Fire Chief Target

The Casselberry's Fire Chief's car was set on fire early this morning. It was the second car fire reported in that city within 11 minutes and five blocks of each other.

The state fire marshal's office is investigating the incidents, according to police.

The city owns the 1974 Plymouth Fury driven by Fire Chief Roy LaBossiere. The car was parked in front of his home at 800 Delaney Way when the fire started at 12:31 a.m.

The chief, according to his 18-year-old daughter Janice, had left the house to investigate the earlier reported car fire.

Police said the chief's car sustained minor damage to the right front hood area. The fire was extinguished by the Casselberry Fire Department.

At 12:40 a.m., Walter Townsend, reported he heard a loud bang in front of his home at 800 Delaney Way. He ran outside to find his neighbor's car on fire, police said.

Townsend used his water hose to put out the fire in the 1972 Plymouth Coupe owned by Marie Lyons of 804 Delaney Way. Lyons at both fires reported seeing a man, described as having reddish-colored hair and a mustache, driving a station wagon in the area of both fires when they started and again when firemen arrived to put them out.

Townsend reported he was questioned in the presence of a court stenographer, and Monday night I'll ask the commission to authorize spending about $200 to purchase that transcript and keep it on file," City Manager Warren E. Knowles asserted today.

That transcript, according to city hall officials, will show that one of the two police officers, either the lieutenant or captain, also said in his statement not only did he never say he overheard Butler make that promise, but that the first he ever heard of any promise was when LaPeters told him about it.

Det. Jones, a 46-year-old, 11-year-veteran of the department, said this morning there apparently was some question over what was said to him just prior to taking a sergeantcy examination — coincidentally during the EEOC discrimination meeting.

The detective involved, Walter L. Jones Jr., confirmed this morning he admitted he never was promised a promotion to keep quiet during the federal investigation into alleged discrimination.

That probe was conducted by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC).

Some findings also reportedly will show that the captain and lieutenant who spoke to LaPeters as his sources for the allegation, and they never overheard Butler make the promise to the detective, according to the detective asserted.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Terrorists: We'll Swap Hostages For Clergymen

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Left-wing terrorists holding dozens of hostages in the National Palace since Tuesday said today they would release their captives in exchange for a safety escort of bishops and diplomats, and flee to Panama.

The guerrillas' leader, code-named "Zero," said the government has surrendered all their demands: freedom for their comrades in prison, payment of a ransom and publication of a lengthy leftist manifesto.

A government spokesman confirmed there had been a "compromise" agreement with the terrorists, and said 83 prisoners would be turned over to them.

Soviets Chide Reporters

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Foreign Ministry today called in two American reporters and reprimanded them for their alleged disservice to a Moscow court during the trial of a libel case brought against them by Soviet television officials.

New York Times reporter Craig Whitney, 34, and Baltimore Sun reporter Harold Piper, 39, were called to an informal meeting with Lev V. Krylov, deputy chief of the Foreign Ministry press department.

He said they deserved to be stripped of their accreditation — which would bring automatic expulsion from the Soviet Union — but the Foreign Ministry press department had decided to confine itself to delivering a warning.

Violence In Iranian Town

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Disturbances rocked the Persian Gulf town of Abadan today for the third straight day of public protest over authorities' alleged failure to control a cinema fire that killed nearly 400 people Saturday.

Christina: $150 Apartment

MOSCOW (UPI) — Christina, Ossie's Kazanova said today she and her new Russian husband have rented a seven-room apartment in Moscow. Christina, who married Sergei Kazan Aug. 1 in a simple ceremony at the Palace of Weddings, said she is paying the equivalent of $150 for the apartment, which is located near Moscow's Botanical Garden.

Casselberry Boy Dies

A three-year-old Casselberry boy who was kept alive with the aid of life-support machines since apparently falling into a neighbor's pool on Aug. 9, died.

The neighbor, William Kuechel, 61, Forest Drive, has been charged with violating a city ordinance requiring self-latching gates, according to Casselberry Police Chief George Karcher. The chief said Kuechel faces a possible $100 fine, 90 days in jail or both.

The neighbor, Daniel P. Green, 37, of Peter and Linda Green's of 305 Forest Drive, was riding his tricycle in front of his home, according to police. When his mother went to check on him, she saw the abandoned tricycle and the gate across the street.

Still, despite Jones' version of the incident, city hall officials stated Monday's investigation will show the detective was never told to keep quiet about anything — not even his eligibility to become a sergeant.

