Judgment: To live or let die?

By RUSS WHITE
Herald News Analysis

From the chambers of the U.S. Supreme Court in Washington to a tiny courtroom in Sebring, Fla., contrasting decisions were rendered Thursday afternoon concerning the legality of assisted suicides and a person's right-to-die.

A Florida doctor, who injected a dying cancer patient with a lethal dose of drugs, was acquitted of murder by a 12-member jury - a verdict applauded by those who supported Dr. Ernesto Pinzon-Reyes for his compassion and competence.

Pinzon's license was suspended when he was accused of injecting a fatal dose of morphine, Valium, and potassium chloride into a 70-year-old man on Oct. 6. A grand jury accused the doctor of committing "willful, premeditated and unjustified murder." He still faces a Sept. 8 license hearing.

At the hour of Pinzon's acquittal, the judges of the U.S. Supreme Court dealt what some contrast as a setback to the right-to-die movement when they unanimously agreed that states have a constitutional right to prohibit physician-assisted suicides.

President Clinton praised the high court's ruling, saying that the "risks and consequences of physician-assisted suicide are simply too great."

The great debate rages on, however, because the ruling - no matter how significant - does not impose an outright ban on doctor-assisted suicides.

The public debate shifts again to state legislatures. Oregon is the only state where voters

Divine comedy opens

It's time for the final play of the Ritz Theatre's successful spring season with a wildly amusing musical comedy called Nunsense. Nunsense is a play by Dan Goggin that has won numerous awards including Best Off-Broadway Musical. The play will be performed at the Touchton Building and runs from June 27th to July 13th. The play is on Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 p.m.

This spoof features a cast of five nuns who, literally, kick up their heels in song. Mother Superior (Sister Mary Regina) is a feisty overweight nun who can't resist the spotlight. She is played by Amie Fontino. The Mistress of Novices

Read all about downtown Sanford

By VICKI DeBORMIER

Sanford has been a diamond in the rough for several years, slowly rebuilding from a bad time a decade or more ago, yet keeping the renaissance a secret.

The people who have been moving here over the years, buying old houses and returning them to their former glory have done so without fanfare.

Business owners have been coming in as well to set up shop and take a chance at making the city a successful venue for commerce.

The number of homes that have been redone and that are being renovated is increasing exponentially. Jennifer Singelsen, coordinator of the Sanford Main Street project, said.

Singelsen also noted that the occupancy rate of the stores along First Street has more than doubled within the last six months.

Stores and restaurants already established there, including Bridges Antiques and the Willow Tree restaurant, are planning to expand their operations soon, Singelsen said.

There are at least three bed and breakfast inns operating in town. A new Merle Norman day spa has begun operation on Park Avenue.

"It's just a very exciting place to be right now," Singelsen said. And, now, everyone knows about it. Orlando magazine recently named the downtown Sanford area as one of the "communities with character" in central Florida.

And it wasn't put in bad company either: Maitland, Downtown Orlando, Spring Lake, College Park, Winter Park, Isleworth/Windermere, Bay Hill/Dr. Phillips and Metrowest were also named to the list.

Pilot walks away from plane crash

By VICKI DeBORMIER

It's a good thing the adult nightclubs and sexually oriented businesses aren't already established in the areas near the Orlando-Sanford Airport.

On Thursday evening, a plane crash from which the pilot walked away with only minor injuries could have been a horrible disaster had the area been crowded with businesses rather than trees.

After taking off from the airport in his single-engine Cherokee, James Schlegel knew he was in trouble. As quickly as he'd gone up, he went down, crashing shortly after take off.

Schlegel, 40, of 2635 Donaldson Dr., Orlando, told officials the plane's engine "just quit," despite a full tank of gas.

According to Ed McDonough, public information officer with the Seminole County Sheriff's office, the plane went down in a clump of palm trees. One of the wings broke off and was separate from the fuselage.

McDonough said the pilot climbed out of the cockpit and was walking around when rescue workers arrived on the scene. He was transported to a hospital.

Disney's joyous Hercules hits the theaters

Local Presbyterians join national gathering in N.Y.

By LURLENE SWEETING

This year the 209th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (USA) convened in Syracuse (Onondaga County) New York. Syracuse is centrally located in New York State and is known as the "Salt City."

The General Assembly is at the apex of the organizational structure of the Presbyterian Church (USA). The voting members of the General Assembly are the Commissioners elected by their respective Presbyteries. This year 570 Commissioners, 285 ministers and 285 elders were to attend.

Ministers and elders from the local churches are the commissioners to the General Assembly. There are 172 Presbyteries in the Presbyterian Church (USA). The 76 churches in this area comprise the Central Florida Presbytery. Our regional bodies are synod of which there are 16. Central Florida Presbytery is a member of the Synod of the south Atlantic which encompasses Florida, Georgia and south Carolina.

Central Florida Presbytery was represented by: Dr. Roger Richardson, Executive Presbyter; Dr. Rosalie Potter, assistant Executive Presbyter; plus the commissioners and youth advisory delegate. Commissioners were: Rev. Dean Chapman, Casselberry; Rev. Elizabeth Haskins, Ormond Beach; Rev. William A. Jokela; Elder Richard Carter, Palm Bay; Elder Larry Lee, Orlando; and Elder Lurlene Sweeting, Sanford. Alternate Commissioners were Rev. Elmer Floyd, Rev. Rod Pinder and Elder Annie Aker. The youth advisory delegate was Sharon Everson.

The General Assembly officially convened June 14, 1997 and I concluded June 21, 1997. The basic mission of the church is to proclaim the Gospel throughout the world. Consequently the work of the General Assembly is intense, dynamic and deliberative in setting the parameters that will guide the denomination until the next annual General Assembly.

There were a few less than 3,000 attending the General Assembly. Advisory delegates contributed greatly to the work of the assembly. The following number of advisory delegates were registered: 172 youth advisory delegates (YADs); 28 Theological Student Advisory Delegates (TSADs); 8 overseas advisory delegates (OADs); and 15 ecumenical advisory delegates (EADs).

Happy Birthday to that special song

Today is...
VICKI DeSORMIER
Staff Writer

It's time to sing "Happy Birthday" to the most special song to those who are celebrating their special day.

On this day in 1859, the melody for what may be the most often sung song was written by Mildred J. Hill, a school teacher from Louisville, Ken.

Her sister, Patty Smith Hill, wrote the words we sing around the birthday cake each year.

The song was originally written as "Good Morning to All," a classroom greeting published in the book Song Stories for the Sunday School. The lyrics were amended in 1924 to include the stanza which began "Happy Birthday to You."

It is believed that the song is sung somewhere in the world every minute of every day.

Although the sisters are believed to have made very little money from the song, it later reportedly generated 81 million for the copyright owner. The song is expected to enter public domain in the year 2010 when the copyright expires.

This is, coincidentally, Mildred J. Hill's birthday.

Once you're done celebrating all that birthday stuff, you might want to consider the Helen Keller Festival in Tusculumbia, Ala.

The event, which runs through Sunday, commemorates the remarkable life of Helen Keller with stages shows, arts and crafts, musical entertainment, races, tours of the Helen Keller birthplace.

Presentations of The Miracle Worker, a play about Keller's life that was more than once made into a movie, will be done throughout the weekend and for the next five weekends as well.

TV fans will remember this date as the anniversary of the Dark Shadows soap opera. The show stood out from the rest because it featured vampires as the main characters and it had a dark, Gothic feel about it.

