Airport disputes higher customs' fees

By MARIA OREM
Herald Staff Writer

The Orlando Sanford Airport is not ready to accept a U.S. customs designation which would mean higher airport fees for international passengers.

U.S. Customs notified airport officials that its user fee status will be changed to a port of entry destination by Nov. 10, pushing fees from $2.50 to $6.50 for each arriving international passenger. The fee is paid by the airlines to the airport.

The news came as a surprise to the Sanford Authority, which had planned to apply for the designation in 1998, according to Steve Cooke, director of aviation.

Cooke called the move political and attributed custom's decision to a bizarre situation which started in Bangor, Maine many years ago.

In the early 1990s, to avoid long waits at the Orlando International Airport, British passengers flew into Bangor, went through customs there, refueled, and then proceeded into Or-See Customs. Page 5A

American College Test scores edge up

From Staff Reports

Florida Education Commissioner Frank Brogan Wednesday released results from the American College Test (ACT), which shows Florida's composite score increased to 20.7

in 1997, up from 20.6 in 1996. Florida's greatest increase is in mathematics, with the average score increasing from 20.3 in 1996 to 20.7 this year, a score which exceeds the national average of 20.6.

Nationally, the composite ACT score of 21.0 is up from 20.9 in 1996. (The ACT score range is 1-36.)

The average score for Florida students completing a recommended core college preparatory curriculum was 21.7, compared to 18.0 for those who completed less than the core coursework. Nearly three-fourths of Florida ACT takers completed the core coursework, which is defined as four or more years of English, and three or more years of mathematics, social studies and natural sciences. Seminole County had not yet finished com-See Scores, Page 5A

One of the most popular animals at the zoo will be celebrating her birthday this weekend.

Maude, an Asian elephant at the Central Florida Zoological Park, will be 23 on Saturday. The public is invited to share in the festivities between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.

A program of educational and entertaining activities will begin at 10 a.m. with elephant tales for kids, face painting and an elephant coloring contest. Visitors may also take a shot at guessing Maude's weight. At 11 a.m. Maude and her roommate, Mary, will perform some elephant demonstrations of skill and ability.

Following the morning events, guests will be invited to sing the "Happy Birthday" song as Maude partakes in her favorite treats in the form of a cake made of hay and topped with apple slice icing and carrot candies. Visitors will be offered a more traditional cake.

To help make this special day more memorable, for a $5 donation, zoo visitors may adopt Maude for a day and receive a photo of the birthday pachyderm, a card and a miniature plush elephant.

Admission to the birthday party is included in the regular zoo ticket. Cost is $7, adults, $3, children ages 3 to 12, $4, seniors, and free for children ages 2 and under. The zoo is located at 3755 N. Highway 17-92 at I-4, exit 52 in Sanford. For information, call 323-4450, ext. 149.

Lake Mary once again narrows consultant list

By SHARI BRODIE
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY - Will the firm originally chosen to prepare the Evaluation and Appraisal Report make the short list, as Lake Mary City Commissioners start the EAR consultant selection process again tonight?

"I would be surprised if we did," said Joel Ivey on Wednesday. Ivey is a partner in Ivey, Harris and Walls, an engineering firm that was in contract negotiations with the city when a question was raised about the procedure used to pick the selection team that placed Ivey's firm at the top of the short-list.

The EAR is a report card on the comprehensive plan established by the city in 1992. It evaluates the success or failure of what the city has projected as goals and objectives of planning and growth management.

Civic activist and Local Planning Agency board member Doug Forner told city commissioners on July 10 that he had been passed over as a volunteer for the EAR Selection Team.

Forner said it is possible that the city staff did not want him on the selection committee because he would be perceived as being biased against Ivey, Harris and Walls.

Forner cites a division of Ivey, Harris and Walls as being responsible for the flooding problems experienced in his neighborhood of Crystal Ridge. The city spent $45,000 last year making repairs to the cul-de-sac where Forner's home is located.

Ivey said at a special-called commission meeting on July 31 that, while the selection process had been "long, arduous and frustrating," he would not withdraw because "I have no desire to back down to bullying from one citizen."

Forner responded that he "had no prior knowledge of any of the bidders," and that only city staff knew that Ivey's company had responded to the request for proposal.

Susan Deines polled the LPA members, on the telephone, to determine who they would choose as a member of the selection team. Forner alleges that the telephone poll was a violation of "Government in the Sunshine."

City attorneys advised the city commission, that in order to be above question, a new team should be picked.

The city commission appointed itself as the review, short-list, ranking and selection com-

Scott Horn receives recognition from Rep. John Mica

Sanford resident's art work hangs in nation's capitol

Special to the Herald

United States Rep. John Mica has announced that Scott Horn, a senior at Seminole High School in Sanford, recently was honored as this year's winner of the 7th Congressional District Art Competition for high school students.

A panel of art judges selected Horn's untitled work from among more than 90 entries in competition this past May.

Horn's work is currently on display in the corridor of the U.S. Capitol. It will hang for one year along with other winning works from around the nation.

Horn traveled to Washington, D.C. on June 24 to attend the opening of the 1997 Congressional Art Exhibition and to meet other winners. Horn met with Rep. Mica at the ceremony and was treated to lunch with the Congressman in the House Member's Dining Room.

Mica praised Horn for his skill and talent. "Scott is a talented young artist and he has produced very eye-catching work," Mica said. "He has a special talent and has the potential to develop into a fine artist."

Horn, 17, just completed his senior year at Seminole High and lives in Sanford with his parents, William and Susan.

Thayer wasn't amused at all the attention he received for writing Casey. He died in August, 1940 without writing anything else anyone remembers.

Report card examines performance of utilities

Special to the Herald

TALLAHASSEE - Floridian's health and natural resources will not be protected without toughening energy efficiency and environmental standards for the state's electric utilities, according to Florida's Dirty Secret, the first comprehensive "report card" on electric utility performance and based on actual industry pollution measurements and energy efficiency data.

The Report Card scheduled to be presented to the Florida Public Service Commission on Friday, Aug. 8, and it examines air emissions and energy sources of nine electric generating companies in Florida. It reveals significant differences in the amount of pollution these utilities produce (how much) and their average pollution rates (how dirty). It also documents how Florida is failing to take advantage of cleaner, cost-effective options like solar energy and efficiency.

The Legal Environmental Assistance Foundation, Inc. (LEAF), a Tallahassee-based, regional nonprofit environmental organization, prepared the report card. Co-sponsors of the report are the Florida Consumer Action Network (FCAN) and Project for an Energy Efficient Florida (PEEF). "Pollution from utilities contributes to serious health problems like asthma and respiratory illness and to global climate change," said Gail Kamaras, LEAF's Energy Advocacy Program Director. "Our dependence on dirty fossil fuels and refusal to consider their real costs constitutes a hidden tax on Florida citizens and deprives them of cleaner alternatives like utility-sponsored energy efficiency programs and solar resources."