"I believe the transcript will bear that out," Karcher said. "He stated, 'I think the transcript will show that the detective never was told to keep quiet about anything; and that he was not eligible to become a sergeant.'

A second Police Department spokesman explained the procedure for officers taking oaths for promotion: "We don't send or take down one officer at a time for the examination. A date is set, and a notice posted on the bulletin board, urging those eligible to take the exam to sign up. It's generally common knowledge around the department when the men sign up — who they are, that is."

Will Voters Have Say On Deannex?

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

WILL or will not Tuscawilla planned unit development, which is 90 percent of the territory of Winter Springs, be deannexed?

That is a question on the minds of many. But the more intriguing question is whether the people of Tuscawilla will be permitted to vote on the issue.

The Winter Springs City Council listened this week as an ordinance of deannexation for the planned unit development was introduced, but took no action on the measure. A public hearing on the issue has not been set for Sept. 19.

City Attorney Thomas Lang said today the reading of the ordinance was the method of introducing the issue and that it really wasn't necessary for any action to be taken. "It just started the wheels in motion."

Perspective

in the law, however, is one seeking a referendum.

It was reported that Daniels told Tuscawilla homeowners at a meeting at Red Dog School on Aug. 10 that he could not support an ordinance of deannexation without going to a referendum.

"It would not be feasible and I could not support it (deannexation without a referendum)," he was reported as saying at the time. "The people asked for a referendum and I am doing so."

Daniels said, Wednesday night, he had no report of his remarks nor did he support an ordinance of deannexation without going to a referendum.

"I want to make clear that I hope we would not deannex against people's wishes."

Lang said the procedure now would be that a week after the hearing, Sept. 16, the council may opt to take any of three actions:

The board may place the ordinance on record and then read and approve it, in which case, Lang said, the ordinance would become law and the area would be deannexed. Or, 15 percent of the registered voters of Tuscawilla would have to sign a petition for a referendum or the council could move before adoption of the ordinance to a referendum.

Long added that, since a majority vote to approve the ordinance on record reading, no referendum would be held in the ordinance.

Opponents, Tom O'Brien and Laurent Pollard both said today that they favor a referendum.

The council set the ordinance on record and then read and approve it, in which case, Lang said, the ordinance would become law and the area would be deannexed.

Long added that his opinion that a feasibility study on deannexation had to be completed before the council could move toward deannexation remains firm.

The council set the ordinance on the issue, anticipating completion of the feasibility study prior to the hearing. State law requires advertising of the public hearing for four consecutive weeks.

"Until the council votes to adopt an ordinance of deannexation, it really hasn't done anything by having the reading of the ordinance and the put the issue in referendum or to reject a referendum."

Long continued that, once a majority vote to approve the ordinance on record reading, no referendum would be held in the ordinance.

Councilman John Daniels said as he reads the law the council has three options: to adopt the ordinance, to adopt the ordinance and put the issue in referendum or to reject the ordinance.

Daniels said, however, a referendum is not required by state law for creation of boundaries. He said that a petition containing the signatures of 15 percent of the registered voters in Tuscawilla area would be required.

Extend ERA

Vote? Boo!

The Aug. 16 House vote extending by 39 months the deadline for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment raises fundamental questions of fairness and political philosophy.

The vote, if seconded by the Senate, also makes it far more likely that the courts, not the states, will ultimately decide the fate of the amendment.

The ERA extension passed by the House would permit states that have rejected ratification, Illinois for example, to change their minds.

But the House specifically defeated an amendment that would have allowed the converse: States that have ratified to rescind their action.

That is blatantly unfair.

Legally, the extension would almost certainly cast the entire ratification process and ultimately the amendment itself into limbo.

Twenty-four of the 35 states that have ratified the ERA indicated at the time of their action that the original seven-year time limit was a material consideration in their decision.

Of the states were explicit in their insistence that their ratification was conditioned upon the seven-year limitation.

If the 39-month extension approved by the House becomes law, there can be little doubt that some of the ratifying states and ERA opponents will go to court to determine if these ratification actions remain binding.

They will have a persuasive case to make.

Indeed, there is even a question of whether Congress, having submitted to the states a proposed constitutional amendment together with its ratification time limit, can extend that limit. This, too, is almost certain to be litigated.

Finally, there is the profound question of the political wisdom of a ratification extension.

