Writers, producers renew talks

LOS ANGELES — Negotiators for the Writers Guild of America and television and movie producers renewed contract talks for the first time in a month in hopes of ending a 5-month-old strike in time to save the fall television season.

The strike has virtually shut down Hollywood, putting thousands of studio employees out of work and forcing network executives and production companies to look to Europe and elsewhere for new material.

With a federal mediator looking on, the two sides met for 13 hours Saturday and resumed talks at 1 p.m. Sunday to end the strike that began March 7, said Cheryl Rhoden, spokeswoman for the 9,600-member Writers Guild.

Explosion rips chemical plant

CHICAGO — Explosions and fire ripped through a chemical plant in a Chicago suburb early today, critically injuring four people and spewing toxic smoke that forced the evacuation of about 300 residents, authorities said.

The fire at the Union Chemical Plant in Bridgeview, a suburb southwest of Chicago, burned for at least four hours after explosions rocked the plant at 1:08 a.m. today, Bridgeview Fire Lt. Kenneth Pedersen said.

The cause of the explosions was not known. At least 300 residents were evacuated from around the plant because wind was pushing dangerous fumes over homes. Residents were allowed to return when the smoke dispersed shortly after 5 a.m.

District voting issue dead

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Voters may have to wait two years to decide whether to have a single member district form of county government representation.

The deadline passed Friday with the Seminole County Single Member Districting Committee failing to turn in the required 9,463 names to have the question placed on the ballot this November.

The next countywide election won't be until September 1990, unless a special election is held earlier.

Because of the 60-day period required for the supervisor of elections office to confirm the signatures as current voters, and the state requirement that the county commission place the question on the ballot at least 30 days before the Nov. 8 election, Friday was the last possible day committee chairman James Sweeting could have submitted the petition to the elections office.

Sandy Goard, supervisor of elections, said although state law allows up to 60 days to verify the signatures, a busy presidential election year schedule would prevent her staff from verifying the signatures in less than 60 days.

Bob McMillan, deputy county attorney, said the last meeting at which the county commission could place the question on the ballot is Sept. 22, and 60 days before Sept. 22 was July 22 — Friday.

Sweeting asked county commissioners on July

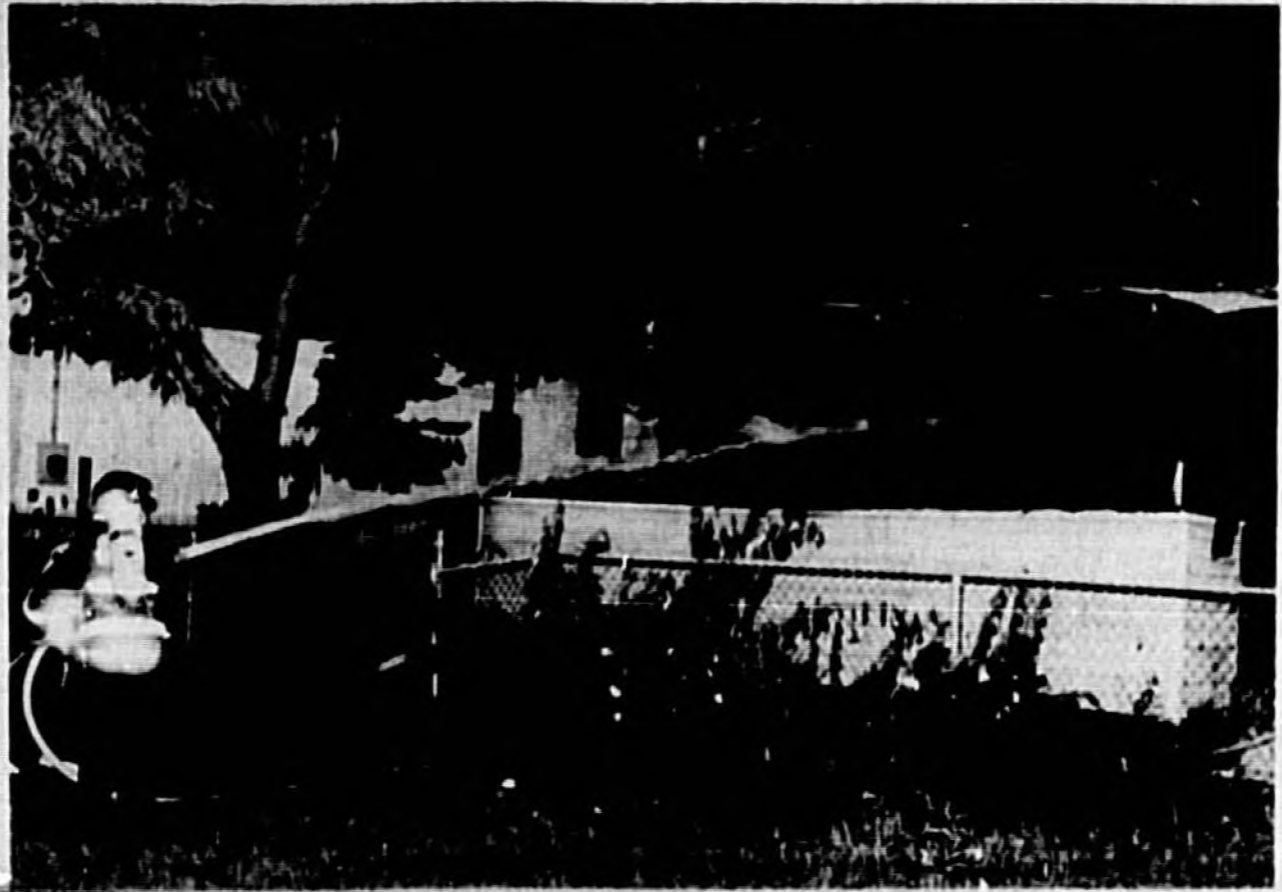

12 to reconsider their option to place the question on the ballot with a single vote, which they refused to do by taking no action. Sweeting had made a similar request of commissioners in March with the same result.

Sweeting told commissioners last week the committee had collected about 5,200 names, about half the required number. Sweeting told them if they placed the question on the ballot, he would ask the committee to stop the drive.

"It would resolve any question the county was not in compliance with the Voter's Right Act," Sweeting said.

Sweeting won't rule out the possibility of continuing the effort until the required 10 percent of the voters' names are obtained.

"If we don't make it, we'll continue until we do," he said.

Morning fire

Firemen battle a blaze at a small wood-frame house at 810 E. Seventh St. Monday morning. A fire department spokesman reported no injuries and said the home was occupied by one man, who was safe but is unidentified. Two fire engines and a rescue unit responded to the fire at 5:48 a.m. The house suffered extensive damage and the cause of the blaze has not yet been determined.

Candidate has erratic job record

By SUSAN LODEN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — A Sanford sewer worker, who qualified Friday as the only Democratic candidate for Seminole County sheriff, said he does not think it unusual that if he were elected sheriff the four-year term would be his longest consistent period of employment.

Patrick Paul Wilson, 39, Fern Park, said he is qualified to serve as sheriff despite apparent inconsistencies in various accounts he and others give of his personal history.

Sanford Herald research into Wilson's background shows that since May 6, 1986, he has worked as a sewer plant operator I for the City of Sanford, earning an hourly wage of just over $8.

Although Wilson says in his campaign material he has "20 years in civil service," his record drawn from employment applications he has filled out over the years indicates a history of erratic employment.

A review of some of Wilson's employment applications and interviews with representatives of some of his past employers indicates that when applying for a job Wilson changes his employment, health and address history from one application to the next.

Not only are some jobs omitted and others added, the dates of the jobs vary, as do the degrees of responsibility. The reasons Wilson gave for leaving also vary, and in some cases conflict with information on file at the places he worked.

Wilson said that as he fills out a job application he goes through each question with someone from that enterprise and asks them which jobs, medical problems, and other specifics they want him to include in his application.

Herald research shows Wilson has had at least 12 different jobs in the last 15 years. Many of those positions were held briefly and most were entry level sewer and water department jobs with various city governments in Florida. His record indicates no managerial experience and Wilson says he has never operated a private enterprise. Wilson told the Herald "Through all employment I've demonstrated leadership."

After two years as an Oviedo policeman, his only employment by a law enforcement agency, Wilson resigned under fire. Oviedo city records show. Records indicate

City commission will consider proposal for new phone system

By WAYNE NIZE
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Among items on tonight's city commission meeting is the recommendation that a new telephone system be purchased for city offices at a cost of $65,000.