Among the report's conclusions:

- The state's three largest utilities--FPL, FPC and Tampa--emit the most acid rain, smog, soot and global warming gases.

- Tampa, FPC and Gulf Power emit sulfur dioxide (acid rain) at the highest rate.

- Tampa and FPC emit nitrogen oxides (smog, soot) at the highest rate.

- Lakeland, Tampa and Jacksonville emit carbon dioxide (global warming) at the highest rate.

- Many older generating plants are exempt from modern air pollution standards, giving them an unfair cost advantage.

- Though required by state law to conserve energy, Florida's utilities saved less than 1 percent compared to energy generated.

- Florida utilities and the Florida Public Service Commission (PSC) ignore the benefits of available solar resources in making energy choices.

The information contained in the report is based on actual preliminary emission data reported by utilities to U. S. Environmental Protection Agency for 1996 and on fuel mix and energy efficiency programs reported to the Florida Public Service Commission for 1996.

VA launches new Agent Orange study

Special to the Herald

WASHINGTON, DC - The Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) is announcing the pilot phase of a new study to determine the possible health effects of Agent Orange exposure on Vietnam veterans.

Letters are being sent to 500 randomly selected veterans inviting them to participate. Included are 250 veterans who served in Army Chemical Corps units in Vietnam and 250 veterans who served elsewhere during the Vietnam Conflict. VA is conducting the study with a contractor, Klemm Analysis Group.

The study may ultimately include 2,600 veterans, but the pilot phase is needed to test the full study's feasibility.

Since veterans first raised concerns in the late 1970's, knowledge regarding the effects of Agent Orange has grown as studies have been completed and expanded, and newer laboratory methods have been developed and used. Results of these studies have enabled VA to award disability compensation to Vietnam veterans suffering from certain chronic diseases.

The new health study and its pilot phase will use a combination of telephone surveys, medical records reviews, and blood tests to look for excess rates of illness in the two groups, as well as correlation's of health status with blood levels of 2,3,7,8-TCDD, an inadvertent toxic byproduct introduced in the Agent Orange manufacturing process.

The feasibility study is expected to take at least a year. If subsequent analysis of response rates, availability of medical records to validate veteran-reported health history, and other study requirements show that the full-scale study is feasible, that may take another three years to complete.

Two earlier VA studies of Army veterans assigned to Chemical Corps units in Vietnam who subsequently died have found a significant excess of deaths from digestive disease, primarily due to liver cirrhosis. Non-significant but elevated rates also were observed for deaths due to all cancers combined and for specific cancer sites. An ongoing mortality follow-up study is being conducted by VA.

The Army Chemical Corps Vietnam Veterans Study is an outgrowth of recommendations of the Institute of Medicine (IOM), which under contract with VA has reviewed and evaluated scientific literature, providing periodic reports ranking the likelihood of an association between Agent Orange exposure and various diseases. IOM research recommendations are helping guide VA in charting continued studies.

In recommending the latest study, an IOM committee observed that members of the Army Chemical Corps, like the Air Force Operation Ranch Hand units, were likely to have had more significant exposure than Vietnam veterans in general. The Ranch Hand veterans, whose aerial spraying missions stripped away enemy hiding places and jungle canopy over enemy supply lines, already have been involved in another major study conducted by the Air Force since 1979.

For a randomly selected subgroup of 100 in the feasibility phase, a medical subcontractor will provide clinic appointments around the country or home visits for the necessary serum collection. In addition to comparing prevalence of health outcomes, such as cancer in the Army Chemical Corps unit members and the non-Vietnam group, similar comparisons will be made for birth defects among the children of veterans of each cohort. Because study participants are randomly selected to achieve a representative sampling, volunteers are not being solicited.

Children's physical fitness declining

Special to the Herald

HOUSTON--Chances are, children returning to school this fall are among a growing population of physically unfit youths.

"Children and teenagers are increasingly obese and are not as physically active as their counterparts in previous decades," said Dr. Pat Vehra, an adolescent health expert at Baylor College of Medicine and Texas Children's Hospital in Houston.

"National surveys show that since the 1960s, but especially in the last decade, there has been an increase in the percentage of body fat and a decrease in physical activity among youth," said Vehra, who says 12 percent of children ages 6 to 17 are obese.

Vehra cites such probable causes as:

- Parents who work asking their kids to stay at home until they come home. This encourages inactivity by limiting them to indoor pursuits.

- Little or no family physical activities. Often parents are too tired when they come home to walk, shoot baskets or bike with their kids.

- Increased popularity of "entertainment-by-computer" or television versus old-fashioned playing outdoors.

- Fear of neighborhood crime.

- Lack of sidewalks, well-lit streets, access to parks, gyms or pools in suburban areas.

- Age requirements or rules requiring a guardian's presence at health clubs.

"It's not surprising that kids find it difficult to remain physically active," said Vehra. "They are not getting enough encouragement from their parents and society."

Neither may they be getting much help at school, he said, where physical education courses are increasingly considered an elective.

"Even if they enroll in Physical Education (P.E.), classes are usually less than an hour. By the time they've changed clothes, gotten into the gym and taken roll, there is very little actual time left for physical activity," he said.

Vehra states that 70 percent of high school students are physically active for less than 20 minutes during P.E. Enrollment in P. E. declines as grade levels increase. Only 10 percent of 12th graders are enrolled in daily P.E., says Vehra.

"This takes a toll far larger than just being in shape. Studies have shown that physical fitness can improve self-esteem, body image, academic performance and improve energy levels," said Vehra.

Parents are key to motivating children to become physically walk if it is safe, encouraging them to play at recess, keeping exercise equipment in the house--not the garage, looking for church-or other agency-sponsored health camps or activities, and including P.E. courses as a regular part of your child's curriculum.

"Above all, encourage them to do something they like. They will be more inclined to stick with it," said Vehra.

Youth activist calls for support of prevention startup funds

Special to the Herald

ORLANDO--A proposed budget request for $1.9 million in state funding to initiate new crime prevention programs for Central Florida youth deserves support, said a leading Orlando-area youth activist.

Gary W. Cain, President of Boys & Girls Clubs of Central Florida, Inc., said the request by Florida Juvenile Justice District Seven Manager Bob Pickerrill for $1.9 million for new prevention programs may be one of the best answers to rising concerns about juvenile crime.

"For 20 years juvenile justice, law enforcement and courts officials have said more needs to be done to prevent juvenile crime by working with kids who are at risk," Cain said. "We know that this works. We have positive evidence in the 5,000 young people who utilize the 11 Boys & Girls Club facilities throughout Orange, Seminole, and Osceola counties."

Cain said Boys & Girls Clubs of Central Florida, Inc. has developed a wide range of innovative and highly effective programs for youth that might otherwise be inclined toward delinquent behavior.