The ratification process itself is clearly intended to insure that amendments to the Constitution enjoy the widest possible popular support as a condition of their addition to the Constitution.

In the case of the ERA, its popular support may be eroding rather than increasing.

Certainly, its opposition has grown and deepened in the six and one-half years the states have considered the amendment.

Thirty of the 35 states that have ratified the ERA did so within a year of its submission to the states.

Since 1973, only five additional states that originally approved the amendment have rescinded their action.

Three states — Wisconsin, New York and New Jersey — have rejected the amendment in referendum votes on adding it to their state constitutions.

Under these circumstances, we cannot support an extension of the ratification deadline and we urge the Senate to correct it, including the rescinding language, or to reject it.

Raising Wrong Fuss

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The Carter administration, unwilling or unable to tackle the really significant governmental contributors to inflation, continues to zero in on side issues of symbolic importance only.

A prime example is the hand-wringing now going on among Carter's inflation fighters over a Labor Department proposal to raise white collar minimum salary standards by an income-rattling 45 to 7 percent.

Unlike the hourly minimum wage rates which Congress establishes by law, white collar minimums for administrative, executive and professional employees are set by the secretary of labor.

In practice, they are normally raised whenever the official minimum wage goes up — as it did last year and will again in January. The Labor Department tries to keep the salary minimum high enough to encourage employers from evading the overtime requirements of the minimum wage law by arbitrarily designating workers as "professionals" or "executives" exempt from coverage of the minimum wage.

The Labor Department's wage and hours division has proposed increasing the salary minimum for executive and administrative professionals from $150 to $225 a week, and the minimum for professionals from $170 to $260 per week.

There has been no increase in the white collar minimum since April 1975 and department officials insist the proposed boost would have little real effect since a majority of employees in such jobs already earn more than the new minimum salary.

The numbers involved here are very small, insignificant in terms of the work force as a whole, "one Labor Department official said.

Nonetheless, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall has not yet approved the new minimums and probably won't for some time because White Collar Watchers are worried about the psychological impact of blunting off 45 percent increases for any group of workers.

"These figures are sure as hell within our guidelines," grumbled on White House official. "What does George Meany say if we allow that?"

There's only one problem with such reluctance. It's misplaced.

For inflationary impact, the white collar minimums are virtually meaningless — while the increases in the hourly minimum wage voted last year by Congress and approved by the president had a far greater effect because they involve more workers are involved.

The administration has made no move to such a slowdown in these rates, which went from $150 to $170 a week, and will reach $170 to $200 in January. Why not? Fear of the political consequences from such a cutback.

Constituents urged for weeks to reach an agreement that had majorities of both House and Senate members of the conference committee, but they had left precise wording of many things to the staff.

WASHINGTON Widespread and western military abuses at every level of government have helped trigger the taxpayer revolt. Property owners and tax defayers are incensed that they keep filling a leaky bucket which spills a stream of wasted dollars before reaching the fiscus.

A starting menu of welfare cheats, it turns out, are federal workers who collect from the taxpayers with both hands. They have been found out by Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano who last fall ordered a comprehensive crackdown on welfare frauds.

Computers are being used to match the federal payroll against the welfare rolls. He has now received a confidential progress report which shows 21,000 federal employees have been drawing government pay and welfare checks from the taxpayers at the same time. Of those, 1,700 are on the military rolls.

Government workers who are misappropriating public funds, the Justice Dept. says, are being targeted for termination.

The snappy outfits worn by members of LTD CB Club, Sanford Chapter, won them trophies as best dressed club in Washington, N.C., Jacksonville and Melbourne CB get-togethers. Trophies for traveling the farthest were won in Washington and in Interlachen. The club is sponsoring a coffee break and dance Saturday from 7 p.m. to midnight at the Police Benevolent Building on 17-92 Sanford to benefit children with hearing problems. The $1 donation for admission will also make you eligible to win the door prizes—an in-dash AM and FM unit and a 10-channel CB radio and antenna.

But where did it come from, if the mascara was okay when packaged? Wilson found contamination during use is virtually impossible to detect.

Wilson's research showed that not good enough. Half the mascara in his random sampling was contaminated with various bacteria — and 30 percent contained potentially harmful fungi.

Sharing the billing are two groups, "Images of Elvis" and "Rough Mix." A $2 donation is asked at the door.

Proceeds will go to the Optimist Club to support their efforts to help needy children in Seminole County.