City Manager Frank Faison will recommend to the city commission a new IBM Rolm telephone system to replace the present AT&T system now in use. Faison's calls the present system "antiquated" in a letter to the commission.

The present combined Southern Bell and AT&T system costs $5,381 per month, according to Faison. The estimated cost of the IBM Rolm system is $3,198 per month.

The letter also states after financing the principle of the total cost of $65,039.04, the monthly difference between the present cost and the proposed cost will be a savings of $129 per month.

Faison says over a five-year span the IBM cost per telephone is $13.34 per month, and the five-year Southern Bell cost per month is $36.90 per telephone.

Other matters before the commission.

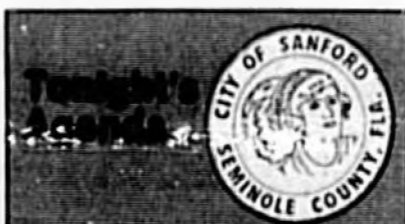

The city commission will discuss dropping out of Seminole County's Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) Program, which is up for renewal.

Faison will recommend that the city not renew its previous three-year agreement with the county.

City Director of Planning & Engineering Bill Simmons also recommends the city not participate with the county. Instead Simmons recommends the city participate in the Small Cities CDBG Program, where more money will be available.

A second reading and adoption of the ordinance restricting the collection of transportation impact fees by Seminole County within the city is up for passage.

Richardson announces tax collector candidacy

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Lifelong Democrat Karen Richardson says she has the most experience to make her eligible for Seminole County Tax Collector.

She says with 16 years experience with the Orange County tax collector's office, including four as a senior office manager, Seminole County needs her kind of experience to replace county tax collector G. Troy Ray, who will retire this year after 24 years in office.

"I feel that I am probably more qualified than any other candidates," Richardson says.

Richardson, 42, enters a race laden with other candidates, all

Republicans. Current Seminole County Commissioner Barbara Christensen, Ray Valdes and Donald Myers have all qualified this week to seek the office.

Although she faces politically powerful opponents, Richardson says she trusts the decision of the voters.

"We have intelligent voters here who will make the right choice and not just pick a name," Richardson says.

She is a 20-year Seminole County resident. Her husband Roger is director of the Orange County 911 and Fire Department dispatch service. They have two daughters, Kathy, 23, and Rhane, 21.

Richardson began as a deputy tax clerk in Orange County in 1972, eventually working in all departments of the tax collector's office. For the last four years she has been assistant tax manager of the office, responsible for ad valorem tax collection, real property, tangible assets and other sections. She has 22 people working under her supervision.

She says she helped balance a $360 million tax roll last year, much larger than Seminole County's tax rolls.

Richardson says she has also taken the equivalent of five years in tax collection courses and last year received her state Florida Collector Assistant certification.

Richardson is an active member of the American Business Womens Association. She and her family are active in girls softball in Seminole County.

Shuttle practice countdown begins

By WILLIAM HARWOOD UPI Science Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — NASA engineers are working through a dress rehearsal countdown for the shuttle Discovery today that culminates Saturday in a ground-shaking test firing of the ship's three main engines, a critical trial by fire for the first post-Challenger flight. The countdown began at 11:33 p.m. Sunday with a "call to stations" at launch complex 30B where Discovery stands hidden from view in a cocoon-like gantry.

Engineers are leaning toward an on-the-pad repair job that calls for cutting through the skin of the orbiter so technicians can reach a leaking fuel line fitting in Discovery's left-side steering rocket pod. If the leak can be fixed at the pad, Discovery could be ready for launch as early as the third week of September, just two weeks or so behind schedule. But if the shuttle has to be hauled back to its hangar for repairs, blastoff would slip into October. The leak does not involve the main engine system and regardless of how the problem is resolved, Discovery's "flight readiness firing" this week marks a major milestone on the road to resuming shuttle missions.

hiatus in shuttle flights. The so-called "wet countdown" test is scheduled to end at 7 a.m. Wednesday. Engineers will then reset their countdown clocks and proceed toward the main engine firing three days later. The flight readiness firing countdown is virtually identical to the real thing and at 7:30 a.m. Saturday, at T-minus 6.6 seconds, Discovery's three main engines will roar to life for a 22-second "burn."

U. of Florida super-cold lab to open

United Press International

GAINESVILLE — The Sunshine State will have one of the coldest spots in the universe when the University of Florida opens its Microkelvin Research Lab for super-low temperatures this fall. "It's the largest low-temperature lab in the world," UF physicist Gary Itha said.

The lab is designed to take matter closer to absolute zero than it has ever been before. Absolute zero, minus 459.67 degrees Fahrenheit, is the hypothetical point that molecular motion stops. "We'll be able to get to within one-millionth of a degree of absolute zero — to one microkelvin. The coldest temperature in the universe, in the empty space between galaxies, is about 3 degrees kelvin, so this will be roughly three million times colder than that," Itha said.

Mercenary's lawyer says charges are lies

FORT LAUDERDALE — The lawyer for a mercenary who fought with Contras says the United States has been at war with Nicaragua for nine years and called charges that his client violated the Neutrality Act an "audacious lie" by prosecutors.

Terrell has admitted he fought the Nicaraguan government with the Contra rebels in 1984 and 1985, but said it was always with the knowledge and approval of the U.S. government.

Candidate Etchberger refunds all his illegal contributions

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Jeff Etchberger has refunded all his contributions he received illegally between June 22 and June 30.

Earlier last week, Supervisor of Elections Sandra Goard notified Etchberger, who is running for county commissioner, that he had accepted $6,450 in contributions and spent $10 illegally and had until Friday to submit an amended campaign finance report showing the money had been refunded.

State laws require candidates to file a declaration of campaign treasurer and finance account with the local elections office before contributions can be received or spent on a campaign.

Etchberger appointed his wife, Bobbi, treasurer, opened his campaign account at Sun Bank in Altamonte Springs, completed the form and had it notarized on June 22, but failed to turn it in to Goard's office before he started accepting contributions or spending the funds.

The amended report shows Etchberger refunded the $6,450 to the 11 contributors and contributed $10 of his own money to refund $10 to the Greater Seminole Chamber of Commerce for a luncheon ticket he had reported as an expenditure.

In a letter to Goard, Etchberger wrote "I am embarrassed by the errors made with regard to the timely filing of the appropriate reports with your office. I had designated a campaign treasurer and properly opened a campaign account prior to accepting any contributions.

"However, I was not aware that the report had to be filed with your office prior to such appointment becoming effective. It was not my intent to violate the law."

SANFORD — A set of golf clubs valued at $2,900 was reported stolen from the Mayfair Country Club on State Road 46-A Friday morning. Police have a description of the suspect.

A burglar hit the Cumberland Farms, 720 U.S. Highway 17-92, Fern Park at about 4 a.m. today and got away with 30 cartons of cigarettes valued at $300 and $300 worth of beer, a Seminole County sheriff's report said.

The 1981 Dodge of Lora G. Enis, of 1280 Shangri-la Lane, Oviedo, was stolen along with a $700 stereo, a $300 video recorder, a $500 television set and other items from her house Saturday or Sunday. A sheriff's report valued the car at $2,000 and listed Julie M. Furd of the same address as owner of some of the stolen items.

Nancy M. Oddie, of 3985 Biscayne Blvd., Winter Springs, reported to sheriff's deputies $250 was stolen from her house Friday or Saturday.

A $270 television set, a $250 video recorder and a $350 microwave oven were among items stolen Friday from the house of Richard R. Russell, 1205 Oklahoma St., Oviedo, a sheriff's report said.

Sheriff's deputies report three rifles, two pistols, two video recorders and other items with a total value of about $3,500 were stolen Saturday from the house

Robbers take jewelry in Longwood

By SUSAN LODEN
Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD — Longwood police are searching for two suspects in a daylight armed robbery of a jewelry store Saturday.

Police Capt. Terry Baker said the value of jewelry taken from Treasures Ltd., 820 State Road 434, hasn't been determined because some goods taken from the store's safe don't belong to the business.

Store owner James Baly of Longwood told police a man entered his shop about 4:45 p.m. Saturday and asked about repair of a Rolex watch. A second man entered, and the two men brandish guns, he said.

Baly, who was alone in the store, was forced to the rear of the store and open the safe from which jewelry was stolen. Baly's hands were bound with electrical tape, Baker said.

One bandit cleaned out the store's display cases and put the jewelry into suitcases belonging to the store. The robbers made Baly carry the suitcases out to his 1981 black Lincoln Mark 6. He put the cases in his car and the robbers fled, taking the car.