"Smart Moves is a good example," Cain said. "It's a highly effective motivating drug and alcohol abuse prevention program," Cain explained. "It's just one program Boys & Girls Clubs implement to protect and positively develop the youth we serve. Other programs encourage reading and provide job training and job readiness which is crucial if we're going to break the cycle of ignorance and poverty that leads to juvenile delinquency."

Cain said that the youth development organization goes even further, providing nutritious meals for youngsters in less fortunate neighborhoods "At our Southwest Branch located in Carver Shores, we're teaching members how to run a restaurant from scratch, literally from bringing in the equipment and setting up to cleaning the facility afterward, and the people who share the food are members as well," Cain said. "We're serving almost 500 meals a week."

Cain said he thinks our leadership too often choose what he calls the "easy out" of building more prisons and punitive facilities and too few community-based programs to steer kids straight in the first place. Defending Tsunami Beach Club

As a Sanford native, I am among the many residents who want to be proud of their home town. And granted, there are many things to be proud of...Lake Monroe, the Central Florida Zoo, the Orlando Sanford Airport, Seminole Town Center Mall and the county seat, just to name a few.

Even so, none of these have put Sanford on the map with my University of Central Florida friends like the Tsunami Beach Club. The club's sponsorship of musical events such as Earth Day Birthday and the Vans Warped Tour '97 has joined the Orlando Sanford Airport in bringing our city into the international scene.

I see Tsunami as a great promotional opportunity for Sanford, while I also live close enough to witness any negative aspects. The background sounds of the outdoor concerts are only faintly heard when our windows are closed, and our neighborhood is one of the closest to the State Street location. My family finds the music as enjoyable as the practicing of the Seminole High School marching band.

Another concern of locals may be the traffic. I noticed how well the Sanford Police and Seminole County sheriff's deputies managed the flow of traffic. There were minimal traffic holdups as the pedestrians were required to gather before being allowed to cross 17-92.

I am proud that the Tsunami Beach Club has chosen Sanford for its venue. It is time for it to be recognized as the asset that it is to our diverse city.

Illiteracy hurts everyone

Twenty-seven million American adults are functionally illiterate. You may assume that, because you can read this, illiteracy is no problem for you. But illiteracy hurts us all.

Illiteracy lowers business productivity. Illiterates may not be able to learn enough to know the difference between low and high quality. During training, everything must be explained orally to illiterates; these costs are passed along to the consumers--us.

Illiterate workers are prone to have accidents because they cannot read. Literate people can be hurt by the accidents. Illiterates who cause accidents are more likely to draw worker's compensation and other insurance benefits, sometimes involving lawsuits. Insurance rates are based on averages, and ultimately we all pay higher insurance because of accidents resulting from illiteracy.

Illiteracy drives people into low-paying jobs, unemployment, even welfare. Thus illiteracy weakens the tax base while increasing the benefits paid. The federal debt, over $5 trillion, has partly arisen from lack of productivity rooted in illiteracy. The federal debt hurts each of us when we borrow money and face high interest rates.

In turn the federal debt worsens the illiteracy problem because the government cannot fund programs to attack illiteracy when so much is going into welfare and other needs resulting from illiteracy.

Companies leave America to go where the workers can read. The jobs go too. Revenues decline while the government's bills continue.

Companies are especially reluctant to invest jobs in areas where illiteracy and resulting problems are ubiquitous.

Now is the time to stop illiteracy. The Barbara Bush Foundation for Family Literacy, Laubach Literacy Action, Literacy Volunteers of America and other worth programs deserve our help. Inquire about literacy programs at your local library. We are all paying for illiteracy.

Let's semi-privatize Social Security

Everybody knows that the Social Security system is heading for a brick wall, and will hit it early in the new century when the baby boomers start to retire. There is no way in which the work force that will then be paying taxes can afford to support the huge numbers that will be lining up for their Social Security checks.

So, unless Uncle Sam simply decides to wretch on his debt to the elderly by inflating the currency or some other transparent stunt, the Social Security system will have to be drastically modified well before we hit that wall. One proposal has been to "privatize" Social Security completely: Require every employee to put a portion of his pay into one of a variety of private investment plans, the proceeds of which would then be available to care for him in later years.

But this goes against the grain of those who, perversely, prefer to trust Big Daddy to take care of them in their old age. And although Chile privatized its entire workers' pension system years ago with stunning success, there is always the theoretical possibility that a private pension plan might fail.

That was why Britain, of all places, adopted

"Everybody knows that the Social Security system is heading for a brick wall."

in 1986 a semi-privatized system of personal pensions. Under it, a worker can choose to remain entirely in the state pension system -- and 17 percent have done so. They will receive the basic state pension, plus an additional layer of benefits called the State Earnings Related Pension Scheme (SERPS).

But 73 percent have "opted out" of SERPS, agreeing instead to invest 4.6 percent of their annual taxable earnings roughly a fourth of their entire payroll tax in either a private company pension plan or a personal plan comparable to an American IRA. By law, all such plans must guarantee benefits at least as generous as SERPS. There is no income tax on pension investment income, and no capital gains tax on gains.

How has it worked out? Fabulously -- not even the Labor Party opposes it. Whereas the real return on "investments" in the U.S. Social Security system for young workers is 2 percent, the comparable return on investments in private British pensions is about 9 percent, and the oldsters who get the money are laughing all the way to the bank.

What's more, with entitlement demands subsiding, the OECD estimates that Britain will have erased its national debt altogether by the year 2030. Ours, by way of contrast, will stand at $39 trillion in the same year, according to the CBO.

As a final bonus, the investment of British workers in private pension plans now totals more than $1 trillion, or more than the pension funds of all other European nations combined -- giving the British economy the capital it needs to expand.

Why couldn't such a plan be instituted in the U.S.?

Communities as endangered species

It's just a short walk up the dirt road from the ferry landing, past a few neat wooden houses, a bike or two, and a couple of lawn chairs, to a wooden sign hanging beside a begonia plant that announces:

Cliff Island Post Office. Established 1892.

On this Monday morning, a steady trickle of summer and year-round islanders crosses the wooden walkway to the plain wooden office attached to the home of longtime Postmistress Eleanor Cushing. They come to pick up mail from unlocked boxes. They come for envelopes and stamps. And of course, they come to pass the time of day.

Here, in this tightknit island community, the post office is where some of the knitting gets done.

Cliff Island's whole history is tied to its post office--down to its very name. In 1892, the people of what was then Crotch Island petitioned the government for postal service and were told to choose a name that wasn't already taken. So Cliff was born with the mail service.

But the island's present and future are also tied to its post office. Just a few months back, the 71-year-old postmistress announced that she was ready to retire. A worried island soon learned that the Postal Service was planning to downgrade the job and downsize the service.