The show premiered in 1966 and focused on 200 year old Barnabas Collins. Action shifted from the 1960s to the 1800s.

An attempt to revive the show in 1991 failed.

For the loftier-minded, Boulder, Colo. will be the site of the Colorado Shakespeare Festival which gets underway today and continues through Aug. 17. It is considered one of the top three Shakespeare festivals in the country.

More than 43,000 people are expected to be on hand during the next few months for the event which is in its 40th season.

North of the border in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, more than 125,000 are expected to attend the Jazz City International Festival between now and July 6.

As we wait expectantly for news from the space station Mir, interstellar space will bring us the last quarter phase of the moon. The moon entered that phase at 8:42 a.m.

And in Riverside, Iowa the people will celebrate the Trek Fest in honor of Capt. James T. Kirk of the starship Enterprise who will be born there in 2228.

Kirk is a character in the Star Trek books, television series and movies. The city will celebrate their famous local son of the future with Star Trek videos, entertainment, memorabilia swap meet and costume contest.

Among the celebrities celebrating their birthdays today are actress Isabelle Adjani, who is 42; Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt is 59; actress Julia Duffy is 48; fashion designer Norma Kamali is 52; opera singer Anna Moffo is 63; H. Ross Perot is 67; and former baseball player Rico Petrocelli is 54.

He's Moore than just your average educator

By CARTER GILMARTIN
Herald correspondent

On the wall in Principal Bill Moore's office at Sanford Middle School, there hangs a 1966 Jacksonville Times-Union photo and article about the best teacher Moore ever had. The man in the photo had been selected the national industrial arts teacher of the year.

The photo was taken at Wolfson High School, at that time, Jacksonville's premier school for industrial arts.

The teacher being honored is Bill Moore's father. The elder Mr. Moore taught Bill "shop" in 8th grade. He retired after 40 years of teaching children in Florida.

In these days of computer technology, Bill Moore still believes it is important to have power tools in shop class, so students can build something and take it home.

Though it is now called "Exploring Technology", at SMS students build things, too.

After his father retired from teaching, he continued working as a carpenter, twice building custom cabinets for author John D. McDonald. McDonald of Travis McThee fame—one included an autographed book with his payment.

Bill Moore's mother still lives in Venice, though both his father and McDonald have died. She was a printer by trade and established Jacksonville's first school print shop.

While in Venice visiting his mother, he joins a nephew who is a professional guide for some fishing. At home, he fishes the lagoons and bays of West Brevard and East Seminole counties for snook and saltwater trout.

Other hobbies are cooking at home on his gas grill and reading. His grill specialty is Cajun onions.

His reading tastes range from William Glasser to Louis L'Amour. Glasser is probably best known for Reality Therapy, but he continues to publish articles in education journals which Moore passes on to his teachers.

Florida writers John D. McDonald and Carl Hassen are favorites. Moore notes both L'Amour and McDonald reveal a lot about human nature in their plots.

But it is when he speaks about author Tony Hillerman's fiction delving into Navaho culture and practice that his love for history begins to surface.

He recently finished Daunted Courage about Lewis and Clark's explorations and Jefferson's decision to make the Louisiana Purchase. He says, "I would like to think I would have been with Lewis and Clark as they explored the route to the Pacific."

He talks excitedly about the history behind antique furniture and artifacts and visits to museums. He reads history. He watches history programs on television. And he is a P. E. major?

At his question, he smiles and explains that when he was in college, P. E. was the only major that did not require mastering a foreign language. He minored in history. "I sometimes think learning a foreign language is like spelling—you either have a knack for it or you don't."

He holds degrees from Stetson and UCF in P. E. and Educational Leadership. He is ADD (all but dissertation) in doctoral work at U of Florida.

Prior to becoming principal at SMS, he was the girls' basketball coach at Lake Mary High School. He describes those years and his four years at SMS as his favorite periods in his life. For pure excitement, though, it was winning the district and regional basketball titles as Girl's Basketball Coach at L. M. H. S. that comes to mind.

His favorite getaway is to Robinsville, N. C., at a lodge where he and his wife have vacationed the past 14 years. Although they may buy property up there eventually, Moore says he's not selling anything in Florida until his wife has spent one winter there.

After 32 years in Florida's school system, he says he's still having fun. He's been at Lyman, at LMHS and he's worked for awhile for the National Educator's Association (NEA) as a "union boss". He credits the excellent training that came with the NEA as best preparing him to be an administrator.

He's eligible for full retirement and he does see splitting his time between Flagler County, Florida and Graham County, N.C. in his future.

But for now, he's fully con-

Graham urges shot in the arm for health care

Special to the Herald

WASHINGTON--U.S. Senator Bob Graham and a variety of prominent health care organizations today joined together in the hopes of giving Medicare and its current and future beneficiaries a needed shot in the arm.

On Wednesday, the American Cancer Society released new guidelines for colon cancer screening. Graham and representatives from that respected organization, as well as, members of the American Gastroenterological Association and the American Society for Gastrointestinal Endoscopy, held a press conference at which they urged Congress to allow Medicare coverage of colon cancer screening and a variety of other preventive services.

"Encouraging Medicare recipients to seek preventive treatment is a boom for the physical health of individual Americans and the fiscal health of our nation," said Graham before today's press conference. "It makes both medical and financial sense for Medicare to reflect Benjamin Franklin's wise adages that at stitch in time saves nine and that a penny saved is a penny earned."

Colon cancer is the second most frequent cancer killer in America, claiming the lives of 55,000 persons annually. But though it is estimated that screening and early detection and intervention could eliminate up to 90% of these deaths, Medicare does not currently pay for these preventive measures.

This lack of emphasis on preventive treatment also has a significant financial cost. Colon cancer screenings cost between $125-$300 a piece, and patients diagnosed through this early detection method have a 90% chance of survival. Meanwhile, if a patient isn't diagnosed until he or she begins to exhibit symptoms, the chance of survival drops to 8% and life expectancy falls to only four to five years. Care during this four or five year treatment period can cost up to $100,000.

Graham is the leading Senate sponsor of S.311, the "Medicare Preventive Benefit Improvement Act of 1997," legislation that will update Medicare coverage to include important, life-saving preventative health benefits that are not currently part of the Medicare benefit package.

The bill, which has the support of, among others, Senators Thad Cochran (R-MS), Ernest Hollings (D-SC), Carol Moseley Braun (D-IL), 55 House Republicans, and 49 House Democrats, would allow mammography's, pap smear screenings, pelvic exams, colon cancer and prostate screenings, and diabetes self-management.

"The numbers don't lie. Preventive health screenings save lives and save dollars," said Graham. "Our seniors, future generations of Medicare beneficiaries, and our nation's fiscal security will be well served if Congress encourages the treatment of illness before it happens."

The Medicare Preventive Benefit Improvement Act of 1997 (S.311)

- Provides coverage for annual mammography screening for women over age 49, whether or not they are at high-risk for developing breast cancer, and provides that deductibles shall not apply to such mammography screenings.

- Current law provides annual mammography screening for high-risk women between the ages of 40-50, and every two years for women ages 40-50 who are not a high risk for developing breast cancer. It also provides annual coverage for women between the ages of 50-64 whether or not they are at high risk for developing breast cancer, but provides only bi-annual examinations for women age 65 and older.

- Provides coverage for pap smears and pelvic examinations every three years for high risk women, and provides that deductibles shall not apply to such pap smears under current law.

