re-establishing civilian authority.

One way he is doing this is by expanding his own staff and its abilities. Over the past 12 years, almost all the staff work, briefings, studies and decision memos in the secretary's office were done by the uniformed services. Now Aspin has his own independent and largely civilian staff performing these duties.

Aspin has sought to relieve some of the growing tension between the civilian and military leadership by throwing his support behind a call for substantial additional money to fund the restructuring of the military. Clinton has budgeted about $1.2 trillion for the downsized Pentagon over the next five years, about $127 billion less than George Bush intended to spend. Now Aspin is saying that is not enough, and he is siding with the Joint Chiefs in saying that at least $20 billion more will have to be found.

Many on the civilian side of the Pentagon see the Mundy episode as symptomatic.

Youth gets probation for Lyman High bombing

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A 17-year old Altamonte Springs youth was placed on probation for 13 months Thursday for his part in making a bomb which exploded in a Lyman High School restroom on April 2.

Seminole Circuit Court Judge Alan A. Dickey sentenced Eric Forgy, 17, with juvenile sanctions to community control on two counts of possession of an explosive device. Forgy pleaded no contest to the charges in late July. The judge withheld adjudication of delinquency.

Another youth charged in the Lyman incident, Gabriel Lovasz, 17, had pleaded not guilty and his case is pending. Forgy, who will be 18 next month, and his co-defendant were originally charged as juveniles but their cases were transferred to adult court.

"If ever there was a case that called for juvenile sanctions," Dickey commented, "it is this one." A Health and Rehabilitative Services caseworker also recommended Forgy be sentenced as a juvenile and placed on supervised probation until he is 19.

In reviewing pre-sentence investigations, Dickey noted Forgy makes good grades, is active in his church and has no prior record.

Assistant state attorney Charley Tabecott argued Forgy committed a serious offense and should be sentenced as an adult. The maximum penalty could have been time in prison. Tabecott said placing the bomb in the restroom was not a harmless prank but could have resulted in someone being maimed or even killed.

Lyman High School Band director Donald Schmaus was shaken up in the blast when a pipe bomb exploded in the restroom. There was $364 damage which Forgy and/or his co-defendant will have to pay.

"I read it (the report)," the judge commented, "that they meant it as a harmless practical joke, that got quickly out of hand."

Dickey suggested that Forgy write letters of apology to individuals affected by the bombing, including Lyman principal Carlton Henley.

Criticism of 'Hangin' Harry' reaches governor's office

By JAMES MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer

WEST PALM BEACH — Controversy has followed Harry Lee Coe III from one side of the bench to the other during a 22-year courtroom career as judge and now as prosecutor in a racially tinged torching trial.

Calls to oust the first-year state attorney reached the state Capitol after Coe's lead prosecutor quit during the trial of two white men accused of setting a black New York tourist ablaze in a Tampa suburb on New Year's Day.

"That's their perfect right to do so," Coe said Thursday after learning Gov. Lawton Chiles was being urged to remove him from office.

"What people may think about me or not think about me is not the issue. There's a fair trial going on in that courtroom. ... We're down here to try this case, and that's where our focus is, and that's what the issues are here, and that's what we're going to keep our minds on," said Coe.

Jay Peterson, the governor's general counsel, said Chiles is getting calls to dismiss Coe but is taking no action.

"We're watching what he's doing in Palm Beach," Peterson said. "He's in the middle of an important, significant trial, and we're just watching."

Len Register, a widely respected attorney, left the Palm Beach County courthouse in tears Monday after telling the trial judge that Coe's repeated interruptions were intolerable. He said it was impossible to continue after his boss, not the defense, objected as he questioned a witness.

In chambers, Coe said Register should be made to stay and "do his duty."

"He wouldn't know duty if it bit him in the butt," Register told the judge.

"I really struggled," Register explained Wednesday. "I thought about not going to the trial, but I had a responsibility to the police and the victim. But his objection was the final straw."

Register characterized Coe's performance as inept and said the state's case had been badly damaged, perhaps beyond repair.

"You can't work in that situation. You can't work with someone pulling on your coat all day," said Tallahassee State Attorney Willie Meggs, who would like to hire Register but said he thinks the attorney is getting job offers statewide.

Register was the most experienced litigator on the prosecution team and spent eight months preparing the case against Lakeland laborers Mark Kohut and Charles Rourk, Christopher Wilson, a 32-year-old brokerage clerk, was abducted in his car and forced to drive to a remote field where he was doused with gasoline and set afire. He suffered extensive burns over his upper body.

Newspapers have taken Coe to task in columns and editorials, asking rhetorically whether he recognizes he's no longer a judge with complete control, calling his behavior "egotistical, erratic, bizarre, unfathomable," and saying the trial is in the hands of a man "who seems to possess the judgment of used brick."

At least three attorneys have been brought in to help bolster the case since Register's departure.

From the outset, it was clear Coe's first case as a prosecutor after 22 years on the bench was not going to be easy for him.

met to discuss how to keep track of the students and to be sure they are getting the education they deserve.

Bettie Hogle, director of the district's technical and vocational education department, said she believes it is the responsibility of the schools and the college to coordinate their efforts to be providers of education from kindergarten through post secondary studies.

"We have been working together for some time now," she said. "We are trying to coordinate efforts."

Strickler said the school district has terminated its relationship with students, as the law dictates, as soon as they are informed that the student will continue his studies elsewhere. There are no follow up procedures in place to be sure he does.

Formal plans have not yet been made on how the district and the college will work together to correct the current situation. Strategy sessions will continue and a plan is expected by January.