Baker said police are looking for two men, both in their early 20s. Both are described as slim, with dark hair and mustaches. Both wore sunglasses and are between 5 feet 10 inches and 6 feet tall. One was armed with a small caliber black handgun and the other carried a large revolver, Baker said.

Sheriff cites need for one-cent sales tax

New building, 192 more bunk spaces said needed

By SUSAN LODEN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — A jail population that is expanding at a more rapid pace than expected, and overcrowded conditions at the sheriff's department administrative quarters are why Seminole County Sheriff John Polk is proposing a one-cent sales tax surcharge for county residents.

Polk also wants part of the proposed one-year tax to be used to expand the state-run Seminole Juvenile Detention Center.

The current jail, expanded through use of a one-cent sales tax imposed in 1986, can house more than 800 prisoners, more than double the capacity of the old jail. Although its population is currently about 500 inmates, Polk says that number wasn't expected to be reached until 1990.

He proposes adding at least 192 bunk spaces.

Polk says he sees no decline in the need for jail space and pointed out that he has nothing to do with whether or not criminals are sentenced to serve time in jail — that's the court's responsibility. "Once they're sentenced to jail they're my responsibility," he said.

He added that it is up to the judicial system to establish alternatives to jail, but he doesn't see a decline in the need for jail space as a result of alternative sentencing programs.

"Everybody wants criminals off the streets. If we're going to do that we've got to have a place to keep them. State community correction programs must not be enough, because they are still having to release prisoners."

Polk said.

The sheriff's administrative offices have been housed in Building 310, a former U.S. Navy barracks at the Sanford airport, since 1979. Polk said the building was not designed to be used as office space.

The building has 40,000 square feet of space and is leased to the county by the Sanford Airport Authority for $53,000 a year. Mack Lazenby, airport authority director, said the building was built in the late 1950s or early 1960s.

"It has served its purpose," Polk said, but now is overcrowded, because of department growth. "Our executives are sitting on top of one another. We have outgrown the building. In 1992, I guarantee you there won't be room for us in this building."

When Polk took office 19 years ago he had a staff of 34. Today the department has about 500 employees, including jail personnel.

To relieve the crowding, patrol operations were moved to a sub-station provided by South Seminole Community Hospital in Longwood two years ago. Polk said he hopes to reconsolidate his operations in a new facility that would be located at the county government and jail complex at Five Points south of Sanford.

Although Polk has no responsibility for operation of the state-run Seminole Juvenile Detention Center (JDC), located across from the jail in a building on North Bush Boulevard, Polk said as a concerned citizen he is including a request for expansion of that facility. The county built the building that houses the detention center, and leases it to the state.

Polk said he was involved in the planning of the juvenile jail in 1972, and has served on related committees since then.

Montye Beamer, deputy county administrator, said within a few days ground will be broken at the JDC site for a new Juvenile Justice Facility. That building will include courtroom space so the juveniles won't have to leave the compound for hearings. The Juvenile Justice Facility, which is separate from the state-run JDC, will also have office space for state attorneys, public defenders and state Health and Rehabilitative Services staff, Beamer said.

The $634,000 for development of the Juvenile Justice Facility is part of Seminole County's share of the regular state sales tax, she said. Polk will propose to help pay for expansion and revamping of the JDC with a portion of the special tax he will ask for.

Beamer said although the justice center is in the works and funds are available for that project, a 1986 county-ordered study shows a need to expand the JDC and to bring the existing building in compliance with current building codes.

The plan, which is part of Polk's proposal, would increase the size of JDC by 17,000

Federal aid goes begging

President Reagan and the Congress, prompted by concerns over the escalating problems of illegal drugs in America, set aside $178 million in 1986 to help local law enforcement agencies in their war on drugs. The Florida Department of Community Affairs was designated by the federal government as the agency to receive funds approved for the state.

The state legislature authorized the Office of Planning and Budget on July 1, 1987 to allocate funds to the DCA to operate the fund-disbursing program and application was made to the U.S. Department of Justice for $7.5 million. This was approved in November 1987. The department gave local law enforcement agencies until March 1988 to apply for funds under the program. Seventeen applications were submitted totaling $8.5 million. Funds were given to the Florida Department of Law Enforcement, which was not required to submit a detailed application. The DCA recommended 10 applications be approved for the total of $4.7 million remaining. That money remains idle.

The Department of Community Affairs has been justly criticized for foot-dragging on the implementation of the program and of being too rigid in its requirements for intricate details.

The DCA has been slow but it is incomprehensible that the Seminole County sheriff and the police departments of the seven cities in the county have failed to even make a move. That's slower than slow.

The excuses offered by Sheriff John Polk and Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett referred to the intricacies of the application. Grant applications are so extensive and time-consuming: just too much red tape, they explained. It's likely the other six departments felt somewhat the same, judging from their inaction.

Law enforcement officers are all too happy to discuss their vigilance in pursuing drug users and dealers. And they are all too happy to receive taxpayers money to fund their department operations. But seeking the return of taxpayers money from the federal government through a state agency appears to be too bothersome for them.

A typical grant application requires budget figures detailing grant use, justification of need for the funds and a summary of planning for fund usage, including organization and personnel. Total time consumed usually is less than a week. All questions must be answered.

The potential for each of the cities and the county was probably in the hundreds of thousands of dollars. Even if only one of the entities was approved, it would be money coming into Seminole County to combat a serious problem. If they didn't have the time, or the expertise to complete the application, it is very likely that officials at Seminole Community College or elsewhere could have assisted them. Every institution of higher education has personnel experienced in the art of grantsmanship.

It is a sad commentary on our law enforcement officials when a program geared to assist in the war on drugs is deliberately shunned, just because it was too much trouble.

Was this trip really necessary?

ATLANTA (UPI) — As the Democrats left Atlanta after nominating their 1988 presidential candidate, many must have been asking, "Was this trip really necessary?"

The question does not imply unhappiness with the host city. Atlanta put on a pretty good convention, given its resources and the requirements of the politicians and the media.

The question is whether everybody has lost sight of the basic purposes of national political conventions.

This business all started 155 years ago when a couple of fledgling political parties sent fewer than 200 delegates each to Baltimore to nominate candidates and, almost coincidentally, to express their views on current issues. How many reporters were on hand is lost to history.

Last week, 5,332 Democratic delegates and alternates and about three times that number of news people went through the modern version of that ritual of democracy in Atlanta.

But if the form was similar, the substance was vastly different. In 1833, the Anti-Masons and the National Republicans really had candidates to choose and policies to state at their little conventions.

In 1988, the Democrats in Atlanta, and next month the Republicans in New Orleans, really have nothing to decide. Michael Dukakis won the Democratic presidential nomination in early June and George Bush wrapped up the GOP nomination earlier in the spring.

Furthermore, the Democratic platform was substantially complete weeks before the delegates ever arrived in Atlanta, and it is a good guess that there will be little or no change in the document that Republican leaders bring to New Orleans.

And if it really makes any difference on the outcome of the election Dukakis announced his choice of Lloyd Bentsen a week before the Democratic convention. Bush may do the same before the GOP convalesce.

But the shows go on. The politicians publicly predict great matters will be decided at the conventions, but they actually view them as great showcases to display their new candidates and as wonderful opportunities to damn the opposition before national audiences.

The media, bless our hearts, go along with this charade in the faint hope that the conventions, which are run according to minute-by-minute scripts, will produce some surprises, or at the minimum, some spontaneity. What we get is 10 dull speeches and staged events for every tiddit of excitement, eloquence or honest emotion.

The Atlanta convention made the real situation clear when the delegates found themselves seated in an arena that is perfectly designed for watching basketball or hockey and their national chairman declared the place had been laid out to be a television studio.

I have been to 12 conventions, including some that were truly exciting, but the honest truth is that we have reached the point now where the delegates could mail their votes and ideas for the platform to the party headquarters and spend the convention week trying out for Wheel of Fortune.

With convention hotel rooms pushing $200 a night and cold meat sandwiches fetching $3 or more, that way they might at least break even.

Post-convention convention

ATLANTA—The London Suite is beginning to look a little worse for wear. Maybe it's the tired platter of hotel Danish. Maybe it's the stacks of papers. Maybe it's the staffers who are already suffering from Georgia wilt.

But room 2449 is the inner sanctum of the Dukakis operation. It's the room that belongs to Susuan Estrich, campaign manager and resident symbol of woman's place at the 1988 convention inside.

Call this the post-feminist convention if you will. Women are no special-interest group in Atlanta. Nor are they outsiders agitating for a place at the table. They are, simply, players. As Estrich puts it: "In the past we were reaching for symbolic inclusion. Now women are included. We're there."

