Coast Guard tries to save ship

HOUSTON — A Coast Guard helicopter Saturday lowered two pumps to three people trying to save a sinking fishing vessel in the Gulf of Mexico 73 miles southeast of Freeport, Texas.

The 38-foot Dolphin radioed for help and the helicopter took off on the rescue mission at 8:25 a.m. The 82-foot Coast Guard cutter Point Monroe got underway from Freeport to go to the aid of the vessel and was expected to tow the Dolphin back to Freeport Saturday night, authorities said.

Chief Petty Officer Mark Kennedy, Coast Guard spokesman for the Houston-Galveston area, said there were two men and one woman on the boat and that they were not in serious danger. Their names were not immediately known, he said.

Kennedy said the self-powered immersion pumps were dropped to the vessel in orange crates at about 9:10 a.m.

Bush picks Cheney for defense

WASHINGTON — President Bush, moving quickly in the aftermath of John Tower's rejection as defense secretary, has chosen Rep. Richard Cheney, R-Wyo., for the top Pentagon job.

Less than 24 hours after the Senate turned down Tower in the climax of a sometimes sensational debate, Bush appeared in the White House press room Friday to introduce Cheney, a Ford administration veteran who holds the No. 2 spot in the House GOP hierarchy, as his replacement nominee.

"I'm convinced that he's going to be a great leader of our nation's military forces," Bush said.

'Hounds win Invitational

LONGWOOD — Lyman High School's boys track and field team used a solid performance to capture its own invitational Friday night before 501 fans at Lyman High School.

The Greyhounds were well balanced in the field and the running events to offset Vero Beach who proved to be tough in the field and sprinting events.

"This was a real class meet and winning it was really secondary," Lyman coach Fred Finke said. "Our first concern is that everything is running smoothly and that we make sure that the teams here want to return next year."

The Greyhounds, though, proved to be a very tough host and walked away with the team title as they racked up 69 points compared to Vero Beach's 53, Merritt Island's 44, Lake Howell's 32 and Dr. Phillips' 28. Lake Brantley finished seventh with 20 points as Oviedo took 19th with 2.

Films both boom, bust

Sanford of Film must approach Florida's growing movie industry with caution, expert says

BY LAURA L. SULLIVAN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Sanford needs to seize opportunities the film industry is bringing to this area — without being starstruck, city and civic leaders here have been advised.

Some city officials, however, aren't overly enthused about catering to the film industry.

Bruce Barker of Film and Tape Associates told about 80 members of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce Friday that the City of Sanford could have a bright future in the film industry if it is careful to protect itself.

"We all get starstruck," Barker said. "When the stars roll into town we all think, '...They're going to use my house. Oh, boy, my refrigerator is going to be on television.'"

Every major studio is preparing to follow the lead of Universal and Disney studios by locating in Central Florida, Barker said. The area offers savings in labor, land, taxes and other considerations, he said.

Barker said the film industry generated $16 million in revenue for Central Florida last year, up from $8 million in 1987 and $2 million in 1986. "The Sanford area could be a big player in all that," he said.

"My only fear is that we're going to lose out to somebody else," he said. "Sanford has that beautiful airport out here....If you don't make a strong pitch to place those studios here, you're missing out."

But all that glitters is not gold in the movie industry.

"One problem you're going to have is unemployment," he said. Although the new Universal Studios location in Orlando has created some jobs, it has brought a deluge of aspiring actors and producers to town.

And while the studios do open up job opportunities locally, Barker said, they bring in labor from Los Angeles and New York. "The motion picture business in this area isn't ours; it's somebody else's," he said.

Even supplies and equipment are purchased from companies in New York and California, he said. "Every ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Dede Schaffner and her staff at Dividends knew the problem of students dropping out of school was getting out of hand in Seminole County. So, inspired by programs they'd read about in other parts of the state, they gathered their resources and put together the Youth Motivators Program.

Schaffner went to the Greater Sanford and Greater Seminole chambers of commerce and asked them to recommend members of the business community who would be willing to commit at least one hour a week to helping keep a young person in school.

"These aren't academic advisors," explained Schaffner. "They're personal cheerleaders. They go one-on-one with the kids to encourage, set guidelines and to tutor when they can."

She emphasized that the Motivators need not have a teaching degree, only that they are good listeners and they can work a student through a hard time. If the Motivator comes across some work with which they can not help the student, they can call on a teacher for assistance.

Schaffner said she was pleasantly surprised when 55 volunteers showed up for Dividends' first training

Counties challenge regulation

SANFORD — The Florida Association of Counties is challenging a proposed state regulation which officials in Seminole and other counties fear could force them to pay for roads and water systems mandated by state and regional agencies.

County officials filed the challenge before the Division of Administrative Hearings in Tallahassee late Friday to meet a deadline, but said they believe a compromise can be worked out with Secretary for Community Affairs Tom Pellam.

TALLAHASSEE — Top transportation officials were warned as far back as 1987 that their agency was headed for financial trouble, but they apparently ignored the advice, a newspaper reported Saturday.

A Dec. 15, 1987, memorandum circulated among senior transportation officials warned that the agency's road programs would have to be cut or the department eventually would "bounce a check." The Tampa Tribune said.

Shuttle on track for blastoff

CAPE CANAVERAL — Rocket engineers made up lost time Saturday and top NASA officials said the shuttle Discovery was on track for blastoff Monday on a flight to deploy a $100 million communications satellite.

Astronaut Robert Crippen, chairman of NASA's mission management team, said no major problems were apparent and even the weather, which hampered work in the early hours of the countdown, appeared to be cooperating with a 90 percent chance of acceptable conditions at launch time Monday.

"We do not have any significant issues that we're working today so there's not a lot to report on," he said at a news conference. "The winds are predicted to be favorable. The vehicle is in good shape, we have no significant hardware issues that we're working."

"We're running a little bit behind in our countdown because of all the wind problems that we had yesterday trying to get closed out on the pad, but we have built-in holds that allow us to accommodate some of that kind of slippage. We're seeing no problems at this time for achieving a launch on Monday morning."

Discovery's launch on the 28th shuttle mission, the third since the 1986 Challenger disaster and the first of seven flights planned this year, is scheduled for 8:07 a.m. EST Monday.

At the controls will be skipper Michael Coats, 43, and co-pilot John Blaha, 46. Seated behind the two pilots on the LAKE MARY — Five members of the Lake Mary Parks and Recreation Advisory Board, officially established last month, took a field trip Friday morning.

They set out in four-wheel-drive vehicles, maps in hand, most wearing blue jeans and boots. These men and women had a definite mission: To locate a feasible piece of property of about 30 to 40 acres which the city can buy to use for a total recreational facility. Not an easy job. "Choice, cheaper property is not available" in Lake Mary, as Committee Member Mario Dell'acco pointed out. The city has budgeted $600,000 to purchase land.

The commissioners appointed Ed Bedell, Ed Suggs, Dell'acco, Cindy Dale, Arlene Rintelmann, Ken King and Jetta Woodall to represent the recreation advisory board to assist the city in recreation matters. Land acquisition is the first

Small plane plows into cars

JACKSONVILLE — A light plane attempting a landing at a private airport Saturday hit an electric guide wire and plowed into two cars on a busy highway. Injuring the pilot and both drivers, authorities said.

The FAA was investigating to determine whether the four-seater Cessna piloted by Robert Nathan Maser, of Oakland Park, Fla., crashed because of pilot error or mechanical failure, said Sgt. Steve Weintraub, spokesman for the Duval County Sheriff's Office.

The accident occurred at Craig Airfield, which serves private planes and helicopters for the sheriff's office and Florida National Guard.

"As he was approaching, he struck an electrical guide wire, which apparently caused him to go down," Weintraub said.

The aircraft, which was approaching the airfield from the South, was spun around 90 degrees to the West and dropped onto a 1982 Honda driven by Susan Diane Maxwell, 23, of Jacksonville, and a 1987 Cadillac driven by Rich Hall, 42, a Duval County sheriff's detective.

"He apparently hit on top of them (the cars)," Weintraub said. "The damage was done to the roof and hood area."

Maser, 44, suffered facial lacerations. Maxwell suffered a shoulder injury. Hall's neck was injured and his wife, a passenger in his car, was cut on her face.

None of the injuries were serious. There were apparently no injuries to Hall's child or two neighborhood children riding in his vehicle, Weintraub said. All the injured were treated at a local hospital.

The Cessna sustained damage to its front end. Weintraub did not know the extent of the damage.

Traffic on the four-lane road was tied up while the wreckage was cleared, the sheriff's spokesman said.

Clothier wins conch contest

KEY WEST — Conch shell music rang out from Key West Saturday as contestants vied for honors in the 27th Annual Conch Shell Blowing Contest.

Jim Cox, a local clothing designer, won the adult division after losing every year since 1986. Cox impressed the judges by teasing tunes from both a Queen and Horse Conch shells.

"I want to thank my parents," Cox cheerfully said. "Now that I have my trophy, I promise you won't have to listen to me any more."

The youngest winner was 2-year-old Wealey Jones, of Key West. He was frightened and refused to come up on stage, so his father accepted the honors for him.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

NASA eager for launch

United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL — The crew of the shuttle Discovery plans to launch a $100 million communications satellite Monday that will help NASA shut down expensive ground stations while improving space communications.

The spacecraft, called a Tracking and Data Relay Satellite, or TDRS, will be deployed from Discovery's payload bay by astronaut Robert Springer about six hours and 12 minutes after liftoff Monday.

Two other TDRS satellites already are in orbit but the first, launched from the shuttle Challenger in 1983 and stationed over the equator off the coast of Brazil, has a history of problems and is no longer considered reliable. The other TDRS was launched Sept. 29 during the first post-Challenger mission.

The satellite tucked in Discovery's cargo bay will replace the one launched from Challenger to give NASA an operational two-satellite system.

"We're looking forward to a good mission and getting the TDRS program fully operational," said Charles Hunter, deputy project manager at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md. "There are no open items on the spacecraft and we're ready to launch."

The TDRS satellite, built by TRW of Redondo Beach, Calif., will be fired into its final orbit 22,300 miles above the equator by an "inertial upper stage" — IUS — solid-fuel booster built by Boeing Aerospace Co. of Seattle.

"The challenge really is the first 6 1/2 hours," Discovery commander Michael Coats said. "Doing the things we have to do in that first six hours is a rush."

"If we can get through that without falling behind the timeline and get the satellite deployed safely, then we'll feel like we're over the hump."

One hour after TDRS is gently pushed from its cradle in Discovery's payload bay, the first stage of the $45 million IUS booster will fire to begin the satellite's trip to a circular "geosynchronous" orbit 22,300 miles up.

At such altitudes, a spacecraft's orbital velocity is synchronized with the rotation of the Earth and it appears to hang stationary in the sky, a crucial point because it eliminates the need for complex — and costly — ground antennas capable of tracking moving objects.

Once on station, the TDRS satellite's two 16-foot antennas will open like umbrellas and a pair of rectangular solar panels will unfold, giving the spacecraft dimensions of 57.2 feet by 42.6 feet.

With two fully operational TDRS satellites in orbit on opposite sides of North America, ground controllers can stay in contact with shuttle crews over at least 85 percent of each orbit.

Put another way, future shuttle fliers will be out of direct radio contact with the ground for less than 13 minutes or so per orbit. And that will allow NASA to shut down costly ground stations scattered around the world.

Stations in Guam and Santiago, Chile, will be closed by June 30 with stations in Hawaii and on Ascension Island in the South Atlantic Ocean following suit by Sept. 30. A station in Dakar, Senegal, will be closed at the end of 1990.

A NASA spokesman said the space agency will save $27 million a year by closing down the ground stations.

The TDRS launched last September is positioned over the equator at 171 degrees west longitude. The newest TDRS will be maneuvered to 41 degrees west longitude and the aging spacecraft now parked at that location off the east coast of Brazil will be maneuvered to a point over western South America to serve as a spare.

The two operational satellites are positioned as far apart from each other as possible while still remaining visible to a single ground station at White Sands, N.M.

Even so, a slight gap in coverage exists over the Indian Ocean, amounting to about 15 percent of a shuttle orbit, and it is when a shuttle flies through this "zone of exclusion" that its crew will be out of contact with the ground.

The TDRS satellites are crucial not only for the shuttle program, but also to relay data and commands back and forth from ground stations and other satellites. For example, the $1.4 billion Hubble Space Telescope, scheduled for launch in December, will require two fully operational TDRS satellites to function properly.

The TDRS satellites are owned by Contel Federal Systems, of Fairfax, Va., which leases the spacecraft to NASA for about $20 million annually.

Here's glance at shuttle crew

● Navy Capt. Michael L. Coats, 43, is the mission commander. An expert on emergency abort procedures and a passionate space advocate, he first flew aboard Discovery in 1984 during the ship's maiden flight. An accomplished jet pilot with 350 Vietnam combat missions to his credit, Coats, a native of Riverside, Calif., holds master's degrees in aeronautics and administration. He and his wife Diane have two children.

● Air Force Col. John E. Blaha, 46, the co-pilot, is making his first shuttle flight. He is an ex-Air Force test pilot who once flew a modified F-104 jet to an altitude of 104,400 feet. During Discovery's mission, Blaha, born in San Antonio, Texas, will be responsible for operating a large-format IMAX camera that will shoot scenes for a movie titled "The Fragile Earth." Blaha and his wife, Brenda, have three children.

● James P. Bagian, 37, is a physician-astronaut. A shuttle rookie, he is an engineer, surgeon and jet pilot who somehow found time to become a full-time NASA astronaut. Born in Philadelphia, Bagian joined NASA in 1980 and moved to the Johnson Space Center in Houston where he met his wife, Tandi, a NASA engineer. During Discovery's flight, he will be responsible for doing medical experiments, including one that could help prevent space sickness and another designed by a high school student to study bone healing in weightlessness. Bagian has one child, Krista Rose, 4.

● Marine Col. Robert Springer, 46, is an astronaut. Making his first space flight, he is a jet pilot and military officer with experience in a variety of fields. Springer, who considers Ashland, Ohio, to be his hometown, will be responsible for deploying the $100 million Tracking and Data Relay Satellite. Selected as an astronaut in 1980, Springer and his wife, Mary, have three children.

● Marine Col. James Buchli, 43, is an astronaut. An infantry platoon commander during the Vietnam War, he has two 1985 shuttle flights to his credit, a secret military mission and a German Spacelab flight. His primary role this flight is as flight engineer during launch and landing and to operate an experiment to test space station radiator technology. He enjoys scuba diving, hunting and fishing. Buchli, who calls Fargo, N.D., his hometown, and his wife, Sandra Jean, have two children.

Florida attorney charged in Mississippi kidnapping

A St. Petersburg attorney has been charged with extortion and perjury in connection with the kidnapping of the elderly wife of multimillionaire Robert M. Hearin, the FBI announced Saturday in Jackson, Miss.

Special Agent Wayne R. Taylor told a news conference, however, that investigators still have no clues as to the whereabouts of Anny Laura Hearin, 72, who was taken from her fashionable Jackson home on July 28, 1988.

Taylor and Jackson Mayor Dale Danks have expressed concern over the fate of the frail and sickly woman who suffers an intestinal condition that doctors have said could be fatal without daily medication.

In response to a question as to whether authorities believe the woman is still alive, Taylor replied, "I don't have any reasons to believe that she is or that she is not."

Taylor said attorney Newton Alfred Winn, 64, a former associate with Robert Hearin in School Pictures Inc., was picked up by federal agents in a parking lot at Deland, Fla. He said Winn was held in Baker County Jail and would appear before a U.S. Magistrate Monday.

Winn is specifically charged with extortion for having had a ransom letter in Mrs. Hearin's handwriting mailed from Atlanta to her husband on Aug. 10, 1988. He is also charged with lying to a federal grand jury in Biloxi, Miss. on Aug. 3 concerning his knowledge of the abduction.

Hearin, who built a fortune in the oil and banking industries and has an estimated net worth of more than $100 million, discovered his wife missing from the family home about 4 p.m. on July 28 when he returned home from work. He found blood smears near a door indicating force was used to remove his wife from the home.

Hearin also discovered a vague and crudely typed note demanding that he pay 12 former holders of School Pictures Inc. franchises or their survivors "For wrongs you have done them." Hearin is the firm's board chairman and its largest stockholder.

Taylor said Winn's name was among the 12.

shuttle's flight deck will be James Buchli, 43, and Robert Springer, 46, with physician-astronaut James Bagian, 37, seated alone on Discovery's lower deck.

Also on board will be four rats that had tiny holes drilled through the non-weight-bearing fibula bones in their hind legs Thursday as part of a student experiment to find out how weightlessness affects bone healing.

After the flight, the rodents will be killed so Brown University medical student Andrew Frascan can study how the injuries healed in research that could shed light on how broken bones might be treated during future long duration space flights.

Liftoff originally was planned for Feb. 18, but a series of problems, including the replacement of three high-pressure liquid oxygen turbopumps, forced NASA to delay the mission by nearly three weeks.

NASA test director Ronald Phelps said Discovery's countdown fell seven hours behind schedule early Saturday when engineers, hampered by high winds Thursday and Friday, ran into minor but pesky problems closing up the shuttle's engine compartment.

But with 37 hours of contingency, or "hold" time built into the countdown, Phelps said it was a relatively simple matter to shorten an already planned eight-hour hold later in the day to make up the lost time.

"We'll reduce that hold down to one hour and basically be back on schedule," Phelps said. "This early in the count, losing those seven hours really doesn't hurt us that much. There's been a lot of hard work required, but overall, this has probably been one of the smoothest counts to date."

The primary goal of the five-day, one-hour flight is the launch of a $100 million Tracking and Data Relay Satellite — TDRS — that will improve space communications while allowing NASA to shut down five ground stations scattered around the world for a savings of about $27 million per year.

Springer plans to deploy the satellite and its $45 million solid-fuel "inertial upper stage" booster from Discovery's 60-foot payload bay six hours and 12 minutes after liftoff.

For the rest of the flight, the astronauts will conduct a variety of medical and engineering studies to gather data on topics ranging from space sickness to the development of chicken embryos in weightlessness.

Landing is scheduled for 9:14 a.m. EST next Saturday at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Coats and Blaha got in a final round of landing practice early Saturday flying Gulfstream jets modified to mimic the performance of space shuttles on final approach.

At launch pad 39B, engineers had planned to begin loading liquid oxygen and liquid hydrogen aboard the shuttle, starting early Saturday, to power the ship's electricity producing fuel cells.

But technicians ran into problems closing up the shuttle's engine compartment, a requirement for the fuel loading operation, and the work was not finished until shortly before 7 a.m. when the countdown came out of an extended hold for the start of the fuel loading procedure.

Back at the shuttle processing hangars 4.2 miles from the launch pad, workers stood by to tow the shuttle Atlantis to the Vehicle Assembly Building for attachment to its boosters and external tank. The move came a day late because of time needed to clean up contamination in a fuel line fitting on the tank.

Atlantis is scheduled to blast off April 28 on a high-priority mission to launch a $530 million probe to Venus. To preserve that launch date, Discovery must be off the pad by March 18 at the latest, a date the ship's crew is optimistic about making.

Man charged with arson

SANFORD — A Sanford man was arrested for arson Friday after several witnesses reported he set fire to his apartment. Curtis Willie Bradley, 22, 20 Higgins Terrace, was arrested at 11:30 a.m. near Airport Boulevard and McCracken Road by Sanford police and charged with arson and criminal mischief. Three witnesses reported to police they saw him enter his apartment at about 8:30 Friday morning and set fire to the apartment. When units from the Sanford Fire Department arrived, they found flames coming from the apartment's bedroom and the roof vent. The interior of the apartment was reported gutted. Four other apartments received smoke damage from the fire. Bond was set at $5,000.

Police arrest Oviedo student in class

OVIEDO — An Oviedo High School student was taken from class and arrested at the school Friday afternoon on charges he sexually assaulted a 12-year-old girl. Seminole County deputies reported the 17-year-old boy assaulted the girl twice, on Dec. 17 and Dec. 26. Bond was set at $5,000.

Six arrested on DUI charges

Driving under the influence charges were filed over the weekend against the following:

• Patrick F. Diomed, 24, 624 Fellowship Dr., Fern Park, was arrested Saturday at 2:15 a.m. on Shore Road after an accident investigation. A Winter Springs policeman reported Diomed threatened him after he was arrested and taken to the city police department. • Carol C. Calvenbach, 35, 207 W. Crystal Lake Ave., Lake Mary, was arrested after a Lake Mary policeman reported she was driving off the pavement and driving over the centerline as he followed her Saturday at 2:20 a.m. on Crystal Lake Avenue and Fifth Street. Bond was set at $500.

• David Arthur Randolph, 18, of Pennsylvania, was arrested after an accident at the intersection of U.S. Highway 17-92 and Airport Boulevard by Sanford police Saturday at 12:30 a.m. He was also charged with running a red light. Bond was set at $500.

• Cameron Stuart Laurie, 24, 136-D Springwood Court, Longwood, was arrested following an accident investigation at about midnight Friday on Raymond Avenue by a county deputy. Bond was set at $500.

• Thomas Craig Widdicombe, 37, Merritt Island, was arrested by an Altamonte Springs policeman after he reportedly sped past the officer at 79 mph in a 45 mph zone on east State Road 436 at about 2 a.m. Friday. Bond was set at $500.

• David W. Harders, 31, 897 Lyns Drive, Longwood, was arrested by an Altamonte Springs policeman at about 5 a.m. Friday after he was reported speeding north on State Road 434. Bond was set at $500.

13 arrested on drug-related charges

The following drug-related arrests were made over the weekend:

• Thomas Richard Van Winkle, 42, 3203 Jan Drive, Orlando, was charged with trafficking in cocaine Friday after undercover city-county investigative bureau (CCIB) agents reported arranging to purchase and purchasing several ounces of cocaine from him twice.

Agents reported they bought an ounce and a half of cocaine from him on Jan. 25, 1989, for $1,600 in the parking lot of Bennigan's Restaurant on State Road 436 in Casselberry. When they met him on Friday at the Gate gasoline station in Altamonte Springs at about 4:30 p.m. and reportedly bought 10 ounces of cocaine for $8,500, he was arrested. Agents also reported arresting Van Winkle's roommate, William Campbell Welch, 36, at the scene as an accomplice.

Both were charged with two counts of trafficking in cocaine and conspiracy to traffic in cocaine. They were held without bond.

• Jeffrey Woods, 30, 25 Castle Brewer Court, Sanford, was arrested Saturday at about 1 a.m. at the Last Stop at Southwest Road and 18th Street after he reportedly sold $20 worth of cocaine to an undercover CCIB agent. Charges include sale and delivery of cocaine and possession of cocaine. Bond was set at $2,000.

• Brothers Bernard Pew, 24, and Simon Pew, 25, both of 114 Plymouth St., Altamonte Springs, were arrested by CCIB agents after Simon Pew reportedly sold $10 worth of cocaine to an undercover agent at the Disco Market Friday at about 9:30 p.m.

Bernard Pew reportedly ran from the scene and when he was captured nearby, agents said they found several pieces of cocaine valued at $500 nearby.

Simon Pew was charged sale and possession of cocaine. Bernard Pew was charged with possession of cocaine with intent to distribute and resisting arrest without violence. Bond was set at $2,000 for each of the men.

• Pamela Kay Riley, 21, 546 Plumosa Drive, Sanford, was charged with possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana by a Sanford policeman Friday at about 10 p.m. at the Burger King on Orlando Avenue.

The officer was issuing her a trespassing warning when she reportedly ripped the warning while signing it. She was arrested for resisting arrest without violence and the officer reported finding a marijuana cigarette in her coat pocket. Bond was set at $500.

• Ronald Lee Jackson, 21, 95 Seminole Gardens, Sanford, and Dale Lavon Presley, 19, 1228 North St., Altamonte Springs, were arrested by CCIB agents Friday at about 5:30 p.m. near State Road 436 and Lake Howell Road when agents reported seeing them conducting an apparent drug sales transaction.

Agents reported finding both of them in possession of marijuana. Both were charged with possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana. Bond was set at $500 for each of them.

• Susan Diane Batts, 32, 644 Spring Oaks Blvd., Altamonte Springs, was arrested at her home Friday after her daughter reported to Seminole County deputies she had found cocaine in her mother's purse.

Authorities said tests showed that two vials taken from the purse contained cocaine and so a search warrant was served on Batts at her home, where CCIB agents reportedly found several drug paraphernalia, marijuana and cocaine residue. Batts was charged with possession of a controlled substance and drug paraphernalia. Bond was set at $2,000.