- Provides coverage for colorectal cancer screening, including fecal-occult blood tests (annual), flexible sigmoidoscopy or barium enema (every four years) for individuals 50 years of age or older, and colonoscopy or barium enema for high-risk individuals (every two years).

Under current law, there is no coverage for colorectal screening.

- Provides coverage for annual prostate cancer screening, including prostate-specific antigen (PSA) blood tests and digital rectal exams for men 50 years of age and older.

Under current law, there is no coverage for prostate cancer screening.

- The bill would provide Medicare coverage of diabetes outpatient self-management training services rendered by a certified provider in an outpatient setting. The bill would also allow Medicare to cover diabetic blood-testing strips as durable medical equipment.

- This legislation would apply only to persons currently eligible for Medicare. Those aged 65 or younger would have to already be eligible for Medicare benefits to be covered under this legislation.

been broken down to "what will sell the most" in tickets and merchandise. A good sell, I guess, is how many toys and souvenirs from the movie can be sold at the department stores as well as seats in the cineplexes.

Enough aching thoughts, now to the task at hand. Hercules is a great product... I mean, picture. As with most Disney films it appeals to both young and old. The only problem I had with the film is that there is this set plot pattern for Disney films now: a heroic figure must overcome adversity from themselves and scheming villains to save the day and get the girl with the help of inhuman or human sidekicks.

Here, Hercules must save the universe from the diabolical Hades and his minions. Hades wants to take over the universe and become the greatest god on Mt. Olympus. But to do that, he must stop the one thing that stands in his way: the half-mortal, half-god son of

Sanford

The magazine highlighted the communities and showed off some of the statistics that make Sanford among the best in the area.

According to the magazine, 40 percent of those in the historic district are college educated; the average yearly income is $30,165; the average home value is $83,115; crime is down with assaults down 50 percent, burglaries down by nearly as much. Thefts reported this year did rise a bit from 172 reported incidents in the first quarter of 1996 to 212 in the first three months this year.

"The crime rate is grossly inflated," Singeisen said. "People tend to focus on the perception rather than the actual numbers."

Sanford has been returning to its former greatness a little at a time while the rest of central Florida was looking the other direction. Today, it is ready to come out and the rest of the area is starting to take notice.

the divine couple, Zeus and Hera. Hercules is looking to reclaim his birthright and sit amongst the gods. In order to do that, he must prove himself heroic not just through his physical super strength, but also through his heart. Aiding Hercules is his trusty winged steed, Pegasus, and the ornery Phlebotis -- or Phil for short.

As with all Disney movies, there is also love in the air. Hercules falls for a saucy yet suspicious woman named Meg. Meg has her own designs on Hercules that involve reluctantly helping the underworld leader, Hades. And there are other lovable characters thrown into the mix like Hades' bumbling servants, Pain and Panic. And there is this rousing Greek chorus that sings the narration -- they are led in by Charlton Heston who introduces the group by saying, "You go girl!" Made up of talented black singers, this chorus does some numbers that bring the house down. One, in particular, is where the chorus backs up Meg who is singing "I Won't Say," when she realizes that she is falling for Hercules.

The screenplay is written by Ron Clements and John Musker (also directors). Bob Shaw, David McEneary and Irene Mecchi, and it is full of great humor and satire. They make the city of Thebes a modern day like metropolis with big city problems. And they take the character of Hercules and turn him into this marketable cash cow. He is this "sports hero" with his own brand of sandals and his face on a billboard. Instead of "Air Jordan", it's "Air Herc". It is a clever, hilarious poke at how the marketing campaigns for today's sport stars are grotesquely out of hand. There is that nasty word "marketing" again. That is only a taste of great writing that is abundant in Hercules.

But what would Disney animation be nowadays without great voices and personalities to bring these characters to life. Most notable is James Woods as Hades. His Hades is a short fuse and a fast talker, and Woods happily enjoys playing it up. Also Danny DeVito breathes his brand of brash humor into the character of Phil the satyr. And Susan Egan is just right as Meg with loads of attitude. Other celebrities are Tate Donovan (Murder at 1600) as Hercules, Rip Torn (Men in Black) as Zeus, Bobcat Goldthwait (Shakes the Clown) as minion Pain, Matt Frewer (Honey, I Shrank the Kids) as Pain's partner, Panic, David Letterman's Paul Shaffer as Hermes, the merry messenger, and Hal Holbrook (The Firm) as Hercules' earthly father.

And you cannot forget the animation which is perfectly balanced between hand drawn and computer. But to call such a wonderful family experience a "product" is deflating. Poor ole' Uncle Walt would be turning over at the utterance of such a thing. So eat your Hercules's Hercules candy bars and make sure to get those McDonald's Hercules Happy Meals, and, if you haven't had enough of the Hercules hype, you could see this "insignificant" entertainment the hype is based on. Four stars (out of four).

have specifically endorsed doctor-assisted suicide but their referendum is being challenged in court and the state Legislature has sent the question back for another referendum in November.

According to Florida attorney Robert Rivas the Supreme Court's ruling has no bearing on a similar question pending before the Florida Supreme Court. Rivas represents Charles Hall, a Citrus County resident dying of AIDS who is asking the state's justices to declare as unconstitutional the 132-year-old Florida statute making assisted self-murder a crime.

The Supreme Court's ruling Thursday, Rivas said, merely rolls the whole issue back to the states so the states can decide what to do using the political process. Seven years ago, Florida approved an amendment to the state constitution that guarantees all Floridians freedom from government intrusion into their private lives.

In a landmark decision he rendered in March, Circuit Court Judge S. Joseph Davis of Lake Mary, declared that "Charles E. Hall, a competent terminally ill adult has the constitutional right into the protected area necessitated an investigation by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

In addition, the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) was also conducting an investigation into the crash.

Schlegel told investigators that he couldn't say what had happened with his plane, McDonough said. He told him he had been piloting planes for 23 years, but saw no problems with the plane until it suddenly stopped running.

under the Privacy Amendment of the Florida Constitution to decide to terminate his suffering and determine the time and manner of his death, and in order to accomplish this he has the right to seek and obtain the assistance of his physician."

The emotionally-charged issue on whether or not terminally ill-patients can hasten their death and have a doctor assist apparently is far from over. At times most of the attention has been thrust on Dr. Jack Kevorkian, a Michigan pathologist who has helped more than 40 patients commit suicide.

Jury trials such as the one Thursday in Sebring offer ample proof that the issue is much closer than some may have thought. Dr. Ernesto Pinzon-Reyes, a Central Floridian, did not commit murder. He was simply a man trying to relieve the pain of a dying man.

Not everyone agrees, of course. Theologians such as Cardinal Bernard Law, Chairman of the U.S. Bishops Committee for Pro-Life Activities, reaffirmed Thursday the moral wisdom of more than 20 centuries recognizing that healers must not be agents of death.

Magazine recognizes Sanford

It always feels good when someone notices you.

Sanford, once the gateway to South Florida, had fallen by the wayside in the eyes of many.

For years, realtors quietly steered potential homeowners away from the city; schools were left in the dust of newer facilities around the county; businesses "knew better" than to even open their doors in the former boom town that had somewhere along the line gone bust.

Not so any more.

The occupancy rate in the downtown business district has more than doubled since December.

Run down houses in the residential district are being gobbled up at a rapid rate and renovated into stylish homes.

Residents are at once singing the praises of their hometown and trying to keep the secret quiet from the rest of the world, hoping to have it all to themselves.

But the secret is out.

Orlando magazine recently named the downtown Sanford area as one of the "communities with character" in central Florida.

