ANOTHER SANFORD ASSOCIATION

Sanford Farmers' Exchange Will Help Growers

That the Sanford farmers are fully awake to the opportunities afforded by co-operation is demonstrated by the fact that the second organization of a farmers' association has been formed here and the articles of incorporation appeared in Tuesday's Herald.

The new organization will be known as the Sanford Farmers' Exchange and the following appear as the incorporators:

F. W. Mahoney, Pres., C. Boyce Bell, Vice Pres., and Ben Fish, Henry Nickel, Henry Witte, T. J. Miller, J. R. Murphy.

Article 2 of the incorporation is as follows:

"There shall be no capital stock of this corporation, but the same is organized as a horticultural and agricultural corporation not for profit, under the laws of the state of Florida, and the purposes for which it is organized are to provide a means or agency through itself or other co-operative organizations, for the picking, peaking and marketing of fruits, vegetables and other agricultural products of its members and to provide an agency through itself or others for the purpose of dealing in all kinds of merchandise, supplies or appliances that may be necessary, useful or convenient to its members in the cultivation and production, shipping and marketing of their products and for such purposes may buy, own, sell and deal in all kinds of real and personal property and shall have the power to borrow money and mortgage its property to secure the payment of same."

The new organization will handle vegetables and fruits and should help the truck growers and fruit growers of this section immeasurably. In union there is strength and sooner or later all the farmers of the Sanford section and other state will be members of an organization. All big business is organized these days and the big business of Sanford is the farming and there is no valid reason why all the farmers should not get together in an organization that will look after the interests of the members and the members stand together through thick and thin. Through organized effort better fruits and vegetables will be grown and shipped and better prices will be procured and the co-operative spirit will be the means of bringing the farmers together for mutual benefit as no other movement could hope to accomplish.

Sandy Anderson Will Remain

In the article about the force of F. F. Dutton Co. going north for the summer months until the season opened here again we failed to mention the fact that Sandy Anderson would have charge of the office and business here and as usual would be with the Dutton forces this season. It seems that some of the readers had the idea that Sandy expected to go to war and the rumor was caused on account of his name not being mentioned among the other employees, this on account of the fact that only those who were going north for a month or so were mentioned. The Dutton Co. would not be the same without the faithful, cheerful, smiling Sandy Anderson and he will be found on the job as usual all during the summer and next winter and many years after that we hope, for Sandy is one of the fixtures not only with the Dutton Company but in Sanford. The entire Dutton force will return to Sanford in the fall to again take up the business of buying and selling fruits and vegetables and during the vacation period if anyone wants information regarding planting or shipping Sandy Anderson will be at the office to tell you all you want to know.

NEW DRIVE BIG GAINS FOR ALLIES

English and French Take Offensive

Foch having the supreme command has launched a new offensive this time in the Amiens and Montdidier section and with the English and French forces, they struck at dawn and without any preliminaries taking the Huns by surprise and the fierce assault gave them twenty miles the first day from the region of Braches to Morlancourt.

The Germans taken by surprise fled and the tanks, cavalry and infantry kept them on the run.

All the objectives were made by the Australians, Canadians, English and French and the allies are still advancing. Whenever the Germans stopped to make a stand they were defeated and forced to retreat. Thousands of Germans were made prisoners and large numbers of guns and stores were captured and much territory occupied by villages was re-taken.

The advance places the allies astride the railroad leading from Villers-Bretonneux to important junction points toward Peronne and southward to Compeigne.

In fact this advance being made today seriously threatens the entire German front from near the sea to Rheims. The menace to the channel ports will vanish the farther the Germans are beaten backward and will affect the armies of the German Crown Prince between the Aine and the Vesle rivers.

New Draft Regulations

Washington, Aug. 8.—In urging enactment of the administration's man-power bill extending draft ages to from 18 to 45 years of age, Gen. March told the senate military committee today the war department plans an army of 5,000,000, to be raised as soon as possible.

While realizing the importance of the measure, Gen. March said he did not believe it was necessary to recall congress before the present recess plan expires on Aug. 24, providing the bill could be reported at that time.

About July 30, Gen. March said, the United States reached a decision to enlarge its military program, to carry out the policies agreed upon at the recent inter-allied conference at Paris, to speed up prosecution of the war and bring it to an early conclusion.

The chief of staff entered into a general discussion of the entire subject and the necessity for amending the present law.

Much of his statement given to the committee behind closed doors was supplementary to that of Provost Marshal General Crowder yesterday.

Questioned by senators regarding the apparent change of front of the war department in its war program, general March told of the government's decision in accord with the Paris conference.

For the new program, Secretary Baker and other officials concluded that there must be an extension of the draft age.

Keep 18 to 20 Home to Last

While about 3,000,000 men are now under arms, army officials think there should be approximately 5,000,000 men at home and in France. In order not to disturb the present draft system and to avoid calling men who had been given exemption-extension of the draft ages is necessary.

From Gen. March's testimony and other information received, the committee has gained the impression that while all men between the ages of 18 and 45 would be subject to military duty, under the new law it is proposed those between 18 and 20 years of age shall be kept in this country until the last.

Upon the suggestion of Sen. Wadsworth that the draft system be extended to the navy Sen. Chamberlain announced that either Secretary Daniels or Admiral Benson would be asked to appear tomorrow before the committee to discuss the advisability of the proposal.
Sen. Chamberlain said he was not sure just when the committee would be able to report out the bill. Secretary Baker is expected to return Saturday and the committee desires to hear from him before taking any action. A number of other witnesses probably will be called in addition to representatives of the navy department.

LABOR QUESTION TO BE DISCUSSED ACTION ALSO TAKEN

The prohibition controversy may hold up consideration of the draft bill. Under the unanimous consent agreement, proposed war-time prohibition is to be taken up when the senate reconvenes with a final vote on Aug. 26.

This can only be aptly said by unanimous consent and Sen. Sheppard of Texas, prohibition leader in the senate, expressed the opinion today that a unanimous consent agreement could not be obtained, unless the draft bill can be taken up and be disposed of with practically no debate.