According to Hogle, the district will continue to try to create curricula that are more relevant to the needs of those students who might otherwise drop out and, potentially, fail to complete school anywhere.

"We are working on a number of avenues," she said, citing the academy programs and the apprenticeship programs at several schools including Seminole and Lyman High Schools.

While official statistics show that the drop out rate in Seminole County is about four percent, Strickler said he thinks the number would be more accurately set at 30 to 40 percent.

"If you look at the number of students who register for ninth grade and the number of students who graduate four years later, there's about a 30 to 40 percent drop off," he explained. "That's far too high."

He said that he hopes that working more closely with the adult high school and the vocational programs at SCC will allow the district to better serve students who choose to leave high school before graduation.

"We can't just let these students slip through the gaps," he said.

Wednesday night from 11 p.m. to 5 a.m. looking for the coveted reptiles.

"It was dark, you know, and there was thick grass, like a swamp," he said. "All you could see out there was their eyes."

He said that stalking the alligators on their turf and in the dark was "a little frightening," but said he was confident that he would get a gator.

Alford said he has hunted deer, turkey and hogs all his life. "But that's nothing like this," he said.

He said he felt a little intimidated by the powerful reptiles, but that he knew he could outwit them and once he had control of one, he could easily kill it.

"I was with an experienced gator hunter who knew them and I have been hunting all my life so I was pretty confident that I could do it," he said.

He said he saw many large alligators in the lake in which he was hunting.

"I even hit one 13-footer (with the boat)" he said. "I tried to get him, but he didn't want any part of it."

Alford finally captured a 7-foot

3-inch alligator.

"I brought him up to the boat and hit him right between the eyes with a hammer," he said.

Alford said using a hammer to kill the gator preserved more of the reptile's hide for sale. He said he did not want to risk damaging the hide on the belly and the neck, most coveted for making boots, shoes and handbags.

Though the alligator that Alford captured is long, the reptile weighed only about 85 to 90 pounds.

"He's a skinny guy," Alford said, "but that's OK."

The gator, which was laid in state in the back of a pickup truck with several bags of ice packed around him, was taken to a processing plant in Lake Monroe by Alford and his friend Butch Dickerson.

"They'll take care of processing the meat and the hide, explained Alford, who said he expected to get about $125 for the products derived from the gator he caught.

"It was an experience," he said. "I enjoyed it."

He declined to say, however, if he would ever want to try to get a gator hunting license again.

avoid destruction of the tree.

But lightning damaged the nest in December 1992 and the bonded eagle pair had moved to a new nest 558 feet away in the nearby Black Hammock swamp, so the Wildlife Service granted the state permission to eliminate the wall. The wall will be replaced with an embankment which will reach the foot of the tree, according to a state diagram.

About 2,000 cubic yards of dirt in the new embankment will extend into a wetland area by less than a tenth of an acre, according to one state letter. FDOT is seeking an adjustment to their state environmental permit to allow the construction.

Expressway construction spokesman Gayle Geddes said no cost impact has been calculated for the revision, although some wall materials have already been purchased.

According to an Aug. 25 letter from turnpike environmental administrator Raymond Ashe to Don Palmer of the wildlife service, the pair of eagles have fledged young at the new nest and Herbert Kale of the Florida Audubon Society expects the pair to continue to use their new home.

The state is also seeking permission from the wildlife service to waive their October-to-May construction restrictions. Typically, the wildlife service won't allow construction within 750 feet of a nest nor construction activities within 1,500 feet of the nest during nesting season, said Palmer. Also, the types of development may be limited up to a mile from the nest.

Palmer said the request is under review.

According to the state's request, the so-called "urban eagles" in Tuskawilla have been tolerant of nearby construction. The Clifton Springs eagles have also been tolerant of the construction, having fledged young a few yards away from the construction sight. In Ashe's letter, he stated construction personnel said the eagles seemed interested in the construction work.

Palmer said he was hesitant to apply humanistic traits on eagles.

Originally, Knight was charged with attempted first degree murder of a law enforcement officer for which he could have been sentenced to up to 40 years in prison and serve a mandatory 25 years. The sentencing guidelines used in criminal cases do not apply for individuals found guilty of attempted murder of a law enforcement officer. The LEO portion of the charge was dropped in Knight's case.

Seminole Circuit Court Judge Alan Dickey commented twice during the sentencing Thursday at the jail courtroom how lucky Knight was to have lawyer Gary Andersen representing him. Andersen is an assistant public defender.

Knight and his cousin, James Williams, 20, Sanford were charged with breaking into the supermarket after hours, robbing it and locking several nighttime employees in a freezer. Shots were fired inside the store. The pair got away from the scene in an employee's car and were pursued by police. After they crashed, the suspects fled. Knight was wounded and captured. Knight was driving the car, while Williams allegedly fired at the police. Knight cooperated with police during the investigation. Williams was arrested a short time later.

Knight said he has not been asked to testify against his cousin.

Dickey said the evidence showed that Knight was the "follower" in the robbery but that he was a willing participant.

Despite assistant state attorney Charley Tabecott's argument that Knight should receive 27 years in prison, Andersen pointed out the incident was not consistent with Knight's past behavior and a lesser sentence was appropriate.

In trying to show Knight as a helpful, caring person, Andersen told the judge the defendant had assisted his sister by painting a room and installing a ceiling fan.

"To tell you the truth, Mr. Andersen," Judge Dickey commented, "if I had been one of those people at Winn-Dixie, I wouldn't have cared if he painted his sister's ceiling."

Knight said he expects to be transferred to the Department of Corrections in a week or two. He will go to a reception and diagnostic center for evaluation and then be assigned to a correctional institution.

dropping out.