And we aren't in bad company either: Maitland, Downtown Orlando, Spring Lake, College Park, Winter Park, Isleworth/Windermere, Bay Hill/Dr. Phillips and Metrowest were also named to the list.

We've known all along that we've got more to offer than some people were willing to admit. Some went so far as to bad-mouth us in other media.

But we knew.

People have been finding out and coming here, investing money and finding success and quiet happiness. And, like the members of an exclusive club, they've kept quiet about the treasures we have.

Now that the secret's out, though, we should go out there and shout the praises to the world.

We've got something special here in Sanford. Cheer the greatness and make everyone aware of how much we have to offer.

Of course we'd like to keep it to ourselves, but when you have so much to offer, it's hard to keep it quiet for long. If we don't say something, everyone else will!

Sanford is headed for something great. Let's make sure everyone knows about it.

Be proud of Sanford. You have a right to be!

ANOTHER KIND OF CONTINENTAL DRIFT

GEORGE PLAGENZ

Is marriage always worth saving?

The couple sat next to each other on the couch in the marriage counselor's office. It was the closest they had been in a long time -- that is, if you are measuring proximity in feet and inches.

Speaking in terms of emotional distance, they were still miles apart.

Despite their differences, Florence wanted to stay together as a family. "The children need a father around," she said. Alice was 7; Scott was 11.

Bill took a more hard-headed approach to the wobbly marriage. He was a businessman whose philosophy was, "When something isn't working anymore, it's time to drop it and go on to something else." In Bill's case, "something else" was someone else. He had found another love in his life.

Does the visit to a marriage counselor bode well for Florence's hopes to keep the family intact?

"Rarely does a counselor save a marriage," says one authority on "match repair."

"What saves a marriage, if it's to be saved, is the willingness of the partners to see a counselor. It means both parties are willing at least to try for a reconciliation."

But Florence wishes their counselor would take a stand during their sessions rather than serve as an impartial mediator who asks questions and then leaves it up to the couple to solve their own problem.

Speaking in terms of emotional distance, they were still miles apart.

"I want him to tell Bill in no uncertain terms that it's wrong for him to walk out on his family," says Florence.

Rarely will a marriage counselor take sides or lecture the parties, but Florence has some expert opinion to back up her position.

Dr. David Goodman, a child psychologist who wrote "A Parents' Guide to the Emotional Needs of Children," was in favor of telling parents considering a divorce, "Nothing you can give a divorce-orphaned child can make up to him what he has forever lost. Deep down he knows his parents rejected him despite their assurances that 'Mommy and Daddy both love you very much.' He knows they did not think enough of him to reconcile their differences and make a marriage -- and a home for him."

What Goodman told parents for a generation is confirmed by studies undertaken to find out how divorce really affects children. In one study, 131 children who were felt to be progressing normally -- at home and at school -- at the time their parents were divorced were examined over the course of a year.

The most pervasive fact to emerge from the study was the enormity of the grief all the children felt over their parents' divorce. "They were and beyond measure. The pain was there, hard and hurting, in every one of the 131 youngsters."

When the researchers saw the children a year after their parents' divorce, they were dismayed at the number who seemed less intact than they had been -- "a disturbing finding, considering that all the children had been progressing normally at the time of the breakup."

In other words, the CIA concluded, know your partner.

Spy game has changed in the age of AIDS

The onslaught of AIDS around the globe has put something of a crimp in the style of the world's best spies. Pillow talk can be perilous.

Spies risking life and limb for their country's cause usually accept the normal risks presented by gunshots, poison and other dangers with equanimity. The best and bravest shrugged these off as an acceptable hazard of their trade.

But AIDS has been another matter altogether. "There has been a big change," one top CIA official confided to our associate Dale Van Atta. "Even Russia's most avid female agents are balking at having unprotected sex with a target."

Part of this has been the march of democracy that has overtaken most of the countries with the most servile spies. The KGB's Mata Hari's, once successful at seducing foreign dignitaries, including Americans, generally don't believe that stealing a trade or technological secret is worth the risk of AIDS -- unless they desperately need a bonus.

East Germany once produced gigolos skilled at seducing high-level West German government secretaries and other officials. But reunified Germany's once-cavalier Casanovas seldom leave home without condoms these days.

The CIA is no different. Top CIA officials well know that some of its agents still get useful intelligence information the old-fashioned way, by bedding their targets and listening to them brag. But without the evil empire to combat, it's difficult to justify ordering an agent to risk a debilitating, deadly disease in order to tease some new secret from the target.

In fact, the CIA has done the opposite -- warned its agents abroad about the hazards of AIDS. These warnings are internal, and even classified sometimes. In one such warning we have seen, the CIA's Office of Medical Services (OMS) soothingly reassured its agents: "AIDS is 100 percent preventable. Scientists who study the transmission of disease point out that the pattern of HIV dissemination has been well investigated, and the virus relies entirely on sexual contact, parenteral infusion, or on perinatal circumstances."

So, the document continued, "while an AIDS vaccine or a disease cure is not yet a reality, preventive measures are very effective." In this message, sent to its spy stations around the globe, the CIA offered seven specific warnings designed to protect its spies.

First, they urged, "Do not participate in unprotected vaginal intercourse unless it is within a stable relationship, otherwise use condoms and spermicide."

In other words, the CIA concluded: "Know your partner."

Of course, in the spy game that is the whole idea -- to get to know your partner well. But asking them if they have AIDS doesn't exactly follow after asking about someone's astrological sign. And it may tend to put a damper on a moment of opportunity when the foreigner's tongue is just being loosened.

In a final bit of jingoistic patter -- and something of a new mission statement -- the CIA's Office of Medical Services chimed: "The task is each of ours to halt the spread of HIV infection and AIDS. The warnings are clear and must be widely disseminated."

Inhale and exhale that thought

BOSTON-Now then, before we go rummaging around for the devils in the details, a moment of appreciation for the deal itself.

The fact that the tobacco industry was forced to belly up to the (nonsmoking) bargaining table is enough to make even a longtime, die-hard health activist just a little breathless.

Until this summer, the cigarette manufacturers had transformed nearly every anti-smoking victory from a ban on TV ads to the enforcement of warning labels into tobacco profit. Year after year, a phalanx of straight-faced executives insisted that smoking didn't cause cancer, cigarettes weren't addictive, and Joe Camel was a cartoon for grown-ups.

Finally the balance was shifted by the sights, sounds and (law) suits of change. The sight of tobacco executives lying to Congress, the sound of whistle-blowers and FDA regulators, the suits by smokers and finally by states looking for Medicaid reimbursement of smoking related illnesses.

All in all, the atmosphere has changed so much that ambitious politicians like Mississippi's Attorney General Michael Moore can make their mark fighting against the tobacco lobby. Inhale and exhale that thought.

A for the deal itself? It has some star items on the health community's list. In return for protection from potentially ruinous lawsuits, the industry admits that nicotine is an addictive health hazard, accepts a ban on the worst marketing and most obnoxious advertising to kids, and forks over $368 billion over 25 years to compensate for damages.

That is enough to make this agreement historic. But is it enough to make smoking history?

When all is said and done, when the president and the Congress and the health community weigh in, any agreement has to be judged by whether, in the end, there will be fewer new smokers, especially among children.

Right now, Wall Street is betting on the survival of smoking. And when you deal with Big Tobacco, Richard Daynard of the Tobacco Products Liability Project warns, "You have to assume that every suggestion they make, however innocuous, has a fishhook in it."

