Brutality alleged

NAACP objects to Sanford's code team

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A special task force began operations in Sanford Monday to seek out city code violations. At their first stop, an altercation was reported between a man at the location, Robert Morris, 51, and the four persons in the task force.

Wednesday, Turner Clayton, Jr., of the Seminole County Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, submitted a letter to Sanford City Manager Bill Simmons regarding the situation.

Clayton wrote, "This letter is to inform you that we have received several complaints of alleged brutality in regard to the incident which occurred on Monday, October 3 at 1000 W. 16th Street in the community of Goldsboro."

He continued, "A preliminary investigation into this incident tends to support the alleged charge of brutality as well as an additional charge of violation of constitutional rights."

"It is apparent," Clayton wrote, "that your task force violated the city's code enforcement procedures. At this point, we are asking for a full scale investigation into this incident and a full report of the findings."

The team consisted of Sanford Fire Inspector Terri Murray, police officer Tim Welter and Building Inspector Dan Florian. The city's Public Utilities Director Jerry Herman was also with the three. Herman had explained that there were some items on the property which he expected the city would be required to dispose of, and he was with the group to determine how many items and what might be used in equipment if necessary.

Clayton concluded his letter to Simmons by saying, "We are prepared to take any and all actions necessary to get amicable results. It is imperative that you respond as to your intention within the next five days."

According to police reports on the incident, Morris threatened the group saying he would "fill them full of lead if they returned."

After the incident, the arrest report said that officer Welter and fire inspector Murray were taken to Central Florida Regional Hospital. Welter for treatment of a possible broken right hand and Murray for injuries sustained to her throat when Morris reportedly attempted to choke her.

Simmons said this morning that activities of the code team have been temporarily suspended. "The next thing I plan to do," he said, "is to meet with a group of representatives of the various factions in the Goldsboro area, and find out what they want us to do."

Multi-track schools on right track

By VICKI BOGARDEN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The face of the modified school calendar is ever-changing.

The Seminole County school district has made a long-term commitment to year round education, but the program is not a stagnant one.

The most changeable aspect of the calendar is the number of tracks at a particular school.

"We evaluate each school every year," said Nancy McNamara, who oversees the year round program for the school district. "We look at the enrollment figures and decide if they need to be single-track or multi-track."

McNamara said schools will move from one type to another as need be, but there are no plans to do away with multi-tracking, though it has caused some consternation over the matter.

"Parents, teachers and the community are still getting used to the idea of year round education in general and the multi-track system specifically," McNamara said. "There are bound to be some people who are less than happy with any thing that is new."

Rep. Couch downplays filed complaint

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Rep. Marvin Couch downplayed an ethics complaint filed against him by his opponent's campaign manager as pure politics and nothing more.

"There's nothing to it," said Couch, R-Oviedo. "There's nothing there."

Couch admitted he may have made errors on his financial disclosure forms, but said he would file a corrected form.

Keith Morrison, campaign manager to Couch's Democratic challenger Louie Ray, said the complaint was not politics.

"The only thing political about it is we don't think he should be in politics," said Morrison.

Morrison said he filed the complaint with the state Commission on Ethics on learning of the filing errors from information gathered by Ray campaigners. Morrison said he decided to personally file the complaint because Ray was too busy to be involved with it.

In the complaint, Morrison alleges Couch failed to report two judgements against him under the financial disclosure section requiring all debts greater than $1,000 to be reported. The amounts owed on judgements in favor of Color Wheel Paint Manufacturing Inc. and Orange County.

Couch's most recent financial disclosure form, filed in June with the Department of State, reports assets of $213,500 and debts of $170,000. There is no mention of debts to Color Wheel or Orange County in the form.

Morrison alleged Couch broke state financial disclosure requirements when he failed to disclose a $7,980 judgement against him by Orange County. The judgement, upheld by the 5th District Court of Appeals in Daytona Beach, stemmed from an ethics complaint filed by Couch against Orange County Chairman Linda Chapin in 1991.

Mall police station questioned

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The question has come up over whether or not Sanford police should have a substation located at the site of the Seminole Towne Center Mall. The matter is to be discussed during Monday night's city commission work session.

According to Thomas Schneider, vice president of the Simon Property Group, developer of the mall, both Police Chief Ralph Russell and Mayor Bettye Smith have expressed an interest in obtaining space at the mall site for the purpose of operating a Sanford Police/Community Relations substation.

Schneider said both of them had indicated a desire to locate the substation in an area clearly visible to the public and large enough to accommodate a small staff performing various community relations activities such as crime prevention training, drug awareness education and community policing contacts.

He has submitted plans to the commission, outlining costs of construction and rental values over 10 years which he estimated at $235,000.

While Simon and Associates is proposing to provide the space at no cost to the city, they are requesting an impact fee credit for the capital outlay for the space.

In his proposal, Schneider wrote, "We believe the use of impact fees for this purpose falls within the scope of authorized use of these funds for capital developments."

Schneider had estimated that with the city collecting 22 cents per square foot in impact fees to be used for police related capital improvements, the total income anticipated to be collected by Sanford from the Mall impact fees would be in excess of $250,000.

Chief Russell has reviewed the suggestions, and agreed that having a space within the mall could be an asset to the city as well as the police department.

Russell, however, is also considering the future. In his response to Schneider's letter, Russell said he sees this as a no-lose situation for Simon Property Group. He added however, "Realizing our current building capacity and the projected growth for the upcoming years, it is imperative that we have funds available to either expand our present building or consider the construction of a new building."

He continued, "Therefore, I cannot agree with waiving police impact fees."

The proposal is scheduled for discussion during Monday afternoon's work session of the city commission, scheduled to begin at 5 p.m., in the City Manager's conference room at Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Ave.

Chandler prosecutors ask for death

CLEARWATER — A man convicted of killing three Ohio women he lured to a sunset cruise spoke little as prosecutors called for his death in the electric chair.

Oba Chandler, who is to be sentenced Nov. 4, politely declined when Circuit Judge Susan Schaeffer asked him if he had anything to say.

A jury last week recommended death for Chandler in the 1989 slayings of Joan Rogers, 38, and daughters Michelle, 17, and Christie, 14, who were on vacation from their Wilshire, Ohio, dairy farm.

Chandler, 47, lured the women onto his boat for a sunset cruise and their bodies surfaced in Tampa Bay three days later. They had been weighted with concrete blocks, hands and feet bound with rope and mouths covered with duct tape. Prosecutors said they had been raped before their deaths.

Defense Attorney Fred Zimober argued the facts aren't sufficient to show the slayings were heinous, atrocious and cruel, the legal standard that must be met for the death penalty.

Schaeffer is not bound by the jury's recommendation when she sentences Chandler on three counts of first-degree murder. She can opt for either death or life in prison without possibility of parole for 25 years.

Business summit to be held

MIAMI — A museum mansion that has hosted President Reagan, Pope John Paul II and Queen Elizabeth II will be the setting of business sessions for 34 heads of state invited to the Summit of the Americas.

President Clinton is hosting the three-day summit Dec. 9-11 to discuss economic growth, health, democracy and human rights with the leaders of the Western hemisphere.

Thomas F. "Mac" McLarty III, former White House chief of staff and now senior counselor to the president, is coordinating summit arrangements.

"This isn't just another meeting, it's another era," McLarty said Wednesday in announcing the meeting sites. "The summit is coming at a time of real hope for the hemisphere."

A reception and dinner for the democratically elected heads of state will open the summit at the Biltmore Hotel in suburban Coral Gables.