Students at Lyman who are earning a D or an F in a class will have the opportunity to work in a remedial setting after school and in the evenings with teachers who will help them improve their understanding of the subject matter.

Using money that had been previously earmarked for Saturday School disciplinary programs, Henley instituted the program last spring.

Working with the teachers and the students the school administration devised a way that the students could avoid failure by working at improving their understanding of a subject and, as a result, giving them the opportunity to improve their grade before the end of the semester.

"I think programs like Project Hope are just the thing we need to help students who are not experiencing success in school," school board member Larry Strickler said.

Strickler, who is working to help the district find solutions to the low graduation rate in Seminole County, said programs that offer students the opportunity to

"not fail" let a student experience success in school. He is then less likely to drop out.

Other schools are beginning to look at programs like Project Hope, but they have not yet been put into place.

"But educators in Seminole County really care about the students," Strickler said. "I think we'll see more programs like Project Hope."

Clinton renews air strike threat

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — Serb shelling and reported Croat interference with relief convoys are testing the Clinton administration's patience toward bloody Bosnia.

After the breakdown of negotiations to end the 17-month ethnic conflict, the administration took a tough line against aggressors Thursday, threatening air strikes if Serbs and Croats resume offensives against key cities while supporting Bosnian Muslim demands for a larger slice of territory.

President Clinton reiterated that "the NATO military option is very much alive." He tied his threat to any resumption of Serb shelling of Sarajevo, the besieged Bosnian capital, or interference with relief supplies.

The State Department broadened the threat to include any new Croat drive against Muslims in Mostar.

The aim was to deter renewed aggression while prodding Serb and Croat negotiators to sweeten their offer to end the war in the former Yugoslavia.

Later, the State Department reported Sarajevo had remained quiet, with no reports of shelling by Bosnian Serb forces. In Gorazde, in southeastern Bosnia, the department cited reports of fighting on the city's edge between Serb and government forces.

Intense fighting, meanwhile, was going on in Gornji Vakuf and Vitez in central Bosnia between Croat and government forces, and Brcko was shelled by Serbs Wednesday night, the department said.

On the relief situation, spokesman

Michael McCurry said the Serbs had allowed four convoys with 41 trucks containing 282 tons of flour to cross their territory but that the Croats were causing delays for convoys.

Also, he said there was no information on whether the 41 trucks had arrived in eastern Bosnia.

Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic denounced the settlement terms as inadequate to guarantee his country's survival, and the talks in Geneva, Switzerland, collapsed Wednesday night.

"The signing of this plan would be tantamount to a collective suicide for the Muslims," he said. "Either we get a viable state, or no deal."

"Unfortunately, the war will continue," Croatian President Franjo Tudjman said afterward.

"That is a statement with ominous implications," the State Department's McCurry said. He said a renewal of the shelling of Sarajevo or Mostar could prompt NATO to implement a plan to use force in defense of the Muslims.

At the White House, Clinton held out hope for a quick resumption of the peace talks.

"I don't believe they are collapsed," he said. "The United States will do everything it can in the next few days to get the parties to resume the talks in good faith."

But if there is interference with humanitarian aid or a resumption of shelling of Sarajevo while the talks are suspended, Clinton told reporters. "I would remind you that the NATO military option is very much alive."

He added that he favored lifting the U.N. embargo on arms shipments to the Bosnian Muslims. "But I am in the minority. I don't know that I can prevail."

Secretary of State Warren Christopher, meanwhile, called on Serbia and Croatia to yield to demands from Bosnian Muslims for more territory. The Muslims would get nearly 31 percent of the land under the rejected proposal. They are seeking nearly 35 percent as well as access to the Adriatic Sea from Sarajevo.

If there is a breakdown "because of the stubbornness and intransigence of the Serbs or the Croats, the world community will certainly hold them responsible," Christopher said.

Starchy messages were sent to President Slobodan Milosevic of Serbia and Tudjman, outlining the tough U.S. position.

The United States supports the Muslims in their three main demands, a senior U.S. official said, speaking on condition of anonymity. Those are that Sarajevo have a corridor to the sea, that the Muslim area around Bihać in the northwest be enlarged and that a corridor be established between that area and a Muslim enclave in the center of the country.

Christopher's support for the Muslim position, in a brief news conference outside his State Department office, should strengthen the Muslims' bargaining position if the talks are resumed.

At the same time, Christopher dismissed implementing soon the U.S. proposal to permit weapons to be delivered to the Muslim-dominated Bosnian government and to bomb Serb artillery sites.

The immediate goal should be resuming the negotiations while retaining the option of lifting the U.N. arms embargo for "future consideration," Christopher said.

Jeremy' takes honors at 10th MTV awards

By JENNIFER BOWLES
Associated Press Writer

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. — Grunge rock grudgingly won the night at the MTV Video Music Awards, a three-hour maelstrom of irreverence, sexual innuendo and even music.

Pearl Jam won four awards Thursday night for "Jeremy," a haunting video about teen suicide.

"I guess you gotta say thanks," grumbled lead singer Eddie Vedder. "No, the real thing is, if it weren't for music I think I would have shot myself in the front of the classroom. It really is what kept me alive."

The group was honored for best video, best group video, best metal-hard rock video and best direction.

Other purveyors of grunge, an unadorned grinding rock sound fashioned by Seattle-based bands, also were honored at the 10th annual awards. Nirvana's "In Bloom" won the alternative video trophy. Stone Temple Pilots won the top new artist honor for "Push."

As Nirvana accepted its award, singer Kurt Cobain unbuttoned his pants. The camera turned away abruptly.

Madonna opened the show with a gender-bending song-and-dance number to the tune of "Bye Bye Baby," cavorting with three scantily clad women in a brothel-style setting.