Gen. March said the shipment of men overseas would be continued according to program now in effect for the present.

GUARDS ENCAMPMENT

Daytona Promises a Great Time To Boys

Daytona, Fla., Aug. 8.—The tentative program for the State Home Guard Celebration and Encampment to be held in this city under the auspices of the Volusia County Guards on Sunday and Monday (Labor Day, Sept. 1st and 2nd, has been submitted by the chairman of the program committee, Lieut. C. A. Gontz, and it will be adopted at the next meeting of the executive committee, and will be ready for publication within a few days.

Many letters, manifesting an interest in, and a desire to participate as well as formal acceptances to be represented are being received daily by Serg. W. S. Sneed, from all parts of the state, and it is estimated that there will be more than 2,500 Home Guards present at this encampment. Among the correspondence received are letters from Jacksonville, Palatka, Gainesville, Eustis, Dade City, Miami, Vero, West Palm Beach and others.

Major John L. Doggett of the Duval County Guards, stated that the entire battalion of the Duval County Guards would probably attend, including a band and a sanitary company, making the trip to Daytona and return in automobiles, arriving here on Sunday afternoon.

Captain F. E. Wayner of Co. A, Putnam County Guards in a formal acceptance to the invitation to take part, said: "Our company has only had 90 days drilling, but the boys have worked hard and are very enthusiastic over the prospect of meeting other companies."

Major Jos. E. Waugh of the Alachua County Guards stated that they were very grateful for the invitation to take part in the celebration and encampment and that the four companies of Alachua county would be represented by at least a squad and "that they would come in the spirit of the occasion."

The Pasco Guards will be represented by approximately 32 men according to Mayor O. L. Dyton of Dade City.

Miami, the Magic City, is contemplating sending a platoon of four squads, guides and officer, as well as their battalion band, according to an interesting letter from Major James T. Sanders. They will make the trip in automobiles.

According to the Plant City Courier, Company C, Hillsborough County Guards of that city has started the elimination process to secure a platoon of the best drilled men in the company to send to the encampment.

Through a personal representative, Capt. Leroy Giles of Orange County has notified the Halifax Home Guards that his company will be well represented, their company including three squads from Winter Garden and Winter Park. Company H of the Orange County Guards issued a challenge to meet any military baseball team in the the little "wild girl" into marriage, and Tom Moore is the rescuing young hero; Miss Tanguay brings to her interpretation of the title roll all of that youthful zest and abandon which stamps her work on the stage, and her picture of the little Southern heiress reared by roving gypsies is an appealing one.

Miss Tanguay's entrance into the film world is a notable occurrence. She is without doubt the most popular public entertainer on the boards, her popularity having been undeniably established a few years back when she won the Morning Telegraph's famous popularity contest. This contest finally narrowed down to two favorites, Eva Tanguay at the Colonial and Vesta Victoria at The Plaza, and Broadway lined up loyally. With the result that Eva Tanguay was adjudged the favorite and given the diamond medal. Another medal of which she is very proud was won in a sort of endurance contest. Miss Tanguay kept up a continual performance for an hour and forty minutes, during which time she sang twenty six songs.

Probably the best known of her songs is "I Don't Care," which she has sung from one side of the country to the other, and her performance of "Salome" broke all New York audience records when it ran for a continuous eight weeks at the Broadway playhouses. Aside from her vivid personality, she is past mistress in the art of costuming her acts, and the daringly beautiful creations which she wears have become a part of her fame. A number of them will be shown in a striking revue as a prelude to "The Wild Girl" film.

"A FIGHT FOR MILLIONS"

To Begin Here—William Duncan Again Defies Death

The Movie Kink of the Star Theatre announces that he has booked Vitagraph's newest and greatest serial, "A Fight for Millions," and will show the first episode next Tuesday. Thereafter he will run one episode per week for 15 weeks.

William Duncan, the strong man of the screen and the dashing hero of "The Fighting Trail" and "Vengeance and the Woman," will again be seen as the hero, with Edith Johnson as the heroine, and Joe Ryan, the "Shoestring" of "The Fighting Trail," as the leading "heavy."

As in the other Vitagraph serials, there is plenty of action in "A Fight for Millions" and a great deal of wonderful riding by Vitagraph's famous cowboys. The story was written by Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph company, and Cyrus Townsend Brady, noted as one of the leading fiction writers of the country. The same authors gave us "Vengeance—and the Woman" and "The Woman in the Web."

Like its predecessors, the story of "A Fight for Millions" will be in fifteen episodes, and Manager Herndon, who has already seen most of the serial screened declares that it exceeds in thrills and feats of daring any of the serials which have gone before. It was made in the northwest, mostly in the Canadian Rockies and most of the story transpires along the Canadian border, with Northwest mounted police, the relentless foes of crime and criminals playing a prominent part in the narrative.

William Duncan, who directed the big picture in addition to playing the leading role in it appears to greater advantage in this than in his previous efforts. Right in the early part of the story he begins a career of perilous adventure by plunging into a mountain torrent after being shot from a horse as it gallops across a swinging bridge hundreds of feet in the air. This is described by Manager Herndon as one of the most terrifying stunts he has ever seen performed on the screen. In the same episode a man is shown ablaze from head to foot after the heroine turns a lighted lamp at him. Subsequently he forces here to leap from the top of a mountain, using an improvised parachute.

Zeppelin Blown Up In Ince Drama

Into the mythical land of strife, where home, family and humanity are forgotten, "The Zeppelin's Last Raid," Thomas H. Ince's newest and greatest spectacle will be at the Star Wednesday.

Here, where this remarkable cinema spectacle silently portrayed the uprising of an enslaved people against imperialistic rule, the horrors of kaiserism as obtains today in Germany were made the object lesson of one of the most pretentious pictorial pageants ever seen in this city.