• Three men were arrested at the Club 2 Spot in Midway Saturday at 12:30 a.m. after they reportedly arranged to sell $10 worth of crack cocaine to undercover CCIB agents. Arrested were Timothy Bernard Jamison, 23, 2460 Sipes Ave., Midway, Eddie Lee Smith, 25, 615 Palmetto Ave., Sanford, and Jerome Henderson, 35, 103 McKay Blvd., Sanford.

Jamison was charged with the possession and sale of crack cocaine. Smith was charged with possession of cocaine and drug paraphernalia. Henderson was charged with possession of cocaine and less than 20 grams of marijuana. Bond was set at $2,000 for each man.

• George Cecil Lewis, 31, 1231 Alberta St., Longwood, was arrested by Longwood police Friday after he reportedly ran a stop sign on Bennett Drive at about 9 a.m.

The officer reported finding a small amount of marijuana in the car and paraphernalia. The officer also reported the sticker on Lewis's vehicle tag has been altered. Lewis was charged with possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana, possession of drug paraphernalia, driving with a suspended driver's license and possession an altered tag. Bond was set at $500.

Pair avoid prison in beating, robbery

By BRAD CHURCH
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Two of the men accused of beating and robbing a Geneva man in the woods off Lake Harney Road last August have been sentenced in circuit court and ordered to help prosecutors in their case against two brothers who participated in the beating.

Michael Wayne Fuller, and Christopher Craig Ashe, both 19 and of Geneva, turned themselves in and confessed to the beating two days after it occurred. Fuller was given a year's probation for battery, and Ashe was placed under house arrest for a year and given four years' probation for robbery.

Judge O.H. Eaton Jr. also ordered the pair to complete 40 hours of community service. Ashe was ordered to pay the victim's $576.82 Central Florida Regional Hospital bill and pay him $1,800 restitution. Fuller was ordered to pay Groskey $100 restitution.

They were charged with participating in the beating of Ronald Groskey, 39, of Geneva, last Aug. 24. Groskey reported he was sitting on the bank of Lake Harney relaxing and drinking beer when a group of men approached him and he invited them to share his beer with him.

Groskey reported when the beer ran out he was hit from behind, kicked by the men, and hit with a tree limb. He escaped and ran, but was caught, thrown into a ditch and beaten more.

Groskey told sheriff's deputies the men tied him up with vines, and covered his body with branches, thinking he was dead. He passed out and awoke the next morning and went to a nearby house where he called his wife and the sheriff's department. He said when he awoke his wallet was gone.

Prosecutors said Fuller and Ashe were the least involved in the beating. They said Ashe pulled the others off Groskey and that Fuller also tried to stop the beating. Ashe called the sheriff's department two days later and he and Fuller turned themselves in.

Two others accused of taking part in the beating, Thomas Stanley Oglesby Jr., 19, and his brother, Shawn Lee, 17, also of Geneva, are charged with robbery.

Florida jobless rate drops to 5.3 percent

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Florida's jobless rate in February dropped from 5.9 percent to 5.3 percent, a decrease attributable to an overall rise in all job categories, according to a report released Friday by Gov. Bob Martinez' office.

The .6 percent decline from January kept pace with the national rate, which also declined. Federal figures showed the national jobless rate in February was 5.1 percent, compared with 5.4 percent in January.

In Florida, economists said a growth in all job categories — particularly the construction industry — helped reduce February's unemployment rate.

New jobs in the construction industry have increased by 9,300 over the past 12 months, a rise that occurred despite a slight decrease in January in new housing starts and an slight overall slowdown in the state's economy.

The report said the service sector continues to provide the most jobs for Floridians, followed by the retail job category.

Despite a cooling of the state's economy, Florida remains one of the better states in the nation when it comes to creating new jobs, the report said.

Politicians, union workers join Eastern strike rallies

Demonstrations in support of striking Eastern Airlines workers were staged at two northern airports Saturday.

In Chicago, in the largest recent picketing at the world's busiest airport, more than 2,000 union workers — from artists to steel makers — joined striking Eastern Airlines employees for a "unity walk" Saturday at O'Hare International Airport.

And in Buffalo, N.Y., some 1,000 union members and supporters Saturday linked hands in front of the Greater Buffalo International Airport in support of striking Eastern Airlines mechanics.

Speaking to the Chicago picketers through a bullhorn, Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., said he would sponsor a legislative attempt to force President George Bush to declare a 60-day cooling off period and appoint emergency mediators in the strike.

"There is no question that the whole process of labor relations is being abused by Frank Lorenzo," Simon said. Lorenzo is Eastern's owner and chief executive officer.

"Ayatollah Lorenzo," a worker shouted back.

"I think the president is making a mistake," in not intervening in the strike, Simon said.

The picketing Saturday was the largest in Chicago since Eastern's machinists went on strike a week ago. Sponsored by the Chicago Federation of Labor and the AFL-CIO's Fairness at Eastern Committee, the demonstration attracted workers from more than 75 locals in Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana, including steelworkers, teachers, actors, graphic artists and firefighters.

Jackie Vaughn, president of the teacher's union said the solidarity demonstrated at the picketing would "ripple down to other unions," while Robert Gibson, president of the State Federation of Labor called the walk "one of the greatest displays of unity."

"Today we're trying solidarity and it works," said Gibson. Chicago Fire District 4 firefighter Ray Bolcanski was one of the picketers out in the balmy weather. "This is the forefront, the front of the line of the battle" between labor and management, he said.

Also joining the picket line was the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Longwood woman gets state post

By SANDRA BOUCHAHINE
Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD — Mary Helen Blakelee, of Longwood, is the new chief of the Florida Commerce Department's Bureau of Business Assistance.

Blakelee, 42, moved to Tallahassee last month to take over the bureau's operations. The Bureau of Business Assistance fosters business growth in Florida, with emphasis on small firms. It deals with business services, finance, entrepreneurship and community development.

Blakelee currently serves as president and director of the Central Florida Council for High Technology; director of High Technology Sensors of Orlando; and director of the Florida Seed Capital Association.

Blakelee said she was "delighted" about the appointment.

"I participated in the interview process and was one of a number of candidates. Most of my professional career, I've been working with small, very early stage companies," she said Thursday afternoon from her Tallahassee office.

Being involved for the past five years in a number of local and state activities which deal with small businesses, Blakelee said her new responsibilities are related to what she has been doing "for most of my professional career."

"I was very pleased," she said. Finance, community development and business service will report to Blakelee who will manage the three sections of the bureau to provide information, resources and technical assistance to small businesses.

"This is my first experience in the public sector," she said.

"We are very pleased and feel fortunate to have Mary Helen Blakelee join us here in the Department of Commerce," said Lt. Gov. Bobby Brantley, the Secretary of Commerce.

Originally from Illinois, Blakelee moved to Florida from Chicago 5 1/2 years ago to become the president of a small business investment company. She moved to Longwood from Miami in 1984 where she lived until February of this year.

Blakelee has served as consultant to various technological organizations, including the Division of Sponsored Research, University of Florida, Gainesville; Schwarz Electro-Optics Inc., Orlando; and NASA-STAC, Gainesville.

She spent one year as a visiting lecturer in finance at the Roy E. Crummer Graduate School of Business at Rollins College. Her previous experience includes vice president with Baldwin, Rust and Dizney Inc. and as vice-president with First National Bank of Chicago. Her duties at the bank included management of the Institutional Venture Capital Fund which provided working capital to small businesses.

Blakelee received an M.B.A. from the Graduate School of Management, Northwestern University, in 1975, after earning her B.A. from Rosary College in Illinois.

Jury now seated in Cruse murder trial

United Press International

BARTOW — A jury was sworn in late Friday after five days of questioning to hear the mass murder and attempted murder charges against retired librarian William Bryan Cruse Jr.

Cruse, 61, is accused of murdering six people, including two rookie policemen, trying to kill 28 others and kidnapping two hostages in a shopping center shooting rampage April 23, 1987.

Opening arguments are scheduled to begin Monday and testimony is expected to last four to six weeks.

A jury pool that began with 119 people Monday had dwindled to fewer than 20 by Friday before the jury of seven women and five men were sworn in. Four alternates also were selected.

Cruse, who has expressed fears of being poisoned since his arrest and has refused to shave or have his hair cut, kept his face buried in his hands most of the day. But he sat up and stared at the floor as the jury was sworn in.

Most of the prospective jurors dismissed during the five days were familiar with the case through television and newspaper reports. The trial was moved from Brevard to Polk County because the court determined an impartial jury could not be found near the crime scene.

Others were excused for personal and religious reasons or because of their views on the death penalty.

"I don't like the idea of sitting in judgment of another person. I think the judicial system is discriminatory in many ways," Greg Jones said just before Circuit Judge John Antoon dismissed him.

Richard Parks also was dismissed, partly because he had heard enough about the case on television and through newspapers to be certain Cruse is guilty.

"I'm saying I would be willing to listen to the facts, but it's hard to believe that he's not," said Parks, who also expressed doubt that being insane is reason to be acquitted for murder.

That is precisely the defense public defender Marlene Alva will use to try to save Cruse from the electric chair. He was arrested at the scene with several weapons and has been identified by several witnesses.

In addition to getting jury candidates who said they could put aside previous information about the trial and listen only to the evidence, attorneys were having a difficult time finding jurors who would admit they would not automatically sentence a guilty defendant to death.

"The question to the prospective juror in this case of 'Would you favor the death penalty' is unfair because of the horrendous nature of the crime," said Assistant State Attorney Chris White.

He said he believed only someone strongly opposed to the death penalty would not want it imposed upon the person who committed the acts with which Cruse is charged.

Former governor honored for costly civil rights effort

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Florida State University presented a special medal to former Gov. Leroy Collins Friday, honoring him for a record on civil rights that cost him his political career 20 years ago.

"Our intention is to award this medal very infrequently," said Bernard M. Sliger, FSU's president, at a brief 80th birthday party for Collins on the porch of a public-policy building that bears his name.

About 150 Tallahasseeans turned out to honor Collins, who was governor from 1955-61.

Collins received the James D. Westcott Distinguished Service Medal, which was specially struck for the occasion. Sliger said the medal, named for one of Florida's first U.S. senators, would be reserved for future Floridians whose careers combine public service and high ethical standards.

Collins was elected to the Florida House in 1934, at the age of 25, and fought for several years to reapportion the Legislature — even though the old "porkchop" misalignment favored rural counties like his own.

As governor, he was known as a racial moderate and kept Florida out of the wave of defiance other Southern states mounted after the Supreme Court's 1954 school-desegregation ruling.

Collins was briefly president of the National Association of Broadcasters after his six years as governor, but resigned that post when President Lyndon Johnson asked him to be the first director of the Community Relations Service, serving between 1964 and 1966.

Collins served as Johnson's peacekeeping envoy to the Selma-to-Montgomery march.

That role was to haunt his 1968 race for the U.S. Senate, when conservative Republican Ed Gurney branded Collins a liberal. After his defeat by Gurney, Collins retired from politics and now practices law in Tallahassee.

"My own conscience was different than the majority conscience was," said Collins before the ceremony at FSU. "At those times, I followed my own conscience."

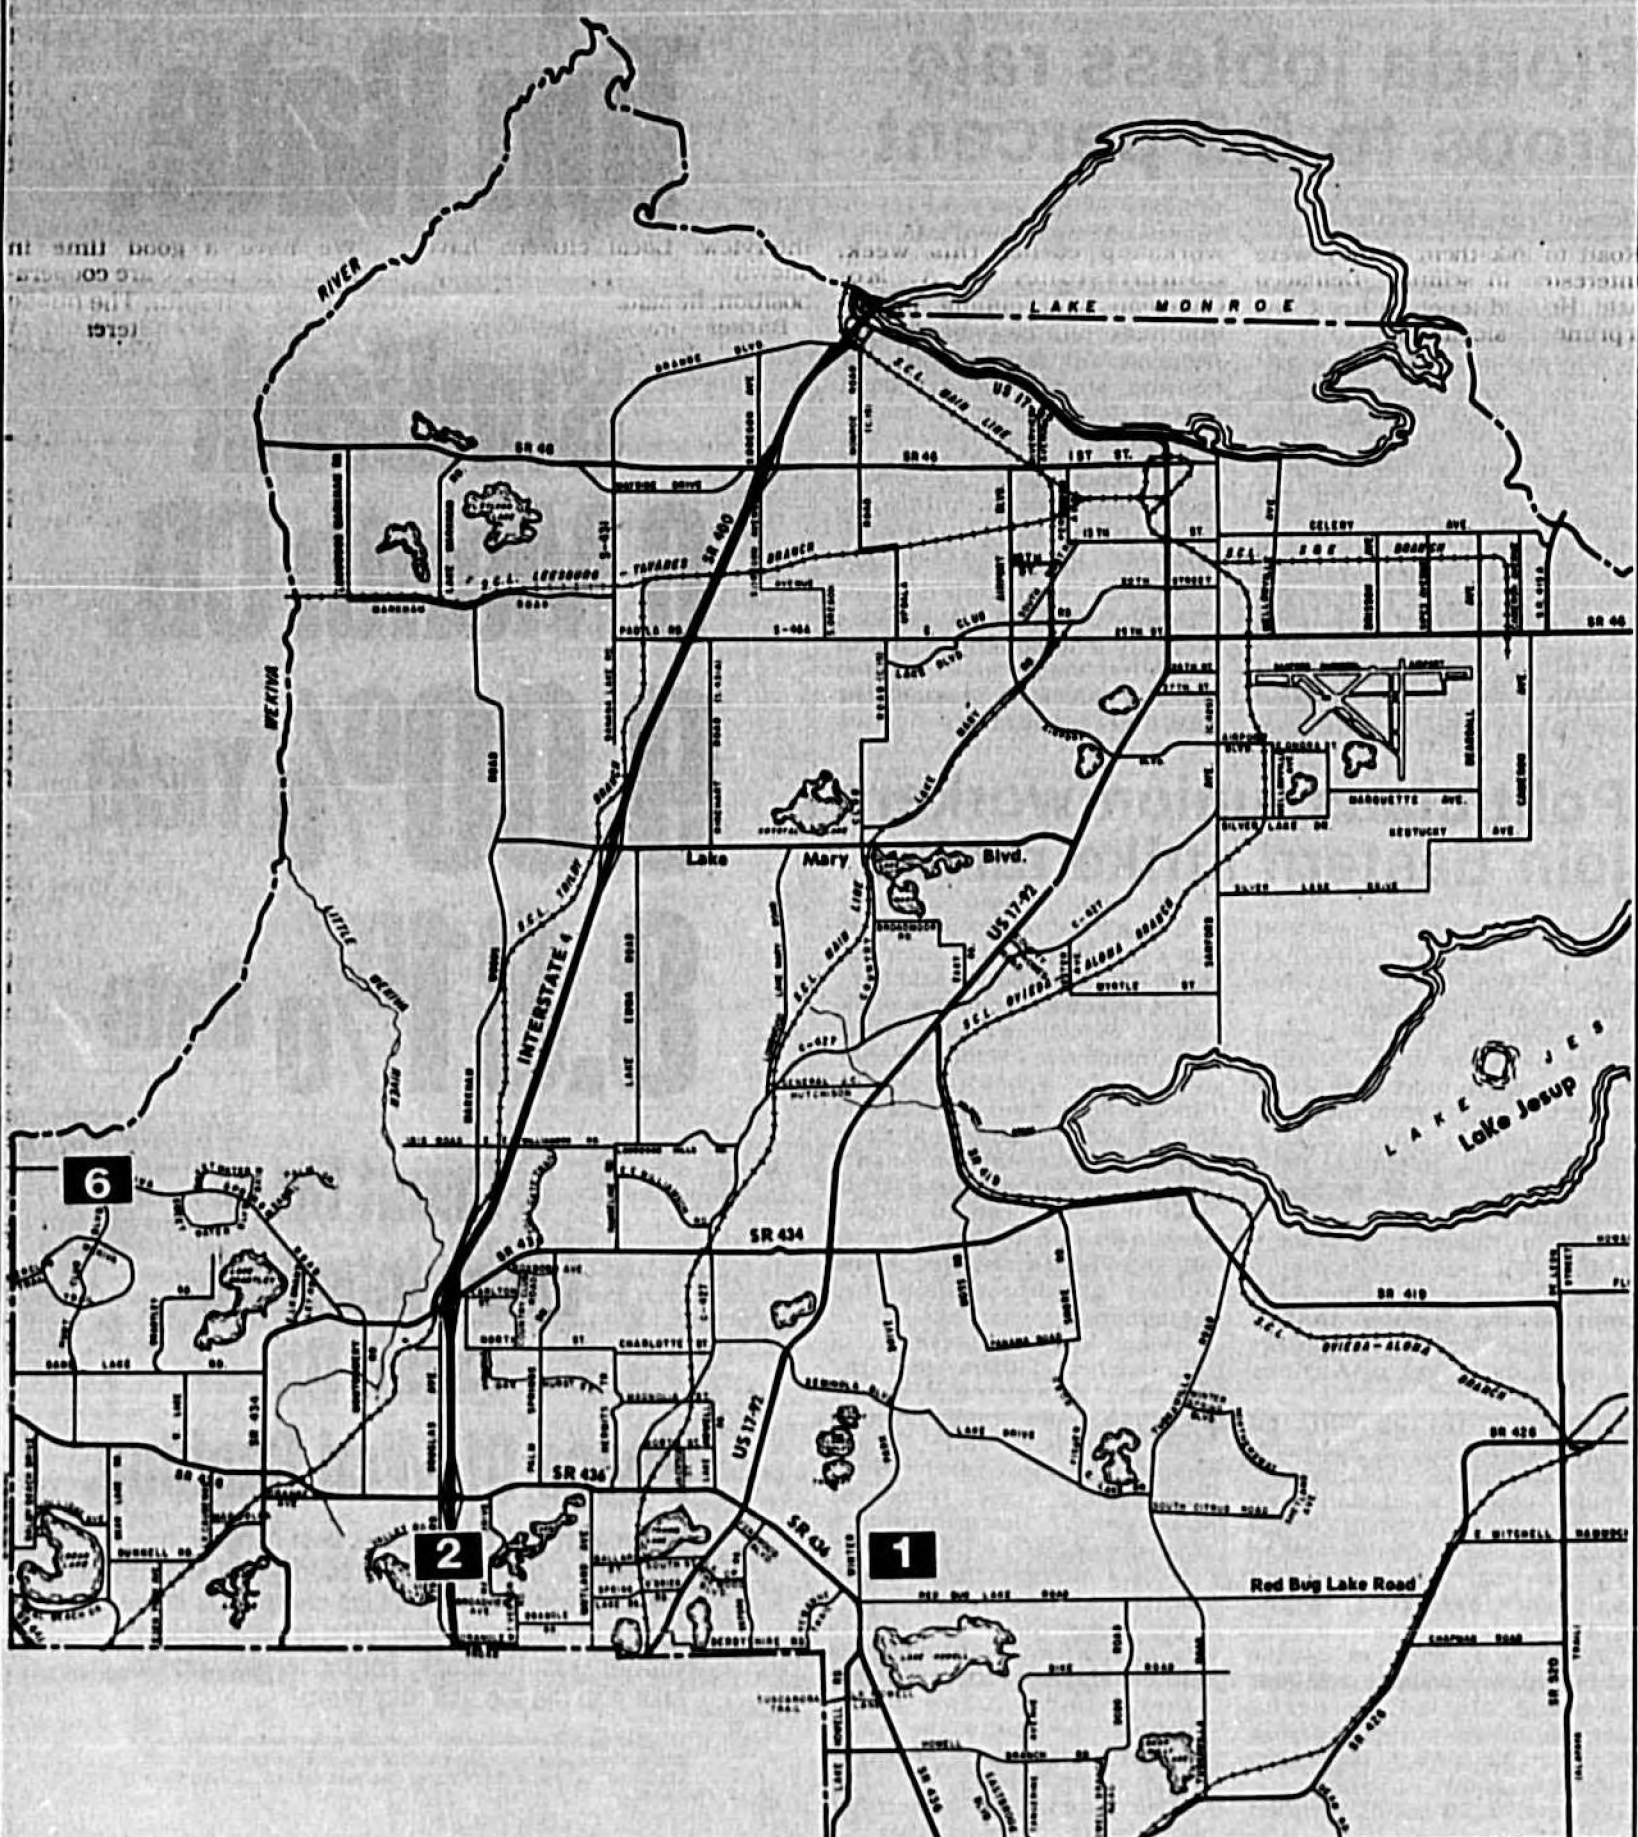

Religion professor Leo Sanders called Collins "a gentle man who was also a man of principle." He said, "On his 80th birthday, we celebrate not so much the longevity as the quality of his life."

A half dozen grey-haired former reporters, who had covered Collins as governor, serenaded him with a song from the first annual Press Corps Skits. To the tune of the "Wiffenpoof Song," they warbled, "We are Leroy's boys, and we've found our way..."

Collins thanked the dignitaries and his hometown supporters.

"They have encouraged me, they have challenged me, they have supported me — except in that last election, the Senate race in 1968," said Collins. "Over the years since, I have regretted the consequences, but not my stand."

Clemency hearing set for convicted murderer

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Bob Martinez has scheduled an April 6 clemency hearing for James Richardson, the Arcadia migrant worker who says he was railroaded in the poisoning murders of his children 22 years ago.

"I called for a hearing because a great many questions exist regarding the Richardson case. I'm glad the Board of Executive Clemency will finally get to hear the facts so we can find some answers to those questions," Martinez said.

The clemency board is comprised of the governor and state Cabinet. It is empowered to commute an inmate's sentence or grant a pardon.

Richardson was convicted of first-degree murder in the death of Betty Jean Bryant, one of his seven children fed a lunch laced with the potent pesticide parathion on Oct. 25, 1967. All seven later died. Richardson was sentenced to death, but the sentence was commuted to life in 1972.

Mark Lane and Ellis Rubin, Richardson's lawyers, contend he was framed by former DeSoto County Sheriff Frank Cline and former prosecutors Frank Schaub and John Treadwell.

They say the real killer was Betsy Reese, a baby sitter who is now in a nursing home and suffers from senility.

Cline, Schaub and Treadwell strongly deny any wrongdoing. Schaub has filed a $35 million defamation suit against the lawyers.

The governor recommended a clemency hearing Feb. 1 after his legal staff conducted an inquiry. He has appointed Dade County State Attorney Jane Reno to conduct a more formal investigation.

Reno will present her findings at the clemency hearing.

High court will likely decide canker liability

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — State agriculture officials said Friday they expect the Florida Supreme Court will ultimately decide the state's liability in the destruction of 20 million citrus plants in the 1984 canker scare.

The 2nd District Court of Appeal in Lakeland has asked the high court to review two judgments totaling $4.6 million for growers who suffered losses in the eradication program, saying the issue is one of great public importance.

More than 60 similar damages suits have been filed against the Florida Department of Agriculture, "with others to come," said Mallory Horne, general counsel for the agency.

The legal questions bear "tremendous implications for the state," Horne said. "Maybe $150 million to $200 million is involved and maybe even more."

The Supreme Court has been asked to review a $1.34 million judgment for Bill Lambert and Joe and Joe B. Himrod, nurserymen from Hardee County who lost 280,000 trees in the eradication program.

The other case involves Polk Nurseries, with damages of $3.3 million.

Among the issues is "who pays and how do they pay," said Horne. "We say the Legislature should. Taking $200 million out of this department would wreck the department."

Canker is a virulent bacterial infection found in an Avon Park nursery in 1984. Most growers supported the eradication program at the time, fearing an industry wide disaster unless the infection were brought under control.

"He followed the advice of the scientific people every step of the way," said Charles Blair, aide to Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner, of his boss.

The department is nevertheless scaling down the program. Conner announced Thursday a 50 percent reduction in program staff and money over the next two weeks.

The emphasis will shift to the Asian strain of canker, the most virulent type, discovered on the state's west coast in 1986.

2 Duke University students charged with faking Florida driver's licenses

United Press International

DURHAM — Two Duke University freshmen have been charged with making false ID cards after 44 Florida driver's licenses were found in their possession Friday.

Nine more Duke students will be charged with related crimes when they return from spring break, said Stephen P. O'Brien, chief of Durham County's Alcoholic Beverage Control Law Enforcement office.

Charles Jesse Medrano, 19, of Fort Lauderdale, Florida and Gerardo Porcell, 18, of Kings Point, N.Y., were arrested as they left a commercial photo finishing company.

Bush picks Cheney to lead Pentagon

United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Bush, moving quickly in the aftermath of John Tower's rejection as defense secretary, has chosen Rep. Richard Cheney, R-Wyo., for the top Pentagon job.

Less than 24 hours after the Senate turned down Tower in the climax of a sometimes sensational debate, Bush appeared in the White House press room Friday to introduce Cheney, a Ford administration veteran who holds the No. 2 spot in the House GOP hierarchy, as his replacement nominee.

