Scholarship fund-raiser

SANFORD — The second annual Joe Reinhardt Scholarship fund raiser will be held Thursday, Sept. 22, from 5 until 8 p.m., at Cafe Jake's, 112 E. First Street, in downtown Sanford. Hearty portions of Italian cuisine, heavenly desserts, live entertainment, crafts and silent-auction items will be included. Advance tickets are available for $5 at Cafe Jake's or Seminole Community College.

Money raised at the annual event will be placed in the Joe Reinhardt Scholarship Fund, and will be awarded to full-time SCC students who demonstrate financial need. The scholarship was motivated by friends and colleagues of the SCC professor for whom the drive is named.

Coordinator Jorge Soto said he was pleased with the results of last year's fund raiser and hopes the downtown Sanford location will make this year's event even more successful. "We would like to reach the $10,000 mark this year," he said. "The money could then be invested by the College's Foundation to provide scholarship from interest earnings."

For additional information, phone Jorge Soto at 328-4722, extension 3307.

Contract talks continue

SANFORD — Nearly four years to the day, Seminole County firefighters are still negotiating with county officials for their first contract. Representatives of Seminole County Professional Fire Fighters Local 3254 and county negotiators will appear before a state special master tomorrow and Friday to debate 12 union demands. The hearing will be held tomorrow in the county's Health Auditorium at the Public Health Unit. Friday, the hearings will be held in the third-floor conference room of the County Services Building. Firefighter Felix Benitez, union secretary-treasurer, said the issues range from a 20 percent pay adjustment to compensate for other pay-reducing county policies to changes to the 10-year-old vacation leave policy. In 1992, county commissioners rejected a state "special master" recommendation for a sick leave policy change, but accepted the mediator's recommendation for a temporary vacancy accommodation change.

Juvenile justice meeting set

SANFORD — The Comprehensive Planning Committee of the Juvenile Justice Council will meet Thursday, September 22, 1994. The 1:30 p.m. meeting will be in the conference room of the Seminole County Health Department, 400 W. Airport Boulevard, Sanford.

Drug-testing workers City grapples with need vs. civil rights intrusion

By NICK PFEIFER

LAKE MARY — The establishment of a drug free/alcohol free workplace by a city, is it a necessity or could it be an intrusion into the rights of city employees?

The Lake Mary City Commission pondered the question at length last night. It was brought up in the form of a city ordinance, for first reading and public hearing.

City Manager John Litton and City Attorney Donna McIntosh explained that the ordinance had been prepared in accordance with Chapter 440 of Florida Statutes. "Most of the requirements in this ordinance are mandated by the state," Litton said, "and we have prepared this document in consideration of that."

The ordinance would require testing of all job applicants upon their selection to fill a vacant position, as well as testing employees under reasonable suspicion or to determine routine fitness for duty. There is no provision for random testing.

Both the cities of Sanford and Longwood have already enacted similar ordinances. In both cities, new hires are tested, and testing is done under reasonable suspicion, with no random tests required.

In explaining the workings of the Lake Mary proposal, Litton said it could be of benefit to the city when enacted. "If, for example," he said, "an

Competition could affect phone rates

By VICKI BOBBAN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — An AT&T proposal to compete with local telephone companies on long-distance rates in their own service areas will have to wait until after November hearings on rate regulation.

Florida's Public Service Commission on Tuesday rejected an AT&T proposal for experimental rate cuts as much as 30 percent on long-distance calls within local telephone zones — including South Florida and the areas around Jacksonville, Gainesville, Daytona Beach, Panama City, Pensacola, and parts of Orlando.

"The Orlando LATA (Local Access Transport Area) includes Orange, Seminole, Brevard and a small portion of Volusia County," explained Larry Strickler, vice president of external affairs for Southern Bell. "There are some areas of long distance calling within that LATA that have been controlled by Southern Bell. AT&T is looking to compete with us in that area."

Strickler said the competition would not affect those calling areas, such as between Sanford and Orlando, which are no longer considered long distance, but for which a modified fee is charged for the call. Calls to different area codes, such as

Chamber members to vote on merger

LONGWOOD — The Longwood/Winter Springs Chamber of Commerce members will be considering a merger with the Greater Seminole Chamber of Commerce. The membership will be voting on the change next month.

"There is too much duplication of projects and doubling of dues and other activities," said Longwood/Winter Springs President Ken Peach. "We have been working diligently on our many projects, and we have accomplished a great deal in the last few years, but the job continues to rest on the shoulders of a few."

Peach said the chamber presently has about 140 members. "Many of us belong to other chambers as well," he said, "and it's just getting to be quite a load."

In a letter to the membership, Peach wrote, "To grow at this time, we would require the addition of a sales staff to actively work the market. We continue to operate by borrowing on dues for the following year, and we cannot afford to recruit a sales staff when services and dollars are so limited."

Peach said in order to bring about the merger, it will take a vote of the Longwood/Winter Springs chamber members, which require a 30 day notice. "We'll be taking that vote at

Coach may win post by default

By SANDRA ELLIOTT

LONGWOOD — Call him coach, co-president, commissioner-elect or Bill. Longwood resident Bill Winston might answer to any of them.

Co-president of the Devonshire Homeowners Association with his wife, Marie, Winston was encouraged to run for Longwood City Commissioner by out-going commissioner Paul Lovestrand.

At the time, Lovestrand was planning to run for state representative. However, the political chess pieces did not fall into line and Lovestrand withdrew from the state race, then opted not to run for another city commission term.

Formerly called a data systems manager with AT&T in Maitland working with programmers in software development, Winston said managers are now called coaches.

A Longwood resident for almost 12 years, the Winstons moved to Devonshire in 1983. They have two grown sons.

The 53-year old commissioner-to-be has a warm, wide smile that comes over his face often as he talks about the upcoming challenges facing him in his first elective office.

If no one qualifies by Friday as a write-in candidate for the seat, Winston will automatically become the district 5 commissioner. His name will not even appear on the ballot because no other candidate chose to run. Should someone opt for a write-in challenge, Winston's name would appear on the ballot in the Nov. 8 election along with a line provided for voters to write in a challenger. Write-in candidacies are very rare, according to the city clerk.

Issues facing the city commissioners run the gamut from an adult entertainment ordinance to annexing

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Protestor at jury selection

MIAMI - Protesters waved signs advocating violent overthrow of Cuban President Fidel Castro while a jury was selected inside a federal courthouse to hear the case of two Cubans accused of trying to export high-tech weapons.

"Clinton Free Our Hands" read a sign carried by one of more than a dozen members of the new Cuban exile paramilitary group Comandos F-4.

Both men on trial are members of Comandos F-4, which split off this past May from the long-established anti-Castro group Alpha 66.

Comandos F-4 members broke away from Alpha 66 saying they want to pursue a more aggressive approach to overthrowing Fidel Castro, according to federal prosecutors in the case against Rodolfo Prometa, 49, and Fausto Marimon, 42.

Marimon and Prometa are charged with conspiring to export a heat-seeking Stinger missile, three Light Antitank Rockets and a grenade launcher, and of attempting to export the weapons to Cuba.

The two men were arrested June 2 when they allegedly tried to pay a federal agent posing as a U.S. Army supply sergeant $5,000 for the weapons.

Tuesday, a 12-member jury was selected and U.S. District Judge Federico Moreno instructed them not to watch television accounts or read newspaper accounts of the trial.

Motorist ordered to sell car

JACKSONVILLE - A motorist who was on nine prescription medications when she struck and killed a pedestrian has been ordered to sell her automobile to help reimburse the victim's family.

Mary Margaret Horton, 33, also was sentenced to a year of house arrest, five years of probation and 250 hours of community service. She pleaded guilty to charges of leaving the scene of an accident and manslaughter-driving under the influence.

Circuit Judge David Higgins also suspended Ms. Horton's driver's license for three years and ordered her to sell the car involved in the accident.

All proceeds from the sale of the car, the judge said Monday, must go to help pay the $7,086 in restitution she owes the family of her victim, Jewell Kiser.

Ms. Horton struck and killed Ms. Kiser as the victim walked across a dark street on June 3. Ms. Horton was arrested at her home about an hour later. Ms. Kiser, 58, died the next morning.

Ms. Horton had been treated for depression since 1988, said Fred Moberg, her attorney. Ms. Horton could have faced up to 15 years in prison if she had been convicted at trial.

New plant reaps royalties for growers

DOVER - Sweet Charlie, a two-year-old hybrid and Florida's only patented strawberry plant, is reaping royalties that are being channeled back to a research center here to develop additional varieties.

For years, the California strawberry industry collected royalties on patented plants used by Florida growers.

California then would plow those royalties back into developing even more patentable varieties, said Chip Hinton, executive director of the Florida Strawberry Growers Association.

"Our growers were spending between $300,000 and $400,000 a year funding the competition," Hinton said. "That money was being lost to our community."

Sweet Charlie, a succulent, disease-resistant strain was developed in a Dover research center by faculty from the University of Florida. It was patented in 1982.

The plant is expected to consume 25-30 percent of the state's strawberry acreage this year, most of it which lies within a 30-mile radius of Plant City, the state's chief strawberry-growing region.