For the last three years or more Ince's artistic photoplays have been gaining in favor among people who like intelligent, consistent motion picture production. "The Zeppelin's Last Raid" is offered by Mr. Ince as the crowning effort of his cinema accomplishment. Coming at a time when the world is scarred by the horrors of war, it unfolds a story of mighty interest. In it the first great war spectacle, with a real heart gripping story, one that does not depend entirely upon battle scenes for its magnetism.

There are all the thrills of all the moving pictures of yesterday and today and tomorrow, it may be rolled into one, magnified and emphasized.

Eva Tanguay at the Star Thursday

Eva Tanguay makes here first appearance in motion pictures in the role of Firefly in "The Wild Girl," distributed by Select Pictures; she enters upon a brand new phase of her brilliant career and sets a new star in the screen firmament. To the thousands of admirers awaiting her appearance on the films, the little vaudeville queen's debut in this new medium of expression will be a red letter event, and her work on the screen is marked by the same cyclonic individuality that has made her the most talked of actress on the vaudeville stage.

"The Wild Girl," which was written especially for Miss Tanguay by George Rosener gives her exceptional opportunities and she is supported by an unusually able cast. Stuart Holmes plays the part of Voshko, the villainous gypsy who tries to trap

Honorary Army Promotion.

Brevet is a French word, meaning commission or warrant. In military usage it gives an officer higher nominal rank than the one for which he receives pay. It is an honorary promotion. The first time it was used in the United States army was in 1812 when Capt. Zachary Taylor, who afterward became president, was made major by brevet for his brave defense of Fort Harrison against the Indians, near Terre Haute.

Beware of Gathering Rust.

Any machine, neglected and left standing idle, soon gathers rust. As the rust accumulates it exercises a corrosive action. It eats into part after part of the machine, which presently is good for nothing. Had it been regularly used that piece of machinery would have lasted much longer. Idleness has been its destruction. Infertile Eggs for Market.

The loss in the United States from improper methods of producing and handling eggs amounts to millions of dollars a year. Probably one-third of this loss is due to the partial hatching of fertile eggs which have been allowed to become warm enough to incubate. This annual loss of good food can be prevented by separating the hens from the male birds after the hatching season is over. The male bird serves no useful purpose in the flock during summer, fall and winter and should be cooked, sold or confined immediately after the hatching season is over.

Teach How to Preserve Eggs.

To teach city people how to preserve eggs with water glass, extension workers of the poultry division of the United States department of agriculture are holding demonstrations in large department stores in a number of cities. Demonstrations have been held in Washington, Chicago and New Orleans, and the plan is to extend the work to other large cities. Similar demonstrations have been held in rural schools and at meetings attended by farmers.

Record for Hauling Eggs.

The first commercial truck load of eggs from Vineland and Millville, N. J., into New York city—about 140 miles—arrived recently with not one egg broken. Delivery from the shipper to the wholesaler was made in 15 hours, which is faster time than that made by express shipments, and establishes a record for motor haul of eggs, according to the bureau of markets of the United States department of agriculture which arranged for the demonstration. The five-ton truck carried 150 crates of eggs weighing nearly four tons, the rest of the load being made up of crated glass. It left Vineland at about 11 a. m., and arrived in the wholesale district of New York city at two o'clock the next morning.

Poultry Wheatless Rations.

Wheatless rations for commercial or coop flogging of young chickens for market offers to commercial feeders singularly efficient and economical rations for rapid gains in weight. In tests conducted by specialists of the United States department of agriculture, a report of which has been published in a professional paper, Bulletin 657, a ration composed of cornmeal and fresh buttermilk, fed again and again throughout the whole feeding season, produced in 14 days' coop feeding an average gain of a pound for every 888 pounds of wet feed consumed. Still better results were obtained with distillers' grains. In the tests the highest and cheapest gains were made by birds having an initial weight of two-pounds or less.

Some of the heavy breeds of fowls are very hard to break of sitting when they once get "in the notion," and extreme measures are often practiced upon the poor erring ones.

Survey of Food Stocks.

An inventory of commercial stocks of grain, flour, meal and other food products is being taken each month by the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, and the results, published in a new monthly publication called Food Surveys, two numbers of which have already been issued. These monthly surveys began April 1, 1918.

Our Boys Keep Their Pledge

Our boys who have enlisted in the service, thereby pledging to Uncle Sam and to those of us who remain at home that they will give their very all, if need be, for the cause of Freedom, are daily keeping their pledge, and this brings us to remind the people of Seminole who made a pledge in the recent War Savings Drive that they are expected to keep the pledge they have made to the boys by showing the government that they will buy and pay for every stamp they agreed to buy during the year 1918.

ARE YOU KEEPING YOUR PLEDGE?

Bird and Insect Workers.

The arts of weaving and rope and net making are practiced by some of the lower forms of life, notably among caterpillars and spiders. The weaver birds of Africa and India, which are a species of finch, construct wonderful nests out of leaves by sewing them together.

Ship Built of Mahogany.

There is a vessel built of mahogany. Her name is Matchless and she is now used by the coast and geodetic survey. She was built by pirates near Key West in 1850, of mahogany stolen from a stranded merchant vessel. It is said she was the last vessel to bring slaves from the West Indies to the United States.

Ennepy Described in Bible. In the New Testament there appears to be a very clear description of epilepsy in the case of a child cured by the Savior. (St. Matthew, chapter 17, 14-8). Here the text says that the child "oft-times falleth into the fire and oft into the water."

The Bible in Strange Tongues. The British and Foreign Bible society has translated the Bible into all sorts of foreign tongues and dialects. You could read a British and foreign Bible in a different tongue every day for sixteen and a half months before exhausting the list.—London Mail.

SHERM'S DOTS

THE DOTS SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE.
By Clifford Leon Sherman.

Dear Folks:—You see, don't you, if I had been brought up on a farm or a ranch, I would have known more about handling mules. But, believe me, these army mules are hard to handle. I tried my best to pull one down the gang plank, but there was nothing doing. Then I did a fool thing, and went around behind to push and the beggar sniped me in the leg with his heels. One of the Red Cross boys gave me first aid, and then, as our ambulances were not yet off of the ship, they sent me to the hospital in aSAMMY.