So we move on to count the fishhooks, or rather, the devils in the details:

- Devil One: The FDA Handcuffs. In the fine print, the agreement limits the FDA's ability to regulate nicotine levels. This is the main complaint of the fearsome twosome, C. Everett Koop and David Kessler. If we really want to deal with the most lethal drug, we need to regulate how much nicotine and assorted carcinogens are in a cigarette.

- Devil Two: Freedom from Class Action Suits. In the future, anyone who wants to take on tobacco is on his or her own. This makes it more expensive for smokers to sue and easier for tobacco companies to survive. It's a new set of legal rules crafted exclusively for a rogue industry.

Is it enough to make smoking history?

- Devil Three: Taxpayers Foot the Bill: The money the drug dealers must pay is tax deductible. That means we all share the bill for damages.

- Devil Four: Near-sighted Look-Back Procedures. In theory, tobacco companies now have an incentive to cut down the number of underage smokers. The deal builds in a "look back" at the numbers. Either the percentage of young smokers decreases or the companies pay a penalty. But alas, this penalty has a devilish feature: There's a cap on it. It may be more profitable to pay the fine and keep hooking customers.

- Devil Five: The Devil and the Deep Blue Overseas Market. There is nothing in this global agreement that prevents American tobacco companies from making up profits by addicting women and children in the new markets-in Asia and Eastern Europe.

There are of course other details and other devils even before this goes to the Congress. For the health community, the $368 billion question is whether these trade-offs are better than what anti-smoking forces could win in court.

Many lifers in the anti-smoking movement feel torn. The relentless Greg Connolly figures that this package might reduce smoking by as much as 20 percent. That's the good news. But it will keep the companies in business for the long run. Bad news.

On the one hand, he says, we shouldn't rush into an agreement we'll regret. On the other hand, "We have come too far now to throw it all away."

The postscript to the pact is going to be long and raucous. Before this new deal is a done deal, we've got to dance with the devils.

Sumner to perform locally

SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

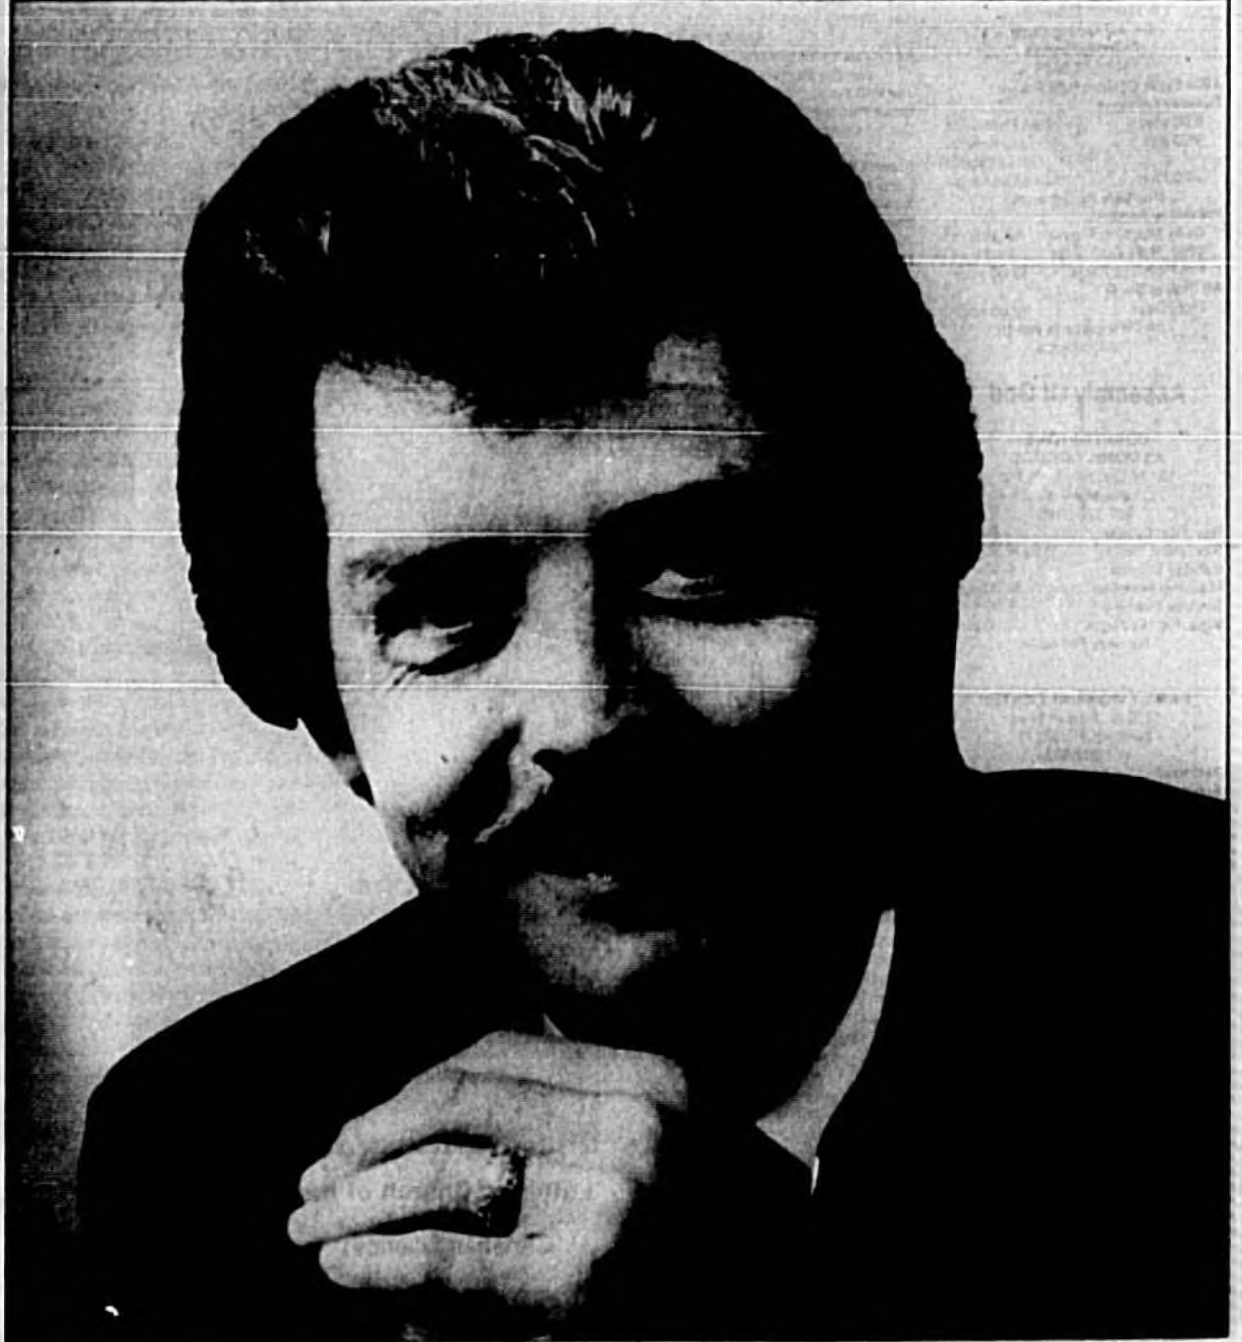

SANFORD — An exciting musical experience is coming to Sanford Church of God, 801 W. 22nd St., on Sunday, June 29 at 6 p.m. Donnie Sumner, a 30 year veteran of musical performance, weaves to gether a fast-paced, well-planned, themed format of Sacred and Gospel repertoire, utilizing standard, as well as his own original compositions.