On the mainland, in the hip humor circuit, "going postal" is a synonym for an attack of urban madness. But in isolated pockets of rural America that have never seen a UPS truck or a Federal Express box, the post office can be the difference between a business or none, a link to the outside world or none--a community or none. As Philip Conkling of Maine's Island Institute says, "Nobody sets out to purposely destroy island communities. But if you apply national standards to them, it kills them."

On Cliff, where the population goes down from 400 in the summer to 58 year-round, where islanders are recruiting families "from away" to save their school, many wondered what would happen if their post office became a row of boxes at the dock.

When Eleanor Cushing, postmistress for 32 years, wife of a lobsterman and lifetime Cliff Islander, heard the plans, she said simply, "I just didn't like the sound of it," so she put her retirement plans on hold, temporarily granting her island a reprieve. But the issue lingers here like a morning fog.

It drifts over other islands that dot the Maine waters from Cliff to Swann's, Great Cranberry, Frenchboro--places that are more remote, where service is more threatened. It's heard as well in downtown's across America where a post office that anchors a historic main street is shipped out to a mall, leaving the downtown to sink.

"A worried island learned that the Postal Service was planning to downgrade the service."

This is one story of an America that prizes "community" but lets communities erode. Not that long ago, the post office was a prized government service; the postmaster general was a Cabinet member. Today it is a quasi-private business with a mandate to break even. In communities like Cliff Island, the old and the new coexist surreally--like the Disney ties offered for sale in a Norman Rockwell setting.

In theory the Postal Service can't cut service solely on economic grounds. It's required to look at the effect of its decisions on communities. But in practice, the consolidations, downsizings, downgradings are dictated by economics. Beecher Doody, Maine's postal review coordinator who sees both sides, states the bottom line succinctly, "We don't establish or keep post offices simply for (the community's) identity purposes."

South of here, in our nation's capital, "community" is a buzzword. Across the country, people talk of rebuilding and sustaining a connection between people, a sense of belonging to place and each other. But there are fewer and fewer people in the "business" of maintaining such places.

As Earl Blumenauer, a freshman congressman from Oregon who wants to slow the export of post offices from downtowns, points out, "We spend a lot of time, money and energy responding to the symptoms of broken communities." If we allow others to break down in order for the Postal Service to break even, he says, "It's a false economy."

Postmistress Cushing admits that she sold only $12,000 in postage in the past year. And not a single Disney tie. By business standards, the full-service office in many such places is a loser. But what is the price tag for a community? How much is a functioning island worth?

On a summer morning, a mind-set away from the mall culture and market mentality, it's enough to wonder how we got to this point. We commemorate Elvis on a postage stamp, while we let communities become our endangered species.

JOSEPH SPEAR

"Sorry pal, I was true to my memory."

Lively history needs a little spice

You could get the impression, reading the reviews of former Labor Secretary Robert Reich's best-selling memoir, that he committed an original sin by garnishing reality.

The truth is, he is continuing an ancient custom. Indeed, one of the most famous chroniclers of all time, the Greek Plutarch, is remembered for his lively biographies of notable people. One of the reasons why the accounts in his famous "Parallel Lives" are so readable is because he describes emotions and includes a lot of dialogue, which he made up.

When you think about it, history wouldn't be half as interesting if the people who tell it had to stick to the facts. What if Parson Mason Locke Weems had not invented those tales about George Washington flinging coins across the Potomac and chopping down the family cherry tree and refusing to lie about it? Would not the demigod Washington be diminished in our eyes?

What if a malicious newspaper editor named James T. Callender had not printed unsubstantiated gossip about Thomas Jefferson's trysts with a mulatto lover? Hollywood would have been denied the opportunity to conjure up "Jefferson in Paris."

So here comes Robert Reich, doing much the same thing. This isn't a transgression. Hell, this is a tradition.

"Locked in the Cabinet" has a hero who is morally superior to and tougher, smarter and more lovable than the characters he encounters during a four-year stint as the head of Labor. He gets put down by congressmen, capitalists, union chiefs and dastardly journalists, but he pushes on, determined to overcome the obstacles that vain, tacky, beefy, bombastic fools and nerds and nasties erect in his path.

But then one of those beastly reporters, Jonathan Rauch of the online magazine Slate, had the effrontery to go to the videotape and read the transcripts, and he discovered that Reich's report of his exploits had been, well, embellished a bit.

Lawmakers didn't say the mean things Reich said they did. Hostile journalists were relatively docile. Some people, such as AFL-CIO chief Lane Kirkland, claimed to have been misquoted and protested to Reich in writing. "I did not, in fact, utter the words that you attribute to me ... in direct quotation marks, as though you were repeating my words verbatim."

The difference between times past and present, I believe, is not that we enhance history, but that we undertake it with astonishing check. Ours is an age of revisionism, re-enactments and docudramas. We feast on tabloid television and talk radio. Half-truths, deceptions, scuttlebutt and flagrant lies are openly purveyed as truth. Even in weighty, authoritative hardcover books, there is often barely a pretense of explicit accuracy.

In his 1993 book about Ted Kennedy, author Joe McGinniss flatly stated that "some thoughts and dialogue attributed to figures in this narrative were created by the author, based on ... research and his knowledge of the relevant people, places and events."

When journalist Edward Klein wrote a book about the marriage of Jack and Jackie Kennedy, he included a 1951 party scene in which, he acknowledged in a footnote, he invented the dialogue.

When ex-FBI agent Gary Aldrich claimed that President Clinton sneaked out of the lando. The turn around time for international travelers in Orlando was cut significantly because of the stop in Bangor.

Using Monarch, one of the largest British carriers, as an example, Cooke said the problems started when the charter airline replaced its older fleet of airplanes with Boeing 767s which do not require refueling before flying into Orlando. Consequently, he said, there was no need to stop in Bangor and that took business away. Bangor is designated as a port of entry with the 80.50 per passenger fee.

"Now enter Sanford where it's a lot cheaper than Bangor," he said.

According to Cooke, the people in Maine petitioned Washington, D.C. to push Sanford into a port of entry status so that Bangor could be competitive.

"That's ridiculous," Cooke said. "The planes don't want to make the extra stop in Maine anyway. Passengers don't like having to make stops."

"This is all political stuff. It's bizarre. We're not trying to hurt anyone's business."

The airport currently pays a fixed annual fee for services provided by customs. The amount paid for four full time agents and their equipment is close to the 875,000 originally negotiated in 1991 when the airport applied for customs services. Another assumption of the agreement, Cooke said, was that there would be no change in fees during the negotiated five year lease, currently in place.

Cooke said the airport knew the port of entry designation was coming and had planned on applying for an extended area beyond the airport's border. He said the plan, which would better benefit Sanford, was rejected by customs.

"We're not fighting customs. We have a good relationship with customs and always have, but we think their decision is in error," Cooke said.

The Airport Authority has authorized Cooke, airport attorney Stephen Coover, and a Washington, D.C. attorney retained by the authority, to travel to the nation's capital and plead their case.