Last year, Sweet Charlie's patent generated nearly $30,000, a figure Hinton hopes will double in the coming year.

Twice divorced man kills ex-wife

WINTER HAVEN - A husband, twice divorced from the same woman, brought her a bouquet of roses, then shot and killed her, police said.

James and Tina Knowles' second divorce was final in August.

On Monday, Knowles handed her a bouquet at a plumbing supply store where she worked, then shot her in the chest with a .380-caliber handgun, said Polk Sheriff's Sgt. Kim Nichols.

Tina Knowles, 34, who lived in Lake Alford with her mother, died at the scene. Associate Medical Examiner Alexander Melamed said the bullet caused massive bleeding.

Store employees grabbed her 48-year-old ex-husband's gun and held him for authorities, police said.

Knowles, a construction worker, was charged with first-degree murder.

It's a win-win situation for Chile Governor's inn leases space to limited casinos

By JACKIE HALLIFAX Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - Lawton Chiles, governor, thinks a proposal to open Florida up to casinos is a bad idea. But that doesn't stop Lawton Chiles, landlord, from renting office space to the casino campaign.

For $3,800 a month, Propagation for Limited Casinos gets nearly 2,500 square feet of office space at Governor's Inn, a 40-room hotel within sight of the Capitol.

"Chiles owns 10 percent of the hotel. It's interesting that the governor is willing to take casino money but won't let anybody else take it," said Randy Lewis, a Limited Casinos spokesman.

Lewis grinned Tuesday as he talked about his landlord. The governor chuckled when asked about histenant.

"If they want to pay their money to somebody that's totally against what they're doing, you know, that's their problem," Chiles told a television crew from Capital News Service. "It's not mine."

"We pay the governor lots of money and he doesn't bother us," Lewis said.

That's not exactly true. Chiles voted for a resolution against legalizing casinos last month, sent his lawyer to the state Supreme Court to argue against casinos a few days later and last week asked Florida's high court to reconsider its approval of the casino measure for the November ballot.

Chiles's spokesman, Ron Sachs, said his boss "is not involved at all in the day-to-day operations or management decisions" at Governor's Inn.

"He pretty much is very busy doing his job as governor," Sachs said.

Charles Orr, general manager of the hotel, said the 90-day lease was approved by the governor's son, Ibad Chiles, who oversees management of the hotel from New Jersey.

The governor's 480 shares of the business are valued at $48,748.80 and yielded a dividend of $3,123 last year, according to his financial disclosure statement.

Until January, the space was rented by the Florida Association of Broadcasters, which is headed by Patrick Roberts. Roberts also is the head of Propagation for Limited Casinos.

The proposed constitutional amendment pushed by Limited Casinos would allow up to 47 casinos across the state. Floridians, who voted casinos down in 1978 and 1986, will decide the issue once again Nov. 8.

John Sowiński, head of a group of gambling opponents known as No Casinos, said he wasn't worried about the governor making a profit from the treaty.

"It sounds like much ado about nothing," he said.

Haitians would face danger in repatriation

By WOODIE WOODS Associated Press Writer

MIAMI - Haitians who fled their country and ended up being detained at U.S. camps outside the United States are going to be sent back home, but immigration lawyers say they face great danger because so much of Haiti's state security system is being left intact.

Even if Haiti's military rulers step down, there will be plenty of policemen and army troops accustomed to persecuting people who will still be running around with guns, the lawyers say.

Under the agreement with the U.S. that avoided an invasion, the Haitian army and the police force that is part of the military apparently will not be dismantled.

"The army says in power. There should be some waiting period to see that things stabilize," said Merrill Smith, an immigration attorney with Church World Services, an immigration and refugee center in Miami.

If there were any doubt about danger to people supporting the return of exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, those doubts should have been washed away with Tuesday's television coverage of policemen beating pro-Aristide demonstrators in a poor section of Port-Au-Prince, Smith said.

"The army violated human rights in front of the (U.S.) soldiers and nothing was done," Smith said. "It's the first test, and we failed."

Aristide sitting in the National Palace by itself will not necessarily protect supporters if the military remains disbanded with all the guns," Smith said.

Under an agreement reached Sunday just before the United States was to invade, Haiti's military leaders agreed to relinquish power by Oct. 15. In return, they were to be allowed to stay in the country and ask for amnesty from the Haitian Parliament.

Florida leads the nation in the management of the environment

By IRE FLORES Associated Press Writer

ORLANDO - Florida environmental activists are putting into practice the concept that land, air, water and all living things are intricately linked and cannot be managed in isolation.

Piecemeal regulatory strategies are no longer workable, Secretary Virginia Wetherell of the Florida Department of Environmental Protection told an Orlando conference on ecosystem management Tuesday.

"The assumption was that if everyone did their job well and took care of their small bit of the world, the big picture would take care of itself. It hasn't worked out that way," Wetherell said.

"The Everglades ecosystem and Florida Bay have taught us that we can't protect individual parcels of property by simply putting a fence around them. We must look at the ecological system."

Some 400 participants learned that Florida is ahead of the nation in developing ecosystem management, the integrated approach to protection and use of natural resources.

Putting the newly emerging concept into practice is essential in dealing with a "biodiversity crisis" facing Florida and the country, said Edward Grumbine, a leading exponent of the "big picture" approach.

Grumbine joined Gov. Lawton Chiles and other speakers at a special statewide conference.

They emphasized that there must be not only inter-agency cooperation but partnership with private businesses, landowners and individuals.

"Ecosystem planning and reform is more revolutionary than health reform," said Grumbine.

who is director of the Sierra Institute in California. "Within 10 years we can look back and see how significant it is. ... It affects every person and all species and habitats."

Florida and California are "at the forefront of endangered habitat and species," Grumbine said.

But California "is incredibly bureaucratic" and has not legislatively mandated reorganization of programs and policies as Florida has, he added.

Chiles noted that Florida has the biggest land-buying program in the country to protect the environment. The Preservation 2000 program sets aside more than 360,000 acres of environmentally sensitive lands.

"We are committed to strengthening the natural systems that sustain life," Chiles said, noting that one of the state's most pressing environmental issues is water supply.

Phone sniffs probationers' breath for alcohol

By BOB CALLAHAN
Associated Press Writer

DANVILLE, Ind. — Leon Ford knows he'd better not have been drinking when he answers that black telephone. It has an electronic nose that sniffs his breath and calls his probation officer if it smells trouble.

Ford has one of 50 special telephones the Hendricks County Probation Department began using in April to keep tabs on people sentenced to home detention instead of jail.

For people required to abstain from alcohol because of alcohol-related offenses such as driving while intoxicated, the phones turn into teetotaling watchdogs. If the dime-sized sensors in the mouthpiece detect alcohol, offenders could end up in jail for violating probation.

People sentenced to home detention wear an ankle bracelet that tracks their movements. When they're not at work, they must be at home to take calls on the special phones. They aren't told about the sensors.

Throughout the day, a computer calls at random times and a recording asks the offenders to repeat their name, social security number and the time. They use verification "keys" attached to their bracelets to answer the phone so authorities know who is speaking.

As the person's breath rolls over the mouthpiece, the sensor samples the air to determine if alcohol is present, then sends a signal to a computer in the probation office. If the sensor detects alcohol, the computer calls back twice during the next 20 minutes for verification.

After three alcohol-positive calls, the computer pages a probation officer, who goes to the home to conduct a breathalyzer test.

Ford knows about the sensors because he got a warning when the phone caught him once with alcohol on his breath. He likes the program because it allows him to get on with his life.

"I can keep my home and keep my job. If you're in jail you'd lose everything," Ford said Tuesday. "I can't imagine anyone thinking it's intrusive. It's a break, a privilege."

The American Civil Liberties Union isn't so sure.

"That's really tipping the balance into an unwarranted invasion of privacy. I haven't heard of it until now, but it's something we'll be looking into. It sounds so bizarre," said Nkechi Taiya, legislative counsel for the national ACLU in Washington.

The $160,000 system has nabbed nine drinkers so far. But it does have weaknesses, said R. Todd McCormack, director of the Hendricks County Probation Department in Danville, 20 miles west of Indianapolis.

"Like any technology, it's not foolproof. But if the computer senses alcohol or if for some reason the call wasn't completed, it sends out a probation officer to see what's wrong," McCormack said.

Participants reimburse the county $3 to $25 a day for the phone, depending on their income.

What Goes Into The Ground... Comes Around.