For 14 years, Sumner's life focused upon the professional musical stage. The final six years of his secular career were spent as a co-performer with, and a personal aid to, the late Elvis Presley. While pursuing his career in rock music, Sumner eventually found himself totally dependent upon drugs for his existence. In 1976, having experienced an emotional collapse, his world in shambles, consumed by a wish for self-destruction, his life was dramatically changed and completely rearranged by the transforming power of God's saving grace.

His career has spanned three decades. He has appeared on national television in Elvis on Tour, Elvis's Aloha from Hawaii, Jerry Lewis MD Telethon (1973-74-75), Johnny Cash's Flower Out of Place, P.T.L. - Charlotte, NC, 700 Club-Virginia Beach, VA, T.B.N. - Santa Ana, CA, 100 Huntley St. - Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

He has performed with the Stamp Quartet for eight years, Elvis Presley for six years and the Grand Ole Opry for one year. Sumner has received a Dove Award in 1969 for Gospel Song of the Year, a Grammy Nomination in 1970 for Country Song of the Year and an SESAC award in 1970 for Songwriter of the Year.

Sumner has made appearances at the Astrodome in

Donnie Sumner

Houston, TX; Madison Square Gardens in New York, NY; King's Island in Cincinnati, OH; and King's Dominion in Richmond, VA. Come and enjoy his performance. For more information call the church office at 322-3942.

Pastor speaks of ancient-future thinking

SANFORD — Our congregation is made up of 60,70 and 80 year olds and we also have Baby-Boomers and some Generation Xers. How can we create worship services that reach all ages?

It's called Ancient-Future Thinking. It's about combining the old-fashioned with the new-fangled. It's preaching that remembers the past while imagining the future. It means putting together traditions of the past and the new contemporary.

It's not always easy to do in our worship service. There is a new openness to the past as we race toward the future. We get our soft drinks in high-tech plastic bottles, but we brought back the classic curves of Coca-Cola.

We have digital cameras that capture life-like colors, while black and white photography is making a come back. We're sensing a longing for the old and familiar even as time rushes on.

We just can't come to grips with what it means to be living on a threshold of a new millennium. That's why we need Ancient-Future worship services. Worship services that is filled with old-new thinking. Services that re-appropriates the traditional into the contemporary, services that mingles the old-fashioned with the new fangled.

We are trying to have a blended worship service. A worship service that speaks to the baby-boomers and young adults as well as to the older members of our congregation and that is a real challenge today. All generations need to be more tolerant of one another. We need to be tolerant of one another's music as well as one another's concerns for what speaks to them whether it be meditative music for the older group or celebrative music for the younger group.

This is the challenge that is before us today. Never before has there been such a chasm between generations in what meets their needs. Let us be open to the past as we race toward the future of a new century with an old-new church.

Sanford will add another page to the history book tomorrow

SANFORD — Tomorrow night will be a big night for Sanford as it will add another page to its long baseball history.

The Daytona Beach Cubs will play the Kissimmee Cobras in a Florida State League doubleheader at Jackie Robinson Ballpark in Daytona Beach and it will be Jackie Robinson/Sanford Youth Baseball Night.

Thanks to Sanford Mayor Larry Dale, the Sanford Recreation Department and I'm sure many, many others, the youth all-star teams from Sanford will be introduced to the fans between games, also between games Jackie Robinson will be honored on the 50th anniversary of his major league debut.

The event will not only be a night of recognition, but a fundraiser as well; two dollars from every ticket will go to the Negro League Baseball Retirement Fund, and another two dollars from every ticket will go directly to the Sanford Youth Baseball program sponsored by the City.

This is also a good time to thank different corporations and individuals in the Sanford area who have purchased enough tickets to send all of the All-Stars to Daytona free of charge. There are also some extra tickets for other players who wish to attend.

Any kid who shows up at the Sanford City Hall in uniform will be given a ticket to the game. The SRD is also supplying two buses to transport those to the game who do not have another way.

Anyone else who want to attend can purchase a tickets for $4 each and can be purchased at the Sanford Downtown Recreation Center (330-5697) in the Lower Level of Sanford City Hall on North Park Avenue.

Call the Recreation Department at 330-5697 for more information and time of departure.

This is also a good time to pay thanks to the coaches who have donated their time and energy, and probably a few bucks too, to the kids this spring and summer. It is not easy to do, but these people do it because they love children and they love the game of baseball.

Seattle's loss is Sanford's gain. While I am not happy to see Ken Griffey Jr. get hurt because he is exciting to watch and is having an amazing season, I'm glad that Rob Ducey is getting a chance to play.

The former Seminole Community College star has been kicking around the majors for the last few years. He was going to be the starting right fielder for the Toronto Blue Jays a few years ago but got hurt and never got another opportunity. He went to Texas and played some, but I had not heard much about him lately.

But he has resurfaced this season and has been playing well as a back-up in the crowded, star-studded Mariners outfield. Congratulations Rob.

Good bye and good luck. It was good to see Brian Hill get another opportunity to coach in the National Basketball Association.

While I am still not convinced on how good a coach he is, he is a super nice person and works very hard. I hope he gets a chance to prove he is a good coach as he takes on a tough job in Vancouver, who only won 19 games this past season.

The loss of Hill also probably means that Richie Aduabato will be heading to Canada as well. I'm very glad for Richie because he kind of got short-changed by the Magic in the coaching change.

Aduabato is a good assistant coach and he should be in the "majors."

Rogers does it again at New Smyrna

Special to the Herald

SAMSULA — It felt so good. David Rogers decided to do it again.

For the second consecutive Saturday night the Orlando pilot pulled off a rare double-double at New Smyrna Speedway as the many-time FASCAR champion, who is also a former NASCAR National Late Model Champion, won both the Late Model and Modified feature's.

Rogers dodged the raindrops as he bested the Late Model field. Trailing the winner to the checkers were Ronnie Roach, Jeff Emery, Mike Kubanek and Jared Allison.

A big thank you has to go out to the fans, as they stayed through the rough weather and were there to cheer for the racers that put on the show...true "die-hard" race fans for sure.

Rogers collected the Florida/IMCA Modified feature over class points leader Bobby Blake, with Randy Hecker coming home third in his U-Pull It Speedway Auto Parts No. 98. Completing the top five were Tim Laurent and Joe Middleton.

Osteen's Bobby Sears returned to the winners' circle in the Limited Late Models over a hard-charging Chris Lawrence, Jason Boyd, Jim Sharp and Eddie Rice.

The Bombers finale saw a new winner in victory lane as Bobby Owens came home first over Jeff Wright, Mike Peppler, Mark Scherer and Charles Fry.

The Sportsman class saw Bobby Gonzalez win for the second straight week over Tom Lowe. Kathy Galney came home third for her third consecutive top three finish ahead of Glen Wilson and Bill Loomis.

Bob Doxle made it four straight in the Mini-Stocks with Ted Vulpius, Conrad Grenier, Brian Vanalstine and Vic Vanlacker finishing second through fifth.

Mike Hoisington moved up one spot from last week to claim a win in the Run-A-Bouts, with Chip Chapman, Gary Higdon, Jimmy Cross and Mark Roberts following the winner to the stripe.