Cooke said he thinks the people in Washington will be receptive to working together, however, if needed, he said the Sanford Authority may have to seek an injunctive relief in which a judge would halt any change in fees pending a ruling on the disagreement.

"They've always been good in the past," he said. "We'll just have to wait and see."

collected. An employee in the county's Library-Leisure Services liked the quilt so much she bought 40 tickets on Tuesday when the quilters were recognized by the Board of County Commissioners.

"We hope to raise 83,000," said Karen Jacobs, one of the co-chairs of the project and vice president of the Seminole County Historical Society.

"We've made quilts before - hundreds of quilts, love quilts that went to the Methodist Children's Home, and to the Women's Abuse Center. We've made ABC baby quilts for children born with AIDS," Jacobs said.

The quilters have a motto that "one who sleeps under a quilt is comforted by love." Jacobs said, "We have 125 members in the Central Florida Quilters (124 women and one husband). The Seminole County project was one of our most challenging efforts."

"There were hours and hours of preparation. We asked all the historical groups we could for early photographs of life in the county. We studied these and talked about what we wanted to get into each of the 24 squares of the quilt."

"Then, came the work. Hours and hours of quilting. We're excited about the results and so are the people who have seen the quilt."

Jacobs said the quilt which is 70 by 70 inches will be on a magical carpet ride from August until April. It will travel from the museum to the historical societies, clubs, festivals and the like.

Raffle donations for each ticket will be 81 or six for 85. The drawing will be held April 25. Tickets will be available at the museum (Tuesday through Friday) and at meetings where the quilt is on display. For information call the museum at 321-2489.

"We believe that someone is going to win a really wonderful piece of history when the quilt is raffled off," Jacobs said. "Something they can proudly use as a wall-hanging."

"It would be very nice," she said. "That one day they consider donating the quilt to the Seminole County Historical Society. That's their choice, of course."

"Right now we just want everyone to enjoy the quilt."

pling its scores for 1997. However, in 1996, Seminole County had the highest average in all Central Florida counties with 21.4.

"The significant increase in math scores is encouraging," said Commissioner Hogan. "I am also encouraged that more students are taking rigorous coursework and participating in the ACT. As a result an increasing number of students will have greater educational opportunities and more rewarding career opportunities," Hogan said.

Nearly 40,500 of Florida's 105,000 public and private high school graduates took the ACT. While the number of Florida high school graduates increased 5.2 percent in 1997 the number of seniors taking the ACT increased by 11.7 percent. Since 1986 the number of Florida students taking the ACT has increased by 69 percent, with 16,516 more students taking the test in 1997 than just over a decade ago. Students must submit results of either the ACT or the Scholastic Assessment Test (SAT) for admission to state universities in Florida.

ACT results also show:

- * Florida students scored above the national average on the math section of the test (FL-20.7, NAT-20.6) and below the average on the reading section (FL-21.1, NAT-21.3), English (FL-19.9, NAT-20.3), and science reasoning (FL-20.6, NAT-21.1) sections.

- * Florida continues to have a more diverse group of students taking the ACT than the nation as a whole. Minority students now comprise 40 percent of Florida's test takers, a 15-point increase over 10 years ago. Nationwide, minority students represent 24 percent of the test takers.

- * Nearly 58 percent of the Florida test takers are female, compared to 56 percent for the nation. Female students score higher than males on English and reading and lower than the males on math and science reasoning.

- * The average composite national score for females has risen four times in seven years, with the average score for males remaining stable. The divergence between the overall scores for males and females has never been narrower. One reason: increased preparation of female students in core courses.

- * Florida female students continue to out perform males (20.7 females compared to 20.6 for males) Nationwide, males outscore females (21.1 males compared to 20.8 females).

Vehicle inspection

The Florida Highway Patrol will be conducting driver license and vehicle inspection checkpoints during the week of Aug. 15 to 21 at the following locations: County Road 15; General J.C. Hutchinson Parkway; Marquette Road; Orange Boulevard; Old Lake Mary Road; Osceola Road; Upsala Road and Perimmon Avenue.

Recognizing the danger presented to the public by defective vehicle equipment, troopers will concentrate their efforts on vehicles being operated with defects such as bad brakes, worn tires and defective lighting equipment. In addition, attention will be directed to drivers who would violate the driver license laws of Florida. The Patrol has found these checkpoints to be an effective means of enforcing the equipment and driver license laws of Florida while ensuring the protection of all motorists.

this country? It could, and the good news is that the Heritage Foundation, the premier Washington-based conservative think tank, is launching a drive to give it a boost here. It is essentially like one of the three options offered last year by President Clinton's Social Security Advisory Council. That called for American workers to be allowed to invest 5 percent of the portion of their income subject to Social Security taxes in private investment accounts.

But unlike the British system, there was no guarantee that the return would be as good as under straight Social Security, and the liberals argued (privately) that many workers are too dumb to invest intelligently, so the idea got nowhere.

Wanted: Sheriff seeks suspect in robbery of senior citizen

By DAVID FRAZIER
Herald Staff Writer

The Sheriff's Office Major Crimes Section has released a composite sketch of the suspect charged with armed robbery against an elderly Fern Park man Monday, August 11th.

Juan Perez, 73, had gotten off a Lynx bus at the intersection of Fernwood Boulevard and Oxford Road about 1:30 p.m. when he was approached by another male passenger on the bus. The passenger asked for directions. Perez was not sure where the place was that the man asked him about.

As Perez began walking along Oxford Road towards his apartment at the St. Johns Village Apartments, he was jumped from behind by the assenger. The suspect put Perez in a choke hold and threw him to the ground. The suspect told Perez that he had a gun, but no gun was seen. After a brief struggle, the suspect robbed Perez of cash and three expensive rings that he was wearing. Perez was not hurt from the struggle.

The suspect is a white male, 22 years old with wavy, black hair. He also has a tattoo on his left forearm. When last seen, the suspect was wearing a white shirt and long, blue pants. Anyone with information about the suspect is asked to contact the Sheriff's Office at (407) 330-6650.

Youngsters give writer a breath of fresh air

SANFORD — Two days after reading that Greg Maddux signed a contract for well over $110 million and one day after reading about 20-year-old Kevin Garnett turning down $102 million, it was time to see things in a different perspective.

Part of being a small-town sportswriter means going to youth league games and even talking to some of the 10- and 12-year-olds that make up the teams. All this year, I have gone from team to team all over Seminole County talking to the kids and always ask who their favorite players are. Usually, it's Alex Rodriguez, Ken Griffey or Chipper Jones.

I also ask them if they know what the salaries are for the superstars. For the most part, the kids can give you the exact figures, right down to the last decimal.

So I went even smaller. Somewhere in Seminole County or the entire world, there had to be somebody who hadn't been spoiled by the dirty business of sports.