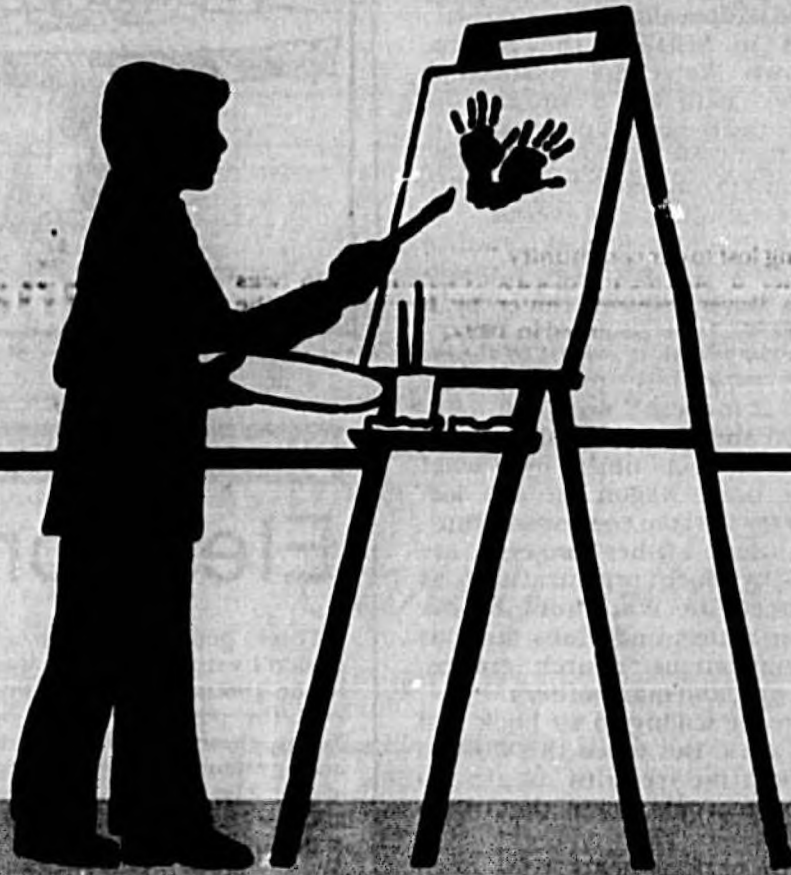

Hazardous materials and chemicals are being spread on lawns and gardens. Dumped in garbage cans and landfills. Hosed off driveways. And, flushed down toilets and sinks. The result is... hazardous waste! But, sooner or later it will all end up in our water supply. The rain will wash these hazardous wastes into our ground water, rivers and lakes... into our sources of drinking water.

Cleaning the water of chemicals and toxins is a tough, costly process.

So, join the Southern States Utilities Environmental Protection Team and stop dumping hazardous waste down the drain, in the trash or on the ground. Instead, take it to a hazardous waste collection or recycling center. And, if your area doesn't have one, ask officials to start one! If it's not up to us, who is it up to?

For more information on how hazardous waste may affect Florida's water supplies, call SSU's Communications Department at (800) 412-4501.

Offer your help to Little Red Hen

The old-fashioned fairy tales, those carried over by our ancestors, had a lot to teach. Perhaps it's time to reexamine some of those moral values.

Little Red Riding Hood typified the problems when little girls talk to strangers. Sleeping Beauty warned about accepting food (even an apple) from a suspicious person. The Three Little Pigs approached problems which can be caused by improper home construction. And Cinderella, if we examine it closely, may have taught us that people shouldn't wear glass slippers.

On a more serious note, one fairy tale which really hits close to home is that of the Little Red Hen. Remember her? She wanted to raise grain, harvest her crop, make flour, and bake bread. All of that work needed to be done, but no one wanted to help.

The minute the bread was done, everyone wanted to get into the act.

Judging from how hard a few of our Little Red Hens (no insult intended) work these days, we haven't learned anything from that tale.

Whenever someone wants to do something, very few offer to help. Finally, when there is a profit to be made, publicity to be obtained, or some other benefit, everyone wants to take a bite out of that fresh-baked bread which then appears to be so appealing.

A few leaders in SHDWA, the Sanford Historic Downtown Waterfront Association are working very hard on a number of projects. One of them is the possibility of having a "Miss Seminole County" pageant, possibly to be held in connection with SHDWA's planned July 4th day of events.

It would be something which may produce a great deal of interest, and perhaps do much to draw people from throughout the county into the Sanford area.

Yet there are those who don't want to touch it. They would apparently prefer to let SHDWA do it all. If it doesn't work out, only SHDWA would get the blame. If it does work however, we have no doubt others may want to jump on the band wagon, at the last minute, and even try to claim co-sponsorship.

SHDWA isn't alone. Other projects are being promoted by such organizations as Sanford Main Street, the Waterfront Master Plan Steering Committee, and clubs such as the fraternal organizations, church groups, neighborhood groups, and many others.

People appear to be willing to sit back and let others do the work. But when the work is finished and positive results begin to blossom, those same people will be the first to seek benefit.

Our suggestion is to become involved. Look for an organization working on something in which your expertise, ideas or involvement can help. Join with the group. Work with them.

Don't be Foxy Loxy, Turkey Lurky, or Ducky Lucky. Offer your help to the Little Red Hen. Even if you lay an egg on the project, at least you will know you have tried, and can take pride in being involved in helping others.

Great article

The sports pages are not usually my cup of tea. However, the headline caught my eye and I read the whole article on sportsmanship (Sanford Herald of Sept. 5). Fine writing by Tony DeSormier and on a subject which seems to have become old-fashioned, like taking your hat off in a building, respect for others - all others, regardless of race.

We need more articles like Tony DeSormier's and it should be on the front page.

Unplug Congress' re-election machine

Seven in 10 Americans support them. Fifteen states, including California, have enacted them. Yet the Clinton administration has come out against term limits for members of Congress. It wants the U.S. Supreme Court to declare them null and void.

The high court is slated this fall to hear a pivotal term-limits case from Arkansas. Voters in Clinton's home state approved a ballot measure by a decisive 60 percent to 40 percent margin that would limit the state's four representatives to three terms and its two senators to two terms.

It is unclear how the justices will rule on term limits. They might be persuaded by arguments that term limits violate the Constitution's "qualifications clauses," which specify only age, U.S. citizenship and state residency as conditions for membership in Congress.

But they could be just as persuaded by arguments that another provision of the Constitution allows states to determine the "time, place and manner of elections." Although the Clinton administration is not a party to the Arkansas suit, Solicitor General Drew Days, decided anyway to insinuate himself in the case.

In a motion filed with the Supreme Court, the administration's chief courtroom lawyer argued that term limits "pose a particular threat to the federal system in that it makes membership in the Congress dependent upon regulation of the states.

Zounds! The nerve of voters in Arkansas and California and the other 13 term-limit states to think that they should regulate their representatives in Washington. Why, if the masses are able to exercise that kind of power over their congressmen and women, there almost certainly will be a seepage in the way Congress operates.

But that's precisely the point: To change the way Congress conducts the people's business. What we have now is a Congress that has been described as "a perpetual re-election machine."

No wonder are lawmakers elected to office before they are gearing up for the next campaign. They use their "franking" privilege (free mail) to send out thinly veiled political propaganda. They jockey for committee assignments that will enable them to amass the largest possible campaign war chest to deter potential rivals for office. And they use their office staff to build up political chits with prominent constituents.

Yet the Clinton administration has come out against term limits for members of Congress.

Altogether, this has made incumbents in Congress virtually unbeatible.

Recent history bears this out. Four incumbents were returned to office in 95 percent of races during the last four elections, and more than 80 percent of contests in all but four elections since 1990. The Senate has slightly more turnover, but incumbents have enjoyed a 75 percent re-election rate since World War II.

If we were witnessing great statesmanship from the adobe on Capitol Hill, the American people would not be nearly so enthusiastic about term limits. But we have a Congress that cannot balance the federal budget, that can't even itself from past barrel spending, that continues to preserve failed social programs, that enacts all manner of costly regulations and mandates.

But better that a handful of extraordinary lawmakers retire a little early than the present majority of ordinary and inferior members of Congress enjoy near-permanent tenure.

SARAH OVERSTREET

A 25-year-old hurt comes full circle

The face staring out at me from the front-page newspaper photo, a receptionist at a local business, was strangely familiar yet unrecognizing. "I think I remember that face," I thought, "but not quite."

I glanced at the routine and saw the first name and instantly knew who she was. "Rita," of course! After all these years, what's she doing back in town? Still, the face wasn't quite right.

A few days later I had an occasion to stop in the business where Rita worked. I introduced myself.

"Oh, sure, Sarah, of course I remember you!" she said, and we began to talk a bout being freshmen in high school together 30 years ago. She had been a foster child whom everyone liked, and if I had one memory of her it was of someone who persevered alone all odds. When I last saw her she was about to enter the military. I was totally absorbed as she told me of a successful Army career and her search for a new profession post-retirement.

She sounded like the Rita I knew and recounted stories I remembered but still I was aware there was something different about her.

Finally my eyes caught the two perfect bones of her finely chiseled nose. She had plastic surgery! Wow, what a big difference one little operation can make. I thought, I'd always thought of her as plain but attractive 30 years ago, because of her delicious giggle, engaging personality and bright brown eyes. But now, she was clearly a knockout.

A few weeks later I had the opportunity to talk with her again, and she told me she'd just gone to her 25th high-school class reunion. I asked if she'd enjoyed herself.

"Yes, I did, but not for any of the reasons I thought I would," she told me. "I healed a 25-year-old wound that caused me to have three nose jobs and a chin implant over the years, and ended up feeling better about myself than I thought possible." I listened as an amazing story unfolded.

"When I was a junior and senior in high school there was a boy who used to tease me about my looks and call me things like 'Olive Oyl' and 'banana nose,'" she said. "My self-esteem had already been pretty low when I went to live with my foster parents, but his constant ridicule sent it into the cellar. I resolved that as soon as I could do something about my looks, I would. While I was in the military I had two bad nose jobs, but I kept at it until they got it right."