The TBARA (Tampa Bay Area Racing Association) open-wheeled winged sprints took to the asphalt for a 25-Lap Feature and Larry Tyler put his mount on the pole and led every lap of the rained-shortened event. Willie Stauffer took second ahead of two-time champion Joe Melnick with Keith Butler and the legendary Wayne Reutimann rounding out the top five.

This Saturday night will be an extra special night at the 1/2-mile high banked oval as the American Race Trucks and Dwarf Race Cars will make an appearance, as well as the 50-Lap Late Model End of the Month Championship feature. Along with those special events the Limited Late Models, Sportsmen, Mini-Stocks, Bombers and Run-A-Bouts, a very special race program indeed.

Gates open at 6 p.m. and racing starts at 7 p.m. every Saturday night at New Smyrna Speedway, located 10 miles south of Daytona between I-4 (Exit 56 east) and I-95 (Exit 84 west), 4.5 miles west of New

Fair Credit Reporting Act

Congress passes long-needed reform

CONSUMER FOCUS

BARBARA HUGHES/GREGG

After more than four years of frustration, Congress finally passed some long-needed amendments to the Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA). Changed include credit reporting and the credit file correction process as well as new laws aimed at protecting consumers from those so-called "credit repair doctors."

Some of the proposals, such as the uniform cost of credit reports to be set at $3 each did not become law, instead the cost remains at $6 a report. The usual ways (credit denial) of obtaining a copy of a report at no cost remain and a few new twists were added. For instance, if you were the victim of fraud, on welfare, or out of work and looking, your credit report will be free.

Most credit reporting agencies (CRA) are already in compliance with many of the new law's requirements. The law's new shift of the burden of proof, from the consumer to the agencies and their clients, should ensure greater accuracy of credit reports in the future.

You must be told if information in your file has been used against you. Anyone who uses information from the CRA to take action against you—such as denying an application for credit, insurance or employment—must give you the name, address, and the phone number of the CRA that you provided the report.

If a mistake is reported, the bureau will generally have thirty days to investigate and respond. Any relevant documentation the consumer sends to the bureau with their complaint will be supplied by the bureau to the company that originally reported the disputed information. The CRA is supposed to provide consumers with written results of the investigation with a corrected copy of the credit report (if applicable) and also provide to consumers a list of rights under the credit law. This is to happen within five days from when the CRA concludes the investigation.

If you dispute an item to a creditor who reports to a CRA, the creditor must then report to the CRA a notice of your dispute.

If a correction is made, it is to be shared with the other major reporting agencies.

It now will be unlawful for anyone to knowingly provide information to credit bureaus that they "know or consciously avoid knowing" is inaccurate.

If mistakes are brought to their attention, creditors or other furnishers of information must promptly investigate and then send corrections and other major bureaus and others they originally reported inaccurate information. Once deleted, the bureau won't be able to put misinformation back on the credit report. UNLESS the creditor originally supplying the information certifies in writing that the information is indeed correct. Should that occur, the bureau will provide the name, address and phone number of the company and also instructions for adding the 100 word customer statement to credit file.

Employers must get written permission to look at an employee's or prospective employee's credit file. Should an employer decided not to hire or demote because of credit file information, they must provide a copy of the report first and spell out consumer credit rights.

When a consumer closes and account, creditors must notify the bureau and they in turn must report the account was closed at the customer's request.

Inquiries must now include (in plain English) the full trade name of anyone who's requested a copy of the credit report in the past year (two years for employer inquiries) and consumers will be able to get an address and telephone number from the bureau.

Charge-offs may be listed for seven years after they have been reported to the bureau under current law and if they are not promptly reported, they can affect credit reports for many more years, so effective January 1998, these accounts can only appear on credit files for seven and a half years AFTER the payment should have been made.

Why do we choose our partners?

Dear Readers,

Last week we heard from a woman whose two daughters had married men who reminded her a lot of her ex-husband. Have you noticed how often that happens? Most of us, when we were young, said, "Boy, when I grow up I'll never get into the same kind of mess my parents did." Then, sure enough, here we are in the same or very similar "mess" years later. How does this happen?

Most of us choose our marriage partners either to rework the most painful parts of our pasts or to protect ourselves from getting hurt again like we were hurt when we were kids.

We often end up hating the spouse we have chosen for exactly the same traits and reasons we chose them! Unfortunately, this entire drama is played out on the stage of our unconscious minds and we don't understand how we get ourselves into the hard spots we find ourselves in. We usually curse our bad luck, not our bad choices!

FAMILY COUNSELOR

Let's say you were reared in a patriarchal family that valued only goal-oriented behavior, and achievement was what really counted. Emotions, lack of competency of any indication of weakness was not acceptable to your parents.

When we are dating, we are very likely to be attracted either to mates exactly like the parents we once found so much fault with, or to partners exactly opposite; in this case slightly emotional and dependent, so that we can act out the roles our parents "taught" us.

Either way, we usually end up hating the very traits in our partners that attracted us to them to begin with. And, either way, it's a no-win situation until we finally figure out that we have to heal ourselves; we can't give that job to our spouse or lover.

If your partner has some traits that drive you crazy, ask yourself who in your family that reminds you of. Then, explore in your own mind why you needed to pick someone with those traits for a love relationship. Until you find answers to these questions, you will keep right on choosing the types of partners you've always chosen, and you'll keep ending up in the same or similar uncomfortable situations you may be finding yourself in right now.

Donating organs lets life flow from death

DEAR ABBY: Donating the organs of a recently deceased loved one should be decided upon well before the time when the loved one is taken by the Lord.

Less than a month ago, my wife of more than 33 years passed away quite unexpectedly from a brain aneurysm at the age of 54. We had shared with our daughter our plans for organ donations, subsequent cremation, and the distribution of our worldly assets. Since the aneurysm took my wife within a few days of the onset, we had very little time to prepare for her death.

When informed of the death by the doctor, I knew I had the duty to proceed as we had agreed, despite my grief. It helped me deal with this untimely, tragic loss.

We were informed at the time of her death that there is a 12-hour window of opportunity during which harvesting the organs is expected to have the best chances for successful transplant. All my wife's organs were used successfully for others. Being a devoted Christian, I know she is well pleased with that result.

I have a cancer condition that may prevent use of my organs, but if they can be used to help someone else, I can only hope for it to occur as I plan. We have a friend who is a kidney recipient, and his life has been mercifully extended because of the transplant.

Abby, we should admit that it is not if, but when. Every one of us will die. Preparing for our ultimate departure could take very little time when done in advance and should help our survivors in dealing with the grief that will unavoidably follow death.

Planning for disposal of our worldly assets as well as our physical being is the responsible thing to do for those we love, especially when we think of ourselves as good stewards of the resources given to us by the Lord while we are here on Earth. After all, what we should really be focusing upon is being found worthy to be accepted by the Lord after our time here is past.

DENNIS ROHN, HOODSPORT, WASH.

DEAR MR. ROHN: I offer my sympathy on the sudden loss of your beloved wife. You have stated the issues involved in organ donation about as well as they can be presented. It takes courage and compassion to grant permission for organ donation while suffering the pain of personal loss. However, doing so literally means the difference between life and death for those who are on the waiting lists for vital organs. You and your late wife are to be commended for planning ahead and discussing a topic that many find difficult to talk about.

DEAR ABBY: Jeanne Echer's letter about her encounter as a 10-year-old girl with former President Harry S. Truman and his kindness to her reminded me of my own encounter with a future president. It was in July 1947, and my family was touring Warner Bros. Studio.

