er used by, four-whoeled vehicles on Florida wildlife management areas, unless provided by special area regulations.

Copeland said, "A change in regulations will open a section of the St. Johns River for the taking of frogs and turtles. The section affected is lecated between State Read 46 and the Kinsimmee-Melhourne highway. In taking this action, the Commission is being consistent with its general policy of regulations with a section and not at presecting wildlife but avoiding regulations with a section of the minimal most at presecting wildlife but a coping with the problem outside its jurisdiction, such as airboats."

Other regulation changes will prohibit the shooting of turtles with firearms and remove the black and turkey vulture from the list of unprotected birds. The protection of the vulture is designed to help protect the American eagle by removing the chance shooting of large unidentified birds. There is a regulation that will allow property owners to kill vultures when the birds are destroying livestock.