Estrich is the prime example, but not the only one. When the Dukakis forces met with Jackson forces, Jesse's negotiators included Maxine Waters and Ann Lewis. When the Democrats chose a keynote speaker, it was Ann Richards, the Texas treasurer who remembers back when women "had to fight just to be in this convention hall."

For the first time, the manager of the convention is a woman and, more important, for the first time there are too many high-ranking female operatives to list. As Ann Richards says, "Maybe women have reached the point we wanted all along—not to be treated like a two-headed cow."

Estrich, at 34, the most powerful woman in Atlanta this week, got "there" through a route familiar to many women of her age. "I came along," she says, "when doors were beginning to open or could be pushed open."

One of the doors that pushed open was at Harvard Law School, where Estrich became one of the first women to get tenure, where she teaches sex discrimination as well as criminal law and where she wrote a book on rape law that didn't shy away from describing her own experiences as a victim.

The other door led to politics. She went to work for the Kennedy campaign in 1980 at just the right moment, when a few of the men began to finally realize they better "look for" women. "There was an awakened sense that there should be women in the meeting," she says knowingly, "even if it took a minute to figure out who those women should be."

Eight years later, Democratic politics has lurched beyond that sort of tokenism. The Atlanta convention may lack the emotional high of the Ferraro nomination. But women are integrated into the Dukakis campaign the way they are integrated into the Dukakis administration in Massachusetts and the way they are increasingly integrated into many professions.

"Mike has worked with women throughout his life," says Estrich. "He's listened to them, agreed with them, disagreed with them.

They've been part of the circle. It's not something we have to stand and count."

But the post-feminist convention is marked by more than the arrival of women into political life. As they have come inside, so have their issues come inside and at the same time been transformed.

The "Women's Issues" that occupied so much energy in the past, the debates about abortion and equal rights that sparked rallies, are no longer flash points of argument. On Democratic turf, they have been settled. Even the meetings of the women's caucus and pro-choice lobbies are tame celebrations compared to other years. Indeed as the power and profile of women in party politics rises, the power and profile of traditional feminist groups fades.

Democratic issues just aren't segregated by sex any longer. As Estrich describes it, "There is no element of the agenda separated out as 'the women's piece.' No Longer 'special,' these interests have been recast as family concerns, as economic issues. "The question now is how we can reach out broadly to women in terms of education, health care, child care, jobs."

What difference does it make to have women in the inner circles of campaigns and conventions?

"Voters don't pay attention to how many women there are in the room," says the woman with a room at the top of this campaign. "Bush has a problem with women because the average voter thinks he doesn't have a clue what their lives are like."

But if Dukakis does understand, Estrich adds, it is in part because of the women around him.

Madeleine Kunin, the Swiss-born governor of Vermont, uses the metaphor of her own immigrant experience to explain the journey of political women.

Like foreigners, women have had to gain admission, learn a new language, win acceptance. It's by no means complete.

But, she says, "Look around you. We're no longer on the outside with our noses pressed against the glass."

How to control midges

Regarding the editorial "Midges create a messy problem" (July 14):

I have been to 12 conventions, including some that were truly exciting, but the honest truth is that we have reached the point now where the delegates could mail their votes and ideas for the platform to the party headquarters and spend the convention week trying out for Wheel of Fortune.

With convention hotel rooms pushing $200 a night and cold meat sandwiches fetching $3 or more, that way they might at least break even.

I tried to give the committee the benefit of my 23 years of experience, having run a fishing camp on the river for that long, but did not seem to be able to get my point across, so will lay it out for you here. I used an automobile headlight mounted on the end of the bridge stub to attract the midges away from the store and residence. It worked because the midges are attracted to the bright light. So would projector spotlights mounted along the seawall attract the midges. It would cost very little to try two or three. With the lights pointed across the lake the midges would fall into the water and attract the bream and other fish minnows that would eat a lot of them before they ever emerged from the water.

A part of this problem is caused by the projection of the marina complex into the river, causing the build up of the silt and mud along the seawall.

To cure this would take a little doing, but it would finish the problem. The doing would consist of a diversion dike across the St. Johns where it enters Lake Monroe to divert the flow of the river along the seawall, which would sweep away the mud and silt, the breeding ground of the midges. It would also require a wall to run from the present wall to the end of the marina fill so that the silt would be carried on downstream. Such a wall would not be a dead loss of taxpayers money as an Olympic-size pool could be constructed within the area enclosed by this wall. Another suggestion for Sanford.

No place in the editorial did I see mentioned Seminole Fundalis—locally known as bullheads or stone rollers; nor the dough belly minnows and pol-guts, three of the prime carnivores of the midge in its larval stage.

Of course, as usual, man is the cause of the shortage of the small fishes, they having been virtually destroyed by the aerial distribution of fire ant poison. I could tell you of the amazing fecundity of these before the aerial spraying and the continuing of hyacinth spraying which also destroyed a large portion of the turtle population of the river. I managed to get the hyacinth spraying stopped during the shad spawning season.

Recycle newspaper

Recently there was an article in the paper concerning recycling of certain materials. I would like to follow up this article with a comment.

We subscribe to the Sanford Herald and the Orlando Sentinel and they are delivered on a daily basis. Twice a week I have a shopping bag full of newspapers to place in the trash. Multiply this by a few hundred other households and it makes quite a bulk for the landfill.

Winter Park and Orlando have recovery systems that I suggest Sanford or some organization in Sanford adopt. Households in these areas are provided with a plastic basket with the slogan "Reuse the News" printed on the side.

I don't know what their pickup system involves but it seems the city of Sanford or some organization in the area could make a tidy profit by picking up these papers on a weekly basis and selling them to a recycling company. It would reduce the input at the landfill considerably, not to mention the financial gain to the organization.

Stocks open little changed

NEW YORK — Prices opened little changed today in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues. The Dow Jones Industrial average, which fell 64.46 last week, was unchanged at 2060.99 shortly after the market opened. Advances led declines 422-408 among the 1,327 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Early turnover amounted to about 21,600,000 shares.

Dollar mostly higher; gold, silver open mixed

The dollar closed slightly lower in Tokyo today but opened stronger on most other major world money markets. The price of gold was mixed. In earlier trading in the Far East, the dollar weakened against the Japanese yen, closing at 131.80 yen, off 0.28 from 132.08 yen on Friday. Dealers said dollar selling outpaced buying in early trading but speculative sources later turned to buying the dollar as major institutional investors declined to purchase the yen by selling their dollar holdings. In Europe, the dollar rebounded in Frankfurt, opening the day at 1.83 West German marks, up from 1.8285 on Friday. In Zurich, the dollar began the week at 1.528 Swiss francs, up from 1.5185, in Paris at 6.194 French francs, up from 6.155 and in Brussels at 38.88 Belgian francs, up from 38.74. Soviet general claims future of Afghan government bleak

MOSCOW — A Soviet general says Afghanistan's Moscow-backed government suffers divisions too deep to heal and suggested the ruling party's plans for a coalition government should involve field commanders of the Mujahideen guerrillas. Maj. Gen. Kim Tsagolov, a military adviser during the Soviet Union's military involvement in Afghanistan, said in an article published Sunday that he had direct contact with the guerrilla commanders during the war and believed they were ready to find a solution that would prevent further bloodshed after the withdrawal of Soviet troops. He said their commanders should be involved in any plans for a coalition government. The article by Tsagolov, published in the weekly Ogonyok, was the harshest official appraisal so far of the communist People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan, or PDPA, which Soviet troops have kept in power since they invaded the country in December 1979. "If I am to judge the Afghan army, taking into account its present condition, I have no confidence," Tsagolov said of its ability to continue fighting after the Soviet withdrawal is completed. "The conditions and chances for the Afghan armed forces depend directly on the condition of the PDPA and state power," Tsagolov said. "The Afghan leaders, in my opinion, do not give much thought to the danger to the party and state power from the inside." The pessimistic appraisal reflects the official Soviet line expressed since the Kremlin announced the troop withdrawal, portraying the costly war as a mistake caused by a failure to understand the tribal nature of the Afghan party and society. On May 15 Moscow began withdrawing 100,000 Soviet troops stationed in Afghanistan. Half are expected to leave the country by Aug. 15, and the rest by Feb. 15. Pakistani President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq said over the weekend that Moscow has sent 10,000 troops back into Afghanistan amid stepped-up rebel attacks, but the Kremlin denied the allegation. Tsagolov, who holds a doctorate in philosophy and teaches at the prestigious Frunze Military Academy in Moscow, painted a dreary picture of corruption, intrigue and "fierce struggle" — including assassination — inside the ruling Afghan party. "All methods were used, including physical destruction of political rivals," Tsagolov said. "The factional struggle has damaged the party irreparably." The Soviet officer said internal splits that began in 1967 are continuing, although the leaders realize the divisiveness will be fatal in the end.