"I'm convinced that he's going to be a great leader of our nation's military forces," Bush said.

While Vice President Dan Quayle was on the stump Friday denouncing Democrats for McCarthyism in their attacks on Tower, Bush sought to dispel the rancor from the bitter Tower clash, saying, "Look, that's history. We're moving forward with a new nominee."

Cheney, 48, has limited direct experience with Pentagon affairs, and has not served on the Armed Services Committee. But he has a wealth of Washington background — he was President Gerald Ford's White House chief of staff — and has served on the House Intelligence Committee.

Presenting his nominee, Bush said, "Dick is a widely respected man of principle."

When the Senate voted 53-47 Thursday essentially along party lines to reject Tower — only the ninth Cabinet nominee ever denied confirmation — most senators voting against the former Texas senator said they were concerned about his history of heavy drinking, his relations with women and possible conflicts of interest for his defense consulting work.

While Bush repeated his belief that Tower was eminently qualified to serve in the Cabinet, he extolled Cheney and predicted "clear sailing" in the Senate for him.

Cheney, who had mild heart attacks in 1978, 1984 and 1988 and underwent bypass surgery last August, told reporters he talked with his doctor just before the announcement and was advised that "there's absolutely no medical reason why I cannot undertake this assignment."

The selection was Bush's first of a sitting House or Senate member to serve in his administration, but it was not the first time the president has selected a Ford administration official. Brent Scowcroft, Bush's national security adviser, served Ford in the same capacity.

Ford, in a prepared statement, applauded Bush's choice, saying, "Dick Cheney has excellent judgment and will be fair and firm in the tough decisions as secretary of defense."

Asked why he had decided to take over the troubled military establishment, Cheney said, "I agonized over it. ... It was not an easy decision" to quit Congress after 10 years. But he added, "When the president asks you to consider a proposition such as this one, you have to consider it seriously."

In 1987, Cheney gained some national attention by serving on the congressional committees that investigated the Iran-Contra scandal. He often played a lead role in defending President Ronald Reagan's actions during the nationally televised hearings.

Bush said he is fully confident that Cheney had nothing in his background that would cause his nomination trouble in the Senate.

"I believe that it will go very fast and I believe it will have smooth sailing," Bush said.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee and leader of the Tower opposition, said in a statement that hearings on Cheney's nomination will begin next week.

Senate GOP leader Robert Dole of Kansas said he doubted Cheney could be confirmed before the end of the week when the Senate takes a two-week recess.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., the senior Republican on the committee, said the committee would examine Cheney "thoroughly and fairly."

Dole, who opened his comments to reporters by saying "this time around we'll have a confirmation, not an execution," said Cheney should get "the same careful scrutiny as other nominees."

Hailing Cheney, Dole said, "He's tough, but fair, and will not be intimidated by defense contractors, Congress or the Soviet Union."

Nunn, in Philadelphia for a Democratic Party meeting, said Cheney "seems to me to be qualified and he certainly is well-liked and well-respected. He's known as a man of integrity."

Bush, questioned about Quayle's speech in Indianapolis that assailed Democratic opponents of Tower, refused direct comment on the ground he had not read the vice president's speech.

The harsh attack from the vice president drew a sharp response from some Democrats, including California Sen. Alan Cranston, who said, "I fought Senator Joe McCarthy in the 1950s, when Dan Quayle was still in kindergarten. I can inform the vice president that he is using the same tactic Joe McCarthy used: guilt by association."

Bush, avoiding direct comment, repeated that Tower's treatment at the hands of Democrats was unfair and added that he intended to take Democratic leaders "at their word" that the White House and Congress could move quickly beyond the Tower fiasco to address the pressing issues facing the nation.

Cheney is both cowboy and political insider

United Press International

Although he has spent most of adult life in the nation's capital, Rep. Richard Cheney, R-Wyo., wears his conservative Western origins — he dons polished cowboy boots with his dark pinstriped suits.

Those boots may walk new floors. President Bush nominated Cheney to be defense secretary 24 hours after the Senate rejected 53-47 Bush's first choice, former Sen. John Tower of Texas.

The selection marked the first time Bush asked a sitting member of Congress to serve in his administration and the choice won approval from Republicans and Democrats.

House Speaker Jim Wright of Texas said the selection "means that America's defense will be in capable hands."

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., who served with Cheney on the House Intelligence Committee and the special Iran-Contra panel, called the nomination "brilliant" and said Cheney is "superbly qualified by judgment, interest and experience."

Cheney was reared and educated in Wyoming, but as a graduate student he traveled to Washington in the late 1960s to be a congressional fellow in the office of Rep. William Steiger, R-Wis.

Cheney stayed on to take a job in 1969-70 as an aide to Donald Rumsfeld, director of the Office of Economic Opportunity in the Nixon administration.

When Rumsfeld moved to the White House to become chief of staff for President Gerald Ford, Cheney followed and then replaced Rumsfeld in that job — the youngest person ever to hold that job.

In 1978, Cheney went back to Wyoming and won election as the state's lone House member and promptly began a steady ascent in the House Republican leadership.

In 1980, Cheney successfully challenged veteran Rep. Marjorie Holt, R-Md., for the chairmanship of the House Republican Policy Committee.

In 1987 he moved up to head the House Republican Conference, succeeding Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., who was running for president. Just last December, his GOP colleagues picked Cheney for the No. 2 job of assistant Republican leader.

In that post, Cheney was presumed to be heir apparent to House Republican leader post when Rep. Robert Michel of Illinois retires.

Parks

major assignment for the board.

"Our wish list is to get a centralized complex about 30 acres with a multitude of functions and acreage sufficient enough to handle ballfields if we can accomplish this major goal. If we can't do that, we'll evaluate alternatives," Delfiaco said.

The complex should have baseball and soccer fields, handball, racquetball and tennis courts.

The wish is something that the recreation group wants to make a reality for the community. At least four major sites and some satellite parks have been targeted. One of the possibilities where at least some facilities can be located is at Liberty Park or the "mud flats," a 26-acre piece of property owned by the city off Country Club Road. That was their first stop. As everyone climbed out of their vehicles and stepped onto the wet, sandy terrain shielded by young sand pines, they unanimously agreed the site was "beautiful."

The land, located behind the new Springhurst Park subdivision, was decided to the city as a park by Grace United Methodist Church and Timacuan. Recreation board members said it is a good possibility because it is city-owned and because $80,000 from impact fees is already budgeted to make improvements there.

Without topographical studies and surveys, the recreation members and Building Official Stan Welling couldn't say exactly how the land could best be put to use because it is a low-lying flood-prone area. Welling stooped over to draw a diagram in the sand with a stick to show roughly where the boundaries lie. Delfiaco said initial improvements would be both permanent and temporary so that the city won't spend a lot of money at first on things like pavilion areas or practice ballfields until the capabilities of the land are known.

One of the advantages of the site, which contribute to its beauty, is a canal which leads into Crystal Lake. Delfiaco said if the city could get a permit from the state Department of Environmental Resources, it could dredge the canal to give it access to Crystal Lake creating a park-like setting.

The next stop was a 24-acre site only about 3/4 mile down the road off Rantoul Lane and Shealey Road. Purchase of that land would depend on whether the city could negotiate a good price from Hubert Early, a developer who is willing to sell and donate some of the land, Delfiaco said.

The group eyed the land and discussed its potential for recreational development.

Ken King, board member, suggested the parcel which runs in a north-south direction could accommodate football and soccer fields and racquetball and handball courts. He said the cost for preparing the land, now covered by brush and spindly trees, would be minimal.

A few other possible sites are located on Longwood-Lake Mary Road. Delfiaco said that the recreation board hopes that property owners might consider selling some land to the city that could be a potential recreation site.

"We have written letters to property owners on Rinehart Road to ask them if they were interested in selling," Delfiaco said. He said Rinehart Road was a prime consideration.

An existing staircase parks system with a smattering of several unnamed parks, some basketball courts and a tot lot is all the city has for recreation. In a city which is experiencing rapid growth, the time to think about where residents will enjoy their leisure hours has come.

Mayor Dick Fess said "If we start now, purchase the land and design it, maybe we can have the park ready to open by next summer. That would be wonderful."

The task has already begun.

business in this town has something to offer.

"As a business community, you're going to find a lot of shady operations walking in because of this hype," Barker warned. Scams centering around phony talent searches and investment packages are common in local communities.

The industry can cost a community more than it contributes to it, he told the group. Studios use labor and equipment from New York and Los Angeles, while "Florida is nothing but a backdrop."

That concern was raised by city commissioners at a workshop earlier this week. Commissioner A. A. McClanahan said filming in the business district backs up downtown traffic and blocks the way to businesses — and doesn't guarantee that the crews who use the street will patronize local business.

"I've gotten a lot of input from citizens who aren't too enthused about it," McClanahan said. "It's tying up traffic downtown and blocking our businesses."

Whitely Eckstein said the Seminole council of local governments (CALNO) has given its support to one-stop permitting for film crews. The city of Sanford has adopted an ordinance allowing film crews to apply for one permit, then to film at any given date after obtaining that permit.

"I think seeing Sanford on TV creates a good image for us...I'm all for it," Eckstein said in an interview. Local citizens have shown more support than opposition, he said.

Barker praised the City of Sanford for its steps toward establishing one-stop permitting for filmmakers. Tomorrow night the commission will hear a second reading of an ordinance establishing one-stop permitting for studios to film on city property. The ordinance would allow film crews to close off city streets without having to apply for permission from various agencies.

Sara Fuller of Superboy Productions said three episodes have been filmed in Sanford since the series began Aug. 15. While the crew of about 110 people do not dine in local restaurants, she said, the studios pay off-duty police and rent space from merchants.

"We have a good time in Sanford. The people are cooperative and very helpful. The public as a whole is very interested in what we're doing. We've never had a problem in Sanford."

Motivators

session last September.

"The program has been a phenomenal success," she said. "We already have 75 people working with us and there's a waiting list for another class."

In the class, volunteers are taught to listen, which Schaffner said is the most important skill a Motivator can have. Another is that they be able to relate to the problems facing the kids.

One Motivator was a drop out who had eventually gone back to school and become successful in business. Many of them are people in their 20s and 30s who can remember the trials and tribulations of the teen years.

Often, students have become discouraged with life in general and with school in particular. Since its inception, several students have asked their guidance counselor for the opportunity to working with a Youth Motivator.

The reason the student is planning to drop out may not even be academically motivated. It may be a way of reaching out to get help for some other problem. It is the Motivator's job to find the problem and help the student find the light at the end of the tunnel.

"We don't try to set long term goals for these kids," Schaffner said. "We work toward that test next Friday, not toward college graduation."

Working one-on-one, it is hoped that a friendship will develop between the kids and the Motivators. Especially for a youngster, there a few things more important than friendship.

"Of course, we're not 100 percent successful," Schaffner said. "You can't expect to be when you're working with a high risk group like this. But we feel we've helped some kids stay in school and that is always a huge success."

Each Motivator takes on the challenge of helping only one student at a time. In that respect, they are very much like the Big Brother/Big Sister program. The biggest difference is that their goal is much more focused.

"These are not, by any stretch of the imagination, bad kids," Schaffner said. "They just need some understanding."

DOT

Giddens Jr. to his superiors including Transportation Secretary Kaye Henderson said the agency could avoid "criticism and blame" by informing Gov. Bob Martinez and the Florida Legislature about an impending cash crunch.

The cash crunch hit last fall, forcing cutbacks of $675 million from DOT's $2.4 billion work program for this year. It also has been forced to scale back its road building plans for next year.

Giddens said officials "gambled" on getting more money.

DOT spokesman Jim Hensley said Henderson never saw Giddens' memo because an aide referred it to Assistant Secretary John Goodnight, who has since resigned in a management shake-up.

"It was a red flag that should have stood out" for other DOT officials, said Hensley.

Henderson has said he referred questions about the agency's work program to his assistants, who he said lied to him. He also has said he had no idea of the seriousness of the money problem until this January.

The cash shortfall was brought on in part by DOT increasing its spending on road design and land acquisition so the planning phases for new roads would be finished when the agency received additional state money.

"The problem is certainly no surprise; we all knew the downside of increasing our production effort without additional funding to finance it," Giddens wrote 14 months ago.

His memorandum advises DOT officials to tell legislators and the governor of the problem and let them choose between giving the agency more money, or making cuts in engineering, land buying or construction.

"Our work program should clearly identify any construction projects placed at risk in order to set off lights and sirens" so people will be aware they need to make "the hard decision" about raising taxes soon enough to avoid construction delays, Giddens said.

Giddens was fired as the director of pre-construction and design in July 1988. He later was rehired for a position in DOT's production management section.

O'Connor undergoes bypass surgery

ATLANTA — Actor Carroll O'Connor, in Georgia to film his TV series "In the Heat of the Night," underwent successful coronary bypass surgery Saturday at Emory University Hospital.

Hospital officials said O'Connor, best known for his role as Archie Bunker in the 1970 television series "All in the Family," underwent a four-hour procedure that began around 8 a.m.

"Doctors say his cardiac function is good," said Judy Smith, a hospital spokeswoman, after O'Connor emerged from the operating room.

Smith said O'Connor, 64, would remain in intensive care for about three days and then be moved to a private room, where he will take about a week to recover.

Surgeons grafted six arteries around his heart to replace existing clogged blood vessels, she said.

O'Connor underwent a routine checkup Friday while filming episodes of the NBC television series in Covington, Ga., about 30 miles southeast of

The results of the test suggested a coronary angiogram was in order and led to the discovery that O'Connor was in need of heart surgery.

Biter orders to take AIDS test

MINNEAPOLIS — A woman accused of biting a security guard who suspected her of shoplifting has been ordered to undergo a test for the AIDS virus.

Hennepin County District Judge Eugene Farrell ordered Friday that Sharon Bradshaw, 40, Burnsville, be tested as a condition of her continued release without bail.

According to documents, Bradshaw told the guard she had AIDS and would be happy to die of the disease knowing he would, too.

AIDS experts say there never been a documented case of the AIDS virus being transmitted through a bite and it is unlikely it could be transmitted in that manner.

Bradshaw is charged with misdemeanor theft, assault and disorderly conduct in connection with the Jan. 23 incident at a K-mart store in Richfield. She was accused of stealing a package of film. A pretrial hearing has been set for April 11.

There is precedent for charging a person with AIDS for biting another person. In 1987, James Moore, a prisoner at the federal correctional facility in Rochester who has the AIDS virus, was convicted for assault with a dangerous weapon for biting two guards.

Kennedy won't run for governor

BOSTON — Rep. Joseph P. Kennedy II, D-Mass., and his wife of 10 years announced Friday they are separating and the congressman also said he will not run for governor in 1990.

Kennedy, 38, a two-term congressman, is the eldest son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

"We announce today that we have decided to separate," said a joint statement by Kennedy and his wife, Sheila Rauch Kennedy. "It is a decision we have arrived at only after long and intense efforts to find another course. We consider it a personal matter and don't intend to comment on it further."

Kennedy was considered the front-runner in the 1990 Massachusetts gubernatorial campaign after Gov. Michael Dukakis, the 1988 Democratic presidential nominee, announced in January he would not seek a fourth term.

A poll of Massachusetts Democrats and independents taken Monday through Wednesday for The Boston Globe showed Kennedy as the top choice for governor, named by 32 percent of the 500 people surveyed.

Bombing investigation continues

Vincennes skipper drove wife's van shortly before explosion

United Press International

LA JOLLA, Calif. — The skipper of the USS Vincennes took his wife's van on an early morning drive only a short time before she narrowly escaped injury in a possible terrorist bombing of the vehicle, the FBI said Saturday.

Capt. Will C. Rogers III, who accidentally shot down an Iranian civilian airliner in the Persian Gulf last July 3, killing all 290 aboard, had taken his wife's van for a short drive about an hour before the Friday morning blast, said Ron Orrantia, a FBI spokesman.

Two highly placed law enforcement sources said Rogers had driven to a doughnut shop.

Saren Heng, 23, an employee at Golden Doughnuts, located about a mile from the Rogers' house, said Saturday she was at work Friday morning when a man she "thinks" was Rogers visited the store.

Escorted by a number of plainclothes agents, Rogers and his wife, Sharon, returned to their house Saturday morning after making a brief stop at a supermarket in the same mall where the doughnut store is located.

It was unclear whether the Rogers, receiving protection from the Naval Investigative Service, were planning to stay at the house after spending the night at an undisclosed location.

Hours after the 7:45 a.m. explosion, the FBI took control of the investigation, suspecting that the bombing was carried out in retribution against Rogers.

Orrantia said "every possibility, including terrorist activity," was being examined.

No one has claimed responsibility for the bombing, which occurred less than a half-mile from the Rogers' home.

By Saturday, as FBI explosives experts flown in from Washington began their examination of the van and remnants of the bomb, a number of key questions remained unanswered, including whether the blast was actually the work of terrorists and whether the target was Rogers or his wife.

It was also unknown whether the device, believed to have been attached under the van's transmission, was planted while the vehicle was parked overnight in the Rogers' driveway or at some later point.

Joining the FBI in its investigation were agents with the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, the Naval Investigative Service and the San Diego Police Department's Metropolitan Arson Strike Team.

Sharon Rogers, who was en route to her job as a teacher at the nearby La Jolla Country Day School, was not injured in the series of explosions. Her white 1984 Toyota van was engulfed in flames but she escaped without injury.

The Los Angeles Times, quoting a law enforcement official, said Sharon Rogers told investigators the family had not received any death threats.

However, the Washington Post and The New York Times Saturday reported that the Pentagon said Sharon Rogers received a telephone call last July from a man with a foreign accent who asked, "Are you the wife of the murderer?" She hung up, and officials later dismissed it as a crank call.

At the scene of the blast Saturday, a one-block stretch of a busy La Jolla boulevard remained roped off as the FBI sifted through the wreckage.

"The van is still on the street, and ... our concern is the preservation of evidence," Orrantia said. "This'll be a very, very thorough examination (to discover) what the actual device consisted of and possibly how it was detonated."

Meeting at Vatican ends with praise, no answers

United Press International

VATICAN CITY — A meeting between 35 U.S. archbishops and Pope John Paul II to discuss the problems of preaching the gospel in the United States ended Saturday with praise from both sides but no apparent solutions.

The pope, in his closing address after four days of meetings, told the Americans, "I give thanks to God for the faith-filled history of the church in your country."

Archbishop John May of St. Louis, Mo., president of the U.S. National Conference of Bishops, responded that participants in the meeting would return to the United States "with greater love for you, Holy Father, greater appreciation for your collaboration in your service as universal pastor and a renewed commitment to our own work as pastors, evangelists and servants of our people."

"These have been most encouraging days for us and we hope that we have shown you once again our total cooperation and loyalty," May said.

But amid the pledges of renewed devotion and loyalty, indications were that the meeting called by the pope to discuss the problems of preaching the gospel in the materialistic society of the United States achieved no firm solutions.

Asked at a news conference if he thought the meeting would change the shape of American Catholicism, Archbishop Daniel Pilarczyk of Cincinnati said: "I think not. I don't think it will change the face of American Catholicism. No."

During the four days of meetings in the Vatican's Old Synod Hall, the U.S. archbishops and the pope, flanked by 25 heads of Vatican departments, discussed 10 major topics affecting the role of bishops in evangelization.

In almost every speech, the U.S. archbishops stressed the problems of teaching strict Catholic dogma on such issues as the church's total ban on artificial means of birth control in a democratic society that prizes individual freedom above all.

Speakers on the Vatican side expressed their views diplomatically.

Researcher: Women less likely to get painkillers

United Press International

NEWPORT, R.I. — Women are half as likely as men to receive pain killers after surgery because doctors often do not take their complaints seriously, according to a University of Rhode Island researcher.

A study of 30 men and 30 women who had coronary bypass surgery indicated a bias against giving painkillers to women, researcher Karen L. Calderone said.

Calderone, who presented her study during a weekend National Conference for Women in Psychology, said doctors and nurses were twice as likely to give narcotics to men than to women during the first three days after surgery.

The study was conducted between January 1985 and August 1986. Calderone declined to say where the study was conducted.

"Health care professionals are taught that (narcotics) should be dispensed more conservatively to the expressive patients, who tend to dramatize their pain, and more liberally to stoical patients," said Calderone, who is also an intensive care nurse at Miriam Hospital in Providence.

Because women often express their feelings more than men, they may be denied painkillers. When a woman complains of pain, she said, "It seems like it's regarded as nagging and whining."

Doctors and nurses are also encouraged to give sedatives instead of painkillers to patients who complain about pain, Calderone said. Of the 30 women studied, five of them were prescribed sedatives. But none of the men were given sedatives, she said.

Calderone admitted her findings do not definitively prove a problem exists.

Progress made in trade dispute

BRUSSELS, Belgium — The United States and the 12-nation European Community have made some progress in two days of negotiations on world agricultural trade, but many difficulties remain, EC officials said Saturday.

The two sides discussed both short-term and long-term measures to reform the thorny issue of trade in farm goods, and an EC spokesman said there was some evolution in the U.S. position.

The United States and the EC have blamed each other for the failure in the mid-term review in December 1988 of the so-called "Uruguay Round" of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

GATT, founded Jan. 1, 1948, serves as a multilateral treaty that lays down a code of conduct for international trade and provides a forum for negotiations on removal of trade barriers. The latest round of GATT negotiations took place in Punta del Este, Uruguay, in September 1988.

In December, negotiators from the United States and the 12-nation European trading bloc stuck to their positions on agricultural subsidies.

The United States insists on a total elimination of all subsidies by the end of the century, but the EC rejects the U.S. proposal as unrealistic, pressing for short-term measures to stabilize world markets in major sectors like cereals, sugar, dairy products and oil seeds.

The two sides are trying to solve their differences in view of a new meeting in Geneva next month.

Junkyard puts dog on payroll

BEIJING — A leading Chinese newspaper Saturday criticized the directors of a state-run trash collection firm in northeast China for putting the junkyard dog on their public payroll.

The newspaper China Youth News reported it recently learned of the apparent scam last year at the refuse collection firm in Tangshan, a city east of Beijing in Hebei Province.

It said company manager Wang Decun "paid" the dog a monthly salary of 40 yuan, or $11, just under half that of the average two-legged Chinese worker, for eight months from August 1987 to March 1988, apparently to cover its feeding costs.

The dog, which was used to guard the company's junk and trash yard, belonged to Wang's daughter, but was listed as "Wang Chunsheng, temporary worker," the newspaper said.

"Wang Decun used public money to do private things," the newspaper said. "It is especially worth paying attention to that giving wages to the dog was studied and approved at a managers' meeting chaired by Wang."

"What were the other managers doing at the meeting?" the newspaper asked.

The China Youth News said the other directors' acquiescence was symptomatic of official corruption and abuse of power now rampant in China, unleashed by liberalizations under its economic reforms.

Communists claim responsibility

ANGELES, Philippines — The communist New People's Army Saturday claimed responsibility for the slaying of a prominent businessman outside the U.S. Clark Air Base, accusing him of using CIA money to organize anti-rebel groups.

The NPA also claimed the victim, Remigio Nepomuceno, forced women into prostitution, murdered a student leader 17 years ago and committed three cases of rape.

The charges, contained in a statement released to reporters, were unsubstantiated.

Nepomuceno, director of the Angeles City Chamber of Commerce and Industry, was shot in the head Wednesday outside his downtown office. His assailants were described as two young men armed with .45-caliber pistols.

Angeles is a liberty town for Clark Air Base, 50 miles north of Manila.

Last month, Nepomuceno, 44, helped organize a rally by supporters of U.S. military bases in order to block an anti-bases protest outside Clark.

"He (Nepomuceno) also served as conduit or channel of CIA funds for vigilante groups," said the statement from the NPA's Mariano Garcia Brigade.

Investigators: Plane forced to dump fuel

United Press International

DRYDEN, Ontario — Survivors of a plane crash that killed 24 people in central Canada said Saturday the Air Ontario jet seemed to lack sufficient power as it took off in a snowstorm and had been forced to reduce weight by dumping fuel at a previous stop.

Authorities resumed searching for the bodies of 22 victims trapped in the charred wreckage in a forest about half a mile from the runway at the Dryden airport.

At least 24 people, including one American, were killed in the Friday afternoon crash of Air Ontario Flight 363, a Fokker F-28 jet bound for Winnipeg, Manitoba, with 65 passengers and four crew members, officials said.

Norm Pascoe, a spokesman for Transport Canada, the government transportation agency in Ottawa, said there was heavy snow at the time of the crash and visibility was less than a mile.

There was no official speculation about the cause of the crash, but passenger Ron Mandich of Green Bay, Wis., who suffered facial burns, whiplash and a fractured arm, said the plane seemed to be laboring as it went down the runway and lifted from the ground.