The working sessions the following day will be at Viscaya, a palatial bayfront mansion built by International Harvester magnate John Deering.

Clinton will address a final session at Miami's Knight Center.

First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, Vice President Al Gore and his wife, Tipper, also will be in Miami for the summit, the first such meeting in 27 years and only the third this century.

Loni withdraws charges against Burt

STUART — Actress Loni Anderson has withdrawn all legal complaints against her ex-husband Burt Reynolds but their highly publicized fight stemming from their breakup is not over.

Thursday, Anderson withdrew the complaints that accused film star Reynolds of owing her $11,000 of alimony, and $37,000 worth of furniture and artwork.

Anderson's attorneys said the complaints were withdrawn because a California judge has agreed to resolve all the issues between the two.

Reynolds' attorney disagreed, saying a California judgment would be out of jurisdiction — a question that remained undecided Wednesday.

Both sides agreed that the child support and child custody issues remain in California, but whether the matter will come bouncing back to Martin County remained up in the air.

Reynolds' attorneys also said Thursday that the actor would not pursue contempt allegations he filed in Martin County against Anderson because she has agreed to return a piano.

Man pleads guilty to fraud charges

MIAMI — A Costa Rican national has pleaded guilty to defrauding two churches by promising pastors multi-million dollar grants if they paid $125,000 in fees, federal officials said.

Antonio Arguedas, 38, admitted Wednesday to 20 counts of conspiring to commit mail fraud, wire fraud and interstate transportation of property obtained by fraud, the U.S. Attorney's office said.

He will be sentenced Dec. 16. The maximum penalties would be 225 years in jail and $6.25 million in fines.

Officials say between January 1982 through May 1984, Arguedas and four other people defrauded Iglesia Betanica and Iglesia Cristiana by posing as representatives of a program allegedly sponsored by the U.S. Department of State.

The defendants convinced pastors and congregations that the "Pro Religion Development Fund" would provide millions of dollars to help churches achieve various charitable goals, such as building youth centers and drug rehabilitation centers.

In order to qualify for the grants, however, the pastors were told they had to pay certain advance, legal and closing fees.

Scientists vs. colds

Bug still winning, but experts keep plugging

By DANIEL S. RABBY
AP Science Writer

ORLANDO — No, there's still no cure for the common cold. But scientists believe they are closing in on the next best thing: treatments that stop the sniffles, the cough and the sore throat.

Colds are caused by 100 or so varieties of the rhinovirus. However, the infection is just the start. Most of the nasty symptoms result not from the bug itself, but from the body's overzealous attempts to kill it.

And that's the focus of cold research these days — finding treatments that tame the body, not just the virus.

At a conference Thursday on infectious disease, researchers said they have identified one of the first steps in the body's response to a cold infection. It is an arcane substance called interferin B.

Actually, the body churns out an arsenal of secretions all intended to prod the immune system to wipe out the rhinovirus. Some of these substances trigger the production of others, which in turn lead to Trental.

This medicine is already on the market to relieve peripheral vascular disease, a narrowing of the small blood vessels. In this disorder, the drug works by making red blood cells more elastic so they will squeeze through clogged arteries.

Through different mechanisms, it also appears to inhibit the body's production of IL-8. No one has tried it yet on people with colds. But Turner said he hopes to test a nasal spray form of the medicine.

However, Dr. Jack Gwaltney, a cold expert at the University of Virginia, said no single drug is likely to make a cold go away.

"To be effective, a treatment has to stop the virus and block the immune system pathways simultaneously," he said, "and that's what we ought to be working toward."

In a separate study on 184 volunteers, he showed that one old standby — antihistamines — actually does relieve some cold symptoms.

This domino effect that makes people feel rotten has to start somewhere. And scientists say that interferin B, or IL-8, appears to be the earliest substance found so far.

Dr. Ronald Turner, a pediatrician at the Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston who discovered IL-8's effect, described his findings at a meeting of the American Society of Microbiology.

In testing on volunteers with colds, he found that the body's levels of the stuff rise sharply after the infection sets in. IL-8 recruits a variety of white blood cells that congregate in the lining of the nose.

However, when people get infected but have no cold symptoms, there is no rise in IL-8 levels.

Turner believes IL-8 actually does nothing to stop the rhinovirus. So blocking it may turn out to be a good way to short-circuit a cold. The next step will be finding a medicine that does this, and Turner already has a candidate, a prescription drug called

Three involved in collision

A three car collision at a busy intersection in Sanford, sent one person to Central Florida Regional Hospital. The accident occurred on French Avenue at 13th Street shortly after noon Thursday. Sanford police said the vehicles involved were a 1975 Jeep, driven by Renee M. Priest, 41, of Sanford, a 1982 Nissan driven by Cashunda R. Bacon, 21 of Sanford, and a 1987 Chevrolet driven by Tiffany D. Tubbs, 21, also of Sanford. Priest was charged with failing to yield right-of-way to a vehicle entering an intersection. Cashunda Bacon reportedly was injured in the collision and was transported to the hospital for treatment.

Sting nets 2 pleas, $16,000 for CCIB

SANFORD — Two Georgia brothers were placed on five years probation and ordered to pay court costs after they pleaded guilty Wednesday to attempted trafficking by purchase (cocaine) during their jury trial.

Ben Jack McCranie, 53, and James William McCranie, 42, Easton, Georgia were on trial for trafficking cocaine. After legal arguments, Judge Alan A. Dickey reduced the charge and the men entered an open plea to the court.

The original charge was a first degree felony, the reduced charge is a second degree felony. If the men comply with their probation, which will be supervised in Georgia, the probation will be terminated after two years.

The two were arrested by City County Investigative Bureau agents August 16, 1983 in two separate locations during a drug deal.

A CCIB undercover agent met the pair the night before they arrived at a restaurant near Interstate 4 and State Road 436. The two men, according to the police report, expressed a desire to purchase a kilo of cocaine for $21,000. The younger man accompanied the agent to the parking lot where he was shown a kilo of cocaine, tested it and agreed to pay for the drug at a hotel room, the police report stated. The two out-of-state men were registered at separate hotels, one under a fictitious name.

The agent went to the older man's hotel room where Ben Jack showed him $21,000 cash. The suspect was arrested but was taken to a nearby hospital when he complained of chest pains. He told police he had heart problems.

The younger McCranie was arrested by CCIB agents as he waited at a restaurant.

The two were arrested by City County sheriff, $16,000 of the money was confiscated and distributed to law enforcement agencies which participate in CCIB while $5,000 was returned to the suspects to pay attorney's fees.

Suspect claims he's innocent in interview

By The Associated Press

PANAMA CITY — A Homestead man accused of fatally shooting four men at a topless club says he isn't shedding any tears worrying about his fate.

"If they can put somebody who is not guilty in the electric chair, it's time for me to go to a better world," Javier Ramos told a Panama City newspaper in a jailhouse interview Wednesday.

He did cry, however, when he talked about not being around for his two children. He said he is separated from this wife but has a pregnant girlfriend.

"I don't normally cry," Ramos said. "You won't see me cry again. When they say, 'Look at his face, he's coldblooded,' you remember it's not that. It's just that I don't cry."

On the advice of his lawyer, Ramos, 28, declined to say exactly what happened, or even if he was at the Show N Tail club at nearby Panama City Beach when the shootings took place Monday.

"It scares me," he admitted, but added: "If everybody does their job, the stuff at the crime scene should clear me."

Ramos, who worked at another club under the same ownership, and Joseph Virgil Clark, 21, of Lynn Haven, a Panama City suburb, each have been charged with four counts of murder.