There were some first-graders last year who seemed unspoiled until I asked about Shaquille O'Neil.

They knew all about everything that happened. Shaq left Orlando for the money and, as a result, greed had spoiled their image of sports. In fact, in one art classroom at Heathrow Elementary School, there is a cardboard cutout of Shaq, painted over with his Los Angeles Lakers' uniform, with dollar bills drawn all over it.

Finally, yesterday I found the answer. Over at Genesis Christian Pre-School in Longwood, I called the night before and told Director Suzanne Ebaugh that I wanted to have a serious sports rap with some of the four-year-olds that attend and she said sure. I also asked the kids to deck themselves out in T-shirts featuring their favorite teams.

Yesterday, I stopped by and there were 22 kids, most wearing Orlando Magic T-shirts and even one wearing an identical Danny Wuerffel Gator shirt. Some of the girls had shirts hanging down around their ankles after borrowing them from older brothers and sisters.

We went inside and I decided to quiz the kids. See how much they knew and what their opinions were about salaries of the players today.

"First question," I said, sitting in an undersized chair as the kids sat Indian-style on the floor, "how many of you know who Michael Jordan is?"

Immediately about five hands went up and answered "Space Jam!" after the movie that Jordan starred in last year with Bugs Bunny.

Then, after closing in on the fact that he was a famous basketball player of some sort, I asked the kids how much money they thought Michael Jordan made in one season.

A lot of little arms went up as they started to answer.

About 10 kids responded and the highest guess was $18.

Per year.

Next question, do you remember Shaq?

Again a bunch of arms went up and a couple of kids remembered that Shaq used to play for their Magic. I then asked if anyone was mad at him, assuming they understood the exodus he took last summer.

Nothing but confused looks until one boy piped in that he sure could dunk a basketball.

They knew about Penny, not about the Magic mutiny.

I asked about Tiger Woods and a girl said she loved going to the zoo with her dad.

The little kid in the Wuerffel Jersey was asked if he thought the Gators were number one like a poll has said.

He just told me he loved the Gators.

Can any one of them make a basket? No, but a couple of kids proudly said they could dribble a ball. That seemed to be enough to make them happy. The grilling continued and the three and four-year-olds couldn't think of one thing that had to do with the problems all over the sports world today. I didn't have the heart to bring up free-agency, drug ar-

'Super' night on tap

The field at Sanford Memorial Stadium will be named Rinker-Stenstrom Field at Sanford Memorial Stadium tonight in memory of Wes Rinker (above) and Julian Stenstrom (right).

ASA Super Nationals, dedication take stage tonight

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Editor

SANFORD — The long awaited, and anticipated, night has arrived. The ASA Super Nationals championships begin this evening at Sanford Memorial Stadium.

At 6 p.m. the playing field at the renovated historic park will be dedicated to Wes Rinker and Julian Stenstrom, making the new name for the facility — Rinker-Stenstrom Field at Sanford Memorial Stadium — and the turning on of the new lighting system.

The first pitch will be thrown out by local baseball legend Buddy Lake, who pitched and hit a home run to win one of the longest games in professional history while playing for the Sanford team back in the 1940's.

Rain washes out Bambinos; four games on today's slate

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Editor

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Mother Nature took center stage in all of her glory Wednesday night, forcing a postponement of the two games in the 1997 Babe Ruth Baseball Bambino World Series at Eastmonte Park.

As you read this, the elimination game between Elk Grove, California and Hendersonville, North Carolina should be finished (the game was to start at 10 a.m.) and host Altamonte Springs should be taking on Keene, New Hampshire (the game was set for a noon start) in another elimination contest.

Altamonte Springs has bounced back from an opening game loss to Elk Grove to win two terrific ball games and hopes to win today and get another shot at Elk Grove, should they both win, while Hendersonville and Keene will both be hoping to bounce back from their first losses in the tournament.

After those games there will be a change in today's regular schedule. The two undefeated teams, Amity-Brooklyn, New York and Willamette Valley, Oregon will play in the Winner's Bracket final at 6 p.m. instead of 8:30 p.m. The winner of that game will advance to Saturday's championship game set for 1 p.m. and have to lose twice on Saturday to lose the national title.

Amity-Brooklyn remained undefeated with a 13-6 thumping of Hendersonville and Willamette Valley moved on with a 10-1 thrashing of Keene on Tuesday night.

After that contest, the winner of the Elk Grove-Hendersonville and Altamonte Springs-Keene games will return to play at 8:30 p.m.

The winner of the 8:30 p.m. game will then meet the loser of the 6 p.m. game at 7 p.m. on Friday in the Loser's Bracket championship game and a spot in Saturday's finale in the double-elimination event. The Friday winner will have to win twice on Saturday to claim the national championship.

After no rain on Tuesday it appeared that there would be no problem on Wednesday as well, but right before game time a huge rain and lightning storm moved through the area.

Officials waited until 8 p.m. before deciding to cancel the night's schedule.

Eastmonte Park is located on the corner of SR 427 and Magnolia Avenue, three blocks south of SR 436.

Also as part of the Opening Ceremonies, Sanford's own Sylvester Polk will play the National Anthem on his trumpet.

After the dedication, the first two games of the double-elimination tournament will be played, leading to the championship game that is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. on Sunday (August 17) afternoon. Some of the games will also be played at the excellent new Alumni Field at Seminole High School.

Festivities get underway this afternoon with a barbecue for the teams at the Sanford Civic Center from noon to 2 p.m.

The absolute best slow pitch softball players in the United States will be on hand for this tournament and will give local fans a rare opportunity to see the "big boys" mash the softball.

The eight top ranked teams in the Supreme Softball Top 25 will be in the 16-team field -- Ritch's-Superior/Tri-Gem/TPS of Windsor Locks, Connecticut; Shen Valley/Taylor Brothers/TPS of Bridgewater, Virginia; Lighthouse/Worth of Stone Mountain, Georgia; Sunbelt/Dan Smith/Easton of Centerville, Georgia; Long Haul/TPS of Albertville, Minnesota; Steele's/Reda of Brook Park, Ohio; Sierra/TPS of Reno, Nevada; and SoJern/Specialty/TPS of Cedarbrook, New Jersey.

Ritch's-Superior defeated Shen Valley in the finals of last year's ASA Super Nationals in Johnson City, Tennessee. Lighthouse won over R-S in the 1995 finals at Waterloo, Iowa.

The ASA (Amateur Softball Association) Super Nationals is the second leg of the Grand Slam of major slow pitch softball. The ISA (Independent Softball Association) World Series was played last weekend in Gastonia, North Carolina, with the same eight powerhouse teams in the field. Sunbelt was the surprise winner last weekend, coming out of the loser's bracket to beat Shen Valley twice to claim the title.

The other two legs will be the National Softball Association (NSA) World Series September 5-7 in Burlington, North Carolina and the United States Slo-pitch Softball Association (USSSA) World Series September 10-14 at Daytona Beach's Jackie Robinson Stadium.