Weaker dollar attracts Canadians

There are noticeably more Canadians this summer than in the past," Eleanor Houle, owner of the Harris Sea Ranch Hotel in Hampton Beach, told the newspaper. "I hear them chatting in French more than in recent years." Other business owners along Hampton Beach agreed. Canadian tourists have traditionally played an important role in the community and business people say the Canadians have returned in force. Cecile Pageot, owner of the Hampton Motor Inn for four years, said this year has been her best for Canadian business.

Record

Continued from Page 1A Wilson was absent from work without explanation for three days prior to April 20, 1986. Wilson was accused of making negative public statements about the police department and former Chief Robert Hancock, in violation of written city policy. When he heard he was to be investigated, records show Wilson's response was to hand Hancock a box containing his police gear, with a pre-written letter of resignation on top. He did not request an "exit interview" with city officials and refused further communication with his former employers, records show. In his campaign material, Wilson says he "left law enforcement in 1986 to run for office." Wilson told the Herald he quit his police job more than two years ago to run for sheriff because, "I had told my boss I was running for sheriff, I was harassed. To make it easier I decided to go back to the field (sewer and water plant operations) I was in before to run a campaign smoother that way." Herald research of some job applications filled out by Wilson, and interviews with representatives of his former employers, as well as Wilson, shows he has worked for 10 municipal water or waste water departments held the following jobs for period ranging from three months to a year. He was employed as a part-time security guard at Florida Junior College for about 18 months, April 1981 to January 1983. Although Wilson said he was a "campus policeman," his supervisor, Lt. R.L. Kinsey said he was a security guard and did not qualify to be a "campus policeman" because he was not certified by the state as a police officer. Wilson said he worked both full-time and part-time for the college, but Kinsey said Wilson quit on the day he offered him a full-time job. He has been employed as a waste water plant operator for the Sanford public works department since May 6, 1986. A sheriff, Wilson said, needs to have, "Strong emotional stability. Ability to control yourself. Physical and mental ability to make on-spot decisions not to jeopardize yourself, your men or the community."

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight New 'Fat-Magnet' Diet Pill Gives You Steady Fat Loss BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" to help you steadily lose fat by simply taking their tested and proven new pill. "You Can 'Eat Normally' Best of all, "you can continue to eat all of your favorite foods as long as you don't increase your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire." It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough for weight loss (worldwide patents pending). Flashes Fat Out of Body The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles from food that you have just eaten. Then, the trapped fat is naturally "flushed" right out of your body. Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated. "Pills Go To Work" The fat-magnet pills alone, "automatically" help reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat, with no exercising. You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals. However, you can lose weight "faster" if you choose to follow the fat-magnet diet plan along with the pills. The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with record sales and glowing reports of weight loss. It's a "lazy way" to lose weight for people who enjoy eating. Now Available to Public If you need to lose a large or small amount of weight, you can order your supply of these new highly successful fat-magnet pills and diet plan (now available from the doctor's exclusive manufacturer by mail or phone order only) by sending $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$2 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), cash, check or money order to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. Reagan back from week at Calif. ranch

WASHINGTON — A rested President Reagan was back at the White House today, poised to deal and do battle with Congress in the midst of a campaign season that is off to a heated, if somewhat premature, start.

Fresh from a weeklong stay at his California ranch, which saw him relinquish the political limelight to the Democrats at their national convention, Reagan faced a limited and controversial set of issues upon his return to work in the Oval Office.

Drought relief for farmers, a free-trade agreement with Canada and additional aid to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels were among the concerns on his agenda as Reagan returned from horseback riding, brush clearing and wood stacking at his 688-acre ranch.

At the same time, the charged aftermath of the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta cast a new partisan light on the political decisions to be made in the weeks remaining before the traditional Labor Day start of the fall campaign.

Treasury Secretary James Baker, reportedly considering leaving his Cabinet post to join Vice President George Bush's presidential campaign, accompanied Reagan east on Air Force One.

Wildfires force closing of Yellowstone

Wildfires burning out of control forced officials to close southern portions of Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming as predictions of more dry lightning storms had firefighters in the West preparing for the worst.

The National Weather Service forecast another week of hot, dry weather with dry lightning storms threatening to strike in the Southwest and Northwest.

Yellowstone National Park spokeswoman Joan Anzelmo said park officials had evacuated about 3,000 campers and employees over the weekend as a precaution because of lightning-caused fires near the Grants Village and Lewis Lake areas.

A 22-mile stretch of road leading to the south entrance of the popular park was closed until at least today because of some 9,600 acres of the Snake River Complex burning in three separate areas.

'1812 Overture' prompts police calls.

GLENDALE, Calif. — The Glendale Symphony Orchestra had a larger audience than expected, with residents calling police after hearing explosives used during an outdoor performance of Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture."

It was the second straight year the community orchestra closed its annual outdoor summer concert with the dramatic work outside Glendale High School, and authorities had been forewarned about the explosions, Mayor Carl Raggio said.

"It's a thrill for the youngsters," said Raggio, who attended Saturday night's concert, which he estimated attracted about 5,000 residents of the normally peaceful community.

Dukakis pushes partnership in dream

United Press International

Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis ended an invigorated post-convention campaign swing by calling on voters to join him in making his dream for America come true.

As Dukakis completed his three-day, five-state trip Sunday, the Massachusetts governor's main opponent this fall, Vice President George Bush, spent the weekend crisscrossing the country to rally support before next month's Republican National Convention in New Orleans.

Basking in his triumph at the national convention that nominated him, Dukakis traveled to big and small towns during the weekend, selling his proposal for a partnership with Democrats to win the presidency in November.

"This has been a week we'll never forget," Dukakis told reporters Sunday in St. Louis.

Meanwhile in Albuquerque, N.M., Bush addressed the National Federation of Business and Professional Women Clubs and proposed the creation of a $2 billion refundable tax credit of up to $1,000 per child under age 4 "to recognize the increased costs of families with children." The tax credit for low-income families would phase out as families' incomes rise.

Bush also suggested that employers voluntarily offer certain benefits to meet the needs of working parents.

"I would encourage employer-sponsored child care, flexible work schedules and benefit plans which allow workers to choose the benefits they need," Bush said. "Employers must demonstrate more flexibility, sensitivity to family needs."

Bush made stops Saturday in Memphis, Tenn., where he viewed the drought-lowered Mississippi River, and Tampa, Fla., where he spoke against narcotics trafficking and reiterated his support for the death penalty for people who commit drug-related murders.

After finishing his campaign swing, Dukakis seemed genuinely pleased with the large receptions he received in Texas, California, North Dakota, Missouri and Pennsylvania.

"I hope we can harness that energy and diversity and really make a difference," Dukakis said.

Dukakis and his running mate, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, worked well on the campaign trail together — the polished Texas politician linking arms with the pragmatic Northeastern governor.

Dukakis was blunt, telling crowds he will need every one of their votes to defeat the Republicans in the fall.

In economically depressed Erie, Pa., Dukakis' final stop before he returned home to Boston, the governor called on the crowd of nearly 10,000 to help build "the strongest, the finest grass-roots organization that has ever been put together in a presidential campaign."

Dukakis seemed sure the time was right for his populist message — equal opportunity, family, good jobs, housing and education — to play well nationwide.

"I think what you see is not a request that government do everything but that government be a part. That's the kind of partnership we hope we can build beginning in January 1989," Dukakis said.

He told a Baptist congregation in St. Louis, "I want this to be a country in which everybody shares in our good fortune. What we are really all about in this country is seeking to make the American dream for every single citizen."

In another development, former television evangelist Pat Robertson, whose attempt to win the GOP presidential nomination fizzled early in the political season, said the support of his followers will be crucial to Bush in the presidential election.

"It's crucial, in my estimation, with a margin of victory that tight," Robertson told The Virginian-Pilot and The Ledger-Star of Norfolk.

"The 150 (Robertson delegates) aren't too important, but I got over a million votes" in the primaries, said Robertson, founder of the Christian Broadcasting Network.

"These people could indeed be the margin of victory in Washington, Pennsylvania, in Texas, in Arizona, in Nevada, in these other states where we have a strong presence," Robertson said.

