TODAY'S BIBLE VERSE

Some call it destiny. An unseen hand moves his pawns to suit his pleasure. No one is above or below this destiny. He loometh the bond of Kings.—Ex. 20:8.

We don't know just what the meaning of all these Confederate flags, caps, and ties suddenly breaking out is, but we've noticed that the only ones who don't seem to like it are the Trumancrats.

It must take a lot of patience for those sitting in on the Korean truce talks. We can imagine that most of us would have told the Reds where to head in a long time ago.

The penny postcard is no more. At least it will be no more after Jan. 1, for President Truman has just signed the bill upping the rate to two cents. It raises the rate for a lot of other mail matter, too, but you don't have to worry about that. You'll pay it in the cost of living.

Seminole County made real progress yesterday on its proposed new Fish Memorial Hospital when the U. S. Public Health Service approved a grant of $270,000 in federal funds to aid in its construction. Under the terms of the grant as announced by the department it would be a 50-bed hospital costing $767,000. The Fish Estate, it is reported, will furnish the balance of $497,000.

Prime Minister Churchill's salary as a member of the House of Commons was $17,000 a year, while his own salary was reduced from $28,000 to $19,600. That is one way to save money for the people, and it presents a suggestion which might be followed to good advantage in this country. At least it is setting a good example.

If you are worrying about where your Christmas money is coming from, or other year-end expenses which have a way of piling up, you will be interested in the announcement of the national Christmas Savings Club that some 10,875,000 Americans will receive $952,000,000 from 6,200 financial institutions on or about the first of December for an average distribution of about $27.50, their return on a savings program begun on the first of each year. You will find it makes Christmas more enjoyable if you have prepared for it in this manner.

Those who like to pretend that drunken driving is just good clean healthy fun, or nobody's business but the driver's, should try to explain the bus accident in San Francisco which resulted in the deaths of seven persons, the serious injury of 22 more, after a drunken driver had collided with a concrete abutment on the approach to the bridge and knocked a large concrete slab right in front of the oncoming bus. You cannot expect the public to show too much patience with drunken drivers when that sort of thing is allowed to happen.

We don't know what the objection is in the U. S. State Department to the proposal that the United States should furnish humanitarian aid to the people of the Republic of China, but we are sure that one would say that it deserves just what it gets.

The government is a Communist government ever since it was established there, by the Communist Party, and it is the duty of every citizen to support it.

Churchill's Task

Winston Churchill has no easy path ahead in seeking the final prize of life which he wanted through victory in the British elections—peace. The immediate problems of Iran and Egypt will be knotty ones. The leaders in both of those nations face dilemmas of their own.

Mossadeq will surely be toppled from power in Iran if he makes any important concession to Britain, yet if he does not soon obtain a renewal of the income from the oil industry he will be toppled anyway. The Egyptian leaders have gone far out on the political limb in their proposal to throw Britain out of Suez and the Sudan, yet they can hardly take the rash step of resort to force if the British decline to be thrown out.

If these two problems are met successfully, Churchill must then turn his attention to the security of Europe and the settlement of the Korean question, for both are essential to peace for Great Britain.

A more appropriate man to lead Britain in the facing of these problems could hardly be found. No other man in the Western world today can draw on anything approaching Churchill's background of experience in dealing, as a representative or leader of a major power, with the forces and intrigues which have torn the world apart in this century.

No other has known and dealt with so many of the figures who have shaped the course of the world over the past four decades. If Churchill does not know how to set Britain on the path toward peace in these difficult times, it is justifiable to ask whether any man does.

Controlled Behavior

Ever since people began to question the wisdom and the morality of wars there has been a great cleavage of thought on the theory of preventing war. On one side are those who believe that the way to prevent war is to refuse to fight. On the other are those who believe that some things must be fought for, until a better way is found to settle differences. Now a report of an experiment in controlled behavior seems to support the theory of refusing to fight.

Scientists experimented with generations of rats, which resemble humans in many ways and hence are frequent substitutes for human subjects. Rats like to form communities and also tend to fight among themselves. The scientists found that a whole generation could be taught to fight for no particular reason, and throughout life would fight at the least provocation. Or a whole generation could be taught to avoid fighting, and throughout life would try to get along without fights.

Is there a human parallel? Could a whole generation of the earth's people be taught to abhor fighting, and therefore live in peace. We shall probably never know, for the difficulty of getting all the world to agree to such a program seems sufficient to preclude it. But to try to prevent war by simply not fighting is a negative approach. A positive approach is needed. We have to prevent war by building peace, by building conditions under which the world can live at peace. There's no easy way to peace, only a way of hard and unremitting work.