"When I got the invitation to my high-school reunion, I decided that if that boy was there, I was going to go up to him and ask him if he had any idea how much pain he had caused me. I thought that might help me purge some of the bad feelings, might bring some kind of closure. But when I got there and saw him standing over by the wall with his own huge schnoz - something I'd never even noticed in high school, by the way - and his fat, dumpy wife, everything I was feeling just sort of melted away. I felt free for the first time in a quarter of a century."

"Well, I just went up, looked him squarely in the eye and said, 'Hello, Jim,' and nothing else," she said. "I already had what I'd come for: I'm OK whether I had a nose job or not. But the darnedest thing happened later. I was standing at the bar and he walked up and said, 'Rita, I want to buy you a drink.' I said, 'Jim, you don't have to do that,' and he said, 'Yes, I do. I need to buy you a drink,' and I let him."

Ah, Rita was a class act, just as I remembered. In the same instant that Jim realized the gravity of what he'd done 25 years ago, she allowed him to redeem himself.

GUEST COLUMNIST

Elections are anti-parent

Three generations ago my grandmother couldn't vote because she was a woman. Prior to the 1960s, the color of my neighbor's skin kept the power of voting out of his reach. Today, these barriers of gender and race have been overcome in election law. But, on the eve of the 21st century, it's time to realize that another group, parents, are not equal partners in democracy.

Elections are anti-parent. Because election days are workdays, parents are faced with time and travel obstacles that keep them away from the polls. Real-life parenting at 7 a.m. is a flurry of matching socks, packing lunches, signing homework and racing off to school, child care and work. As we vote in our neighborhoods, not near our workplaces, the illusion of "lunch hour voting" defies the reality of traffic. At the end of the workday, last-minute shopping, picking up kids and other household obligations take precedent over voting. On election night, millions of parents drive to the convenience store, not to the inconvenient polling place.

Only one of six parents is a frequent voter. This fact may be one of the prime reasons that so many children are at risk. Florida's children, who rank 48th in the nation, suffer in the areas of health, safety, education and violence because those most responsible for their care leave politics up to someone else.

Because politics drives policy, political weakness inevitably results in victimization. It's no accident that the needs of children are overlooked by candidates whose passion for victory overrides their compassion for families. With the exception of the quick photo opportunity, the importance of children is insignificant by most political measures.

Since candidates know how to count, they respond to citizens who vote. Politics is a numbers game, pure and simple. The greater the number of voters who have the needs of children in mind, the greater the likelihood that candidates will act. Will Rogers said it best - "Smart politicians know where there's a parade and get in front of it."

Infant health care, quality child care, treatment for abuse, and help for children with special needs were victories won through political activism. Passive acceptance of the plight of children is nothing more than neglect.

Voting in every election, assisting others to register and vote, and putting candidates on the spot about the need to invest in children should be a natural extension of the parenting role. When candidates are asked for real solutions to the problems families face, their "pro-family" slogans are put to the test. Real family values are enhanced if children are healthy and economically secure.

FLORIDA OPINION

Candidates who preach crime fighting, but fail to endorse the practice of prevention, should be rejected by parents, grandparents and neighbors who know better. Not only is an ounce of prevention really worth a pound of cure, but it far outweighs a ton of punishment. Who would deny that today's crime problem is firmly rooted in the neglect of children? A generation of educated young citizens who believe they have a bright future is the only true path to public safety.

The Florida Children's Campaign, a non-partisan effort to bring children into the political spotlight, was founded on the belief that Florida can afford to invest in its future. By asking key questions of candidates, registering new voters, publishing the Platform for Florida's Children, and empowering all citizens who care for children to be politically active, the Campaign is helping to determine Who's for Kids and Who's Just Kidding.

It's my belief that every vote counts. It's my hope that every election day will become a time that Floridians even the odds for children by voting for candidates who they believe will vote for kids. There is no neutrality in politics. Either we do politics, or politics will continue to get done to children.

employee has an accident or gets injured while on the job, and is found to be under the influence, under this ordinance, he or she can be denied medical insurance or workmen's compensation, which, in some circumstances, could have been a considerable cost to the city."

Litton added that the police bargaining unit, which has been negotiating for a union contract with the city, has endorsed the measure.

He explained how testing for drugs or alcohol would be done, "only with reasonable cause," to ensure that employee's rights are protected.

In the actual wording of the ordinance, the statement of intent says, "Drug and alcohol use has serious adverse effects upon an employee's ability to perform his or her duties in a safe and effective manner, (and) results in many dollars worth of lost productivity each year and poses a threat to the workplace and to the public safety and security."

During public discussion, former City Commissioner Paul Tremel made a number of observations of the proposed ordinance. "I'm here because several employees expressed concern to me, personally, about some of the wording in this," he said.

One point Tremel questioned is a statement referring to off duty employees. The ordinance says that those who are subject to recall or return to duty after regular working hours are "encouraged" not to consume alcoholic beverages to the degree that the employee's ability to perform his or her duties shall be impaired.

Tremel suggested this may violate the rights of employees who are not actually working, but in the privacy of their own homes.

McIntosh assured him that the word used in the document was "encouraged" and not a specific demand.

Commissioner Sherita Sawyer was one of the first to speak against the proposal. "I like the main principle of this," she said, "but I believe it's more intrusive than we need. There must be another way to achieve the goal of having a safe workplace without being so punitive."

Sawyer also commented about problems she has with the right of having an employee subjected to drug testing at the supervisor's discretion. "This would be an automatic suspension that the person is using drugs or alcohol," she said, "whether it is proven or not. That's not fair to our employees."

Both Mayor Lowry Rockett and Litton expressed opinions that the city probably has no problems in drug or alcohol abuse among its employees. "But just one incident," Rockett said, "could prove disastrous."

"I think that by testing only with reasonable cause," Rockett continued, "we will be ensuring that our employees' rights are protected."

Various concerns were voiced that if a particular department head had problems with an employee, he or she could order a drug test for the employee, thus placing the employee in a questionable position.

Although the document specifies that such cases be kept confidential, commissioners agreed that names could easily leak out.

"Another thing I would be in favor of," Sawyer commented, "is that if we expect our employees to have drug testing, we, as commissioners, should do the same."

Commissioner George Duryea said he agreed with Sawyer's remarks about forcing testing. "I think what may appear to be reasonable suspicion just isn't right," he said.

"But I'm against having to be tested," Duryea continued. "It's not that I fear such a test, but it's that I don't want some document telling me that I must be tested."

"As commissioners, we are public servants, and our job is to serve the public interest," said Commissioner Gary Bredner. "I don't necessarily like the intrusiveness of drug issues being forced upon us, but this is something we should enact to protect our people."

Sawyer responded, "Every time we enact an ordinance, we are, in effect, taking more rights away from some individual. I'm not against having a drug free and alcohol free workplace, all I'm saying is that there must be another avenue with which to approach this."

Mayor Rockett observed, "If some employee goes out, for example, with a backhoe or city vehicle, under the influence, and hits some child riding a bike, my conscience just couldn't live with it if we didn't do everything possible to try to prevent such things from happening."

"I don't like some of the wording in this," said Commissioner David Meador. "But I believe in the best policy we can establish at this time." Meador then moved to approve the first reading of the ordinance.

Duryea voted against the proposal, and Sawyer said, "I'll vote yes... but reluctantly."

The measure passed first reading on a four to one vote. It is expected to be back for second reading and another public hearing at the next commission meeting scheduled for October 6.

Decline in late payments probably has ended, mortgage group says

By JOHN B. McGLAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — After watching residential loan delinquencies rise for six months, the Mortgage Bankers Association has acknowledged the nine-year decline in late payments probably has come to an end.

"It's realistic to think the decline in delinquency rates is probably over," association Executive Vice President Warren Laako said at a news briefing Tuesday.

The latest survey by the mortgage bankers found the seasonally adjusted delinquency rate for loans on one- to four-unit residential properties was 4.21 percent from April through June, up from 4.12 percent in the previous three months and 4.08 percent in the final quarter of 1993.

Although the rate was unchanged in the North Central region, it increased in the nation's other three regions.

The percentage of past-due loans reached a cyclical peak of 6.08 percent in the first three months of 1995 and then began a gradual decline that ended last December.

When an increase was posted in the first quarter, Laako maintained, "The long-term trend is clearly down." No longer.

Laako attributed much of the second-quarter increase to "the natural aging of mortgage loans being serviced." He explained that loans that originated during the refinancing boom from mid-1991 to early 1992 are now nearly three years old.

Historically, that is the beginning of the period in the life of a loan when problems are most likely to occur, he said. If they get to the seventh year without any problems, they probably will not develop any.

Laako said rising interest rates resulting in increases in adjustable rate mortgage costs could add to the delinquency rate, although it probably was too early for the added costs to have boosted late payments during the April-June period.

"It's something to look for in the future," he said.

Other factors that could worsen the delinquency situation include slower economic growth and rising interest rates, the association said.

The mortgage bankers reported the delinquency rate rose for all three loan types in the second quarter — by 9 basis points to 2.71 percent for conventional loans, 11 basis points to 6.40 percent for VA loans and 14 basis points to 7.39 percent for FHA loans.