Heard the German Guard Coming.

I was so bewildered, however, that I decided to take no chances, and as the road was fairly good I wandered down it and away from that mysterious fence. About half a mile down I could see the light of a sentry station and I thought I would go there and tell my story to the sentries, realizing that as I was unarmed it was perfectly safe for me to announce myself to the Dutch authorities. I could be interned only if I entered Holland under arms.

As I approached the sentry box I noticed three men in gray uniforms, the regulation Dutch color. I was on the verge of shouting to them when the thought struck me that there was just a chance I might be mistaken, as the German uniforms were the same color, and I had suffered too many privations and too many narrow escapes to lose all at this time by jumping at conclusions.

I had just turned off the road to go back into some bushes when out of the darkness I heard that dread German command: "Halt! Halt!"

He didn't need to holler twice. I heard and heeded the first time. Then I heard another man come running up, and there was considerable talking, but whether they were Germans or Hollanders I was still uncertain. He evidently thought someone was on the other side of the fence.

Finally I heard one of them laugh and saw him walk back to the sentry station where the guard was billeted, and I crawled a little nearer to try to make out just what it meant. I had begun to think it was all a nightmare.

Between myself and the light in the sentry station, I then noticed the stooping figure of a man bending over as if to conceal himself and on his head was the spiked helmet of a German soldier.

I knew then what another narrow escape I had had, for I am quite sure he would have shot me without ceremony if I had foolishly made myself known. I would have been buried at once and no one would have been any wiser, even though, technically speaking, I was on neutral territory and immune from capture or attack.

This new shock only served to bewilder me more. I was completely lost. There seemed to be frontier behind me and frontier in front of me. Evidently, however, what had happened was that I had lost my sense of direction and had wandered in the arc of a circle, returning to the same fence that I had been so long in getting through. This solution of the mystery came to me suddenly and I at once searched the landscape for something in the way of a landmark to guide me. For once my faithful friend, the North Star, had failed me. The sky was pitch black and there wasn't a star in the heavens.

In the distance, at about what appeared to be about three miles away, but which turned out to be six, I could discern the lights of a village, and I knew it must be a Dutch village, as lights are not allowed in Belgium in that indiscriminate way.

My course was now clear. I would make a beeline for that village. Before I had gone very far I found myself in a marsh or swamp and I turned back a little, hoping to find a better path. Finding none, I retraced my steps and kept straight ahead, determined to reach that village at all costs and to swerve neither to the right or left until I got there.

One moment I would be in water up to my knees and the next I would sink in mud clear up to my waist. I paid no attention to my condition. It was merely a repetition of what I had gone through many times before, but this time I had a definite goal and once I reached it I knew my troubles would be over.

It took me perhaps three hours to reach firm ground. The path I struck led to within half a mile of the village. I shall never forget that path; it was almost as welcome to my feet as the opposite bank of the Meuse had seemed.

The first habitation I came to was a little workshop with a bright light shining outside. It must have been after midnight, but the people inside were apparently just quitting work. There were three men and two boys engaged in making wooden shoes.

It wasn't necessary for me to explain to them that I was a refugee, even if I had been able to speak their language. I was caked with mud up to my shoulders and I suppose my face must have recorded some of the experiences I had gone through that memorable night.

"I want the British consul!" I told them.

Apparently they didn't understand, but one of them volunteered to conduct me to the village. They seemed to be only too anxious to do all they could for me; evidently they realized I was a British soldier.

It was very late when my companion finally escorted me into the village, but he aroused some people he knew from their beds and they dressed and came down to feed me.

The family consisted of an old lady and her husband and a son, who was a soldier in the Dutch army. The cold shivers ran down my back while he sat beside me, because every now and again I caught a glimpse of his gray uniform and it resembled very much that of the German soldiers.

Some of the neighbors, aroused by the commotion, got up to see what it was all about, and came in and watched while I ate the meal those good Dutch people prepared for me. Ordinarily I suppose I would have been embarrassed with so many people staring at me while I ate as though I were some strange animal that has just been captured, but just then I was too famished to notice or care very much what other people did.

There will always be a warm place in my heart for the Dutch people. I had heard lots of persons say that they were not inclined to help refugees, but my experience did not bear these reports out. They certainly did more for me than I ever expected.

I had a little German money left, but as the value of German money is only about half in Holland, I didn't have enough to pay the fare to Rotterdam, which was my next objective. It was due to the generosity of these people that I was able to reach the British consul as quickly as I did. Some day I hope to return to Holland and repay every single soul who played the part of the good Samaritan to me.

With the money that these people gave me I was able to get a third-class ticket to Rotterdam, and I was glad that I didn't have to travel first-class, for I would have looked as much out of place in a first-class carriage as a Hun would appear in heaven.

That night I slept in the house of my Dutch friends, where they fixed me up most comfortably. In the morning they gave me breakfast and then escorted me to the station.

While I was waiting at the station a crowd gathered round me and soon

OUR PLEDGE

"Appreciating to the utmost the supreme unselfishness of our American manhood which is offering its very life upon the altar of freedom for the world, we, the members of the South Florida Press Association, in semi-annual session assembled, do hereby

"Resolve, That in this crisis and as long as life shall last, we dedicate all that we are and all that we have to the support of our glorious nation, our righteous cause, and our illustrious government. And be it further

"Resolved, That every newspaper holding membership in this association display this resolution in bold type at the masthead of its editorial page throughout the month of August, and that copies be sent to the president and our representatives in congress,

"Done and ordered in the city of Wauchula, state of Florida, this 12th day of July, 1918."

"A preacher over at Lauderdale preached an hour and a half to convert an editor. If it was George Matthews, the only editor we know over there who needs conversion, the Rev. might as well bring his lunch and knitting with him, because he has a regular job," says the Lakeland Telegram, and the Ocala Star is inspired to remark: "We can't understand why any sensible preacher wants to convert an editor. If they should fill Heaven up with editors, the preachers would have to move."