Wearing a Marlene Dietrich-style tuxedo and top hat, she caressed the thigh and slapped the buttocks of one dancer.

"Get the picture?" Madonna teased the audience at the end.

"If you're looking for trouble you've definitely come to the right place," said the evening's host, actor Christian Slater.

Other big winners included En Vogue, whose plea for racial tolerance, "Free Your Mind," won the rhythm and blues trophy, best dance video and best choreography.

The veteran rockers of Aerosmith claimed the viewers' choice award. "I think I'm tripping," said singer Steve Tyler. "I must be addicted to adrenalin."

The best male video award went to Lenny Kravitz for "Are You Gonna Go My Way" and the female video trophy was awarded to k.d. lang's "Constant Craving." The best rap video was "People Everyday" by the hip-hop group Arrested Development.

The night's performing lineup included U2's The Edge, Kravitz, Sting, Aerosmith, Janet Jackson, R.E.M., Spin Doctors and Soul Asylum. Members of Pearl Jam performed their single "Go" before being joined by rock veteran Neil Young for a powerful rendition of "Rockin' in the Free World."

Winners were decided by more than 700 music industry members.

Breast-implant case verdict set aside

By The Associated Press

ATLANTA — A federal appeals court set aside the $2.275 million awarded to a woman whose breast implants ruptured.

In ordering a new trial Thursday, the 11th U.S. Circuit of Appeals ruled that a critical Food and Drug Administration report should not have been admitted as evidence.

Brenda Toole, a librarian from Dothan, Ala., who had cosmetic breast surgery in 1981, sued manufacturer Heyer-Schulte and Baxter Healthcare Corp. after her implants ruptured in 1989 and leaked silicone throughout her body.

Doctors said potentially cancerous lumps developed around the implant, and her immune system was damaged.

A federal jury in Dothan awarded $5 million in punitive damages and $400,000 in compensatory damages in 1991. A judge later reduced the award to $2.275 million, at the time the biggest award in a breast implant case.

In December a Texas jury awarded $25 million to a woman with a defective implant.

Clinton: Price controls not needed to curb health spending growth

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Clinton promises his health reforms will create jobs and slow the growth of Medicare and Medicaid spending without price controls. But a fellow Democrat says the White House is heading "down the wrong road without a road map."

Clinton is still nailing down the final details on his health reform package and how to pay for it, but his intentions came under attack Thursday.

A research group sponsored by the restaurant industry released a study contending that forcing employers to pay for workers' insurance could cost 3.1 million Americans their jobs. But Clinton spokesman Bob Boorstin called the Employment Policies Institute report "judicious" and said it was "based on ridiculous assumptions."

Rep. Jim McDermott, D-Wash., a physician who was briefed Wednesday by Clinton's health policy lieutenants, issued a stinging criticism of the White House effort.

McDermott, who has 87 Democratic co-sponsors for his bill to abandon private insurance and switch to a Canadian-style, government-financed health system, said the administration officials were unable to provide cost estimates or any details on Medicare and Medicaid financing.

"The White House appears to be going down the wrong road without a road map on health care reform," he said.

McDermott predicted "wholesale defections from the Democratic side of aisle" and said health spending could "soar through the roof" without cost controls between now and 1998.

"And I'm a friend. I want them to succeed," he said in a telephone interview. "If they are as ill-prepared as they are at the moment ... it's going to be a real fiasco."

Clinton has been meeting with Cabinet officers and key advisers this week to nail down details of his plan, due for release later this month. The White House, in response to news leaks, said Thursday that the plan would guarantee coverage for all Americans by the end of 1997, with "the vast majority" of people covered by 1996.

Fat people in California can sue for job discrimination

By The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Fat people can sue for job discrimination on the basis of weight, California's Supreme Court ruled in the case of 306-pound woman.

But the court said such people can sue only if their obesity was caused — or the employer thought it was caused — by a physiological disorder, such as faulty metabolism, rather than, say, bad eating habits within one's control.

In setting that narrow standard, the court unanimously dismissed a lawsuit by Toni Casajista, who claimed she was denied a job by a Santa Cruz health food store because of unfounded beliefs that her weight would hamper her work.

Casajista had offered no evidence that her weight was due to a physiological condition or that store officials had such a belief.

In fact, Casajista maintained that despite her weight, she is healthy and fit, Justice Armand Arabian said. "Thus, she demonstrated neither an actual nor a perceived handicap" within the meaning of the state discrimination law.

The ruling left several important questions unanswered — namely, how a judge or an employer is supposed to determine the cause of a weight problem, a question that has divided medical researchers and spawned a huge diet industry.

"I have to prove that I have some condition. You're going to have all these trials with people bringing in obesity researchers," said Laura Eljalek, program director of the National Association to Advance Fat Acceptance.

The organization said the ruling reflected a "blame-the-victim mentality."

"As a fat woman," Eljalek said, "it seems to me that now if I go in for a job interview and I'm not hired because people hold stereotypes as to what I can and cannot do without testing for it ... I don't have legal recourse."

Menopause Society: More than health issue

By BALLY STREFF BUZZER
Associated Press Writer

SAN DIEGO — Menopause has become more than a health issue. It is a political one. And feminists say the way menopause is treated says a lot about society and how it deals with women and their bodies.

At a time when women over age 50 are one of the nation's fastest-growing groups, the end of the menstrual cycle is joining abortion, breast cancer and AIDS as one of the most talked about health issues.

Witness the very existence of the North American Menopause Society, which opened a three-day conference in San Diego on Thursday.