Banning Books

A growing menace today is censorship of self-appointed judges. It has been noted recently in communities as far apart as rural Bartlesville, Oklahoma, and Searsville, New York, the home of well-to-do computer. Unofficial groups of citizens in the two towns have taken it upon themselves to decide what books their public libraries should buy, and to denounce as "Communist" or "subversive" any that run counter to their prejudices. In Bartlesville the librarian of many years' standing was dismissed because he refused to obey the orders of the self-appointed group.

What actuates these busybodies? Some enjoy dictating to others because of the sense of power it gives. Others have found that it can be made into a profitable racket. The great body of our citizenry should not become their dupes. The American way of life is based on freedom of expression and of inquiry. Book-banning is not a way to perpetuate Americanism but a way to destroy it.

THE WORLD TODAY

By HAROLD W. WARD (For James Marlow)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31—(AP)—Congress, by the simple expedient of opening up one provision of the Taft-Hartley Labor Act, may have blunted a direct new frontal assault on the law.

Ever since the law became effective in 1947, officials of the AFL and CIO have been demanding its outright repeal. But they have not been able to get their own members to support the law take an opposite position.

The change the recent Congress made in the act was first suggested in different form by the AFL, building trades unions. But the proposal for an amendment was shelved and Congress wrote its own.

What the change does is to allow employers and unions to make union shop contracts without National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) elections. Under a union shop, all workers, to keep their jobs, must join the union within a short time after being hired.

The elections have been time-consuming for the NLRB; they have also cost millions of dollars of taxpayer's money. And in 95 per cent or more of the elections held, workers have said they want a union shop.

With such a ballot behind them, conducted by a government agency, union members have invariably won a union shop contract and possibly larger concessions on other issues than they would have without the elections. In that respect, the provision had proved embarrassing to management in some instances.

No industry generally did not oppose the elimination of the provision for union shop elections. The repeal bill had the backing of Taft, one of the co-authors of the original act.

CIO Plan

Haywood and his regional organizers would be guided by these four considerations:

1. The charter or "customary jurisdiction" of any union in the field.

2. The extent to which the unions have organized an area, plant, or industry.

3. The ability of the contesting unions to bring members into their ranks.

4. If these issues cannot be settled by Haywood, then the matter would be referred to the super arbitrator, who would decide which union should go on an NLRB election ballot—or whether the national CIO, itself, should appear on the ballot in place of a member union.

In any event, if the arbitrator is called in, his decision would be final and binding.

CIO leaders expressed the opinion in advance of today's executive board session that there was little doubt that the union president's or their representatives would sign the peace plan.

Haywood, who will become executive vice president, is a former coal miner. So is Murray. Both men were hospitalized during the last six months for serious ailments.

be based on the battle front. The current Allied proposal is for a buffer zone 2 1/2 miles wide.

Originally, the Reds demanded a buffer zone on the 38th parallel. That is the old political boundary between North and South Korea. Most of the battle line is north of that. Last week the Reds modified their plan to a demarcating line running five to 15 miles south of the battle line.

Fighting almost vanished from the ground front Wednesday. Only action reported in the U. S. 8th Army's afternoon communique was a one-hour fight between a company of attacking Chinese and U. N. troops southeast of Kumsong on the Central Front. The Reds were beaten back.

There was no prior hint of Communist capitulation on location of the buffer zone.

Wednesday morning, as rain trickled through holes in the conference tent, subcommittee negotiators argued over what should be done about Kumsong.

Communists newsmen outside the tent said there would be no agreement if the Allies insisted on taking over Kumsong. In their original demands, as publicly announced, neither side showed an interest in holding this ancient Korean capital.

U. S. 8th Army Headquarters, Kumsong, Oct. 31—(AP)—Marauding patrols took over the quiet, rain-swept Korean battle front today.

Fighting almost vanished as hopes for an end to the shooting were lifted by a new Communist truce (see page 1). The Reds called it their "last and best proposal" for a cease-fire "buffer zone."

MILLS SIGNED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31—(AP)—President Truman today signed the $7,325,000,000 mutual security appropriations bill designed to build up the economic and military strength of friendly countries.

In addition to this fund, the bill appropriates $10,727,800 previously voted by Congress for foreign aid but not yet spent.

Shortly after Mr. Truman acted, presidential advisor W. Averell Harriman was sworn in as the first director of the Mutual Security Administration at a White House ceremony. The new agency will coordinate military and economic assistance under the aid program.