With the present dearth of advertising and other business The Herald will be forced to suspend the twice a week paper and go back to the weekly. This will be the only way in which to cover our losses. If the merchants do not see fit to advertise in war times then we cannot see any chance to operate a twice a week paper. With the proper amount of advertising The Herald could be made into a daily, but we can only give Sanford the kind of paper Sanford seems to want and there you are. Meantime the editor intends to go to war as soon as possible and this will also necessitate a weekly paper while he is away. If we are to make war our business we will make it our business until it is finished.

a good deal about the woes of newspapers. We wish to say just one thing more and then close the chapter, viz: Any community that thinks a newspaper worth having must support it; and this support must be general and not restricted to a few public spirited individuals. A large majority of the business men must advertise in it and a large majority of the citizens must subscribe for it. Any community that fails to comply with these requirements will not have a newspaper very long; and when its newspaper ceases publication, notice is hereby given to the world that that community is a dead one.—Punta Gorda Herald.

CONSERVATION OF EFFORT

Braxton Beacham of Orlando who as the food administrator of Florida is having "the time of his life" has recently made an order with regard to ice deliveries that will prove a great saving. The order says:

"In cities where two or more ice factories are operated, the factories shall divide the territory covered by delivery wagons so that not more than one wagon shall cover any particular section each day and shall so restrict deliveries that not more than one delivery shall be made each day over the respective territory assigned to each factory through the above arrangement."

Mr. Beacham should include grocery delivery wagons and milk wagons in his order. There is at present great waste of effort on the part of these.

BOYS NOT WANTED

While we like to see real patriotism in our boys it is not right for the young ones to enlist.

Urging young men who can do so to remain at their studies in high school and college in place of enlisting in the various arms of the service, Secretary of the Navy Daniels has issued the following statement:

"The secretary of war and the secretary of the navy have encouraged young men under the draft age to remain at school until there is imperative need for their service. We have advised them to take military training at school wherever possible and pursue their education. With this instruction I am sure they will be better fitted for the call when it comes. I have complaint from Oregon that recruiting officers are branding young men who are going to school as slackers because they have not enlisted. Please see to it that no one in our service is permitted to make such allusions to those who are following the advice of the war and navy departments. In the navy we take young men over 18, who desire to come, but those who are pursuing their studies at school and at college are advised to continue their studies for the present.

MAKING THE NEWSPAPER

Our good friend and versatile writer, Editor Gilbert D. Leach in the last issue of the Leesburg Commercial says:

"Do you read the Saturday Evening Post? If you do, we want to point out to you the great lesson taught by that story entitled 'Common Cause.'"

"Here was a newspaper that, because of its determined patriotism, was running behind, losing support through boycott and propaganda, and was rapidly approaching the point where it could not have continued its splendid work because of lack of funds.

"Suddenly there was a change. Old political enemies came forward with offers of financial support; old sores that had alienated former friends disappeared and the old friends returned and became new friends. Finally, one of the political enemies assisted in organizing the ladies of the city into a patriotic league and the biggest thing in the league was the successful effort of the influential woman to uphold the hands of the patriotic newspaper.

"Some individual thought along the same line would not be amiss in communities where there are no pro-German propagandists and where the office of the newspaper is principally to enthrone and inform those people who might be inclined to lag behind unless reminded."—DeLand News.

THE NEW DRAFT BILL

Thank goodness, the new bill that will probably become a law will take men from at least 21 to 45 and instead of begging for a job with the government we will then be taken into the army whether they want us or not. Ever since the war started the editor of The Herald has been handed a thankless, payless job of some kind that took up our time and money and proved to be nothing but trouble. We asked the congressman and senators to give us something in this country or in Europe that would mean action and some pay, but they are all too busy handing jobs to people in Jacksonville and when the next election comes around they can go to Jacksonville for their support. But now being but 42 years of age we are in the draft age and they must do something for us. When this becomes a law we will go down to the booth and register along with the young bucks and maybe sometime in the future the government will recognize the fact that a newspaper man way down in Florida has been working twenty-five years for nothing, has been working since the war started for nothing and that there might be something, somewhere that paid a dollar a day that could be handed down to him, we still maybe and we are waiting and still holding down the thankless, payless, but not kickless jobs.

DESERTERS CAUGHT HERE

Had Phoney Furloughs From Aviation Camp at Arcadia

Three deserters were caught at DeLeon Springs last night by Sheriff Morris on advice from the sheriff's office here and Deputy Roy Tilla went to DeLand last night and brought them here and they are now in jail. They came here from "somewhere in the U. S. A." and had a Ford car. Running the tires off the Henry they stole the tires from the car of Mrs. Simon and it was this theft that verified the suspicions of the officers here that all was not well. Finding out the direction in which they had gone the sheriff's office here wired the sheriff's office at DeLand to get them and they were stopped at DeLeon. One of them had an automatic on him and tried to drop it when caught. The bogus furloughs from the aviation camp is signed in rubber stamp with the name of Major Wheeler and the letter head and stamp must have been stolen from the office at the aviation camp. Sergeant Enoch Austin here on a furlough said the letter head furlough was not regular and the deserters have acknowledged the forgery. They may be the three men wanted at Gainesville, Georgia, for stealing a car or they may have deserted from Arcadia camps as they said they did. They will be held pending advice from headquarters and the sheriff's office will receive compensation from the government for their trouble in apprehending them.

HANS DOESN'T LIKE HIS MEDICINE

The German is a foul fighter. He is always a bad loser. He wants to play always with stacked cards. He violates the rules of war when he sees advantage to himself in violating them. But as soon as he begins to suffer from their violation he begins to whimper and asks for a return to civilized practices.

The people of the Rhine cities are getting sick of aerial bombardments. They see that they are slated for the experiences which French and British cities have been undergoing for the last four years at the hands of German Gothas and Zeppelins. They don't subscribe enthusiastically to the theory that what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander.