"We're trying to bring people together and get them to communicate about this thing that women universally experience," said Dr. Wulf Utian, of the University MacDonald Womens Hospital in Cleveland.

"And part of that involves getting the doctors to stop poo-pooing the concerns that women have, and getting the therapists to acknowledge there might be some medical issues," said Utian, who founded the society four years ago.

In the United States, women experience menopause — the end of their childbearing years — at an average age of 51.

With longer life expectancies, that means up to one-third of a woman's life can be spent after menopause, noted Dr. Mary Swigar, chief of psychiatry at Robert Wood Johnson University Hospital in New Brunswick, N.J.

During menopause, some women experience hot flashes, vaginal dryness, or emotional changes. Others do not.

After menopause, women can be more at risk for heart disease or brittle bones.

But menopause also has a reputation for causing violent mood swings, depression or the loss of sexual desire. And that's just not the case, both doctors and therapists insisted.

The meaning and significance of menopause — along with such practical issues as whether to prescribe estrogen — remain controversial.

When Dr. Fred Naftolin, professor of obstetrics and gynecology at Yale University School of Medicine, stood up to insist menopause was a "deficiency disease" and nothing more, the room exploded in groans.

"Those are fighting words to many women," said Marcha Flint, anthropology professor at Montclair State College in Upper Montclair, N.J.

Doctors should carefully choose the terminology they use, she said. Women should not be made to feel one-third of their lives are nothing more than a disorder or disease.

One woman therapist accused Naftolin of condescending to women by recommending estrogen, then took a verbal poke at his bald spot.

Despite the increased interest in recent years, most women remain misinformed about menopause, Utian said.

A recent Gallup Poll indicated two-thirds of women ages 45 to 60 get their information from family, friends, magazines, TV or books — anywhere, in fact, but from their doctor.

The poll of 833 women had a 4 percent margin of error.

"Clearly, many, many doctors are still not talking to women the way they should be," Utian said.

Heart disease does not discriminate. In fact, it's the biggest killer of American women today.

That's why it's so important to recognize chest pain as a major warning sign of a heart attack. And to know that while a man's chest pain tends to occur shortly, if not immediately, before a heart attack, a woman's can come and go for weeks, even months.

But don't think this means you have time to ignore the warnings. It's paramount to catch a heart attack before it happens. See your doctor, especially if you're past menopause. And if you

Seminole sextet open football season tonight

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

SANFORD — It's time to put words into action.

After several weeks of practicing and prognosticating, the high school football season cranks up tonight as the six Seminole County teams get their first taste of regular season action.

Tonight's schedule has Seminole hosting Lyman at Thomas E. Whigham Stadium; east coast power Stuart-Martin County invades Oviedo's John Courier Stadium; Lake Mary visits the Eagles lair at Orlando-Edgewater; Lake Howell takes on Orange County rival Winter Park at Showalter Field; and Lake Brantley ventures into uncharted waters when it plays West Orange in Winter Garden.

All of the games are set for a 7:30 p.m. start.

And as with the opening of a new season there are plenty of questions.

Who will become the new stars? Will Seminole continue to flourish under new coach Ernie McPherson? Can Lake Mary and Lyman match last season's accomplishments with virtually new teams? Will Lake Brantley, Oviedo and Lake Howell be successful in their quests for the district crown?

For the first time in several seasons, a bonafide star is not around at the start of the campaign, opening the door for a young player to step to center stage and attract the attention of college recruiters.

Seminole, coming off a strong performance in last week's pre-season jamboree, will be looking to avenge its season-opening loss to Lyman of a year ago and impress their new head coach when the Greyhounds come calling tonight.

With a lot of experience on the offensive line and in the defensive backfield, Seminole (7-3, 6-1 in the Seminole Athletic Conference last year) looks like it might be poised to defend its SAC title and make another run at the Class 4A District 6 title that has eluded the team the last two years.

McPherson will be making his first start as a varsity head coach after several seasons working with the junior varsity, where his teams were almost unbeatable.

The new Tribe head man has also surrounded himself with a bevy of impressive assistant coaches: Bill Berry (defensive coordinator) and Bill Caughell (linebackers), who put together one of the strongest defensive units in the area, return from last year's coaching staff.

New additions to the staff are former New England Patriots stars Roland James (defensive backs, wide receivers) and Tony Collins (offensive coordinator), along with former Seminole High School star and coach Don Carter (offensive line).

The Greyhounds under second-year head coach Larry Baker, figure to have their hands full with the Tribe.

After going 7-4 and finishing in second place in the SAC behind Seminole last year, there is a new aura of optimism at the Longwood school. But with the departure of stars Todd Cleveland and Bobby Washington, along with 15 other Senior flanker Brian Fugate and the Lake Mary Rams will open their season on the road tonight, traveling to Orlando to play the Edgewater Eagles. In other games, Seminole hosts Lyman, Lake Howell is at Winter Park, Oviedo entertains Stuart-Martin County, and Lake Brantley goes to West Orange.

Patriots swamped by Creek

From Staff Reports

PORT ORANGE — You have to start somewhere.

The Lake Brantley High School girls volleyball team, with a roster featuring just three seniors and only four returners from the 1992 squad, face a season of learning and working to improve.

On Thursday night, they had their first lesson.

Opening their 1993 campaign on the road, the Patriots suffered a 15-0, 15-8 setback against the Spruce Creek Hawks in a 5A-District 4 contest.

Lake Brantley's junior varsity did better but still fell in two games, 16-14 and 15-11.

While it was the first match of the season for the Patriots, Spruce Creek was playing its second match in as many days, having opened its season with a three-game loss to Lyman on Wednesday night.