A basis point is one-hundredth of one percent.

The association said the increase in delinquencies was accompanied by a rise in foreclosure rates. The percentage of foreclosures started inched up to 0.35 percent from 0.31 percent, and the percentage of loans in the foreclosure process advanced to 1.03 percent from 0.94 percent.

Regionally, the delinquency rate was unchanged at 3.69 percent in the North Central region but rose elsewhere — by 26 basis points to 4.41 percent in the Northeast, 19 basis points to 3.70 percent in the West and 5 basis points to 3.71 percent in the South.

The survey covered 18.3 million loans, about one-third of all residential mortgages outstanding.

employees within the city which receive city services pay no city taxes, from existing businesses to the city of the city sewer system.

There are several overriding issues. There were two things I need to get involved with, Winston said, describing his bid office. "One of them was, I thought the commission should be looking a little longer range of what the city's really doing with the sewer for the whole city. I didn't see an all direction."

Winston emphasized the best interest of the city must be balanced with what the people want and are willing to fund.

Winston added, "I kind of thought I saw the commission, as a whole, churning the waters and gnawing their teeth on a kind of being more occupied with the dot of what they were doing than what they were getting done. I hoped I could step in there and contribute a little different slant to that. A little preoccupation with the business of the city as opposed to the coming and going."

On the topic of Rangeline Road, Winston said he opposes widening the road or doing anything that would increase traffic volume. However, he said alternate solutions to handle the traffic should be explored, from widening Interstate 4, building a second Lake Mary interchange or widening CR 427.

Winston said he would like the question of annexation of properties handed on a case by case basis, although he forces a single decision on the entire question. People or businesses receiving city services but not paying city taxes, is unfair, but Winston added people who do not use the services should not be forced into the city.

When considering the adult entertainment ordinance, Winston said the commission does not want to do anything which is unconstitutional while at the same time do nothing to encourage adult businesses from operating in the city.

"That's an awkward issue, but I don't think we have any issues that aren't awkward," Winston commented. "A side of that question is, it is very, very important what the people want the city to be. I think from the people I've talked to, I get (the) overwhelming impression that they want a strong adult entertainment ordinance and they don't want that kind of activity to proliferate."

Winston said he is still trying to formulate his opinion on the city sewer issue. The city needs to weigh its impact on expansion of the commercial development in the city. High priced sewer hookups may discourage businesses from locating or remaining in the city. Private residences don't want to bear the hookup costs either. The city should analyze the cost factors and do some long range planning to deal with the sewer issue, he added, then negotiate with the county.

the garden area fence. After placing the other merchandise outside the fence, the man left and drove his car to the spot where the items were hidden, the LPO reported.

As the man placed the items in the car, which had a female passenger, the two LPOs blocked the car's exit with shopping carts. When they approached the man, he sped off in the car, narrowly missing the LPOs, they reported. The two LPOs pursued the car in their car and when it stopped at a traffic light at Red Bug Lake Road, Daniel Miller exited his car and approached the suspect's car.

Miller said when he reached inside the car, the woman passenger struck him in the face. Miller reported he withdrew his hand when he felt a sharp object cut it, the car drove off, dragging him several feet.

Following a search of the area, deputies arrested Johnny Staley, 32, and Angelina Renee Riggins, age not given, both of 500 S. Oak Ave. Each was held on charges of shoplifting, aggravated battery and aggravated assault.

Rates

Sanford's 407 to Deltona's 904 would be affected.

In November, the commission is holding hearings on the entire question of "de-averaging" long-distance rates. PSC spokeswoman Bev DeMello said.

Currently, companies are required to charge the same for a 40-mile long distance call in South Florida as they do in North Florida.

But the AT&T proposal would change that averaging requirement, DeMello said.

Southern Bell argued against the AT&T plan, contending it would let the long distance carrier undercut Southern Bell's rates on calls within its South Florida service area, according to Southern Bell spokeswoman Wendie Feinberg.

"The commission would not allow us to lower our rates. We argued that it is not fair to open a competition and not allow the competitors to compete," Feinberg said.

Strickler added that Southern Bell welcomes the competition, with some reservations.

"This is just one sign that the telecommunications industry is getting more and more competitive," he said. "We like that. We just want to make sure our competition is regulated as much as we are."

Chambers

October meeting," he said.

The Greater Seminole Chamber presently has 850 members. Wanda Coley is the president. She said the chamber is presently considering the possibility of relocating its offices.

"We are looking at a number of possible sites," Coley said, "and one of them is in the Longwood area, but it will be nine months or so down the road before we make any decisions on that."

Peach says by having the Longwood/Winter Springs members become associated with the Seminole chamber, there would be many benefits including expanded referrals, networking, advertising opportunities, savings, volunteer counselors, and more committees.

Programs instigated by the Longwood/Winter Springs chamber, such as the local scholarship program and golf tournament would continue, and be held separately from similar Seminole functions.

Peach said his present chamber will have at least two representatives on the Seminole board, and have a "city" committee established to deal with individual city issues.

Membership rates for the first year, 1995, would remain unchanged from the amount presently charged to Longwood/Winter Springs members.

Colin Powell may be Eisenhower of the 90s

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — In an age not known for strong leaders or national heroes, Colin Powell stands out.

His role in negotiating a settlement in Haiti only adds to his prestige. And it's just one more reason why both political parties are scrambling to call him their own.

Not since Dwight Eisenhower has a figure in public life been held in such universal esteem, had so few negatives — or given so few advance clues as to his possible political intentions.

Polls regularly show him beating all contenders — up to and including President Clinton — in hypothetical presidential showdowns.

But the retired general, who was Ronald Reagan's national security adviser and George Bush's joint chiefs chairman, isn't offering any hint of his plans.

"He has all positives, all favorables," said GOP pollster Frank Luntz. "There is a warm glow to Colin Powell. And no one knows whether he is a Republican or a Democrat, a conservative or a liberal."

Powell, 57, remains a political enigma even to his closest friends and associates.

His role in last weekend's dramatic negotiations with Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras and other Haitian military officials, talks that averted a U.S. invasion, are focusing new attention on Powell's future.

Powell's presence on the negotiating team was "the key to our discussions," said former President Jimmy Carter, who led the team that also included Georgia Sen. Sam Nunn.

Born in New York of Jamaican parents and the highest-ranking black in the military when he retired, Powell already was widely respected throughout the Caribbean — particularly among military leaders in Haiti.

"It all coalesced," said a U.S. official close to the talks. "He was central. He spoke to Cedras and the others as a military man. He said, 'Look, I have not been all that supporting of an invasion, but I've got to tell you: This is what's coming down.'"

The official, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said Powell was very specific and blunt in telling the Haitian leaders exactly what they could expect in terms of overwhelming U.S. forces.

"He took them through troop strengths, everything," the official said.

Powell told a White House news conference he tried to "appeal to their sense of honor and to appeal to their sense of what is wrong at this particular point in their history."

Powell, according to Carter, also was instrumental in winning over Cedras' wife. She was "adamantly opposed against any sort of agreement. General Powell was extremely effective in saying, 'This is what military honor is, this is what courage is.'" Carter told CNN.

There has been wide speculation over Powell as a possible successor to Warren Christopher as secretary of state.

That might put Powell in a awkward position on Haiti, given his reservations about Clinton's invasion strategy. But it would be a political coup for Clinton — reducing chances that Powell would run against him.

Administration officials informally contacted Powell about his availability for secretary of state this spring, sources said. Powell told them he was intrigued, but was committed to finishing his autobiography by the end of the year.

His retirement has been lucrative. He's getting $6 million from Random House for the book and up to $60,000 for speeches.

A survey published Tuesday by the Times Mirror Center for the People and the Press, taken before the crisis in Haiti heated up, showed Powell beating Clinton by 51 percent to 41 percent — if Powell ran as a Republican.

The survey also showed Powell with a remarkable approval rating of 74 percent — and an unfavorable rating of a mere 6 percent.

But would he run as a Republican in 1996, or wait and run as a Democrat four years later?

"The options are his," said Marlin Fitzwater, former spokesman for both Presidents Reagan and Bush. "He's been very closed-mouthed about his plans. But I think he would be a terrific Republican candidate for president."

Democratic pollster Celinda Lake countered: "I hope he's a Democrat."

"At a time when people are almost craving for the values of leadership, they think he's overwhelmingly a strong leader, overwhelmingly gets things done and overwhelmingly is a man of high moral character."

Luntz, the GOP pollster, agreed Powell looks invincible but that "he's been tested in a war but untested in politics." Winning primary elections can be "more brutal than Iraq... and you can't lay down ground cover," Luntz suggested.

American snapshot: Angry, anxious and less altruistic

By JILL LAWRENCE
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — Angry at their government and anxious about their futures, Americans are becoming less altruistic and more politically volatile, a broad, nonpartisan poll suggests.

Despite the economic recovery, many people still have trouble making ends meet and believe jobs should continue to be President Clinton's top priority, according to a poll of 4,800 people by the Times Mirror Center for the People and the Press.