Whistleblower claims reforms still needed

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Bertrand Berube, fired from his senior government post after decrying safety hazards in federal buildings, says his successful fight to regain his job will just be a hollow triumph for "whistleblowers" unless reforms are implemented.

Berube criticized the Merit Systems Protection Board, an agency that is supposed to shield the rights of federal employees who speak out about waste, fraud and abuse in government.

The merit board originally rejected Berube's appeal and only reinstated him as head of the General Services Administration's National Capital Region on orders from a federal appeals court. His effort to win reinstatement took five years.

In an interview and a letter to Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., Berube charged that the merit board rarely conducts thorough investigations of whistleblowers' allegations against federal agencies and consistently sides with the agencies.

He said the agency's Office of Special Counsel "believes the (agency) administrator is completely right and the whistleblower is completely wrong."

The OSC's press secretary, Laura Baumgaertner, declined to comment on Berube's allegations.

Berube, former head of an agency that oversees maintenance of most of Washington's federal buildings, will receive more than a half million dollars in back pay, legal fees and adjusted pension benefits as a result of the board's July 14 ruling. He has spent much of the last five years operating a woodworking business with his sons.

Berube endorsed the Levin-backed Whistleblowers' Protection Act, which is expected to come to a vote soon in the House and Senate. It would dramatically change the role of the board's special counsel, from investigator to a legal representative of the targeted employee, Berube said.

The proposed legislation would establish the special counsel's role as "protecting the whistleblower," rather than the board, according to Louis Clark, executive director of the Government Accountability Project that handled Berube's case.

The proposed legislation also would allow whistleblowers to bypass the OSC and "fight their own battles," Clark said.

In addition, the bill would provide confidentiality for the whistleblower.

Berube cited his own experience with the special counsel, following his firing by GSA administrator Gerald Carmen, as an example of the agency's "hostile" attitude.

He said that, with Clark present, he tried to present documentation of 36 "illegal acts" of the GSA regarding building repairs and maintenance but wound up facing a five-hour interrogation under oath from OSC officials.

"Throughout the questioning, they were trying to find whatever lever they could not to do anything. They were trying to trap him into some kind of harmful admission," Clark said.

Clark and Berube also obtained under the Freedom of Information Act transcripts of phone conversations between OSC investigators and GSA officials, Clark said.

The special counsel's investigation consisted of a "friendly" eight-minute conversation and a 30- to 40-minute conversation between the special counsel and the general counsel of the GSA.

Carlucci says U.S. willing to talk with Iran on American hostages

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci, signaling U.S. willingness to talk with Iran about American hostages held in Lebanon, says an end to the Persian Gulf war could help bring about their freedom.

"We have consistently said we would be prepared to enter into a dialogue with Iran," Carlucci said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press" news program. "All they have to do is designate somebody who is officially in power to talk to us and we'd be glad to talk to them about ... policy issues, hostages, terrorism, what's going on in the region."

As Iran and Iraq consider a cease-fire in their nearly 8-year-old war, Carlucci said the United States is ready to reduce its military presence in the Persian Gulf as soon as it is feasible.

After the broadcast, Carlucci said, "Iran has a decided influence on Hezbollah (the terrorists holding the hostages). If we are successful in bringing an end to the war, perhaps the general easing of tensions will result in some enhanced possibility of the release of the hostages. But it is premature to tell."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, returning Sunday to Washington on Air Force One with President Reagan, agreed the United States would be willing to talk with Iran about the hostages, but said no negotiations or ransom would be considered for their return.

"We are not willing to pay ransom. There is no deal. They took them. They should release them. As far as we are concerned, nothing has changed in regard to the hostages. We haven't had any word that they are going to release them, and that is the main thing that remains to be done," Fitzwater said.

The United States once agreed to sell arms to Iran in what some have described as a deal to exchange arms for hostages. Carlucci contended no such deal would be part of any future discussion with the Iranians.

"We're obviously not going to discuss any quid pro quo, but if the Iranians want to talk to us about the hostage situation and how they're going to go about ... freeing their release, we'd be delighted to talk to them about it," Carlucci said. "I'm not, in the slightest, suggesting there should be any deal for the hostages. That is contrary to our policy."

Carlucci also said that if the fighting ceases between Iran and Iraq, the United States would begin to reduce its presence in the Gulf.

"There's no desire to keep 27 ships there any longer than possible. We tailor our forces to fit the threat and according to the degree of support from our allies," Carlucci said. "We would certainly draw down as soon as feasible."

He also said the United States would end its escort of re-flagged Kuwaiti tankers in the Gulf "as soon as we judge it safe and prudent."

Navy officials disputing audit claiming abuses cost millions

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Two top Navy officials dispute criticism by Pentagon audit chiefs, who say the officials failed to correct internal abuses costing taxpayers millions of dollars and hampering the effectiveness of weapons systems.

The Defense Department's inspector general's office sharply criticized H. Lawrence Garrett III, the Navy's No. 2 official, and Everett Pyatt, its top shipbuilding official, for what it described as a pattern of intransigence during the past year.

"Garrett and Pyatt have sent a message to the acquisition community that if you get caught doing something wrong, you're only going to get your wrist slapped," said Larry Weinrob, who heads an audit team in the Pentagon inspector general's office.

"No one at the top is holding Navy officials and contractors accountable, and that's the problem," he recently told United Press International. Last week, Garrett and Pyatt approved a joint statement rebutting criticism of their performance.

"The Secretary of the Navy has the statutory responsibility for all affairs of the Department of the Navy and must therefore have the freedom to review the facts and circumstances in determining the appropriate management response to a given case. ... The Navy has been in the forefront of efforts with the Defense Department to streamline and strengthen acquisition management," the statement read.

Garrett, who became Navy undersecretary last August and served as acting secretary for a month earlier this year, added in an interview: "My actions have been reasonable and prudent. There's a history of conflict between the inspector general's office and the Navy that began before I got here."

Pyatt has served since June 1981 with the Secretary of the Navy's office.

In his interview with UPI, Weinrob criticized the Navy executives for resisting disciplinary action against procurement officials, including a three-star admiral found to have breached government regulations.

"It makes you wonder," Weinrob said, referring to Garrett and Pyatt, "whether they really care about mismanagement and if they really have their heart in correcting abuses."

Deputy Pentagon Inspector General Derek Vander Schaaf echoed Weinrob's barbed comments, and said, "The secretary of the Navy's office has been fighting us tooth and nail for the longest time."

Auditors with the Pentagon inspector general's office have found serious problems with Navy weapons procurement in at least four reports dating back to June 1, 1987.

U.N. peace teams arrive in gulf

United Press International

MANAMA, Bahrain — Iran said more fighting erupted in the central sector of the Persian Gulf front after Iraq announced it had pulled its forces back to the international border in the south.

Tehran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, or IRNA, said Sunday the fighting took place near Meimak in the central sector, where an Iraqi attack was repulsed. Columns of smoke were seen rising from the battlefield, the news agency said.

There was no confirmation from Baghdad of an attack at Meimak, which Iran said occurred after a United Nations team of experts arrived in Tehran Sunday to prepare for a cease-fire in the nearly 8-year-old gulf war.

The U.N. team arrived hours after Iraq said it completed a pullback of troops making a surprise attack across the border late last week. IRNA said the U.N. team would "study the situation" of Iraqi prisoners of war in Iran.

In a related development, IRNA said Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati flew to New York Sunday for a meeting with U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

The secretary general Friday invited Velayati and Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz to the United Nations to hold discussions on the cease-fire plan.

Iraq announced last week it was prepared to accept U.N. Security Council Resolution 598 of July 20, 1987, calling for a cease-fire and negotiations to end the conflict. Iraq announced its acceptance a year ago.

In a letter to Velayati late last week, Perez de Cuellar said he planned to announce a "D-Day" for the cease-fire shortly.

"On that D-Day, the cease-fire on land, at sea and in the air will come into effect, and I shall dispatch a team of United Nations observers to verify, confirm and supervise the cease-fire," IRNA quoted the letter as saying.

In Baghdad, a military spokesman said Iraqi troops used in the surprise offensive against Iran Friday were pulled back to the international border. He said the withdrawal began late Saturday and was completed by 3 a.m. Sunday.

The official Iraqi News Agency, or INA, said the spokesman denied Iranian claims the offensive was "repulsed." He said the Iraqis "could have penetrated deeper" into Iran had Baghdad so desired, but they withdrew to the border after achieving their objectives.

Iraq said the aim of the offensive was to take more prisoners to balance the number of Iraqi prisoners being held in Iran before the start of cease-fire negotiations.

