Shish Kebab for 4 to 6 Use shoulder or leg of lamb cut into 116 or 2-inch cubes. For 2 pounds of solid meat, place in a large bowl one medium-sliced enion, a few bay leaves, it reaspoon pepper and 2 teaspoons salt. Addilamb. Blend 1 cup of dry red wine (lemon juice may be used instead of wine) and is cup olive oil; pour over meat mixture. Soak the lamb cubes in this thin seasoned sauce for several hours to give the meat a distinctive flavor and prevent dryness.

Now you're ready for the skewers, Alternate marinated lamb with bay leaves, using about 4 to 5 meat cubes for each mutal skewers, (If you don't have metal skewers, try green twigs.) Broit about ten minutes, or until browned, turning only once. The bay leaves will begin to glow near the edges imparting a savory, penetrating flavor to the meat.

With your Shish kebab you might serve rice pilaff or tossed salad-or that good old American favorite, corn on the cob.

Adult Driver Training

Much is heard about teaching young people to drive so that they will behave as responsible citizens on the road when they reach adulthood. Perhaps more should be heard about teaching adults to drive.

The idea of driver training for boys and girls of high school age is an excellent one. If such programs were conducted through_ out the nation, we would soon have the first generation of drivers trained for their responsibilities.

Yet the fact is that, for all the talk about wild teen-age driving, adults are responsible for the biggest share of poor highway per_ formance. In the great traffic movementsthe surge of work-bound drivers in the morn_ ing, the surge homeward in the evening, the rush into the great outdoors on weekends -adults make up the bulk of those who are indulging in antics that mark the irres_ ponsible driver.

Millions of adults now driving in the United States have received their licenses without taking any tests whatsoever. Millions of others have passed minimum state tests but have never enjoyed an hour of competent driver training. A widespead program of training for adult drivers, including not only car-handling skills but the attitudes and discipline needed in a good driver, would be expensive.

But the present system is expensive too, in terms of a high accident rate that annually burdens the nation with terrible losses of life and property and time. There is at least a fighting chance that those losses could be drastically cut by a program of driver training coupled with strict anforcement of traffic laws.

Mineo ing ingenue-Luana Patten. This sparkles in this one and shows is the same Luana who, at the an amazing versatility for a age of six, was starred in "Song of the South," "So Dear to My Heart" and many other Disney live action films.

Among the other pulchestad's nous lasses who share attention with pretty Miss Patten are Sue George, April Kent, who is June Havoca daughter, and the Volkmann twins, Susan and Caryl, who became nationally famous after they finished their stial in this picture by taking of for New York and displaying erudition that matched their fooks on "The $4,000 Question."

The male contingent, in addition to Mineo and Saxon, boasts a talented youngster named Rod McKuen, who not only acre well and sings well but who also wrote words and music of the songe he sings and collaborated on the other.

The chief adult roles are handled with sympathetic underatanding by Fay Wray and Edward C. Platt as Saxon's pacent Obsession" opposite Jane portray him properly. Then I rents and Douglas Fowley as Robert Taylor as Holtywood's of the man. He has never been Baby" is modern melody at its ranking dramatic leading man, an actor, knows nothing about hest, and there's plenty of it. It made Hudson one of the top the theatre or camers, but, stran- aix numbers being both played cely, he has given me more conand sung and excerpts from The third beacon shining on the fi-tence than any other individual ten others being played. Most of path of Hudson's success is I have ever known. To know him is has the rock 'n' roll beat but some soft and dreamy ballade are heard too.

The accent has been on youth throughout. Not only in the east composed mainly of youngsters is not long past his 30th birthday, and the direcor, Mchard Bartlett, is only 31.