The strip club was closed and no customers were present at the time. The victims were a manager and three employees.

Police say there had been bad blood between Ramos, arrested Monday night in Miami, and one of the victims, Chris McConnell, a manager and part owner of Show N Tail.

McConnell was the suspects' target and the other victims died because they were in the wrong place at the wrong time, investigators said.

Ramos insisted the blood was "not that bad" between him and McConnell.

"Let's put it this way: He said I could have my job back and he told me 'good luck,'" Ramos told

The News Herald.

Ramos said he came to Panama City last year from Homestead after losing everything to Hurricane Andrew.

He said he found work as a doorman and then a manager at the Toy Box, another club owned by McConnell and a partner, but recently left to take a new job in the Miami area. He said he returned Sunday night to the Florida Panhandle to return two dancers who had temporarily worked at a Miami club.

Although claiming innocence, Ramos said he expects to wind up in prison "because there's four people dead, and it's a media monster and the public wants something done."

Bizarre murder case

Sexton found guilty of first-degree murder

By JAMES BARTHELEME
Associated Press Writer

TAMPA — Eddie Lee Sexton Sr. hung his head and betrayed no emotion while his guilty verdict was being read.

Thursday, he was found guilty of first-degree murder in the death of his son-in-law Joel Good. Sexton Sr., 52, ordered his son, Willie, to kill Good, the 12-member jury concluded.

Jurors were to return today to recommend life in prison without chance for parole for 25 years, or death for Sexton Sr. Prosecutors say he used incest and abuse to retain iron-fisted control over three generations of his family.

Across the courtroom, Good's relatives wept in one another's arms.

"They are tears of relief," said Teresa Boron, Good's aunt, her cheeks glistening wet. "Joey is going to be avenged."

Authorities say Good was killed around Thanksgiving last year because he threatened to return to Ohio and report the death of his infant son, Skipper.

Good's wife, Estelle Sexton-Good, had smothered the child after her father told her to silence the crying baby. She has pleaded guilty to manslaughter. Both bodies were unearthed in January from shallow graves at Tampa-area state parks.

Sexton Sr. and his wife were fugitives from sex abuse charges in Canton, Ohio, at the time. Prosecutors portrayed him as a paranoid man who would stop at nothing to keep from being caught.

But defense attorneys argued the slaying of Good actually came at the command of his wife, "Pixie" Good, as a way to end their tumultuous marriage.

"Pixie" Good denied the accusation and testified it was her father who ordered the slaying and even told her to buy a shovel to help bury her husband. She noted on the stand how her father had been sexually abusing her since she was 17 and was the father of two of her young daughters.

Another of the Eddie Lee Sexton's daughters, Sherri Sexton, testified in her father's defense that "Pixie" Good told her she cut her husband's wrists and was glad her husband was dead.

Sherri Sexton admitted she had an incestuous affair with her father and a young son by him. She said her siblings routinely had sex with each other and that Willie Sexton and "Pixie" Good had sex with each other many times.

Willie Sexton, 23, also was charged in Good's death but last week was ruled incompetent to stand trial. "Pixie" Good, 24, was never charged in her husband's death.

After the verdict, a teary-eyed Sherri Sexton stood outside the courthouse still pleading her father's innocence and suggesting Pixie and Willie were the real killers.

"It was my brother and sister," she said. "They was in love with each other."

Drug charges

A Sanford couple were arrested on drug charges at a shed at the corner of 15th Street and Lincoln Court Wednesday. Agents with the Sanford Special Investigations Unit reported they received a complaint of drug sales at the location and when they arrived shortly before 6 p.m., they found a man and a woman playing cards. In the woman's hip bag, agents report finding a razor blade with cocaine residue.

Man admits murder

By Associated Press

TITUSVILLE — A man who shook an infant so hard that she suffered multiple fractures and died has pleaded guilty to second-degree murder.

Joseph Franciosi was sentenced to 25 years in prison Thursday.

In December, Franciosi, then 25, shook 3-month-old Tatiana so hard that she suffered fractures in one arm, her collarbones and legs, several ribs and one wrist. She died later of Shaken-Baby Syndrome.

Police charged Franciosi with first-degree murder, but he decided to plead guilty to the lesser charge to avoid a possible death sentence if convicted.

Lori Chorny, the infant's mother, expressed relief and satisfaction at the outcome.

"I'm glad this is over and we don't have to do this anymore and I don't have to see him anymore," Chorny said.

Franciosi considered pleading not guilty by reason of insanity earlier Thursday, but decided to admit his guilt when Circuit Judge Dean Moxley told him he could be put to death if convicted.

The judge also ordered 15 years of probation after the prison term, during which Franciosi will be barred from mingling with anyone younger than 16. That could be waived if Franciosi takes a parenting course.

"Ever since this happened, he's been searching in his mind for why it happened," said Brian Onek, one of Franciosi's attorneys. "He knows something is wrong. He wants to get help for it. He's confused."

Thrill a minute minute on lake

Barring any weather problem, it is expected to produce a thrill a minute. The American Performance Racing boats will be back in Lake Monroe along the shore of Sanford once again this weekend.

One of the best parts for this event is the fact that there is no charge. Viewing can be done from the rear area of the Monroe Harbour Marina, or along with lakefront in the area around the marina.

Sam Winer first brought the championship series races to Sanford last year. He said he had studied a number of areas throughout the southeastern states, and found nothing to compare with the offerings of Sanford.

Naturally, we know he made the right decision.

This will be the final event of this year's racing, which means the boat owners and drivers will be going all-out to obtain points. The championship is based on the total number of points received as the result of several races.

Another good feature of this weekend's boat racing event is that Winer did not seek financial support from the city or county. While this is naturally a profit making event, it is strictly self-contained.

It stands as proof that, if the proper people can be contacted and made aware of the potential we have in this area, we can certainly have more entertainment and sporting events of this type.

We wish the racers the best of luck as they practically fly over the top of the water. We also urge people to be on hand for this spectacular event. These are some of the fastest racing boats in the world, and they will be right here in Sanford. What a good opportunity we have.

LETTER

Religion in prison

In response to recent concerns that have been raised about religious freedom in Florida's prisons, it is important to remember that freedom of religion is a sacred and fundamental principle that all humans desire.

The Founding Fathers of America understood the principle of free will.

James Madison wrote that, "Whilst we assert for ourselves a freedom of embrace, to profess and to observe the religion which we believe to be divine origin, we cannot deny an equal freedom to those whose minds have not yielded to the evidence that has convinced us."

Based on this premise, the author of the First Amendment of the Constitution wrote: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

Correctional institutions mirror society in the variety of religious groups that are active in the prison system. In keeping with religious liberty, the chapel, or any area designated for group prayer and worship, is neutral in design. This neutrality allows any religious group to feel comfortable and not be affronted by symbols of other faith groups. However, a few chapels were constructed prior to the proto-type model presently used. These few may have some symbols in the stained glass or etched in some permanent manner. In those cases the symbols are covered where feasible. While no symbols are permitted in the chapels, all inmates may wear their own symbols, for example: Star of David, Kooft Cape, Yarmulkes, and Crosses.

In addition, one of the most important pieces of legislation concerning religion, the Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993, was enacted by Congress on Nov. 18, 1993, and signed into law by the president. This act seeks to protect the First Amendment rights of all persons to freely practice their religion.

The main point of this law is the requirement that the least restrictive method of burdening First Amendment rights be determined. The Department attempts to do this in keeping with security and good order of the institution.