Many Florida players are on the top eight teams:

- Doug Roberson of West Palm Beach and Hank Garris of Naples with Ritch's-Superior.
- Phil Jobe of Miami, Al Davis of Okceehobee, Butch Ovens of Bradenton and Dewayne Frizell of Milton with Shen Valley.
- Robbie Ergle of Gainesville and David Burch of Live Oak with Lighthouse.
- Curtis Williams of Milton and Steve Toth of West Palm Beach with Sunbelt.
- Jose Santiago of Punta Gorda, Mike Stanley of Fort Walton Beach and John Hicks and Rob Darhower of Niceville with Long Haul.
- Marty Lanoux of Orange Park and Jeff Vargo of Port Charlotte with Steele's.

Of course, 12th-ranked

Roberts/Easton of Orlando, the host team and the defending ASA Major champion, has mostly Florida players -- Damon and David Marlette (Lake Howell High School) and Larry Blumberg, who all played with Seminole Ford in the Lake Mary Fall League last year, Orlando's Mark Martin (Colonial High), Charlie and Craig Miller, Ross Urshan, Dave Bolavert, Richie Cobb, Mike Lankford, Wes Brown and Bill Gray.

Roberts' first game is tonight at 9:30 p.m. against Steele's, following the opening game of the tournament at 7:30 p.m., matching Ritch's-Superior against D's Alliance/Easton of Valley Center, California.

Other first round games on Friday send Long Haul against 10th-ranked Hague/TPS of Columbus, Ohio and Sunbelt against Herb's/TPS of San Diego in 6 a.m. games; Shen Valley against Major League/Easton of Chattanooga and SoJern against Sierra in 10 a.m. games; and ninth-ranked R&D/Grover of Lima, Ohio against N.A.S.T.V. Boys/TPS of St. Louis and Lighthouse against Martin/Mizuno/Bike/DeMarini of Seymour, Indiana at noon.

All told there will be seven games at the Stadium and also at Seminole High's Alumni Field tomorrow every two hours between 8 a.m. and 9 p.m. The same time frame will be used on Saturday with 10 games being played at the two facilities and then on Sunday there will be either four or five games, depending on if the if necessary game is needed, at the Stadium starting at 9 a.m.

Tickets are not available in advance and must be purchased at the gate.

Then again, none of them had on a Dallas Cowboys shirt.

It was a refreshing day in a sometimes unrefreshing career.

Last Second Shot: I bumped into Shaun St. Dennis, last season's Lake Mary quarterback, up at his old practice field yesterday. He was about to take off for the University of Connecticut to start summer practice and he said Donnie Casey, the Rams' hero of the 1995 Rotary Bowl, had also signed on with the Huskies.

That means that it is possible next season, that four former Rams' teammates could be starting in the UConn backfield: St. Dennis, Casey and Ron and Recollen Jump.

IN BRIEF

Bromeliad sale, exhibition set
The Seminole Bromeliad Society will hold its annual plant sale and exhibition on Aug. 16, Saturday, at the Volusia County Extension Office, located at I-4 and State Rd. 44, DeLand (Exit 50). Hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., one day only.

About one-half members of the society are residents of Volusia County, and once a year they celebrate their membership with this event in the DeLand area.

Bromeliads as a plant family do well as landscape and patio plants. The plants do not wilt, and their good foliage color and blooms relieve otherwise monotonous green plantings, according to Carol Johnson of the local society. Hosts will answer cultural questions about light, heat, cold, fertilizing, dividing, potting, etc.

In addition to plant sales, there will be hourly give-away drawings, exhibitions and a grand prize drawing at the end of the day.

Sunny-side-up: Food for thought

How proud he was to box for UPS

In his younger days, Sanford City Commissioner Kerry Lyons worked for United Parcel Service.

"Just after I came out of the U.S. Coast Guard," Lyons said on Wednesday.

"UPS told me to think of the job as part-time. That was when I signed up. Don't think of it as full time. It is part-time."

Lyons was 24 at the time. His first duty was at UPS in Longwood unloading packages off an 18-wheeler. He worked himself up to loading packages and soon became a production supervisor.

"Even the CEOs start this way," Lyons said, "Loading or unloading packages."

Lyons worked for UPS for six years.

"We worked hard but we had good times," he said. "Now and then, one of the UPS people would get into an empty box and come down the conveyor belt. Then, jump out and try to scare or amuse the others who were working."

Did Lyons, himself, ever come out of a box?

RUSS WHITE
Staff Writer

Kerry Lyons
is going to hurt everyone. The company won't be able to get back many of the customers, whose businesses are suffering because of the strike. "These business owners aren't going to forget this. They probably won't come back."

Lyons, who is from Port Arthur, Tex., has had quite an education with his Coast Guard duty and UPS service. He was on a Coast Guard cutter known called Cherokee.

"It was what you would call a law enforcement tug," he said. "We patrolled the Gulf of Mexico. Off the Yucatan Peninsula."

Four years ago, former Coast Guardsman Lyons became a Sanford City Commissioner.

He's picked up an associate science degree in electronics, a BA in political science at the University of Central Florida and is working now on a graduate degree in public administration.

As an aside, Lyons said he wore boxer shorts when he worked for UPS.

He resisted, however, the UPS urge of urges to climb into an empty box on the conveyor belt.

Kissing cousins' split devastating

DEAR ABBY: After reading your column on first cousins marrying, I thought I'd better let you know the downside when it doesn't work out.

I was also involved with a "kissing cousin" many years ago, and there are consequences one doesn't think of until it's too late.

To start with, you fight to get the other family members to accept that you're involved with each other. Then, when it goes sour and you can't stand to be around each other, who do you turn to?

From experience I can tell you: No one! You suffer in silence because everyone told you it would not work out and you wouldn't listen. I can tell you, it's easier to break off a relationship with an outsider than with a relative. It's 100 times harder when it's family. You cause divisions and pain when you get together, and it's worse when you split. There's more pain than you could ever imagine for both those involved and the families.

You are expected to attend family functions and pretend it never happened, to be polite and try to be civil to each other even though you're dying inside and wish as you may, you can never go back to before.

Please advise anyone contemplating a relationship with a relative. Think long and hard before you leap. Your paths will cross again and again, and your life will never be the same! Been there, done that and regretting it...

SOMEWHERE IN THE U.S.A.

ADVICE
ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: In 1985, I met a woman I grew to care for very much. She and her 9-year-old son from a previous marriage moved into my home. Within weeks, without prior discussion with me, she became pregnant and quit her job. For the next four years I supported her, our child and her older son, even though she was collecting child support from her former husband.

After counseling and considerable agony, it became obvious that this woman was a user and incapable of a healthy relationship. She moved out in 1989, and we worked out a joint-custody arrangement for our 3-year-old son "Josh." I was required to pay her $800 a month in child support.