"I remember saying, 'Oh, Lord, this could be the time I meet you, but I just don't really think so,'" Mandich said. "And the fellow next to me was hysterical. He was thrashing and hollering and he was really out of his mind."

"It just seemed like there wasn't enough power there to make it go," Mandich said. "I didn't know if it was because there was something wrong with the engines or if the plane was too heavy. I think it was the plane being too heavy."

Susan Godin, 34, of Thunder Bay, Ontario, who survived the crash along with her husband Dan, 37, and daughters Lori, 15, and Danielle, 11, said earlier that the plane's takeoff from Thunder Bay was delayed because it had to unload fuel to reduce weight.

The plane, filled to capacity, had taken on additional fuel in Dryden before taking off for Winnipeg, Godin said.

"All of a sudden I felt some bumps," Godin said, describing the crash. "I don't fly very much, so I just thought we were having some turbulence. Then the stewardess who was in the seat in front of me, she just yelled, 'Duck.'"

"We slid on top of the trees. It was a really slow landing," Godin said.

Paul McKnight, vice president of airline based in London, Ontario, said the plane was about 16 years old, adding that the airline had yet to be able to determine if the plane had any previous problems.

A passenger list was not immediately made available, but at least two U.S. citizens were among the survivors.

Main South African church condemns apartheid

United Press International

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The main church of South Africa's white ruling party has condemned apartheid as a sin for the first time and apologized for giving it decades of scriptural justification.

In a statement issued at the end of a weeklong, often stormy meeting of the Dutch Reformed church with its black and mixed-race counterparts, the white church also called on the minority government to lift a 1,000-day-old state of emergency "at the earliest possible moment."

"We confess with humility and sorrow the participation of our church in the introduction and legitimization of the ideology of apartheid and the subsequent suffering of people," the church statement said.

It declared the ideology of strict racial segregation a sin that "adversely affected" human dignity and warned that any defense of it on scriptural grounds "would have to be regarded as heretical."

Dutch Reformed Church moderator Johan Heyns said Saturday the statement "cleared up the ambiguity" surrounding church policy, averted a rupture in relations with sister churches and put the burden on government officials to assess the new position.

"It implies a certain moral obligation to them to at least listen to what is going on in the church," Heyns said in an interview. "We have stated here very important principles as far as apartheid is concerned."

The predominantly white "mother church" claims among its 1.7 million members President Pieter W. Botha, 90 percent of his Cabinet and 75 percent of all legislators in the National Party.

The younger sister churches represent 675,000 South Africans of mixed race and 1.1 million blacks. The mixed-race Dutch Reformed Mission Church is headed by the Rev. Allan Boesak, a prominent anti-apartheid activist.

Friday's statement was the most dramatic shift in church policy since the retraction of the biblical justification for apartheid at a synod in October 1986 and the opening of membership to all races. But in that document, titled "Church and Society," the church refused to declare apartheid a sin.

The mixed-race and black sister churches said in a statement they found the new position "encouraging" but called on clergy to "embark on acts of liberation within the church and society."

U.S. team ends visits to Soviet mental hospitals

United Press International

MOSCOW — U.S. psychiatrists, lawyers and translators Saturday concluded two weeks of visits to determine if the Soviet Union was housing political dissidents in its mental hospitals and said they had met most of their goals despite some obstacles.

The delegation, including representatives of the American Psychiatric Association, told a news conference preliminary findings from their unprecedented first-person interviews with 27 Soviet patients will be published in about six weeks.

A clean bill of health would allow the Soviet Union to rejoin the World Psychiatric Organization, which has ostracized the country for the past six years, charging dissidents were locked up in mental wards. The Soviet Union left the body in 1983 as it was about to be expelled.

Yuri Reshetov, chief of the Soviet Foreign Ministry department for humanitarian affairs, said Moscow has applied for readmission to the World Psychiatric Association. A decision, he said, will be made at the body's next congress in Athens, Greece in October.

After arriving Feb. 26, the State Department delegation, which included 14 psychiatrists, disappeared from public view and spread out to seven hospitals in six cities under a self-imposed press blackout.

The team re-emerged Saturday, saying most of their objectives had been met but complained of some difficulties in obtaining medical records and obstructions that had to be overcome before patients would be interviewed in some of the seven hospitals visited.

"The expectations of the American psychiatric delegation were met in most but not all areas," Dr. Lorren Roth, psychiatric team leader from the University of Pittsburgh, told the news conference at the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

Syria says U.S. diplomats were caught spying

United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Two U.S. diplomats detained by radical Palestinians for eight hours last week were caught taking pictures in a restricted area near a guerrilla training camp, the Syrian Foreign Ministry and a Palestinian group said Saturday.

A ministry statement published in the pro-Syrian newspaper As Saifir said the Americans, identified by Syria as Col. Clifford Robert Ward, a military attaché, and his assistant Maj. Robert Siegel, were caught taking pictures of a Palestinian refugee camp outside Damascus March 3.

The statement said members of Ahmed Jibril's Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command detained the two diplomats because they were in a forbidden area and carried maps and cameras equipped with zoom lenses.

"PFLP-GC guards then turned the diplomats over to the Syrian authorities which called the United States ambassador, Edward Djerejian, and handed over the two men to him, unharmed," the ministry statement said.

Similar charges were made by the PFLP-GC.

The Syrian-backed Palestinian group, in a statement, said at the time of their arrest near a PFLP-GC training camp 25 miles outside Damascus the two Americans claimed they were Canadian Embassy officials.

"They were well treated before being handed over to the Syrian authorities with their espionage material. ... This is not the first time in which the CIA carries out an espionage operation to the benefit of Israeli services," the PFLP-GC statement said.

Bush to ban dumping of toxic waste abroad

United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Bush pledged to ban the export of U.S. toxic wastes for disposal abroad, a growing "shadow trade" that has provoked outrage in Third World nations targeted as dumping grounds.

Bush said Friday he would propose legislation to halt export of hazardous wastes — such as incinerator ash — except where the United States has an agreement with the receiving country providing for the safe handling and management of such materials.

Bush made the announcement at the swearing-in of Louis Sullivan as the new secretary of health and human services. Bush said that toxic exports from industrialized nations to developing countries posed growing health risks worldwide.

"We're determined to work with other concerned governments to exercise wise stewardship over our environment, particularly where matters of health are concerned," Bush said.

Bush's announcement came amid mounting anger in Africa and Latin America over the increasing number of private waste handling firms seeking to dump toxic materials from the United States and Europe in developing countries.

Typically, the dumpers offer huge sums to impoverished countries to accept the waste, even though they do not have the technology to safely dispose of toxic materials.

Such schemes have proliferated as industrialized nations have toughened their laws on toxic waste disposal and watched their landfill capacity dwindle. Increasing pressures on cities and industry to find other ways to dispose of their wastes.

The most publicized toxic export case involved the Khian Sea, a Norwegian-owned vessel that roamed the Caribbean for months in 1987 seeking a dump site for its cargo of 13,500 tons of highly toxic ash from municipal garbage incinerators in Philadelphia.

The ship intended to dump its ash in Panama and the Bahamas, but officials in those countries refused to accept it after learning it contained toxic metals and other poisons. About 3,500 tons were dumped in Haiti before that country's government found out. The Khian Sea ultimately returned to Philadelphia with 12,000 tons of its load.

George Bush

Officials in the West African country of Guinea said another Norwegian-owned ship, the Bark, early last year dumped about 15,000 tons of Philadelphia ash on Kassa, an island 4 miles offshore from Conakry, the capital of the country. Norway has since agreed to remove the ash.

In June 1988, the Organization of African Unity passed a resolution condemning the dumping schemes, but officials say the practice can be highly lucrative to government officials in Africa who look the other way.

Sikhs kill two political leaders

United Press International

NEW DELHI, India — Sikh extremists shot and killed a ranking member of Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's ruling Congress (I) Party and a Communist Party leader in less than 24 hours, the Press Trust of India news agency said Saturday.

The news agency quoted the K.P.S. Gill, director general of police in the northern state of Punjab, blamed Sikh extremists for the death of the two political leaders in the northern state.

Sikh extremists since 1983 have been waging a violent campaign to establish an independent theocratic state called "Khalistan," or "Land of the Pure," in Punjab. More than 5,000 people have been killed in the campaign.

The Press Trust of India quoted the senior police official as saying Sikh militants shot and killed Gajjan Singh, a state leader of the Communist Party of India, Saturday morning when the victim was going to his wheat field in village Kalake in Amritsar district, about 250 miles northwest of New Delhi.

The news agency said Singh reported the attackers, whose numbers were not known, escaped.

The news agency also reported Suraj Prakash Malhotra, a leader of the Congress (I) Party and former president of the Ropar Municipal Committee, was shot dead by Sikh extremists Friday night in his home at Nagal Chowk in Ropar district, 170 miles north of New Delhi.

The victim's son Sandip Malhotra was wounded in the attack and was hospitalized.

Sikh extremists allege they need a separate Sikh state because members of their faith, who make up 2 percent of India's more than 800 million people, are discriminated against by the Indian government.

McFarlane: Reagan never said to lie

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Robert McFarlane, testifying against his former White House aide, Oliver North, said President Reagan never told anyone to lie to Congress about secret efforts to keep Nicaraguan rebels alive.

Reagan "never did say, 'Go lie to Congress,' but he did say we should not share that information," said the former national security adviser, who was sentenced a week ago for illegally withholding information from Congress.

North, the former staff member of the National Security Council, watched intently Friday as his ex-boss and mentor took the stand as a hostile witness.

The jury of nine women and three men, which has sometimes struggled to stay alert during the trial, perked up as McFarlane, in low, almost mournful tones, began describing his role in the Iran-Contra scandal.

McFarlane, the national security adviser from October 1983 to December 1985, said the administration arranged in mid-1984 for Saudi Arabia to contribute $1 million a month to the Nicaraguan Contras at a time when Congress had cut off U.S. assistance to the rebel force.

Eventually, the Arab kingdom gave $32 million and McFarlane said Reagan "made it clear that no one should (know about it) and we should keep it that way."

"Did the president specifically say Congress?" asked U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell.

"It was not precise — it was everyone," McFarlane responded.

John Kecker, independent prosecutor Lawrence Walsh's chief deputy, began his questioning with a delicate reference to McFarlane's Feb. 9, 1987, suicide attempt and the witness acknowledged he tried to take his own life that day.

McFarlane apparently was despondant over the scandal he had helped to bring on the White House.

Moving swiftly, Kecker then opened a brief history lesson into U.S. support for the Contra rebels, who Reagan once called "the moral equivalent of our founding fathers."

When Congress voted in 1984 to cut off aid to the rebels, McFarlane testified, Reagan instructed him to "do all that we could to keep them together body and soul." McFarlane said he passed on those words to North.

"Did the president of the United States, Ronald Reagan, ever tell you to lie to Congress?" Kecker asked. "No," McFarlane said.

"About anything?" "No," McFarlane replied. North is charged with 12 felonies.

Laforest blinds Blackhawks

PHILADELPHIA — Mark Laforest scraped the rust off against the New York Islanders and the luster blinded the Chicago Blackhawks.

Laforest, making only his second start since Jan. 15, stopped 35 shots Saturday afternoon to help the Philadelphia Flyers break a five-game winless streak (0-2-3) with a 7-2 victory over Chicago.

Forced into action on Thursday night when Ron Hextall was sidelined by a pulled hamstring muscle, Laforest made 34 saves in a 4-4 overtime tie against New York. He was even better against the Blackhawks as the Flyers played a sloppy first period but still led 2-1 after the first 20 minutes.

In the only other NHL game played Saturday afternoon, the Buffalo Sabres and Boston Bruins skated to a 6-6 tie.

IDITAROD

Sled dog racer flown to safety

IDITAROD, Alaska — An Air Force helicopter Saturday flew to a remote section of the Iditarod Trail to rescue a sled dog racer suffering from hypothermia and possibly shock, military officials said.

Four mushers, or sled dog drivers, stopped racing to help save 27-year-old Michael Madden who began suffering from serious heat loss far from help on the Iditarod Trail.

"He's half way between the end of the world and nowhere," said Iditarod race manager Jack Niggemyer.

An HH-3 helicopter launched by the Elmendorf Air Force Base rescue coordination center reached the suffering musher and a para-rescue crew was working to stabilize him and fly him to a medical facility, said Sgt. Ann Proctor.

Madden, of North Pole, Alaska, near Fairbanks, was competing in his first Iditarod Sled Dog Race, a grueling marathon that covers 1,168 miles of trail from Anchorage to Nome.

COLLEGE HOOPS

Three-pointer saves Sooners

No. 2 Oklahoma, playing for a top seeding in the NCAA Tournament, again looked more like a team playing just to sneak into the tournament.

Tyrone Jones hit a 3-point shot with 2 seconds left Saturday, lifting the Sooners to a 76-74 victory over Iowa State in the semifinals of the Big Eight Tournament.

On Friday, the Sooners were taken to double overtime by Colorado, the conference's last seed, before emerging with a 95-87 victory. Oklahoma, 28-4, also played just well enough to win against the Cyclones, holding the lead for only 46 seconds in the game.

Elsewhere, Sean Elliot scored 29 points, including 21 in the first half, and top-ranked Arizona shot 67 percent from the floor in disposing of Oregon State 98-87 in the semifinals of the Pacific-10 Conference tournament.

BASEBALL

Gladden homer sinks Cincinnati

PLANT CITY — Dan Gladden, who had had just one hit all spring, homered in the top of the ninth inning Saturday as Minnesota snapped Cincinnati's five-game Grapefruit League win streak 2-1.

Gladden's homer, with one on, came off Rob Dibble, who suffered his first loss of the spring.

The Reds had led from the bottom of the first when they got their run on singles by Barry Larkin, Chris Sabo, and Paul O'Neill.

Reds starter Jeff Sellers, bidding for one of the two available spots on Cincinnati's pitching staff, had a strong appearance in four innings. The only hit the Twins managed off him was an infield hit, and only one ball reached the outfield. He faced 13 batters.

UF advances to title game

United Press International

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Livingston Chatman had a game-high 25 points Saturday, but it was his defensive instinct that most helped Florida.

Chatman forced a steal, then turned it into a layup that keyed a late 11-0 run and carried the top-seeded Gators past Tennessee 76-71 and into Sunday's championship game of the Southeastern Conference Tournament.

In the nightcap, Alvin Lee found his shooting touch and it gave Alabama another game to play in the Southeastern Conference Tournament. Lee hit three 3-pointers in less than two minutes during the second half, finished with 24 points, and sparked Alabama past Vanderbilt 83-79 and into the championship game.

Today, the Gators, 21-11, will meet the Crimson Tide, 22-7, will meet in the championship game.

FSU gets into Metro finals

United Press International

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Still looking for the accolades usually flowing toward a conference champion, Florida State couldn't have hand-picked a better opponent for Sunday's Metro Tournament final.

Derrick Mitchell scored a career-high 20 points and keyed a decisive 11-0 spurt midway through the second half Saturday, leading the 16th-ranked Seminoles to an 80-63 ramp against South Carolina. Florida State, 22-6 overall and 10-3 in the conference, will meet No. 15 Louisville, which edged Memphis State 71-70 on freshman Everick Sullivan's free throw with two seconds remaining.

"We've got something to prove," said Mitchell, a senior guard who helped the Seminoles capture the regular-season Metro title. "We don't feel we've gotten the respect we deserve in the conference. I've heard some people say our title was a fluke and that we lucked-up against some of our opponents ... we're tired of that."

LONGWOOD — Lyman High School's boys track and field team used a solid performance to capture its own invitational Friday night before 501 fans at Lyman High School.

The Greyhounds were well balanced in the field and the running events to offset Vero Beach who proved to be tough in the field and sprinting events.

"This was a real class meet and winning it was really secondary."

Lyman coach Fred Finke said. "Our first concern is that everything is running smoothly and that we make sure that the teams here want to return next year."

The Greyhounds, though, proved to be a very tough host and walked away with the team title as they racked up 69 points compared to Vero Beach's 53, Merritt Island's 44, Lake Howell's 32 and Dr. Phillips' 28. Lake Brantley finished seventh with 20 points as Oviedo took 19th with 2.

'New' Lady Seminoles win Lyman Invitational

By MARK BLYTHE
Herald sports writer

LONGWOOD — Seminole High School's girls track team welcomed its new members, finally out from the winter sport season, and they came through with flying colors to pace the Lady Seminoles to the Lyman Invitational Championship Friday night before 501 fans at Lyman High School.

Seminole had several quality efforts turned in by athletes who had just joined the track squad fresh from the basketball team which had made a journey to the state tournament.

"We're happy to have everyone together," Seminole coach Emory

Blake said. "We knew we had to come here and perform, though, with this type of competition you have to perform as well as you can or you'll get beat."

Seminole finished the meet with 77 points, followed by Lake Brantley with 41½, Cocoa with 36, Vero Beach with 33 and Seabreeze with 27½. Lyman finished with 13 points and Oviedo managed 11.

Adrian Hillsman sparked the Lady Tribe as she won the long jump with a leap of 17-5½, the 330 low hurdles in 49.9, while running a leg on the winning 440 relay squad and finishing third in the discus with a throw of 105-6.

Rams' Birle still throwing blanks

By TONY DeSORMIER
Herald sports editor

LAKE MARY — One good streak deserves another.

On Friday night at Lake Mary High School, pitcher Alex Birle extended his consecutive scoreless inning string to 21 as he led the Rams to a 4-0 win over Seminole High School in Seminole Athletic Conference play.

It was the fifth win in a row for the Rams, who improved their record to 7-3 and 3-0 in the SAC. The Fighting Seminoles dropped to 4-6 and 2-3.

"He (Birle) doesn't throw really hard, but he's a good, smart pitcher," said Lake Mary coach Allen Tuttle. "It was a well-pitched game by both teams. Mike Senechek (Seminole's starter) pitched a good game. He kept us off balance with his curve."

"We haven't been hitting the ball well all year, but we keep finding ways to win. We played a little better defense tonight."

Love ready to capture Nestle's victory

By JIM RICKENBACKER
Herald correspondent

ORLANDO — Davis Love III likes his position heading into today's final round of The Nestle's Invitational at the Bay Hill Club.

Atop the leader board at eight-under par 205 after Saturday's five-under 66, the long-hitting Love is paired with good friend Tom Kite in today's last group.

Above those factors is the way Love is positioning his prodigious tee shots. Either the resident of St. Simon's Island, Ga., is finding the fairways or straying ever so slightly into the short cut of the rough.

Should either Love or Kite (207) stumble, Winter Park's Larry Rinker or first-round leader Loren Roberts trail Love by just three shots.

Orlando's Payne Stewart, who set the tournament record (20 under) in 1987, posted a tournament low 65 on Saturday and is tied for fifth along with 1987 Master's champion Larry Mize and Don Pooley.

Only Kite has visited the winner's circle consistently the past several seasons, having won at least one tournament each of the last seven years before failing to win in 1988. Last year, which included a second-place finish here, he managed to bank a career-high $760,405 — fifth on the PGA money list.

Love (winner at the 1987 MCI Heritage Classic) Rinker and Roberts have only one Tour victory among them.

"I'm due for a good round on Sunday," said Love, sporting a Time magazine visor. "I keep putting myself in position and sooner or later, I'm going to have a Blaine McCallister-type of Sunday."

"I thought I was in good position last Sunday in the Honda Classic, which McCallister won with a strong final round. And I've had some of my best finishes playing with Tom."

Kite spoke of the still-formidable northerly winds that made the longer holes tougher. He also talked about one of this week's hot topics, the unevenly-paced greens that are still feeling the effects of the recent cold spell that came on the heels of an unseasonably warm winter.

Kite, eighth on the PGA money list this season and the Tour's scoring leader according to the latest Nabisco statistics, had nine birdie putts of 20-feet or less that failed to fall.

Meanwhile, Rinker has benefited from working with renowned teacher John Redman for the past 16 months at places like Winter Park Pines.

Paired with Kite during Saturday's third round, the former University of Florida star parlayed radar-like irons into a second straight 68. He hit 14 greens in regulation and was able to use his putter on three of the four greens he missed.

Stewart, like Love, got off to a quick start, turning the front side with a three-under 33.

Wearing a golf shirt adorned with a Tampa Bay Buccaneer logo, Stewart said his back (three degenerative disks) did not bother him on Saturday as much as his seven birdie putts that didn't drop, including a five-footer on the treacherous 18th.

To insure angling success, develop a good game plan

Several factors separate the good fisherman from the average angler, but none so much as the development of a good game plan. Anglers who are consistently successful realize that in order to catch fish on a regular basis, they must first develop a plan of action for each fishing trip.

FISHING
JIM SHUPE

Prevailing weather conditions effect fishing more than any other factor. Many average anglers will take off on a fishing trip without taking the time or the effort to listen to the weather forecast. Good anglers not only listen to the weather forecast, they assimilate the forecast into wind direction and velocity, potential for rain or stormy weather, and any other factors that may influence the day's fishing.

Some bodies of water are unfishable when the wind is from a certain direction with any sustained velocity. Wise anglers will avoid these areas for more sheltered waters.

The important point to grasp is that the good angler will let the weather dictate his game plan. He will not force a trip if the conditions are not favorable for a successful and safe day on the water.

The good fisherman will center his game plan around the weather forecast. He will first determine if the predicted weather conditions are fishable. The seasoned angler will know when to scrap a planned fishing trip, while average anglers will go even under the most adverse conditions. The good fisherman realized there are too many nice days, so why punish yourself and your equipment when the odds are stacked against you?

Shupe's Scoop

Weather radios, costing from $15 to $30, can be purchased locally through stores that sell electronics. Such a radio is the best investment that a fisherman can make because it provides a continuous weather forecast and a marine forecast at the touch of a dial. The forecast is updated continually, and the angler is assured that he is listening to up-to-date information.

A few local anglers have even lost their lives to rough waters. These tragedies could have easily been avoided with some good judgment. No fish is worth a human life.

Fishing Forecast

A warming trend is predicted for this weekend, a good fishing can be expected if the winds are moderate.

If the weather looks favorable, the seasoned angler will plan his trip around wind direction and rated good in Lake Harney and Jessup.

Steve Gard at the Osteen Bridge Fish Camp reported that a lot of nice bass were caught and released during the Monthly Osteen Bridge Bass Tournament last Sunday. Bob Smith took Big Bass honors with a 9 pound, 1 ounceunker. Bobby Sr. and Bobby Copen Jr. caught 22 pounds, 4 ounces to take first place in the event. John and Joe Kremer held down second place with 19 pounds, 1 1/2 ounces, while Clint Boyles and Randy Malloy came in third place with 16 pounds, 14 ounces. Miller and Kykendal snagged fourth place with 16 pounds, 1 ounce. Steve reported heavy stringer on specks from the old river channel and government cut.

The recent cool weather has put a damper on this snook fishing at Sebastian Inlet. The predicted warmer weather should improve action this weekend. Bluefish, redfish, seatrout and reds can be counted on to provide action if the snook are slow.

Captain Jack at Port Canaveral said that offshore fishing has been at a standstill due to high seas. Inside the sheltered Port, flounder, bluefish, sheepshead, and a few jack crevalle are hitting on a regular basis. The colder weather has trout and reds on the move in the Banana and Indian Rivers.

Huge waves have hindered fishing at the New Smyrna jetties. Sheepshead, redfish, bluefish and a few flounder will be ready to bite when the seas subside.

up by one, we were in a dribble-screen situation, and Livingston jumps in, forces a turnover, goes down and gets an uncontested shot," Tennessee Coach Don DeVoe said. "His focus was there. He made a fine defensive play."

Chatman's play came after his two free throws had given the Gators a 62-61 lead with 3:55 to play. On Tennessee's possession, guard Clarence Swearingen tried to move around a screen at the top of the foul circle, but Chatman fouled the move.

"I saw Swearingen with the ball and 90 percent of the time he drives," Chatman said. "So I hid behind the screener, then jumped out and caught him by surprise."

Renaldo Garcia recovered the loose ball for Florida, then passed ahead to Chatman for the score and 64-61 lead. Tennessee never got closer. The Gators scored 7 more consecutive points, holding Tennessee scoreless for 3 minutes.

Florida, 21-11, will play in Sunday's championship game against either Alabama or Vanderbilt, which met in Saturday's second semifinal.

Against Louisville, the Seminoles will have an opportunity to topple the unquestioned kings of the Metro Tournament. The Cardinals, 21-8 overall and 9-4 in the Metro, are seeking their seventh tournament title while Florida State has never won the conference tournament, despite four previous appearances in the championship round.

In 1978 and 1980, Louisville beat Florida State in the tournament final. The two teams split this season, with the Seminoles winning 81-78 at Freedom Hall and Louisville taking a 78-77 overtime decision in Tallahassee.