Herr Narun, a deputy in the Baden Landtag, implores the Baden government to urge the imperial authorities to come to an agreement with the Allies for an abandonment of bombardments of towns outside zones of military operations. He uses the argument hitherto treated with cynical contempt in Berlin, that aerial attacks on places behind the front serve on military purpose and result only in the killing of non-combatants—most of them women and children.

It is a good argument. But what German in authority would ever listen to it while Germany was enjoying a monopoly of this kind of murder? Dr. Wilhelm Muhol, even in the first days of the war sensed this German characteristic of German callousness to outrage committed on others, but indignant sensitiveness to retaliation in kind, should such retaliation ever be visited on Germany.

He wrote in his diary on August 22, 1914, when the German authorities began to seize private property in Belgium:

"I should like to hear the German outcry in case the French, invading Germany should follow our example. Whenever we are the weaker party in a controversy we demand of the other side a consideration which we never extend ourselves if we happen to be the stronger."

True and prophetic words! After the fourth year infamy of German beginning to whine, foreseeing a dose of their own medicine. Hans does not like the prospect: He begins to cry "kamerad!" and in doing so he only runs true to his contemptible and barbarous nature.—The New York Tribune.

He Was Honest, Anyway. "That novel had a remarkable sale," commented the book store man. "Have you read it?" "Oh, no! I wouldn't dare read it, as my duties require me to be enthusiastic in recommending it to customers."—Brooklyn Citizen.

NOTICE

Believing that FIRE INSURANCE RATES charged by old line stock companies are too high, I have secured the agency of the FLORIDA MUTUAL FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY of Tampa, Florida.

This company saved its policy holders 20 per cent last year and hopes to do better in the future. The company is organized under the state law and selects its risks carefully, and the profits go back to the policy holders instead of being paid in dividends to stockholders.

Being a mutual company, the policy holders are pledged to pay the premium the second time in case the company needs more money than the original premium in order to pay losses. This adds to the security of the policy holders and is necessary because there is no capital stock. However, the chances that such an assessment will be made is very remote.

If interested before your policy expires, bring it to my office at Room 8 in the Court House, and make application for its renewal in the Mutual Company.

PREVENT HOG CHOLERA

The B. A. Thomas Hog Powder has a record of 95 per cent cures of Hog Cholera. If you feed your hogs as directed, you need never fear hog cholera or any other hog disease. And the directions are very simple, just about what you are doing, plus a few cents' worth of B. A. Thomas' hog Powder in the feed twice a week.

Usually, though, Cholera gets in before we know it. Then it requires close attention to each hog—each hog must be dosed—and if you will dose them as directed, you will save better than 90 per cent. If you don't, the B. A. Thomas medicine costs you nothing. We—not some distant manufacturer—pay your money back.

FEEDING CITIES IS BIG PROBLEM

Study of Some Things Which Affect Final Delivery of Food to Consumer.

QUESTION OF RAPID TRANSIT

Fresh Meats and Other Perishable Products From Farms Must Be Speeded Up at Every Stage—Delay Means Shrinkage.

One of the fundamental factors in the problem of feeding towns and cities is that of transportation. Since city dwellers are so dependent upon transportation for their foodstuffs, it may be interesting to study some of the things which affect the final delivery of food and especially meats to the consumer.

Transportation difficulties begin with the stock raiser, whether he is a rancher in the West, a corn belt farmer or other agriculturist who produces live stock for food. In the early days, before our railroads were in existence or before they were the principal factors in getting stock to market, cattle, hogs and sheep had to be driven or hauled long distances to reach a selling point or a point from which they could be shipped by boat or rail. This was a very expensive way of moving stock; it not only took a long time but the loss of animals and the loss of flesh by these animals was also considerable, even though the values per pound were very little compared with today.

Troubles of Stock Grower.

The first trouble the stock grower or dealer today has in getting his stock to market is to get to a railroad point to ship his animals to one of the various large stockyards to be sold. Bad roads, adverse weather and perhaps a long drive or haul to the shipping point all affect the length of time required; then there may be a temporary shortage of cars and stock must be held in the railroad stockyards and fed until cars are provided. Once loaded into cars, however, there is a special effort made to get to the market in the shortest possible time. Delay means abnormal shrinkage; if the cars are on the road 36 hours the stock must be unloaded for feed and water; or the market may drop suddenly; hence the necessity for speed.

Shipping Fresh Meats.

In order to ship fresh meats successfully they must be thoroughly chilled before loading and then transported in refrigerator cars, especially during the warmer weather, although this practice is followed the year round. These cars have ice tanks at each end, which are filled with ice and a percentage of salt and the car chilled to about 35 to 38 degrees Fahrenheit. Also they are provided with ventilating or circulating systems in order to keep the temperature in all parts of the car as nearly uniform as possible. In making long shipments, and especially during the warmer months, it is necessary to the car one or more times en route to keep the temperature as low and as constant as possible. Even then on account of bad weather, wrecks or any other condition that causes undue delay, the meat may not be in first-class condition on its arrival at the destination and must therefore be sold quickly even at some sacrifice in price.

Speed Is Essential.

Speed is vital from the time the stock leaves the producer's hands until it reaches the packer and from the time the product, fresh meat, leaves a packing house until it reaches the ultimate consumer. So anything that interferes with quick delivery, that causes shipments to be delayed, quite often means loss. The principal live stock producing sections are a long distance from the principal meat-consuming centers of the East, which makes them dependent almost entirely upon adequate transportation facilities to keep supplied with fresh meat at any and all times.

Mobilizing Harvest Labor.

Steps for the systematic mobilization of farm labor in Kansas were taken at a meeting held in Kansas City, May 14. This is the first of a series of meetings which are to be arranged by the department of agriculture in a number of cities to unite the efforts of all agencies working to secure labor to help farmers in harvesting their crops. At the Kansas City meeting a committee was appointed to direct the work of the various agencies in the state and to see that registrations are held in the cities where city employees who will do farm work during their vacations can register. It is estimated that 80,000 helpers will be necessary to harvest the crops in Kansas this year, and the commercial organizations in Kansas City have undertaken to supply 10,000 of this number.