Baghdad had "no territorial ambitions" in Iran, the spokesman said. But analysts noted that Iraq may have been trying to capture enclaves it had claims to before the war began nearly eight years ago.

Tehran radio monitored in Bahrain said Iraqi troops tried to capture the Iranian port city of Khorramshahr, which the Iraqis call Mohammarah. It was one of the first Iranian cities captured in 1980 when the war began.

In its version of the latest fighting, IRNA said Iranian troops recaptured some 240 square miles from the Iraqis Sunday after fierce battles and "hand-to-hand" combat in which 4,000 Iraqi soldiers were killed or wounded.

Tehran radio said the Iraqis also were forced to retreat at several points along the central sector of the front, including Sumar and Gilan Gharb where heavy fighting was reported Saturday.

Iranian planes carried out 21 bombing runs against the Iraqis in the southern sector, Tehran radio said. Iran said its planes shot down two Iraqi jets and one helicopter in the central sector.

Iraqi bombing raids at Karand and nearby villages Saturday left 7 people dead and some 50 wounded, IRNA said. Another 8 people were killed and several wounded when Iraqi jets dropped cluster bombs near Islamabad Gharb, the news agency said.

Iranian spiritual leader hints at hostage release

United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A call by the spiritual leader of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah group for "a happy ending" to the plight of 16 foreign hostages in Lebanon is seen as a clear invitation for talks with Washington on resolving the issue.

The remarks Sunday by Sheikh Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah came as hopes for the release of nine American and seven other foreign captives in Lebanon were buoyed by Iran's sudden acceptance last week of U.N. terms for a cease-fire in the nearly 8-year-old Persian Gulf war against Iraq.

Fadlallah's apparent overture also coincided with U.S. statements that Washington would be willing to discuss the hostage issue with Iran, but would not negotiate any deals for their release.

The foreign hostages in Lebanon are believed held in Beirut's suburbs by captors with suspected links to the pro-Iranian Hezbollah led by Fadlallah.

"Some states with hostages in Lebanon exploited this affair for the interest of their control in the world. America has complicated the issue," the bearded leader said.

Seven blacks killed in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Security forces shot and killed four blacks who threw grenades from their car while stopped at a roadblock, wounding 12 policemen, authorities said. The deaths raised to seven the number of blacks killed in a weekend of unrest.

The four blacks were shot on the highway between the so-called independent homeland of Bophuthatwana and the town of Lichtenburg, 120 miles west of Johannesburg, at about 11:20 a.m. Sunday, according to a report released by police headquarters in Pretoria.

A police spokesman said those in the car lobbed two hand grenades at security forces when they were stopped at the roadblock, wounding five policemen. Police then opened fire on the vehicle, killing two black men and a black woman.

A fourth black ran from the car and produced and primed another hand grenade, prompting police to open fire, killing the man, the report said. The grenade detonated as the man fell, wounding seven other members of the security forces, the spokesman said.

Philippine military losing to guerrillas

MANILA, Philippines — The Philippine military tacitly acknowledged today that it is losing the war against communist guerrillas amid rebel predictions of direct U.S. involvement in the bloody 19-year-old insurgency.

President Corason Aquino was expected to touch on the government's counterinsurgency operations during her state-of-the-nation address to Congress today.

Armed forces chief Gen. Renato de Villa, in a statement released by military headquarters, confirmed the existence of a secret review of the war against the communist-led New People's Army.

While de Villa did not reveal the contents of the confidential document, opposition leaders Francisco Tatad and Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile said last week that it showed the military lost major engagements against the 25,200-member NPA in the first five months of this year and was losing more firearms to the guerrillas.

De Villa, who did not deny the opposition leaders' reports, said an investigation was under way on how Tatad and Enrile, the former defense secretary sacked by Aquino, secured a copy of the review conducted by general headquarters.

Meanwhile, the communist political wing, the National Democratic Front, predicted in a statement released to news agencies Sunday that the Aquino government will renew the lease on strategic U.S. military bases in the Philippines that expires in 1991.

Ten injured in clash at airport

TAIPEI, Taiwan — Ten people were injured when about 1,000 protesters clashed with police at the airport after authorities threw out an exiled dissident who tried to sneak back into the country, newspapers and police said.

Chaos broke out early Sunday when an opposition politician facing charges for instigating riots told a estimated 1,000 of his supporters that a blacklisted government critic was denied entry to Taiwan and forcibly deported, newspapers said.

Former journalist Chen War-shen, 38, rushed past immigration officials when they discovered alterations on her passport, authorities said.

Wearing a wig and carrying a passport bearing her sister's name, Chen was intercepted by airport police and immigration officials who took her back to a Singapore-bound plane. Chen, who has lived in exile in the United States for nine years, had arrived aboard the plane from Los Angeles.

National Assemblyman Hong Chi-chang, who faces charges for allegedly instigating violent riots that erupted during a May 20 farmer's protest, was aboard the same plane.

Hong, a member of the opposition Democratic Progressive Party, said he had "no idea" that Chen was on the same flight until he met her in the transit lounge at the Honolulu airport.

The crowd, upon learning Chen was denied entry, smashed windows and attacked police, while several dozen others lay on the floor of the entry lounge. The crowd also turned on two reporters, who were mistaken for undercover agents, reporters said. Eight police officers were also injured, police said.

Merchants protest killing of Palestinian

JERUSALEM — Merchants in Bethlehem staged a general strike today to protest the previous day's slaying of a Palestinian from a nearby village, and military sources said soldiers shot and killed a second Arab man Sunday.

Israel Radio said protesters in Bethlehem hurled several Molotov cocktails at army patrols during the night, following the slaying at nearby Beit Jala, and Bethlehem merchants kept their shops closed today to protest the killing.

Soldiers fired tear gas and rubber bullets Sunday to disperse Arab demonstrators from Beit Jala who were trying to reach and block off a main road between Bethlehem and Hebron south of Jerusalem, an army spokesman said.

Clashes continued in Beit Jala and soldiers opened fire, the spokesman said.

Jiryis Kuncar, 42, was shot in the abdomen during the protest and died after undergoing several hours of surgery, the army and a hospital spokeswoman said. Beit Jala residents denied Kuncar was demonstrating, claiming he was wounded as he sat in his home.

Military sources said a second Arab man was killed Sunday during a clash at Qabatiya near Jenin, 50 miles north of Jerusalem. The clash erupted after Palestinian residents visited a cemetery as part of the Muslim feast day of Id al-Adha, the sources said.

Israel renews ties with Soviet Union

MOSCOW — For the first time since Israeli-Soviet relations were severed after the 1967 Six Day War, Israeli diplomats will arrive Thursday to resume work in the Soviet Union, Western diplomats say.

Although officially the Israelis have been given two-month visas, diplomats believe their arrival on July 28 will effectively mark the resumption of a permanent Israeli presence in the Soviet capital.

The delegation will balance a similar Soviet group that has been in Israel for the past year. While the Soviets ostensibly are looking only at property left behind in 1967 and issuing passports to Soviet citizens resident in Israel, their 90-day visas have been extended repeatedly.

Check complications arising from catheter

Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm female, and recently spent a few days in the hospital with a catheter. Three days after leaving the hospital, I started wetting the bed. That kept up for a few weeks. I've not had a "accident" for a week now, but dare not be unprepared. What do I have to look forward to?

programming them inappropriately. Modern pacemakers are much less susceptible to this effect. In addition, there is less leakage from today's microwave devices than from those made years ago. Your husband's cardiologist is the person who can best answer

DEAR READER: Patients can encounter two common problems from urinary catheters. The first is temporary incontinence. The rubber catheter can stretch the opening of the bladder that is controlled by a ring of muscle called a sphincter. When the catheter is removed, there may be a time lag before the sphincter regains its normal function. This can mean several days of dribbling and wetting, because bladder control is lost until the sphincter tightens up and works properly.

The second, more serious complication of catheters is infection. Ordinarily, the sphincter prevents outside bacteria from entering the bladder. However, a catheter provides a natural conduit for infection, not only because it is foreign to the body, but because germs can work their way around the catheter into the urinary tract. Usually, infection causes discomfort on urination, fever and blood in the urine.

I suspect that you experienced temporary incontinence from the mechanical stretching of your sphincter. Nonetheless, I advise you to check with your doctor, who may wish to obtain a urine culture to rule out infection.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband, 66, just received a pacemaker. Are there any appliances, other than microwave ovens, which affect pacemakers?