Seeing speech in black and white

Depending on the ethnicity (and wit) of the interlocuter, "nigger" jokes can be riotously funny - or abysmally offensive.

One of my all-time favorites (which I published in a column several years ago) praises the historical invincibility of Africans.

During the Roman persecution of Christians, an enormous African became their savior, destroying the lions with his bare hands.

An enraged emperor ordered the African buried up to his neck in the middle of the coliseum and the biggest lion unleashed.

As the lion came thundering across the coliseum floor, ready to bite the African's head off, the African swiftly lowered his head. The lion missed, but the momentum carried the lion past the African, who then raised his head and bit off the lion's most sacred vulnerability.

As the lion collapsed to the coliseum floor, roaring in pain, the crowd rose up as one and yelled, "Fight FAIR, nigger!"

I told the joke to my predominantly white class in censorship and asked whether a white professor could tell it. Most of them who had laughed shook their heads no. Epidermal distinctions between pedagogues don't extend to ethnic humor.

Much to his chagrin, Professor Gerald Gee, a white ordained minister who teaches public relations, discovered that truth. After 17 years of teaching at black Florida A&M University, he STILL has not been accepted to the sanctum sanctorum of Afrocentricity.

Because he's white, Gee has been fighting for his job since last September.

During a lecture, he had chided his black class in public relations about their failure to take advantage of opportunities.

Warning them that a pejorative was coming, he said such persons "may be guilty of having a nigger mentality - the kind that can keep US all on the back of the bus."

The pronoun is the operative word. Stunned students contend he said, "you." But Gee insists he said "us."

White professors at other universities and a white member of the Florida board of regents have defended Gee's use of the word as "helpful for learning purposes." Pain-inflicting Pavlov would agree.

Florida A&M's administration, several black faculty members and many students insist he should resign. But a group of more than 80 black students is petitioning for Gee to remain.

There are, of course, limits to freedom of speech. Nobody can cry "fire" in a crowded theater, or utter "fighting words" - "those which by their very utterance inflict injury."

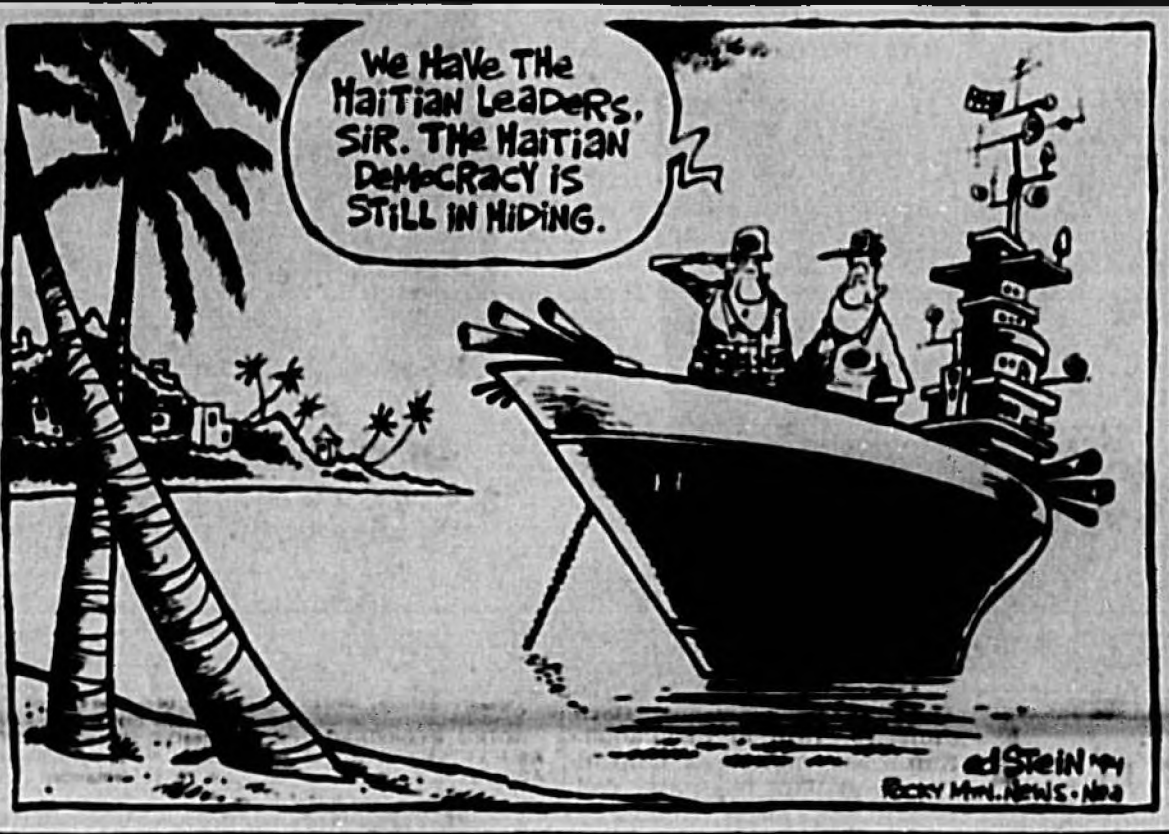

"Nigger," uttered by a white man, even on a black college campus, is a fighting word that can inflict injury.

It is difficult to support that tragically myopic conclusion through empirical evidence. Skin color does not automatically confer scholarship on blacks or whites.

That's why I asked my class on censorship how many thought a white professor should be asked to resign for using the racially pejorative "nigger" during a lecture - especially, when it is commonly used by rap groups, black people and is even the name of a rap group.

Epidermal distinctions between pedagogues don't extend to ethnic humor.

Job Corps program gets failing grade

If the Job Corps program was graded on the same scale as its graduates, it would be out of business.

The billion-dollar government jobs program wastes $100 million per year while only placing 12 percent of its participants in the jobs they were trained for, according to auditors at the Department of Labor who are slated to testify before the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources this week.

Auditors claim an average of one-third of Job Corps' 80,000 yearly participants drop out in the first three months. According to an ongoing internal study, auditors said half of all participants drop out within six months.

These discouraging figures haven't deterred the Clinton administration from trying to pump even more money into the program. While other programs are facing the budget ax, Clinton asked for a $117 million boost for the Job Corps next year as part of a 10-year plan to raise its budget by $600 million. Congress scaled back from Clinton's request, but still found an additional $100 million for the Job Corps in the Labor Department appropriations bill, which will be signed by Clinton this week.

"If the public knew what they were really getting (from the Job Corps) for their money, they would be appalled," says Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., and ranking member of the Senate Labor Committee. "The program is grossly overrated and needs to be held far higher standards of performance and cost-effectiveness."

At approximately $23,000 per enrollee, the Job Corps places just 58 percent of its participants in a job or further education. Most of the graduates end up in jobs that have little to do with their training - or they are passed on to another job-training program.

"It just doesn't make any sense to me either as an auditor or as a taxpayer to expand something when you've got $100 million acknowledged that's being wasted," says Gerald Peterson, the former assistant inspector general for audit who led the current investigation into the Job Corps program. "At the very point in time when they should have been intensifying the management effort on the problem, they're taking away from that intensity to expand."

Labor Department officials are unfazed by the program's poor track record. "This is the most effective tool we have in the United States, the most effective resource or strategy for helping young people who otherwise appear to be on a path to nowhere, to crime, to poverty, to despair," Assistant Labor Secretary Doug Ross told our associate Andrew Conte. Ross is expected to testify at this week's hearing.