While understandably disappointed with the loss, Patriot coach Stan Cutler was pleased with the way his team came back from the first-game shutout.

"We'll have plenty of time to work on some things before we play again," said Cutler, in his second season guiding the Patriots. "We don't play again for 12 days (when Lake Brantley will host the Lyman Greyhounds in a Seminole Athletic Conference match on Tuesday, Sept. 14)."

Sophomore Traci Tombrose led the Patriots with three kills.

Traci Tombrose (No. 19, right) contributed three kills for the Lake Brantley Patriots in their season-opening loss to Spruce Creek Thursday night. While only a sophomore, Tombrose is one of four returners on this year's team.

Tonight's card will have the speedway's four regular divisions — Pro Late Models, Pro Stocks, Mini Stocks, and Hobby Stocks — on the dirt track. The grandstands will open at 6 p.m. with racing scheduled to start at 8:30 p.m.

Highlighting the Saturday night program on the asphalt track will be the Twin 20s for the Volusia Performance Late Model Stocks, running a pair of 20-lap features to get back on track with the NASCAR Winston Racing Series competition.

Along with the Late Model Stocks, other divisions taking to the asphalt on Saturday night will be the Late Models; the Kinco Windows and Doors Sportsman Division; the Budget Mobile Homes Street Stocks; the Pate's Drywall/Benny's Racing Tires Florida Modifieds; the Ranken Repairs/Mini Stocks; and the J.L. Haggis Auto Body Hobby Stocks.

Racing is set for 7:30 p.m. Saturday with the grandstands opening at 6 p.m.

Along with the Pro Stocks, Mini Stocks, and Hobby Stocks, Sunday night's program will feature a special points race visit by the Legends Cars, returning to Volusia's dirt track after a successful Wednesday night special a few weeks ago.

The Legends Cars are five-eighths scaled down models of 1937-style stock cars powered by motorcycle engines.

In their last appearance at Volusia County Speedway, 67-year-old Dick Mitchell beat 16-year-old Jimmy Foster to the finish line in a 25-lap, 13-car feature. Irv McDougal was third ahead of Jim France and Orlando's

Bresnick, Ayers open '93 ranked 4th in state

By TONY DeSORMIER
Herald Sports Editor

Are Kianah Bresnick of Lyman High School and Lake Mary High School's Toby Ayers among the top high school cross country runners in the state of Florida?

They are until they prove otherwise.

With the 1993 season officially starting this Saturday, both Bresnick and Ayers are ranked fourth in their respective pre-season Class 4A state polls released by the Florida Athletic Coaches Association.

The girls' and boys' pre-season polls were compiled in the same fashion, taking last year's Class 4A state championship meet results and eliminating all the graduating seniors. With that done, the meet is re-scored to determine the pre-season top 10 teams in the state.

Led by Ayers, one of five returners from last year's team, the Lyman Greyhounds begin the season ranked No. 1 in the FACA Class 4A state poll. No other Seminole County team made the girls' pre-season honor roll.

Other returners from Lyman's 1992 team that finished third at the state meet are Maeve Allord, Linda Davis, Marah Pintero, and Melissa Flippin, all of whom finished among the first 51 runners in the state championship race.

Also making the individual pre-season top 10 is Lake Mary sophomore Angle Olson, who was 13th overall at the state meet in 1992 and is ranked 10th in the FACA pre-season poll.

The only other returner for Lake Mary is senior Shawn Barkley.

Lake Brantley, which also advanced to the state meet in 1992, returns senior Danelle Leaf, sophomore Catharine Koepke, and junior Christine Yusefzadeh.

Where the Class 4A girls' pre-season poll featured two individuals and one team from Seminole County, the first Class 4A boys' poll of the 1993 cross country season boasts one individual and two teams from Seminole County.

The Lake Mary Rams, following Ayers' lead, begin the year ranked fourth in the state behind Pensacola-Washington, Gainesville-Buchholz, and Jacksonville-Wolfson.

Preparing pools for a hurricane

On Friday I received several phone calls on what to do to prepare swimming pools in the event of a hurricane. It had not occurred to me that I had not given out this information. Hopefully we won't need the information, but just in case we do, here are some helpful tips for you to do before and after the storm.

- Before the storm.
- Never completely drain your pool. Nor will you need to lower the water level. If you decide to lower your pool's water level, be sure to close your skimmer valve to prevent damage to the pump when the power is turned on.
- Turn off all electrical power to the swimming pool (pump, motor, lighting, chlorinators, etc.).
- If your filter pump is in an unsheltered area, have the motor removed and stored or wrap the motor with a waterproof membrane or plastic bag and tie it securely in place to prevent sand and driving water from entering the motor.
- Remove all loose items from the pool area. It is not advisable to throw patio furniture or accessories into the pool. If it is necessary, however, remove them as soon as possible after the storm has passed.

CONSUMER FOCUS

BARBARA HUGHES/GREGG

Heavy furniture may chip and damage the pool finish and the chemicals in the water will have an adverse affect on the furniture.

● Add extra chlorine to your pool to prevent contamination. The pool provides a handy source for washing and flushing if your house water supply fails.

● If your pool area is screened, you may prevent costly damage to the frame structure by removing 1 or 2 panels of screen above the chair rail on each side to allow the wind to blow through. Don't remove the lower panels or panels overhead. Slip the pins out of the door hinges and place the doors in a protected area.

After the storm.

- Do not empty the pool. High ground water can cause structural damage to an empty pool.

● Superchlorinate the pool water. When the chlorine residual returns to normal, have the water tested for proper balance. Heavy rain upsets mineral balance needed for protection of your equipment and pool finish.