Intoxicated by Freedom.

GOOD VENTILATION FOR AUTO

Cool Air, Furnished to Front Compartment of Machines, Usually Hot in Summer Time.

The front compartment of some automobiles is uncomfortably hot during the summer months, particularly in small cars provided with a rigid non-ventilating type of windshield and a blind door at the side of the driver, says Popular Mechanics. To eliminate this condition the blind door was changed into a hinged one. With tin shears and a saw the false door was cut out along the molding. A wooden frame was made for the cut-out door, to which it was screwed. Suitable wooden blocks were fastened to the body for the hinge and lock, these parts being purchased at a cost of 60 cents. Instead of having the door hinged forward, the hinge was placed at the rear. Metal fasteners were made for each door and these secured as door hooks. These fasteners hold the doors open about three inches, and when driving, a stream of cool air enters the front-opening door, passing out at the opposite side. This change, which cost less than $5, is well worth the price for the convenience alone, making entry and exit from the driver's seat possible without disturbing a person in the seat at his side.

season, but none more fashionable than that gained by the use of the peplum with the lower front edges tapering in points. A semi-dressy model is shown here. The jacket is a single-breasted model with high neck and standing collar rolled over at the top. Plaits take up the fulcrum at the front, the back being semi-fitted. Two circular peplum sections, the upper extending in deep points at the front and the under reaching across the back of jacket only, are unusual features of the design. Medium size requires 2 3/4 yards 54-inch material.

To give the proper lines to the jacket, first study the cutting guide to see how each section is laid on the material. For instance, the peplum section marked "J" is placed near the fold, but the large "O" perforations rest on a lengthwise thread of the material. The shawl collar and the back are the only two sections of the jacket that are laid along the lengthwise fold, being marked by "T" and triple "TTT" perforations, respectively.

Both sleeve sections, the pocket, side back, front and peplum section "L" are placed on the material with large "O" perforations on a lengthwise thread of material. The belt may be placed on either a lengthwise or crosswise fold of material.

If desired, silk, satin or some contrasting fabric may be used for the collar. The pattern is laid on the material in the same way, however.

It was a wonderful sensation. "I don't believe there will ever be a country that will appear in my eyes quite as good as Holland did then. I had to be somewhat careful, however, because Holland was full of German spies and I knew they would be keen to learn all they possibly could about my escape and my adventures so that the authorities in Belgium could mete out punishment to everyone who was in any respect to blame for it. As I was in Rotterdam only one day, they didn't have very much opportunity to learn anything from me.

The naval officer who accompanied me and acted as interpreter for me introduced me to many other soldiers and sailors who had escaped from Belgium when the Germans took Antwerp, and as they had arrived in Holland in uniform and under arms, the laws of neutrality compelled their internment and they had been there ever since.

The life of a man who is interned in a neutral county, I learned, is anything but satisfactory. He gets one month a year to visit his home. If he lives in England that is not so bad, but if he happens to live farther away, the time he has to spend with his folks is very short, as the month's leave does not take into consideration the time consumed in traveling to, and from Holland.

The possibility of escape from Holland is always there, but the British authorities have an agreement with the Dutch government to send refugees back immediately. In this respect, therefore, the position of a man who is interned is worse than that of a prisoner who, if he does succeed in making his escape, is naturally relieved with open arms in his native land. Apart from this restraint, however, internment, with all its drawbacks, is a thousand times, yes, a million times, better than being a prisoner of war in Germany.

It seems to me that when the war is over and the men who have been imprisoned in Germany return home, they should be given a bigger and greater reception than the most victorious army that ever marched into a city, for they will have suffered and gone through more than the world will ever be able to understand.

No doubt you will find in the German prison camps one or two faint-hearted individuals with a pronounced yellow streak who voluntarily gave up the struggle and gave up their liberty rather than risk their lives or limbs. These sad cases, however, are, I am sure, extremely few. Nine hundred and ninety-nine out of a thousand of the men fighting in the allied lines would rather be in the front trenches, fighting every day, with all the horrors and all the risks, than be a prisoner of war in Germany, for the men in France have a very keen realization of what that means.

But to return to my day in Rotterdam.

After I was fixed up I returned to the consulate and arrangements were made for my transportation to England at once. Fortunately there was a boat leaving that very night and I was allowed to take passage on it.

Just as we were leaving Rotterdam, the boat I was on rammed our own convoy, one of the destroyers, and injured it so badly that it had to put back to port. It would have been a strange climax to my adventure if the disaster had resulted in the sinking of my boat and I had lost my life while on my way to England after having successfully outwitted the Hun. But my luck was with me to the last, and while the accident resulted in some delay our boat was not seriously damaged and made the trip over in schedule time and without further accident, another destroyer having been assigned to escort us through the danger zone in place of the one which had been put out of commission.

When I arrived in London, the reaction from the strain I had been under for nearly three months immediately became apparent. My nerves were in such a state that it was absolutely impossible for me to cross the street without being in dandy fear of being run over or trampled. I stood at the curb, like an old woman from the country on her first visit to the city, and I would not venture across until some knowing policeman, recognizing my condition, came to my assistance and conveyed me across.

Indeed, there was a great number of English officers at home at all times, "getting back their nerves" after a long spell of active service at the front, so that my condition was anything but novel to the London bobbies.

It was not many days, however, before I regained control of myself and felt in first-class shape.

Although the British authorities in Holland had wired my mother from Holland that I was safe and on my way to England, the first thing I did when we landed was to send her a cable myself.

The cable read as follows: "Mrs. M. J. O'Brien, Mombence, Ill., U. S. A. "Just escaped from Germany. Let her follow."

As I delivered it to the cable dispatcher I could just imagine the exultation with which my mother would receive it and the pride she would feel as she exhibited it among her neighbors and friends.

I could hear the volley of "I told you so's" that greeted her good tidings.