While the Clinton administration seeks to add new centers, Job Corps directors say there is a pressing need for $400 million in repairs to the existing ones. But Ross told us he would rather add new people to the program than make minor repairs to the current facilities.

"As badly as I feel for the taxpayer," Peterson told us, "I do feel worse for the kids. Particularly those kids who get (to the Job Corps centers) with high hopes and then find that facilities, or something, is not what they thought it was going to be or what it has been portrayed to be and they end up leaving. That to me is the ultimate loss."

If this is the best jobs program our government has to offer, it speaks volumes about the 183 other jobs programs being run by the federal government. Taxpayers are currently shelling out an estimated $25 billion per year.

These discouraging figures haven't deterred the Clinton administration from trying to pump even more money into the program.

DONNA BRITT

It's really a matter of support

WASHINGTON - Maybe I need to get out more. Or I've been too obsessed with O.J.

Or maybe, being a busy, working mom-as opposed to a woman merely busy "working it" - distracted me. Whatever it was, I almost overlooked a phenomenal fact:

The Wonderbra has taken over the world.

I stopped being the last oblivious woman in America on a recent visit to a local mall. Entering a department store lingerie section, I ran smack into a poster of a wispy young woman with Grand Canyon-esque cleavage. The contraption that had made mountains of her molehills had a hilarious, inevitable name that I vaguely recalled. Then I remembered a magazine story about actress Cameron Diaz, the good-bad girl in "The Mask." In the photo, the bikini-clad, who was flat-out voluptuous in "Mask," was just flat, as in week-old Pepsi.

Wearing a Wonderbra during filming, she confessed, had lent her the curves.

By the time I left the department store I'd forgotten again. Then as I passed a lingerie store window I saw a photo of another model with Rocky Mountain marmarles. Her secret: the "Miracle Bra." Sounded suspiciously like you-know-what.

Moving on, I was perusing a bookstore magazine section when a cover title caught my eye: "What Do Your Breasts Look Like When You Take the Wonderbra Off?"

Finally, I was standing in line at the supermarket, half listening to a couple of female checkout clerks gossiping.

"What you need is a vacation," said one.

"What I need is a Wonderbra," said the other.

Marching back to the department store, I interrogated the first lingerie saleswoman I could find.

"We're on our third shipment," she began. The store said that on the day it introduced the Wonderbra, one was sold every 20 seconds.

"Me, I own three," the saleswoman continued. "I tried one on and said, 'Wow!'"

Some women are unimpressed. The clerk at the supermarket who'd joked about it said, "It just gives you cleavage-I could draw that on with a pencil," she shrugged.

"What's the big deal? Push-up bras have been around forever."

I was pondering just that when my phone rang. On the line - I really am not making this up - was Roxanne, a writer pal who, asked her opinion on the subject, exclaimed:

"I have a Wonderbra, a Super Uplift and a Miracle Bra!" Unbeknownst to me, she recently had written about "cleavage enhancement" bras, whose construction "takes everything that normally is at the bottom of a bra and shoves it up." For journalism's sake, she had "test-driven" several models.

The Wonderbra, she said, sold quietly in England for years before being introduced in the United States this spring. Its spectacular sales among all age groups spawned many copies and has been attributed to: a power trip ("real" women love big breasts and are rebelling against wifedom); fashion whim (gals will buy anything new); regression (women are still slaves to body hatred and men's objectification); and aging (girls who once reveled in bralessness are now women with breasts inching toward their navels.)

The bras "sort of treat breasts as an accessory - a woman can be discreet or do cleavage," Roxanne said. Explained one woman: "Friday, I went to a dinner party and wore a suit with a low-cut top and a push-up bra. I felt like I was showing off, which was a bit embarrassing ... but I also felt, 'I'm professional and I'm sexy.' Like I can do both, and I'm old enough to handle both."

Naturally, the big question is: "Who are women buying this for?"

No one I spoke to admitted buying a Wonderbra solely for men - though each seemed pleased or amused by her mate's positive reaction. My bet is that it goes deeper.

One of my longest-held theories is that adults are children in stretched-out bodies, responding most viscerally to things that have their roots in childhood - how else to explain Van Damme, "Baseball" and demolition derbies? Could the current bra mania be about "dress up," as in tots parading around in moms' high heels, or women clomping around, as millions are this minute, in work boots.

To answer, I bought a Wonderbra. And I realized the supermarket clerk was right. Many women do own no-name bras that have a similar, though less pronounced effect. Looking suddenly like Pam Grier - or Loni Anderson if you're not hip - reminded me of my feelings when I was pregnant. Like I'd borrowed someone else's amazing body and appreciated its special purpose.

Both times, I was glad to get my own back.

The contraption that had made mountains of or molehills had a hilarious, inevitable name that I vaguely recalled.

families to be sure siblings are all on the same track and that the track is one which is most conducive to the family's personal needs.

"We do what we can," she said. "But we are not going to do away with the multi-track system."

The school district first made a commitment to the multi-track system as a way of saving the expense of building new schools in order to accommodate the expanding population in the county.

Several years ago, it was determined that by the 1995-97 school year, six to eight new elementary schools would need to be built in the county in order to house all the new students who would be here.

McNamara said that by multi-tracking the students in key population areas, the district was able to accommodate about 25 percent more students than if they had remained on the traditional calendar.

As a result, there will be only two new schools needed in the same timeframe. A school will be built in Winter Springs and another in Oviedo by the start of the 1996-97 school year.

McNamara said the school district will continue to work with families and with the community to make the multi-track year round calendar a more appealing one.

"But, certainly, we are sticking by this," she said. "This is a program that is more educationally sound and is saving us money."

Kidder Peabody lays off 550

By DAVID E. KALAN
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Financially troubled Kidder Peabody Group Inc. laid off about 10 percent of its workforce Thursday as part of a restructuring plan to save money.

Kidder, once one of the most venerable brokerage firms on Wall Street, is struggling against sharp losses amid a bond-trading scandal, rising interest rates that have hurt the firm's mortgage-bond business, and departures of top management.

The 550 layoffs are part of a plan for the company to save more than $100 million.

"A cost base built for the markets of the early '90s doesn't work in today's difficult environment," said Denis Nayden, Kidder's president and chief operating officer.

Analysts said the restructuring could improve chances that General Electric Co., which owns Kidder, will be able to sell the money-losing brokerage firm. Kidder executives denied that the firm is for sale.

As Kidder cuts back, it aims to boost potential revenues in investment banking.

The younger man testified he helped his father remove a roll of carpet containing the body from his sister's condominium the day after the stabbing. Wil Roger testified at his daughter's trial he took the body, burnt it to ashes on a family-owned vacant lot, then mixed the small bone fragments and ashes with concrete forming blocks. Sometime later, the two men dumped the blocks in the Atlantic Ocean off New Smyrna Beach.

When questioned by police and prosecutors about Richmond's disappearance, the Roger clan alleged the last time they saw the aspiring rock singer, he was headed to South Florida to do lawn service work in the wake of Hurricane Andrew. During a press conference just before the start of Michele's trial, the family members admitted Richmond was dead and told what happened to the body.

Wilfred and Kenneth Roger are both charged with perjury, tampering with evidence and failure to report a death. Michele's mother, Agnes, 65, is also charged with failure to report a death. She has also entered a written not guilty plea to the misdemeanor charge.

Aging rockers really feeling their age

Older stars feeling the aches and pains of life in the fast lane

By JEFF WILSON
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — Life in the fast lane is finally catching up to rock music's dinosaurs, those aging '60s and '70s performers cashing in on nostalgia tours and the devotion of gray-haired, potbellied fans.