● Remove all debris from pool with a rake and skimmer "before" re-starting the system to prevent clogged lines.

● Danger: Some chemical feeders require special care before starting pump motor. Check with your ASPI member pool company.

● Remove any wrapping around pump motor. If the motor has been submerged, it should be removed for professional cleaning and drying. If the pump has remained dry, turn on the electricity.

● Check to make certain the pump is operating normally and that the water is circulating in the pool. Reset time clocks to show the correct time of day.

● Run the filter until the water is crystal clear and resume normal pool operation.

For further advice, call the Associated Swimming Pool Industries (ASPI) "hotline" at (305) 935-0823 or an ASPI member.

Watch for the red flag as teens mature

DEAR MARY: I can't believe how stupid I've been, and I nearly cost my daughter her life. I'd like for other parents to know what happened in our family, so maybe things won't get so out of hand for them before they get help.

Janie (not her real name) has been having problems in school for the past two years. She should be a Junior now, but she's failed so many classes, she's not classified as one. She used to go to parties every weekend and sometimes came home drunk or high. She became terribly rude and disruptive around the house and began smoking and wearing heavy make-up and inappropriate clothes. Last year she and a boyfriend were involved in a car accident and the boy was arrested for DUI.

DRUG COUNSELOR

MARY BALK

What amazes me now is that both her dad and I had ourselves convinced that all of this was just a normal teen-age "stage" that she would outgrow. Even when she overdosed on aspirin in what was a half-hearted suicide attempt, we still refused to believe she had a drug problem. However, the doctor who took care of her following the suicide attempt, strongly urged us to get into counseling.

After a few sessions, Janie admitted to the counselor that she was desperate over her alcohol and drug problem.

I don't know if that's the beginning or the end of the story, because now that she's in treatment, she has lots of struggles ahead of her to rebuild her life. But the thing that bothers me most of all is that we as her parents were walking around blindfolded to her problem. I can't believe the extremes we went to to avoid admitting that she had a drug problem. She was doing all the things kids on drugs do, but we refused to believe it. Please tell parents to see what they see and stop trying to protect themselves and their kids from the realities of their behavior. It nearly cost our daughter her life.

ENABLING MOM:

DEAR ENABLING MOM: Thanks for sharing this difficult lesson with other folks, and congratulations on your new insights and awareness. This will be a great help to your daughter's chances of returning to a normal, healthy life. Denial and enabling are extremely powerful factors in the cycle of addiction, and unfortunately, it is common for the very people most involved in the addict's life to participate in them rather than risk "causing" a problem. Next week we will review with readers some of the behaviors that are "red flags" that should make every parent suspicious about their child's possible drug involvement.

Adventures abroad

After an enjoyable lunch at the Holiday House, Judy Wasserman, left, of Longwood, Ruth Hamilton, 30, center, a world traveler, writer, lecturer and resident of Bram Towers, Sanford, and Sandi Solomon, of Casselberry, returned to Bram Towers and reminisced on their travels. Solomon, a painter of oils and pastels, recently realized a longtime ambition of studying Claude Monet's home and landscape paintings in Paris. Wasserman, a noted pianist, spoke of her recent trip to Alaska.

Live-in girlfriend is treated more as maid than maiden

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I have been living together for a year and a half. We just had a baby girl. The problem is that he told me we would get married before the baby was born, and we didn't. He also told me we would get married before the holidays, but we didn't.

I want to get married very much, but I don't want to push him. I love him and the baby, but it doesn't seem like a real family to me. I feel like a live-in maid.

It's hard for me to tell him how I feel face-to-face, so will you please print this so he will read it and know how I feel? I have the feeling that if I keep living with him, he'll think he never has to marry me. So what do you think I should do?

THE LIVE-IN MAID
DEAR LIVE-IN: When you quit acting like a live-in maid, he will quit treating you like one. You don't say how old you are or how much education you've had, but it's time you started thinking in terms of learning to take care of yourself and your child, so that you will not be dependent on this — or any other — man. Get as much education as you can, and learn a skill. It is possible to do this on a welfare program, for which you may qualify as an unwed mother. Don't beg him to marry you. He's no prize.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: In reference to people who slam doors:

When I was a young girl, I was mad at my mother, so I went out the door and slammed it hard. My mother called me back and said, "Now, young lady, I want you to go out that door and close it like you should — and don't you ever slam a door like that again."

That was a lesson I have lived with all my life and have never forgotten. I am now 88 years old, living in a senior retirement home, and notice that there are certain people who cannot seem to close a door — it must be slammed. Why?

O.V.N., BIRMINGHAM, ALA.
DEAR O.V.N.: There are people who do everything with a vengeance, enthusiasm and emphasis.

Erma Bombeck once wrote, "A slammed door is worth 10,000 words." She's right on the button, as usual. The words that were left unspoken were best left unspoken!

DEAR ABBY: I hope you will reconsider your response to "Connecticut Yankees," the woman whose brother-in-law's lady friend, "Dame Diana," charged $166.90 worth of trans-Atlantic calls during a weekend visit.

To "forget" the bill is unthinkable. It sets a precedent that will be mighty hard to break if the lady friend becomes a family member, as Yankees' letter implied.

When money matters between adults are not dealt with in a responsible, businesslike way, relationships become clouded and strained. Abby, please charge your mind, and advise Yankees to present the phone bill along with a lighthearted note.

Thanks for considering my opinion.

A TEXAS HOSTESS

DEAR HOSTESS: Thanks for offering it. I didn't realize how flat-out wrong I was until the barrage of critical letters hit my desk. The buck stops here. My answer was a dud.

Power...
Purpose...
Progress

It is a fact that our nation is among the most progressive in the world. Have you ever wondered why this is so?