"I would take more than the Kaiser to keep Pat in Germany," I could hear one of them saying.

"Knew he'd be back for Christmas, anyway," I could hear another remark.

"I had an idea that Pat and his commander might spend Christmas in Berlin," I could hear another admitting, "but I did not think any other part of Germany would appeal to him very much."

"Mrs. O'Brien, did Pat write you how many German prisoners he brought back with him?" I could hear still another credulous friend inquiring.

It was all very amusing and gratifying to me and I must confess I felt quite cocky as I walked into the war department to report.

For the next five days I was kept very busy answering questions put to me by the military authorities regarding what I had observed as to conditions in Germany and behind the lines.

What I reported was taken down by a stenographer and made part of the official records, but I did not give them my story in narrative form. The information I was able to give was naturally of interest to various branches of the service, and experts in every line of government work took it in turns to question me. One morning would be devoted, for instance, to answering questions of a military nature—German methods behind the front line trenches, tactics, morale of troops and similar matters. Then the aviation experts would take a whack at me and discuss with me all I had observed of German flying corps methods and equipment. Then, again, the food experts would interrogate me as to what I had learned of food conditions in Germany, Luxembourg and Belgium, and as I had lived pretty close to the ground for the best part of seventy-two days I was able to give them some fairly accurate reports as to actual agricultural conditions, many of the things I told them probably having more significance to them than they had to me.

There were many things I had observed which I have not referred to in these pages because their value to us might be diminished if the Germans knew we were aware of them, but they were all reported to the authorities and it was very gratifying to me to hear that the experts considered some of them of the greatest value. One of the most amusing incidents of my return occurred when I called at my bankers in London to get my personal effects.

The practice in the Royal Flying Corps when a pilot is reported missing is to have two of his comrades assigned to go through his belongings, check them over, destroy anything that it might not be to his interest to preserve, and send the whole business to his banker or his home, as the case may be. Every letter is read through, but their contents is never afterwards discussed or revealed in any way. If the pilot is finally reported dead, his effects are forwarded to his next of kin, but while he is officially only "missing" or is known to be a prisoner of war, they are kept either at the squadron headquarters or sent to his bankers.

In my case as soon as it was learned that I had fallen from the sky, it was assumed that I had been killed and my chum, Paul Haney, and another officer detailed to check over my effects. The list they made and to which they affixed their signatures, as I have previously mentioned, is now in my possession and is one of the most treasured souvenirs of my adventure.

My trunk was sent to Cox & Co. in due course, and now that I was in London I thought I would go and claim it.

When I arrived at the bank I applied to the proper window for my mail and trunk.

"Who are you?" I was asked rather sharply.

"Well, I guess no one has any greater right to Pat O'Brien's effects than I have," I replied, "and I would be obliged to you if you would look them up for me."

"That may be all right, my friend," replied the clerk, "but according to our records Lieutenant O'Brien is a prisoner of war in Germany, and we can't very well turn over his effects to anyone else unless either you present proof that he is dead and that you are his lawful representative, or else deliver to us a properly authenticated order from him to give them to you."

He was very positive about it all, but quite polite, and I thought I would kid him no more.

"Well," I said, "I can't very well present proofs to you that Pat O'Brien is dead, but I will do the best I can to prove to you that he is alive, and if you haven't quite forgotten his signature I guess I can write you out an order that will answer all your requirements and enable you to give me Pat O'Brien's belongings without running any risks," and I scribbled my signature on a scrap of paper and handed it to him.

He looked at me carefully through the latticed window, then jumped down from the high chair and came outside to clasp me by the hand.

"Good heavens, lieutenant!" he exclaimed, as he pumped my hand up and down, "how did you ever get away?" and I had to sit right down and tell him and half a dozen other people in the bank all about my experiences.

I had been in England about five days when I received a telegram which, at first, occasioned me almost as much concern as the unexpected sight of a German spiked helmet had caused me in Belgium. It read as follows:

"Lieut. P. A. O'Brien, Royal Flying Corps, Regent's Palace Hotel, London: The king is very glad to hear of your escape from Germany. If you are to be in London on Friday next, December 7th, His majesty will re-

READY FOR A CHARGE

"CROMER."

Of course, there was only one thing to do and that was to obey orders. I was an officer in the army and the king was my commander in chief, I had to go, and so I sat down and sent off the following answer:

"Earl Cromer, Buckingham Palace, London: "I will attend Buckingham Palace as directed, Friday, December 7th, at 10:30.

"LIEUT. PAT O'BRIEN." In the interval that elapsed, I must confess, the ordeal of calling on the king of England loomed up more dreadfully every day, and I really believed I would rather have spent another day in the empty house in the big city in Belgium or, say, two more days at Courtrai, than to go through what I believed to be in store for me.

Orders were orders, however, and there was no way of getting out of it. As it turned out, it wasn't half as bad as I had feared—on the contrary, it was one of the most agreeable experiences of my life.

FEEDING YOU

The average city man has probably never realized that getting his feed to him on time is one of the most troublesome things with which the country has to deal.

In ordinary times it was not so important that the city man have such a realization, but now, in war time, it is an important part of "Our Part in Feeding the Nation."

This subjoined statement from one of the experts of the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, will serve at least as an introduction to one phase of the problem.

Simplicity Itself in a Party Frock

The pretty frock above is so simple and so expressive, that youth could not find anything better suited to herself. It is a simple frock, with a high collar, long sleeves, and a simple skirt. The fabric is light-colored and has a subtle pattern. The overall look is elegant and understated.

Aside from this almost lilylike decoration, the frock is allowed two frivolous touches. One of them is a bit of net drapery at one side, and the other is a tiny bouquet suspended by baby ribbon from the bodice. Of course they have no excuse for being—except that eyes were made for seeing.

Any of the sheer cotton dress goods, as voile or organdy, might be used to make the skirt, and worn over a petticoat of plain tulle, for a frock of this kind. But it is best to be a perfect copyist of a model of such excellence, than to risk experimenting.