These days, it's rock me gently.

Medical problems have recently sidelined such venerable performers as David Crosby of Crosby, Stills and Nash; Glenn Frey of the Eagles; Jerry Garcia of the Grateful Dead; and John Mellencamp.

The culprits: geeser aches and pains, the rigors of the road and, in many cases, the cumulative effect of drug and alcohol abuse.

"In their 20s these guys thought they were immortal," Grateful Dead spokesman Dennis McNally said from a backstage telephone in Philadelphia.

The facts are an entire generation of rockers are pushing 50 and if you aren't living a healthy lifestyle, you'll pay the price," McNally said.

Some of the illnesses are simple bugs. The Who's 50-year-old Roger Daltrey — who once hoped he'd die before he grew old — was ordered to take a few days off because of respiratory problems.

Other ailments are more serious. Frey, 46, has suffered for years from diverticulitis, a painful inflammation of the colon. He underwent colon surgery Thursday and was listed in fair condition.

The surgery forced postponement of the Eagles' concert tour and led to a slew of jobs like this revised song list: "Welcome to the HMO California," "Life in the Gas Pains" and "I Get a Disrespectful, Queasy Feeling."

Doctors say the illness that sidelined Frey, a fitness buff and smoker, generally has nothing to do with lifestyle.

That's not the case with some of his colleagues, who face the consequences of living too hard for too long.

Garcia, 53, is a prime example. His long, strange trip took an extended rest stop in 1991 when he fell ill with exhaustion. Since then, he has slimmed down, stopped smoking and hired a personal fitness trainer.

"He pushed it as far as anybody did," McNally said. "It was a meltdown. Too many cigarettes, too much junk food and too little exercise."

The same goes for Mellencamp, who turns 43 today, who was forced to cancel his 1994 tour following a mild heart attack and diagnosis of a clogged artery in his heart.

"The moral of my story is that 80 cigarettes a day and a cholesterol level of 300 is like a loaded gun," Mellencamp said.

Crosby, 53, needs a liver transplant. He has apparently hardened and deteriorated because of decades of drug abuse that included heroin and cocaine addictions.

The Rolling Stones are still going strong after four decades. Their Voodoo Lounge tour, with $103.5 million in receipts, was the highest grossing tour ever.

Military is expanding the opportunities for women

By JOHN STANBRO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — While thousands of Marine Corps positions are now open to both sexes, the corps expects to expand the ranks of female recruits only slowly over the next two decades.

The Marines plan to take two decades to expand the number of women in the corps from 7,713 to 10,493 even though, in theory, 43,000 new positions are open to women.

"Our theoretical potential was leavened with what was believed to be realistically attainable," Lt. Gen. George Christmas told the House Armed Services military personnel subcommittee Thursday.

The Marines are concerned about being able to recruit "quality women" who can meet the demands of the service and about the impact of pregnancies on deployments, Christmas said. In both the Marines and the Army, the services that do most of the fighting on the ground, women are barred from direct ground combat.

"Our direct ground combat units, those that locate, close with and destroy the enemy by fire, maneuver and shock effect remain closed," Christmas said. "We consider this imperative."

Even after 20 years, women will make up only 6 percent of the 174,000-member Marine Corps.

Lt. Gen. Theodore Stroup Jr., Christmas' Army counterpart, said women make up 12.9 percent of the active-duty Army, with 71,351 positions. Under the new policy, women will have access to 67 percent of the Army's duty positions, said Edwin Dorn, undersecretary of defense for personnel and readiness.

While the Clinton administration pushes to open as many military jobs to women as possible, top officers appear more worried about whether the policy is weakening the force.

"You may ask, 'Has the Marine Corps gone too far? Have we reduced combat capability and readiness in order to allow more opportunity for women?'" Christmas said. "It's too soon to tell, but in our best judgment, we believe the answer to both questions is no."

Under rules newly developed by the Clinton administration, women can fly in most combat aircraft, including carrier fighters and Air Force combat fighters. They are excluded from ground combat positions, including armor, infantry, Ranger, special forces and field artillery battalions. The Marine Corps infantry regiments also remain closed.

The Clinton administration has no numerical goals in mind for bringing more women into the military, according to Dorn.

"We do not know what the market will bear," he said.

Members of the subcommittee hold widely divergent views on the issue.

Rep. Stephen Buyer, R-Ind., asked whether America was ready to see "one of our daughters, half-naked, dragged by a group through the streets of some foreign capital."

Reps. Tillie Fowler, R-Fla., and Jane Harman, D-Calif., praised the administration effort to open military positions to women while keeping them from ground combat. Fowler noted the new role of women in combat flying positions.

A plea for added crackdowns on code violations was made last month during a city commission meeting, and the code team was to have been in direct response to the claims.

"What I want to do now," Simmons said, "is to find out what the majority of the people want, so we can act accordingly."

A discussion on how the code team was operating was originally scheduled during the City Manager's report at Monday night's city commission work session, but Simmons said that had been placed on the agenda before this latest development.

of legal expenses. Couch said the county never pursued the debt and in August, his attorney Matthew Sliver closed his files on the matter for lack of activity.

In a statement made through his secretary, Orange County Attorney Tom Wilkes said the judgement is pursued by the state, not the county. Ethics prosecutor Virindia Dosa said she is unaware of any effort to pursue the judgement.

In the second allegation, Morrison stated Couch failed to disclose a $24,954 judgement against Couch Painting Inc. to Color Wheel Paint Manufacturing Inc. Couch said he did not report the debt because it was a corporate liability owed by his former paint contracting business and not him self personally.

Couch said the debt accrued because several of his clients failed to pay him. Couch said he has been paying the debt off personally and still owes $10,000 to $15,000.

Color Wheel Paint contributed $500 to the Couch campaign in August, according to Couch's campaign finance reports.

Magic sign Thompson

ORLANDO — Brooks Thompson, Orlando's 1994 first-round draft pick and the 27th pick overall, has signed with the Magic.

In his senior season at Oklahoma State, Thompson, a 6-foot-4 guard averaged 16.9 points, 5.7 assists and four rebounds a game.

Also Thursday, the Magic announced it has signed free agents Greg Grant and University of Florida alumnus Stacy Poole.

WSBL registration, camp

WINTER SPRINGS — The Winter Springs Basketball League is registering boys and girls in grades 1 through 9 for its 1994-95 season.

Associated again with the Orlando Magic youth program, the WSBL season will go from Dec. 3 through Feb. 12. Games will be played on Saturdays and Sundays at Oviedo High School and Indian Trails, Tuskillville, and Jackson Heights middle schools.

Registration forms are available at the offices of most county elementary and middle schools. League registration also will be conducted at Indian Trails Middle School between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. on Oct. 8, 15, 22, and 29.

The registration fee is $45 for the first child and $35 for each additional child. Add $10 for an official WSBL basketball complete with league logo and colors.

League tryouts will be Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 5 and 6, at Jackson Heights Middle School.

Also, for those elementary and middle school students on the Green Track, the WSBL is offering its second annual October Intersession Basketball School the weeks of Oct. 10-14 and 17-21. Sessions will be 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. daily at both Jackson Heights and Greenwood Lakes middle schools.

The cost is $15 per week or $150 for both weeks. The classes are limited to 60 players.

For more information, call 321-5283.

Court rules on antitrust status

TALLAHASSEE — Idled by a season-ending strike, baseball fans finally got something to cheer about when a Florida court ruled against the game's longstanding antitrust exemption.