South Carolina, which took a 14-2 home record into the semifinal at Carolina Coliseum, finished 19-10 overall, 9-5 in the Metro. The Gamecocks will await Sunday's selections by the NCAA Tournament Committee to see if they have earned an at-large bid.

"We're 19-10 and played a great schedule," proved to be the winning run.

Lake Mary boosted its advantage to 4-0 with a three-run sixth. After Greg James opened the inning with a single and was thrown out stealing, Todd Christiansen, Neil James and Scott Conklin strung together three consecutive hits, Christiansen scoring on Conklin's single.

With runners on second and third after Conklin's hit, Senechek intentionally walked Iatarola to set up the force play. But what happened was Senechek then walked Jason Sewell to force in Neil James with the third run. A sacrifice fly by Shane Stuflet that scored Conklin ended the scoring.

"Lake Mary's a good, solid offensive team, but they have had some problems scoring runs," said Seminole coach Mike Powers. "But as you can see, we're having a lot of trouble scoring runs."

"In the first inning, we loaded the bases, but it was with two outs. That's the way it always seems to be. When we do get a rally going, it's with two outs."

With one out in the first, Corsi walked, only to be forced at second on a ground ball by Senechek. James Joyce and Harvey Clinger followed with consecutive base hits to load the bases, but Birle ended the threat by making Jeff Derr look bad on a third-strike curve.

Derr wasn't alone. After Clinger's hit, Seminole only managed three more base runners the entire game - Ron Cox reached base on an infield hit in the third while Joyce and and pinch-hitter John Wilks drew walks in the sixth and seventh innings, respectively.

In all, after Seminole loaded the bases in the first, Birle retired 19 of the next 22 batters he faced.

Despite the power outage, Powers was able to see some good in the game.

"I think we really played well on defense," he said. "Anthony Roberts played well at shortstop and you have to think that he's just a freshman playing varsity baseball. He made a couple plays that picked us up."

"Lake Mary always puts a good team on the field. But by the end of the season, I think we're going to be a really good club ourselves because of the quality of the teams we play during the season."

The Seminoles will return to action next Wednesday when New Smyrna pays a visit for a 3:30 p.m. game. Lake Mary is off until next Friday, when it will travel to Lake Brantley for a key SAC clash at 7 p.m.

Oviedo grabs a wild win

From staff reports

ORLANDO — It was one of those softball contests that remind you of sandlot games where runs came in bushels and the winner was usually the last team that batted.

As it turned out, the Oviedo Lady Lions didn't need their last at bat, beating Orlando Jones 19-11 in a game that featured 19 hits and 25 errors (14 by Oviedo, 11 by Jones).

"It may have been the worst game we've ever played," said Oviedo coach Jackie Miller with a laugh. "We were moving people around and had people in defensive positions that they've never even practiced in."

Jones opened the game with a two-run first inning, only to have Oviedo answer with five in the home half of the inning (despite the fact that the game was played at Jones, Oviedo was the home team). Jones tied the game with a three-run third, but the Lady Lions blew it open with an eight-run rally in the fourth.

"It's a good thing we were the home team," said Miller, alluding to the home team's right to bat last. "Actually, we hit the ball very well. And Jones hits the ball well, also. They have some girls that can just flat hit the ball."

Leading the Lady Lions was Corrie Lawson, who hit two home runs and drove in four runs. One of Lawson's four-baggers came in the decisive fourth inning and one came in the sixth.

Also hitting well for Oviedo were Lisa Hollon (3-for-4), Kristie Montone (2-for-4 with three rbi) and Carrie MacLeod (2-for-5 and an rbi).

Next week, the Lady Lions will be very busy, playing games on three consecutive days. On Tuesday, Oviedo (now 2-2) hosts DeLand in a Seminole Athletic Conference clash. Next Wednesday, Oviedo and Kissimmee-Osceola will play at Red Bug. Then, on Thursday, Oviedo travels to Lake Howell for another SAC contest.

All of Oviedo's points were scored by Suzanne Hughes who won the high jump with a leap of 5-4 while placing third in the triple jump at 31-11½.

Lyman scored eight points off relay and used a third place finish by Julie Greenberg in the 880 at 2:36.5 to accumulate its points.

Seminole, after racking up enough points to capture the meet, went home early to get out of the frigid temperatures at the Lyman stadium.

Sevon's two-out walk wins game for Florida Carbonic Yankees

From staff reports

Jason Sevon drove in the winning run with a two-out walk in the bottom of the sixth, giving the Florida Carbonic Yankees an 11-10 decision over the Town and Country Vet Reds in Mustang Division play of the Seminole Pony Baseball League on March 5.

Matt Moss hit a double as Mike Summers was the winning pitcher.

The Reds had turned a 7-2 deficit into a 10-7 lead with a five-run fifth inning and a three-run sixth. But the Yankees responded with a four-run rally in the bottom of the sixth to take back the win.

In other Mustang play this week: C.J. Meert and David Palik each scored three runs for the Dania/Shook Giants in their 14-3 romp over the Radio Shop Phillies on March 6. Ken Birch, the winning pitcher, had a single, a double and two runs scored while Meets also had a single. Roger Masters had a good game in leftfield. Mike Meadows was the losing pitcher.

Andrew Catell and Nick Traeger combined to pitch the Caselberry Rotary Expos to their first win, a 21-8 whipping of the Diamond Lube Indians on March 5. J. Calapa had two doubles, two rbi and two runs scored while C.J. Hatzel had a single, two doubles, two rbi and two runs scored.

Dustin Owen hit a single and two doubles, driving in three runs, to power the Sun Bank Twins past the Marina Isle Braves 9-6 on March 4. Dustin Owen was the winning pitcher over Jason Graham. Other offensive stars for the Twins were Adam Sewell (a single, double and two rbi), Barry Sommer (two singles, one rbi), Brian Miller (two singles, one rbi), Jeff Taylor (a single and an rbi), Don Wyman (an rbi) and Patrick Reynold (an rbi). For the Braves, Shawn St. Dennis had a triple and an rbi while J. Mitchell had an rbi.

Scoring six runs in both the first and fourth innings, the Dania/Shook Giants wiped out the Midland Construction Cardinals 19-9 on March 3. Kenny Birch was the winning pitcher over Ralph Dietzman, but it was the fine relief pitching and fielding of Josh Pickett that helped secure the win. Offensively, the Giants were led by Nick Melazuz (three singles, four runs scored), David Pavlik (a single, double and four runs scored), Birch (a double and three runs scored) and Paul Werner (a single and a run scored).

Jeremy Frost hit a home run to go with a single, two rbi and two runs scored in the Salvaggio's Angels' 17-7 beating of the Arby's Red Sox. Chris Sanders was the winning pitcher as Keven Johnson took the loss. Wrangler

Both teams, their fans and their coaches showed great enthusiasm in a game between the Public Cuba and Caselberry Tigers on March 5. The Cubs won the game, 20-10.

Pinto

Randy Polito was 2-for-4 with a double as the Lake Mary Athletics got past the Ace Hardware Pirates 20-15 on March 6. The game's outstanding defensive players were first baseman Steve Grieme for the A's and shortstop David Milton for the Pirates.

The Phillies scored five runs in the bottom of the fifth inning to pull out a 14-11 victory over the Shoney's Braves on March 6. The Braves led 4-0 and 7-2, but the Phillies scored two runs in both the second and fourth innings and five runs in both the third and fifth.

Matt Allegra hit a bases-loaded double off the top of the right field fence and John Letteri had three solid drives to score Anthony Corro three times in the Lake Mary Fire Department Cardinals' 14-8 victory over the K-92 FM Brewers on March 4. The Brewers turned four double plays on the aggressive-running Cardinals.

SPORTS FANS!

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

Brought to you by Ken Rummel
Did you know that in the NCAA tournament for the men's major-college basketball championship, the last 4 final games have all been decided by 4 points or less...In the 1985 final, Kansas beat Oklahoma 83-79...In 1987 Indiana beat Syracuse 74-73...In 1989 Louisville beat Duke 72-68...And in 1985 Villanova beat Georgetown 66-64.

Here's an oddity...There's a college basketball conference that has TWO teams with the SAME name...The ECAC Metro Conference has St. Francis and St. Francis...One St. Francis is in Brooklyn, N.Y., and the other in Loretto, Pa...Since they're in the same conference, they play each other twice every year—St. Francis College vs. St. Francis College.

There was once a big league baseball batter who was almost impossible to strike out...Joe Sewell, a shortstop in the 1920's, holds several records for fewest strikeouts by a regular player — and one year he played 115 straight games, going to bat 437 times, without ever striking out!

elect from out of town. The next day, Vivian Fitzgerald honored her grandson and his fiancée at a pre-nuptial breakfast for 40 guests at the Holiday Inn, Sanford Marina.

Garris parents honored

Lisa Garris and Steven Garris honored their parents, Brodus and Joyce Garris, at a reception on their 25th wedding anniversary. The celebration took place in fellowship hall of the First Baptist Church, where the honorees are active members.

The couple was married March 6, 1964. In the Sanford home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Toby and Mel Dekle, Brodus is employed as staff manager of Commonwealth Insurance Co., Sanford, and Joyce is employed by K mart, Sanford.

About 15 years ago, the couple moved from Sanford to their home on the St. Johns River in DeBary, where they enjoy boating and fishing. Both are avid bicyclists and enjoy visiting with their friends and cooking out.

The celebration got under way with Jim Johnson, Joyce's brother from Seminole, acting as master of ceremonies. Lisa and Steven toasted their parents who, in turn, toasted each other and engaged in the traditional cake-feeding ceremony.

About 60 friends called during the evening. "We were glad to see everyone who came to help us celebrate," Joyce said. "It was special to us."

For golden weddings

A big celebration is coming up for couples who have been married 50 years or more. For the past several years, the Senior Committee of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce has hosted a golden wedding anniversary celebration for these couples.

The afternoon festivities, scheduled for May 7 at the Sanford Civic Center, include recognition for the couple married the longest, couples renewing their wedding vows in union, refreshments and other gracious amenities.

Applications are available at the chamber. Call 322-2212 for information. Co-chairmen of the event are Mildred Haen and Barbara Forester.

The nation saw her

Jill Gruby has arrived. The 12-year-old Sanford girl made her national dancing debut on the "Debbie Allen Special," WFTV-Channel 9, on the night of Sunday, March 5.

The co-choreographer with Debbie Allen spotted Jill last March when she was dancing (jazz and tap) in the Showstoppers National Talent Competition in Lakeland. Later, Jill was winner of the contest and finals held in Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Filming for Sunday night's television program took place last August in New York City, during which time Jill and her sister, Jenny, 17, studied dancing under New York masters.

They were accompanied to New York by their mother.

The talented sisters are the daughters of James K. and Marsha Gruby of Sanford.

Jill, a student at Sanford Middle School and Rolann's School of Dance in Lake Mary, had a solo spot in the TV special. And there's no doubt about it, Jill is on her way. She has stars in her bright eyes that are already focused on an entertaining career.

Quintet deserved more

Seminole Community Concert Association presented Quintet of the Americas Tuesday night at Lake Mary High School. Due to the poor weather, attendance was sparse. But president Shirley Mills said, "The performance was excellent. It was a very, very nice concert."

Following the concert, the association entertained the patrons and performers at a reception with Nellie Coleman, Charlotte Gustavson, Marty Colegrove and Beth Bridges serving as hostesses.

New officers for the coming year are: Betty Gramkow, president; Betty Halbach, membership chairman; Walter Stocton, treasurer; Charlotte Smith, secretary; Roger Harris, vice president and housing chairman; and Dave Farr, publicity.

Success for PreSchool

The PreSchool Center, located at the First Presbyterian Church, was a beehive of activity last Saturday at a gala fashion show and tea. According to Libby Voltoline, chairman, the fundraiser was heralded as highly successful. About 120 guests attended the event held from 2-4 p.m.

Fashions and accessories were from Penney's, Forever Fashion and Balloon Magic.

Assisting were: Libby Voltoline, commentator; Jane Jackson, fashion consultant for Penney's; Sonya Greenlee, food coordinator of the models; Diane Suddes, Ginger Milsom and Ada Torres, publicity; Jane Edison, decorations; Van and Carol Gilbert, music; and Vicki Christopher's parents and grandparents have all taken the class. Many more of Stone's clients are excited about learning CPR.

However, some have complained that the class was too long or that they were busy. Stone believes that investing a day is worth saving a lifetime.

Kaiser and her husband, Kurt, live in Sorrento. Since the town only has a volunteer fire department, which wouldn't have been able to handle it, Kaiser is glad Christopher had his heart attack in Stone's hands.

Other parents have told Stone they wouldn't have known what to do and were glad it happened to Stone.

"They were all saying they were glad it happened to me," Stone said. "Don't say that!"

She first took CPR classes as nurse's aide years ago. Because she was working at a nursing home and caring for an elderly lady, Stone never thought she would need her infant and child CPR training.

At one time, Stone worked for a daycare center. The state requires that daycare center workers go through a course to recognize abuse and neglect, she said.

"But infant and child CPR are not requirements for daycare workers. I think they should be mandatory," Stone said.

She is concerned about parents who don't think it is important that their babysitters know CPR.

"The parents who come in to interview me never ask if I know first aid or CPR. They're concerned with the major things: Are they supervised when they're outside? Is the house safe?"

Some of the babysitters Stone has interviewed to babysit her sons don't know enough to dial 911. "They tell me they would have called me. I told them, 'Don't call me. That's time wasted,'" she said.

Seeing the need for educating those who care for children, Stone has been thinking of becoming an instructor of CPR for daycare workers and babysitters. Kaiser's already high opinion of Stone as a babysitter is infinitely higher after her baby's heart attack.

"I like her as a friend, too," Kaiser said. "She's a great mother to her own, of course."

Know a hero?

We're looking for the quiet kind.

It may be that boy who saw you drop your wallet and ran after you to return it.

Perhaps it's the retiree who works day and night at knitting clothes for underprivileged children.

You may know someone who risked her own life to save another.

The column "Quiet Heroes" will focus on individuals in this area who have done or are doing something heroic, and who have not been recognized.

Waste not, want not

Pat Harris, former charter member of Brevard County's "Keep America Beautiful" program and presently representative for Florida Business and Industry Recycling Program, told members of Seminole County Federation of Women's Clubs of the serious lack of landfill space and the necessity of recycling. Following her informative presentation on Feb. 27, she answered questions the membership asked about recycling.

Dr. Karen Kopp, cultural arts coordinator for Seminole Community College, was introduced as a guest, and she invited members to visit the SCC campus.

SCFWC president Emy Bill presided over the business session. The Garden Club of Sanford hosted the meeting and covered dish luncheon, and the club won the attendance award.

Garden Club president Ann Brisson invited the SCFWC members, as well as the public.

to enter their plants and cut flowers in the club's "Horticulture Happening," to be held at the clubhouse on April 15.

Joining federation

Another happening took place in Sanford Tuesday. Mrs. Ralph Austin Smith met at her home with Helen Davis of Mt. Dora, District 7 Director of Florida Federation of Women's Clubs, and Shan Arnett, president of the 2-year-old Heathrow Women's Club.

The Heathrow club is applying for membership in the FFWC, thanks to Charlotte Smith, a former FFWC president, who started the ball rolling when she spoke before the club on the advantages of joining the federation.

Announcement of the Heathrow club joining the federation will be made at the FFWC annual state convention to be held in Daytona Beach April 28-May 2.

Birthday kids, families meet some real characters

Katie Appel and Gregory Drolshagen recently celebrated their birthdays with Mickey Mouse, Minnie Mouse, Goofy, Pluto and Tigger at a character breakfast in Disney Village.

Katie and Gregory are members of the Sabal Point Babysitting Co-op in Longwood. Twelve mothers, one godmother and one grandmother from the co-op carpooled to the Empress Lilly in Lake Buena Vista on Feb. 28 to help celebrate Katie's third birthday and Gregory's second birthday.

Katie was so proud to stand on her chair and have everyone in the room sing "Happy Birthday" to her. Katie's 1-year-old sister, Krissie, and her mom, Patti, were there with her.

Gregory also brought his sister, Stacey, who is 3, and his mommy, Nina.

Brittany Bentley, age 1, put her head in her hands and cried when Mickey Mouse put his hand on her shoulder.

Jamie Palmer, 3, told his mom he did not want to see Mickey Mouse. DeeDee, Jamie's mom, assured him Mickey Mouse would not touch him.

Nick Foley, 2, was elated to be able to see Mickey and Minnie.

Ryan Smith, 4, wanted to chase Pluto and Goofy. He knew there was someone underneath those costumes.

Other children escorted by their mommies were Zachary Shertz, Brian Francis, Kristen Cofoid, Skipper Lichtenstein, Austin Hair, and Jennifer and Ben Fowle.

No slowdown in this hoedown

Dancers, stompers, hooters and hollerers grabbed a partner and square danced at the Bandana Hoedown on Feb. 26 at the Sanlando United Methodist Church in Longwood. There was something for everyone from age 3 to over 65.

Larry Patton, a professional square dance caller and a member of the church, was the caller. He kept the novices moving in the right direction.

Karen Marsh and her daughter, Lisa, went to a square dance last summer. Lisa, 14, enjoyed it so much, she wanted to go again. The hoedown did not disappoint her.

Four-year-old Jessica Altman and her mother, Becky, also tried dancing and had a great time.

Other members seen hooting and hollering were Jan Gates, Joyce McDonald, Connie Patterson and Linda Alexander.

Lake Mary aces district contests

The Lake Mary High School Band members, Flag Corps, and Lake Marionette Dance Corps performed their specialties on Feb. 17 and 18 at the District Solo and Ensemble Contest and the District Drill Team Contest, both held at Evans High School in Orlando.

The 34 members of the Flag Corps, under the direction of Terry Pattishall and co-captains Debi Owens and Melissa Haralson, performed in two groups. Both of their routines earned Superior ratings and the right to participate in the state competition in May.

The Lake Marionette Dance Corps, with 56 members, is one of the largest in the state. The members, divided into three separate groups, were awarded Superior ratings. Director Holley Ricker will now begin polishing the routines for the state contest.

The Lake Mary High School Band was well represented, with many students receiving Superior ratings. Those receiving Superior ratings for their individual performances included: Rtek Gutierrez, Shannon Dunaway, Dan Johnson, Grant Tharp, Ronda Lynch, Tom Kurtz, Wendy Jensen, David Specter, William Pond, Margaret Langston, Michelle Treat, Alan Craig, Dave Sheridan, Tracy Thompson, Vonda Lynch, Sandy Powell, Chris Patterson, Amy Brinklow, Julie Orseck, Todd Conway, Becky Homan, Nicole Dedrick, Stace Levine and Cassie Becerra.

Other band members with Superior ratings were: Terri Greenan, Elenor Nardy, Warren Fernandez, Kevin Reid, Chris Haile, Penny Powell, Melissa Geans, Alinda Ramos, Heather Reid, Karen Hilley, Heath Propper, Jeff Reback, Cindi Porter, Michelle Buchanan, Jay Nasworthy, David Simmons, Sarah McClintock, Dan Cox, Kristen Rouse and Jeff Ridgeway.

All will advance to state competition in May at the University of Florida.

Still selling for fashionable luncheon

Tickets are still available for the Lake Mary Woman's Club's fashion show and luncheon called "Swing into Spring." Money raised from the event will go towards the scholarship fund.

The program will be held March 17 at 11:30 a.m. at the CIA building in Lake Mary.

Tickets are $8.50 and can be reserved by calling 321-4841.

trained. "Right now, the work is in California," Joyce explained about television commercials.

When Paul returns to Florida, he will deal with the local studios.

"The people at Universal Studios (in California) said the one (Universal Studios) in Central Florida will be five times as big," Joyce said. That means a lot of filming will take place in Central Florida.

Besides attending acting school, Paul also is auditioning for pilot shows while in California. The pilot season runs from January through April. Children from all over the country flock to Hollywood to audition for the T.V. shows.

Everyday, Paul and his mom go to pick up a new five-page script around 4 p.m. He must memorize the script for the next day's audition.

Paul has a 10- to 12-hour day that includes three hours of school work. The state of California requires that he spend three hours each day doing school work. His mother is his teacher, unless he is on a set all day; then the state provides a teacher.

"California laws are very strict," Joyce said. "I hope Florida will also have the same laws (to protect children) when the industry begins there."

The state of California not only requires a teacher be on the set with children, but also that a social worker be there, for example, to be sure time spent under the hot lights is limited before the children get a break. At least one parent is required to be on the set, as well.

Joyce remains busy with teaching, being on sets, and driving her son to the places he needs to be each day. "We have a desk set up in the apartment with all Paul's school work," Joyce said. "We just received another packet of work from his teacher."

Joyce proudly proclaims that Paul made the honor roll. He always did well in school, so neither Frank nor Joyce was concerned that the time in California would take away from his schoolwork.

"He really is learning so much about people and himself," Frank said. "His attitude is fantastic. He's enjoying it. That's the key, that he enjoys it."

Paul has already made a commercial and got a call back for a new CBS TV series with Gregory Harrison.

Not only are Paul's parents pleased, but his two sisters, Fran, 21, and Susie, 20, are pretty excited that their baby brother may become a movie star.

The students in Paul's third-grade class at Longwood Elementary share the excitement.

They recently wrote pen-pal letters to Paul.

Mandy Bradshaw wrote, "I don't just like you because you're in a commercial, I like you because you're my friend."

The basic line in the letters was: "I miss you and I'm proud of you," according to Lucy Loveless, Paul's teacher. Some students asked Paul what California looks like.

Loveless has a videotape of a play that Paul was in class. "If he gets famous, I'm going to hold onto this tape," Loveless said.

"It's really neat!" Paul said about his new lifestyle. "I never really thought I'd be here in Hollywood. It's really weird."

He doesn't think he will be on sets everyday and studying with his mom, but for now, his experience is thrilling.

Husband blows his top, myth about explosive oxygen tanks

DEAR ABBY: My wife has a serious case of emphysema and is on oxygen 95 percent of the time. I am her caregiver and try to see that she gets out for duplicate bridge, bingo and an occasional shopping trip.

Our problem? We must take a portable oxygen tank with us wherever we go, and people are of the opinion that if someone smokes in the vicinity of an oxygen tank, it will explode.

At a church bingo game recently, a woman who claimed to be a nurse created a very disruptive scene, insisting that my wife's oxygen tank might explode and kill everyone in the building! We were asked to leave the church, and my wife was devastated.

I appealed to Father John and he asked us to come to the next bingo game where he would have the fire chief attend and explain to the players that there is no danger of having an oxygen tank explode. (Oxygen does not "explode"; it only hastens burning.)

Well, yesterday someone at a bridge game expressed some fear that my wife's oxygen tank endangered everyone in the vicinity. The accuser was very pigheaded and refused to listen to me or call the fire department for reassurance.

Abby, people who suffer from lung disease live very limiting lives. In order for my wife to go anywhere, we must load her wheelchair and oxygen tank into the car and find a place large enough for the equipment.

Please address this problem in your column. People need to know more about this subject.

R.J.B. IN LAKELAND, FLA.

DEAR R.J.B.: Gladly. Some of the hysteria about the presence of an oxygen tank may be due to the fact that one sees "No Smoking—Oxygen" signs posted in hospitals. These signs are there because there are oxygen outlets in the walls filled with concentrated oxygen, and should fire break out, the oxygen would make the fire burn more quickly.

I checked with my local fire department, and the chief is in total agreement with yours. Your wife's oxygen equipment is no cause for alarm. A tank with a tube feeding a tiny stream of oxygen into your wife's nose endangers no one—even if someone were to be smoking nearby.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ALL PARENTS: Parents who want to "train a child in the way he should go" should go that way themselves.

DEAR ABBY: You've often said that the best (but hardest) way to quit smoking is "cold turkey."

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Well, chocolate is to me what cigarettes are to smokers. I'm a grown woman, married and the mother of two sons, and I couldn't wait for my husband and boys to leave the kitchen so I could have something chocolate. I used to love to go marketing so I could buy two packages of chocolate cookies. I'd eat one package in the store, and one in the car on the way home. I even hid chocolate candy in my dresser drawers so no one else would see them.

Every other day I'd mix a batch of brownies—only they rarely made it to the oven. I'd eat the raw batter in one sitting!

After my aerobics class three times a week, I'd stop at the store for a chocolate treat. Of course I knew I had a problem, so I once tried to make myself sick—eating 10 chocolate cupcakes at one sitting. It didn't work. I was too addicted.

I finally realized I would have to quit—cold turkey. So that's what I did.

It can be done if you set your mind to it. I also prayed a lot, and have been a reformed chocoholic for five months now!

SUE WELCH IN MARYLAND

DEAR SUE: Being a minor-league chocoholic myself, I know where you're coming from. Congratulations, Sue. I applaud your efforts and wish you well.