A year later she disclosed that she had been addicted to drugs the entire time we were together. While I supported her son, she had spent his support check on drugs.

During the last seven years, she started, but never completed, several drug rehabilitation programs, and she has frequently uprooted the children as she moved from relationship to relationship and place to place. All the while, I've been paying child support and giving her thousands of dollars besides.

One recent afternoon, she came by my office to pick up the child-support check and mentioned she'd moved in with another boyfriend and was living rent-free. She was proud that Josh finally had a room of his own, but mentioned that he was sleeping on the floor because he didn't have a bed. I said, "Wait a minute... you've been collecting child support for seven years, living rent-free for the past several months, and Josh is sleeping on the floor? You haven't bought him something as basic as a bed?"

She replied, "I needed that money to square myself away." Then she added, "And you know what? I can spend that money on anything I want and legally there's nothing you can do about it!"

Josh confirmed this on the way home from school later that day, but defended his mom and said, "It's OK. Dad, I have a borrowed sleeping bag." It broke my heart. (Josh now has a bed.)

Abby, while a lot of attention is focused on "deadbeat dads," let's be mindful of the fact that the male gender has no monopoly on "dead-beats."

SINGLE DAD IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR SINGLE DAD: Your son may need more than money and the bed you have provided for him. His mother is hardly a model of responsible behavior. Rather than blaming your ex-girlfriend, you, as the more responsible parent, should be talking with your lawyer about increasing your visitation or obtaining full custody. The more opportunity your son has to live in a healthy environment, the better his chances are for a successful future.

DEAR SOMEBODY: That's sage advice. Most of the questions I receive regarding marriage among cousins reflect concerns about the genetic aspects of such a union - not the emotional price that's paid in the event of a failure.

DEAR LOOKING: No, it is not normal. Your wife's problem seems to be her attitude. She has stated what she won't do, and plan your life accordingly.

DEAR ABBY: Whenever I get into a discussion with someone who

DEAR ABBY: My wife is past

Prostate cancer can spread to bone

DEAR DR. GOTT: In a previous column on prostate cancer, you advised the reader to have a bone scan to determine if the cancer had spread. So far, so good. Then you stated that if the scan were negative (normal), the patient should consider hormone therapy. Again, OK. Finally, you concluded that if the bone scan were abnormal, the patient would be a candidate for additional therapy such as surgery or radiation. Whoops! Surgery is not indicated for the treatment of metastatic bone cancer. How about a retraction?

PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My wife and I are in our 70s and enjoy intercourse about once a week. She says that having sex so often will lead to prostate problems. Is her theory correct?

DEAR READER: You are, of course, absolutely correct in your statements. However, I believe that you misread my conclusions. Actually, I didn't mention surgery at all; rather, I emphasized that prostate cancer in the bone can usually be successfully controlled by radiation. Surgery for prostate cancer is ordinarily appropriate in two instances: Some urologists prefer to remove the cancerous prostate gland early in the course of the disease or to remove portions of the tumor if the malignancy is causing significant blockage in the urinary tract. So this is a clarification, not a retraction.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am aware of the many advantages of vitamin E supplements, including protection against heart disease and cancer. I take 400 international units a day. Is this too much?

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "The Prostate Gland." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10154. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am aware of the many advantages of vitamin E supplements, including protection against heart disease and cancer. I take 400 international units a day. Is this too much?

DEAR READER: The presumed benefits of vitamin E supplements remain somewhat controversial. No medical studies have unequivocally shown healthful effects. Yet, to be on the safe side, many people take vitamin E pills even though a balanced, nutritious diet already contains adequate amounts of the vitamin. Fish and fish oil are especially rich in this substance.

Vitamin E often helps relieve the pain of breast cysts (fibrocystic disease), can improve circulation in peripheral vascular disease, MAY lower cholesterol levels, and MAY retard the development of Peyronie's disease (a condition causing crooked erections).

However, in doses above 1000 IU a day, vitamin E can lead to fatigue. Therefore, if you choose to take vitamin E — even in the face of conflicting medical reports — you should limit the dose to between 400 and 800 IU a day.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "The Prostate Gland." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10154. Be sure to mention the title.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Which way to turn?

By Phillip Alder

Nietzsche (what was his first name?) led a tough life. Yet he did write some amusing lines, including "A few hours of mountain climbing turn a rascal and a saint into two pretty similar creatures. Fatigue is the shortest way to Equality and Fraternity — and, in the end, Liberty will surrender to Sleep."

To fit in with the French "Liberte! Egalite! Fraternite!" motto, here is a deal featuring wide-awake card reading by Benedicte Cronier, who is one of France's top women players. It occurred during the European Open Pairs Championship.

It looks as though South must lose one heart, two diamonds and one club, doesn't it? But bridge is so great because of the way apparent tricks can vanish.

After winning the first trick with the club ace, Cronier led a trump to the king and ace. East switched to his singleton diamond queen. Declarer won, drew trumps (West threw a spade), and played a club to dummy's nine and East's 10.

When East exited with the club king (West throwing a second spade), rather than with another diamond, declarer felt sure that West had begun with four diamonds. Playing on that assumption, Cronier ruffed the club king, cashed the spade ace, played a spade to dummy's king, and ruffed the spade eight in hand.

Now, at trick 11, North, South and West were each down to three diamonds. Cronier led the diamond two from her hand, endplaying West when he won with the 10. He had to lead from the jack-seven into South's king-nine.

Nietzsche's first name was Friedrich.

Even though you may be happily employed in another area, don't discount entrepreneurial endeavors in the year ahead. You will be less restricted than you think.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you're intolerant today, you may treat others abrasively. Be careful, and remember that life is a two-way street.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your sage advice will be heeded by others today, but it might be ignored by you, especially if the suggestions you offer relate to resource management.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) In your haste to settle a testy issue, you may move too quickly for your own good and create further complications. Slow down and think things through.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Do not use veiled threats or pressure tactics in your dealings with others today — this kind will produce extremely undesirable results.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you lend something you cherish to an irresponsible individual today, there is a good chance you may get it back in a sorry state. Use discretion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Do not put yourself in charge of operations today in activities with friends. The majority might have another candidate in mind.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Today you might have to deal with a person you dislike. Don't let your emotions ruin the arrangement before you have a chance to work with one another.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Avoid the company of a friend who likes to manipulate others. S/he might see you as a choice prospect today — make them look elsewhere.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Do not take anything for granted today if you're in a situation that requires a vote. Allegiance from certain associates isn't as strong you might think.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your work could suffer today if you don't schedule your assignments properly. Don't leave anything until the last minute.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Someone with whom you are very close does not want you probing too deeply into his/her affairs today. Maintain a discreet distance and don't ask questions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Do not bring up an old, unresolved domestic issue that irritates both you and your mate. Neither will have the patience to deal with it today.