The South Seminole-Altona Optimist Club is sponsoring an evening of music Saturday at the Altamonte Springs Civic Center, beginning at 8 p.m.

A rally of school employees gathered over the Seminole County school board's decision to freeze salaries until after collective bargaining has been tentatively set for Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Seminole High School stadium.

The deciding factor on whether the rally will be held depends on what progress is made at a negotiating session scheduled for Monday afternoon at Lyman High School.

The rally will be open to all of the schools system's 2700 employees who are involved in collective bargaining.

These include the teachers, bus drivers, non-instructional personnel and clerical employees.

This was the message delivered to school employees Thursday night after they had finished an informational picket outside the school board office.

The deciding factor on whether the rally will be held depends on what progress is made at a negotiating session scheduled for Monday afternoon at Lyman High School.

The union is now encouraging a strike but at the rally we will consider all alternatives," More said.

The SEA spokesman noted the alternatives considered would be a continuation of the informational picket, either at the schools or the school board office, mimeographing copies of the SEA position and distributing the copies to county residents and going to work and "doing just what is required of us, no more or less."

If the rally is held, the teachers will be given the opportunity to decide what other form of action should be taken to "tell the school board members how we feel," said Bill Moore, SEA president.

The school employees began their picketing after the school board refused to reconsider

Per attorney William Hutchison, Ryan directed to review SCOPA personnel records to determine if Ryan's absence without contacting the board or furnishing written notice was justified for firing.

"Frankly, I haven't reviewed the personnel policy and I would like to do so, because whatever you do want to know, we have your facts right," Hutchison told the board.

Agree made the motion to review the Ryan's pay. He had indicated earlier he favored firing Ryan.

"You can contact him, he was supposed to call him last Wednesday and I asked that they tell him to call me and I have heard nothing," commented Bo Simpson.

Simpson suggested the board try to make formal contact with Ryan, notifying him of his concern before taking any action.

"If you can contact him, you're doing a damn good job," responded Agree, "because I've been trying to contact him for two weeks and he (Blackshear) has too. I don't know what he's going to do. If an employee of mine didn't show up one day and I didn't know where he was I'd fire him."

The board has power to fire Ryan, according to Hutchison.

"You can fire Jim Ryan, or me or Dennis Dolgner," said Hutchison, "but with Jim Ryan's long association with this place if you fired him and he came in here tomorrow with a perfectly acceptable explanation for his absence and his behavior, you'd feel pretty foolish."

It contained demands for the release of Sirhan, Hess, four Germans — some of whom were not even in jail — and the five Croatians, Zvonko Basic, his wife Juliane, Frane Post, Mark Vlasic and Peter Metzger.

Postal Strike Nears

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's largest postal union has rejected a proposed three-year contract, increasing chances of an illegal nationwide strike next week that would press federal troops into mail-carrying service, union officials said today.

An official count showed 78,487 members of the American Postal Workers Union voted in favor of the contract, but union officials said approximately 94,400 members voted to reject it. The official "no" vote count by an independent firm was expected later today.

About 100,000 of the 200,000 postal clerks in the union failed to participate in the balloting, union officials said.

Federal mediators promptly attempted to avert a walkout by scheduling an alternative meeting with officials of the Postal Service, the APWU and the National Association of Letter Carriers.

Earlier in the week, the 180,000-member letter carriers union announced its members had voted by a 4-3 ratio against accepting the proposed agreement, calling for a 15 percent wage and cost-of-living increases.

Leaders of both the APWU and the letter carriers unions are now under pressure from the rank-and-file members to set strike deadlines if the Postal Service fails to reopen talks early next week.

President Bennett Andrews of the APWU called a news conference to announce his union's position.

But a high official of the APWU said the union has "mandates" from its recent national convention to set a strike deadline if the Postal Service fails to return to the bargaining table within five days.

"We'll carry them out if necessary," he said. "Hopefully, management will try to keep us from having to go on strike by returning to the bargaining table."

But Postmaster General William R. Allen and his top aides refused to say whether they will resume negotiations.

"At this point, I can't tell you anything," a Postal Service spokesman said.

Bolger has insisted that in the event any of the four postal unions reject the contract offer, the dispute must be submitted to binding arbitration, the mediator said. Bolger also said such stalemates under law, "we have said any greater wage increases would prevent him from meeting his goal of no postal rate increases for 2½ to 3 years."

"We'll carry them out if necessary," he said. "Hopefully, management will try to keep us from having to go on strike by returning to the bargaining table."