In a 5-1 decision written by Justice Major Harding, the court said the exemption applies only to the reserve clause and cannot shield owners from the overall business of the game.

The ruling clears the way for Florida Attorney General Bob Butterworth to investigate whether National League owners conspired in 1992 to keep the San Francisco Giants from moving to St. Petersburg.

It also may enable the players' union to file an antitrust suit against owners in Florida. And it may lead to lawsuits challenging baseball's rules on franchise relocations.

First time for everything

'Hounds bounce back, notch sweep of Rams

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY — It was a perfect time for a first time.

Coming off a tough three-game loss to state-ranked Deltona on Wednesday night, the Lyman Greyhounds came back Thursday to sweep the host Lake Mary Rams 15-3, 15-13 in Seminole Athletic Conference girls' volleyball action.

The decision leaves Lyman (9-4 overall, 4-2 SAC) and Lake Mary (10-7, 4-2) tied for second in the conference behind Oviedo.

"That's the first time we've beaten Lake Mary in my coaching career," said Lyman coach Christy Tibbitts. "It's the first time for my seniors too. That was big, especially after losing to Deltona.

"Against Deltona (ranked seventh in this week's Florida Sports Writers Association's Class 6A state poll) last night, we kind of fell apart. We probably shouldn't have lost. But I think the girls know what they're capable of now. They had Lake Mary off balance all night."

Carolyn Crager led the Greyhound attack with five kills, one block, six digs, and a 12-for-13 serving performance. Laurel Echer added four kills, five blocks, and was 12-for-12 serving the ball. Angel Rhodes contributed four kills and three blocks.

"We didn't play very well," said

Lake Mary coach Cindy Henry. "There was no intensity. And Lyman played a good match. They played good defense and really scrapped it out. You have to give a lot of credit to the Coach Tibbitts and the girls."

Lake Mary won the junior varsity match in three games and the freshman match in two straight.

Both Lyman and Lake Mary play again next Tuesday, the Greyhounds hosting Seminole and the Rams entertaining Oviedo.

PATRIOTS SWEEP TRIBE

SANFORD — In a clash of young teams struggling to make progress in the highly competitive Seminole Athletic Conference, the Lake Brantley Patriots were a little stronger than the Seminole Fighting Seminoles, scoring a 15-9, 15-13 sweep of their girls' varsity volleyball match Thursday.

"We struggled in the first game, but we got some things going in the second game," said Seminole coach Beth Corso. "They were just a little stronger than us and we couldn't pull it out."

"In the first game, our passes were bad, and that didn't allow us to execute anything. In the second game, we got our passes up and we were able to get some things going."

Sophomores Maria Alford and Aubrey Nelson led the Tribe, Alford collecting six kills, five other good spikes, and five blocks while Nelson registered five kills, four other good spikes, and four blocks. Vilaphone Ratanavong had 16 good digs.

Both teams will be back in action this evening, Lake Brantley playing at Deltona and Seminole (1-10 overall, 0-6 SAC) travels to Maitland to play in the Orangewood Christian Invitational. The Tribe is scheduled to play St. Petersburg-Keswick Christian at 4 p.m. today.

'Boring' Rams roll by Lyman

From Staff Reports

LONGWOOD — No disrespect intended, but the Lake Mary High School boys' volleyball season is taking on a repetitive tone that would be boring if it weren't so impressive.

On Thursday, the Rams swept the Lyman Greyhounds 15-5, 16-14 to run their record to 15-0 (6-0 in the Seminole Athletic Conference).

Lake Mary's junior varsity squad also swept its match with Lyman to raise its record to 11-2.

"We're looking for ways to stay motivated," admitted Lake Mary coach Bill Whalen.

Whalen involved his entire roster in the win over Lyman, playing the starters in the first game and going to the bench in the second game.

Erik Larsen led the Rams with eight kills. Darrell Dilmore added five kills and two blocks. Jeff Phillips had three kills and two blocks while Will Lipacomb had three kills and 15 assists.

Dan Parsons and Howard Stanton each chipped in with two kills and two blocks. Devin Male also had two kills.

"This weekend, the Rams will have plenty to keep themselves motivated as they go after the school record of 19 straight wins in the Patriot Power Tournament at Lake Brantley.

"That (record) is one of the goals we're looking at," said Whalen. "If, and that's a big if, we can make it through pool play undefeated, we'll have 19 straight wins. We could be playing to break that record in the semifinals."

DOVE program explained to Heathrow club

HEATHROW - The next meeting of the Heathrow Women's Club will be Monday, Oct. 10, at the Heathrow Country Club, beginning at 10:30 a.m. A speaker will address the luncheon meeting.

In their first meeting of the season, on Monday, Sept. 12, the members heard Tina Calderone, a domestic violence counselor for Seminole County and coordinator for the "DOVE" program. Calderone spoke on the subject of "Sexual Harassment and Assaults." She reviewed such topics as the state and federal laws that prohibit sexual harassment, impositions made by a male or a female in the same position, conflicting beliefs and resulting behavior, three response patterns and responses to hostile feelings that something is amiss, in addition to distributing some personal quiz sheets for the members to do at home.

In another part of the meeting, Executive Board and Standing Board members came forward to reintroduce themselves to the members and guests and to give an update on their responsibilities and accomplishments made during the busy summer months.

The first fund-raiser will be a "ready, set, go!" Several years ago the club held a Holiday Tour of Homes as a social event. This year they are planning something similar as a fund-raising event with many changes and new additions. Marianne Beale, Ways and Means chairperson, told the membership. The event is set for the first half of December between the hours of 4 and 9 p.m.

The major fund-raising event will be a fashion show/luncheon at Church Street Station in April of 1995.

Marion Good, the Charity Endeavors chairperson explained where the funds will go from these activities. The main charity to benefit from the club's efforts will be "Se-

The club will also be supporting the S.O.S. Bell in December and Sunshine Box proceeds will continue to benefit Special Olympics.

Privacy: Is it a right or a privilege?

Who decides what's private? The answer isn't as clear as it once was. Before the computer age, personal records were not nearly so complete or portable. If someone moved from Vermont to California, he could practically invent a new history for himself. It was difficult to search and get copies of school, employment, military, credit, banking and medical records. Today, that's possible in minutes.

A database can include where you like to shop, what you buy, how you pay for things, what type of travel you prefer, the books you read and many details that you may think of as personal. When did privacy go public?

There's a major debate about what's private and what's not. Does the Constitution guarantee privacy? Do we need more laws or better compliance with the ones that already exist? What can people do to protect their privacy?

Is privacy a right or a privilege? Basically, it depends on your position. If you are applying for a job, you may feel that your credit history is your own business. If you are about to hire someone, you may feel it is your right to know if an applicant has financial problems that may affect job performance, who decides? Right now, the answer is not obvious.

Your legal rights to privacy. There aren't as many legal rights to privacy as most people imagine.

The Constitution. This country was founded on the belief that individual liberty is important and government powers should be limited. Most legal scholars rely on the privacy guarantees provided in the Bill of Rights.

First amendment. Freedom of association and expression: the right to free speech and freedom of religious choice.

Fourth amendment. Freedom from search and seizure without probable cause.

Fifth amendment. Protection against self-incrimination and loss of life, liberty and property without due process of law; prevents the government from forcing people to share information that can be used against them.

In the 1970s, Congress proposed the Principles of Fair Information Practices. The principles say that organizations should collect only information they need, share it only with those who need to know, protect it from people outside the organization, tell people how their data will be used and allow people to correct or challenge their own files. That led to the Federal Privacy Act of 1974. The right of notice, inspection and challenge of one's own federal government records.