(Problems? Write to Dear Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.)

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

It is usually right to take out the defenders' trumps before they can be used to ruff your side-suit winners. But there are times when you first want to force out a side-suit ace, particularly when its location will give you a strong clue about how to best play your trump suit.

Even die-hard five-card majorities would open one heart with South's cards in fourth position. With a meager 12 high-card points, South wants to try for a part-score, but he also wishes to pass North's response.

Against two hearts, West leads the spade king, then switches to the club 10. East takes the K-A of clubs and plays a third club. For declarer, now what? Obviously all he needs to do to make his contract is guess which defender holds the heart queen. But should it really be a guess? Well, yes, but only if declarer plays trumps immediately. Instead he should remember what cards have been played by West and East, neither of whom was able to open the bidding. West has the A-K of spades, and East has the A-K of clubs. And one of them holds the ace of diamonds.

It's a very good bet that the defender with the diamond ace won't have the heart queen or he would have opened the bidding. So, before attacking trumps, declarer should play the diamond king to find out who has the ace.

With this approach, declarer will find that West started with A-K of spades and the diamond ace, so will play East for the trump queen and make his contract.

Good Shepherd congregation donates to indigent ministries

On the morning of March 3, representatives of the Good Shepherd Lutheran Church congregation donated $1,000 to both the Rescue Outreach Mission Center and the Sanford Christian Sharing Center.

Rod Mell, president of the Good Shepherd Church Council, presented a check to Mother Blanch Bell Weaver, founder of the Rescue Outreach Mission. The Rev. Daniel C. Coy, pastor of Good Shepherd, presented a check to Irene K. Brown, treasurer of the Sanford Christian Sharing Center.

The Sanford Christian Sharing Center was founded in 1977. Now located in its new building on 25th Street, the center helps to feed and clothe more than 250 families each month. The Rev. Coy is president of the center. The Rescue Outreach Mission was founded two years ago by Mother Weaver. This past year, the mission housed and fed more than 3,000 people.

The mission is located on West 13th Street in Goldsboro. Many can be seen gathering in the evening for the last meal of the day. Mother Weaver also serves as director of the mission.

Donations are always needed at these centers to help with the ever-increasing need to help Sanford's indigent residents.

Minott's former chorus and music students, and the singers from Sanford will comprise the choir. Additional features will be "Martha's Dolls," a black creative movement troupe from Orlando and Tajiri Arts International, performing dramatic poetry of black writers.

It is the belief that the continued performing of Negro spirituals by such greats as Mary Whitehurst and Earl Minott will foster self-esteem in the younger generation through the years.

The program will be held at New Bethel Missionary Baptist Church on March 26 at 3 p.m. For more information, call Martha McKinney at 323-1279.

Education

IN BRIEF

Center to open for handicapped children

CASSELBERRY — The UniCare Center, a learning center designed to meet the needs of handicapped children in a day care atmosphere, will open Casselberry this spring. Lori Bennett, founder and president of the center, promises that the HRS licensed and 4C certified facility will provide "specialized services that are affordable."

"Specialized day and respite care for these children is non-existent," she said.

UniCare is planning a variety of fundraising events, including a rummage sale at the Casselberry VFW on March 18.

SCC accepting ASSET applications

SANFORD — Seminole Community College is currently accepting applications for entrance into their ASSET program. The course, sponsored by the Ford Motor Company, is a two-year A.S. degree course.

ASSET, which is an acronym for Automotive Student Service Educational Training, is limited to 24 students. The next class will begin in June. Prospective students should contact ASSET Coordinator Mike Griffin at 323-1450 extension 331 or 330 for more information.

Verkier chosen as teacher of the year

OVIEDO — Karen Verkier was named 1989 Teacher of the Year at Tusawilla Middle School. Verkier has taught Spanish at the school for five years. This year she added a drama class to her class load. Verkier is now in the running for Seminole County Teacher of the Year.

Lakeview names students of the month

SANFORD — Lakeview Middle School named sixth grader Nicholas Tidwell, seventh grader Ronnie McCarrell and eighth grader Emory Green to be the Students of the Month for February. The students are being recognized by their teachers for demonstrating outstanding personal growth, scholarship and leadership.

Scholarship fund established

LONGWOOD — Ellen H. Brede and her brother Leonard O. Wilkins, residents of the Village on the Green retirement community, donated $200,000 to a scholarship fund.

The annual scholarship will be awarded to a student who has been an employee of the Village on the Green for at least one year prior to application. The number of scholarships and their amount will depend on the number of applications received each year. Awards will also be available for short-term continuing education courses.

According to the foundation which is overseeing the fund, the awards are based on "talent and need."

The deadline to apply for the first scholarships (to be awarded for the 1989-90 academic year) is April 1, 1989.

The two chose to limit their scholarship to employees of Village on the Green because they wanted to give young people an incentive to work in their community.

Roberts replaces Crawford

TALLAHASSEE — Deputy Director of the Division of Public Schools, Doug Crawford, has resigned his position with the Department of Education to take a job in private industry. Lee Roberts has been appointed interim Deputy Director of Administrative and Support Services until a permanent replacement can be found.

Roberts, a former high school principal, has been with the department of education for 28 years, most recently as Chief of the Bureau of Business Services in the Division of Public Schools.

Rotary essay contest begins

CASSELBERRY — The Rotary Club of Casselberry is sponsoring an essay contest for third, fourth and fifth graders on the topic "What Does The Bill of Rights Mean to Me?" The essay must be 200 to 250 words in length and must be printed or legibly written.

There will be a $50 award for first place, $40 for second and $30 for third. Interested students should contact their teachers as soon as possible.

Entries will be judged on originality, creativity, proper use of English and neatness.

Lottery harmful to education?

TAMPA — According to an article written by Dr. Susan MacManus and Dr. Charles Spindler of the University of South Florida's public administration research department, the Florida Lottery may be doing more harm than good for the state's educational system.

The article confirms Education Commissioner Betty Castor's long-standing complaint against the Lottery's failure to inform the public of the small amount it actually contributes to the education budget.

MacManus and Spindler found that the average Floridian had no concept of the amount of money that the Lottery contributed to education. This year, they contributed $327 million to the budget; a mere five percent of the public education allocation.

The research indicated that because of the public's misconception about the Lottery's contribution, they would be less likely to approve referendums and millage rate increases because they feel the Lottery should cover the added expenses.

Chrysler offers help to teachers

HIGHLAND PARK, MI — The Chrysler Corporation Fund recently announced a $500,000 grant to establish national certification standards for elementary and secondary teachers. The grant will be allocated to the research and development efforts of the National Board for Professional Teaching Standards (NBPTS).

The grant will be used to fund a five-year NBPTS research project which will lead the creation of uniform national standards for the teaching profession. The research project will address education reform issues including teacher preparation, teacher recruitment and the role Board-certified teachers will play in the future of education.

How to claim unclaimed scholarships

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

Angelette Longmire, head of the Florida Department of Education's Bureau of Career Development, said the best time for a student to apply for financial aid is January through March of their senior year in high school.

However, while she was unable to give an exact percentage, she said that "most" Florida seniors had not yet begun the process of getting the grants, loans and scholarships that would get them through their college years.

"It's not unusual for kids to sit back and wait until the last minute," she said.

While competition is fierce for some of the better financial aid packages, Longmire said that a great many deals are annually left unclaimed because students are unaware of their existence.

"We have 2,100 sources of financial assistance available to our students," said Longmire, who oversees a program which includes the CHOICES computer network that is designed to help students find a direction for their careers after high school.

CHOICES is a state-wide computer network that lists thousands of career, vocational and educational opportunities, including financial aid, available to Florida students.

The system is available at most high schools. In Seminole County all high schools except Seminole High School have it available to their students. Lake Howell High School subscribes to CHOICES, but their system is currently inactive due to renovations in the school's media center.

Most of the 2,100 scholarship options available through CHOICES are limited to use at Florida colleges and universities. Some are directed at students planning to major in a particular field.

"Not all the financial aid is for those students with high acdemically. Usually they have a minimal GPA requirement," Longmire said. "Some (like the Florida Student Assistance Grant and the Florida Tuition Voucher) require only that they be Florida residents for two years."

Some scholarships are available to students with certain ancestral backgrounds. The Confederate Memorial Scholarship is designed to assist "lineal descendants of Confederate soldiers and sailors enrolled as full-time undergraduate students at a public Florida institution." There is no other requirement based on academic merit or financial need.

Longmire suggested that students apply for as many financial aid packages as possible.

"You don't want to limit yourself," she said. "If there are 25 scholarships for which you think you can qualify, apply for all of them. You may only get one or you may be able to put together a nice package."

County-wide, about 60 percent of the high school seniors are college-bound. Guidance counselors at the high schools said that, while no official records are kept on the number of students seeking financial assistance, they think that very few try to make it on their own.

At Lake Brantley High School, where guidance counselor Jerry Kirkman said that 90 percent of the seniors have college plans, "nearly all of those" have asked for financial aid information.

Beverly Freeman, counselor at Lyman High School, said that "a large percentage of seniors" had expressed concern over how they would pay for their post-secondary education.

Charles Jacobs in the guidance office at Seminole High School said that he felt their seniors would be applying for financial aid at a "high rate." Many Seminole students (close to 45 percent of this year's senior class) planned to attend a two-year college to save money before finishing a degree at a four-year institution.

A group of outstanding students

LONGWOOD — The Seminole Vocational Association, a group of county-wide vocational teachers, has made their choices for the outstanding students in their programs.

The students, ranging in age from middle schoolers to junior college students, have displayed outstanding diligence and enthusiasm for their work and their schooling.

In a recent ceremony, six of the county's finest were honored with certificates. Lee Llamazales, an eighth grader at Milwee Middle School, has already shown great potential as an industrial arts student. His teacher nominated him because of his assistance with other students.

Mike Duane, another Milwee eighth grader, was chosen for his work as a student assistant and peer teacher. His teacher felt he should be honored because he is always willing to help other students improve.

Karen Kerchassnea, a student at the Crooms School of Choice, is studying drafting. Her teachers her positive attitude and outstanding work an asset to the classroom environment.

Alana Madsen, a ninth grader at Oviedo High School is very active in the school's chapter of Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA). Madsen, who has ambitions of majoring in economics at an Ivy League college, recently placed fourth in a national keyboard application competition.

Kathe Raffety, a student in the Seminole Community College nursing program, was nominated by her teachers for her professional manner and excellent clinical skills.

And, finally, Neen Witt, a senior at Lake Mary High School, is the president of her school's FBLA chapter and secretary of the Student Government. As head of the school's parliamentary procedures team, she took the group to a fourth place finish in the state.

The honorees for this Seminole Vocational Association are chosen quarterly by the teachers.

Controversial newscast for high schools debuted Monday

United Press International

BOSTON — An experimental 12-minute television newscast for high school students, which has sparked nationwide debate because it contains ads, was beamed into classrooms for the first time to mixed reviews.

"I didn't see anything today they haven't seen on TV hundreds and hundreds of times," Charles Helling, whose daughter is a freshman at Billerica Memorial High School in Boston, told the Boston Globe Monday.

Remarker Ralph Lyman, a student on Memorial's wrestling team: "It does wake you up, and turns your lights on."

Despite the generally favorable reviews in Boston, the program as infuriated the National Parent Teacher Association and Action for Children's Television, headquartered in Cambridge.

Manya Unger, president of the National Parent Teachers Association, said her group's position is that schoolchildren should not be turned into a captive audience for advertisers.

The fast-paced program included news segments on Soviet teenagers and the death threats against novelist Salman Rushdie. It was interrupted by four 30-second commercials for blue jeans, a candy bar, a dandruff shampoo and an anti-drug message.

"I have concerns about commercialism in the classroom," said John Desmond, a teacher at Memorial High, but he added that he has a responsibility to use all methods available to teach students.

Dr. Thomas Sharkey, principal of Memorial, said he has not spoken to any parents who oppose the program. He added it will be shown during morning homeroom period and will not take time from classes.

Called "Channel One," promoters said the show will be beamed daily for seven weeks to the 1,600 students at Billerica's Memorial High and to the other volunteer test schools in Detroit, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Cerritos, Calif., and Knoxville, Tenn.

In return for participating in the program, each school would receive an estimated $50,000 worth of free electronic gadgetry — including satellite dishes, classroom monitors and video recorders — it could use for other purposes when Channel One was not being broadcast.

If the $5 million test is considered successful by its creator, Whittle Communications of Knoxville, and if school officials and parents support it, the company could spend $100 million to introduce it into 8,000 schools in 1990.

The program's placement in 8,000 schools would guarantee advertisers an audience of 6.5 million teenage consumers — more than the highest-rated prime time network TV show garners, said William Rukeyser, editor in chief of Whittle.

No wonder the Senate booted John Tower out

Three men in black trenchcoats sit inside a small room where the only furnishings are the chairs, a fold-up movie screen and a movie projector.

Each holds a notepad and pencil in hand and waits anxiously to get the show started. One has his teeth clenched around a thick stogie that has long since gone out and fumbles somewhat amateurishly as he threads the projector.

Finally all is ready and the cigar-chomper takes a seat alongside the other two. They eye the screen closely and occasionally jot down notes between knowing glances at each other.

"See him, that's our man," one of them says. "He doesn't look any different than the average Joe, does he?"

"No, you'd never know he was a threat to national security just by looking at him," the cigar chomper responds.

The film runs some 15 to 20 minutes before the three rise from their seats, take their notepads and retire to another room. This room is much like the one from which they came. The furnishings consist of three chairs and a mahogany table, much like the kind you would find in a conference room.

"Now, let's compare notes," the cigar chomper says, still not having noticed there is no fire at the end of his stogie. "I want to be absolutely sure we're all on the right frequency before we turn this stuff over to the Senate."

Although the temperature in the room is a comfortable 70 degrees, the three men refuse to shed their trenchcoats. There is also no need for the sunglasses, but old habits are hard to break.

"Well, the evidence is clear," one of them says, shuffling some papers from among sheets torn from his notepad. "They thought Gary Hart was a problem, wait until they get a load of this guy."

"Well, give us your evidence first," the cigar chomper says, nodding toward the man to his left.

"Okay, we have most of this on film, so there's no way he can deny it," the man says. "He left his house three days last week and forgot to kiss his wife. That's serious enough, but wait, it gets better. For the last two years, he's purchased flowers for his secretary on Secretary Appreciation Day. In addition to those two charges, there is more than one instance in which he actually attended girls basketball games at the local college. On top of all that, he hasn't bought any Girl Scout cookies since 1978."

"It's pretty clear-cut," the cigar chomper says. "I can't believe how this guy uses women. We've got to do whatever it takes to stop him."

The agent to the right of the cigar chomper opens his notebook.

"Wait 'til you hear some of this stuff," he says, his voice growing to a slightly higher pitch in anticipation of his revelations. "This man bought a six-pack of beer last week and was actually seen drinking a can of beer during an outdoor barbecue with his wife and children. Can you believe that, exposing his family to that kind of garbage? I also have a couple of reports of him eating certain dishes that contained cooking wine. The topper, the big finish, the grand finale, the coup de gras, is the fact that two weeks ago, he went in for a rubdown after a round of golf at the country club. Now, that may not sound like anything serious but I know for a fact, I have documented proof, that the masseur used — that's right gentlemen, rubbing alcohol."

"This is unquestionably the worst case of womanizing and alcoholism that I've seen in my 35 years with the department," says the cigar chomper.

The three then exchange sheets of paper and each scans through the others' reports. Occasionally one of them gasps in horror or swears under his breath at what seems like the discovery of some unforgivable sin.

"Well, that should be plenty of written evidence," the cigar chomper declares confidently. "Now let's hear from an eyewitness."

A reel-to-reel tape recorder is lifted from under the table and seconds later a man dressed in a three-piece suit enters the room and sits across the table from the other three.

"Tell me sir," the cigar chomper says. "Wasn't there at least one case where you and the man who is the subject of our investigation spent a night of womanizing and drinking together?"

"Yes, that's true," the witness replies in a New England accent.

"Would you like to tell us about it?" the cigar chomper says.

"Well, it's kind of hard to talk about, I'm really embarrassed by it all," the witness says. "I had met him at a bar at Chappaquiddick and we went over to his place and, and, heaven forgive me, we actually watched the Miss America pageant."

The witness breaks into tears at the shame of his revelation.

"Uh-uh," the cigar chomper says, "and was there drinking involved during this night?"

"Yes," the witness responds, "each of us had a near-beer."

The three pile their notebooks on top of each other, then the cigar chomper picks up the entire stack and places them in an expanding folder. He sticks a label on the folder and takes out a pen.

"Subject: John Tower, Re: Pre-Senate hearing investigation," he writes on the label.

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN

SANFORD — The city needs to move more quickly in demolishing crack houses, the police chief has told the city manager and members of the commission.

In a memorandum to City Manager Frank Falson, Police Chief Steve Harriett asked that the city building department research policies of cities like Tampa and Jacksonville who have more aggressive procedures for demolishing abandoned houses where criminal activity and vagrants thrive.

A city building inspector identified for Harriett 38 houses being considered for condemnation in the Georgetown area. Harriett said a few of those houses have been the sites of repeated criminal activity.

A Georgetown resident raised the issue at an informal town meeting Feb. 22. Allie Williams told Harriett, Mayor Betty Smith and two commissioners she was concerned about a house in the area that had not been demolished since it was condemned nearly a year ago.

Bill Simmons, director of engineering and planning, told Harriett in a memo last week that the only condemned houses in Georgetown have been demolished or rehabilitated. He asked Harriett to make a list of known crack houses in that area.

Abandoned houses, like this one entered by City-County Investigative Bureau agents during a routine patrol, often become hangouts for crack addicts, thus the term 'crack houses.' Program gives women helping hand when things get rough

Herald staff writer

ORLANDO — The transition from housewife to businesswoman isn't an easy one — especially when it comes without choice.

The Displaced Homemaker program helps women develop self-esteem and job skills when death or divorce forces them into the job market. The program serves the Seminole, Orange and Osceola county areas from an office at Valencia Community College in Orlando.

The program offers personal, vocational and financial counseling for newly widowed or divorced women over the age of 35. A staff of two outreach counselors, a personal adjustment counselor and one career counselor works with participants individually and in classroom situations.

The Displaced Homemaker program was established by Florida statute in 1976. Orlando became one of the first cities in the nation to have a structured program for such women, director Ginny Stewart said.

The program, which is funded by the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, begins with a 77-hour, two-week program called "Building for Success." Women "get to know themselves better than they have ever known themselves" on the first day, Stewart said.

Individual counseling during the first week takes inventory of values, interests and job skills.

Stewart said a course on assertive communication is one of the most significant elements of the program. "It teaches women how to move through life effectively without being a doormat or somebody who knocks everybody down with aggression," she said. Stewart then teaches women about employment skills — from how to spell the job position applied for to composing a resume. Much time is spent on interviewing skills. Personnel directors from Florida businesses hold mock interviews and critique performances.

Women even learn how to convert a home wardrobe into a business one. "We teach women about independence, self confidence, self-esteem, economic soundness — everything we can think of to make them confident in the business world so they can make good decisions for themselves," Stewart said.

One 50-year-old Sanford woman in the program said she sought help from Displaced Homemaker in making a career change. She moved to Sanford three months ago after her departure from a 20-year teaching career in Colorado, a divorce and a more recent breakup of another relationship.

"The Displaced Homemaker program is a last-paired program trying to be all things for all problems women come up against at mid-life," she said. "The woman said Stewart's financial planning workshop was her introduction to understanding business. "I was raised with no financial understanding whatsoever."

An Altamonte Springs woman said she became involved in Displaced Homemaker when her two children left her with an empty nest. "I found my real problem was that my family was growing up on me and I wasn't needed as I was before. I was being outgrown in the job that meant the most to me in my life," she said. "It's unfortunate that it is limited to this segment of the population," the woman said. "Genders aside, we're all equipped the

Wayports could bolster airport business

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN

SANFORD — A futuristic concept for an air travel could link Sanford Regional Airport to cities across the world — with fewer delays and cheaper rates.

The system that airport Director Mack LaZebny explained to a dozen Seminole County business people recently would have flights at 100 percent passenger load coming in and out of Sanford, making the airport even more attractive to airlines now considering locating here.

Last month, the Sanford airport received

Federal Aviation Administration certification to land passenger and cargo flights.

Centerra, a group of northern Seminole County employers, developers and retailers, voted unanimously to endorse the concept after LaZebny's presentation. Centerra Executive Director Bonnie Manjura said, "The world has shrunk. Air traffic is just something that is with us."

Manjura said her group has an active interest in the development of Sanford Regional Airport. She cited a study published last year indicating that 967,000 airline tickets are purchased by Seminole Countians annually. "That's a million

Appointment of Lucas as civil rights head puzzles

One of the most anticipated appointments in the Bush-era Justice Department was announced the other day. But it seems to have produced more questions than answers.

U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh selected William Lucas, a Black lawyer from Detroit, to head the department's civil rights division. If the Senate confirms his nomination, the one-time Detroit cop will be the nation's chief rights enforcer. But many observers — particularly civil rights advocates — are puzzled by his selection.

Lucas, 61, hasn't worked directly in the civil-rights arena for 25 years. Even that experience was brief — a one-year stint at the Justice Department, where he focused on efforts to desegregate public schools in Tuskegee, Ala. He then moved on to become an FBI agent, an undersheriff of Wayne County, which includes Detroit, and eventually sheriff. In 1977, he was one of five finalists in a nationwide search for a new FBI director.

In 1982, he became county executive. But during an unsuccessful 1986 race for governor, Lucas faced strong criticism from Detroit Mayor Coleman Young and others who charged that he had not been aggressive on minority issues.

However, other observers point out that Lucas ran the county during a time of severe budget cuts and was perhaps in no position to begin new programs or champion minority causes. His prior career in law enforcement also would seem to have given him little chance to address such issues.

One plus for Lucas is that he doesn't have a difficult act to follow. He is scheduled to replace William Bradford Reynolds, the lightning rod for Reagan administration policies that many civil-rights leaders believe were enormously regressive. Reynolds repeatedly has challenged affirmative-action programs, tried to dismantle school busing programs and greatly reined in federal guarantees on the rights of minorities, women and the disabled.

We look forward to hearing Lucas outline his own philosophy and specific plans during the confirmation process. Perhaps then it will become clear whether Lucas is the best person to support that basic rights of all Americans in this "kinder, gentler nation."

May glasnost bring peace

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze pitched his tent in Cairo, ending a 20-year banishment of Soviet foreign ministers from Egypt. Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Arens and PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat soon poked their noses under the tent, sniffing for a peace settlement.

Arens emerged from the meeting officially unswayed. Arafat smiled and Shevardnadze said the Soviet and PLO views were "identical."

By focusing on common interests of Israelis and Palestinians, the United States and the Soviet Union might, themselves, find common ground for the settlement that both superpowers could guarantee.

A new wind is blowing over the Middle East. It is not the "yellow wind" of religious hatred, described in Israeli author David Grossman's book. It is the wind of Soviet glasnost.

May it bring peace.

Our mission: To wage democracy

Long before there was a Soviet Union, there was a U.S. foreign policy.

That is important to remember after almost a half-century when one stark word defined our foreign policy: "Anti-communist." Because that one-word foreign policy is getting harder to maintain, we should look back to our roots and get on with our job.

There is nothing wrong with a bumper sticker foreign policy, when the bumper sticker is accurate. "Anti-communist" was the right strategy when the Soviet was on the march and the intellectual banner of communism was flying high.

Now the Soviets are at least temporarily on the defensive. Its army was humiliated in Afghanistan. Their economy is falling. The idea of communism, Soviet-style, has become laughable.

This makes it hard to build a foreign policy based on anti-communism. The Russians aren't coming, at least not now. That makes it difficult to keep our defense establishment well fed — even though defense is the insurance policy needed to prevent Soviet Imperial recidivism. No readily apparent threat equals no easily appropriated money.

Beyond that, America has serious interests that cannot be expressed as "anti" anything. It is time for a new bumper sticker. An American foreign policy, to be successful, must quicken the public pulse. Americans have a missionary streak, and democracy is our mission. The new sticker should read "pro-democracy." That's what it was before Lenin.

Woodrow Wilson pledged to "make the world safe for democracy." Theodore Roosevelt sought to export democracy. It wasn't perfect policy, but American values were spread.

policy? First, let's help some government agencies that are already in the business. The National Endowment for Democracy gives grants to private organizations in nations seeking greater freedom. NED gets about $16 million per year. Raise it to $50 million per year now and then to $250 million over time.

Radio Liberty and Radio Free Europe broadcast to the Soviet Union and the East European satellite nations. Thanks to glasnost, jamming has stopped. The stations are widely listened to, pushing communist governments to open up even further. Raise the RFE/RL budget from $200 million per year to $250 million. Wage democracy first class.