The findings reflect a national mood of disillusionment and self-absorption. Tolerance of homosexuals and interracial dating is on the rise, but people are becoming less supportive of programs and opportunities for minorities, immigrants and the poor.

"It's an unusual set of trends for a time in which the economy's been expanding and unemployment's been going down," said poll director Andrew Kohut. He attributed the phenomenon in part to low wages and benefits that continue to stretch many households.

Throughout the seven years of the Times Mirror survey, some 80 percent of Americans have described themselves as God-fearing churchgoers who pray daily and hold traditional family values.

A full 75 percent said this year that too many children are in day care. Yet only 30 percent said women should return to their traditional societal roles, a minority that has held steady since 1987.

There were progressive trends in a couple of areas. A record 65 percent of whites said they thought it was all right for blacks and whites to date each other, up from 43 percent in 1987.

Nearly six in 10 said school boards should not be able to fire teachers who are known homosexuals, up from 42 percent in 1987. The same majority disagreed with the statement: "AIDS might be God's punishment for immoral sexual behavior"; only 47 percent disagreed in 1987.

But attitudes hardened on issues potentially affecting taxes and job security. In 1987, for example, 71 percent said the government should take care of people who can't take care of themselves. That fell to 57 percent this year.

Only 41 percent this year said the government should help the needy even if it means going deeper in debt, the first time that assertion failed to win majority support.

Another first: A majority of whites (51 percent) agreed with the statement that equal rights for racial minorities have been pushed too far. And 82 percent said people coming here to live should be restricted and controlled more than they are now, up 6 percentage points from 1982.

"The trends have a negative cast," said Kohut. "Generally when things are better, people are more altruistic. But that doesn't seem to be the case here."

Apparently that's because the improved economy hasn't greatly improved people's lives. More than 60 percent said they "often don't have enough money to make ends meet" — a huge chunk considering the relatively healthy economy, Kohut said.

Six in 10 said they don't have enough money to lead the kind of lives they want to, and only half of those think they ever will. About one in four people chose "improving the job situation" as Clinton's top priority — which tied it for first place with "reducing crime."

The poll of 4,800 adults over 18 was conducted July 12-27. Its margin of error is plus or minus 2 to 3 percentage points.

Lake Mary bests Lyman in varsity v-ball struggle

By TONY BUCHHEIM
Herald Sports Editor

First time for everything

History was made Tuesday night in Seminole County when the county's six high schools played their first freshman girls' volleyball matches. At Lyman, Rachel Shepard and the Greyhounds swept the Lake Mary Rams.

LONGWOOD — While the freshmen were making history, the varsity teams were involved in a largely forgettable endeavor.

Tuesday night's high school girls volleyball tripleheader between Lake Mary and host Lyman opened with one of the first freshman team matches in Seminole County history and wrapped up with the Lake Mary Rams securing an error-filled 15-11, 16-12 win over the Greyhounds in the varsity finale.

Lyman won the freshmen match in two games while Lake Mary swept the junior varsity contest.

For the Rams, it was their first varsity win of the season in just their second match of the season.

"We're still trying to see who can play and who can go in and fill in," said Lake Mary coach Cindy Henry, who frequently shuffled players in and out of the lineup. "We really are guessing at this point. We're sure on about 4 1/2 players. We have to see who can do the job."

"Hopefully, we'll see a little bit of improvement every game we play. But we really needed to have this win as a confidence-builder. We really needed this shot in the arm."

Trailing 5-2 in the first game, Joyia Capo put together a four-point service run to give the Rams their first lead. Lyman rallied back to tie the score at 8-8 before a Greyhound hitting error gave the Rams the lead for good.

Lindy Longstaff served seven consecutive points in the second game to give Lake Mary a 7-2 lead. While the Rams never relinquished the advantage, the Greyhounds did battle back to trail 13-13 on Laurel Ecker's four-point service run. After an exchange of kills, Capo served out the match for Lake Mary.

Lyman coach Christy Tibbitts was thoroughly displeased with her team's effort.

"We weren't doing anything right tonight," said Tibbitts. "They looked terrified out there. They looked like they didn't know what they were doing. They do know how to play, but you'd never be able to tell that from their performance tonight."

Karen Pinckney and Capo led the Rams at the net. Pinckney collecting a match-best seven kills and a pair of dinks for aces while Capo chipped in with three kills, three blocks, and seven service points.

Longstaff also had seven service points to go with six assists for the Rams. Joelle Townsend had 10 assists. Jamie Bradley came off the bench and contributed five kills.

Ecker paced the Greyhounds with five kills and seven service points. Lisa Bridges served six points on the night (including a pair of aces). Carolyn Crager had three kills and a dink, all in the second game.

Jamie Mendelsohn handed out eight assists and served four points for Lyman. Her twin sister, Jill, also served up four points.

Both teams will play again Thursday night. Lyman (3-2 overall, 0-1 in the Seminole Athletic Conference) traveling to Seminole while Lake Mary (1-1, 1-0 SAC) visits Oviedo.

Lightning interrupts Rams, Tribe

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY — Eventually, the young men and women who swim the backstroke and breaststroke for the Lake Mary High School swim team will get a chance to exhibit their skills.

They'll have to wait at least one more week for that opportunity, though, after seeing their events cancelled because of lightning Tuesday evening for the second time in three meets this season.

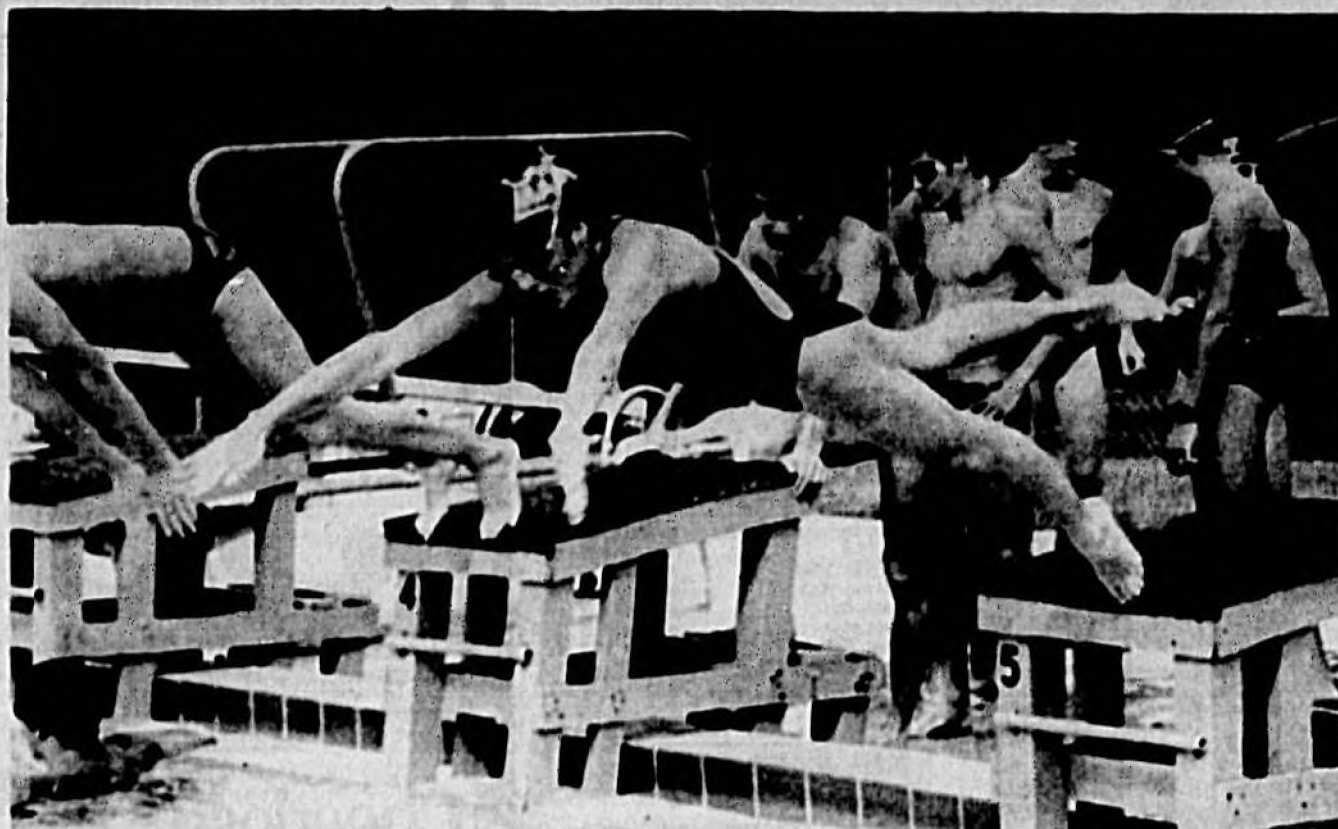

"We lost the last three events (the 100-yard backstroke, 100-yard breaststroke, and the 400-yard freestyle relay) tonight," said Lake Mary swim coach Fred Tyler after the Rams' dual meet with Seminole at the Seminole County Family YMCA.

"We swam in the rain for about 30 minutes tonight. But after one flash of lightning, we're out of there. If we had waited 20 or 30 minutes, we might have been able to get back in the water and finish the meet, but you can't take a chance when it lightnings."