DEAR READER: Pacemakers are often re-programmed by external devices that transmit impulses in the microwave frequency. Patients with older units had to be careful about microwave exposure because the radiation could adversely affect the pacemakers by re-

programming them inappropriately. Modern pacemakers are much less susceptible to this effect. In addition, there is less leakage from today's microwave devices than from those made years ago. Your husband's cardiologist is the person who can best answer

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
When you and partner hold upwards of 26 high-card points and have balanced distribution with no eight-card fit in either major, you will probably end up playing in three no-trump. This is usually the right contract. But if either hand is unbalanced with voids or singletons, there can be serious transportation difficulties. It may then work out well to play in a 4-3 trump fit.

The one-club opening and one-diamond response were normal. South rebid one heart, and North tried one spade. When South continued with two clubs instead of bidding no-trump, it was obvious that both hands had ruffing values. So North shot out four hearts.

The deal was played in duplicate competition, and North-South did quite well. Three no-trump was the most

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

By Bernice Bede Osof
YOUR BIRTHDAY
July 26, 1988

In the year ahead you may undertake an extremely ambitious project that will require your best effort to succeed. This goal can be attained through tenaciousness.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you press too hard today where work is concerned, it could prematurely fatigue you and cut down on efficiency. Pace is of utmost importance. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail #2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't take risks on situations that are vague or only partially prepared. Before making your move, be sure everything is crystal clear.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) There is a possibility you may be faced with an unusual domestic crisis today. Everything can be managed in stride if you do not lose your cool.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be helpful where you can today but don't be used. Co-workers may try to dump extra work on you that they should be taking care of themselves.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you hope to come out in the black today, it looks like you are going to have to manage your affairs with the same caution and prudence a banker uses.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There won't be harmony in your household today if you set the example with a cranky disposition. Don't expect others to be nice if you aren't.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) An argumentative acquaintance will want to get in the last words if you both disagree today. Don't prolong the issue, let this person close the chapter.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)

You're on thin ice today in arrangements with friends where something of material value or money is at stake. Keep this in mind if things gets sticky.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) What you set out to do today can be achieved, provided you do not do something irrational at the last minute that could upset the apple cart. Be consistent until conclusions are realized.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today's plans aren't likely to work as well as they should if they are overloaded with emotional content. Be logical and objective.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be on guard today so that you are not drawn into a development with a friend that could lead to an undesirable obligation. Stand up to pressure.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Cooperation and teamwork may not be your long suits today, yet these ingredients will be essential in order to further ambitions. Adjust where necessary.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is in regard to the mother whose husband neglected to give her a Mother's Day gift, stating "You're not my mother."
I, too, went through that for many years, and felt hurt until I read a letter in your column that said: "My husband never remembers anniversaries or special days. He seldom brings home gifts, but he's a hard worker, doesn't run around, he's there when I need him, he's a good father, takes us places, spends his days off with his family, and who could ask for anything more? His giving of himself far outweighs any gift he could buy me."
I have never complained—nor have I ever forgotten that letter.

J.B., INDEPENDENCE, MO.
P.S. And an extra bonus was that eventually he chose to remember special days because he wanted to.

DEAR J.B.: If a letter in my column can change an attitude, comfort the hurting, solve a problem, open a closed mind or provide a chuckle, my day is made! Thanks for writing.

DEAR ABBY: Our neighbor's child is only 14 years old. He's 5 foot 11 and weighs about 250 pounds. His mother and I were talking and feel that he needs help. I told her I would write and ask you if there is a group to help young people who are compulsive eaters. He is such a sweet and good young man, but people make fun of him and he gets very hurt.
Although his folks have tried everything he often eats until his stomach hurts! How can we help? I used to go to AA meetings with a friend, and if there were something like that for eaters, maybe he would go.

CONCERNED NEIGHBOR IN LOS ANGELES

DEAR CONCERNED NEIGHBOR: There is an organization like AA for compulsive eaters of all ages. It's Overeaters Anonymous. It is listed in the telephone directory, and there are chapters in almost every major city. I have attended some of the meetings, and a more compassionate group of people you will rarely encounter.
There is no shaming, no weighing, no embarrassment. Just a loving fellowship of people with a common problem—being overweight and wanting to do something about it. Contact them and put the boy in touch. There's no charge. Please let me hear from you again. I care.

DEAR ABBY: I had to laugh when I read the letter from "Aching Heart," the high school girl who was in love with her teacher at school.
I'm now 29 and married to a great guy, but when I was a senior in high school, I, too, was "madly in love" with one of my teachers. I tried everything to get him to notice me, but he wouldn't have anything to do with me.
Exactly two days after graduation, he called me and asked me to go out with him. I had no interest whatsoever in seeing him. We never went out. I went on to receive a degree from the University of Minnesota and dated lots of great guys—and even a few jerks.

It's amazing how I could have been so crazy about someone when he was unattainable, but as soon as he was within my reach, I lost all interest. I think it has a lot to do with "forbidden fruit." don't you?

BEEN THERE
DEAR BEEN THERE: Possibly. But while forbidden fruit is said to taste sweeter, it usually spoils faster.

DEAR READERS: Talk about vision concerning television, read on: "I believe television is going to be the test of the modern world, and that in this new opportunity to see beyond the range of our vision, we shall discover either a new and unbearable disturbance of the general peace, or a saving radiance in the sky. We shall stand or fall by television—of that I am quite sure."
E.B. WHITE (Harper's magazine, October 1938)

DEAR ABBY: My mother recently told me about a friend of hers who went to her doctor with a serious respiratory problem and was told: "If you do not stop smoking, you can find yourself another doctor!"
I want to share this with you because I thought it was a brilliant way of telling a patient that if she is not willing to participate in maintaining her own health, the doctor is not going to spin his wheels doing it for her.
Likewise, I have a friend who was told by her pediatrician that if she didn't buy an infant restraint device for carrying her child in the car, she could find herself another pediatrician.

I'm wondering if you've ever heard of other doctors giving patients these kinds of ultimatums? And what do you think of such doctors?

JIM KERR, LAS VEGAS

DEAR JIM: I've never heard of doctors who have given such ultimatums to their patients, but I applaud their professional integrity as well as their courage. No physician wants to "lose" a patient—one way or the other.

DEAR ABBY: Hooray for the letter from "Second Choice," whose friend with one of those "call waiting" signals on her phone put "Choice" on "hold" because the friend got a call from someone who was more important.
I had "call waiting" on my phone for one month, then I had it disconnected. My friends ask me why I don't have "call waiting" anymore when they call me and my line is busy. I tell them that I can talk to only one person at a time anyway, so I don't really need it.
Abby, I think phones were better when we used Dixie cups and a string when we were kids, rather than with all the electronic gadgets that are on phones these days. What do you think?

CLICKED OFF

DEAR CLICKED: I'm not prepared to go back to two Dixie cups and a string, but I agree that the "call waiting" signal is a rude intruder. I wonder how many people have canceled theirs?

Male, female students agree: housework should be shared

CHICAGO — The husbands of tomorrow won't shun housework, if attitudes reflected in today's home ec classes are any indication, reports the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers.
Teenage students nationwide were surveyed on their use of household appliances and attitudes toward housework. The findings of the survey indicate the majority of teens believe housework should be shared.
A majority of males also voted for sharing food shopping (62.4 percent), meal preparation (62.4 percent), dishwashing (61.9 percent), housecleaning (57.9 percent) and laundry (57.9 percent).
Not surprisingly, teenage females endorsed housework-sharing in even greater percentages.
Male and female opinions were in closest harmony over food shopping. Nearly 60 percent of females and 56.4 percent of males said both spouses should handle the task.

BOYS IN HOME EC CLASSES BELIEVE IN SHARING HOUSEWORK

Most teenage boys with some home management training say that both males and females should do household tasks.

	Job For Both Sexes	Job For Females Only
Prepare meals	62.4%	34.7%
Wash dishes	61.9%	35.1%
Clean house	57.9%	39.6%
Do laundry	57.9%	40.1%
Shop for food	56.4%	38.1%

IN THE SERVICE

Airman 1st Class William F. Ham, son of John S. and Kay Ham of Altamonte Springs, has graduated from Air Force basic training at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas.
During the six weeks of training the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special training in human relations.
In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate degree through the community college of the Air Force.
Ham is a 1986 graduate of Lake Mary High School.
Pvt. Barry S. Sasser, son of James O. Sasser of Longwood, has completed one station unit training (OSUT) at the U.S. Army Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga.
OSUT is a 12 week period that combines basic combat training and advanced individual training.
The training included weapons qualifications, squad tactics, patrolling, landmine warfare, field communications and combat operations. Completion of this course qualifies the soldier as a light-weapons infantryman and as an indirect-fire crewman.