Voluntarily, many businesses began to protect their customers' confidentiality. Throughout the 70s and 80s, more laws were passed, protecting: tax records, education records, bank records, cable TV usage, wire and electronic communications/telephone toll records, videocassette rentals, credit records and much more.

Parents: Listen and respond to your children

DEAR READERS: Most parents want to be good communicators, but they don't know how. The reality is that good communication is a skill that must be learned and practiced. It has nothing to do with intelligence and really quite little to do with speaking skills.

Have you ever had a conversation with your child that sounded something like this?

Parent: How was school today?

Child: Okay.

Parent: What did you do?

Child: Nothing.

Parent: What do you mean, "Nothing"? Was your teacher nice to you?

Child: Yeah, I guess so.

Parent: Didn't you have art today? I bet you liked that, because you like to draw, don't you?

Child: Yeah, can I go out and play now?

There was a conversation going on here, but very little communication. The most important part of effective communication is being an effective listener. Do you hear what your child is not saying as well as what she does say? Do you dominate the conversation and unintentionally discourage your child from communicating openly with you? Are you repeating conversational patterns you learned from your parents, although you know that they were ineffective in helping you share your thoughts and feelings when you were a child. Below are several communication road blocks commonly used by adults when talking to children. While they may be effective in specific situations in getting our point across, they will also block free and open communication between our kids and us.

The Drill Sergeant: Ordering, directing and demanding; telling our children what to do.

The Weatherman: Warning, admonishing, and threatening the child.

The Guru: Moralizing, preaching, or telling her what she ought to do.

The Godfather: Telling the child how to solve the problem.

The Judge: Criticizing, blaming or making negative judgments of the child.

The Name-Caller: Ridiculing, shaming, and making the child feel foolish by stereotyping or categorizing her.

The most effective communication involves two elements: listening attentively and responding helpfully. Pliney the Elder said it well about 2,000 years ago: "A person is given two ears and only one mouth, that they should be used in that order."

Opposites learn fine art of compromise

DEAR ABBY: You recently told "Fighting in Connecticut" that her family is unusual because she is a Democrat and her husband is a registered Republican. Well, my husband and I are in the same boat. Not only that, my mother was a staunch Nixon supporter, and my father a gung-ho Kennedy man from New Hampshire. Up until she died, my mother wore her "I married a damned Democrat" button to the polls, and my father wore his "I married a damned Republican" button. In fact, when my father ran for township committee, my mother couldn't even vote for her own husband in the primaries!

Because of our differences, our two daughters get to hear both sides of nearly every issue; we tolerate each other's differences, and have learned the fine art of compromise.

This Protestant converted to Catholicism so we could all worship together.

My traditional husband now understands the issues of homosexuality better and has given up eating veal. I have learned to be responsible for my own checkbook, quit smoking, discovered the truly great music of Tony Bennett and Michael Feinstein, and have learned to keep my mouth shut.

Some people think we are a crazy couple, but our 15-year-old happy marriage is built on tolerance of our differences, and the integrity to stand up for what we believe in. Neither of us will probably ever change our stance on abortion or ERA, but we never attack each other personally. Sign me...

Play it safe with cholesterol drug

DEAR DR. GOTT: My doctor recently prescribed a drug called Zocor because my cholesterol level was nearly 300. I question its safety, as my doctor and I have different views. Can my liver be affected by this drug?

DEAR READER: Zocor (simvastatin) is a cholesterol-lowering drug that inhibits the body's ability to manufacture cholesterol. It is effective and, for most patients, safe.

However, in a low percentage of patients, Zocor can cause severe liver and muscle inflammation. Accordingly, the manufacturer advises that periodic blood tests be obtained on patients taking the drug. If signs of muscle or liver disorders appear, Zocor must be immediately discontinued and another drug, such as Mevacor, used in its place.

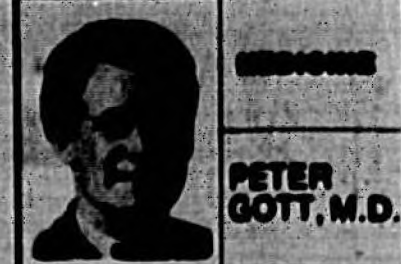

Fortunately, most people can take the medicine without complications. Your doctor can order the necessary tests to monitor your condition.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Understanding Cholesterol." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've had two back operations requiring anesthesia and I have been told I have Raynaud's phenomenon. Recently I received a bill from the anesthesia group that indicates I was treated for a severe systemic disease. My doctor never explained this to me. Can you? Is Raynaud's a severe systemic disorder?

DEAR READER: This syndrome is marked by arterial spasm, which may affect any of the smaller arteries in the body, usually causing blanching, pain and numbness of the fingers and toes. These spasms can be triggered by exposure to cold, emotional upsets or tobacco smoke. Technically, Raynaud's phenomenon is considered to be a "systemic" (generalized) disease but the point is arguable, because symptoms usually occur only in the hands and feet. I believe the anesthesiologists defined your disease in such a way that they would be able to obtain a higher rate of reimbursement from your insurance company.

WIN AT

By Phillip Alder
Yesterday I featured a deal in which the defender not on opening lead used a Lighter Double. It asked partner to find the side suit in which he was void. It was the only way to defeat a five-heart contract. However, we all know about the poet's best-laid schemes.

Fair Lawn, N.J., won with his ace, ruffed a heart in the dummy and ruffed a club high in hand, bringing down West's king.

Today's deal occurred during the Summer Nationals in San Diego last July. East doubled five spades, expecting the play to go: diamond ruff, heart to West's ace, diamond ruff. But he was sadly wrong. He should have realized, as South did, that North was unlikely to remove the double of five hearts unless void in hearts.

The moral is that just because you can take a ruff at trick one, it doesn't automatically mean you will defeat the contract unless it is a grand slam, of course. And even then, in your worst nightmare, declarer overruffs!

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bode Oost
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Oct. 8, 1964

Changes for the better are probable for the year ahead where your work or career is concerned. Several influential benefactors might start helping you from behind the scenes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Try to attend to your duties as promptly as possible today. As time ticks on, your drive and industriousness tends to wane and you could leave several unfinished endeavors in your wake. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today if you do something social with friends where each has to pay for their participation, don't volunteer to be the treasurer. It could end up being very hard on your purse.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Things you do not personally initiate today aren't apt to get your full support. Instead of being cooperative, you might be contrary.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It's important you have the courage of your convictions today and stand up for your own ideas. They might be challenged by others, so be prepared to have the fortitude to defend them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Where your financial affairs are concerned today, there's a chance you might experience some discomfort, especially if you are involved with close friends.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Challenging developments might not bring out your better qualities today. Even though you'll be capable of overcoming obstacles, you might still toss in the towel prematurely.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) There are indications today that you might place too much significance on getting approval from others. This might impel you to try so hard, you miss.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In matters that affect your financially, it might be wise to keep outsiders out of your affairs today. Their interference could create complications.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A major objective is reachable today if you act in the first person. Allies or associates could hamper your progress instead of helping it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You might have some difficulty today keeping your priorities in order. You'll be much more easily motivated to do non-essential things than you will be to be productive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Trying to mix business with pleasure could be an unsuccessful blend today. Either do one thing or the other, but don't attempt to do them simultaneously.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Persons with whom you're involved today may make decisions for you if you're reluctant to do so for yourself. What they decide might be good for them, but not necessarily for you.