Lake Mary swept the meet, winning both the girls' and boys' competitions by 89-28 scores.

In the girls' half of the meet, the Rams opened and closed with wins in relay events, beating Seminole in the 200 medley relay with a time of 1 minute, 59.6 seconds and finishing first in the 200 freestyle relay in 1:54.84.

Swimming on Lake Mary's 200 medley relay were Megan Paget-Wilkes, Jennifer Alger, Amanada

Megan Paget-Wilkes contributed an individual win and swam on a victorious relay for the Lake Mary Rams in their dual meet with Seminole Tuesday at the Seminole County Family YMCA. Paget-Wilkes finished first in the 100-yard freestyle and joined Jennifer Alger, Amanada Peck, and Julie Jones to win the 200 medley relay.

Peck, and Julie Jones. Jones also competed on the 200 freestyle relay with Kyndal Johnson, Kell McNutt, and Sarah Bellel.

Notching individual wins for the Rams were Johnson (200 freestyle, 2:10.83), Alger (100 butterfly, 1:02.48), Paget-Wilkes (100 freestyle, 57.67), and Peck (500 freestyle, 5:45.83).

Seminole's two wins were turned in by J. Armstrong (200 individual medley, 2:31.66) and Kara Thomas (50 freestyle, 25.10). Craig Tarr won a pair of events for the Lake Mary boys, finishing first in the 200 freestyle (2:09.06) and the 100 freestyle (59.77).

Like the girls, the Lake Mary boys opened the meet with a win in the 200 medley relay. Mike Reeve, Ben Singerman, Adam Gaffey, and Brad Herra putting together a time of 2:03.43.

Gaffey also contributed a victory in the 50 freestyle (24.51). Phil Kostowicz finished first in the 100 butterfly (1:02.89) while Jim Kostowicz won the 500 freestyle (6:04.19).

Bill won the 200 individual medley (2:14.51) for Seminole, which was in the process of winning the 200 freestyle relay when lightning was sighted and the remainder of the meet cancelled.

Both schools are scheduled to swim again next Tuesday, Lake Mary going to Lake Brantley and Seminole visiting Lyman.

After slow start, OCS Rams rip Trinity Christian

From Staff Reports

DELTONA — Nothing will aggravate a coach quicker than watching his team dawdle its way through a game against an opponent it should dominate with ease.

Orangewood Christian School soccer coach Shawn Brower witnessed such a display in the first half of Tuesday afternoon's match at Trinity Christian, when his top-ranked Rams ambled to a 1-0 lead at halftime.

"One half of the field, the one we were attacking was a mudhole," said Brower. "We couldn't turn on the ball or put many touches together."

"But we came out sluggish in the first half. We were off our game. We talked about it at halftime. If that's the way a state-ranked team is supposed to play."

Led by Jakob Hardrick's four goals and two assists, the Rams went on to post a 10-0 win over Trinity Christian.

The Orangewood Christian junior varsity team played the Brevard Christian varsity squad to a 0-0 while the Rams' seventh and eighth grade team defeated the Trinity Christian junior varsity team 2-1.

Chris Miller contributed two goals and two assists while David Green had two goals and one assist. Chas Smith scored a goal and had an assist. Iker Unzueta also scored a goal. David VandeSirek handed out a pair of assists. Chris Hill also had an assist.

The Rams outshot Trinity Christian 21-6, forcing the Trinity Christian goalkeeper to make 11 saves. Each team had five corner kicks. Green and Patrick Moore each played a half in goal for OCS, Green making two saves while Moore had to make one.

Orangewood Christian (7-0 and ranked No. 1 in this week's Florida Athletic Coaches Association state poll) will play a pair of state-ranked opponents this weekend.

On Friday, the Rams will play eighth-ranked Miramar-Florida Bible at 4 p.m. while on Saturday, the Rams will take on ninth-ranked Lake Worth Christian at noon.

Cook of the Week

She shares family recipe for spicy Garbanzo Stew

GENEVA — Cook of the Week Diana Brink has for the past several years been enjoying the lovely and quiet country-style life in Geneva. "Living in the country does have its pros and cons about it," said Diana.

One of the biggest pluses for Diana in living in the country is her love of animals. Her favorite pets are cats. "At one time I had 40 cats. It all started out with one stray cat that wandered up to the property one day and kind of made itself right at home. Of course, I became very attached to the animal before I realized that she was expecting," Brink said.

Originally from New York City, Brink has lived in Florida for the past 28 years with the last four in Geneva. She was employed with Champagne Color, currently called Quaker Printing, in Orlando for 18 years as a photographic printer and hand printer. She is the mother of three grown children, Michael from Oviedo, Norma from Sanford and Colleen from Georgia. She also has two grandchildren, Luis and Jennifer.

These days Diana spends her time around hospitals and doctors as she is undergoing a grueling schedule for kidney dialysis while waiting for a kidney transplant.

According to Brink, she has had a love for cooking ever since she was a little girl, giving almost all of the credit for her learned cooking skills to her mother. Her father was also a baker.

Today, Brink shares her family recipe for Garbanzo Stew (Ceci pea).

GARBANZO STEW

- 1/2 small onion, chopped
- 3 Tbsp. green pepper, chopped
- 1/2 lb. smoked ham (cut in cubes)
- 1 Chorizo (optional)
- 1 Tbsp. cumin
- 1 Tbsp. olive oil
- Salt, to taste

Diana Brink pours wine announcing dinner is served.

- Pepper, to taste
- 1 medium potato (cubed)
- 1 can Garbanzo beans
- 1 (8 oz.) can tomato sauce
- 1/2 cup water
- Saute onion, green pepper and ham in olive oil until onions are transparent. Also saute Chorizo if being used with onion, green pepper and ham. Add water and tomato sauce, salt, pepper, cumin and cubed potato. Cook until potatoes are tender, add garbanzo. Simmer 30 to 45 minutes. Serve with white rice.

AMISH CHOCOLATE CAKES

- 1 cup cocoa
- 1/2 cup vegetable oil
- 2 cups sugar
- 4 eggs
- 2 cups flour
- 2 tsp. baking powder
- 2 tsp. vanilla
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- Mix oil, sugar and cocoa.

- Blend in eggs, 1 at a time. Add vanilla, flour, baking powder and salt. Chill dough several hours or preferably overnight, then drop by spoonfuls or make balls and roll in powdered sugar and then in granulated sugar. Bake at 325°F. very slowly. They will definitely burn, if oven is too hot. Bake for approximately 8 to 10 minutes.

WALDORF ASTORIA CAKE (Red Velvet Cake)

- 1/2 cup shortening
- 2 eggs
- 1 tsp. vanilla
- 1 cup buttermilk
- 2 1/4 cups cake flour
- 1 Tbsp. white vinegar
- 1 1/2 cups sugar
- 1/4 cup red food color
- 2 tsp. cocoa
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1 tsp. baking soda

COOK OF THE WEEK

RENEE KEITH

Mix all ingredients and bake in 3 greased and floured round 8-inch pans for 30 minutes at 350°F. Remove from oven, cool pans on racks for 10 minutes, then remove layers to frost when completely cooled.

Frosting:

- 1 cup milk
- 3 Tbsp. flour
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup butter
- 1 tsp. vanilla

In saucepan, blend milk with flour on low heat until thickened. Remove and set aside to cool. Beat sugar, butter, shortening or margarine and vanilla. Add cooled milk mixture and beat with electric mixer until smooth. It should resemble whipped cream. Frost cooled cake layers and assemble.

ICEB Pudding

- 2 cups rice (rinse and drain)
- 10 cups water
- Pinch of salt
- 1 can condensed sweet milk
- 1 can evaporated milk
- 2 cups sugar
- 2 Tbsp. vanilla
- Ground cinnamon

Boil rice with water and salt. Stir often until water is absorbed. Add evaporated milk and sugar, cooking and stirring for an additional 10 minutes. Add condensed milk, cook, and stir five minutes. Turn out in bowl. Sprinkle with ground cinnamon. Cool and refrigerate.

Busy lifestyles call for easy, quick, nutritious meals

Now that the fall schedules for most everyone have begun, we have the need for meals that can be prepared quickly and easily and even served at various times. Family members do not always eat at the same time. Casseroles and one-dish meals are often the answer to this lifestyle. Some of these standbys can be prepared ahead of time and microwaved, most can be reheated. These are some of the tried and true recipes that readers and students have told me they have relied on for those busy days.

This has been an all-time favorite. The things I like about this recipe is that it is not necessary to precook the noodles.

SUBY DAY LASAGNA

- 1 lb. lean ground beef
- 1 can (14 1/2 oz.) tomatoes
- 1 can (8 oz.) tomato paste
- 1 tsp. salt

MICROWAVE IDEAS

MIDGE MYCOFF

- 1 tsp. dried basil leaves
- 1/2 tsp. garlic powder
- 1/2 cup water
- 2 cups cottage cheese
- 1 egg
- 1 Tbsp. parsley flakes
- 8 uncooked lasagna noodles
- 2 cups Mozzarella cheese
- Crumble ground beef into 1 1/2-quart glass casserole. Microwave on 100 percent power, uncovered 5-6 minutes or until no longer pink, stirring once. Stir to break meat into pieces. Drain. Stir in tomatoes, tomato paste, salt, basil, oregano, garlic powder and water. Sprinkle with additional Parmesan cheese if desired and microwave, uncovered, 1-2 minutes. Let stand about 10 minutes before cutting into squares for serving.