Each day, the millions of men and women who power the labor force of the United States of America converge at their respective places of employment with the purpose of a job well done. This attitude spells progress. Power applied with purpose equals the progress for which our country is known.

During this week of Labor Day and each week of the year, may we observe a time to rest from our labors to praise God and meditate upon His Holy Word, for prayer with a purpose provides the strength for progress in the future.

Maintaining a healthy heart, soul

LONGWOOD — Congregation Beth Am recently began a new program for its members under instruction of the Beth Am Health & Fitness Team.

The purpose of the team is to educate congregation members regarding preventative health maintenance issues to enable them to take a proactive position regarding personal wellness. The team is currently comprised of 13 members from the medical community who have agreed to volunteer their time.

The first program, which was presented Aug. 13, was a stress management program, presented in a question and answer format. It addressed the impact of stress on mental and physical well-being. Eight of the 13 team members from different areas of specialization were available to share their personal experience within their respective professions.

Dr. Robert Rosenberg, president, a chiropractor, opened the program discussing the nature of stress.

"The more we understand the origins of stress, the better we are able to cope with it," according to Dr. Rosenberg. "Stress symptoms are actually the outcome of the body's inability to respond appropriately to changing situations."

Congregation members were encouraged to understand and utilize those facets of health which will lead to stress management.

Howard Pelleson, pediatrician; Dr. Herb Waxenberg, psychologist; and Dr. Robert Rosenberg, chiropractor and president Temple Beth Am.

"Close to 70 percent of patient complaints result from stress," said Dr. Ira Shafra, a gastroenterologist.

He believes the mind and the stomach are intricately interwoven. During difficult economic times or wartime, he sees more patients and hears more complaints.

"If we could eliminate certain words from our vocabulary including must, could and have to, we would find the daily stress in our lives greatly reduced," according to Dr. Fred Waxenberg, a psychologist. The team was initially spearheaded by congregation Rabbi Merrill Shapiro along with founders including Dr. Robert Rosenberg, chiropractic physician, Longwood, and Mindy Seltzer, nutritionist, Lake Mary.

Robert Rosenberg, chiropractor; Mindy Seltzer, nutritionist; Dr. Ira Shafra, gastroenterologist; Peter Shaw, pharmacist; Dr. Edward Sheplan, optometrist; Dr. Richard Sutton, allergist; Dr. Neal Silverstein, pediatrician; and Dr. Fred Waxenberg, psychologist.

The kick-off program also offered nutritional food in an effort to share information on the role food plays in total wellness. Additional programs will be held on Sept. 10 and Oct. 8.

When Bible stories are modernized

The King James version of the Bible puts one of the Ten Commandments in its usual dignified, if slightly obscure, way:

"Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain: for the Lord will hold him guiltless that takes his name in vain."

The modern Living Bible attempts to clarify that for today's readers, who may have found the meaning lost in the quaintness of the Elizabethan prose.

Thus, we read: "You shall not use the name of Jehovah your God irreverently, nor use it to swear to a falsehood; you will not escape punishment if you do." That comes closer to today's way of speaking.

But even that revision doesn't quite get our attention as this wording of the commandment does in the Black Bible Chronicles:

"You shouldn't diss the Almighty's name, using it in cuss words or rapping with one another. It ain't cool, and payback's a monster."

Some of the language in this version (like "diss" for "show disrespect") is as unfamiliar to many of us as the way King James' subjects spoke in 1611. To others, of course, it gets the message home.

There are other attention-getters in the Black Bible Chronicles.

On the sin of adultery: "It wouldn't be right sleeping with somebody else's ol' lady." On sex before marriage: "It was a bad thing to do the wild thing without the blessing from the Almighty. You had to be hitched."

This is not the first time the Bible story has been recast into the language and customs of a particular region.

In Marc Connelly's classic play, "Green

RELIGION
George Plogenz

Pastures," the character "De Lawd" likes nothing better than to stand around and "chew the fat" with his people as he smokes a big cigar or enjoys a fish fry with them.

Clarence Jordan's "Cotton Patch Version of Matthew and John" is set in rural Georgia. It was made into a 1981 hit musical by Harry Chapin.

In Act One, "Matthew" tells the story of Jesus' birth:

"The person who started all this confusion in Gainesville was actually a girl from Clayton, Mary Hagler. While Mary was engaged to Joe Davidson, and before they had sexual relations, she became pregnant. Now Joe was upset by this because he thought Mary was a nice girl from a nice Southern family. He was wondering how he could get his football jacket back from her when he fell into a deep sleep."

According to the "Cotton Patch" account, that was when the angel reassured Joe that it was all right to make Mary his wife.

After the wedding, while they were on their way to Atlanta for an income tax audit, Mary felt she was about to give birth. Joe headed the car for the Dixie-Delite Motor Inn, but when he got there all the rooms were full.

At that point, in Matthew's words, "Joe and the motel manager broke open the door of an abandoned trailer out back, ran an extension cord out for a small space heater and delivered the little baby Jesus into the world. He was wrapped in a comforter and laid in an apple crate."

Later, when three traveling scholars from the Orient arrived, "they bowed down and opened the presents they had brought for him: a gold American Express card, some candles that put off a scent like fresh peaches and a large, expensive-looking bottle of Jade Eash."

"The Cotton Patch Gospel" continues in this vein through the post-resurrection appearances of Jesus.

On Easter night, says Matthew, "he nearly gave everyone at the Big R Barbecue cardiac arrest when he walked through, and I mean through, the door. But then he ordered a cup of coffee and a pecan pie, ate it right in front of them and that really put away their doubts."