The United States Information Agency, which includes the Voice of America, runs on a budget of almost $1 billion per year. Raise it: build new VOA transmitters, reopen budget-savaged cultural centers. Budget cuts have slashed State Department spending, closing American consulates. Ridiculous! Give State more money. It's almost as if we've been running a muzzle- America foreign policy.

It's a beginning. It's the least we can do. Democracy is our destiny.

ELLEN GOODMAN

The U.S. as a drug exporter

BOSTON — Those who recognize the symptoms of withdrawal watched Bill Bennett closely. Did he fiddle a bit desperately with his pen. Did he seem just a touch cranky? Had he added a pound or two around the middle?

After more than 20 years as a two-pack-a-day smoker, Bennett had gone through a six-day crash program to kick the habit. He'd done the long walks through the woods. He'd done the aerobics. He'd done the meditation. He'd had the ashtray on his desk replaced by a bowl of fruit and some lollipops.

Now in his second drug-free week, he was under the stress of a Senate confirmation hearing. But not to worry. The new drug czar has to be one of the most highly motivated smokers to ever go to a clinic. When he was chosen for the job in January, he swore he'd quit. It's better than even money that he'll stay clean.

Indeed, Bennett's pledge made a contemporary case study of changed attitudes toward cigarettes. It has become obvious, at last, that cigarettes are addictive. No drug czar could head up an anti-drug operation while chained to nicotine.

If that is true for Bennett, it's true for the rest of the government. One of the other sticky questions to be asked about our drug policy is this one: Can the United States credibly pressure countries that export drugs to us while we push cigarettes?

As a nicotine-free Bennett was being approved for his new post, the State Department released a report on international drug trafficking. It cited worldwide increases in marijuana, opium and coca. It listed countries that are and aren't helping us in the effort. The report didn't list our own tobacco cartels or the worldwide increase in the use of nicotine.

The comparisons are not pure. Tobacco is legal and cocaine is illegal. People are not being mugged by desperate smokers in pursuit of money for their next hit. Nor are there gun battles in the urban streets between corporate executives from RJR and Philip Morris.

But in the scheme of things, tobacco is far more deadly. An estimated 395,000 Americans die annually because of smoking. That's easily ten times the number who die from illegal drugs, even if you include those addicts who die from AIDS. In foreign policy, we threaten governments that don't inhibit the flow of drugs. We also threaten governments that don't permit the flow of cigarettes. What's wrong with this picture?

American companies made 600 billion cigarettes last year, the highest number on record. Of these, 100 billion went overseas, half to the Far East. It's no longer news that the one trade breakthrough there has been cigarettes.

The government made cigarettes its number-one priority in trade, wasting muscle and clout on tobacco. It threatened trade sanctions against countries that kept the conglomerates out. We now have a larger share of their market. More to the point, we're increasing the number of smokers abroad as we decrease the number at home.

The tobacco companies are not, to put it mildly, a goodwill ambassador for other American products. "We've created a poisonous environment for trade," says Rep. Chester Atkins (D-Mass.).

As for our desire to get cooperation in the war against drugs, says Atkins, "there's no way we can have any credibility when we have a drug our own government says is addictive, and is killing us, and we're spreading that drug overseas."

Atkins, along with California congressmen Henry Waxman (D) and Mel Levine (D) and Kansas Republican Bob Whittaker, have introduced a bill that would at least restrain our role as nicotine pushers. American companies would be forbidden from advertising overseas in ways that are prohibited here. That would deep-six television ads like the ones in Japan.

In the same spirit, the bill would prevent our government from threatening trade sanctions against countries which are unwilling to allow the promotion of cigarettes. Finally, cigarettes abroad would have to carry the same warning labels they carry here. It is the least that we can do in the war against drugs.

The tobacco leaf is as imbedded in American history and culture as the coca leaf is in Latin America. It is a tangled part of our political life. But if Bill Bennett can break his addiction to the evil weed, so can this government.

The comparisons are not pure.

Excuses, not solutions are offered for deficit

WASHINGTON — Anyone who has ever balanced a checkbook has got to wonder why the federal government can't do the same. When you run out of money, you stop spending until you get more. At least that's the way it used to work in the old days when "don't leave home without it" referred to cash.

Now, the federal government has as many excuses for running up a deficit as a shopaholic has for running up a charge account. The Congressional Budget Office reminded Congress of those excuses in its recent report on the deficit:

There are technical considerations. Some government programs span years and it wouldn't make sense to budget phase one, and then eliminate phase two. It doesn't look good for the Navy, for instance, to spend millions of dollars designing an aircraft carrier that will never be built.

There are legal and moral considerations. People plan their lives based on promises, written or understood, from the federal government. It would not do to have Uncle Sam run around breaking those promises, especially the big promise from George Bush: "No new taxes."

There are questions of equity. Congress could impose oil import fees, for instance, and the people living in Buffalo would complain about their heating bills. Or, Congress could increase cigarette taxes and dump the burden on poor people, because they smoke more than rich people do.

Finally, there are questions of economy. If the government cuts its spending, the economy tips into a recession. People lose their jobs. Other people get tight with their money and everybody blames Congress and the president.

Suddenly, it isn't so easy to cut the deficit anymore.

But the Congressional Budget Office gave it a sporting try anyway. In a one-inch-thick book, the CBO suggested 149 federal programs to eliminate, scale back or bleed more money out of. The document includes a caveat: the CBO wasn't advocating any of its suggestions. It was merely offering options. Here are some samples for you to judge.

- Cancel the deployment of MX missiles on railroad cars and save $5.8 billion. There would still be 1,000 missiles in silos, but missiles in silos are sitting ducks.

- Delay production of the Stealth Bomber until 1993 and save who-knows-how-much, because the cost of this trinket is classified. An educated guess would put the savings at $30 billion because a delay might allow designers to work out some costly bugs.

- Don't give the military a pay raise next year and save $12.7 billion. The risk is that qualified recruits will not join up and military salaries will not keep pace with civilian standards.

- Tax a portion of Medicare benefits and squeeze $19 billion more out of the taxpayers. This one would be about as popular as a root canal.

- Reduce the subsidy on school lunch programs that serve children who are not poor and save $2.2 billion. Then middle-class children would suffer only if their parents were too busy or dumb to make them a nutritious lunch — a problem that should not be underestimated.

- Reduce federal aid for mass transit systems and save $8.4 billion. Then be prepared to explain to poor people why a bus ticket to work will cost them $5 instead of 50 cents.

- Tax 30 percent of the profit from home sales and net $32.5 billion in five years. Members of Congress could then clean off their desks and go home, because it's a sure bet they wouldn't be re-elected.

There are questions of equity.

Spear's Khomeini column praised

Joseph Spear's commentary "Civilized world must castigate Khomeini" (March 5) should be read by everyone. It is the best column of the half a dozen I have read on Khomeini's threat to the life of Solman Rushdie.

My usually favorite columnist defends Khomeini because he (Khomeini) is defending his religion. He compares Khomeini's anger to that of Christians' behavior over the film "The Last Temptation of Christ." Other columnists have made the same comparison. But there is a great deal of difference in demonstrating in front of theaters and in threatening death to the author of "The Satanic Verses."

Spear is right in criticizing the fear of heads of nations including our own. He asks "where is Ronald Reagan when we need him?" If Reagan were still in the White House something would be done.

Can the whole world go on trembling when one old fanatic threatens? Khomeini is not defending Allah — he has tried to be God.

I believe every one should have a right to choose his religion. In 46 years in the classroom, I have learned a great deal about religions. All have standards and I respect everyone's right to choose. But a religion that must be spread by the sword and threats of murder has no appeal for me.

I am not as broad-minded about the press and television as I should be. There have been times when I favored a leash on Sam Donaldson. I hate pornography but I know that censorship is wrong. Nothing has made me realize it like having some of my favorite literature denied publication because it is in dialect. I was angry with Jesse Jackson because he called quoting "Ole man river" a slur. I don't want to deny history or the fact that dialects are still all over our country.

Let's defend freedom of speech and of the press. If we find something we think is offensive we can always write the editor or demonstrate.

And let's hope President Bush and our bookstores will join Margaret Thatcher and the other nations in whatever it takes to stop Khomeini.

Thanks offered for school support

I want to say Thank you to Seminole County residents who voted for the bond money that brought about the revamping and quieting of our classroom air conditioners.

I have taught math at South Seminole Middle School in Casselberry for nine years and have taught in classrooms with air conditioners so noisy that at parent conferences the units had to be turned off in order for a parent and a teacher to hear each other; this was with a parent sitting right beside the teacher. Imagine what it was like for the teacher to teach, or for the student to hear, participate, and learn.

In spite of the fact that I will be moving out of state soon, I am still grateful!

Ozone issue pits West against Third World

By KARIN DAVIES

LONDON — International efforts to save the vital ozone layer could be seriously endangered unless the industrialized nations and the Third World can work out differences over their conflicting attitudes toward development.

The issue came to the forefront this week at a 123-nation conference on the ozone problem, amid dire predictions for the future of mankind.

The United States and the 12-nation European Community pushed for accelerated efforts to ban most chlorofluorocarbons, also called CFCs. Blamed for depleting ozone, which absorbs cancer-causing ultraviolet radiation from the sun, CFCs are widely used in refrigerators and air conditioning. In aerosol propellants, as solvents and in producing styrofoam containers for the fast-food industry.

It was apparent, however, that the developing world does not fully agree on the subject, with few Third World nations expressing willingness to move toward banning CFCs.

The reason lies in different stages of development.

As Third World countries are fond of pointing out, Western nations ravaged the environment — polluting the atmosphere and waterways, destroying forests and dumping toxic wastes — all in the cause of development.

Now that they are prosperous, the argument goes, they have gotten religion on environment and want to stop Third World nations from similarly exploiting resources to advance their economies.

China's Liu Ming Pu told the conference, "The developed world's accumulation of a great amount of wealth was accompanied by the pollution and destruction of the environment. Now these countries can use past accumulated wealth to manage the environment... Such is not the case for the developing countries."

Both China and India, with 40 percent of the world's population and the potential for vast industrialization, warned that they would not ban CFCs unless the developed world provided assistance to allow them to leapfrog CFC technology and share in environmentally benign technology. Otherwise, their officials said, development could be hindered.

Other developing nations also expressed reluctance about paying the price for the West's mistakes.

U.S. and British officials spoke in general terms about aid but without committing themselves to specific funding.

Unless aid is provided, it is likely that CFC use will end in the West but expand in the Third World. That would solve nothing. CFC emissions in Shanghai are just as damaging as emissions in Chicago or London.

Refusal by China or India to sign the agreement would be disastrous. Their current CFC production is minor, but both countries are on the verge of rapidly expanding CFC-using industries.

Unless CFC substitutes are used, that output could undermine Western cuts.

Saving the ozone layer is a test case. Success would set precedents for the more difficult problems of reducing emissions that contribute to the greenhouse effect, a warming of the world's climate that threatens to raise sea levels and devastate food production.

Dangers to the environment rank second only to nuclear war, scientists say.

As Britain's Prince Charles put it: "Part of the problem has been to convince the man in the street that unless the ozone layer is protected he won't be able to stand in the street without wearing sunglasses and a thick coating of No. 16 sun blocker — and that will just be in the winter."

Those on Western streets are convinced. It remains for their governments to provide the aid that will help the rest of the world join the cause.

Teachers are important people

American schools are service organizations in which neither the client nor the providers of service can refuse to participate, because of legal requirements. Teachers are very important people in the organization. At the elementary level they are the first formal representatives of society that the young child encounters.

The transition from home to school, or day care center to school, is a giant step in the life of a child. Prior to his introduction to the formal learning environment, the child is accepted for "being." From first grade through 12th, the child is rated for "doing."

Elementary school teachers are crucial in this transition from a more relaxed, informal learning situation, to a more regimented, formal learning situation.

Teachers join parents, grandparents, siblings and other caretakers as significant others in the lives of children. Once children begin school, more of their time awake is spent at school than in any other endeavor. Therefore, the interaction that transpires between the teacher and the child may have long term effects upon his receptivity to learning.

Teachers interact continually with children in the classroom. The quality of the interaction becomes the foundation for the social relationships in the classroom. The teacher is the person with whom most of the class members identify and whose acceptance they seek. Any class member perceived as being rejected by the teacher is in danger of being rejected by many of the class members also.

Students note with whom the teacher interacts, the frequency and whether the exchange is positive or negative. Repeated negative exchanges with a particular student reinforces the possibility of further negative exchanges. Negative exchanges may leave a child feeling that he is not "ok," that he is inferior. Feelings of inferiority are injurious to a child's evolving self-concept.

A positive self concept gives a child confidence to explore their world and learn.

Rosenthal and Jacobson's pygmalion hypothesis suggests that teacher expectation of a pupil's success or failure is translated into actuality during the process of teacher-pupil interaction. There have been a litany of studies that have supported this contention.

A child is first and foremost a social being. His need for acceptance and approval are acute at school, because his self-worth is inescapably entwined with the transactions that occur there. The seeds of social malfunctioning may be planted during the elementary school years and come to fruition later in the child's school life.

I agree with Rogers and Coulson who indicated that "the initiation of learning rests not upon the teaching skills of the leader, not upon his scholarly knowledge of the field, not upon his use of audio-visual aids, not upon his lectures and presentations, not upon the abundance of books. Learning rests upon certain attitudinal qualities that exist in the personal relationship between the facilitator and the learner."

FLORIDA COMMENTARY

Manatees fall victim to Florida's boom

By TOM TIEDE

MIAMI — The creature looks something like it has been stepped on by the boot of evolution. It is without doubt one of the least attractive marine mammals on earth. It is fat and hairless, it has beady eyes and a pugnaeous face, and it gropes glacially through the water at the lead of a garbage-lid tail.

Yet the injured manatee at the Miami Seaquarium has attracted wide affection in Florida. When the maritime beast was found dying in the wild recently, it was rescued by the state, named "Walter Payton" after the popular ex-football player, and given over to veterinarians who make daily reports to the concerned public.

The concern is well-placed. The manatee is one of the most endangered animals in the nation. There used to be thousands ranging along our Southeastern seaboard, but their population has been decimated. Marine biologists say there are only 1,200 manatees left, and it may not be enough to ensure the survival of the species. It may not be enough to save the state, either. Conservationists claim the manatee is a symbol of everything that is going wrong in outdoor Florida. Judith Delaney Vallee, for one, believes manatees are "an indicator species." She says, "If we can't save it, we can't save anything — and Florida won't be worth living in."

Vallee is the executive director of the Save the Manatee Club. The group has 15 members for every manatee left in her region. Vallee says there are other kinds of manatees in other parts of the world, but their numbers are dwindling everywhere. The animals are believed to be threatened wherever they are found.

The manatees belong to the mammalian order known as sirenia. The name is taken from the early maritime tales of sea nymphs who were said to beckon to passing ships. Sirenian males mate with females who float on their backs. The females suckle the young, and the practices may have given rise to the myth of mermaids. The lovely legend has not helped the creatures, however. One of the manatee's relatives, the Arctic sea cow, was eliminated by hunters in the 18th century, and the current problem is an extension of that trend. Manatees are docile animals, and they're not equipped to defend themselves against the threats of mankind.

The threats today do not normally include hunting. Vallee says the mammal is now only occasionally killed deliberately. She says the manatee decline is due instead to man-made problems. Florida's waterways are filled with plastic debris, for example, which entangles or chokes the large creatures.

The waterways are also filled with powerboats. And Vallee says they constitute a danger of another kind. Manatees live in the shallow inland streams. For the most part, they are difficult to see beneath the surface of the water. They do not have the agility necessary to get out of the way of fast-moving craft.

This is what happened to

"Walter Payton." The 4-year-old, 400 pound manatee was run over by the blades of an outboard motor. It sustained broken ribs, lacerations and a collapsed lung.

The boat owner has not been found. Vallee says it might not make any difference if he were. There are stiff federal penalties for killing or injuring manatees: up to one year in jail and a $20,000 fine. But it's not applied in the case of accidents.

Vallee says this is one of the difficulties in trying to save the species. The manatees are expected to cohabit with the recreational interests. She says the man or woman who hit "Walter Payton" may have been speeding at the time — but only 70 miles of the state's inland waterways have posted speed limits.

Vallee says the waters should be regulated wherever the manatees range, and the pollution laws that already exist should be strengthened and rigidly enforced.

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

GOP Chairman Atwater is good ole boy

By LEON DANIEL

WASHINGTON — Give credit to Republican National Chairman Lee Atwater, never a man to duck a fight, for resigning voluntarily from predominantly black Howard University's board of trustees to avert campus violence.

Atwater resigned just five days after his controversial appointment after watching televised news reports of a tense confrontation Tuesday night between riot police and about 1,000 students barricaded in the university's administration building.

Police were prepared to use battering rams and tear gas to reach the barricaded protesters when Atwater resigned because, he said, "Someone could be injured in the protest."

Atwater's appointment angered many blacks at a time when he had just begun to implement a new strategy to entice minority voters into the GOP ranks.

They charged that the winning campaign Atwater quarterbacked for President Bush was racist — a charge he rejected absolutely.

Bush, awarded an honorary degree from Howard in 1981, said at a news conference Atwater's appointment was "a good thing" only hours before he resigned.

Presidential aspirant Jesse Jackson said he phoned Atwater to urge him to resign.

Mayor Marion Barry, who met with the protesting students for two hours, also called for Atwater's resignation "for the sake of peace."

But it was Atwater's decision to make. He made it quickly and evidently alone.

Quite simply, Atwater did the right thing.

University President James Cheek, who defended Atwater's appointment, for years has maintained close relations with GOP leaders. President Richard Nixon appointed Cheek as the White House liaison to black colleges.

Atwater, who honed his campaigning skills in the racially polarized politics of South Carolina, has displayed his talent as a rhythm-and-blues guitarist on stages with black musicians.

But if he is to succeed in attracting minority voters to the GOP, he must help Bush separate himself from President Reagan's civil rights record.

That record includes opposition to extending the Voting Rights Act, vetoing legislation that would have expanded protections for minorities and women and approving tax deductions for segregated schools.

Atwater, a fiercely partisan 37-year-old toughened by 44 campaigns, must somehow deal with the charge that he wooed white voters for Bush by linking crime with blacks.

Blacks blame him for campaign television spots which used the furlough of black convicted killer-rapist Willie Horton to attack Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, the Democratic nominee.

I wrote recently that the new GOP national chairman was trying hard to dispel an image that calls to mind a red-necked bad ole boy who enjoys sucker-punching adversaries in backwoods roadhouses.

If Atwater offers to buy you a beer, I advised, keep your eyes on his, your hands out of your pockets and both elbows up there on the bar.

After watching Atwater do the right thing in resigning a job he never should have been offered, I am prepared to admit I was too harsh.

Lee Harvey Atwater may not be a statesman but he is for sure a good ole boy.

Tower's no-drinking pledge was a bribe

When my mom was a little girl, she and her friends in the Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday school took the Temperance Pledge. I believe it was prose written by the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and went something along the "lips that touch liquor..." line. She didn't remember how it went exactly, and broke it as soon as she was old enough to know what it meant.

The Temperance Pledge was a thing of the past by the time I was coming along, but has sort of enjoyed a renaissance with Nancy Reagan's "Just Say No" campaign. And I guess if modern kids don't feel like a "Just Say No" button says it all for them, they now have the option of the "Tower Pledge," a today kind of abstinence vow with one important difference: the element of bribery. When you take the Tower Pledge, you get something in return. Like, an appointment as Secretary of Defense, if you're John Tower. Perhaps a lengthened curfew or a better car, if you're a teen-ager.

"I promise if you'll just let me be defense secretary, lips that touch liquor shall never touch mine, even sitting around The Monocle swapping stories and checking out babes."

"I promise if you'll just a) let me stay out an hour later, and b) buy me a '69 Charger with a 426 Hemi instead of this '74 Pinto, so I can look cool going around McDonald's, then I'll just say no to booze, at least until the senior trip when we're on the bus and none of us has to drive."

Personally, I find the bribery ideas extremely appealing. If good works, good looks and a great resume won't get me a job — and on several occasions, they haven't — perhaps I can bribe my way to a better position.

"So, you've heard I'm not the greatest speller? Well as luck would have it, I've just enrolled in "Spell Your Way to Success" at the local community college and bought a SpellStar program for my computer. If you hire me, I promise to read only the dictionary and Roget's Thesaurus in my free time, and work all the "It Pays to Increase Your Word Power" puzzles in Reader's Digest. And since you're right on my way, why don't I drive you to work every morning, too?"

My 55-year-old friend Carol tells me the older you get, the scarier the men get. "Let a man get a divorce, all the single women over 40 head for him like a school of piranhas," she says. An adaption of the Tower Pledge sounds like it just ought to work on the singles scene, too.

"Marry me and anything from Julia Child's "Mastering the Art of French Cooking" set is yours on demand, along with every trick I learned in 20 years of reading Cosmopolitan and your name on my CD's. You want me to shed a few pounds? Hey, lips that touch chocolate layer cake and Kentucky Fried Chicken shall never touch yours..."

There's only one thing I don't understand about this whole bribery thing, and the guy who started it all, John Tower: In order to bribe someone, you have to give up something. I trade you all of my free time and a ride to work every morning, and you give me a job. A bribe is not a pleasant barter, but one you enter because you don't have any other options.

If Tower doesn't have a drinking problem, why did he promise not to drink if the Senate would just confirm his nomination to be Secretary of Defense? I'd think a couple brewskis at the local pub now and then might make running the Pentagon almost bearable.

If he doesn't have a drinking problem, tossing down a few once in a while won't impair his ability to lead. If he does have a drinking problem, a stack of pledges won't make any difference.

United Telephone's tax bill is tops

SANFORD — United Telephone Company of Florida (UTF) says it paid $1,484,316.26 in Seminole County property taxes in 1988, making it the largest taxpayer in the county.

"The taxes reflect United's investment in equipment, and other property necessary to meet the area's demand for telecommunication services," said Brant Biltner, division public affairs manager for UTF.

Statewide, UTF paid more than $34.7 million in state and local taxes in 1988, $16.2 million stemming from local property taxes in the 24 counties United serves.

Progress noted on golf course repair

HEATHROW — The three-year, $1 million golf course renovation at Heathrow Country Club is one-third complete, according to Larry Galloway, head golf professional at Heathrow.

The Golf Course renovation is being aided by the consultation of Bob Cupp, designer of the Shoal Creek course, home of the 1986 U.S. Open. Included in the renovation are the planting of 800 new trees, thousands of ornamental plants and bushes, the recontouring of fairways, the construction of mounds and bunkers and the changing of lake lines.

The Country Club's management chose to renovate the course over the three year period in an effort to minimize inconvenience to golfers. "Otherwise, because of the extent of the renovation, the entire course would have to have been shut down for eight months," Galloway explained.

Eastern's debt downgraded

United Press International

NEW YORK — Moody's Investor Service and Standard & Poor's Corp. downgraded Eastern Airlines' credit ratings Thursday following the company's federal bankruptcy protection filing.

Moody's also placed under review the debt ratings of Texas Air Corp., Eastern's parent, and other Texas Air holdings, including Continental Airlines, People Express Airlines and Britt Airways, "because of the uncertain effect the Eastern bankruptcy may have on each company."

Moody's cited the possibility that the Eastern affiliates could be drawn into the bankruptcy proceedings.

Miami-based Eastern has been virtually grounded by a machinists strike that began March 4.

Moody's lowered Eastern's subordinated debentures to Ca from Caa and its preferred stock to ca from caa.

About $2.3 billion of long-term debt and preferred stock was affected by Moody's action. Moody's lowest rating is C for highly speculative issues of poor value.

S&P lowered its rating on $38.5 million of Eastern's industrial revenue bonds to D from triple-C and downgraded the airline's rating on $197.8 million of subordinated debt to D from double-C.

Stocks or bonds rated by S&P at double-B or below are considered speculative. The D rating means that the debt is in default, in arrears or of questionable value.

The credit agency kept Eastern's $40.9 million of single-B rated secured equipment trust certificates due 1997 and 1998 on Credit Watch with negative implications.

"If the bankruptcy trustee affirms the aircraft leases, lease rentals will resume and the rating will be reaffirmed," S&P said. But if the trustee decides to liquidate Eastern or disaffirms the leases, the rating will be lowered to D, the agency said.

Spring hiring outlook good

Manpower survey of 14,000 employers nationwide indicates upswing locally

MAITLAND — The springtime hiring pace is expected to pick up in this part of the state, according to results of the newest Employment Outlook Survey from Manpower Inc.

Gerry Dunham, owner of Manpower Inc. of Central Florida, reported in a press release that 27 percent of the area employers polled expect to increase staff size in the coming April/May/June period, 10 percent will downsize staff and 63 percent will stay at current levels.