Lasagne can be assembled the night before for heating just before serving. Ground turkey can be substituted for ground beef.

Microwave (100 percent) 15 minutes. Rotate dish. Then microwave on 50 percent power 15-20 minutes or until noodles are tender. Remove plastic wrap. Sprinkle with additional Parmesan cheese if desired and microwave, uncovered, 1-2 minutes. Let stand about 10 minutes before cutting into squares for serving.

Lasagne can be assembled the night before for heating just before serving.

Ground turkey can be substituted for ground beef.

Chicken Enchilada and Polish Noodles are two favorite casserole recipes that will be family pleasers.

CHICKEN ENCHILADA

- 2 1/2 cups cooked chicken, diced
- 1 1/2 cups chicken broth
- 1 can Cream of Mushroom soup
- 1 can Cream of Chicken soup
- 1 can (4 oz.) green chilies, chopped and drained
- 1 jar (4 oz.) pimentos, chopped and drained
- 1 Tbsp. dry sherry

- 1 (8 oz.) package (6 cups) Doritos, slightly crushed
- 1 lb. grated Cheddar cheese

Mix all ingredients except chips and cheese. Cover the bottom of a 13x9-inch baking dish with 1 cup of cheese. Layer 1/2 of the chicken mixture, then 1/2 of the cheese. Repeat ending with chips topped with cheese. Refrigerate at least one hour or can be made the night before. Microwave at 85 percent power for 20-25 minutes or until hot throughout.

SERVE 6-8. POLISH NOODLES

- 1 package (8 oz.) noodles
- 1 package (1 lb.) ground beef
- 2 cans (8 oz. each) tomato sauce
- 1/2 cup green onions, chopped
- 2 Tbsp. green pepper, chopped
- 1 cup dairy sour cream
- 1 (8 oz.) container cottage cheese
- 1 (8 oz.) package cream cheese
- Salt and pepper to taste
- In a 4-quart casserole, cook noodles in 2 1/2 quarts boiling water until tender. Drain.

Microwave beef at 100 percent for 4 minutes or until no longer pink. Stir once to break up chunks of meat and drain off excess fat. Add tomato sauce, salt, and pepper. Microwave at 100 percent power for 5 minutes. Combine onions, green pepper, sour cream and cottage cheese. In casserole, layer half the noodles, and all the cheese mixture, the remaining noodles, then all of the meat sauce. Cover with plastic wrap; microwave at 100 percent power for 15 minutes. Serves 6.

GARAGE SALE GUIDELINES

1. Location: Most people have children's clothing, dishes, collectibles, books, records and antiques are the most popular items.
2. Make a commitment to shop at your garage sale. Be sure there is adequate parking space. Post signs with directions to parking areas. Make arrangements with neighbors.
3. Make it easy to pay! Have plenty of change and a system for handling. Make sure one person is in duty at all times at a controlled location preferably with a calculator or adding machine.
4. Provide refreshments. Do not make every person eat. "You must be Hungry!" makes for quick, effective sales or a good place for customers to start bargaining.
5. Get an early start. Set up displays the evening before, if possible.
6. De-personalize. Separate the inexpensive items from the more costly ones. Group furniture, clothing, toys, lawn equipment and other items with similar merchandise.
7. Specialize. Establish one area for "Under $5", another for "Under $1". Consider having a batch of items that are "FREE with purchase of $5". Remember the youngsters.
8. Encourage the "small, low-price" items that are popular for the purpose.
9. These your sale carefully! Have it at a time when most people are at home and unconcerned with special events.
10. Consider your efforts incorporate your sale with a neighbor for more variety and greater impact.
11. Be specific! When advertising your sale in the newspaper, list individual items. Don't simply say, "several things available." Each time you list an item, you are broadening the list of potential customers.

How to distinguish sarcoidosis, lupus

PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please explain the difference between sarcoidosis and lupus, as well as the symptoms of each.

DEAR READER: Sarcoidosis, a disease of unknown cause, is marked by low-grade areas of inflammation in many of the body's organs, chiefly the lungs, lymph glands and liver. Symptoms may be absent or minimal. Swollen glands are common and a rash may be present, but the disorder is often diagnosed by accident during routine chest X-ray examinations. The diagnosis is made by biopsy. Treatment is rarely required.

In contrast, lupus is a potentially fatal auto-immune disease. It causes rash, pleurisy, swollen glands, arthritis, and kidney damage. It is diagnosed by blood tests. Steroid therapy may be required to prevent renal failure. Experts consider the two disorders to be unrelated.

To give you more information on lupus, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Lupus: The Great Imitator." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please devote a column to Parkinson's disease. I'm a 77-year-old male in good health. Several months ago I developed an intermittent tremor in my left hand that intensifies when I'm under stress. My doctor indicates this might be Parkinson's, but isn't too concerned.

DEAR READER: This common neurological disorder, which causes shaking at rest, a shuffling gait, an immobile face, and other symptoms, is caused by a depletion of a brain chemical called dopamine. The reason for this is not known.

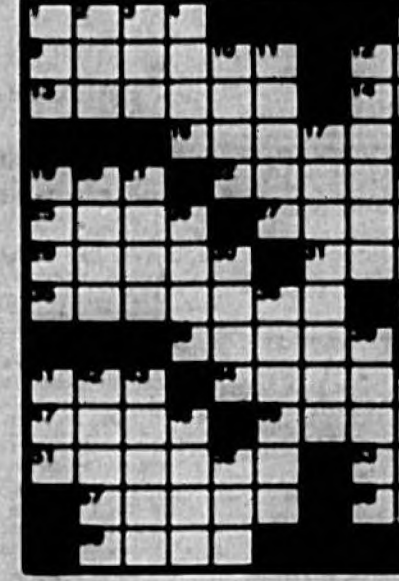

Parkinson's disease is usually progressive. In the early stages, no treatment is necessary, but as the tremor and other manifestations become more prominent, drug therapy (with Sinemet or other medicines) is advisable. The diagnosis is made by the patient's "clinical appearance" (how he or she looks, talks and walks). Patients with Parkinson's disease should, in my opinion, be under the care of neurologists.

You may have this disease - or you could have another condition, such as benign familial tremor, an inherited shakiness

WIN AT

By Phillip Alder
Edmond Hoyle (1672-1769) devised 24 rules for learners of whist. Number 10 was "When in doubt, win the trick." However, he forgot to mention with which card to win the trick. Sometimes it can be critical - as in today's deal.

Against four spades, West leads the diamond 10. How do you think the play should go?

It is a well-known ruse, when no better alternative presents itself, to make a deceptive lead through a dummy that is strong and balanced. So, declarer finessed dummy's diamond jack at trick one. However, East won with the king and returned the suit. Declarer won in the dummy and led the spade jack, letting it ride when East played low. West won with the queen and switched to a club.

Now South had a guess. If West had the club king and East the heart queen, South had to play low from the dummy. But he felt that East had the club king. So, South won with dummy's club ace, played a heart to his ace and a heart to dummy's jack. When it won, South discarded his club queen on dummy's heart king. Then he led a trump and lost only three tricks: two spades and one diamond.

Now imagine that West wins the first round of trumps with the ace before switching to a club. Thinking he can draw trumps, South will surely win with dummy's ace and take a spade finesse through East. West will produce the queen, lead a club to his partner's king and receive a diamond ruff for two down.

If declarer is likely to repeat a finesse, it may be a good idea either to duck or to win with an unnecessarily high card.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Sept. 22, 1994

In the year ahead, the seeds you've sown from good deeds could take root and blossom. Three people you've done favors for in the past might repay you in greater measure.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It might be necessary for you to make a critical decision today. You already have the answers, if you allow what you've learned from experience guide you. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you to understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be helpful today to those persons who have assisted you in the recent past. Don't miss any opportunities to reciprocate or repay favors.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your demeanor will earn you the respect of friends today, because even though you might be inconvenienced, you'll still honor your commitments.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Although you're usually the catalyst for generating fun activities, today you might not feel gratified or fulfilled unless you're involved in something constructive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your custodial instincts might seek expression today. This could impel you to step in automatically and manage involvements for others in an effective, inoffensive manner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Strive to maintain strong, friendly relations with relatives or in-laws today; they just might put you on the track to something materially beneficial.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Solutions to problems that have baffled others might be very evident to you today. If you think you have the answers, speak up.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You could be more fortunate than usual today where old friendships are concerned, especially with persons who share your interest in the world of finance or commerce.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your most enjoyable associations today could be with persons you haven't seen for quite some time. Good things for all concerned might come from reunions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Objectives might be more easily achieved today if you keep your intentions to yourself. The fewer individuals who know about them, the better. This includes even your best buddies.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Associates may try out your ideas and suggestions today to verify their value, although you might be doubtful of their merits and fail to utilize them yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Unless you are confronted by challenge today, your tenacity and determination might not be obvious. However, when the chips are down, the tiger within you will quickly become evident.