We entered a set of "The Hagen Girl" just prior to the filming of a scene. In the booth of a mock-up drugstore soda fountain was a young Ronald Reagan and a young actress whose name I forgot long ago.

As soon as the scene was finished, Mr. Reagan bounded from the booth to where we stood. He told us about the movie and described what it was like being an actor. He signed a "call sheet" for me and was so friendly and solicitous about our enjoying ourselves, that the tour and Mr. Reagan became engraved in my memory.

Although I had voted for some of his Democratic predecessors, when Ronald Reagan ran for president, it was my pleasure to vote for the good man who had been so kind to me when I was 10.

JAMES A. PRENTICE, M.D., AUSTIN, TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter in your column signed "Sad Widow in Illinois," I had to respond.

My father died in 1965. My mother was devastated by his unexpected death and was inconsolable. The following May was their anniversary, and I wondered what I should do. Sending Mother a card might cause more sadness, but I just couldn't ignore that very special day.

A friend told me that when her mother's first anniversary had come up after her father's death, she and her siblings did not do anything by way of remembering it. Later, her mother made the remark, "You would think it never happened." And my friend said to me, "Send your mother a card."

So I did as "Sad Widow" suggested. I bought a "thinking of you" card and wrote a letter to my mother, expressing understanding that this was not a happy anniversary, but their marriage was still something to be celebrated.

My mother was deeply appreciative. She called it her "empty anniversary," and thanked me for remembering. My mother died nine days later.

Abby, please remind your readers to remember the surviving spouse on his or her wedding anniversary. It is still a meaningful occasion.

GRATEFUL JEANNE

Is kids' fad dangerous?

DEAR DR. GOTT: On a recent sitcom, one of the children swallowed a tadpole. Remembering the fad many years ago of swallowing goldfish, I wonder if the practice is harmful.

DEAR READER: It certainly is to the swallowed critter; they cannot survive for long in the highly acidic gastric contents. As far as humans are concerned, swallowing live goldfish or tadpoles is probably not hazardous to health.

However, I can't for the life of me imagine why anyone would perform such an act. But, then, I'm old and like to think that I have developed at least a modicum of common sense.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have psoriasis and arthritis. My doctor claims that there is no relation. In a recent column, you said there is. Who's right?

DEAR READER: I am. Although often considered to be primarily a skin disorder without serious complications, psoriasis can — in some people — cause a particularly severe form of arthritis that can be quite crippling.

Treatment is the same as that used for other forms of arthritis. Namely, Tylenol, ibuprofen or prescription anti-inflammatory drugs.

Severe cases may require methotrexate, an anti-metabolic medication that is used for advanced psoriasis (and the associated arthritis).

Of course, in your case, your doctor may be correct. You could have non-psoriatic arthritis — such as osteoarthritis — that is unrelated to your skin disorder. Fortunately, the treatment is the same.

If you truly need to know the cause of your arthritis, seek a consultation with a rheumatologist. But I'll bet that the skin disease and the arthritis are linked.

To give you more information, I am sending you copies of my Health Reports "Eczema and Psoriasis." Other readers who would like copies should send $3 for each report plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title(s).

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have a compulsion to correct printed misspellings.

For example, in a recent column on the normal, programmed death of cells, you referred to "apoptosis," not "apoptosis" as the Greek-derived word is properly spelled. As you indicated, the second "P" is silent, but you misspelled the word nonetheless.

DEAR READER: In checking my original copy, I was relieved to see that I spelled "apoptosis" correctly. Apparently some proofreaders must have believed that it is spelled the way it sounds. They should be sent to their rooms without any supper. Keep up the good work.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Despite being 73,

I enjoy good health — with one glaring exception: I have acid in my esophagus, associated with belching and coughing, aggravated by exercising or lying flat. My doctor attributed these symptoms to the ibuprofen I was taking for my arthritis. However, I stopped the medicine months ago and am still having trouble. Where do I go from here?

DEAR READER: To have X-rays of your stomach, I hope. The symptoms you describe are textbook-classic for reflux, a common condition that can easily be diagnosed during a special X-ray study called "an upper GI series."

People with reflux have a weakness in the muscular valves that prevent stomach acid from being regurgitated into the esophagus. Symptoms are often brought on by exercise and lying supine. Cough and heartburn are prominent complaints, which can be worsened by aspirin, ibuprofen and similar drugs.

Once the reflux has been confirmed by X-ray, your doctor will prescribe medicine, such as Prilosec, to reduce the formation of gastric acid and relieve your symptoms.

Because hiatal hernia is often associated with reflux, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Hiatal Hernia."

WIN AT BRIDGE

Round and round in rectangles

By Phillip Alder

Before starting this column, I hunted for a quotation including the word "combination." The Microsoft Bookshelf gave this by Sir Walter Scott: "The happy combination of fortuitous circumstances." Also, there was a footnote referring to Daniel Webster, which produced: "Fearful concatenation of circumstances." And there was another footnote reference, this one to Sydney Smith, which gave a delightful observation: "Daniel Webster struck me much like a steam engine in trousers." Today's deal was declared by John Collings, who has been known to act like a steam engine in designer trousers. An Englishman with an incredible talent for the game, he always seems to know where the cards lie. Collings' double was unusual, two clubs would be the normal action of choice.

The play in five clubs began with a spade to East's jack in harmless false-card! and a trump to dummy's king. Declarer ruffed a spade in hand, drew the last trump, cashed the heart ace, ruffed a heart in the dummy, ruffed a spade in hand, and ruffed the heart jack in the dummy.

It was time to broach the diamonds. Collings called for dummy's six, 5, 10, jack.

If West returns a heart now, declarer learns that East started with eight points in spades (already known) and five points in hearts. So, West must have the diamond king for his two-spade raise. Realizing this, West returned a diamond. But as always, Collings did the right thing, playing low from the dummy.

Collings was steamed. He had wanted the pleasure of ruffing West's heart exit and leading the diamond queen from hand to pin East's nine.

HOROSCOPE

Your Birthday

Saturday, June 28, 1997

In the year ahead a number of problems could begin to dissipate and dissolve themselves of their volition. This will usher in an exciting, eventful period you should find pleasing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Friends and coworkers will be anxious to see you fulfill your purposes today. Even when you're not in need of assistance, someone might be there to help you anyway. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Stand solidly behind your decisions today if you believe them to be right. No matter how difficult they may be to execute, Lady Luck will intervene on your behalf.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today you could be able to harvest the fruits of your labors. If the pickings are exceptionally good, it's because your hard work is being acknowledged.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A light and friendly gathering, without theme or purpose, could turn out super today. This is just the right kind of diversion you need to end the week.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A family project that has been a burr under your saddle can be brought to closure today. The end's in sight, so do some extra work to conclude it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This is a good day to reciprocate for social obligations you've garnered during the week. You will be in an outgoing, fun mood — enjoy yourself!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Dame Fortune could be smiling on you today. With her intervention and your ambition, you are likely to accomplish something impressive.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your attitude is extremely appealing to others today. You will know when to be serious and when to let your sense of humor take charge.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Material trends are moving in your favor today, but this might not be readily apparent. The gains you'll make could come from unexpected sources.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) New places and new faces could be yearning for you today, yet you'll be most cozy in arrangements with old pals. Play it cool and combine both.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Competitive developments won't unnerve you today. You will feel secure in your abilities and there will be justification for your reasoning.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Business contacts who have been tough to reach could be more accessible today. In fact, they'll be quite warm and not as likely to reject you or your offer.