Three months ago, by comparison, survey results showed 10 percent of those responding planned to add workers and another 10 percent anticipated workforce reductions. Last spring, 37 percent were expecting employment rolls to grow and 10 percent intended to curtail staff.

Across the nation, the survey figures indicate a strong employment market, as 30 percent of the nearly 14,000 employers polled envision staff increases and 6 percent expect a decline in the workforce.

In the South, 29 percent foresee an upsurge in hiring and 6 percent predict staff cutbacks.

Locally, the job market looks promising in the services and education sectors, the construction industry, durable goods manufacturing and the transportation/public utilities industry, according to Dunham.

Mixed hiring intentions are reported in the wholesale and retail trade. Stable job conditions are anticipated in other industrial sectors.

On a national level, employers are continuing their search for additional workers. It appears many firms are having difficulty recruiting the workers they need as labor market shortages are becoming increasingly widespread. This situation seems to be an extension of a general expansion that began in 1984 and persisted with marginal increases since that time.

Seasonal hiring patterns are the most pronounced, according to the Manpower survey. The construction industry and services firms forecast the strongest activity, but durable goods manufacturers are also optimistic.

The Midwest region is clearly the leading area, as the prospect of springtime weather accelerates the willingness to add staff. The Northeast and South are close to the national average and Western states lag somewhat behind.

For the past 12 years, Manpower Inc. has conducted the Employment Outlook Survey on a quarterly basis. It is a measurement of employer intentions to increase or decrease the permanent workforce. The survey, conducted during the last two weeks of February, is based upon telephone interviews with nearly 14,000 public and private employers in 427 U.S. cities.

Seminole chamber sets priorities

Encouraging volunteerism at the high school level, maintaining the independence of the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman, and a series of small business issues are top priorities on the list of Legislative Policies and Priorities of the Greater Seminole County Chamber of Commerce.

Robert Lewis, executive vice president of the 1,700-member chamber, noted in a press release the "decided small business flavor" of the Chamber's 1989 priorities.

Included among the Chamber's policies and priorities are support of a comprehensive overhaul of the Florida Worker's Compensation System, opposition to mandated parental leave group health insurance, opposition to personal income tax, and opposition to a 50 percent hike in state occupational license fees.

The Chamber also announced opposition to mandatory drug testing in the workplace, and support of a bill to utilize a roster of drivers in selecting jurors instead of the voter's registration roster.

Lewis said, "The Chamber's Governmental Affairs Committee worked very hard to review proposed bills of concern to Seminole County and the small business community."

Based on the Committee's recommendations, the Chamber's Board of Directors made specific, detailed recommendations of support or opposition for each bill.

The goals in presenting the Legislative package include informing the Legislators of the Chamber's position.

Popeye's, Church's to merge stores

United Press International

SAN ANTONIO — More than 50 people will be laid off after completion of the merger between Popeyes Famous Fried Chicken and Church's Fried Chicken, company executives announced.

Popeyes President James Flynn and four other company executives visited Church's San Antonio headquarters Thursday to announce that in the three months following the merger as many as 53 people will be let go.

Another 25 to 30 will be offered relocation to Popeyes' headquarters in New Orleans.

"It's a pretty grim day around here now that reality has set in," Ernest Renaud, president of the San Antonio-based company, told the San Antonio Light in an interview.

Popeyes' offer to buy Church's outstanding shares expires March 21. Church's President Ernest Renaud said he expects the merger agreement between the two fried chicken chains to be completed a week later.

Special tax credit set for poor workers

JACKSONVILLE — Nearly 250,000 low income individuals in North and Central Florida may be eligible for a special tax credit this year according to James J. Ryan, Jacksonville Internal Revenue Service district director.

Low income Floridians may be eligible to take a special tax credit on their federal income tax returns, which could result in a longer refund.

The "earned income credit" is available to those whose income for 1988 was less than $18,576 and had a child living in their home.

Taxpayers entitled to the earned income credit can subtract it from the tax owed. If the credit is larger than the tax, the difference will be refunded. "Even those who did not have tax withheld from their pay or are not required to file a return should file to get a refund," Ryan said. The credit can be as much as $874.

For more information, contact the IRS at 1-800-424-1040.

Largest black bank created

United Press International

CHICAGO — Indecorp Inc. had completed the acquisition of Drexel Holding Co. by the end of last week, creating the largest black-owned financial institution in the nation.

Indecorp, in a statement announcing completion of the deal, said it marked the "first acquisition of a thriving (white) majority-owned bank by a black-owned institution."

Industry experts said the combination of Indecorp, the holding company for Independence Bank of Chicago, and Drexel, parent of Drexel National Bank, is the biggest black-owned financial institution in the country.

"Our purchase of Drexel is the culmination of many years of careful planning and work in developing Indecorp and Independence Bank and is one of historic significance," said Indecorp President Alvin J. Boutte.

"This purchase provides us opportunities to be an ever more important force in the development of black business here and nationally," Boutte said.

Indecorp reported net income of $1.4 million in 1988 — up more than 50 percent from the previous year — and had total assets of $117.5 million. Drexel reported net income of $1.2 million for 1988 — down 4.5 percent from the previous year — and ended last year with total assets of $108.2 million.

IN BRIEF

Flu vaccine available

SANFORD — The HRS—Seminole County Public Health Unit has flu vaccine available for county residents who have not received their flu shots for the 1988-89 season. Medicaid recipients may receive the vaccine at no charge by presenting their Medicaid card and a written doctor's order for the vaccine.

The trivalent vaccine is good against three strains: A-Taiwan, B-Sichuan, and C-Victoria.

Those who should be vaccinated include adults and children with long-term heart or lung problems, nursing home residents, anyone over 65 years of age, people who required regular follow-up treatment or hospitalization in the last year, children and teenagers receiving long term aspirin treatment and may be at risk for developing Reye Syndrome following influenza infection, and health care workers and others who provide care to high-risk persons at home.

New directors of West Lake unit

LONGWOOD — Child psychiatrists Bruce Henry, Thomas Dow and Martin Lazortz have been named clinical directors of West Lake Hospital's 22-bed adolescent unit. They succeed Dr. Lawrence Erlich, who resigned Feb. 1 after holding the position since April, 1988.

The new clinical directors will split responsibilities regarding treatment programs. Dr. Henry will head the team responsible for treating chemically dependant adolescents or those who are diagnosed as having "conduct or disruptive disorders. Dr. Dow will supervise all other treatment programs in the adolescent unit, and Dr. Lazortz will oversee the entire unit to ensure strong inter-team communication, according to Dennis Menard, hospital administrator.

West Lake is an 80-bed psychiatric hospital which opened in 1985.

Breast self exam class is Thursday

ORLANDO—A class to teach women how to use breast self exams in the detection and prevention of breast cancer will be held at Orlando Regional Medical Center Thursday from 5:30 to 8 p.m.

The class is free and open to the public. It will be held in the Ambulatory Care Center, 23 W. Copeland Ave. (the corner of Orange and Copeland avenues in Orlando).

Physicians and other health care professionals will be on hand to answer questions and discuss different types of cancer treatment and advancements in the field.

Parking is available to the Ambulatory Care Center and all participants will receive a free breast exam shower card. The class is being held in conjunction with the Greater Orlando Mammography Project scheduled for April 3-14. Mammographies will be offered during this period to women who meet American Cancer Society qualifications at a reduced rate of $50 at several locations throughout Central Florida.

Breast cancer was the second leading cause of death among women in the United States in 1988 and claimed the lives of 42,000 women.

Infant mortality drops in Seminole

SANFORD — Seminole County's infant mortality rate has dropped considerably over the past 10 years, and a unique public-private sector cooperative program should lower it even farther, says Dr. George Deju, county health director.

Infant deaths have fallen from a 1977 rate of 15.1 per 1,000 live births to 6.7 per 1,000 in 1987. The compares to the statewide rate of 10.6 per 1,000.

A study by the Florida Healthy Mothers, Healthy Babies Coalition ranked Seminole County second in the state for its healthy pregnancy outcomes in relation to births, infant mortality, prenatal care and births to teenagers.

In 1988, county and state government, local doctors and two county hospitals signed a Maternity Health Care Agreement which provide prenatal care for low income expectant mothers. Under the agreement, the state HRS-Seminole County Public Health Department provides prenatal care to financially eligible patients until they are complete 20 weeks of gestation.

After that, the clients are referred to a private obstetrician at one of the two participating hospitals, Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford, or Florida Hospital in Altamonte Springs. Deju said every effort is made to assign patients to the hospital closest to their residences and they are assured of receiving the same quality of care as private patients. The public health department handles all Medicaid billing for the doctors.

Funding for the program is: the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, $210,455; Seminole County, $285,000; Central Florida Regional Hospital, $81,000; Florida Hospital, Altamonte, $30,000.

Deju said the agreement is the only one of its kind in the state.

"Early and continuous prenatal care has been shown

Infant deaths in Seminole County to significantly reduce low birth weights, disabilities and infant deaths," Dr. Deju says. "Unfortunately, 31.1 percent of Florida babies are born to mothers who do not receive prenatal care."

Deju said the efforts by the HRS, and the county commissioners have made possible this county's public-private sector partnership to save babies which otherwise would die.

Diabetes awareness seminars scheduled

Three Central Florida hospitals will present diabetes education programs this month in recognition of National Diabetes Awareness Month.

A free diabetes screening, educational program and breakfast are scheduled at South Seminole Community Hospital Saturday. The program begins at 7 A.M. in the hospital dining room.

AMI Medical Center, 1800 Mercury Drive, Orlando, will host a day-long free public seminar on Saturday, March 18 to outline the latest techniques in diabetes management and control, and Orlando Regional Medical Center will host a free education program called "Diabetes in Disguise" on Tuesday, March 21.

The Longwood program will include two blood tests, breakfast, an educational video, and presentations by two physicians about living with diabetes. Dr. Azhar Ali of the hospital's internal medicine staff will discuss the diabetic lifestyle and maintaining health with diabetes, and will answer questions about insulin, and other medications. Dr. Thomas Norris, podiatrist, will describe proper care of the feet, and the important role this plays for the diabetic.

The program is co-sponsored by the two doctors, Eli Lilly and Company, and South Seminole Community Hospital.

Registration for the program is limited to 50 diabetics. Reservations can be made by calling Ken Peach at 767-1200, extension 199.

Participants are asked to fast following their last full meal on Friday night.

Diabetes is a chronic disease that affects the way the body changes food into energy. Someone who suffers from diabetes has higher than normal levels of sugar in the blood which can cause serious complications if not properly managed.

An estimated 10 to 20 million people in this country are diabetics and the disease is a leading cause of heart attack and stroke. However, diabetes can be controlled and the key to successful management of the disease includes a careful balance of medication, diet and exercise.

The seminar at AMI Medical Center will begin at 9 a.m. in the center's auditorium and will conclude with a special product display from 2 to 3 p.m.

Lunch will be provided and reservations are required. They may be made by calling 295-5151, extension 1080.

Sponsored in conjunction with the Central Florida Chapter of the American Diabetes Association, the seminar is open to diabetics and members of their families, teachers who have diabetic students, or anyone interested in learning more about diabetes.

The panel of experts will include doctors who will speak on foot care, eye care and general care for diabetics, and a nutritionist who will speak on diet.

The special product display will give diabetics an up-to-date view of many of the newest products now available to help in the control and management of diabetes.

The ORMC seminar will be held at 7 p.m. March 21 in the hospital's Blue Auditorium, 1414 S. Kuhl Ave.

Dr. John Malone, a pediatric endocrinologist from the University of South Florida and a member of the Governor's Diabetes Advisory Council, will present the program, which will involve a discussion of the warning signs and symptoms of diabetes which are sometimes hidden. Symptoms include blurred vision, increased thirst and fatigue.

Senior companion volunteers wanted

SANFORD — Volunteers for a newly-established senior companion program in Seminole County are being sought by the Visiting Nurse Association.

Marsha Lorenz, coordinator of the program, the program has a two-fold purpose: to provide services such as personal care, cooking or housecleaning for older people, or just providing company for them, in an effort to maintain them in their homes; and to help low-income person contribute to their communities and at the same time earn some money.

Anyone 60 years of age or older may become a volunteer for the Community Care for the Elderly project, but Lorenz said low-income elderly persons are especially being sought for the program.

The program is one of several throughout the state which were recently approved for federal funding, Lorenz said. She said the Visiting Nurse Association office in Orlando will coordinate the project.

"We are planning to start small, and have a goal of signing up six volunteers," she said. "Then, if the program gets off the ground, we hope to expand it in future years," she explained.

Each senior companion volunteer will get a free pre-employment physical examination, and will be paid $2.20 per hour for up to 20 hours of service per week. In some cases, meal and travel expenses will also be covered. Direct payment to senior companions are not subject to any tax and are not treated as wages or compensation for the purposes of public assistance or benefit payments, Lorenz said.

To qualify as a senior companion, a volunteer must be 60 or older, be a resident of Seminole County, be in good health and have a limited income.

Lorenz said the senior companions program can help the volunteers by establishing a new social services role for them helping them maintain a sense of self worth, retain physical health and mental alertness, and enrich their social contacts.

Anyone interested in volunteering to be a senior companion, or interested in obtaining more information about it should call Lorenz at 628-2884 in Orlando.

Wayports

people spending an hour in their cars getting to the Orlando airport and we've got an airport 10 minutes away," she said.

LaZeny explained that the Wayport system places four regional airports in rural areas: one in the north, one in the south, one in the west and one in the east. Those airports — or Wayports — would serve only people transferring from one plane to another. That would alleviate much of the traffic flying through major air hubs like Atlanta, Denver and Chicago.

"We can send a man to the moon, but we can't send a person between two places without going through Atlanta," LaZeny said. Alleviating heavy pass-through traffic at major hubs like Hartsfield Airport in Atlanta would cut down on delays, he said, which would cut costs to consumers by reducing fuel consumption of planes waiting to get on and off the ground.

Delays cost the aviation industry $3 billion dollars annually, according to the Airline Transportation Association. Those costs include fuel consumption, missed connections, passenger time and other considerations.

"Even at Sanford Regional Airport you've got planes waiting in line" for takeoff, LaZeny said.

Instead of several flights leaving one airport each with only about 40-percent passenger load, LaZeny explained, one plane would transport all those passengers to a Wayport. At the Wayport, passengers from all over one quadrant of the country would board a plane for a common destination. LaZeny said all flights in the proposed system would run at 100-percent capacity.

LaZeny explained that Wayports can be integrated into the current hub and spoke system, where airlines fly from smaller cities to one hub, then on to larger cities.

The Wayport system is like an interstate system in the sky, LaZeny said. "The difference between the interstate system and the airway system is that, in the interstate system, every inch between Sanford and Norfolk is paved. Less than two miles on each end between Sanford and Norfolk is paved in the airway system."

"With Wayports you've got one airplane going between the two; with the interstate, you've got each car consuming fuel at about 25 mpg, with everybody looking at everybody else's tail lights."

Texas, Kentucky and Mississippi have announced interest in competing for Wayport sites, according to articles in the Dallas Times Herald, the (Jackson, Miss.) Clarion-Ledger and the (Covington) Kentucky Post.

Because Florida is a common destination for many tourists, LaZeny said, the state is not likely to be the site of a Wayport. But he expects that the system will ease congestion and improve air travel to Sanford, Orlando and other Florida cities.

Once passenger service begins at Sanford Regional Airport, LaZeny said Miami, Atlanta and Jacksonville would be the primary points for connecting flights. But with Wayports, a flight from Sanford "could take you anywhere in the world," LaZeny said.

Manjura said implementation of the Wayport system could help Sanford Regional Airport hurdle problems other new airports have faced. "Wayports would eliminate or reduce adverse impacts historically associated with new airports," she said.

The four Wayports could be on line by 1995 if construction began this year, LaZeny said. Each facility would be built for less than $1 billion on a minimum of 23 rural acres with a terminal and eight runways. Because the airport would utilize what is now unused airspace, LaZeny said, the eight runways would have the same capacity as 32 instrumental landing runways at a conventional airport.

Using airspace over rural areas would reduce the number of near misses and help develop rural America, according to a presentation written by the concept's originator, Jim Sheppard. States who build Wayports should agree to protect about 50 square miles surrounding the facility, Sheppard wrote in the presentation.

LaZeny listed these as cost-effective advantages:

- Rural land is cheaper, so large tracts can be purchased more economically than in metropolitan areas. And fewer homes would have to be displaced in rural areas.

- Fewer roadways are needed to serve the Wayport. Because it is not an airport of origin or destination, the Wayport doesn't require expensive roadways and parking facilities.

- No expensive expansion is needed. While Orlando International Airport is undergoing $700 million in improvements needed to serve more aircraft and passengers, the Wayport would reduce the need for such expansion at other airports, while maintaining its own level of service.

The four Wayports would have a similar design. The proposal allows for four facilities at the price of one design.

Wayports could make international travel quicker and cheaper. Instead of being laid over at one airport and then another before reaching Kennedy International, a passenger could fly from the port of origin, then to a Wayport to catch an international flight, LaZeny said.

The Wayport system as it is proposed would be funded by FAA, non-profit organizations, states, regional authorities, airlines and private individuals.

LaZeny made the presentation to Centura (a group of developers based in Heathrow) last week for the man who conceived the system. Sheppard, director of the FAA regional office in Orlando, said he could not be the official spokesperson for the concept since the FAA has not yet endorsed the proposal.

Roger Myers, an FAA spokesman in Atlanta, said the Wayports concept is one of a number of proposed methods of dealing with air gridlock being studied by the FAA. He said the national FAA office has not made a policy decision determining which solution to pursue.

BOOK REVIEWS

Bellow takes a publishing chance

A Theft
By Saul Bellow
(Penguin, 109 pp., $8.95 pb)

Nobel Prize winner Saul Bellow broke the rules by publishing his novella "A Theft" as a paperback original rather than as a hardcover and the industry will be watching this experiment by an establishment writer.

The experiment may be more interesting than the story.

"A Theft" is the story of Clara Velde, an oft-married New York fashion executive with roots in the Midwest, and an emerald ring given her by the one man she truly loved but never married — Ithiel Regler, a brilliant but shadowy consultant to world leaders.

Clara is a compulsive talker, spilling out her life and love in conversations with Regler, her best friend Laura Wong, and her psychiatrist. Bellow, who has one of the best ears for dialogue, lets his ironic wit play throughout this talk on everything from psychiatry to Russian dissident literature, terrorism and surrogate motherhood.

Star
By Danielle Steel
(Delacorte, 447 pp., $19.95)

In this, her 24th novel, Danielle Steel shows a maturity and depth not seen before.

While criticized at times for her use of the cliché situation, Steel has never been rapped for her breathtaking use of description and emotion.

while they strive to achieve their goal.

Crystal Wyatt, growing up on a ranch where her beauty makes her an outcast, moves beyond the weaknesses of those around her to find happiness. Elizabeth Barclay, who has grown up in amid privilege and power, achieves what she believes is success, but then finds that her achievement does not mean all she had hoped.

Spencer Hill binds the two women together as surely as he drives them apart later. He finds, just in time, his star is not power, but his happiness with the woman he loves.

"Star" is another best seller for Steel.

An Affair to Remember: My Life with Cary Grant
By Maureen Donaldson and William Royce
(Putnam, 288 pp., $18.95)

Ah, Cary Grant — the epitome of matinee idol. That suave, debonaire presence, that devil-may-care wink. How he charmed audiences everywhere. Women wanted to marry him, men wanted to be his best friend.

Ah, Maureen Donaldson, who shared Grant's life between his fourth and fifth marriages. She was 27, he was 69, still smarting over his divorce from Dyan Cannon and obsessively devoted to their daughter, Jennifer.

This is Donaldson's account of their four years together. She said Grant asked her not to write anything until after he had died. We would have been better served if he asked her to keep her mouth shut.

"Affair" is a triumph of profit motive over discretion.

Crackdown

demolished by the city last year, according to building department records.

"It is also agreed that exceptional methods may need to be initiated by City Commission to handle these cases," Simmons wrote. "Perhaps a complete change of condemnation procedures is necessary while still protecting the property rights of our law-abiding citizens and concentrating upon the worst offenders."

Simmons said in an interview, "It's really been like passing a hot potato back and forth (between the police and building departments). Somebody's got to get in the middle and tear down some houses. We all want to accomplish the same things, it's just a matter of making it all fit with statutes and city ordinances."

At a commission workshop March 6, Harriett said "the ball was rolling" for more expedient action. He said the city attorney, the code enforcement board and the city manager were working with him to find a solution.

Fatality is a frightening possibility at such houses, Harriett told the commission. "We haven't had a fatality yet, but it certainly is a very real possibility."

City Commissioner Lon Howell, who represents Georgetown, said in an interview that the condemnation process lacks the force it needs because it takes too much time to carry out. "If destroying crack houses is the answer, then I'm all for it," he said.

Howell said he has had several calls from Georgetown residents concerned about crack houses in their neighborhood. "I've visited a couple of families and they're scared. One family is scared to let their kids go out and play."

Gary Wynn of the city building department said he did not know if the city has researched condemnation policies in Tampa and Jacksonville, but an officer for the code enforcement board met with officials from Orlando to review procedures there.

Jim McDonald of the Jacksonville Housing Safety Division said the city follows an aggressive condemnation policy, but not as a means of curbing criminal activity. "We don't condemn houses because the sheriff asks us to," he said.

Under the Jacksonville unsafe building ordinance, McDonald said, the city demolishes condemned structures after 30 days if owners do not make necessary improvements. Extensions are sometimes offered to owners under extenuating circumstances, he said.

Walt Skrimshier, chief inspector of the Tampa Standards and Enforcement Office, said structures that are suspected of being crack houses are high in priority for demolition. Because demolition is an expense to the city, Skrimshier said, his office seeks prosecution against owners of unsafe structures for a $250-a-day fine before they contract demolition. But structures that are home to drug activity are tagged for removal, he said.

The city of Tampa gives property owners 30-day notice of demolition with an additional 15 days to remove personal belongings, Skrimshier said. In an appeal process, Skrimshier said, a condemnation board commonly upholds the demolition order pending an extension for owner repair. If the owner does not come into compliance within the granted extension, the order becomes final. "Short of that, nothing but a stay from circuit court can stop us," he said.

Wynn said property owners in Sanford are normally given 90 days to either demolish or repair a building before the city removes it. The city ordinance does not specify the length of notice given to owners.

City attorney William Colbert said the biggest obstacle in removing unsafe structures is absentee ownership. The city must serve property owners notice of demolition before action can be taken. In fact, he said, the owner of the house Williams complained about could not be located to serve a condemnation notice.

same, men need help, too."

From doctorates to women who have just learned to read, Displaced Homemaker serves women of all income levels, Stewart said. The program has found employment for women up to age 78.

Some women who come into the program from upper incomes aren't just concerned about survival, Stewart said. "Some have necessities, but wander around asking, 'But what's my purpose?' We're making them able to elect where to go," she said.

Stewart counsels women with varying degrees of contact with the outside world. She recalls one woman who, while married, never left her house — not even to go shopping. "Her husband even bought her underwear for her," she said.

At one of her first mock interviews, Stewart said, that woman was offered a job. "And she was the person with the least contact with the outside world I had ever met," Stewart said. She attributes that woman's success to the program's objective of esteem building.

More than 800 women used the service last year, and 1,000 are expected to go through the program this year, Stewart said. She notes those figures with a reminder that individual counseling is provided for every woman who enrolls.

Stewart calls the program's Job Club "a sort of Weightwatchers for women moving on toward their goals." Women discuss frustrations and successes of job searches at the meetings.

UPI report

Buying art is a form of art in itself and can be intimidating to the average collector.

Susan Theran has managed to make this process less bewildering with her book, "Leonard's Annual Price Index of Art Auctions" (Auction Index Inc., 675 pp., $195).

"I tried to take the mystery out of auctions, which can be so intimidating to a collector," Theran said in a telephone interview.

Using the index could make the difference between paying too much, passing up a good buy and spending just the right amount for a work of art.

The publication provides information on sales of original art bought and sold in America by 30 major U.S.

galleries during the auction season of September 1987 through August 1988. Included are works in oil, watercolor, pastel, gouache, mixed media, drawing and sculpture. The book covers all periods, schools and artists, whatever their country of origin.

This excellent reference book lists every piece of art sold by these firms, from drawings by little-known artists that went for as little as $10 to multimillion-dollar masterpieces.

All works of art are listed by artist in alphabetical sequence.

The publication, the size of a telephone directory, includes 38,000 sales representing more than 16,000 artists.

Theran's company, headquartered in Newton, Mass., published the first Leonard's Annual Price Index in 1981.
